CHURCHES

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Corner Kingsmill and West Streets... The pastor having returned this week from an engagement in Coleman county, will occupy the pulpit at both hours Sunday.

Bible school will meet by departments at 9:45 a. m., and morning worship will follow at 11 a. m. The service will close before 12 o'clock.

The young people meet for their programs at 7 p. m. Evening worship is at 8 p. m. The aim is a Christ-like church for an age like this.

Special music will feature each service. At the morning service, the choir will sing an anthem, "O For a Closer Walk." In the evening, a mixed quartet, Mrs. E. C. Barrett, Miss Ethel Chism, Mrs. L. C. Walters, and Mr. E. C. Barrett will sing "No Disappointment in Heaven."

The growth along all lines is encouraging and gratifying. A growing church in vacation days reveals an opportunity that is thrilling and challenging. A new extension work will be started Sunday afternoon in a community of more than forty families not easily accessible to the church. We simply want to serve as many as we can, every time we can, and in as many ways as we can.

Grains Are Lower

CHICAGO, Aug. 22. (AP)—Wheat and corn averaged lower in price during early dealings today. Estimates that the Canadian wheat yield this season would total 350,000,000 bushels and of excellent quality, acted as a bearish influence.

Opening 1-3 cent off to 1-9 cent up, wheat afterward underwent material setbacks all around. Corn started unchanged to 718 cents higher but receded to below yesterday's finish.

T. W. Cain and Pete King, both of Dallas, are in Pampa today. J. M. Blodgett of Spearman was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Walstad and family Thursday.

An all-night dance and battle of music has been advertised at St. Francis, Friday night, Aug. 22; the dance will begin at 8 o'clock; music will be furnished by the Mohawk Aces of Borger and the Amarillo Blue Boys of Amarillo. Jeff Roberts is giving the dance.

BROWN HOLDS BOWLING MARK FOR MARATHON

Having bowled four hours consecutively yesterday, M. K. Brown was described by his friends today as having started a marathon contest which may reach large proportions. Mr. Brown knocked over the pins from 1:30 to 5:30 p. m.

First to challenge this record was Sam Fenberg, but others asserted they would exceed the mark. To the uninitiated, the game looks easy, but it is gruelling in a marathon.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, the Lions club bowling team, claimants to the city championship, will meet a mystery oil field squad which is said to have a 200-point average.

Phillips To Play Guns On Sunday

If those baseball fans who went out to Gulf park last Sunday intending to see a game and were disappointed, will come to the same lot Sunday afternoon they will positively witness a nine-inning affair between the Guns and Phillips, Manager Keith Edelen of the Guns announced today.

"The Guns never did intend to play Phillips last Sunday, and the announcement that was sent to the News did not come from the Gun camp," Edelen declared. "We had had a game scheduled with the Gulf Dial team at Berger for two weeks. We are sorry if any of the fans were disappointed but it was not the fault of the Guns anymore than it was the fault of the newspaper."

The Guns nosed out the Dial team 3 to 2. Haddock who works at the Dial camp at Berger pitched for the Dials, and Lefty Coop did good work for the Gulf.

The Gun line-up which won the tournament at Amarillo still remains intact. The boys have had some good practice in the last week. Haddock will come over from Berger to help Coop—if Lefty needs any help. Two weeks ago, the Guns won a seven-inning game from Phillips 5-4, but the Gulf men ran

BUFFS BEAT STEERS BADLY IN HOME LOT

BY GAYLE TALBOT, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer

It was "home, sweet home" to the Houston Buffs last night as they lapped the Dallas Steers, 9 to 2, in the opening tussle of their 19-day stand under their own lights and climbed within a game and one-half of the Texas League leadership.

More and more the Bayou City entry looks like a cinch to win the second half and meet Wichita Falls in a play-off for the pennant. Playing before friendly stands and their pitching staff delivering in championship fashion, the Buffs will have all the best of things in the final 18-game drive down the home stretch.

Tony Kaufman, who has yet to lose a bout under the floodlights, had entirely too much for the Mavericks last night. While he held the Atzmen to eight blows, well scattered, his mates piled on Murray and Grimm for 12 to score in five innings. Kaufman likewise starred in all of their scores in the last inning, taking advantage of gross errors by Phillips third baseman.

time the gubernatorial candidates have campaigned in the Panhandle.

Mr. Hoover declared that the Panhandle would never get political justice until it had acquired political power, and for this reason, he said, "I would unite the Panhandle of Texas as one solid phalanx." Judge Hoover devoted very little of his speech to a discussion of the campaign, but gave a new set of reasons why he could not vote for Jim Ferguson.

Can't Vote For Jim
"Because Jim Ferguson has trampled on the constitutions of Texas and the United States, it is the duty of every patriotic Texan and American citizen to vote against him. When I was admitted to the bar, I took an oath to uphold the constitution. If I should vote for Jim Ferguson I would be violating my oath," he declared.

Judge Pickens described Ferguson as "the king of bolters." He mentioned that Ferguson bolted the democratic party in 1920 when he ran on the "American" ticket for president. "Ferguson has done all he could to wreck the Democratic party in Texas. In his Forum, he has consigned it to the infernal regions countless times and he meant it."

Senator Parrish discussed briefly the pardon record of the Fergusonsons. "In the last month Ferguson was in office, he pardoned 39 rapists, 126 murderers, 124 robbers, and 126 violators of the prohibition law. When you vote Saturday bear this in mind and let your conscience be your guide. Don't vote for Sterling nor against him—vote for the best interest of Texas. Vote as if it were the last vote you were going to cast in the Lone Star state. Vote as if the immortal Sam Houston, John Reagan, or James Stephen Hogg were looking over your shoulder. Vote for Texas and the future honor and glory of Texas—and you will vote against Jim Ferguson!"

Judge Newton P. Willis introduced the speakers. A crowd of 110 persons was present.

cluding his denunciation of Ferguson, expected to speak in Austin.

The greatest clash of the campaign was at a distance of five city blocks in San Antonio, last night, when Sterling spoke to a crowd which jammed the municipal auditorium and Mrs. Ferguson set forth her platform to a huge assembly on historic Alamo plaza. Speaking on the platform with Mrs. Ferguson was Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller.

Sterling had with him as a speaker Senator Clint Small of Wellington who swept West Texas in the July primary, to run third to Mrs. Ferguson and Sterling. Senator Walter Woodward also was on the program, repeating his denunciation of the Ferguson pardon record.

Governor Moody addressed a gathering of thousands, declared by seasoned observers to be the largest ever assembled for a political meeting in Houston. He discussed in detail the impeachment record of Ferguson. Ferguson spoke before a crowd that almost filled the grandstand of the Fort Worth baseball park, firing broadside after broadside against Sterling, Moody and Small, amid the most persistent heckling he had encountered in his campaign. His salvoes evoked roars of applause from his supporters in the audience.

Bitter charges and counter-charges continued to fly in the attorney general's race, Robert Lee Bobbitt, incumbent, speaking at Tyler, and James V. Alfred of Wichita Falls, his opponent, addressing a rally at Greenville. Cecil Storey of Vernon, who ran third in the attorney general's race in the July primary, announced in a radio speech at Amarillo that he would support Alfred.

In December, 1927, the discovery well in the Bowers pool came in as an 8,000-barrel gusher. This well started the major oil development program in the Pampa territory. Scores of gushers were brought in on the Bowers lease in 1928 and 1929. A proration program restricted drilling to a big extent in that area, but deepening of holes has more than doubled the production of some wells. The potential production of the Bowers pool is unestimated, but enormous.

It is known that Mrs. Bowers left a will, disposing of her share of the Bowers wealth, but the terms have not yet been announced.

Elder Culberson III
F. M. Culberson, who was called to San Pedro, Calif., Tuesday by the critical illness of his father, R. Culberson of that city, wired members of the family here that the latter's condition was slightly improved. F. M. Culberson took plane at Clovis, N. M., Tuesday and arrived at San Pedro that evening. His parents and his sister, Mrs. Ralph Dunbar, recently went to California for an extended visit.

DANCING JUDITH

BY CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH GRANT, artist's model loves ALAN STEYNE, who is also loved by CHUMMAY MORLEY, her best friend. Chummy had loved Steyne years ago, and lost her memory when he went away; so, though he loves Judith, Judith insists it is his duty to marry Chummy, who regains her memory when she sees him again. Judith studies dancing and becomes a star in a musical show backed by RICHARD WYON; later, however, she learns Wyon is merely an agent for BRUCE GIBSON, a financier who is infatuated with her. Meanwhile Chummy learns Judith and Steyne are in love and breaks her engagement, but Judith refuses to marry Steyne. After some months Judith believes Chummy and Steyne have resumed their engagement. Olden tries to attack Judith in his apartment, and when she repels him asks her to marry him. She refuses and goes to Europe on a triumphal professional tour; there she learns that Chummy and Steyne have set the date for their marriage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX

Steyne and Clarissa Morley had fixed a day in September for their wedding. Chummy hardly knew how it had come about. They seemed to have drifted together again. Alan took up painting once more, and often came to her for hints and encouragement. The month of August was wonderful. They seemed to be alone in New York. Even the inveterate habits of the Cafe Turc had gone on a holiday. Judy was still in Scandinavia. Dumont had been to Toulouse, to visit some of his French relatives. He had come back bronzed by the sun and full of energy; but they saw little of him because he was in the frenzy of creation, working like a madman on a great symbolic canvas which he called "Life's Chop House." Chummy and Alan had their meals together, as of yore. In the evenings they drove up the river in Alan's two seater. Sometimes they took a day off and drove to some quiet little place by the sea. One moonlight night—a night of enchantment—Alan asked Clarissa whether she would not change her mind and marry him, after all. She was living on her emotions all that time. Being with him day after day in this lonely intimacy had broken down all her defenses. Life had become like a dream, and in dreamland she always imagined herself to be Alan's wife. Son on those moonlit sands she opened her soul to him, and they went back to town betrothed anew. It was after midnight when they reached New York. She ran up her stairs, locked her door, and threw herself on her knees beside the bed.

Then came the last days of August, and a great black cloud suddenly descended and enveloped all the little band. Chummy and Steyne were in the Cafe Turc one night. Michael Stone and Tony Leigh were also there, having returned from their holidays. Bastien came in, white and distraught. "Have you heard?" he cried. "Have you heard?"

He was so wildly agitated that his words tumbled over one another. "No! What? Is it bad news?" came from the others.

"Judy!" The one word came from Bastien's lips like a wall.

Chummy's eyes sought Steyne's face instinctively. She saw it set and hard, like a mask. He clenched his hands. "Judy!" A great cry went up from every corner of the cafe. "Has something happened to Judy?"

"Haven't you heard?" Dumont went on. "It's in the papers. The theater where she was dancing was burned to the ground. There was a panic."

Chummy could not take her eyes from Alan's face. He was not looking at her. He was not looking at anybody, or at anything. To her he seemed like a dead man.

Chummy herself, strangely enough felt no emotion. She just listened to what was said. "Was Judy hurt?" asked Michael Stone, rather hoarsely.

"She was frightfully burned," Dumont went on. He talked mechanically now, like a man in a trance. "They don't think she'll die. She could have saved herself easily enough, as the fireproof curtain was lowered to shut off the stage, but she saw an old man and jumped down from the stage to help him. She was caught in the crowd."

"Don't, Bastien, don't!" said Tony Leigh in a voice that positively ached. "Judy—Judy caught in a panic crowd—tiny little Judy!"

Then everybody began to talk at once. Emotion loosened all their tongues but Alan's. Alan continued to sit there, looking like a man who has ceased to live. Chummy was very quiet. All her faculties were taken up in schooling herself so that Alan should not know. She had seen that he still loved Judy, and he must not know it.

It began to be intolerable to Chummy that Steyne should just sit there, saying nothing, doing nothing. The other men did not appear to notice him. She felt angry in a dull kind of way. Some one must notice him soon, and must realize that his life had come to a full stop because Judy had been nearly burned to death. She touched his shoulder.

"Alan, it's very hot in here. This news has upset us all so much. Shall we go outside?" He looked at her quietly. It was as if his mind returned from an immensely long journey. There was no awkwardness, no hesitation, in his voice.

"It is dreadful news, Chummy," he said. "I know how you are feeling. Yes—I think we'll go."

He rose to his feet, giving himself a shake. He joined a group of men, took a paper from one of them, and read the dispatch about the fire at the theater.

"It was just like Judy, wasn't it," he said, "to try to save the old man?"

His voice sounded almost indifferent. His friends looked at him askance; but Chummy knew that he was not indifferent. He was simply not there among them in the Cafe Turc. His real self was miles away, with Judy on her bed of pain.

The little crowd thought and talked of nothing else but Judy during the next three weeks. It was mid-September, but there was no talk of marriage between Chummy and Steyne; and the others found this quite natural—especially Dumont. How could anybody think of getting married while Judy was lying ill in a foreign country? They were all waiting in a state of suspended animation until Judy came back.

She came in the fourth week of September, and it was Bruce Gibson's yacht that brought her. All (See STORY, page 8.)

her artist friends, with their vivid imaginations, were glad, for once, that she had a rich man to help her.

She was brought back to New York to a nursing home, and for a few days nobody could see her. It was reported that she had been very well cared for after the fire, having made a host of friends, and being nursed devotedly by the house of the foremost citizen of the town. At her departure she had been feted like a national heroine. Crowds had collected all along the route of the motor ambulance, and had cheered and applauded for the little dancer who had risked her life for an unknown old man.

Chummy was the first to see her. Judy asked for Chummy, and went on asking for her until the doctor gave way.

Chummy made her way through a roomful of flowers. She still had that curious sense of not being able to feel anything.

Judy was not in bed. She was in a big chair, heaped with pillows. She was pathetically small—a little broken bundle, wrapped in great bandages. Her face was untouched but frightfully thin and white, and her eyes were preternaturally bright with fever and pain; but she was getting much, much better.

"Chummy! Darling, darling Chummy!" said the hoarse voice. Chummy felt something snap in her breast. The power of feeling came back to her, and she fell on her knees beside Judy's chair, knowing that she loved Judy better than anything in the world.

"Judy! Little, little Judy!" Judy hysterically. "You laughed Judy hysterically. 'If you want to kiss me, you must just peck at my cheek. It seems I'm made of sugar, and I can't be put out in the sun or left out in the rain. I'd melt, or break, or something.'"

Chummy pressed her lips to the bandaged hand that lay on the satin quilt over Judy's knees.

"Judy! Wonderful! Little Judy!" she breathed. "Not wonderful at all, Chummy darling," said the gay, hoarse voice. "I was in a blue funk. I can tell you."

"But you risked your life to save an old man!"

"Chummy, he was such an awfully old man—a little old man, all bent and quite helpless. I think they had trodden on him. He had such blue eyes, and he looked so muddled, as if he didn't know where he was. Oh, he was ever so old."

And Judy sighed, because the little old man had, since died. She asked after everybody, and after Alan, too, in the most natural way. She was so glad that Chummy and Alan were going to be married. It was splendid and they must really hurry up and waste no time. Of course, Chummy had found out that her silly old work wasn't going to stand in her way.

Judy did most of the talking. Chummy's muddled heart would hardly let her speak. It was so wonderful—that courage, that simple self-sacrifice, that gayety which surmounted horror and fear and expressed itself in the tremendous singleness of love—love for an old unknown man, trampled on and helpless in a panic at a theatre fire! And the dancer might never dance again.

Chummy could not bring herself to ask; but presently Judy said: "You know, Chummy, they say I may never be able to dance again; so then, on the other hand, I may. So it's a toss up, you see!"

nouretain surdu taoin etaoir. The nurse came in with some nourishment, and very kindly but firmly decreed that Miss Morley must go. She went out of the room while the friends said goodbye.

"Chummy," Judy whispered, "you won't wait any longer, will you, pet? You'll be married quite soon?"

"Yes, Judy, quite soon."

"Two days later, Steyne came to see Judy. She had asked for him to come, too. She was as gay as could be, and there was a tinge of color in her cheeks. She told him her bad news first.

"They think I may never dance again. There are some little bones in one foot that have got all mixed up together. Isn't that funny? They X-rayed me this morning; but they aren't quite sure, you know. There's still a chance. I don't think I care much," she added. "I'd almost as soon be a model again."

Steyne, like Chummy, was affected with dumbness at first. He looked at her and looked at her. "What are you thinking about?" she asked him once, when the silence grew too long.

"You," he answered. She flushed, but looked at him with the straight, clear gaze.

"You are going to marry Chummy, aren't you?" she asked. "Yes," he said, "if you still want me to."

"Want you to? Of course you must! I heard it was all fixed." "So it is. While you were away, I thought I could."

"You could?" Her voice was full of fear. "I still can, Judy, now I have seen you," he said gravely. "I can't quite explain, but it's like this—you've taught me. You could risk your life for an old man you'd never seen before. You never thought of yourself."

She laughed. She could not help herself. The strain was becoming too much. "I didn't think about anything at all, silly!" she cried. "You don't—in a place like that!"

Steyne knew he must go. Judy's eyes were fever bright, and her face was scarlet—just as red as when her cheeks had been painted. Paint was not encouraged, probably not allowed, in the nursing home.

He stood looking down at her. In his blue eyes was the unspeakable, the eternal farewell.

She looked up, smiling. She was like some little ghost of a girl. Her red-gold hair made a violent spot of color in the airy, white room.

"Goodby, Alan!" she said. "I'm just a wee bit tired."

Both her hands were bandaged and lay outside the quilt; but he did not touch them. He fell on his knees, and for a moment he laid his head in her lap. She bent over it, and her tears fell on his brown hair.

He got up again, and she smiled like an April day. "Don't mind me," she said gayly. "I'm a silly woman. I'm so glad that Chummy is going to be happy! Add so will you. Bless you forever and ever—both of you!"

Steyne went out of the room as the nurse came in. Seeing him young and good to look at, and having fallen in love with her patient, she smiled in kindly sympathy.

Gary Cooper Is Seen as "Texan" of Rex Picture

Totally different in many ways, yet bringing the same carefree, swaying, outdoor freedom of "The Virginian," Paramount's second, "The Texan," Rexford N. Brown, opened a 2-day showing at the Rex yesterday. Gary Cooper, "The Virginian," is also "The Texan."

O. Henry wrote the original story, "A Double-Dyed Deceiver," from which "The Texan" was adapted. It first appeared in a collection of stories, "Roads of Destiny," by the famous author, and popular acclaim singled it out as one of the most thoroughly human pieces from the pen of America's best-known writer. Oliver H. P. Garrett, who wrote "Streets of Chance," adapted O. Henry's story for the screen.

The story opens in Texas and climaxes on the pampas of South America. It tells of the Llano Kid, a young bandit, who is persuaded to go to a young American to pose as the runaway son of a wealthy and aristocratic widow. There he meets the widow's beautiful niece, and finds a mother's love. Although he went to rob, he finds he cannot destroy the older woman's happiness.

Filled with splendid outdoor scenes and action, the picture has a clean-cut appeal. Gary Cooper is a fast-riding, fast-shooting plains man, whose true honesty is forced to the surface in a human and logical way. Fay Wray is the girl. She played opposite Cooper in "The First Kiss" and "Legion of the Damned." Emma Dunn gives another wonderful mother portrayal, one of the best of those which have made her famous on stage and screen for nearly a quarter of a century. John Cromwell, who directed "George Washington" in "The Mighty" and William Powell in "Streets of Chance," made this picture.

R. R. "Burr" Thompson and Mel Davis have returned from a three-week trip to Canada.

- THESE drivers do not simply choose Firestone Tires. They demand them. They know by experience that this tire never fails. It never fails because it is built not to fail by the special Firestone process of tire building.
 - (a) Every fibre of cotton thread going into the making of the cord fabric, which is the foundation of the tire, is coated and cushioned in rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process.
 - (b) Under the tread is the Firestone patented Gum-Dipped Double Cord Breaker—which means not only two extra plies where most needed, but also sets the Firestone Tire apart as an all-cord tire, while others are woven fabric and cord.
 - (c) Firestone Super High Speed Tires now have 33% more rubber in the tread, giving deeper grooves that will give you over 50% more non-skid wear before the tire is smooth.
- THESE are not just features. They are basic differences in tire building proved by service on every kind of road and track.
- YOU may never intend to race. You may never intend even to speed. You may never climb Pike's Peak. But, every day—whether you know it or not—your life depends upon your tires.
- WE HAVE these Super High Speed Gum-Dipped Balloons for sale today. They are the same tires that the racing drivers demand—the premier tires of the world. Their first cost is low. Their cost per mile of service makes them cheaper today than even cheap tires. They are inexpensive, not only because the price of rubber is low, but because we have joined with Firestone to bring into the sale of tires the same degree of efficiency which goes into their manufacture. The benefit of all this is in the price to you.

International Sunday School Lesson

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

International Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 24, 1930.

General Topic:—Jonathan and David: A Noble Friendship.

Scripture Lesson:—1 Sam. 18:1-4; 20:14-17, 32-34, 41, 42; 1 Sam. 1:23-27.

1 Sam. 18-1. And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

2. And Saul took him that day, and would let him go no more home to his father's house.

3. Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.

4. And Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his apparel, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.

1 Sam. 20-14. And thou shalt not only while yet I live show me the loving-kindness of Jehovah, that I die not.

15. But also thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house forever; no, not when Jehovah hath cut off the enemies of David every one from the face of the earth.

16. So Jonathan made a covenant with the house of David, saying, And Jehovah will require it at the hand of David's enemies.

17. And Jonathan caused David to swear again, for the love that he had for him; for he loved him as he loved his own soul.

18. And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, Wherefore should he be put to death? What hath he done?

19. And Saul cast his spear at him to smite him; whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to put David to death.

20. And Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger, and did eat of food the second day of the month; for he was grieved for David, because his father had done him shame.

21. And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the South, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times; and they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David went out.

42. And Jonathan said to David, Go in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of Jehovah, saying, Jehovah shall be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed, for ever. And he arose and departed; and Jonathan went into the city.

1 Sam. 123. How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! Jonathan is slain upon thy high places.

26. I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan: Very pleasant hast thou been unto me, thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

27. How are the mighty fallen, and the weapons of war perished! Time:—Jonathan's victory at Michmash, B. C. 1085. David, and Jonathan make their covenant, B. C. 1073. David and Jonathan part, B. C. 1068. Death of Jonathan, B. C. 1063.

Place:—Saul's capital, Gibeah. Mount Gilboa, where Saul and Jonathan died.

Introduction One of the most difficult of all the Christian virtues to put in practice is that form of generosity that can without jealousy see another advance into the place of honor and advantage that would naturally have been ours—or even help him on and into it. It always demands something of that emptying of self that Paul predicates of Jesus (Phil. 2:7).

Another shining Christian grace is unswerving fidelity in friendship; and friendship-love to the limit; and friendship-love to the limit; and friendship-love to the limit. Now these are the distinguishing marks of the friendship of Jonathan and David. The friendship of these two men, Saul's son and Saul's enemy, has become an undying ideal of human friendship; as Jesus' everlasting love for sinful men is of the divine. The Damon and Pythias of Holy Writ are these two young Hebrews.

It is no wonder that David's combat with the Philistine giant, Goliath, won the immediate admiration of Jonathan. The crown prince was prevented in some way, perhaps by absence, perhaps by Saul's will, from undertaking the battle himself; but we may be sure that he would have liked to do so. Jonathan had the same imperious bravery that animated the young shepherd, and showed it in his exploit at Michmash (1 Sam. 14). Both were ready to make the most of the weapons and forces at hand. Both young men had "the strength of 10" because their hearts were pure. Both were capable of the most ardent devotion to high and unselfish ideals. Such is the material of true friendship.

David, after his victory over Goliath, was brought before Saul, and his answers to the king's questions were so manly as to arouse the prince's instant admiration. "And

Jonathan loved him as his own soul. This is the ideal set before us by both the Old Testament and the New, both by Moses and by Christ, that we should love our neighbor as ourselves.

Interceder for David
The beginning of Saul's jealousy of David was in a popular refrain which was passed from mouth to mouth after David had slain Goliath. The women of the different towns sang it with exultant dances and with timbrels, coming out to meet Saul as he returned from the war with the Philistines. It was not a song likely to please such a monarch as Saul, for it ran:

"Saul hath slain his thousands,
"And David his ten thousands."

Fits of insane melancholy seized Saul and as David sought to soothe him with his sweet singing and playing on the harp, he twice hurled his spear at him and tried to kill him. And still further, seeing David favored of the Lord and of the people, Saul ordered all his servants, and Jonathan as well, to seek opportunities and put David to death. Learning thus of David's imminent peril, Jonathan contrived an interview between his father and himself. It was venturesome for Jonathan to do this, for he might easily turn his father's wrath against himself. Thus Jonathan was ready to lay down his life for his friend, or at least to jeopardize his favor with his father, and perhaps risk his succession to the throne. He must also have realized by this time how likely it was that David, with his great natural gifts and his vast popularity, would succeed to the kingdom rather than he himself. But Jonathan was entirely happy in the prospect of his friend's exaltation. He was glad to say, as John the Baptist said of Christ, "He must increase, while I decrease."

Covenant With David
Before Jonathan separated from David, he repeated their covenant of friendship, extending it to include their families, far into the future. Jonathan foresaw that David and not he himself would succeed Saul as king, and it was the brutal custom of the East, on the accession of a new dynasty, to confirm it in power by putting to death all descendants and relatives of the preceding monarch.

"But also thy shaft will not cut off thy kindness from my house forever." Jonathan has asked for his own life, when David should come to the throne, and now he asks also for the lives of his children and their children, whom David's zealous followers, if not David himself, might massacre in such a case. "So Jonathan made a covenant with the house of David." With David as representing and binding his descendants as well as himself, David remembered this covenant and was true to it in the kindness which, after Jonathan's death and his own accession to the throne, he showed to Jonathan's lame son, Mephibosheth (2 Sam. 9:1-13; 21:7). "Saying, And Jehovah will require it at the hand of David's enemies." V.16. The thought seems to be that "if the covenant were broken by David, God would see that David's enemies punished him for his faithlessness."

Would Kill Jonathan
"And Saul cast his spear at him to smite him." Saul's mania had reached such a pitch that he was ready to kill his oldest son, his heir, the hope of the kingdom, a young man of ideal character who was thoroughly devoted to his father. Such blindness comes from jealousy! "Whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to put David to death."

David's Lament
The circumstances of the deaths of Jonathan and Saul were related to our last lesson (1 Sam. 31: 3, 4). Saul was a suicide, killing himself in the battle rather than fall into the merciless hands of the Philistines. Jonathan died bravely fighting his country's foes.

The final passage of our lesson is a part of David's lament for Saul and Jonathan. The entire song should be read. It contains several of the most familiar quotations from the Old Testament.

The artistic skill with which the successive thoughts of this ode are introduced is equal to the beauty and passionate tenderness of the thoughts themselves. "The writing of such a song, the spirit of admiration and eulogy which pervades it, and the unusual enactment that it should be taught to the people, show how far superior David was to the ordinary feelings of jealousy, how full his heart was of true generosity."

Love of Jonathan for David

In one respect the friendship between Jonathan and David was unique; it was a friendship between the heir to the throne and the one who was to succeed to the throne. In all ordinary cases such men would have been rivals, perhaps bitter rivals, for one would have found it hard to love the man who was destined to supplant him; while the other would have found it difficult to love the man he was to supplant. "The love of Jonathan for David," says Matheson, "rests upon a totally different level from that occupied by the love of David for Jonathan. David's love for Jonathan had no barriers; it coincided with his for the sake of love."

interest. But the love of Jonathan for David had every prudential argument against it. He put out his hand to save from the destroying hand of his father a man whom the popular voice had predicted to be his own supplanter. In this he is animated by a purely personal liking. He is an absolute spendthrift in theirs.

"David and Jonathan"
"David and Jonathan" is a combination that for three thousand years has grown in meaning. This friendship is a heritage of the human race. It surges in meaning and influence that Damon of Pythias, and just for the reason that it has in it an element not found in theirs.
