WALLACE GIVES STARTLING FACT

Last Day of Session Is Finding Quorums Very Scant

AUSTIN, March 20,-(/P)-All hope of obtaining a compromise on the sulphur tax was abandoned today after a meeting of the senate and house free conference committees. The house declined to vote for any tax less than 75 cents per ton while the senate refused to come to this amount. Both committees voted down a motion to nise at 63 cents per ton.

AUSTIN ,March 20. (P)-The State of Texas will face a deficit of $1,000,000, even if this session raises an expected $800,000 additional revenue and the tax rate next year is set at the constitutional limit, Representative J. F. Wallace of Teague, chairman of the house appropriations commit-tee, told the house today.

Wallace said the free conference nmittee on the house and senate ppropriations bills had reached an item by item agreement on its report, but that the total amount had not been arrived at.

RIGHT OF PETITION

The right of an American citizen to petition for redress from real or fancied govern mental wrongs is guaranteed by the constitution. It is, indeed, one of the fundamental laws of the land, and one that was especially cherished when the constituution was conceivthe petitioner shall do more than merely write a letter to the president, or to his congressman. He should be able to petition as many departments and individuals in his government as he may see fit, assuming that he does not resort to bribery or other illegal methods Senator Thomas of Oklahoma is to be commended for pointing out that the recent gruelling examination of Wirt Franklin, spokesman for the independent oil producers of this country, in connection with his activities in behalf of the oil tariff, went beyond the bounds of right and justice. Senator Thomas declared that the senate had not conferred upon its lobby committee the power and duty "to investigate private citizens who may come to Washington to petition the congress for redress of grievances.

As president of the Independent Petroleum Producers association, Mr. Franklin waged a spectacular fight for the oi! tariff and made remarkable progress although the final vote went against him with traditional sticklers for free trade-and some others of the progressives who found themselves arrayed with the Rockefellers-balloting against him. His efforts were above-board and the method was one of educating the senators who were largely ignorant of the problem, as the lobby investigation showed.

The lobby committee has an important function, but it should not tend to stifle the very right that the constitution guarantees. Misused, its powers could intimidate cititens and rob them of any effective method of petition for redress, even though a form of protest were allowed. Too much odium has come to be attached to the word "lobby" The , 'third house' is a gigantic factor in governmental proce dure, and while its methods should be subject to frequent scrutiny, the honest efforts of citizens to obtain what they need, or even think they need should not be abridged.

There is of course a penalty for not answering, but it is rarely inoked.

Pampa has lost hundreds of housands of dollars worth of business because all the old references gave the city a population of less than 1,000. National advertisers and distributers have been convinced that we have a "New Pampa" only by repeated submission of latest facts. Those who decide upon placing of expenditures and concentration of efforts are usually clerks, who use business guides and charts to determine their decisions. Many of these will be astonished when the 1930 census igures are obtainable.

Regardless of growth or decline in the next decade, Pampa will operate in many espects on the statistics which are to be taken in the next six weeks. It is therefor imperative that we have the best showing obtainable. We have to stand on the census for ten years, although to do so is costly and illogical in a territory that is developing as rapidly as this one. Supplemental censuses should be established for districts of the country which undergo sudden radical changes.

To Be Settled Definitely Tonight

"I've got the low-down on this Billy Londos. He's trying to pass off himself for a Greek but he's a dirty Turk." Red Lindsay sneered this morning when he paid the press a call. "And when I say 'dirty' I mean dirty—I'll twist some of that dirt off of him tonight. You can tell the fans for me that I'm in better condition than any wrestler around here."

Once and for all the middleweight championship of Pampa will be decided tonight at the Pla-Mor auditorium when Leo Chase and Otis Clingman wrestle a three-fall match. The two grapplers are going to lay off each other, regardless of which one wins. It will be a fight for local prestige which will mean a whole lot to the Clingman has been defeated once by Chase. It happened last fall after Clingman had walked several miles through mud to Pampa from his car on the Amarillo highway where it was stuck in the mud. Clingman said he was out of condition at that time. He said he had not wrestled in months. Both Chase and Clingman have been training arduously for months and are in fine wrestling trim.

In tonight's semi-final event, a new-comer, Red Lindsey of Shrcveport, and Billy Londos, notorious as a gouge, bite and slug man, will go for 30 min-It punctured the vanity of the red-headed one to have to wrestle in the preliminary affair. LOS ANGELES (A)-Picture a hole in the earth as long as 108 eight-story buildings laid end to end.

That is the approximate depth of the latest oil well to be classified as the world's deepest. It is the 9,357-foot Hathaway No. 7 at Santa Fe Springs field near Los Angeles.

Pifteen men, working three shifts a day, drilled the well at an estimated cost of $300,000.

Oil field engineers describe the well as "virtually straight" for its entire depth, which is considered unusual for a well extending nearly two miles into the earth.

The entire drill weighed 344 tons. Miles of steel cable, on a powerful steam-driven drum, handled the drill by working through a six-ton, sixwheel pulley block hung in the top of the derrick.

Right hours were spent by the drillers for each "round trip" to unload a core of bored rock.

This section of the city is causing the planners of the new and greater Washington no little concern. In fact, t has grown to be one of their most ious problems.

The south side of the Avenue offers no difficulty. It is government property, and will be lined with federal buildings of dignified and harmon rchitectural appearance.

But the north side is and will remain public property. As such any sort of a building may be erected there.

DETECTIVE BONNIE DUNDEE. secretly a member of the Hamilton Homicide Squad, accepts an invitation from a former Yale classmate, DICK BERKELEY, to spend the weekend at Hillorest, the millionaire Berkeleys' estate. It is rumored that CLO-RINDA BERKELEY is engaged to be married to SEYMOUR CROSBY, New York guest in the Berkeley home. For reacons of his own, Dundee has strong professional curiosity to see and

On Friday even(ng Dundee meet MR. and MRS. BERKELEY, the latter an impossibly vulgar and pretentious woman; the beautiful daughter, CLO-RINDA; 15-year-old GIGI, who annoys her mother with her frankness; gracious, well-bred Mrs. Letitia Lambert, Mrs. Berkeley's social secretary formerly a society leader in New York and an old friend of Crosby's.

Dinner is a rather dreadful ordeal, for Berkeley senior is angry over his daughter's engagement to Crosby, and Mrs. Berkeley is furious with her husband for having limited her consumption of champagne. Uneasily, Dundee feels that the evening has further ordeals in store for all concerned.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

'Run along, Gigi," Dick Berkeley commanded, slumping to the couch be side Dundee as Wickett was serving coffee in the drawing room. "You've probably handed Dundee so man shocks already that he's as groggy as I am. Go cheer up Mrs. Lambert She's looking rather low, and no won-. Thanks, no coffee for me Wickett. "Funny kid, Gigi," Dick commented. "She's the best of the lot, of course. Half-baked yet, and disgustingly frank, but heart of gold, and all that sort of thing. I like Gigi!"

"So do I!" Dundee agreed cheerfully, his eyes taking in with pleasure the picture which the golden-brown child and the beautiful white-haired woman made as they sat together in a distant window seat. "This stuff is too damned sweet." Dick decided suddenly. "Got to have something to take the taste out of my And he plunged, not too steadily, towards the dining room.

As he was returning his father intercepted him, saying something sternly emphatic in a low voice. Then the man strode determinedly into the dining room.

"Poor Dad! "He has a hard time upstairs to get it?" trying to keep the inebriates of this themselves," Dick told Dundee, as he

"Thanks, I've had more than was wondering just how many "inebriates" the Berkeley family was cursed with, and just who they were.

"Rather Sir Galahadish, aren't you?" young Berkeley almost sneered. "So is dad. He unlocks his pre-war cellar only when mother browbeats him into it, to celebrate some such auspicious eccasion as this. Happy-looking lovebirds, aren't they?" and his sneer was unmistakable as his glance brooded upon his sister Clorinda and Seymour Crosby, who sat silently in at atrocious love-seat, each handsome face somber with brooding. "God! I've got to do something to liven up this party!"

A minute later Dick's half-blind

"Dance with me, Mr. Dundee?" Gigi cried at the top of her voice, as she slithered across the floor. "Dad, you make Tish dance! . . . Come on!" she challenged Dundee and he willingly held out his arms.

Three other couples obeyed the compelling syncopation. Dick harangued and scolded his giggling aunt; Clorinda and Crosby, their steps matching perfectly, proved that dancing was a fine art; and Mr. Berkeley guided the nder, gracious figure of Mrs. Lamert with surprising expertness.

"Don't they look simply too marveltogether?" Gigi whispered after had blown a kiss to her adored "Look at poor Abbie grinning Chessy cat. Oh, dear! Can't he invent a new simile for that? nyway, she thinks the party's going
