Four dead in house fire; one found shot to death

AUSTIN (AP) — Four family members are dead after a fire blazed through a mobile home in rural Lee County and authorities say at least one of victims had been shot to death.
Gary Steiwig, Jr., 28, was shot at close range in the back of the head with a small-caliber pistol, Lee County Sheriff Joe Goodson said. Steiwig's body was found outside the back door of the home, which burned Monday afternoon.
"I think that someone burned the mobile home down to cover up the evidence," Goodson told the Austin American-Statesman.
Autopsies were ordered on 28-year-old Michelle Steiwig, Gary Steiwig's wife; Lane Steiwig, the couple's 2-month-old son; and Haley Broussard, an 11-year-old niece who was visiting.
Because of heat and damage from the fire, officials didn't discover the children's bodies inside the home until Tuesday. The couple's 7-year-old son, Logan, was at school when the fire occurred.

Eight-year-old caught in school with weapons

DENTON (AP) — An 8-year-old student has been suspended for taking a gun to school.
The Wilson Elementary School student was immediately suspended after a .22-caliber handgun, a bullet, a pocketknife, a hobby knife blade, and metal throwing stars were found in his backpack Friday, said Sharon Cox, Denton school district spokeswoman.

Oscar H. Ernst, 86, U.S. Army veteran.

Travelers face money laundering charges

$400,000 found in a duffel bag

By KATE B. DICKSON
Associate Publisher

Someone somewhere isn't going to get a valuable "Christmas present" now that a gift-wrapped package containing $399,950 in cash is in the hands of the district attorney's office.

That's due to the money being seized Tuesday by Department of Public Safety Trooper Jason Henderson after he made a traffic stop about 12:50 p.m. on West Interstate 40, two miles east of Alanreed.

It's the largest seizure of suspected drug money ever made in Gray County, according to DPS Sgt. Don Cameron. Another money seizure this year made by Trooper Jerome Ingle netted more than $200,000.

And Henderson's wasn't the only I-40 seizure in the area this week. Another DPS trooper near Groom confiscated 118 pounds of marijuana valued at more than $66,000, according to DPS Public Information Officer Wayne Beighle.

It was a familiar story in both cases — the drivers were stopped initially for traffic violations.

In the instance involving the cash, neither occupant of a 2001 Pontiac bearing Washington state tags was wearing a seat belt which prompted the traffic stop, Henderson said.

After talking with the female driver and male passenger, Henderson said their stories "were out of whack ... they gave conflicting stories."

Henderson said the pair lied to him when he asked if they were carrying a large amount of U.S. currency. That, and questions about drug and weapon possession were also asked as they often are at traffic stops, he added.

After getting consent to search, Henderson said he found the "Christmas package" inside a large duffel bag. He opened the package and found the money.

Henderson quoted the pair as saying they were unable to prove where the money, in 20s, 50s, and 100s, came from. Thirty percent of the money will stay in the district attorney's office and the remainder will go to the 4th graders help with Angel Tree

By KATE B. DICKSON
Associate Publisher

At an age when youngsters usually think first about what they'll get for Christmas, students in Dr. Jerry Lane's fourth-grade class have been thinking about the opposite — what they can give.

It all started a few weeks back when Braden Hunt came to his class with an idea. He and his parents, Kevin and Stacie Hunt, had participated in the Salvation Army's Angel Tree program before and he thought it would be a good class project.

And when he took the proposal before his classmates, Braden said, "They liked the idea really well."

"My Dad and I thought it up," he said. "I did one (Angel) last year by myself."

So after a class vote to give to an Angel and a decision not to give each other gifts this year, the students went about collecting money.

Collect they did. Instead of being able to provide several items of clothing and a toy for one child, the students came up with almost $200.

Then they picked three Angels whose ages are (See ANGELS, Page 3)

Local author enjoying Guthrie book's success

By DAVID BOWSER

A Pampa woman is enjoying the success of her new book. Thelma Bray's new book "Reflections: The Life and Times of Woody Guthrie" has received rave reviews from Amarillo to New York.

"It is a job well done," said Harold Leventhal, Guthrie's first agent and now on the board of the Woody Guthrie Foundation, headquartered in New York City.

Michael Smith, head of the sales department for the Woody Guthrie Publications in New York, said the book has been added to their website on the internet.

Martinez to run for Justice of Peace

Joe Martinez

Judge Joe Martinez Tuesday announced his decision to run for Precinct 1 and Precinct 3 Justice of the Peace.

Martinez has served in the position since April after he was appointed by Gray County Commissioners Court to fill the vacancy created when former Justice of the Peace Bob Mums retired.

"Many of you know of my pride in serving you as Justice of the Peace since April 2," Martinez said in his announcement.

Originally from El Paso, Martinez enlisted in the United States Air Force after graduating from high school. After serving four years during the Viet Nam era, he earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from the University of Texas at El Paso.

Entering the consumer finance industry, Martinez was eventually transferred to Pampa in 1980.

"My banking career began in 1981 with employment with First National Bank in Pampa," he said. "Changes in the banking industry brought a series of mergers, which in turn through a series of events eventually caused me to have to leave banking."

Wanetta Hill, left, presents Pampa school board member Joe Martinez with a small rice bowl and an origami paper sculpture from her recent visit to Japan. Hill, assistant Pampa High School choir director, reported on her trip to Japan on a Fullbright Educational Exchange Program scholarship.

PISD

McVay said school enrollment has held steady through the first three months of the fiscal year at 3,530 students. Student enrollment helps determine that amount of funding PISD receives from the state, he explained.

"We're hanging in there," he said. "That's good, as long as we hang in there and don't decline."

Utility costs are lower than budgeted this quarter, McVay said.

"So far, gas price are definitely lower than last year at this time," he said. "It looks like gas prices will get back down where they were before last year."

Low interest rates mean bad news for the district's investments, he said.

"Our investable funds are lower due to the slower economy," he explained. "Investment rates are down dramatically."

Good news is the utility savings and more tax revenues will help offset the losses, he said.

"What do you estimate the shortfall to be?" Superintendent Dawson Orr asked him.

"We budgeted $230,000," McVay answered. "I believe it will be less than $100,000. We could be short $100,000 to $150,000."

In other action Tuesday night, board members approved the following:

- Appointment of Wallace Birkes and James Fruge' to two-year terms on the Gray County Appraisal District Board beginning Jan. 1;
- Sale of tax delinquent properties at 408 and 410 Crawford for $750, 201 E. Ford for $100, and 1000 and 1004 Clark for $100; and
- Accepted Lamar kindergarten teacher Andrea Caison's resignation and hired Matsha S. Coffee to fill the vacant position.

No one attended a public hearing on the district's 2000-2001 Academic Excellence Indicator System annual performance report. Dr. Orr reviewed the report with board members.

PISD is a "recognized" district, meaning more than 80 percent of the students in the designated reporting groups scored above 80 percent on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) tests in reading, writing and math.

He also said the district is above state standard in ACT and SAT scores and that student scored 10 percent higher than the previous year on TASP college entrance exam scores.

School principals will be sending home campus report cards to parents soon, he said, adding that the district's annual performance report is available to the public in the school libraries, the Lovett Memorial Library and at the Chamber of Commerce.

The report can also be accessed through a link to TEA found on the school's website, he said.

Also during the meeting, Wanetta Hill, assistant choir director at Pampa High School, reported on her three-week visit to Japan on a Fullbright Educational Exchange Program scholarship. She presented board members with a small rice bowl and origami paper sculpture—gifts from Japan.

Stacey Ladd, director of Worth the Wait, presented a report to the board on the current status of the sexual abstinence education program.

At the suggestion of Board President Lee Porter, board members tabled action on strategic parameters for the 2002-2003 budget. They are to consider the matter again at the January meeting.

MARTINEZ

Martinez applied and was accepted to fill the unexpired term of Bob Muns when he retired earlier this year.

"Since then my initial fascination with the law has grown to a real respect for it," he said. "The vocation of public service calls to me in a special way no other private enterprise endeavor ever did. I would consider it an honor to serve our community as Justice of the Peace for another term."

Soldier of Fortune has record sales since Sept. 11

DENVER (AP) — A new wave of patriotism and the war in Afghanistan has boosted sales of the adventure and military magazine Soldier of Fortune.

Subscription orders have increased from 107,000 in September to 140,000 for December, editor and publisher Robert Brown said. Orders made online for the print version have increased from about two or three daily to as many as 25.

"The average reader buys three or four copies a year from the newsstand," Brown said. "When you have a critical situation like this overseas where we're involved with bayonets, then that reader is going to buy pretty much every one."

Founded in 1975 as a journal for adventurers and military enthusiasts, Soldier of Fortune has struggled to maintain its relevance since the Cold War.

The vehicle was stopped for speeding in the east-bound lane of I-40 near Groom.

Charged with drug possession in that case were Clarence Edward Porter, 35, Chandler, Ariz., and Marc DeWane Rogers, 32, of Sanna Peoria, Ariz.

Beigle said indications were that the men's trip originated in Arizona and they were headed for Indiana.

Both made $40,000 bonds each and were released from the Carson County Jail Tuesday, a spokesman there said today.

Austin, 33, Albuquerque, N.M. Bonds are expected to be set this afternoon.

Henderson quoted the two as saying they had met up in Louisville, Ken., and were enroute to Albuquerque.

The 118 pounds of marijuana was found Monday afternoon in packages inside a 2001 Dodge van, said Beigle, who did not identify the trooper making the stop.

BOOK

The 178-page, soft cover book includes a reproduction of a nine-page letter Guthrie wrote while in Pampa in 1937 to his newly-born niece Mary Ann Guthrie; a reproduction of Gov. Ann Richards' proclamation naming Oct. 2, 1992, Woody Guthrie Day in the State of Texas; documentation on the work that was required to have U.S. 60 across the Texas Panhandle named the Woody Guthrie Memorial Highway, and a reproduction of an envelope mailed aboard the USS Ruben James on Aug. 6, 1934. The Navy destroyer was the first United States Ship sunk in World War II, and the subject of one of Guthrie's most famous songs.

The book is a chronicle of what the Smithsonian calls America's premier folk singer, with particular attention paid to the years he lived in Pampa.

Bray said she couldn't have compiled the book without the help of the Guthrie family members and a number of supporters.

Also contained in the book is a series of descriptions of Guthrie and his work from such publications as The New York Times and The New Yorker Magazine.

Comments are included from a number of people who knew Guthrie including Studs Terkel, who referred to Guthrie as an American Robert Burns or Shakespeare, and John Steinbeck, who referred to Guthrie as the American spirit.

Perhaps the comment in the book that Guthrie would have liked the most, Bray said, is one by Lisa Davis, features editor of the Fort Worth Star Telegram.

"It's been 60 years since Woody Guthrie used the sharp stick of his guitar to poke at the rich and powerful and to chronicle the woes of the working man and the hungry poor," Davis wrote. "Is his voice still relevant today?"

ANGELS

No doubt some moms, dads and grandparents pitched in, but many of the youngsters gave up part of their allowance, some did chores for money and at least one gave up some of her "Coke money" and put it in the fund.

"That really got me," Dr. Lane said, "for the kids to give up their things. These children are at an age where they would normally think of themselves first. This has been just great."

One youngster, Allison Bell, said she took part because she wanted to help someone who wouldn't otherwise have Christmas gifts. "It was a sweet thing to do," she said.

Anthony Allen said he joined in because he didn't want any children to "wake up on Christmas and not have anything."

Ten of the youngsters went along Saturday on a shopping trip to buy for their Angels and they delivered their gifts earlier this week to the Salvation Army.

Class members are Anthony Allen, Allison Bell, Shelbi Cross, Korina Dorion, Micheal Fisher, Mikaila Furgason, Ricki Grajedo, Bryce Hendricks, Braden Hunt, Shantell Johnson, Taylor Jordan, Janae McNeely, Bradley Miranda, Ally Ramey, Lacy Renner, Vanessa Rodriguez, Kristin Roy, Ashley Shipman, Serina Wagner, Dakota Whinery, and Paige Whittamore.

Braden's dad gives lots of the credit for the project working to Dr. Lane saying the teacher was "very supportive" and took time to write all the parents about the project.

But Lane wouldn't accept much credit, instead clapping for his students and telling the class, "The credit goes to you ... you raised the money ... you did a super outstanding job. That's what Christmas is all about, making someone happy would have had no Christmas."

World Trade Center toll falls to 3,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's tally of people killed or missing in the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center has fallen to 3,000 — down from its high of 6,700 in September.

City officials have said there are a number of reasons for the steadily declining number: names listed more than once on missing person-reports, overestimates from some foreign consulates and families who filed early missing reports but neglected to notify police when loved ones turned up safe.

Roommate's Gifts to Girl Make Her Boyfriend Appear Cheap

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 years old and a freshman in college. I have been dating my girlfriend "Holly" for about eight months.

My roommate is also friends with Holly, and that is the problem. He treats Holly like she is a princess and gives her extravagant gifts, sometimes for no reason at all. This irritates me because it makes me look like a terrible boyfriend.

I cannot approach him about it since he is my roommate, and I have to live with him for the rest of the year. Holly realizes that it irritates me, but I can't have her say anything because then it would be extremely weird whenever she comes to visit — even more than it is now.

How should I handle this?
CONFUSED IN CLEMSON, S.C.

DEAR CONFUSED: You must speak up. For your roommate to buy expensive gifts for Holly, knowing she is your girlfriend, is inappropriate. (If you and Holly break up — that's the time he should make his move, but not now.)

For Holly to accept those gifts is insensitive. You're certainly within your rights to let them both know this bothers you. And there's no time like the present to make your roommate aware of your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: My wife recently had her yearly mammogram and we are grateful it came out OK.

I asked my wife if she continues to check her breasts between the mammograms. Her response was yes, but that she wasn't quite sure what to look

Dear Abby

Is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips

Her physician told her, "You will know it when you find it." I am not sure this was a clear enough answer.

Why don't doctors have on hand one synthetic breast with a lump and one without to enable the patient to know exactly what she is looking for? In my opinion, it would be a good idea for men also to be taught what to look for in the male breast.

I could suggest this to the medical profession, but I am afraid it wouldn't get the attention it deserves. Your column is a better way to get the word out.

JOHN COLOMBE, INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR JOHN: I believe you've hit on something. I'm pleased to spread the word.

While not all women's breasts feel the same, a model with various sized "lumps" could be a lifesaver for a lot of people — men included. Many men are not aware that they, too, can have breast cancer. Although it is less common in men, there is definitely a risk for males too.

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter from "Surprised Wife in Oklahoma City," whose son had asked for his deceased father's military records. The widow was shocked to discover they contained a reference to her husband having been before a board of inquiry for striking an officer. She said her husband had never mentioned it to her or his family because it would have been a "disgrace."

Abby, I see no disgrace here. The function of a court of inquiry is to inquire into a situation and determine whether any legal action is appropriate. Since there is no mention of a military trial in her husband's records, the court of inquiry must have determined that her husband did nothing deserving of punishment.

The Army's opinion of her husband was expressed in the wording on his honorable discharge certificate "awarded as a testimonial of honest and faithful service." If it's good enough for the military, it should be good enough for her and her son.

DICK SCHUBERT, DENVER

DEAR DICK: Thank you for the short course on the military legal system. I'm sure it will comfort the widow who wrote that letter.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips.

Harvesters' basketball coach speaks at Chamber luncheon

PAMPA — The Pampa Harvesters could make a strong run for a District 3-4A playoff spot in basketball this season.

That's how head coach Jerry Schaeffer sees the situation as the Harvesters prepare for the district opener Friday night against Dumas in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"Starting district last year, we knew it would probably be Hereford and Randall with everyone else playing for third. There's more parity this year. We feel we have a chance to win first," he said.

Schaeffer, who is in his third season as head coach, was the guest speaker at Tuesday's Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

"Right now our boys have a fragile self-esteem," Schaeffer said. "Something changed and I'm not sure what went wrong. We went from winning a state championship to placing fourth in district. We're not the Pampa of old, but other teams are still playing hard against us. We're living in the shadow of tradition and it's sometimes difficult to deal with."

Schaeffer says he hopes to restore Pampa's basketball program.

"We're trying to become a team with a good self-image. I think people are like that. We do better when we have a good self-image," he said.

A year ago the Harvesters finished with a winning record (19-15), but were fourth in the district race.

"I take full responsibility for this team. I like what Harry Truman said when he was president. The buck stops here," Schaeffer said.

Schaeffer told the chamber audience that he and his family have grown to love Pampa.

"I've never been part of a community that cares more about its young people than Pampa. People here have done more for their young people than any community I've lived in," he said.

Schaeffer wants his players to carry on the spirit of volunteerism outside the basketball gym.

"I try to get my team involved in the community. It will enhance their lives when they put others first," he said. "Both our boys' and girls' teams were involved in the Children's Shopping Tour this year. Things like that have a snowball effect. Ultimately, I want to win basketball games, but I'm a strong believer in civic volunteerism."

Trade to Texas puts Rocker's career at a critical crossroad

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — John Rocker doesn't think his career is at a crossroads. His new general manager suggests that he is.

Rocker was traded Tuesday for the second time in six months, this time to the Texas Rangers. All they're promising him is a trip to spring training and a chance to make the club.

He got the news while in Puerto Rico, where he's voluntarily pitching in a winter league. He says it's to add a third pitch to his repertoire, yet he's also pleasantly surprised at how his arm is holding up after some concerns last season.

How Rocker pitched during his half-season in Cleveland was only part of the reason the Indians dumped him for minor league pitcher David Elder, who at 26 isn't much of a prospect.

They simply didn't need the distractions caused by the only player in baseball whose change of address prompts reaction from civic leaders and minority activists.

Two years after making crude remarks on racial, ethnic and sexual minorities in a magazine article, Rocker is still dealing with the fallout and stuck with the label of baseball's bad boy.

Calling his offensive comments "kind of a fluke sort of thing where I took myself too lightly," as he did Tuesday, perpetuates his image.

Changing that attitude will be as important as finding a third pitch if Rocker is going to make it in Texas, according to Rangers general manager John Hart — who six months ago was the GM who brought Rocker to Cleveland from Atlanta.

"John is at a crossroads in his career," Hart said. "He has a chance to take the good road, the high road, the right road with people who are going to support him, believe in him and lead him, try to direct him to be a better baseball player."

"I can't speak for him, I can't figure it all out. But here's what we expect, and hopefully that'll present itself and it'll be a good story — with a good ending and a good meaning to it."

Hart, who took another risk last week by trading for volatile outfielder Carl Everett, has little invested in Rocker, who will go to spring training on a non-guaranteed contract.

"If he meets those challenges and performs well, he comes northward," Hart said. "If he doesn't, we say, 'OK, we took a shot on a great arm and it didn't work out.'"

Speaking via conference call from Puerto Rico, Rocker dismissed his performance in Cleveland — 3-7 with four saves and a 5.45 ERA in 38 games — as "a 2-month bad stretch" that would've forced any elite closer to become a setup man.

"Even some veteran closers, like Robb Nen or Mariano Rivera, if those guys were to hit tough times, they'd have to be considered for some setting up roles until they got back on track," Rocker said. "I think I'm sort of in that position, cruising along fine for about three years, then I hit a little snag last year. I'm down here shoring up some things."

Rocker is happy to be reunited with Hart. Texas manager Jerry Narron and pitching coach Oscar Acosta both lobbied him to make the deal.

"Being welcomed by John Hart for a second time and by Jerry Narron and Oscar, that probably does more to relax me than motivate me," Rocker said. "I think a relaxed athlete, comfortable with a situation, is a lot better performer than one who knows the chips are down."

Rocker said he's excited about coming to Texas, although he might need a map. He kept referring to the team as being in Dallas instead of Arlington.

"I know they've got a really good offensive nucleus," Rocker said. "I'm really looking forward to going down there and helping them win."

He said hopes to win over fans by "giving my absolute best every time out." He plans to ignore anyone who holds a grudge over his past actions and comments.

Colorado State captures New Orleans Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — North Texas went the entire regular season without winning a game outside the Sun Belt Conference.

The Mean Green couldn't do it in the inaugural New Orleans Bowl, either.

Justin Gallimore blocked a punt and recovered it for a touchdown as Colorado State opened the bowl season with a 45-20 victory over North Texas on Tuesday night.

The Mean Green (5-7) were the first team with a losing record to play in a bowl game since 1970, when William & Mary went to the Tangerine at 5-6 and lost to Toledo 40-12.

North Texas earned the bid by finishing first in the Sun Belt, which posted a combined 5-32 nonconference record, but didn't fare well against the Rams.

"They're definitely one of the better teams we have faced this year," North Texas linebacker Brad Kassel said. "Offensively, they were able to find weaknesses and exploit them."

A crowd of 18,898 saw Colorado State quarterback Bradlee Van Pelt throw for one touchdown and run for another score. The Superdome fans were well behaved, a day after the NFL game between St. Louis and the Saints was briefly delayed at the stadium because of debris thrown from the stands.

Gallimore's touchdown gave Colorado State (7-5) a 31-14 lead, and came just four plays after Van Pelt fumbled on the North Texas 16.

"It seems like I'm always waiting for special teams to do something," Colorado State coach Sonny Lubick said.
