Lots of water talk. One done deal

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

AMARILLO — For all the talk of selling water in Roberts County, only one group has done it.

Canadian businessman and Hemphill County rancher Salem Abraham and his brothers, Eddie and Jason, packaged the water rights on part of a ranch they owned in Roberts County and sold it to the City of Amarillo.

Salem Abraham told a groundwater conference here Monday that he had not planned to do another.

"Mainly, what I do is trade in some financial markets around the world," said Abraham, who manages a money fund from his office in the Moody Building in Canadian. "Probably 95 percent of my time is spent doing that."

But after that first deal, people began calling him for advice in the water business.

"In the land of the blind, the one-eyed man is king," Abraham grinned.

"We'd done one water deal, so that made us experts."

After telling the Groundwater Management District Association and Texas Alliance of Groundwater Districts at their joint summer conference here about his experiences in water sales, Abraham ventured his view of what will happen to water in the Texas Panhandle in the future.

He said he doesn't think there will any major sales of water to far away cities in the near future.

"I think in the next 15 years, there will be two to five smaller transactions in the Texas Panhandle," he said.

Each will go no further than 150 miles.

"I don't see the big, big deal happening in the near term,"

Abraham said.

"I see Amarillo, Lubbock, some of the smaller towns taking care of their needs."

Man fears someone let two pit bulls out

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

A Pampa man who appeared in Pampa Municipal Court on Jan. 30, 2001, on charges related to his two pit bull dogs said Monday the dogs are missing.

"I'm worried that someone took my dogs," said Nicholas Lee Brookshire.

Brookshire, 21, 816 N. Wells, said he believed someone let the dogs out of the yard. "I came in from work at noon Friday and the gate was standing wide open," he said. "I knew the dogs were gone."

Brookshire said the gates can only be opened from the outside of the yard. He said that's because he didn't want to take a chance that the dogs could hit the gate hardware and get out. He added that to get access to the outside of the gates a person would have to walk the entire distance of the yard inside with the pit bulls.

The dog owner also said he is at the end of his block in rural Pampa near Price Road, and stated there are no children living nearby.

"These animals are well-trained and mannerly," he said. "I paid $300 apiece for them and I take care of them."

He said one of his dogs was shot and killed while in the yard in Feb., 2001. "People have tried to poison them. Someone even threw out chicken bones in the yard," he said.

Changes in store for state's environmental regulations

AUSTIN (AP) — Goodbye grandpa.

For years, environmentalists have been pushing to force older industrial plants, sometimes called grandfathered facilities, to get environmental permits and cut emissions.

They won the battle this legislative session.

"The grandfather loophole is finally being laid to rest by the Legislature and we will all breathe easier when these old industrial plants finally get permits and reduce their emissions or close down," said Robin Schneider of the Texas Campaign for the Environment. "For 30 years, Texans have been waiting for this day — when all major polluters would be required to use modern pollution controls."

The plants are called grandfathered plants because they were exempted from the 1971 Texas Clean Air Act that forced new plants to get environmental permits.

Closing the loophole was not the only win this session for environmentalists, who claim this session was one of the most positive in a decade.

Lawmakers also passed incentive programs designed to clean up the air and shot down a proposal to establish a radioactive waste dump that likely would have been located in West Texas.

Gov. Rick Perry still must sign off on the legislation to require permits and to offer incentives.

Under the grandfathered legislation, industrial plants in eastern Texas will be required to apply for permits by 2003 and have emission controls in place by 2007.

Cindy Morphew of the Texas Oil and Gas Association said that going into the legislative session, the organization was supportive of putting an end to the "grandfathered facilities in a manner that made sense for Texas."

"We didn't want to have facilities out there subject to the perception problems just by being grandfathered. We know internally that a lot of those facilities had emission controls on them," Morphew said.

Downtown Street Party on Cuyler St. Saturday

Saturday's the big day when the Downtown Business Association once again sponsors its popular Street Party on Cuyler from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

DBA president ReDonn Woods said there will be lots going on for family members of all ages to enjoy.

Quite frankly... What can be done to create more jobs in Pampa?

"PEDC needs to help more local-based business rather than give to out of state companies that can't make it on their own."

—Hector Leal, Jr.

"We need to use our resources to build a housing development to entice industry to come here through available housing."

—Charlene Turner

"I've heard rumors there have been some industries that wanted to come to Pampa but were discouraged. What's up with this?"

—Shannon Patrick

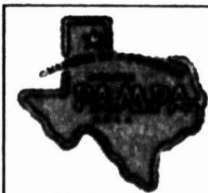

"...We should work toward maximizing the economic benefits of our airport...that might include a commuter service such as in Liberal."

—Mike Ruff

"I think a university would make a drastic impact on Pampa."

Jail time for mom of boy, 6, who killed sister, 8

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The mother of a 6-year-old boy who shot and killed his 8-year-old sister during a game of cops-and-robbers cried and begged for leniency as she was sentenced to up to seven years in prison for involuntary manslaughter.
 Denise Wearing, 26, told the judge Monday that the death of her daughter Dominique Wearing on Jan. 19, 2000, had been punishment enough.
 "I can't bring my child back. There's nothing that I can do or say. I'm just so hurt, and I will always be hurt," said Wearing, sobbing. "My heart is hurting. Please reunite me with my children."
 Common Pleas Judge Gary Glazer ignored her plea, sentencing Wearing to 36 to 83 months behind bars for involuntary manslaughter and related charges.
 "To return Miss Wearing to her children would be a dereliction of duty," he said.

Wearing's son, Keith Dodson Wearing, found a .38-caliber revolver under his mother's bed and fired a single shot that hit his sister in the head. Dominique died the next day. Wearing and her boyfriend, Eric Reeves, 29, were charged with keeping the handgun within reach of four children.
 Wearing, who has been in prison for the last 16 months, said Keith has since become rebellious and acts up in school because he feels responsible for his mother's incarceration. "My son needs me so bad," she said.
 Assistant District Attorney Arlene Fisk asked the judge for a stiff prison sentence, noting that Wearing is a convicted felon with 30 prior arrests for crimes such as credit-card fraud and theft.
 Reeves, who has a 1990 robbery conviction, was sentenced to 18 to 47 months in prison after being convicted of endangering the welfare of children and being a felon in possession of a firearm.

Restaurant owners: 911 call about Bush twins not normal way to handle such cases

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A restaurant staff didn't follow normal procedure when a 911 call was placed after President Bush's 19-year-old twin daughters were suspected of violating underage drinking laws, the owners say.
 The emergency call May 29 led to misdemeanor citations against Jenna and Barbara Bush on accusations they violated toughened underage drinking laws signed in 1997 by their father when he was governor.
 "Usually we wouldn't have handled this in the way it was handled," Mike Young, co-owner of the Chuy's Mexican restaurants in Austin, told the Austin American-Statesman in Tuesday's online edition.
 "With that said, these are very unusual circumstances," Young said. "A packed restaurant with high-profile celebrities there puts a lot of pressure on your management team."
 Young said he understood why the incident happened the way it did, and the manager of the Chuy's restaurant involved will stay with the company.

Capt. David Ball of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission agreed that restaurant staffers usually don't call police to report a suspected alcohol violation by a minor — and rarely use 911.
 "That's the decision they have to make," he said. "For your normal misrepresentation of age, it would be very unusual."
 Rick Coy, assistant chief of the Austin police department, agreed.
 "We would hope someone would be cautious in calling that," Coy said. "Certainly it can be addressed by the police, it's not always necessary. Many times they can solve the problem by refusing to sell the alcohol to the individual."
 Police cited Barbara Bush on a charge of being a minor in possession of alcohol, and Jenna for allegedly attempting to buy alcohol with a false identification. A 20-year-old friend of the girls also was cited on the possession charge.
 Just two weeks earlier, Jenna Bush pleaded no contest to charges of underage drinking. She was ordered to take alcohol counseling and perform community service.

Man flees; police confiscate van

A Pampa Police Officer attempted to stop an unidentified male shortly after midnight Monday without success in the 800 block of South Gray. He was attempted to make a routine traffic stop for speeding in excess of eight miles per hour over the speed limit, according to the report.
 Officer Cade Logue observed a male driving a 1990 Dodge Aerostar van and attempted to make the traffic stop.

The unidentified driver drove the front part of the car into the yard of a residence at 821 S. Gray, jumped from the vehicle and ran on foot from the scene. He left the car running, according to the report.
 Logue was unable to apprehend the fleet-footed driver of the car, but had the van impounded.
 A small amount of illegal narcotics was found near the vehicle.

U.N., scientists to launch major study on health of planet Earth

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — On World Environment Day, the United Nations joined forces Tuesday with 1,500 leading scientists and a host of public and private organizations to launch the first major study of the health of planet Earth.
 Secretary-General Kofi Annan said the four-year, $21 million study "is designed to bring the world's best science to bear on the present choices we face in managing the global environment."
 The Millennium Ecosystem Assessment will examine the state of the world's grasslands, forests, farmlands, oceans and fresh waterways and fill important gaps in the knowledge needed to preserve "the health of our planet," he said.
 In a report last year to the U.N. Millennium Summit, Annan noted there had never been a comprehensive global assessment of the world's major ecosystems.

WATER

He said he thinks the sales will be 20,000 to 30,000 acre-feet.

"Sixty thousand acre-feet would be a big number," he said.

And he thinks the water will be sold only 50 or 100 miles away.

"Hereford, Friona, that group," he said. "Those feedlots need water. Clovis needs water."

Abraham has an option to trade water in Roberts County to Amarillo for water that city owns in Hartley County in the western panhandle. He said he is trying to unite Hereford, Friona, Clovis, Portales and Cannon Air Force Base so he can sell them water from Hartley County.

Presently, the towns in Texas and the towns in New Mexico are planning separate water plans. Abraham said his plan would cut their costs.

Abraham said that while Amarillo or Lubbock might buy some more water, they don't have huge needs.

"Amarillo's needs are pretty much met for the next 150 years," Abraham said. "I don't see it happening in the near term."

He said he sees much more need in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"I think they're the ones that are going to come after us," Abraham said, "but I don't think it's cost effective. I think there are cheaper solutions."

But if there is a big transfer of water, he thinks it will go to Dallas-Fort Worth, and it will be at least 150,000 acre-feet and maybe as much as 400,000 acre-feet per year. It will come from the Eastern Panhandle.

"I think that's going to be 40 or 50 years out," Abraham said.

There is a chance they may buy it sooner.

"They may buy it in 15 to 40 years," he said, "but not produce it for 40 to 60 years."

They may buy sooner if a major drought occurs.

"It won't become a popular idea until they have a bad drought," Abraham said.

A bad drought would motivate Dallas-Fort Worth to move.

"If it happens next year, they may be here real soon," Abraham said. "As they grow in population, they become more susceptible to a big drought."

Abraham said that in transporting water, the major cost is the pipeline.

If accounts for as much as 90 percent of the cost.

"I'll tell you what they could do," Abraham said.

"They could come up here and buy a big chunk of water. They could just sit on it like Amarillo's doing."

If the total cost is a billion dollars, but it only costs $100 million to go buy the water rights, it's like buying an option, he said. They essentially could pay 10 percent down and complete the project anytime they want to.

"That's what Amarillo did," Abraham said.

Amarillo paid $20 million for the water. The pipeline may cost them $75 million.

"They pay a small part of it today," Abraham said, "and when they need to build a pipeline, they've got the water coming. That's the best plan if you're a city."

He said that's the plan he thinks some of the big cities down state may try.

"I think that's the first thing," Abraham said.

"They buy the water rights and sit on them. Then they build a pipeline way down the road."

The good news, he said, is that the Eastern Texas Panhandle should have plenty of water for at least the next 40 years.

While projections are that Lamb County's water will drop from 10.1 to 3.3 million acre-feet and Hale County will drop from 12.3 to 3.2 million acre-feet, Gray County drops only a little, 13.0 to 11.1 million acre-feet.

Wheeler County doesn't drop much at all, 8.4 to 8.2 million acre-feet.

What's interesting, he said, is that Roberts County goes from 27.0 to 27.8 million acre-feet.

"It actually goes up," Abraham said.

Hemphill County is expected to go from 16.6 to 17.2 million acre-feet.

"It goes up and Lipscomb County stays the same at 20.8," Abraham says.

"These three counties have a lot of water, and they can keep that water."

PIT BULLS

Concerned that someone deliberately removed the dogs from the yard, Brookshire said the animals are safe.

"When this rabies scare began, I even asked my veterinarian about revaccinating them for rabies although their vaccinations were current," he said.

He said he did not keep collars on the dogs while they were in the yard and, therefore, the dogs did not have identification on them.

According to a report from the Pampa Police Department which appeared in the Sunday, May 27 edition of The Pampa News Brookshire was arrested Friday, May 25 on warrants on animal related charges.

The report stated he was stopped at the intersection of Harvester and Sumner and arrested on two warrants for animals at large and two warrants for no rabies vaccination.

Brookshire said the "no rabies vaccination" charge was not correct. He said it should have been failure to display rabies vaccination tags because the dogs did not have on their collars with their tags.

A spokesperson in the Municipal Court said Monday afternoon that the term "no rabies vaccination" is used when citations are issued on dogs that do not have the rabies tags on collars around their neck.

A rabies tag is issued to dog owners by veterinarians when the dog is given the rabies vaccine. Pampa City Ordinance states the tag must be on the dog's collar to designate the dog has been vaccinated.

"No rabies [vaccination] charge is the same as not wearing the tag," she said.

Brookshire was fined $124 for the tags not being on the dogs. He was fined an additional $175 for dogs at large from the January court.

Mother arrested in Texas for kidnapping

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — The 3 1/2-year search for a Ucon woman wanted for kidnapping her children ended 1,400 miles away in Galveston, Texas.

FBI agents and Texas authorities arrested Toni Lynn Schott, 36, on Monday afternoon in an apartment she shared with her two daughters, Tabbetha and Jessica, and her 18-year-old son, Michael McCarty.

Schott was being held Tuesday in the Galveston County Jail pending extradition to Idaho Falls, where she faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted on a felony charge of custodial interference-kidnapping. Her bond is set at $100,000.

Bernard Schott, the girls' father, planned to pick up his daughters in Texas, Bonneville County Sheriff's Sgt. Karl Casperson said. The girls, now 7 and 9, were placed in protective custody until he arrived.

Schott's arrest came after someone tipped off FBI agents and Bonneville County sheriff's deputies Sunday to the woman's whereabouts, Casperson said. The informant had seen a newspaper story about the case being featured on the FBI's national Web site, he said.

The case has been featured since November 2000 on the FBI's Web page. Schott is listed as one of 14 parents wanted for kidnapping their children.

Investigators learned Schott had given the girls new names and supported the children by working in a bar, he said. Casperson did not know how long the family had lived in Texas.

Schott disappeared with the children in December 1997 after a nasty custody battle. She alleged during the dispute that the children had been sexually abused, but investigators in Idaho and Pennsylvania — where Bernard Schott lives — never found any truth to the claims.

REGULATIONS

piece of legislation that revamped and reauthorized the state's environmental agency, which has broad regulator powers covering everything from agricultural runoff to disposal of radioactive waste.

The bill also requires the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, which would be renamed the Texas Department of Environmental Quality, to take into account cumulative impacts of pollution when issuing new permits or expansions. And, the bill would prohibit the storage of hazardous waste in salt domes.

Lawmakers also signed off on incentive-based legislation aimed at helping the state meet federal clean air standards in the Houston, Dallas, Beaumont and El Paso regions.

Under the $136 million plan, consumers could receive up to $5,000 when they purchase cleaner cars. Companies that agree to retrofit or replace diesel engines also could receive grants.

The program would be paid for through a series of new or increased fees, including one that would boost the vehicle registration fee for people moving into Texas from $1 to $225. The new and increased fees take effect Sept. 1.

Tom "Smitty" Smith, director of the Texas chapter of Public Citizen, said that incentive program and the changes implemented in the TNRC reauthorization bill "give us tools to make real headway in cleaning up the air in our cities. This will help Texas get ahead of the coming air pollution crises which will require deeper cuts in ozone and soot."

Lawmakers shot down a plan to build a low-level radioactive waste dump, likely in Andrews County. The bill also would have allowed U.S. Department of Energy waste to be accepted at a separate dump.

Sen. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock, complained that without the bill, the state would continue to store the waste at about 1,200 sites across the state, rather than setting up one central site where the waste could be stored and managed.

Officials had sought to take children away

DALLAS (AP) — Child-welfare authorities had previously tried to remove a north Dallas couple's four children — including a 23-month-old boy who died Sunday in a hot family car, officials said.

Child Protective Services officials scheduled a hearing for Tuesday on whether to remove the three surviving siblings of Michel Borg Jr.

The child had Down syndrome and a heart condition and needed to be fed through a tube.

The Dallas Morning News reported in Tuesday's editions that CPS had tried to remove the four Borg children in 1999 after Michel was found to have two broken ribs. A judge rejected the request, however, saying that Michel and Marjorie Borg could care for the boy best at home.

Police are still reviewing the circumstances behind his death inside the Borg family's sport-utility vehicle.

His parents told police they had gone inside to nap after a neighborhood swimming party Sunday afternoon, when temperatures reached the 90s. They said they didn't realize Michel was still in the car until two hours later.

"One thought one parent was taking the child, and the other thought the other was taking the child," said Bob Marrinan, a deacon at St. Monica Catholic Church and a family friend. "With three active children running around, there was some confusion."

Marrinan said the parents were too devastated by the death to talk about it.

The Dallas Police Department's child abuse division was investigating the death, but they said it was too early to say whether charges would be filed.

At last year's Downtown Street Party Sarah Porter won a guitar which was presented to her by Chase Roach of Tarpley Music. For information on this Saturday's event, see Page 1.

Body of Anthony girl found in baseball field

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The body of a 15-year-old Anthony girl who was apparently strangled was found on a baseball field Monday morning, El Paso County Sheriff's Department investigators said.

A little more than nine hours after a school employee found the body of Melissa Medina at Anthony Elementary School, detectives arrested Irving Alvin Davis, 18, also of Anthony.

Davis was charged with Medina's murder and jailed under $500,000 bond, said sheriff's spokesman Rick Glancey.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion around Texas: Wichita Falls Times Record News on undertrained IRS staff: The tax man got a report card of sorts recently, and he flunked.

Auditors working for the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration visited IRS walk-in sites, where taxpayers go for help in preparing their returns, during two weeks in February just to see what kind of help the taxpayers were receiving. The IRS conducted its own internal survey, as well, this year.

And both agencies found Jane Q. Public was getting little or no help at all.

In reports issued last week, the subject of a story by Fowler W. Martin appearing in Monday's Wall Street Journal, the Inspector General and the IRS said that the surveys of many of the IRS' 500 walk-in sites showed:

— The centers were understaffed and the staff members were not trained adequately to provide the help sought;

— Only 50 percent of the tax-related questions asked by taxpayers were answered correctly;

— Sometimes taxpayers were made to wait hours for help; other times they were forced to return later;

— When taxpayers were notified that they owed taxes, penalties or interest or about errors on their returns, many of them were sent notices that were incorrect.

These are the kinds of problems that resulted in congressional hearings just a few years ago, hearings during which the IRS promised to change the way it goes business.

Obviously, not much has actually changed, although previous news reports indicate that the IRS is scrutinizing fewer returns.

IRS officials blame these lousy report cards on inadequate training.

But, taxpayers have to wonder if there's not more here than meets the eye.

Lousy training is an excuse, not a reason, for one of the most powerful agencies in government to provide service that isn't just below par but truly awful.

Obviously, training is not seen as important or it would be done right.

Likewise, staffing in these walk-in centers is not seen as important or the centers would have adequate manpower.

The reports also hint at surly and arrogant behavior on the part of some of those who do staff the walk-in centers. They ignore materials provided to help them give assistance, they delay appointments, they send people away to return some other time.

These are issues that go to the heart of management. They are, in other words, signs of woeful mismanagement of the agency from top to bottom.

And management's response?

We'll do better, one top official told the Journal.

That's not good enough.

We're not talking about paper-pushers or faceless bureaucrats here. We're talking, first of all, about an agency that has the power to make life absolutely miserable for people who deal with it, an agency that can tie your life in knots if you mess up, an agency that can take away your income and throw you in jail. And we're talking about people who are paid to give correct information to keep taxpayers from getting crossways with the agency they represent.

It sounds like a good time for some management turnover. Congress has taken the time in the recent past to review what the IRS does and how it does it, and it was a moment of truth for this federal agency.

Perhaps now's a good time for a followup. Those who manage the IRS need to get called on the carpet on Capitol Hill to explain why they can't seem to get a handle on the attitude and service problems and what they plan to do about it.

Inept teaching training flourishing

American education will never be improved until we address a problem seen as too delicate to discuss. That problem is teacher philosophy and incompetency.

If we were serious about efforts to improve public education, we'd shut down schools of education. Why? Schools of education, either graduate or undergraduate, represent the academic slums of any university. They're home to students who have the lowest academic achievement test scores, be they the SAT, GRE, ACT, MCAT or LSAT. They're also home to professors with the lowest academic respect.

A recent study by Lance T. Izumi and K. Gwyne Coburn titled "Facing the Classroom Challenge: Teacher Quality and Teacher Training in California Schools of Education," published by the San Francisco-based Pacific Research Institute, gives us some insight into education philosophy.

An education text used at California State University, Dominguez Hills says, "We cannot afford to become so bogged down in grammar and spelling that we forget the whole story ... the onslaught of antihuman [sic] practices that this nation and other nations are facing today: racism, and sexism, and the greed for money and human labor that disguises itself as 'globalization.'" That's a message from a chapter titled "Spelling and Social Justice," in Enid Lee, et al., "Beyond Heroes and Holidays."

At San Francisco State University, "About Teaching Mathematics," a text written by Marilyn Burns says, "There is no place for requiring students to practice tedious calculations that are more efficiently and accurately done by using calculators." Instruction "should not aim toward an answer-oriented curriculum," but toward one that values a "reasoning process." A September 2000 Brookings Institution study, using data from the National Assessment of Educational Progress, found that fourth-graders who used calculators every day had lower math scores than students who didn't.

Walter Williams

Another text used at San Francisco State University, "New Designs for Teaching and Learning," by Dennis Adams and Mary Hamm says: "Content knowledge is not seen to be as important as possessing teaching skills and knowledge about the students being taught. ... Successful teachers understand the outside context of community, personal abilities and feelings, while they establish an inside context or environment conducive to learning."

That means, what the heck if teachers haven't mastered ninth- and 10th-grade math, writing and English such as that found in the California

Basic Education Skills Test (cbest.nesinc.com). Harvey Daniels' and Marilyn Bizar's text "Methods That Matter," takes subject knowledge a step farther, saying, "Students can no longer be viewed as cognitive living rooms into which the furniture of knowledge is moved in and arranged by teachers, and teachers cannot invariably act as subject-matter experts."

The authors add, "The main use of standardized tests in America is to justify the distribution of certain goodies to certain people. And, no matter what the test, does anyone seriously expect rich suburban kids, whose 'Nordic' neighbors create and sell these tests, to wind up at the bottom?"

What if parents want basic skills for their children? Ed Labinowicz, in "The Piaget Primer," says that parental support of school reforms that stress basic skills are simply satisfying "parental ego needs" that "they can flaunt before their neighbors" that "have little to do with children's best interests." Translation: Parents who want basic skills and traditional values for their children are seen as education obstructionists.

President Bush, the Congress and state legislators handing over more money to the education establishment will do nothing to end America's education rot. More money will simply spread it. As to teacher training, what's needed is for teachers to have degrees in the subject they teach and maybe a class or two in pedagogy. For this, schools of education are surely not needed.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, June 5, the 156th day of 2001. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 5, 1968, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

Gunman Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was immediately arrested.

On this date:

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1794, Congress passed the Neutrality Act, which prohibited Americans from enlisting in the service of a foreign power.

In 1917, about 10 million American men began registering for the draft in World War I.

In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University in which he outlined an aid program for Europe that came to be known as the Marshall Plan.

In 1967, war erupted in the Mideast. Six days of fighting with Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Iraq left Israel in control of the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Sinai Desert and Golan Heights.

In 1975, Egypt reopened the Suez Canal to international shipping, eight years after it was closed because of the 1967 war with Israel.

In 1976, 11 people were killed when the Teton Dam in Idaho burst.

In 1999, jazz and pop singer Mel Torme died in Los Angeles at age 73.

Ten years ago: Soviet President

Mikhail S. Gorbachev delivered his delayed Nobel Peace lecture in Oslo, Norway, warning that Western failure to heed his call for economic aid could dash hopes for a peaceful new world order. The space shuttle Columbia blasted off with seven astronauts on a nine-day mission.

Five years ago: Joseph Waldholtz, the ex-husband of U.S. Rep. Enid Greene, R-Utah, pleaded guilty to providing his wife false information for her taxes and to falsifying spending reports from her congressional campaign.

Constitution to support confederation

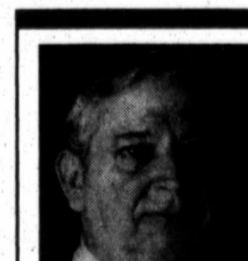

One way to understand how far off the track we've gone from our constitutional roots is to think about how government was supposed to be in the United States.

The federal government, as intended by the founders, was to be, in the words of George Washington (the man whose prestige won ratification for the new Constitution), "a stronger confederation." In other words, not something radically different — just a stronger confederation of sovereign states.

James Madison, in the Federalist Papers, said that in time of peace, 95 percent of the governing would be done by the states, only 5 percent by the federal government. If you will sit down and read the Constitution, you will see clearly that it was to be an agent for the states and would do only those things that made sense.

It made sense, for example, to have one standard of measurements, one monetary system, one trade policy and one foreign policy, rather than 13 different ones. It made sense to have the mechanism in place for all the states to act in unison if attacked by a foreign power.

The proof of its intent lies in the wording (as well as the historical record) of the Constitution. It was to be ratified by the states, not by a majority vote of the people in all the states. It would take effect if nine states ratified it. What about the other four? They would remain what they were, independent countries with their own constitutions.

Charley Reese

Syndicated columnist

In the original Constitution, senators were selected by state legislatures. Their duty was clearly to represent the interests of their respective state governments. They were described in one instance as "ambassadors from the states to the new federal government."

Now, was that a better system than the one we have today? Today, the Constitution is occasionally paid lip service but not otherwise heeded, with the federal government ruling practically every aspect of our lives, either directly or indirectly.

I think the old system was infinitely better because it was pragmatic. It's impossible for a handful of people in a central government to wisely govern a large area and millions of diverse people, whether we are talking Washington, Rome or Moscow. Central governments always collapse eventually from sheer incompetence, if nothing else.

The other disadvantage of centralized government is that concentrating so much power in so few hands facilitates corruption and coups. There are, so to speak, only a few pockets to fill or, in the case of a coup, only a few heads to lop off. One bad attorney general with central power can cause a lot of problems. It is unlikely that all 50 states would have bad attorneys general.

Finally, of course, the advantage of the old constitutional system was that the governments that did most of the governing were closest to the people. They could watch them and understand them. They could get to know their officials. That's much less easy to do when dealing with the federal government.

One size does not fit all, and one centralized government mucking about in everybody's lives is bound to make a mess of things. Keep in mind that advocates of centralized government generally imagine themselves wielding the power, not you or I.

American children would have a better chance of education, for example, if all 50 states were free to adopt their own ideas. Today, the bureaucrats in Washington, in direct and indirect ways, control the system. The arguments for individual liberty apply to states. Odds are better that 50 states trying to find an answer to a problem will find it than if only one federal bureaucrat is in charge of seeking the answer.

Girl With Eating Disorder Tells Teens to Reach Out for Help

DEAR ABBY: Your column about teen fitness caught my attention. I am a high school sophomore who is involved in sports activities such as swimming, track/cross country and kickboxing. I have been struggling with anorexia and bulimia since my freshman year. It's a serious problem that society needs to address.

My purpose in writing is to thank you and Terrie, the woman whose letter you printed. It meant the world to me, and I'm sure it did to hundreds of other teens. Just knowing someone cared brought tears to my eyes.

If I could offer advice to teens suffering from this disease, it would be this: Get help. You are living in a dark, cold world that you shouldn't have to be in. If you can't talk to your parents, then reach out to someone else — a teacher or school counselor. They're there to help.

Also, don't give up. When things seem at their worst, they can only get better. It helps to remember that there really are people who care and that you're not alone.

After coming to terms with my problem, I went to my mother, who put me into counseling right away. I was also taken to a nutritionist to learn about how to eat healthy. Only then did my recovery begin.

Thank you, Abby. Your column will be displayed in my room for a long time. It's given me strength to get through this.

NEW JERSEY TEEN ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

DEAR N.J. TEEN: I'm pleased you're recovering. Your letter is sure to raise awareness among other teen-agers. That's important, because our culture — with help from the media — tends to glamorize extreme thinness. It's a dangerous goal.

According to the Department of Health and Human Services, one-third of all girls in grades 9 through 12 think that they are overweight, and 60 percent of them say they are trying to lose weight. Nearly half of all teenage girls skip a meal to control their weight — and between 3.6 percent and 12.9 percent of young women suffer from one of the three main eating disorders: anorexia nervosa, bulimia or binge-eating. Of all psychiatric disorders, eating disorders have the highest mortality rate — 10 percent.

Starving is not a proper or effective way to lose weight. Teens who fail to get enough vitamins and minerals in their diet are setting themselves up for osteoporosis in their later years. The most effective way to practice sensible weight control is to talk to your physician or a registered dietitian about what constitutes a healthy, balanced diet; to realize that weight is not put on overnight and it's not lost overnight; and to establish a routine that includes moderate physical activity.

FOOTBALL

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Rice, who set every significant NFL receiving record during 16 years with the San Francisco 49ers, was released by the team. He soon will sign with the Oakland Raiders, 49ers vice president Bill Walsh said at Rice's charity golf tournament.

But before being off at Los Altos Hills Country Club, Rice said he was still deciding between the Raiders and the Seattle Seahawks.

The 38-year-old Rice, who has a record 1,281 receptions and 187 touchdowns, had spent his entire career with the 49ers, but was cut because of the team's salary cap problems.

Although he lists his team triumphs — three Super Bowl titles and 14 winning seasons — as his greatest achievements, Rice has had an unparalleled career with the 49ers.

Also among his NFL records are his 176 touchdowns on pass receptions; 12 seasons with more than 1,000 yards receiving; 1,848 yards receiving in a single season; and 22 touchdown receptions in a single season.

The 12-time Pro Bowl selection was the NFL Offensive Player of the Year in 1987 and 1993 and the Super Bowl MVP in 1989. He has 19,247 yards receiving, including at least one catch in his last 225 games, another record.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mark Chmura retired from professional football, four months after he was acquitted in a sexual assault case.

Chmura's lawyer, Gerald Boyle, said the one-time Green Bay Packers Pro Bowl tight end wanted to play only for his former team "and they did not make him an offer."

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Center Chris Dalman retired, 10 months after a neck injury during training camp ended his career with the San Francisco 49ers.

Dalman, 31, who played at Stanford, spent eight seasons with the 49ers after San Francisco drafted him in the sixth round in 1993.

After three seasons as a backup, Dalman was the 49ers' starter at right guard for one season. From 1997-99, he started 43 games at center as the 49ers led the NFL in rushing twice.

HOCKEY

DENVER (AP) — The New Jersey Devils, who won the Stanley Cup on the road last season, moved within a victory of winning it again by beating Colorado on their own ice for the second straight time, a 4-1 victory secured by Alexander Mogilny's first goal in 15 games.

Sergei Brylin also ended a long streak with his first goal in 12 games and Patrick Elias, playing without injured A-Line center Jason Arnott, scored his second in as many games as New Jersey won for the third time in the last four games to seize a 3-2 series lead.

BASEBALL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds hit his 30th home run, reaching the mark faster than anyone in major league history.

Bonds connected in the fourth inning for a solo shot in the San Francisco Giants' 3-1 win over San Diego.

Bonds hit No. 30 in 57 games. Babe Ruth reached 30 homers in 63 games in 1928.

PHOENIX (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers placed ace Kevin Brown on the 15-day disabled list with an irritated nerve in his neck. Manager Jim Tracy said Brown would miss three or four starts.

Brown, 36, goes on the DL for the seventh time in his 15-year major league career. He has a 6-3 record and is second to Greg Maddux in the National League with a 2.60 ERA.

Draft: Twins have No. 1 pick today

By DENNIS WASZAK Jr.
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Minnesota Twins scouting director Mike Radcliff approached this year's baseball draft knowing his organization is in an enviable position.

The Twins have the No. 1 overall pick and their choice of a number of major league prospects in the draft, which begins Tuesday.

"We don't look at it as pressure at all," Radcliff said. "We just feel fortunate to be picking at the very top of this year's draft. There are some quality guys to pick from at the top."

It's just a matter of agreeing on the player who best suits the organization — and the one most likely to sign.

"Obviously, the final piece in any draft is factoring the signability, particularly when you have one of the top picks," Radcliff said. "It's the last thing that happens, but sometimes it's the most publicized and most controversial. It's certainly become an integral part of the process the last few years as the money has exponentially gone up."

Southern California junior right-hander Mark Prior, high school catcher Joe Mauer and Georgia Tech junior third baseman Mark Teixeira are considered the class of this year's draft crop.

The Twins, picking No. 1 overall for just the second time in franchise history, hadn't yet decided on who to take as of Monday night.

"I think most everybody has the names. They're not secrets," Radcliff said. "We're down to three guys who we feel are viable candidates to be the first selection out of this crop of talent."

The Chicago Cubs, Tampa Bay, Philadelphia and Texas follow Minnesota to round out the first five picks.

Minnesota had three of the first 42 picks last year and signed the second overall selection, Cal State-Fullerton right-hander Adam Johnson. But the Twins were unable to agree to terms with Notre Dame righty Aaron Heilman (No. 31) or San Francisco third baseman Taggart Bozied (No. 42). Now, Minnesota has the franchise's first No. 1 overall pick since 1983, when it took right-hander Tim Lincecum — and couldn't sign him.

"It's gotten absolutely ridiculous in the amount of dollars that are being invested in unproven commodities," Tampa Bay scouting director Dan Jennings said. "If there's any pressure, it's knowing the financial commitment the team is going to make. So you want to make sure the pick is the best one."

Prior is considered by some to be one of the greatest college pitchers ever. He is 14-1 with a 1.50 ERA and had 189 strikeouts and just 17 walks in 131 2-3 innings for the College World Series-bound Trojans.

Mauer, from Cretin-Derham Hall in Minnesota, played baseball, basketball and football in high school. Despite a scholarship to play quarterback at Florida State, he intends to concentrate on baseball. He could join Danny Gooden (Chicago White Sox, 1971) and David Clyde (Texas, 1973) as the only players to be chosen by their hometown teams with the No. 1 pick. He would also become the first catcher drafted with the top pick since Milwaukee took B.J. Surhoff in 1985. Teixeira was sidelined for 10 weeks with a broken right ankle, but is considered one of the greatest college switch-hitters ever. He's hit for power and average everywhere he's swung a bat, including for Team USA last summer.

Other players likely to be selected with the top few picks include Heilman, Middle Tennessee State right-hander Dewon Brazelton, righty Gavin Floyd of Mt. St. Joseph High School in Maryland, Kent State first baseman John VanBenschoten, and first baseman Casey Kotchman of Seminole High School in Florida.

"I think it'll be an average year," Baltimore scouting director Tony DeMazio said. "There's a few real premium guys up at the top and there's an excessive amount of right-handed pitching, both college and high school. But there's not much left-handed pitching again, and premium position players are becoming more difficult to find."

The draft, which has 50 rounds, runs through Thursday.

Boone, Mariners deliver again Rangers drop contest by 11-6

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Nothing about the Seattle Mariners surprises Alex Rodriguez. Especially Bret Boone.

"When you have a guy who's hotter than a firecracker, you could roll the ball up there and he would probably golf it out of the ballpark," Rodriguez said.

Boone continued his career season Monday night with a career game, driving in seven runs and hitting two homers in an 11-6 victory over Texas.

Minus Edgar Martinez and Mark McLemore, the Mariners extended their longest winning streak in team history to 12 games.

Boone's highlight wasn't his RBI total, his home runs or his 4-for-5 game that raised his batting average to .332.

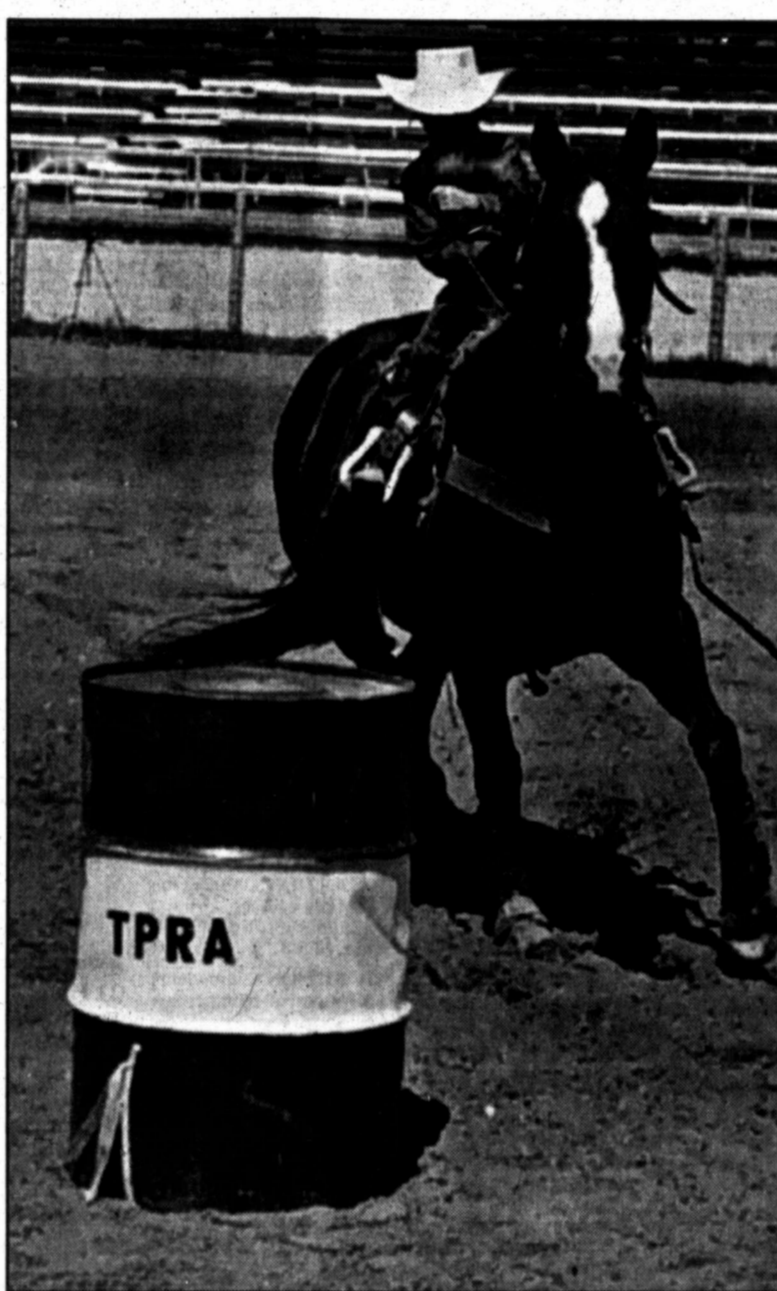

It was the curtain-call standing ovation from the Safeco Field sellout crowd of 45,812 after his second homer in the seventh inning gave the Mariners an 8-6 lead.

Top-seeded men, women advance in French Open

PARIS (AP) — The men's and women's top-seeded players, Gustavo Kuerten and Martina Hingis, advanced to the semifinals of the French Open Tuesday.

Kuerten, the defending champion, proved again why he is favored to retain the title by defeating No. 7 Yevgeny Kafelnikov 6-1, 3-6, 7-6 (3), 6-4.

The Brazilian, who narrowly escaped defeat in the fourth round, was back in top form against the 1996 champion, repeatedly hitting searing backhand winners.

"Two days ago I was almost out," said Kuerten, who saved a match point against American qualifier Michael Russell on Sunday. "Again in the semifinals, it's a great feeling."

Hingis moved a step closer to taking the one Grand Slam title that has eluded her by defeating Italy's Francesca Schiavone 6-1, 6-4.

The win sent her into the semifinals, where she will meet either No. 4 Jennifer Capriati or No. 6 Serena Williams.

The Swiss star has won every other Grand Slam title at least once. She was twice a runner-up at Roland Garros, most recently in 1999, when she was three points away from beating Steffi Graf for the championship.

Hingis last won a Grand Slam title at the 1999 Australian Open. Schiavone is ranked 51st in the world and played in her first Grand Slam quarterfinal.

Kuerten sped through his first set in 20 minutes, then came unglued against Kafelnikov's powerful forehand and volleying tactics.

At 4-4 in the third set, Kuerten saved five break points to hold serve. He closed out the tiebreaker when Kafelnikov sent a backhand into the net.

Kuerten took a 3-0 lead in the final set, twice breaking serve when his opponent double faulted.

Kafelnikov broke back once but failed to tie the set and Kuerten served for the match at 5-4, clinching victory when the Russian hit a backhand return into the net.

Kuerten won the French in 1997 and again last year. He beat Kafelnikov in the quarterfinals both times.

Meanwhile, Belgian teen-ager Justine Henin, seeded 14th, advanced to her first Grand Slam semifinal by beating unseeded Russian Lina Krasnoroutskaya 6-1, 6-2 in only 50 minutes.

"I don't want to stop, having come so far," Henin said.

The 19-year-old had not gotten past the fourth round in a Grand Slam before the French Open, where she has posted five consecutive straight-set wins.

Henin was close to shutting out Krasnoroutskaya in the second set, but at 5-0, she lost the next two games. She quickly recovered her composure and clinched the match with a crosscourt forehand.

All of her matches so far have been against unseeded players. She likely will face her first big test in the semis, against compatriot Kim Clijsters.

Clijsters, seeded 12th, was to play Hungarian qualifier Petra Mandula Tuesday.

Andre Agassi's fascination with the French public faces a tough test Wednesday, when he plays local favorite Sebastien Grosjean, the only Frenchman in the quarterfinals.

Arnott unsure of Game 6 availability

DENVER (AP) — New Jersey center Jason Arnott is hopeful, but not confident, of playing in Game 6.

Asked about his availability for the next game on Thursday night in New Jersey, Arnott said, "That's a concern. I will have to see. It's day-to-day. I have to get rest."

Arnott, who experienced dizziness after being hit in the head with a puck in Game 4 on Saturday, said doctors haven't told him if he sustained a concussion. But, he added, "The symptoms are there."

He didn't know how many concussions he has had in his career, but noted, "I have been knocked out before."

Arnott took part in New Jersey's morning skate before deciding he would be unable to play Monday night.

Informed that he needed to wear a helmet with more padding, he at one point borrowed goalie John Vanbiesbrouck's mask.

"They made me wear a helmet with thicker foam in it, and I don't like it," Arnott said. "So I figured I'd play a joke and put Beezer's helmet on. I asked our trainer if that was OK if I played with his helmet, but it's a little too small on me."

"I've got to bring a little humor to the room so the guys just forget about me and concentrate on the game."

FORGET FORSBERG: As Colorado fell behind 3-2 in the series, speculation flared anew that forward Peter Forsberg might return to the lineup to give his team an emotional lift.

But Colorado coach Bob Hartley insisted it won't happen. Forsberg, who had surgery to remove a ruptured spleen on May 10, has resumed skating. But he has termed his chances of playing again in the playoffs as "very, very slim."

ATLANTA (AP)—The owner of a top Atlanta strip club regularly set up sex shows and paid dancers to have sex with professional athletes, a former club manager testified at a federal racketeering trial.
 Gold Club owner Steve Kaplan played host to members of the New York Knicks, Charlotte Hornets and Indiana Pacers when the basketball teams were in town, Thomas "Ziggy" Scignano testified.

Scignano said Kaplan paid dancers to have sex with former Knicks Patrick Ewing and John Starks, Reggie Miller and Antonio Davis of the Pacers and Atlanta Braves outfielder Andrew Jones. Kaplan and six others face racketeering charges, including accusations of credit card fraud, prostitution, loansharking and funneling money to the Gambino crime family.

Steve Stricker, Fred Funk and Steve Lowery.
 At Dallas, Ben Crenshaw, a two-time Masters champion and the captain of the 1999 U.S. Ryder Cup team, failed to qualify.

 Agassi closed by blanking the 16th-seeded Argentine in the last set to complete the 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 1-6, 6-0 victory.
 The third-seeded Agassi, who won the French in 1999, will play No. 10 Sebastian Grosjean in the quarters. The Frenchman eliminated Spanish clay-court specialist Galo Blanco 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.
 Earlier, No. 6 Lleyton Hewitt took his place in the quarters when he beat Guillermo Canas to complete a five-set match suspended the day before because of darkness.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 An impulsive gift or token of affection wins someone's attention. Sometimes, slowing down the hectic pace of your life and stopping to do something meaningful might be ultimately more important than anything. Hop on the Internet.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Venus moves into your sign, adding to your well-known sensuality. Extremes punctuate moods and partnerships. If you work well with an associate, you will ultimately benefit professionally. The results of a mass appearance will surprise you. Tonight: Accept an invitation.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Others come to the rescue. Though you're born under a sign associated with mental dexterity, you might be overly emotional in the next few weeks. A friend could have your best interest in mind, though you'd never know it from his caustic tone. Tonight: Accept another's offer.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 You accomplish a lot very quickly. Your high energy helps you breeze through work. Take time to socialize with others at work. Listen to someone carefully who has some awfully "sweet" words to share. Network at a meeting. Others will respect your perspective. Tonight: Get into a favorite sport.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 You drive a hard bargain when you want something — you're bound and determined. Friends could challenge you, though somehow you turn criticism into a positive feedback. Good for you! Another admires your ability to work with the public. Tonight: Take a mid-pace of your life and stopping to do something meaningful might be ultimately more important than anything. Hop on the Internet.

count on this person in a crunch. Tonight: Pay the bills.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 Try the unexpected, and be open to reversing positions. Life would not be as fun or exciting if everything went as you wanted it to go. Display what you do well for others. Go in a new direction. Try a risk or two. Others seek you out and will ask for feedback. Tonight: It's your call.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 You could be spending to mollify some of your strong feelings. Rather than acting out, discuss your emotions in a way that someone can understand. You might be surprised how intimate chats could resolve problems, given time. Tonight: Take some thinking time.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 Once more, you do the unexpected. Why should you be surprised by others' reactions? Go with the predictable and work with others. Extremes punctuate interpersonal relationships. What starts as a flirtation could become a lot more. Tonight: Be spontaneous.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 Stay on top of a professional matter. You might be overwhelmed by what a boss or someone in authority drops on you. Understand that anything is possible, especially if you refuse to accept the word "no." Use your ingenuity and brainstorm with others. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

Classes — to be conducted June 18-22 at Travis Elementary — will include pottery, beading, acrylics, printing, watercolor and drama for youth. Adult classes will include pottery, watercolor, ribbon embroidery and basketweaving. Contact PFAA at 665-0343 for registration information.

Pampa Fine Arts Association to hold fifth annual Summer Arts Program

Don't miss out on all the creative fun and learning being offered this summer through the Pampa Fine Arts Association's Summer Arts Program. This is the fifth consecutive year for PFAA to sponsor the program, expanding it to include 10 youth classes and four adult classes, all taught at Travis Elementary School the week of June 18-22.

▲ Pampa Artist of the Year Linda Nowell will teach two youth pottery classes each morning and an adult class in the afternoon. Students will use coil, slab and pinch pot methods to make a variety of unique creations — trays, night lights, pressed bowls, wall pockets, vases and whistles.

Ruth Barrett will teach one class on beading and another on acrylics for youth in the morning. She will then teach ribbon embroidery for adults in the afternoon.

In the beading class, students will create easy Indian designs to use in weaving on looms and then will frame their work. In the acrylics class, students will create an original Pennsylvania Dutch or American Indian design. Students in the ribbon embroidery class will learn the basics of sewing with ribbon and create original designs.

Kay Crouch will offer a class on watercolor for youth and another on pastels. She'll also teach an adult watercolor class in the afternoon. Students will learn basic watercolor techniques and experiment with the use of salt, alcohol and water-resist material to create unusual pictures of a variety of subjects.

Different types of printing will be the subject of James Hinkley's two morning classes for youth. Younger students will create prints using leaves, flowers and other found objects. Older students will experiment with mono-printing and embossing to make a one-of-a-kind print.

Pampa Middle School drama teacher Heather Fuentes will teach two youth drama classes each morning. Older students will prepare for performing small skits through various acting techniques and games while younger students will participate in imagination activities, constructing puppets and performing a puppet show. Improvisation and mime instruction also will be taught.

The final offering for adults will be basketweaving taught by Pat Kindle and Madeline Gawthrop. Students will construct a catchall basket and a small market basket with curls. Adult classes are open to high school students and adults.

There is a registration fee of $20 for each class and most of the classes have a supply fee as well. All registration and supply fees must be paid at the time of registration. The deadline for registration is June 8. For more information or to register, call PFAA at 665-0343.

PPATP to offer free Mid-Life service to panhandle women

AMARILLO — Planned Parenthood of Amarillo and the Texas Panhandle (PPATP) will offer free Pap smears to uninsured and underinsured women in the panhandle between the ages of 45-65 all day Wednesday, June 20 at the Pampa clinic on 408 W. Kingsmill #173-A.

Texas Department of Health statistics indicate there are 41,701 Texas Panhandle women in this age group who are uninsured, do not qualify for any other government programs and who would benefit from this program.

Uninsured women are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity. Appointments are not necessary, but are greatly appreciated to allow for quality service.

This free program is made available through The Dorothea B. Williams and Thelma Spurlock Memorial Fund administered by Amarillo Area Foundation. Distributions from this fund are used solely for mid-life services and transportation.

PPATP will also be kicking-off its formal Mid-Life Services program with this event. "We felt a Free Pap Smear Day would be a great way to promote our new services," said Elaine Green, director of Public Affairs. "Women who are no longer in their reproductive years need to realize how important it is to continue receiving an annual exam."

Women often put their jobs and family health concerns first, neglecting to care for themselves. "Recent polls indicate that 70 percent of women put their job first on their priority list," said PPATP CEO Claudia Stravato. "This fact becomes a more serious problem for those women who do not have the money to obtain basic health screening for cervical cancer," she added. "More than 4,500 women die annually from cervical cancer. But, cervical cancer can be treated when it is diagnosed at an early stage."

For the year 2000, abnormal Pap smear rates more than doubled in the panhandle from 12- to 28-percent. "Every woman should have a regular pap screening as part of their health routine," says Rosa Fierro, director of Clinical Affairs. "But not everyone can afford these services. That is why we are offering this free Pap smear day. We are very concerned that the women who do not receive annual exams could be jeopardizing their lives by not catching problems in time for them to be addressed."

For more information about Free Pap Smear Day, contact Pampa Planned Parenthood Clinic at 665-2291.

PRS campaign aimed at runaways

AUSTIN — This week, June 4-10, the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services (PRS) is conducting a statewide media campaign in conjunction with the Texas Runaway Hotline to reach as many runaways, troubled youth and families as possible, according to Hotline Director Jay Smith.

In order to raise public awareness about the problem, Gov. Rick Perry has proclaimed this week "Runaway and Homeless Youth Awareness Week" in Texas.

"Our campaign begins this week and continues throughout the summer months when most youth are out of school," Smith explained. The hotline's campaign includes more than 150,000 pieces of prevention materials, billboards, bus placards and new public service announcements for TV and radio directed toward troubled youth and families in possible need of hotline services.

"In Texas, an estimated 100,000 children ages 7 to 17 run away annually," Smith said. "Whether they are in large cities or small towns, runaway youths are vulnerable to a wide variety of crimes including assault and sexual exploitation."

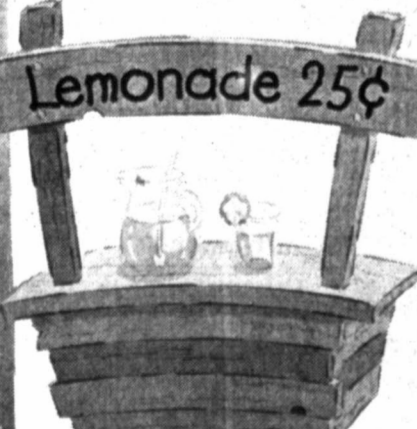

Hotline staff and volunteers provide crisis intervention, telephone counseling and information and referral services.

For more information, call the hotline's toll-free number at 1-888-580-4357. Gov. Perry's proclamation may be viewed at www.governor.state.tx.us/proclamations or
