Trial at Moscow Has Assumed Proportions of Historical Riddle

The more one reads about this great "conspiracy" trial at Moscow, the more it looks like an utter nightmare, devoid of any prestige of reason or sanity.

The most suspicious of men must have a hard time believing the wild tales that have been told about the international plot to subdue Russia by force of arms. The peace-loving Aristide Briand laying plans for a new war? England, faced by tremendous domestic problems, making ready to provoke a war that would inevitably be extremely costly in lives and money? Poland and Czechoslovakia ready to lay themselves open to invasion, pillage and revolution? Bulgaria ready to link hands with Rumania in a new war? The whole thing is preposterous, and the more one thinks about it the more preposterous it sounds.

Yet—and here is where the peculiar, nightmare quality of the whole business becomes evident—this wild story comes, not from rumor-mongers in cafes and on street corners, but from Russians who are on trial for their lives before a court that almost never shows any leniency. The men who tell the tale are almost certain to be executed. There hardly seems a chance in a thousand that their "confessions" will save them. One would imagine that they would have denied everything, from beginning to end; instead they are eagerly confessing the truth of charges which seemed, when they were first launched, utterly ridiculous.

What is one to make of it all, anyway? Surely the world has not seen a trial like this for a generation; at the very least. Surely no such tale has been offered as sober fact since—well, since the days of atrocity stories in the World War, let us say.

Probably the explanation lies in the Russian state of mind. Russia is a land set apart. The average Russian feels that the whole world is against him. The tremendous experiment his country is making keeps him constantly keyed up to a high emotional pitch. He is in a mood to believe anything. All capitalistic nations, in his eyes, are in league with the powers of darkness. Any fable about them can be credited.

Yet still the question comes up—why did these prisoners themselves tell the story?

WASHINGTON.—The organized dries, who have watched the Republican and Democratic parties torn by disagreement about prohibition, also find themselves in a state of dissension and discord. Angry at a lack of able leadership in their movement and the failure to combat the recent wet trend with vigor, prominent dries are coming to the big dry conventions here early in December with fire in their eyes.

There will be a strong, organized attempt to produce a dry generalissimo comparable in stature to the late Wayne B. Wheeler. The dissatisfied lieutenants in the dry army also hope for a federated agency of their various organizations which will carry on a constant, centralized warfare in defense of the Volstead act and the Eighteenth amendment.

No one has succeeded to Wheeler's mantle. Instead, there is a divided command in the dry movement, with various factions paying allegiance to such leaders as General Superintendent F. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon league, Dr. Clarence True Wilson of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, young Staxley High of the Christian Herald and Ernest H. Cherrington, head of the league's educational work and the World League Against Alcoholism.

It seemed for a while as if Bishop James Cannon of Virginia was to become the recognized spokesman and leader of all dries. But now Cannon lies broken in health, prestige and influence. Few men have collapsed so quickly and completely after rising to what seemed to be the heights of power.

The malcontents in the dry ranks who now demand genuine leadership and aggressive action include some of the ablest workers for the cause, among them certain state superintendents of the league.

Unless dries really unite and fight, they declare, they can consider themselves badly licked. The recent election results, although no cause for despair, they nevertheless believe to have presented a problem as serious as any the dries have faced in the past.

Whether or not there are public fireworks, Dr. McBride will be severely criticized by some delegates to the various conventions. McBride is recognized as sincere and earnest, but his critics say that he is the rural clergyman type, not quite fitted to command a militant dry movement. Friends of the late Wheeler say McBride was made general superintendent by Wheeler so that the latter, holding the post of legislative superintendent, could hold complete control of the dry movement while McBride remained in contented obscurity.

After his death, they add, McBride insisted on taking over both jobs so that no new legislative superintendent might rise to overshadow him. McBride is said in some way to have offended President Hoover during or near the time of the 1928 campaign, so that relations between the White House and the league—ones so close—are now scarcely existent.

Recently a movement began to place Congressman Franklin Fort of New Jersey, the dry candidate defeated by Dwight Morrow in the senatorial primary, at the head of a new centralized dry organization. Fort is said to be agreeable, but the movement probably will fail.

Dr. Wilson is also said to hope to command the whole dry cause, but he also has influential enemies, especially in the league. His publicity methods are criticized and some dries object to his "narrowness" in respect to cigars, movies and other "evils." Thus far no one man has been put forward by the rebellious group as one fitted for high command. But the sentiments of this group may find strong support among the Protestant churches. Church journals, including some of the most influential, have been critical of the lack of able leadership.

Opposition To Booze Referendum Growing Stronger

OTON, Dec. 3. (P)—Still opposition was recorded today in favor of a dry-supplemental referendum on the amendment.

Opposition against the idea came from H. Cherrington, secretary of the World League Against Intemperance, who contended if such a referendum were held all nineteen amendments should be passed upon people. The prohibitionist, he predicted, would lose the test, but not some of the amendments.

Cherrington's statement was in the eve of the get-together by the house wet bloc, today planned to solidify its support for continuing warfare on prohibition laws.

Simultaneously with a recess by Representative Lea, California, which set out prohibition had been no solution for the liquor problem, and that it would have such a probable thousand years to come.

Opposition for extending prohibition support to the referendum was broached at a recent meeting in Washington of dry leaders. Immediate expressions of disapproval came from some of some organizations have fought against liquor. Their opponents would abide by their results and quit campaigning number of years, at least.

Anti-prohibition meeting of the members today was called by Representative Luthin, democratic, chairman of the national group, who wished to lay out using to the best advantage increased forces expected next congress.

Freeze-up of Lake Did Not Come Too Soon

KENORA, Ont., Dec. 3. (P)—A freeze-up on the Lake of the Woods came not a whit too soon to satisfy John Pencoff, who is safe in Kenora today after being marooned on a wind-swept island for 10 days. His disabled boat was cast on a reef on Nov. 22 and he returned to Kenora walking over the new-formed ice.

For three days, he was held on a huge reef near Whiskey Island. He used the inside of his boat for firewood and protected the flames by two frying pans and a tin can. After one failure, which immersed him in ice-cold water, he built a raft of gasoline cans and the boat's false bottom and won his way to a nearby island on which were summer homes.

By a widow, he entered a house where he found sugar and tea. Kindling for the fire was easily found with the aid of his axe, and his gun kept him supplied with rabbits during his six-day stay before the ice was strong enough to bear him.

Young Cop Shoots Four Bandits

Patrolman Dominick Griffo, a rookie of two years on the New York police force, never had been particularly proficient at pistol practice. Trial at Moscow Turns to Secrecy

MOSCOW, Dec. 3. (P)—The special tribunal in the house of columns today at noon closed its doors to the curious and proceeded to question eight soviet engineers who are being tried on charges of plotting against the government.

Particularly prominent in the private questioning, it was known, is the name of Raymond Poincare, former president of France, and France itself. Also mentioned were "K," "A" and "B," alleged French agents at Moscow.

The closing session of the court will convene Friday at 5 p. m. Speeches will be made by both prosecutor and the two defense counselors and sentence probably will be passed before the week-end. Numerous organizations throughout Russia are demanding death for the accused.

Two witnesses were taken out of jail to testify before the public session was adjourned. They were Peter Kirpotenko, of the textile planning department, and Peter Tsaltler, of the irrigation department. Both have been awaiting

SALE OF RESERVED SEATS FOR RANGER GAME SPEEDS UP VISITORS TO BE NUMEROUS NEXT FRIDAY

If local people expect to sit in the new grandstand at the Pampa Ranger game Friday afternoon they must be certain to purchase the necessary reserve seat tickets, sales of which have been suddenly accelerated.

Today the Green Jacket girls were to sell tickets throughout the city. All seats in the bleachers will be reserved. Big blocks of seats are being purchased by out-of-town fans. Only 1400 such accommodations are available. It is the first time this season that seats have been reserved. Tickets are on sale at the Pampa drug store No. 1 and at the office of Joe Smith in the courthouse.

Every indication now is that a huge crowd will attend the game. The out-of-town attendance will be largest of record in Pampa. Coach Odus Mitchell yesterday sent the Harvesters through the last scrimmage in preparation for the game. Today he will work on defense against Ranger's well known speed and powerful line play.

By ROYCE HULSE, Editor, Ranger Times.
The Ranger Bulldogs, who will invade Pampa Friday for a battle with the Harvesters, are one of the heaviest teams in the state yet are not lacking in speed in spite of their size. In fact, the Bulldog attack, led by Dangerous Dan McCarty, relies largely on swiftness, the Ranger quarterback being ranked as "West Texas' fastest hit-man."

The most striking thing about the Ranger team is the uniform size of the players. There are no giants and no midgets in the starting lineup. In the forward wall, the heaviest man is a 187-pounder and the lightest man is 154. In the backfield, the biggest weighs 195 and the smallest, 160.

The backfield outweighs the line, man for man, an unusual situation. The line average lacks a few pounds of being 171 1-2. The backfield average is exactly 171 1-2 pounds. The team average is 170. Here are the figures: Anderson, left end, 170; Murray, left tackle, 173; Kilmann, left guard, 154; Reesie, center, 187; Mozer, right guard, 165; Love, right tackle, 184; Stevens, left end, 168; McCarty, quarterback and captain, 168; Weaver, left half, 167; King, right half, 160; Bird, fullback, 195.

Ranger has a nice array of reserve strength, including Philip, 168 pounds, back; Jones, 190, and Smet, 170, linemen, and Bruce, 165, end.

This Game of GOLF
By O. B. KEELER

In connection with the retirement of Bobby Jones from all formal competitive golf, and with his contract to make 12 reels of instructive talking pictures on golfing shots and methods, it occurs to me that two points are especially worthy of consideration.

First, I have it from Bobby himself that his decision to retire from competitive, or championship, golf, was made in his own mind after he won the United States open championship at Interlachen last July.

The general impression seems to be that either he made the decision after he had completed the "Orange Blossom" of golf, or when he signed the contract to do the one-reel pictures next March at Hollywood.

Here is Bobby's own statement concerning his movie contract and the amateur decision:

"I am not certain that the step I am taking is in a strict sense a violation of the amateur rule. I think a lot might be said on either side but I am so far convinced that it is contrary to the spirit of amateurism that I am prepared to accept and even endorse a ruling that it is an infringement."

Here we have Bobby, as he always has done, leaning backward on the side of amateurism—as when he declined, with thanks, a home worth $50,000 offered by his friends in Atlanta.

And it is worthy of note that, with Bobby prepared (as he says) even to endorse a ruling that his movie venture is an infringement of amateurism, such a ruling never will be made. If there would have been any embarrassment for the United States Golf association in issuing a ruling on this question, it has been forestalled by Bobby, one of the executives. Because he will never again send in his entry for any golf competition which results benefit the purview of the U. S. G. A.

Sport Slants

by ALAN GOULD ~ ASSOCIATED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR.

It is the hope and expectation of the United States Golf association's leaders that Mr. Robert T. Jones Jr., far from being under any embarrassment whatever by reason of his forthcoming venture in the talking pictures, will continue to sit in the councils of the game as a member of the executive committee of the U. S. G. A.

A number of bystanders, leaping hastily at conclusions, have expressed some concern over the status of Committeeman Jones, now that he has retired from all competition and, in particular, renounced his amateur standing.

There is not the slightest cause for alarm. Jones, by his own decision, is no longer eligible to compete for the United States amateur championship, which he won for fifth time at Merion last September.

He is distinctly eligible, however, to sit with the executive committee. He is nominated for another year's term, and unless something unforeseen develops he will be re-elected early in January with the entire ticket, headed by Herbert Hartley Ramsay of New York, as president.

There is nothing whatever in the constitution or by-laws of the golf association preventing Jones from holding such office. In fact, if the U. S. G. A. desired to elect a professional golfer to sit with the executive committee, it could do so without upsetting anything but habit and precedent. Moreover, the advice and counsel of Jones on subjects vital to the game are desired.

His ability and his views are none the less important by reason of his having signed a movie contract.

TROJANS TO FIGHT ONE-POINT JINX IN CONTEST AGAINST NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame Raiders won't beat the Trojans of the University of Southern California this year by a single point when the two great grid teams mix December 6 at Los Angeles, if there is anything to practice. Among the Trojans laboring at goal kicking are Marshall Duffield, quarterback, and John Baker, guard.

TROJANS TO EXPECT TOUGH GRID BATTLE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3. (AP)—As Notre Dame's Hugh Elbert recalled Tucson, Ariz., today on their ramble to Los Angeles for Saturday's inter-sectional football classic, all but one of Southern California's six casualties a substitute end, were reported sufficiently recovered for practice.

Ralph "Dutch" Wilcox, first string left end, out for three weeks with a head injury, said he would be back in uniform. The other injured players got back into their moose-skins earlier this week.

The S. C. players spent yesterday brushing up on defensive play with a little signal drill thrown in. Reports that Jones utilized half the practice period in kicking field goals set Randolph buzzing and indicated the Trojan coach expects heavy going Saturday.

Meanwhile all sorts of curious facts came to light. The tentative lineups gave the Trojans a six-pound man weight edge, with the Irish averaging 183 pounds. Three fullbacks of the Notre Dame squad hail from the far west—Banley, from Butte, Mont.; Mullins, from South Pasadena, Calif.; and Al Howard, from Alhambra, Calif.

The Southenders were due in Tucson shortly after noon. A noisy welcome was planned by Arizona fans and the Raiders expected to run through a workout on the University of Arizona field.

Coach Knute Rockne informed Tucson fans they would be permitted to watch the drill, but Thursday's practice there would be secret. The Ramblers' entrain for Los Angeles early Friday.

Teddy Lyons Sets Mark In Mound Work

CHICAGO, Dec. 3. (AP)—Teddy Lyons of the seventh place White Sox was the busiest pitcher of the American league last season.

Not only did Lyons pitch more innings than any other hurler in the league, 298, but he was called upon as a pinch hitter repeatedly with telling results. He won 23 and lost 15 games and batted .311.

"Lefty" Grove of the Athletics easily won the league pitching championship for the second straight year with 28 victories and five defeats and a low earned run average of 3.07 for each nine innings pitched.

The meeting grows in interest. Last night there were four additional to the church. People are being saved every night. In speaking of the Christian home, Dr. McCall said our homes must be cleaned up of vicious reading, degrading music, questionable amusements like the dance and cards. He scored heavily the evil tongue that peccable gossip and quarrels. The allies of the home are first of all the church, the only organization a poor can belong to without having to pay a definite price, the institution that makes the atmosphere that even unwed men want for their children to grow up in. "But Christ is the home's best friend. The preacher appeals to men to take their place beside their wives in the church and help rear the children for God and righteousness. He said it was cowardly for men to turn over the burden of the religious life of the children to wives. —Continued.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY HOLLYCEE SELLERS

This morning the postman brought to Feminine Fancies an unusual letter, but one that is appreciated by the writer of the column. It is from a man who frankly admits the Fancies usually do not strike his fancy. However, he is always aware of the fact that the column is in the paper—a definite part of the paper. That is one thing to be thankful for. So today we are printing the entire letter, and are inviting the suggestions of other readers.

Here is what he says:

Because I am addressing this letter to your column, please do not assume that I religiously read your column. I have read it only twice since you began writing it; but as for that matter, I do not consistently read any columnist's outpourings; they are necessarily obnoxious. But nevertheless, I am aware of your column every time I read the paper. I see it there every day as I turn the leaves of the newspaper. Sometimes I read the first two or three lines; sometimes I read the first paragraph. Again, I might read the whole column. At other times it is likely that I will read none of it. However, it is not usual that your fanatics strikes my fancy, but I am not that kind of a male who condemns everything written by a woman. I think women should be read when they write things worth writing.

Let us assume that you have many female and some male readers (whether you have or not). At any rate, I would like to direct your attention and the attention of your readers to some pertinent remarks made by Sherwood Anderson in this issue of Scribner's under the title, "It's a Woman's Age."

"It's a woman's age. Almost any man will admit it. He admits it rather slyly. To my mind all sorts of things are involved in the matter. For the present at least, men are somewhat lost. You have to admit that it is not a laughing matter. Listen in on the radio. All the laughter is fake laughter. It doesn't go through the body to the toes. Notice how little real laughter you hear on the streets. Listen to the voices coming over the radio. There is no reality to the voices. Who can speak naturally over the radio? The little machine standing coldly there is too much for the man. It confuses him, makes him ashamed. . . . Something creeps into the voices over the radio. They sound false. "But what about the women? Why are they more triumphant than the men in such an age? Perhaps they aren't. It may be they only seem to be less touched. There are more goods made. Women get most of the goods. Men earn more money. The women spend it. They do right. Women are more practical than men. If they can't get what they want, they will take what they can get. If they cannot get men, they will take goods. But what do they want. Love, eh? Where are they to get the loves, the mates?

"As regards human relationships, I suppose I am as middle-headed a man as ever lived. How could I be anything else, being both an artist and an American? I swear I am both. In a land where women rule. In a land where, in industry, the machine rules. It is inevitable, I think, that I must go deeper and yet deeper to get at what I am trying to say here. I am trying to proclaim a new world, a woman's world. The newspapers are all run for women. The magazines, the stores. The cities are built for women. Why do you suppose the automobiles are built for? Practically all the American men I know have surrendered to women. Are women then, in America, superior to men? Not really. At present they have the best of it. Because present-day life humiliate men more directly. More has been taken from them. "Here is a curious idea. For days I have been going about saying to myself something like this. 'Spare me.' I have said to myself, 'the whole modern age, the industrial Library Planned For School Use CANYON, Dec. 3.—Randall county schools will soon have the benefit of a circulated library if the plans of the Randall County Teachers' association and S. E. Orton, county judge elect, are carried out. Each of the 21 rural schools in the county will give $10 as an initial amount to be used for the books. The West Texas State Teachers college has made a gift of more than 100 books to the project and others will be had as fast as possible. The books will be transported in special constructed boxes which when set up and opened will form a case for the books. The books will be in circulation, it is believed, shortly after the first of January.

"I myself, feel this danger constantly in the presence of modern industry. I admit that man invents all of these machines. He is still inventing. The machines are running in the factories. Great rivers of goods flow from them. "Your acquisitive man is a man become feminine. How can this help being true. To be rich is to become conservative, to value possessions. Your male should be the adventurer. He should be careless of possessions, should throw them aside. His true place is in the imaginative world, the world of fancy. I think we modern men have lost manhood because we have surrendered to the machine, to money. I will admit that we cannot get away from the machine. We will have to get away from it all we can. "It may sound childish, but men will have to go back to nature more. They will have to go to the fields and the rivers. There will have to be a new religion, more pagan, something more closely connected with fields and rivers. There will have to be built up a new and stronger sympathy as between man and man. We may find the new mystery there. "We will have to rediscover the wonder of our own maleness or the women will have no lovers, no mates. There will be no lovers. There will be only husbands. If something of the sort isn't done, money and the machine continue to rule men's lives, then we shall have

Healthiest 4-H Boy and Girl In Nation Selected

CHICAGO, Dec. 3. (AP)—A blue-eyed 15-year-old country lass from Iowa with flaxen hair cut in a boyish bob and a modest but winning smile, and a 20-year-old college lad from Missouri are the healthiest 4-H girl and boy in the United States. Miss Marian E. Snydergaard from Grundy county, Iowa, is the girl and William Ross Bodenhamer, 20, of Johnson county, Missouri, a ruddy-faced and brown haired student of the Central Missouri State Teachers college, the boy. Only a slight inflammation of one eye- lid which someone suggested might have been a bit of Chicago dust and a small defect in the alignment of her nearly white teeth kept Marion from scoring 100 in the national health contest sponsored by the boys-girls 4-H club contest. At it she scored 99.7. Legs Slightly Bowled A pair of slightly bowed legs and teeth defects were all that stood in William's way of a perfect score. His good points totaled 98.7, one per cent less than Marion's. Her mark was the highest ever recorded in the nine years the club has conducted health contests. Twenty girls and 15 boys contested for the honors, announced last night after they had been subjected to careful examinations by doctors, dentists and nurses. "Each of the winners is a product of the farm. Both are 'fresh air kids'—get their nine hours of sleep every night, eat lots of vegetables and drink at least a quart of milk a day. No tea or coffee are consumed by either and they don't smoke. Marion weighs 135 and stands 5 feet 4 inches. William's weight is 151 and his height 5 feet 6 1/2 inches. William takes no special form of exercise. But has had a lot of it back on the farm before his folks moved into Warrensburg, where he goes to school. Marion often walks the two miles that separate her home from school. She is more interested in domestic science than anything else.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Adventure enters the life of CELIA MITCHELL, 17, when she learns the father she has supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore to live in New York with her father, JOHN MITCHELL, and her aristocratic grandmother.

MARGARET ROGERS, Celia's mother is now a widow, having divorced Mitchell and remarried later. BARNEY SHIELDS, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore, Celia promises to be loyal to his love.

Mitchell asks EVELYN PARSONS, beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons agrees, considering Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections. She soon becomes jealous of the girl and schemes to get rid of her. Mrs. Parsons introduces Celia to TOD JORDAN, fascinating but of dubious character and does all she can to encourage this match even after Mitchell forbids Celia to see the young man.

LISI DUNCAN, socially prominent, becomes Celia's loyal friend. The girl goes to Mrs. Parsons' Long Island home for a lengthy visit and Jordan calls there frequently. He and Celia attend the races and there she encounters Barney Shields, now employed by a New York picture service. Celia meets Shields next day and they have dinner together. He asks if she still cares for him and Celia admits she has not her heart to Jordan.

Lisi, Celia and Mrs. Parsons are together that evening when they hear a radio report of a disastrous fire in a building where Shields is working. Later Celia and Lisi go to Shields' office, where he finally arrives, unharmed except for a broken arm. Next morning Shields telephones and promises to call that afternoon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Chapter XLIII

For an hour before Barney came Celia waited impatiently. She had spent a restless night and slept little, but she was not aware that she was tired. Reaction from the excitement of the past 24 hours had not yet set in.

Celia had made a discovery, and everything else in the world paled into unimportance. She knew she loved Barney Shields.

Her heart had sung his name all morning. Barney Shields! Barney with the gray eyes that laughed at pain and hardship! Barney, so strong and self-reliant! Barney, who never failed, her Barney!

Hearing his voice over the telephone that morning had been like hearing it for the first time.

Celia had laughed and promised eagerly that she would be waiting for him, but all that she wanted to tell him remained unsaid. Had he guessed? Was it possible that Barney did not know how everything in the world had changed when he himself was the center of that transformation?

One minute she hoped he understood. The next she was in a fever of impatience to tell him her heart was his completely.

At luncheon Evelyn Parsons noted the girl's heightened color, her preoccupied manner, shrewdly she made deductions.

"Have you had any news from the young man who was in the first?" she asked casually.

"Barney? Oh, yes, he telephoned. The doctor set his arm and put it in a sling, but he says it isn't a bad break. He's coming this afternoon. I mean Barney, not the doctor."

"How nice! I'm anxious to meet him."
"Oh, I want you to! You'll like Barney, too. Everyone does. He's going to be here at three."
"At three? Well, I must certainly manage to say 'how do you do' at least."

Mrs. Parsons turned the conversation into other channels, but she continued to watch Celia and take stock of her observations. For one thing, the girl was not eating. Twice she started when she was spoken to, and then flushed and stumbled in her apologies. There was a far-away look in Celia's dark eyes. Oh, yes, the signs were all there!

Lisi had departed immediately after breakfast. It was Mrs. Parsons' custom to spend the hours after luncheon either shopping or at bridge. Celia had set three o'clock as the time for Barney's call, confident they would not be interrupted.

"Are you going out?" she asked as she and Evelyn left the luncheon table.

overcome Barney's impression that she lived surrounded by elegance and luxury far beyond him. Gullibly Celia remembered the afternoon before when he had made it plain he thought she did not want to introduce her to her new friends.

Of course she had tried to avoid meeting Tod Jordan. At thought of Jordan the girl realized she faced another problem. Tod would have to be told she had been mistaken in saying she cared for him.

It amazed Celia to discover how detached and impersonal her feeling toward Jordan had become. She had completely forgotten him, and now that she remembered, his name brought no quickening of emotion. Jordan was simply a young man she had danced and driven and strolled with. How could she have imagined she cared more for him than for Barney?

A whole train of frightening reflections followed. What was this bewildering thing called love? She had believed herself "in love" with Barney before she came to New York. Then she had met Jordan and told herself she was "in love" with him. Neither of those affections was anything like the overwhelming emotion which stirred her. There was no doubt that this was love—real love, based on admiration, loyalty, her deep need of Barney and a prayer that Barney might need her.

But it was alarming to know that one could make mistakes about love, and to know that one could change.

Celia remembered how Barney Shields had said he loved her, and complained that her affection was not so deep as his own. Oh, but that had been months before! Was it possible Barney's feelings had altered?

For one dreadful moment the suspense lasted. Then Celia forced a little laugh and sprang up from the chair. There was no reason why she should doubt Barney. She herself might make mistakes, but Barney (bless his precious heart!) would never fall her.

A sudden longing that was both ecstasy and pain swept over her. She wanted to feel his arms about her, to tell Barney that he was dearer to her than life, to hear over and over again that he would never go away.

Celia began to dress. As she bustled herself before the mirror her thoughts leaped forward. She planned the meeting at which she would introduce Barney to her father. John Mitchell would approve of the young man, she felt sure, because Barney had a profession of which he was proud, and in which he was succeeding. Frequently Mitchell had made clear what he thought of youths who were content to amuse themselves at sports, idly wasting incomes acquired by hard-working ancestors.

The girl glanced up and caught her reflection. The face in the glass smiled back at her. There was no need to apply rouge today. Her cheeks were pink, and surely her eyes had never been so bright.

She got out her newest frock, slipped it over her shoulders and then hastily put it aside for another. The second dress was rose-color, but simpler. Celia remembered that Barney Shields had praised her in the little home-made dress of rose that her mother had fashioned.

As she took taking a final survey of herself and putting into place a curl equally decorative in its untruly state, she heard a tap on the door.

"Who is it?" Celia called.
"Rose, Evelyn's maid, answered. Mrs. Parsons asked if you could step into her room, Miss Celia."
"Tell her I'll be right in."
Celia looked at her watch. Twelve minutes of three. Then she hurried to Evelyn.

Mrs. Parsons was seated at her desk. She looked particularly well in a dark blue satin gown with creamy lace at the throat. Sunlight, shining through the window, had given her a golden halo. As Celia opened the door she looked up smiling.

"Dear child!" she exclaimed. "What would I do without you? I've been in perfect agony for half an hour trying to make these figures come out right. Do add them for me, won't you? You're so clever and I'm so hopeless at such things!"

Frequently Evelyn had found occasion to profit from Celia's business training. Now she held up a sheet of papers and a memorandum pad. The papers were bills.

"I know they should come to the same figure," Mrs. Parsons continued, "but I simply cannot make them."

"I'll try it," Celia agreed.
Mrs. Parsons promptly relinquished the desk chair. The figures on the memorandum pad were unintelligible. Celia saw at once she would have to go through the stack of bills and tabulate the amounts. She glanced at her watch again. Perhaps if she worked swiftly she could finish in time.
"I'll slip outside so as not to interrupt," Evelyn said, and disappeared.

The mathematical problem before Celia was complicated. Furthermore, she was impatient and made two errors at the start.

She caught them; began calculations once more, and suddenly heard the ringing of the door bell. Ten minutes after three and she had not finished. It was Barney, of course.

Celia rose. There was no reason why Evelyn's bills should be balanced immediately. She was disgusted with herself for having undertaken the task.

Her heart beat loudly and for a minute she waited to steady herself. Then she went into the living room. Barney was sitting with his back toward her, talking to Evelyn.

Mrs. Parsons saw the girl.
"Oh, here you are, Celia!" she said sweetly. "You have company. This young man and I have introduced ourselves, and he's been giving me the most amazing account of that terrible fire. You must hear it!"

"Good afternoon, Barney!" Celia said. It was not the speech she had planned.

Shields was on his feet. He took the girl's hand and smiled his good-humored smile.

"How do you do?" he greeted her with unusual formality. The young man's left arm hung in a sling.

"This is a queer time for me to be making a visit," Shields added, "but I'm going to play gentleman for a few days. They tell me I haven't any job until this bum arm begins to behave."

"You're not discharged?"
He laughed at the alarm in the girl's voice.

"No, no! Nothing like that. Matter of fact, Wagner says I'm going to have a raise. Did you see, the pictures in the Telegram?"

They were mine. Gave the one of the little girl a big play. The boss was rather complimentary.

"Oh, Barney, I'm so glad!"
"How splendid!" Evelyn Parsons joined in.

Barney looked embarrassed under praise. He turned the conversation to the fire again. Celia waited impatiently for Mrs. Parsons to leave them. Evidently Evelyn had forgotten her engagement. She did not depart, and at four o'clock, when Barney said he must keep an appointment with the doctor, Mrs. Parsons offered to take him in her car.

The afternoon, unsatisfactory as it was to Celia, had a more unpleasant sequel.

HUSBAND OF DENVER WOMAN PUT ON STAND

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 3. (AP)—The state summoned Leo O'Loughlin to the witness stand today in an effort to prove his charge that his wife, Pearl, murdered his 10-year-old daughter, Leona.

The state based its right to call a husband as a witness against his wife upon a recent state supreme court decision in which a wife was permitted to testify against her husband in an assault case.

O'Loughlin, a city detective, ill from the effects of ground glass in his foot, took an active part in investigating the disappearance of his daughter Oct. 14 and the finding of her body in a city park lake two days later.

Among today's witnesses was Capt. A. T. Clark of Denver's detective force, who made public several statements which he said Mrs. O'Loughlin made after her arrest for the murder. These statements, the district attorney has announced, constitute "an admission of guilt."

The defense has stated it will resist efforts to enter these statements in the court record, contending they were made under duress.

Fifteen of the 39 state witnesses testified before adjournment of court yesterday. The session was devoted largely to the state's attempt to establish the cause of the girl's death.

BY ROBBIN COONS HOLLYWOOD—Many stage actresses have come to Hollywood from Broadway successes only to fall in films, and that might be said to augur well for Elissa Landi, English beauty who came direct from a Broadway flop.

And if the young woman is half as devastating to the hearts of movie fans as she was to the hardened arteries of New York drama critics, who huzzahed and bravoed her loveliness and acting in the dramatization of "A Farewell to Arms," the screen may have a new idol in store.

She will be introduced to American fans as leading lady to Charles Farrell.

Cosmopolitan Miss Landi was born in Venice, Italy, of Austrian parents, was educated in England and has lived in Canada, is married to an English lawyer, J. C. Lawrence, and England is her home.

"A Farewell to Arms" was her first American stage appearance, and she was recruited from British movies to make it, so is no stranger to the camera.

Last January she played opposite Adolphe Menjou in a Paris-made talkie—she speaks French, Italian and German as well as English.

But her first love was the stage. After leaving school she joined a stock company, playing minor roles, until at 18 she scored a hit in the title role of "Storm." Flattering offers came then, but she made an unusual decision.

She regarded her success as mere luck and refused to let it go to her head. Instead she went into voluntary apprenticeship on the stage. For three years she played only minor roles, for training and development.

Then came the other leading roles, accepted when she deemed herself ready for them. It was discouragement over poor plays that sent her into pictures. Then her New York debut—and she received five Hollywood offers the first night.

Writer, Too. She really has two careers, acting and writing. Unlike most Hollywood players who profess they "long to write," Miss Landi has written, and has two published novels to her credit.

For each of them she "retired" from the stage until they were completed. She intends to continue writing, between pictures, and another novel is nearly finished.

Of course novel-writing and Hollywood social life, rounds of parties and premieres and teas, don't mix—but Elissa has decided on that. There won't be any parties or teas. Having certain work she wants to do, she is determined to let nothing interfere.

Speaker Longworth Wields the Gavel

Nicholas Longworth exchanged some widely-published pleasantries with Democratic House Leader John Garner about the future custody of the gavel and official car of the speaker of the House of Representatives. Garner had thought the Democrats would control the House and would elect him Speaker. But when this picture was taken of Longworth, showing how he would open the third session of the 71st Congress, Republicans had established an incontestable majority of 218 against the Democrat's 216 seats.

Eastland to Close During Funeral

EASTLAND, Dec. 3. (AP)—Last rites were planned today for Chas. U. Connelley, who founded Eastland 26 years ago. He died yesterday in Fort Worth.

Mayor Perry Sayles issued a proclamation requesting all business of the town to suspend during the funeral. Courts were adjourned and the county courthouse, which occupies a site donated by Connelley, was closed.

DAN AND ROSS SPEAK

WACO, Dec. 3. (AP)—Governor Dan Moody and Governor-Elect Ross Sterling addressed the Texas manufacturers meeting here yesterday, both assuring cooperation in advancing Texas industry and advocating that manufacturers advertise Texas-made products more.

The meeting was called by the all-state council of the regional chamber of-commerce of Texas to outline a plan to boost Texas and Texas-made goods.

Smoking in Bed Blamed for Fires

EL PASO, Dec. 3. (AP)—One man was dead and another seriously burned today as a result of fires yesterday believed started from someone smoking in bed. An American identified as I. P. Graham, 46, of Kalamazoo, Mich., died of asphyxiation when the mattress of his bed caught fire in a tourist camp cottage. W. P. Sullivan was burned about the arms and legs when his room in a hotel was damaged by fire, also starting from a cigarette dropped on the mattress.

WOULD REDUCE RATES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. (AP)—Railroads in the southwestern territory today applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to reduce rates on cotton, transported from interior points to Texas seaports.

Mrs. Sarah E. Lewis, 80, widow of a Civil War veteran, cast her first vote at the last election in Utah.

Talks To Parents

By ALICE HUDSON PEALE, Toe Bright The child whose mind has developed too far ahead of his age meets with certain inevitable difficulties in his social adjustment.

It is seldom that he possesses the qualities which appeal to his fellows in such a way as to make him popular, much less, as one might perhaps expect, make him a leader among them.

Aside from certain attributes such as physical attractiveness, initiative, originality and an outgoing friendliness and interest in the world at large, children seem to demand of their leader that he be made much after their own image with just enough superiority to prove stimulating and command respect.

A child too far beyond their own level is likely to be thought of by them simply as "queer."

Thus it is the very intelligent child's misfortune that the group among whom he belongs by virtue of his size and physical strength has little use for him, finding in him only a disturbing element responsible for introducing entirely too many new and uncongenial twists into their play.

The group among whom he belongs by virtue of his mental development, on the other hand, looks down upon him for his physical inferiority and his general inability to compete with them satisfactorily save in the class room.

Thus the very superior child is forced to develop resources within himself. He is compelled to get most of his satisfactions from intellectual pursuits and from such hobbies as he is able to devise.

It is only when he can be placed in a group of children who are like himself mentally far in advance of their age that he has a chance for making the best social adjustment possible to his temperament or for developing fully whatever capacity for leadership he may possess.

Albert Einstein Off To America

ANTWERP, Belgium, Dec. 3. (AP) Professor Albert Einstein and Frau Einstein left yesterday aboard the liner Belgeland for the United States, where they will visit with friends.

Nobody saw them off except a handful of newspapermen and the German consul who was at the dock with a bouquet for Frau Einstein.

"I hope this trip will make him feel better," the scientist's wife said. "He looks so pale. He never takes enough rest. I'm glad he decided to take this holiday."

Somebody told Professor Einstein there was a radio-physics board that had been set up to talk with friends on either side of the ocean whenever he felt like it.

He shook his head and sighed.

"I hope," said he, "these journalists are not going to call me up in the middle of the ocean and ask me how I slept the night before." It was his parting thrust at the newspapermen who have prepared him for the attack of interviewers in New York.

"Flying Housewife" Is Seeking Record

DENVER, Dec. 3. (AP)—Mrs. Mary Bevin, 30, the "flying housewife," took off from Glenn Curtiss airport at 7:15 p. m. today for the Pacific coast in an attempt to wrest the woman's east-to-west flight record from Miss Ruth Nichols.

Mrs. Bevin, formerly of Fort Worth, Texas, planned to make Kansas City, Mo., or Wichita, Kans., in one hop and remain there for the night.

Movie Censorship Plan Is Indorsed

DALLAS, Dec. 3. (AP)—A resolution indorsing the campaign of their president, W. H. Horwitz, of Houston, to bring about state or municipal censorship of motion pictures, was adopted last night by directors of the Allied Theatre owners of Texas.

The resolution set forth that the association "in principle would deplore censorship, politically administered, either locally, state-wide or national," but it accused the picture producers and the Will Hays office of failure to endorse standards of decency.

FIND AIR IN WELL

SNYDER, Dec. 3. (AP)—Non-inflammable compressed air was discovered at a depth of 1771 feet last night by drillers operating at the Seifers-Dibb-Blackburn test well.

Geologists here were unable to account for the phenomenon, scientists having been unable to give a technical explanation of the air found in such depths.

"Check and Double Check" held over one more day by popular demand.

Clergyman Credited With Saving Crew

HOLYHEAD, England, Dec. 3. (AP)—Thirty-five men of the Norwegian steamer Asmund today could thank for their lives the keen eyes of a clergyman and a woman parishioner who were walking along the coast yesterday.

The Rev. H. H. Jones and his parishioner were strolling near the wave line when, through a dense fog over the Irish channel, he happened to see the Asmund go on the rocks. He ran half a mile to the nearest telephone and reported the accident to the Holyhead Coast Guard station.

Life-saving equipment was taken to the scene. Three of the crew were pulled ashore by life lines and the others in a lifeboat. In all 25 men were saved from what appeared to be certain break-up of the vessel, and their probable death by drowning.

About New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCE

NEW YORK—Dinosaurs twist their long tails, Will Rogers swings his rope and a doll pours milk out of a pail at the mere turn of an electric switch in an old army building on west side Manhattan.

It's headquarters for the paper mache menageries some big department stores display to lure Christmas shoppers by child-appeal.

The plant is that of G. H. Messmore and Joseph A. Damon, a pair of middle-western men who specialize in mechanical reproductions of animals, historic characters or what you wish.

Ordinarily the days just before Christmas are rather dull there, with most of the animals out showing off. But this year it still is busy making hazards for miniature golf courses—dragon heads, whales, sea-dragons, hollow logs and other novelties for dubbed shops.

Automatic Animals

Industrial expositions, department store circuses and pageants are supplied with floats and images. Amos 'n' Andy occupy one corner of the crowded store, that looks like an animated museum, and cows that "moo" are stabled nearby.

In the workshop paper mache horses are being made to support the medieval armor display of the Metropolitan museum.

One room is given over to a display of tableaux depicting the history of transportation from the Indian drag to the first flight of the Wrights at Kittyhawk. Here the figures are carved of wood. Two years of research, a year of work on the images and $150,000 are in this one display alone.

The creators are trying to induce the government to send it to Paris for a forthcoming exposition there.

The various creatures of Messmore and Damon are all expensive. A 50-foot dinosaur, capable of 200 movements of body and tail, cost $35,000. Other specimens that look as though they had just walked out of a zoo are a little cheaper.

The makers have never tried to sell any of them. They are content to rent them out.

Sculpto-Mechanologist
Messmore, who comes from Detroit, is the mechanical genius of the pair. Damon, a native of Mt. Vernon, Ill., is the artist who makes the exteriors look natural.

Both broke into their work in the theater. Messmore as a stage-hand, Damon as a scenic artist. They first met at the Hudson-Pulton celebration here in 1909 and combined their talents in 1917. Now they call themselves sculpto-mechanologists.

Their early work together was mostly "in the California movie studios. There they built their pet dinosaur for the exploitation of "The Lost World" film.

Their newest creation is a mechanical golfer.

The show-rooms are like a gigantic toy shop come to life when the Animals, Clowns and Dolls are set in Motion.

Thousands of school children drop in throughout the year to gaze enviously at the zoological reproductions.

It is a vast puppet show, with hidden machinery substituted for the customary strings.

California State Automobile association estimates $500,000,000 will be paid in gasoline taxes by motorists of the nation this year.

RECOVERS VOICE

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Dec. 3. (AP)—A coughing spell has restored to Mrs. John Colidan of Locust Gap the power of speech she lost two weeks ago due to fright.

She had been unable to talk since a man carrying a gun approached her in her yard. She was otherwise unharmed.

ALABAMA BANK HOBBED

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 3. (AP)—Three men held up the exchange bank here today and after binding employees escaped. Officials said a preliminary check indicated $3,000 was taken.

The magnat road sweeper used in Oregon to clear highways, picked up 13,870 pounds of metal on state highways last year.

Drivers' license laws such as are in effect in California will be sought in 26 state legislatures next year.

Dance House of Utah Indians Has Been Unearthed

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 3. (AP)—Discovery of an Indian mound containing a kiva or religious dance house, and 25 men's club rooms, the first of its kind ever located in Utah, was reported here yesterday by Dr. Julian H. Steward, head of the archaeological department of the University of Utah.

Dr. Steward said discovery of a large number of "gambling sticks" in one room indicated the Indians were adept at the game and used part of their dwelling for such pastime. These sticks, he said, were used in a hand gambling game believed to have been popular among the tribes which roamed the southern Utah and Northern Arizona territory approximately 1,500 years ago.

Indian writing, or petroglyphs, found in the mound date back 1,500 to 2,000 years, Dr. Steward said, adding he believed these Indians were ancestors of the cliff dwellers of Arizona and New Mexico. He said it was customary among the Indians for medicine men to write upon the walls of the houses and an effort would be made to interpret all of the petroglyphical figures.

Liquor Party Causes Dismissal of Two Students

AUSTIN, Dec. 3. (AP)—For taking part in a liquor party in the basement of a fraternity house here, which ended in the death of Mrs. Mildred Woodruff, 34-year-old San Antonio widow, two students at the University of Texas had been dismissed today.

V. I. Moore, dean of men, announced the action, after their statements and those of other members of the fraternity had been heard by the committee on discipline. He declined to divulge names of the students.

Mrs. Woodruff died early Friday as a result of alcoholic poisoning. Dean Moore tacitly exonerated other members of the fraternity and the Greek Letter society as a body. He said evidence showed the two men implicated had gone to a remote corner of the basement, unknown to any of their fraternity brothers and undoubtedly would have left without the knowledge of any one except for the "tragic death of the girl."

To this statement was added a formal statement by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, denying any legal or moral responsibility for the "unfortunate occurrence."

BOY IS UNCONSCIOUS
ANSON, Dec. 3. (AP)—Spurgeon Reeves, 12-year-old son of the district clerk of Jones county, was thrown from a pony Friday of last week and since has been unconscious. The boy was riding on the farm of an uncle near Anson. In attempting to jump a gate with his rider the pony fell, throwing the boy heavily.
