

NISBET TRIAL MISSED

Whether Proration Violates Anti-Trust Laws Is Debated

MERCY FOR TWITTY IS ASKED

MENTALITY IS LOW, DECLARE COURT FOLK

Letters Are Sent Sterling by Judge Ewing, Blanscet, Graves, Engledow, and Raymond Allred.

TO DIE APRIL 4

Death Verdict Given Man For Assaulting Child; No Question of Guilt Seep In New Move.

Intervention for the life of Monica Twitty, under sentence to die in the electric chair at Huntsville, April 24, was made today in letters to Gov. Ross Sterling by Judge W. R. Ewing of 21st district court, E. S. Graves, former sheriff of Gray county, Sheriff Lon L. Blanscet, C. G. Engledow, former district attorney, and District Attorney Raymond Allred.

A number of prominent local citizens also addressed letters to the governor.

Twitty was convicted of statutory assault last April 4, and the jury assessed death as the punishment for his crime. He was unable to employ counsel and the court appointed Don Walsman, Curtis Douglas, and C. S. Workman to represent him. During the trial of case, the issue of insanity was raised but a jury found against him.

In his letters to the governor, Judge Ewing said there is no question about the guilt of Twitty. "It was a crime of revolting circumstances," he stated. In the judge's opinion, Twitty is not insane but is considerably below normal in mentality. "I think in the opinion of practically all who know him, he has possibly the mind of probably a 10 or 12-year-old child," the judge wrote to the governor.

"On account of his low mentality, I doubt very much if it is a case in which death should be inflicted, and I respectfully recommend that his sentence be commuted to life imprisonment," the court concluded his letter to the governor.

If the governor does not commute the sentence, Twitty has exactly 30 days more to live. He is being held in the Gray county jail.

Records of Milk Testing Group to Be Made Public

Records of best individual milkers and producers in a testing association comprising the five counties of Gray, Wheeler, Roberts, Lipscomb, and Hemphill will be published monthly in the News and Post, beginning this month. The first report will be for March and will appear in the two newspapers around the first of April. January and February records will be published in subsequent issues.

The testing association has been in existence almost two years. H. F. Tesson of Canadian is the official tester. Records of 263 dairy cows are being kept. Of this number, 141 animals are owned by six Gray county dairy farmers, as follows:

F. W. Hicks, 37; W. E. McIntire, 31; Wheeler Paris, 21; Floyd McLaughlin, 20; Lawton Hoffer, 22; C. L. Carruth, 10.

Other herds are as follows:

Wheeler county—Tom Lanian, 23; J. E. Ebbitt, 21.

Roberts county—Dave Keelin, 10; E. W. Southard, 10.

Lipscomb county—Clas Robbin & Sons, 13.

Hemphill county—Kenneth M. Young, 20; Strader & Hoover, 23.

Records of the 10 best individual producers in Gray county and the two best producers in each of the other herds will be published exclusively in the News and Post. Names of the news, owner of the herds, number of pounds of milk and butter-fat will be given.

By publishing this data it is believed that interest in dairying will be stimulated. It is also believed that the results may also keep a check on the progress of their neighbors in the cow counties.

Mr. Tesson is testing herds in this and the Laketon communities this week.

Four of the six members of the testing association, living in Gray county have sent the master dairy farmer come. They are Mr. McIntire, Mr. Paris, Mr. Hoffer, and Mr. Carruth.

AL SMITH, MINER FOR DAY

It looks as though Alfred E. Smith might be introducing a new democratic mascot and the latest style in brown derbies for pedestrians. As a matter of fact, however, the picture here just before he went on his inspection trip through a mine near Scranton, Pa. He was clad in helmet and overalls, and was made a member in good standing of the miners' local union.

COLQUITT DAVIS IS GIVEN BRIEF STAY OF EXECUTION

Amarillo Youth Waiting for Decision on Appeal of Death Verdict.

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 25. (AP)—Colquitt Davis, Amarillo, Texas, youth, convicted of the murder of W. C. Keirse, Carter county deputy sheriff at Ardmore, today had a temporary stay of execution, originally set for April 2.

Presiding Judge J. S. Davenport of the criminal court of appeals, granted the stay yesterday pending decision of the court on Davis' appeal from the verdict on the ground he had not been given a fair trial.

Davis contended "feeling was high" against him at Ardmore and that District Judge, Asa E. Walden refused a change of venue.

Keirse was killed in a gun fight at Wirt, Okla., when he sought to question the two men concerning an automobile believed stolen. Vernon Cassin, Ardmore police officer, was wounded.

Suspicion fastened on the Davis brothers, D. L. Davis, the elder, was killed in a running gun fight with officers at Wichita, Kan. Colquitt was captured and returned to Ardmore to face trial.

AND A SMILE

SAINT SAENS, France (AP)—Charlie Chaplin likes wild boar better on the platter than on the hoof. Hunting on the estate of the Duke of Westminster, he got in the way. A boar was charging right at him, was within 100 feet, when another hunter's bullet brought the animal down. Charlie helped to eat the boar later.

GOLFERS ASSEMBLING

PINEHURST, N. C., March 25. (AP)—The strong men of American golf were assembling here today to tee off tomorrow in the annual North and South open tournament. At least three former national champions were listed as sure starters in the two-day event. They were Walter Hagen, Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen.

COUNTY CLUB REDUCES FEE BASIS FOR NON-MEMBERS

Course Will Be Available to All Pampa Residents Who Are Interested.

Reduction of green fees for non-members to 25 cents on week days and one dollar on Sundays and holidays has been announced by the Pampa Country club.

Directors have expressed a desire that everyone interested be allowed access to the golf course. It is believed that the reduction will make the course accessible to many who have not been using it.

The club recently purchased 3,000 tree seedlings to set out in and along the draws. All who use the course will be urged to avoid damage to these trees. The caretaker has been instructed to put all greens in the best possible playing condition.

Election of officers will be held April 14. Possible officers are M. E. Brown, president; H. Otto Studer, vice-president; C. P. Buckler, secretary; and F. B. Carlson, assistant secretary and chairman of the greens committee.

Dairy Show Date in Panhandle Moved

The Carson county dairy show and judging contests will be held on April 2 at Panhandle instead of April 3, original date set for the event, it was announced this week by Dr. G. E. Lester, vocational agriculture teacher in the local schools, and Ralph R. Thomas, county agent, will enter Gray county judging teams in the contests, both said today. Most of the teams which attended the contests here 10 days ago are planning to enter the Carson contests in order to get practice in judging Gray's before the Panhandle-Plains dairy show at Plainview.

Before the contests were held here, arrangements were made to Judge Guernsey at Panhandle since bringing them to Pampa entails too much time and expense.

The Rev. T. D. New of Pawnee, Okla., is visiting and transacting business here this week.

NATIVE DALLASITE DIES

DALLAS, March 25. (AP)—Alex A. Slaughter, 49, prominent Dallas business man and life-time resident of the city, died today at his home. He was a son of the late Col. C. C. Slaughter, pioneer Texas cattleman. Funeral rites were set for 3 p. m. tomorrow.

MOODY SAYS STATE MINUS LEGAL RIGHT

Former Governor Charges That Rail Commission Does What Operators Do Not Attempt

WARM REPARTEE

Bullington Brings Out That No Prosecution Developed in Recent Administration Over Curtailment.

AUSTIN, March 25. (AP)—The question of whether restriction of oil production was violation of the anti-trust laws was discussed before the railroad commission today for the first time during the present proration hearing.

Dan Moody, former governor and Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls were the opposing questioners and C. W. Tomlinson, operator in the Howard-Glasscock field, was the witness whose answers caused repeated laughter.

Moody, attorney for the East Texans, opposing proration of their new field, wanted to know if the operators in the Howard-Glasscock field, on obtaining proration, had not succeeded in getting the railroad commission to approve what the operators themselves could not do because of the violation of the anti-trust laws.

Origin Is Recalled

"When was proration established in your field?" Bullington asked when Moody had finished.

"About three years ago," Tomlinson answered.

"Who was governor at that time?" Bullington went on.

"Dan Moody," the witness replied.

"Did he know anything about this proration agreement?" Bullington inquired.

"He should have; it was in all the papers," was the answer.

"Was anyone prosecuted in connection with the agreement?" Bullington continued.

"No," the witness answered.

Lloyd Price of Fort Worth, former state senator, who appeared as an attorney for the anti-prorationists for the first time, today wanted to know if some other laws had not gone unenforced during the past few years. The East Texas attorney also tried to show that the republican presidents, Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, had known about proration.

Ranger Chairman Talks

J. M. Ghobson of Ranger, chairman of the West Central Texas Proration committee, was recalled to the stand today to testify that proration assured reliable purchasing of oil from all wells whereas otherwise many small operators might not have any pipeline connection. He stated that in his district there was a potential of 14,000 barrels of oil without a connection June 1. That has been reduced to 4,100 barrels, he testified.

Bullington brought out that the abandonment of the 7,000 small wells in the Ranger district, which the witness had said would result if the price should drop any lower, would throw about 1,400 men out of employment. Many of these men know no other trade, Ghobson said.

While Tomlinson was on the stand, Moody questioned the authority of the railroad commission to prevent surface storage but the witness said it had ample authority, and constituted a fire hazard.

Tomlinson stated that the wells in his district might be abandoned if the price should drop any lower. He said the potential of the Howard-Glasscock field was 78,000 barrels daily, the production 2,500 barrels daily.

Cross-examined by Price, Tomlinson said proration of the new East Texas pools "would help us out."

H. J. Corcoran, Panhandle umpire, was the last witness before the noon recess. Price wanted to know the principle of "geology, theology or otherology" his district was allowed one-third of its potential whereas the Van field was allowed only one per cent. The witness replied he did not know.

Corcoran said between 80 and 90 per cent of the wells in the Panhandle field would have to be abandoned if the price should drop further. He mentioned that Panhandle production at present was about 15,000 barrels daily over its allowable because certain operators had obtained injunctive restraining the railroad commission from enforcing proration.

THE WEATHER

WEST TEXAS: Cloudy, probably showers tonight and Thursday, warmer in north and east, cooler in extreme west portion tonight; cooler in west and north portions Thursday.

OKLAHOMA: Increasing cloudiness, warmer tonight; Thursday showers, cooler in northwest portion.

Father Says Daughter Killed Self To Escape Humiliation—Tells Of Man's Boasts.

BEAUMONT, March 25. (AP)—A. B. Johnson, 46, refinery teamster boss, took the stand today in his trial on murder charges to tell why he killed Otis Lee Adams at Port Arthur Saturday night, Jan. 17.

In a low voice and answering in monosyllables most of the questions of his lawyer, the defendant said he shot Adams to death after he had been told from several sources that Adams had caused her death from a bullet wound as a way of reviving him from a "tough spot."

The accused father said he since had learned she killed herself.

Mr. Carrie Belle Mooney of Port Arthur was another defense witness.

Girl Was Despondent

She said Elizabeth Johnson told her a day before last Thanksgiving that Adams had advised her he was married and could not marry her. Mrs. Mooney said the girl was despondent, wept, and discussed suicide.

"Elizabeth told me Adams was the only man she ever loved," Mrs. Mooney testified. "Tommy" went to a hospital for an appendicitis operation and Adams went there to see her.

O. B. Meadow of Port Arthur testified Johnson told him some time after the girl's death he had found out Adams was responsible for her death.

J. W. Pierce of Port Arthur said he had loaned his automobile to Adams, who wanted to take the girl riding.

"Did he ever tell you not to tell anybody he was married?" a defense attorney asked.

Revealed Marriage

"Yes; he told me he was running around with some girls in Port Arthur," the witness replied. "He came up to my shop three weeks before Miss Johnson's death, and told me things were all messed up."

They're Last Hope of Finding Viking's Men

With navigation impossible among the ice jams of White Bay, N. F., the slim hope of finding any of the 28 men now missing in the Viking disaster centered on aviation and, particularly, on the three men pictured here. Left to right, in front of the plane in which they plan to search for survivors, are Merion Cooper, organizer of the expedition, Randy Enslow, relief pilot, and Bert Balchen, chief pilot and veteran arctic flier. Overloading of their amphibian plane delayed them for a time at St. John, N. B., before taking off for Cornerbrook, N. F., enroute to Horse Island.

ROAD AID WILL NEVER BE BIGGER FOR THIS COUNTY

(AN EDITORIAL)

Opportunity is a fine distiller of destinies, and it seldom knocks twice in the same place. Gray county has an opportunity to get more than a million dollars of Hoover ruled money, but the chance will soon be gone and some other county on the list will be the lucky one if voters of this county do not act at once.

Gray county has an opportunity to solve her unemployment problem and to carry her population along comfortably by more and better roads—if she approves the highway paving bonds next Saturday.

This county can save at least a million by voting county instead of special district bonds and by taking advantage of the federal allocation of funds. This federal aid will be available only a short time and will be re-allocated to some other state if not used.

Opportunity is knocking—GRAY COUNTY MUST NOT LET IT PASS UNHEEDED.

NISBET TRIAL VERDICT NOT FOUND HERE

Body Deliberates Until 3:30 O'Clock—Takes Case At Midnight—Two Men Are Adamant.

CHARGE IS GIVEN

Testimony of Mrs. Wilson About Hijacking Ruled Out by Judge Ewing At 9 a. m.

The jury in the Paul Nisbet case failed to agree after deliberating seven and one-half hours and was discharged by Judge W. R. Ewing at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. The twelve men stood ten for conviction and two for acquittal, it is understood. Whether the 11 stood for acquittal or conviction could not be learned.

Judge W. R. Ewing sent the 12 men back to the jury room after they reported. He remarked that they should be able to reach a unanimous verdict with only one man disagreeing. Some of those interested in the case, including the defendant and his attorneys, were predicting at noon today that the verdict would be either a hung jury or acquittal.

At 9 o'clock this morning, the court called the jury into the courtroom and read them a special charge, instructing them not to consider any evidence testified to by Mrs. Billie Wilson concerning what transpired at the scene where C. H. Taylor was fatally shot by a "sucker" who, she said, she believed was Nisbet.

The defendant, his wife, three small daughters and aunt have been waiting for a verdict all day in the courtroom where a divorce trial is in progress.

Cook Identifies Brothers As Killer Of Alfred Lingle

CRIMINAL SOCIETY BUILDING, CHICAGO, March 25. (AP)—Another finger was pointed at Leo Brothers today as a witness in his murder trial testified that the man that ran away after Alfred Lingle was killed.

Otto Swoboda, a cook who said he was standing outside the Chicago public library on the afternoon when Lingle, Tribune crime reporter, was killed, related rapidly with a decided accent the events of last June 9.

"I saw a man standing near entrance to tunnel," he said. "He kept his left hand in his pocket and when he threw down a cigarette another man came up and lit a new one for him."

"I walked down in tunnel and pretty soon somebody run by, bumped into me and knocked my cigarette out of my hands. I look up and it was the same I saw up on sidewalk. Then I heard shot and this man came running back. I run up the stairs to street and see him again, just before he start running across the street."

"Do you see that man in the courtroom?" Swoboda was asked.

"Yes, there he is over there behind man with grey hair," answered the witness and he pointed at Brothers.

Brothers looked directly at the witness as he made his identification.

CHAPTER I

The clatter of flying typewriter keys stopped abruptly. Gypsy McBride's exclamation was sharp and short.

"All hot and bothered today, aren't you?" Jean Foster at the desk at the right spoke without glancing up from her stenographic pad. There were three other girls in the large sunny office of the MacNamara Electric Equipment company, but they were gathered at the opposite side of the room.

"What's on your mind?" Jean asked.

Gypsy frowned at the sheet of paper in the machine, tore it out and reached for a fresh one.

"That's the third time I've ruined the same page!" she said ruefully. "Of course, when I'm trying to hurry Turtle would give me figures to tabulate!"

She fitted carbon between the two white sheets and adjusted them in the machine. Gypsy's lips set in a straight, brief crimson line. With a quick, nervous gesture she pushed back a strand of hair from her forehead.

"Say—you're not marrying the Prince of Wales today, are you? Or flying the Atlantic?" the blond Miss Foster continued.

In spite of haste and the waiting columns of figures Gypsy paused.

"Didn't you know?" she exclaimed. "Alan's coming home!"

There was a tense, breathless quality about the girl. Her pink cheeks burned a shade deeper as she spoke, contrasting becomingly with the dark ivory of her skin—that warm ochre coloring responsible for the name of "Gypsy." There had been another name but no one, even the girl herself, ever thought of it. Gypsy she was—dark-skinned, brown-eyed, with long brows and lashes that made the eyes seem larger.

By classic standards Gypsy McBride's features were irregular. Her lips, flashing into a crimson smile

WHY WE GO TO COLLEGE

A college or a university is generally believed to be a sort of warehouse where innumerable facts are stored, to be sorted out and delivered, in proper quantities, to aspiring students who come in search of knowledge. But Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth the other day that this conception of a college is entirely wrong.

Indeed, he asserted, the prime function of a college is not at all to give knowledge to its students. It does its part if it merely imparts to them an inquiring and understanding habit of mind.

"Nothing is more useless than a fact by itself," says Dr. Hopkins. "The only thing a liberal arts college can do is to offer the atmosphere and environment in which education can be got."

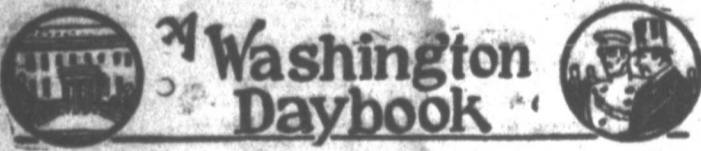

All of this is perfectly sound, and educators all over the country have been saying it for years; but since it runs counter to the ordinary conception of higher education it is worth looking at a bit.

During the last two decades the ranks of college in the United States have been enormously increased. A far higher percentage of young people is going to college today than was the case a generation ago; and back of this increase lies a fervent hope, on the part of hundreds of thousands of parents, that the college will somehow contrive to stuff their offspring with knowledge that will bring larger pay-checks, finer homes and a more comfortable station in life.

Unfortunately, it doesn't always work out that way; and a great deal of disappointment would be prevented if there could only be a wider understanding of the truth of Dr. Hopkins' remarks.

The college does not exist primarily to enable young people to make more money when they get out into the world. It is not supposed to load their brains with facts so that they will be walking encyclopedias. The most it can hope to do is put them into contact with the thoughts of great minds, and teach them to maintain an inquiring and unprejudiced attitude. As Dr. Hopkins says, it aims not so much to teach the students to do something as to teach them to be something.

But it probably will take us a long time to realize this. We demand tangible results when we put our money on the line. When we send our son off to college we fondly expect that he will emerge, after four years of it, ready to become a captain of industry or a highly-salaried professional man. It is hard for us to understand that a broadened horizon can be, in itself, worth the expense of a college education.

Washington Daybook

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, March 25. (NEA).—While a lot of other people worry and wonder about the next Congress and its uncertainties, the Filipinos appear to be confident and happy. They think they are going to get their independence.

Failure of efforts in the last Congress to restrict Filipino exports and Filipino immigration appears to have demonstrated that it is impossible to keep the little brown brethren and their products out as long as the islands are part of the United States. The Filipinos have argued all along that the only way to achieve those objectives is to give the man independent status, which would make them subject to our tariff and immigration laws.

Now they believe that, with the pressure of various interests which have supported exclusion and restriction measures, the greatly strengthened Democratic contingents in both houses of the 72d congress will be ready to vote independence.

In the last two presidential years the Democratic platform pledged the party "to keep our promise to these (Filipino) people by granting them immediately the independence which they so honorably covet." The Democrats will have hardly less than a majority in either house and many Republicans, both Progressive and regular, also favor independence.

The most widely discussed independence measure in the last congress, and one which will be up again in the next, was the Hawes-Cutting bill. This would impose a graduated tariff on the Philippines for the next five years and then let them have a plebiscite to vote their own independence. Many leaders of the independence group in congress prefer not to plunge the islands into complete freedom without some preparation.

Dr. Hilario Camino Moncado, president of the Filipino Federation of America, blossomed out during the congressional season as the big Filipino independence leader in this country. Long, lean and energetic, dressing in the height of fashion and wearing spats and cane, Moncado is regarded by many of his followers as a sort of Messiah and some of them talk of him as the first president of "the first Christian Republic of the Orient."

Dr. Moncado came here with the idea of blocking attempts to bar Filipino immigrants and talked to about a hundred members of congress, mapping out anti-exclusion and independence plans especially with Senator King of Utah and Congressman Knutson of Minnesota, chairman of the House Committee on Insular Affairs. Later he went on a tour around the country to boost the independence cause. Moncado claims hundreds of thousands of members for his organization in the Philippines. He predicted that the states of California, Oregon and Washington, which have been objecting more and more strenuously to immigration from the islands, would get more and more Filipinos as long as the 13,000,000 of them remained under the flag of the United States. He protested persecution and killings of Filipinos in California and Washington and declared belligerently: "Still the Filipinos will come! For every Filipino murdered, a hundred, or a thousand, or many thousands, will come. Those who now feel like they are on the firing line for their country's freedom. They rightly believe that the more of them that are here, the quicker will come their independence."

Anyway, there is something to Moncado's argument that the Filipinos are speeding the day of independence by making themselves and their exports increasingly unpopular in the United States. Filipino laborers on the coast, with cheap living standards, have re-aroused the old feeling that used to be directed against Chinese and Japanese. Domestic sugar producers, competing with mounting duty-free Filipino sugar exports, have joined with dairy groups concerned with the coconut oil-oleomargarine problem, cotton and other interests in sentiment for independence.

Moncado's federation predicts that the congressional delegations from the Pacific Coast states will be solidly for independence when Congress meets.

PUBLIC FORUM

Editor News-Post:

Very little has been said in a public way about the important bond election Saturday, and very little time remains for a campaign. If this election fails to carry, there will be no use trying another one for a year or two, and we can just make up our minds to mud it through. Furthermore, Gray county cannot qualify for one red cent of the 10 million dollars that has been allocated to Texas by the federal government, which, under the terms of the award, is an emergency fund for the relief of unemployment, and which must be expended by September 1, this year. This fund should not be confused with other millions that come annually from the federal government to the state, to be matched with state and county funds, and in which Gray county will also share, if the election carries.

The responsibility of this election is on the voters of Pampa, and the issue will be won or lost right here. If everybody who is in favor of good roads and steady employment, for hundreds of men at good wages will get out and vote, over one and a half million dollars will be released in the county to men who need it.

Man Who Silenced Big Berthas Dies

WASHINGTON, March 25. (AP)—Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, whose efforts silenced "Big Berthas" bombardment of Paris during the World war, is dead at 67, a victim of heart disease.

In command of the naval railway battery, he shattered the morale of the German army by putting powerful battleship rifles on wheels and trundling them up to wreak havoc along the front lines. His persistence and aggressiveness resulted in placing of the "battleship on wheels," five mobile units supporting as many 14-inch naval rifles, in strategic positions. They formed a battery of long range guns called "America's answer to the Big Berthas."

Former Speaker Is Now On Honeymoon

BRYAN, March 25. (AP)—W. S. Barron, former speaker of the Texas legislature, was on his honeymoon today at Cameron with Miss Bess Dubois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dubois.

The former speaker, who served three terms in the legislature, is now practicing law at Bryan and is active in civic affairs.

Double Funeral in Wakefield Slaying

BROWNWOOD, March 25. (AP)—A double funeral was planned today for Nelson Wakefield and his bride of one week, whom he killed early yesterday with a shotgun and then turned the weapon on himself.

Services were planned from the Wakefield home, with the Rev. C. R. Forrest in charge and burial in the family plot at Greenleaf cemetery. No motive for the shooting was known. Wakefield and the girl, formerly Dorothy Craft, were married March 17 in Del Rio. Miss Madeline Tarpley attended the Gall-Church concert in Amarillo Friday night.

Step Right Up Ladies and Gents To See What Positively—Is Spring

NEW YORK, March 25. (AP)—"Step up, ladies and gentlemen! Try your hands at fortune's wheel. Pant heart n'er won big prize. Step up!"

And as the first warm breath of spring suffices the stony faces of big town or little town, they're stepping up to take their chance, tripping men and women who exhort the world to spend a nickel or a dime for guerdon or for thrill.

For carnival time is here, and they're all astr. Pichmen, medicine men and jam men, short people, tall people, fat people and queer people, Hawaiian dancers and rope workers and cowboys, gaudy men and soothsayers.

For them it's a bigger gamble and a bigger thrill than they ever offered gaping "chump." Few of them ever get rich and most of them face the hardest summer of their careers, say some experts.

"Eighty per cent of the small carnival shows are wondering why they're going to mortgage next year, get out on the road," said F. J. Murphy, grizzled master showman.

"What with the depression, daylight saving, new fangled amusements, exorbitant license fees and miniature golf, the going looks rough. The laws against gambling do a job on us, because people like to win money, not sock pillows, and a few rainy Sundays could ruin most of us. Of course, they're some new attractions that pull 'em into the tent. The whales, for instance. Almost anybody will spend a dollar to see an embalmed whale, especially if he's never been near the sea water."

Searching for "SEVEN CITIES OF GOLD" ...

The Pueblo Village of Zuni, one of the remaining SEVEN CITIES OF GOLD

CORONADO

missed a Greater Wealth

DETAILED in 1541 by the Viceroy of Mexico to search for the "Seven Cities of Gold", believed to be located somewhere in the vicinity of the territory now occupied by New Mexico and Arizona, Captain Francisco Vasquez de Coronado was the second white man to enter the Southwest.

Had he but known, riches far beyond the fabled wealth of his "Seven Cities" lay beneath his feet. Not in the yellow gold he sought, but in a black liquid which for millions of years had lain in stagnant pools deep in the bowels of the earth. His quest for the yellow metal that had lured mankind since before recorded history proved an imp of disappointment. But the hardships and privations he had suffered were not to be in vain . . . for Coronado had pioneered the way to a land that was fated to prosper and grow rich through agriculture and the discovery of petroleum.

The growth of New Mexico closely parallels that of its Southwestern neighbors. A single generation has seen a miracle unfolded before its eyes. Oil, like the touch of Midas, has wrought riches and wealth wherever it appeared. But unlike the touch of Midas, it has brought prosperity, progress and happiness beyond the most vivid dreams of Coronado.

As the pioneer refining company of the Southwest, the Magnolia Petroleum Company has done much to harness the great wealth over which Coronado unknowingly trod in quest of a golden rainbow. Since 1898, when the first refinery in the Southwest was opened at Corsicana, Texas, Magnolia has served every need for petroleum products, from the kerosene that lit the homes of early settlers to the highly refined gasoline and motor oil required by the present-day motor car.

Two of the "Seven Cities of Gold" that prompted Coronado's expedition will occupy their sixteenth century sites, and their picturesque people still ply the primitive arts of a civilization far older than Columbus. But the water of the hills, garnered for the thirsty soil and petroleum, recently discovered in New Mexico, continue to create a new wealth more potent and dependable than all the metals wrenched from the ground by enslaved Indians.

Nowhere else do ancient and modern civilization elbow each other in such amity, each lending color to the other. The delighted tourist who travels in his modern motor car, where once the Conquistadores and the Missionaries gave their lives in exploration, finds his way blazed by smooth, perfect highways . . . his pleasure, convenience and safety assured by a trail of Magnolia Service Stations.

Thirty Members Attend Meeting Of Local Lodge

Mrs. C. S. Rock of Shidler, Okla., and Mrs. M. L. Tucker of Wichita Falls, visitors, and 30 members attended a meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America Tuesday evening in the basement of the First Baptist church.

During a short business session it was decided to discontinue the Kongenial Klub, which has been held recently for officers of the organization, and to have a social gathering once each month for the benefit of the Royal Neighbors. Members are selling tickets to "The Road to Paradise," a picture to be shown at the Rex theater Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Eva Huskey of Greenville, state deputy of the Royal Neighbors, was in Pampa and appointed Mrs. F. C. Fischer as district deputy of three counties.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Slagle and daughter, Miss Corrie Slagle, of the Liberty community in Garza county, were business visitors here yesterday.

W. S. Willis of the Grandview community was in Pampa yesterday.

Thos O. Kirby of the Grandview community, formerly commissioner of precinct No. 3, was in the city yesterday.

Communist Affair Appears At End

DALLAS, March 25. (AP)—The last echo of the communist episode that either agitated or amused Dallas during recent weeks was aroused yesterday when Corporation Judge Cavia Muse announced that vagrancy cases against two men which grew out of what might have developed into a "Red" demonstration, would be dismissed. The defendants were Dallas men.

Lewis Hurst and C. J. Coder, self-styled communists who reported they were kidnaped March 5 from the city hall steps and flogged by armed men, never returned to Dallas from Kansas City to appear before a grand jury investigating the incident. Judge Muse said the charges dismissed were against "Dallas men who got into trouble while Hurst and Coder were here."

WHY WE GO TO COLLEGE

A college or a university is generally believed to be a sort of warehouse where innumerable facts are stored, to be sorted out and delivered, in proper quantities, to aspiring students who come in search of knowledge.

Indeed, he asserted, the prime function of a college is not at all to give knowledge to its students. It does its part if it merely imparts to them an inquiring and understanding habit of mind.

During the last two decades the ranks of college in the United States have been enormously increased. A far higher percentage of young people is going to college today than was the case a generation ago; and back of this increase lies a fervent hope, on the part of hundreds of thousands of parents, that the college will somehow contrive to stuff their offspring with knowledge that will bring larger pay-checks, finer homes and a more comfortable station in life.

The college does not exist primarily to enable young people to make more money when they get out into the world. It is not supposed to load their brains with facts so that they will be walking encyclopedias. The most it can hope to do is put them into contact with the thoughts of great minds, and teach them to maintain an inquiring and unprejudiced attitude.

But it probably will take us a long time to realize this. We demand tangible results when we put our money on the line. When we send our son off to college we fondly expect that he will emerge, after four years of it, ready to become a captain of industry or a highly-salaried professional man.

Washington Daybook

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, March 25. (NEA).—While a lot of other people worry and wonder about the next Congress and its uncertainties, the Filipinos appear to be confident and happy. They think they are going to get their independence.

Failure of efforts in the last Congress to restrict Filipino exports and Filipino immigration appears to have demonstrated that it is impossible to keep the little brown brethren and their products out as long as the islands are part of the United States.

Now they believe that, with the pressure of various interests which have supported exclusion and restriction measures, the greatly strengthened Democratic contingents in both houses of the 72d congress will be ready to vote independence.

In the last two presidential years the Democratic platform pledged the party "to keep our promise to these (Filipino) people by granting them immediately the independence which they so honorably covet."

The most widely discussed independence measure in the last congress, and one which will be up again in the next, was the Hawes-Cutting bill. This would impose a graduated tariff on the Philippines for the next five years and then let them have a plebiscite to vote their own independence.

Dr. Hilario Camino Moncado, president of the Filipino Federation of America, blossomed out during the congressional season as the big Filipino independence leader in this country. Long, lean and energetic, dressing in the height of fashion and wearing spats and cane, Moncado is regarded by many of his followers as a sort of Messiah and some of them talk of him as the first president of "the first Christian Republic of the Orient."

Dr. Moncado came here with the idea of blocking attempts to bar Filipino immigrants and talked to about a hundred members of congress, mapping out anti-exclusion and independence plans especially with Senator King of Utah and Congressman Knutson of Minnesota, chairman of the House Committee on Insular Affairs. Later he went on a tour around the country to boost the independence cause.

Moncado claims hundreds of thousands of members for his organization in the Philippines. He predicted that the states of California, Oregon and Washington, which have been objecting more and more strenuously to immigration from the islands, would get more and more Filipinos as long as the 13,000,000 of them remained under the flag of the United States. He protested persecution and killings of Filipinos in California and Washington and declared belligerently: "Still the Filipinos will come! For every Filipino murdered, a hundred, or a thousand, or many thousands, will come. Those no where feel like they are on the firing line for their country's freedom. They rightly believe that the more of them that are here, the quicker will come their independence."

Anyway, there is something to Moncado's argument that the Filipinos are speeding the day of independence by making themselves and their exports increasingly unpopular in the United States. Filipino laborers on the coast, with cheap living standards, have re-aroused the old feeling that used to be directed against Chinese and Japanese. Domestic sugar producers, competing with mounting duty-free Filipino sugar exports, have joined with dairy groups concerned with the coconut oil-oil-margarine problem, cotton and other interests in sentiment for independence.

Moncado's federation predicts that the congressional delegations from the Pacific Coast states will be solidly for independence when Congress meets.

Man Who Silenced Big Berthas Dies

WASHINGTON, March 25. (AP)—Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, whose efforts silenced "Big Berthas" bombardment of Paris during the World war, is dead at 67, a victim of heart disease.

In command of the naval railway battery, he shattered the morale of the German army by putting powerful battleship rifles on wheels and trundling them up to wreak havoc along the front lines.

His persistence and aggressiveness resulted in placing of the "battleship on wheels," five mobile units supporting as many 14-inch naval rifles, in strategic positions. They formed a battery of long range

OUT OUR WAY

Very little has been said in a public way about the important bond election Saturday, and very little time remains for a campaign. If this election fails to carry, there will be no use trying another one for a year or two, and we can just make up our minds to mud it through. Furthermore, Gray county cannot qualify for one red cent of the 10 million dollars that has been allocated to Texas by the federal government, which, under the terms of the award, is an emergency fund for the relief of unemployment, and which must be expended by September 1, this year. This fund should not be confused with other millions that come annually from the federal government to the state, to be matched with state and county funds, and in which Gray county will also share, if the election carries.

The responsibility of this election is on the voters of Pampa, and the issue will be won or lost right here. If everybody who is in favor of good roads and steady employment for hundreds of men at good wages will get out and vote, over one and a half million dollars will be released in the county to men who need it, and everybody will have a good road to travel over for years to come.

Former Speaker Is Now On Honeymoon

BRYAN, March 25. (AP)—W. S. Barron, former speaker of the Texas legislature, was on his honeymoon today at Cameron to Miss Bess Dubois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dubois.

The former speaker, who served three terms in the legislature, is now practicing law at Bryan and is active in civic affairs.

Double Funeral In Wakefield Slaying

BROWNWOOD, March 26. (AP)—A double funeral was planned today for Melson Wakefield and his wife of one week, whom he killed early yesterday with a shotgun and then turned the weapon on himself. Services were planned from the Wakefield home, with the Rev. C. R. Forrest in charge and burial in the family plot at Greenleaf cemetery.

No motive for the shooting was known. Wakefield and the girl, formerly Dorothy Craft, were married March 17 in Del Rio.

Miss Madeline Turley attended the Gull-Curt concert in Amarillo Friday night.

Attendance is increasing each evening at the revival which is being conducted at the First Christian church.

In part, Rev. O'Malley said: "After discussing mother love that prevails throughout the animal kingdom, and throughout all tribes and nations of the human race: also the love of friendship as that between Damon and Pythias, and between Jonathan and David; the love prompted by gratitude for benefits and service rendered even at personal sacrifice and risk; the preacher passed to the surpassing, wonderful love of God—love for sinners who were rebelling against Him, profaning His holy name, crucifying His holy Son, defying or denying Him. God's mercy, God's grace, God's patience, God's continued watch, care and loving fatherly interest despite our failures, and our neglect and indifference, were emphasized by not illustrating giving true life stories, showing how the base, the vile, the hopeless, the been reformed and transformed and become noble sons and daughters of the Great King, our Father and our God."

The speaker urged that since "All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" it was of most serious and immediate concern for all to accept the salvation that God's great love has provided through

Divorce As Rare As It Is Complex For Isle Of Man

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, March 25. (AP)—This island is one place where the phrase "till death do us part" means just about what it says. In the past 50 years there have been only nine divorces, and here's what you have to do to get a divorce in Manxland: Obtain in the chancery division of the Manx court a decree of judicial separation. Then bring an action in the common law division against the respondent for damages for "criminal conversation."

If favorable verdicts are obtained in these actions the litigant must present a petition to the Manx legislature for permission to present a private divorce bill. This bill must pass both branches of the legislature and then receive the king's assent.

When the royal assent is given the bill is promulgated at the ancient open air court of Tynwald in the center of the island. This court is held every year July 5.

The bill is read in both Manx and English and becomes at once operative. The cost of a divorce is seldom less than $500.

CLUB GROUP OF PANHANDLE VERY ACTIVE

That activities of Panhandle Business and Professional Women's clubs are important factors in community welfare work was revealed at the annual conference of Business and Professional Women's clubs of Panhandle District No. 1 which was held in Plainview Saturday and Sunday.

The Quannah club reported that members there helped materially in putting over the Empty Stocking program, sponsored a student loan fund, have encouraged high school debating teams, and are now sponsoring a library project.

Members of the Amarillo clubs have taken an active part in the "Mayor's Loyalty to Amarillo Campaign," have worked out various services for the club, sponsored many worthwhile projects in the city and are now making elaborate plans for the state convention to be held in Amarillo on May 28, 29, and 30.

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of HEART HUNGRY, etc.

as she spoke, were too wide. Her nose was too small. No one could deny that the heavy, waving hair drawn into a low knot at the back of her neck was an effective frame for the oval face, but it heightened the look which made strangers often ask Gypsy if she were Spanish. She was a small, slim girl; seated at her typewriter Gypsy looked younger than her 19 years.

"Who's Alan?" demanded Jean Foster.

"Didn't you ever hear me talk about Alan? That's funny! Alan Crosby's name is. He's going to be a great painter and he's been abroad studying and—oh, he's the handsomest thing! Everybody who knows Alan thinks he's wonderful. Wait until you see him! I guess it's because you haven't been here very long that you don't know about Alan coming home."

The other girl nodded.

"Sure—I remember! The boy friend who's been in Europe for five years. Coming home today, is he? No wonder you're excited!"

Gypsy had begun typing again but now she stopped. "It isn't five years," she said. "It's 19 months, two weeks and three days—exactly." She glanced up at the electric clock on the wall. "The boat lands at 12 o'clock and I've just got to get there! Turtle said I could leave as soon as I've finished this tabulation. There—"

"Turtle" (the unofficial name by which Miss Elizabeth Tuttle, office manager, was known to the employees under her supervision) at that moment entered the room.

"Will you add these two tables to that list you're working on, Miss McBride," she said. "I'd like to have them as soon as possible."

Miss Tuttle laid five pages of pencilled manuscript on Gypsy's desk. More figures! Miss Tuttle's countenance was severe and business-like. She was a woman in the late thirties with slim, pointed features in keeping with her slim figure. Dark-rimmed spectacles on her nose increased the impression of formidable authority. She paused long enough to give Gypsy exact instructions about the typing. Miss Tuttle spoke in a loud, high-pitched voice and without smiling.

"Check the statistics after you've finished," she added. "You know how serious an error would be."

Gypsy knew—fully. She expressed herself completely on this subject as soon as Miss Tuttle had disappeared from the room. With each terse syllable she hammered the keyboard of her typewriter viciously.

Jean Foster was sympathetic.

"That's a dirty trick!" she said indignantly. "Why didn't you tell her you couldn't do it, Gypsy? Why didn't you say you were busy?"

The other girl shook her head.

"No use wasting time in an argument. Never mind about Turtle. I'll get even with her for this. I'll get even all right!" She glanced at the clock, then bent over her copy. The staccato-tap-tap of flying typewriter keys grew faster.

A moment later and Jean's voice, lower pitched, interrupted:

"Gypsy—give me half of that. I've got time to help."

"Would you?"

"Sure. I've got to stay until 1:30 today anyhow. Show me what you want me to do."

Gypsy's quick smile was grateful. There was no time to lose in words. She divided the pages and gave the other girl directions. After that the clatter of the machines doubled. For nearly 10 minutes they worked. Then a shadow fell over Gypsy's shoulder.

"Isn't this the day of the Ford Lover's return, Miss McBride?" Gypsy did not look up.

"Why? Do you happen to be interested?" she inquired steadily.

She knew it was Clara Howard who was standing behind her. Clara was the one member of the stenographic department with whom Gypsy McBride clashed regularly. Everything about the two girls seemed antagonistic. Gypsy was small, dark, outspoken, vigorous in her likes and dislikes. Clara was blond. She was tall, moved languorously and spoke with an ingratiating drawl. Clara was adept at flattery and a favorite with Miss Tuttle. Gypsy knew it was not friendliness that had brought the other girl to her desk this morning. She went on with her work but Clara lingered.

"Interested? Of course I'm interested. Haven't we been hearing every day for the last six months about this handsome hero of yours who has Hollywood and all points east and west beaten for looks and talent?"

Clara turned toward Jean Foster. "Maybe you haven't heard about Gypsy's romance," she said.

"My dear, you don't know what you've missed! It's a perfect love affair! Gypsy has a beau she hasn't seen for years, because he's been studying to be an artist. In Paris! Living in a garret and eating crusts and all the while remaining true to Gypsy's memory. Don't you love it? He sends her picture post cards."

The tone in which Clara spoke made every word ridiculous. Gypsy colored but she did something of which she was proud for days. She kept her temper.

The other girl waited, apparently disappointed. Then Clara said slowly: "What'll you do, Gypsy, if he walks down the gangplank with a wife and three children?"

There was a titter from across the room. Jean Foster spoke up defensively.

"We've got work to get out, Clara. Don't you think you could postpone the comedy?"

"Oh, my dear—I beg your pardon!" Miss Howard's voice registered a drop to icy temperature.

"Didn't know you were playing little helper, Jean. You must assume me."

Gypsy's "Don't mention it!" was equally formal. Her anger was tempered by the thought that, of all the girls in the office, Clara Howard was the one she least wished to know that Jean was sharing her duties. Now Clara knew. It would be interesting to see what damaging use she would try to make of this information.

Two little wrinkles appeared in Gypsy's forehead just above her nose. She looked up at the clock. Then her heart began beating pell-mell again just as it had most of the morning.

Alan was coming! She must hurry with her work because Alan was coming! What did she care for Clara Howard or Miss Tuttle or a whole army of tabulated figures? In spite of aching shoulders and overwrought nerves there was a glow of happiness about Gypsy McBride. The minutes were flying and everyone of them was bringing Alan nearer.

With a sigh of relief Gypsy pulled the final sheet from the carrier. Jean looked up. "Be through in a minute," she mumbled.

Now Gypsy was arranging the typewritten sheets. She got them wrong twice, stopped and began over again.

"Fingers are all thumbs!" she complained.

She had them all together at last. Ten neat pages and eight sets of carbons. It was 25 minutes of 12. With good luck she could reach the dock in time to see the great steamship let down the gangplank.

Gypsy glanced down at her morning's work. "Check the figures for errors," Miss Tuttle had said. Why—it would take almost all of her precious 25 minutes to read copy on these 10 pages! Tuttle had doubled the work on the day she knew Gypsy was in a rush to leave. Probably had done it purposely. Well, it was too late now! Not for all the office executives in the world would Gypsy miss meeting the boat which was to bring Alan Crosby home again.

She jumped up, gathering together the pages and rustling thru a desk drawer for purse, gloves, and vanity case. She hurried into the adjoining office and laid the manuscript on Miss Tuttle's desk.

The older woman nodded and her straight lips tightened. Gypsy had reached the door when she heard her name called. She whirled about.

"Yes, Miss Tuttle?"

"You were careful to check your copies with the originals on this work, I suppose?"

Surely it was a white lie and surely it was forgivable. Gypsy answered without a moment of hesitation.

"Yes, Miss Tuttle."

"Very well. That's all."

Gypsy didn't give the matter another thought. She knew that other thought. She knew that were imposed, that prices and matters of policy might be determined by them. She knew the penalty such an error might bring and she forgot all these things.

Down the hall she nearly ran to get her hat and coat. Jean Foster was waiting for her in the dressing room.

"Listen, Gypsy, do you want to wear my new hat? You can have it till Monday."

"Thanks, honey. I guess I'd better wear my own. You've done a lot for me all ready today."

Quick dash of powder and a touch of lipstick while she spoke. The close-fitting brown beret jerked on at a rakish angle. Now the tweed coat that had seen two winters' wear.

"My gloves!" Gypsy wailed. "I had them just a minute ago. Well—I'll have to go without them!"

"Right behind you."

Jean rescued the gloves from the floor.

"Angel! Well—good-by—!"

Gypsy had one hand on the door when something in the other girl's manner made her hesitate. Jean moved forward impulsively.

"Gypsy," she said, "you're looking wonderful! I guess it's because you're so happy. You're in love with him, aren't you?"

The curling lashes fluttered. No use to try to hide the dancing light in those brown eyes, the glow of happiness which shone from every feature of Gypsy McBride's impertinent little face.

"Well, what do you think?" said Gypsy.

"Oh, I hope you'll be so happy! Do you—when are you going to be married?"

It was an awkward moment. Then the girl at the door mastered her confusion and laughed tremulously.

"I'll tell you all about it later! Have to run!"

She hurried down the hall and caught the elevator car just as it was descending. In another five minutes she was in a taxicab headed for the pier.

"Hurry," she told the driver. "I've got to meet someone and I'm late."

"Do the best I can, ma'am."

For two blocks they had the right of way and sped through traffic. Then a changing signal light blocked them. Gypsy glanced out of the window and saw a clock in a shop window. The hands pointed at 10 minutes of 12.

But there're always some people getting people ashore, Gypsy reassured herself. "I can make it yet if I'm lucky."

As that moment the taxi jumped forward. Gypsy was on the edge of the seat, clinging to each side.

What was she to say when she met Alan? Probably none of the pretty speeches she had rehearsed. What would he look like? Would he have changed? A hundred questions seemed to be throbbing through her head. Topped by the one tremendously big, important question—what would Alan say to her?

Ever since its arrival five days before. The adeline hand and the postmark was Paris.

She knew the words by heart. "Dear Gypsy," Alan had said, "in 10 days I'll be home. I've just come from the steamship office and this probably the last note I'll be able to get off before leaving. The boat is the DeGrasse and we set in Saturday noon. Believe me, it will seem great to be back. I haven't realized until these last two weeks just exactly how anxious I am to see New York. Anxious to see you, too, Gypsy. I wonder if I'll know you!"

"I've been saving the best news until last. Didn't tell you I'd submitted some sketches to the Times as Advertising agency, did I? Well they liked them. We've had an exchange of letters and the result is that Monday morning, just about 48 hours after landing, I'm to report for my new job. It won't be much money at first, but once they realize the exceptional talent of this young man known as Alan Crosby of course things will be different. Anyhow, jobs for young artists are scarce. It makes the future a lot brighter knowing there's a regular pay check ahead."

"Certainly will be great to see you again, Gypsy. Do you still have little sparks of red gold in them and is our hair still long? I hope so. Do you still like butter cakes and long walks on Sunday afternoons? There are so many other things I want to talk about but they'll wait. You'll have to tell me all the news and I'll try to impress you with my French. All 13 words! We'll have a party. Thinking about home is going to make these next 10 days harder than ever before I burst into poetry. So long, Gypsy. I'll be seeing you! As ever—Alan."

To other girls it might not seem much of a love letter. They would be young women of course without the memory of Alan Crosby, tall and handsome, his black hair tossed carelessly back from his forehead as he glanced up from his drawing board and smiled that good-natured, teasing smile. They would be young women who knew nothing of the days in the open country, swishing along the road with the best of companions—Alan of gay and impromptu parties; of Sunday morning breakfasts cooked over a chined fire; of sketching expeditions, of long, long talks, discussing out all of the world's problems.

It was no wonder that to Gypsy the six months that she had known Crosby seemed the happiest of her life.

There was nothing at all unusual about the friendship. Gypsy saw him for the first time on the stairway of the Twelfth street rooming house which was her home. She barely glanced at him. Another day Mrs. Callahan, who roomed across the hall, confided to Gypsy that the new lodger was an artist. Mrs. Callahan had got it straight. Mrs. O'Hare, the landlady. The fourth time Gypsy passed the young man in the hallway he stopped her and asked if she would pose for a sketch.

She agreed. From the very first the young couple liked each other. Gypsy learned that Crosby attended night art classes and worked days in a dry-cleaning shop. He found her a splendid subject for sketches and made dozens of drawings of the girl. Evenings when Crosby was not at classes they spent together. Week-ends they read or walked or went to inexpensive movies. Mrs. O'Hare with her generosity allowed them to use her gas stove to cook occasional late suppers.

When Crosby won the scholarship which took him to Paris Gypsy was first to hear the news, least in her congratulations. It didn't relieve the pangs of parting when the final separation came but Gypsy was so sure Crosby was a genius she waved goodbye gallantly and so long as he was watching she managed to smile.

Fondlest of all of Gypsy's memories was the evening before Crosby's departure. It was late August and because they wanted to be alone they had sought out the most crowded place they could find—a boat for Coney Island.

There had been moonlight; the whizzing, tin-pat tunes of ferry boat musicians; and the cool, fresh night wind. They stood in shadow, leaning against the boat's rail and Alan's arm was pressed about her close.

"Gypsy," he had whispered, "I don't want to leave you. Marry me tonight and let's forget about Paris!"

A hundred times Gypsy McBride had lived through the spell of that moment. Often she wondered how she had had the courage to answer: "But I can't, dear. You know I can't! A year and a half isn't so long. It's going to be wonderful for you, Alan. And for me too, because you know I'll be waiting for you. You must write—write me often, Alan."

He didn't want to write. He didn't want to go away at all. Repeatedly he begged Gypsy to change her mind. As repeatedly she refused. It had been a delightful, fantastic boat ride. There had been kisses which each of them, happily deluded, thought to be unobserved.

Yes, it was all sweet in retrospect. And after Alan had gone away there had been letters, just as he had promised. At first a constant stream of letters. Then one each week. Gradually the letters had come less frequently. But Gypsy could not understand how that happened. She herself tried after a long stay in the office, often fell too weary to struggle with pen and ink. Especially, after Alan had settled down to work at art school and described the strange things about living in France and the people he met, there was less to write.

There had never been any change in the friendly way he wrote. There were few affectionate phrases. He was not inclined to sentimentality. Yet on each hastily scrawled page Gypsy read messages which were infinitely tender.

For a year and a half she had treasured her letters, answered promptly whenever the postman left an envelope with a Paris postmark, and made it clear to young men hinting at dinner or dance dates that her evenings were occupied. She stayed on at the Twelfth street lodging house. A sandy-haired bookkeeper who had moved into the second floor rear was unusually persistent with invitations. A bookkeeper at MacNamara's bore up so faithfully under snubs that out of Christian charity she relented and saw two plays with him. She did not enjoy herself. Going about with Alan, who was witty and handsome, had made other young men seem commonplace.

A year and a half—19 months, two weeks and three days to be exact—she had waited for this meeting.

Suddenly Gypsy found her hands were clammy and that she was shivering. She was happy and at the same time frightened. One block ahead she saw the French line pier. With one eye on the taximeter she began tumbling in her purse. The cab halted. Gypsy was outside immediately, thrusting a bill into the hands of the driver. She was gone before she could hear him say: "Thanks, ma'am" for the extra-cent tip.

Gypsy hurried up the long flight of stairs. She saw a crowd of men and women and made toward them. An official was refusing to let them nearer. She pushed forward and presented her permit, and was admitted past the rope barrier. The long, barn-like pier seemed to stretch on for blocks. And there was the boat!

Dignity was forgotten. She ran. Past the neat boxed booth of customs officials. Past waiting messengers. Past steamship employees. Gypsy ran until, breathless, she reached the group at the railing opposite the gleaming white boat.

There were cheers and cries and waving handkerchiefs. Faces on the deck of the steamship, only a few yards away, became a hazy blur. Everyone was smiling. Gypsy elbowed her way nearer, to the very edge of the barrier. She forgot these others had an equal right to be there. She squirmed and pushed ruthlessly to reach the front. Live—

Where was he? Where was Alan? All of the faces on the crowded deck looked alike.

Something must be wrong! Gypsy swung left and right. She tried to steady her quick, darting gaze. Of course he was there—of course she would see him in a moment.

There was a new commotion, a rattle on at Gypsy's right. They were lowering the gangplank. Passengers began trooping over. Stewards scoured this way and that with baggage and men and women beside Gypsy rushed forward for clamorous, affectionate greetings. Laughter and tears. A couple beside the girl were embracing.

More faces. More faces. More faces. She saw him. He was part way down the gangplank before she recognized him. Alan looked more handsome than Gypsy remembered. He was glancing from left to right. He had not seen her. The girl pressed her way forward.

"Alan!" she cried eagerly. "Alan—I'm here!"

"Crybaby" Bandit Is Held Minus Bond

SAN ANTONIO, Mar. 24. (AP)—Robert Lockett, 31, "Crybaby Bandit" was remanded to jail without bond today on two cases charging capital offenses.

Lockett was charged with the murder of Paul E. Kardow, butcher, during a holdup of a grocery store early Sunday morning in one complaint. In the other he was charged with robbery with firearms of Hal R. Graham, operator of the store.

Kardow was shot when he charged Lockett when the latter was holding a gun upon Graham and demanding money. Six shots were fired at close quarters and three struck Kardow in the abdomen, killing him almost instantly.

Officers and merchants today started a fund for the relief of the widow of Kardow.

RADIO DAY by DAY

(Time is central standard). NEW YORK, March 25. (AP)—San Lanin of the Troubadors, the pioneer radio chain program formerly on NBC, is coming back to radio.

But with his orchestra, he moves to CBS under a new sponsor. He will be heard in a weekly 15-minute period, starting April 1, with "Scrappy" Lambert and Dick Robertson, singers, and Dave Elman, humorist, as other features.

A three-hour service from the national cathedral, Washington, is to be presented by WABC and stations, starting at noon Good Friday, April 3. The Detroit symphony orchestra Sunday night concerts, WABC and others, are to be continued for another 14 weeks.

Try these on your radio tonight: Byron Price, chief of bureau, the Associated Press, Washington, guest speaker in Back of the News in Washington, WEAF chain at 6:45.

NOTICE To the Public Since coming to Pampa my practice has been limited to office work, but since I have been solicited so much, I have decided to do so. I will make calls and give special attention to obstetrics and children.

Baptist Circles Have Study And Business Meets

Short business sessions and study periods held interest for members of the First Baptist W. M. S. circles, which held regular meetings Monday afternoon.

The first chapter of the mission book "In the Land of the Southern Cross" was taught by Mrs. W. T. Jamison for Circle 1, meeting in the home of Mrs. R. E. Gattin.

Mrs. A. C. Shaw presided during the business session, and Mrs. C. L. McKinney closed the meeting with prayer.

Those present were Mesdames C. L. McKinney, John Anderson, Bob Malone, J. McFarland, T. W. Jamison, L. A. Greene, Charles Stephens, John Brown, A. C. Shaw, J. Powell Wehring, and the hostess.

Paris Assigned

Meeting in the home of Mrs. J. H. Ayres, members of Circle 2 were assigned parts in the new study book "The Spiritual Conquest of the Southwest," which will be begun at the next meeting.

Mrs. C. H. Schullery led the devotional and Mrs. John McKinney offered prayer. A short business session, also was held.

Lovely refreshments were served to Mesdames E. F. Burke, C. H. Schullery, Clyde H. Garner, R. L. Champion, F. O. Penn, Mary Binford, J. B. Chisum, J. B. Ayres, M. J. Cash, John McKinney, two guests, Mrs. Harvey Hayes and Mrs. F. E. Hoffman, and the hostess.

Plans to help serve lunch at the Baptist associational meeting here next Tuesday were made by Circle 4 in the home of Mrs. W. B. Murphy. Mrs. Murphy led a devotional based on Psalm 33:21, and Mrs. W. B. Murphy led in prayer.

It was announced that the next meeting would be devoted to a study of "Pioneer Women."

At the close of the afternoon the hostess served refreshments to Mesdames Frank Johnson, L. D. Hawkins, J. B. Hamilton, F. D. Gross, T. L. Anderson, J. F. McClard, J. C. Barnard, W. B. Henry, Oscar Baker, and three new members, Mesdames Dewey Priest, Alden Speer, and W. W. Harris.

Sterling Files Bill For Investigation

AUSTIN, March 25. (AP)—Gov. Ross S. Sterling today filed with the secretary of state the resolution passed by the legislature calling for appointment of a committee to investigate oil, gas, and mining conditions and make recommendations to the legislature for enactment of laws to conserve natural resources. The governor signed the resolution yesterday. The committee will be composed of the governor, attorney general, chairman of the railroad commission, four senators, and five members of the house.

The committee was charged with conferring with similar committees from other states relating to drafting a uniform code for oil, gas, and mineral production, states to be conferred with were Oklahoma, California, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kansas, and Wyoming.

The resolution was introduced in the legislature by Senators Tolford of Tyler and Parrish of Lubbock.

EDITOR SELLS SIRUBS

EL PASO, March 25. (AP)—Last October, Henry Ankley, El Paso newspaper editor, announced his intention of making El Paso the "cleander city." Today he established what was believed to be the world's record in sales of any kind of shrubs when he sold 5,000 cleanders in 75 minutes. Mayor-elect R. E. Sherman and Congressman Ewing Thompson bought the first plants.

William Nichols Dies At Farwell

PARWELL, March 25. (AP)—William Henry Nichols, 76, son of the late Capt. William Nichols, once wealthy owner of Matagorda Island off the Texas coast, was buried here yesterday.

His father, Captain Nichols, his mother and 1,800 slaves perished in a devastating storm and flood which swept the island in 1875, only the son and his nurse escaping.

Virtually penniless and unused to work, the son wandered over Texas many years, never realizing he was heir to a 200,000-acre estate which the State of Texas later sold for taxes.

Nichols lived in South Texas until 1898, then came to Farwell county.

To Wed Peer, 15 Sun Brings In Excellent Well

Sun Oil company's No. 2 Combs-Worley section 35, block 3, has been completed for an initial production of 400 barrels of oil and 9,000,000 feet of gas.

Pay was found from 2,926-35 feet. Total depth of the well is 2,936 feet. The well is an offset to the Mazda well which was completed in that pool a month ago, and is now producing about 350 barrels.

Johnson—

He said: "I had to tell my girl I was married." He asked me what I would do in a similar situation and I said I would catch a steamboat. "Adams picked me up after Tommy's (Miss Johnson) death. He just made a remark it was bad but it got him out of a tough spot."

The witness said he told Johnson about what Adams said.

While on the stand Johnson said he learned from friends and relatives that Adams had told people Elizabeth had gone with Robert Williams to a hotel in Austin three times.

Death Was Relief

"Adams told that on the night she lay a corpse," he said. He said Adams had talked about having improper relations with the girl. The father said a nurse told him Elizabeth had asked her about something to prevent her from becoming a mother.

"Johnny Pierce told me her death was a relief to Adams," Johnson asserted.

In substance, then, you learned that Adams, although married, and a palbearer at your daughter's funeral, had told about having improper relations with her. You learned that the girl was pregnant and that she committed suicide to escape humiliation," the attorney asked.

"Yes sir," Johnson replied.

"Yes sir."

Run-Down, Weak Nervous?

To have plenty of firm flesh and the ability to do a big day's work and feel "like a two-year old" at night, you must eat three good meals a day, relish your food and properly digest it. If you can't eat, sleep, cast your mind, you have Tan. The chance to do for you what Tan does for me.

Mrs. Fred Weston, of 7 E. 57th St., New York, New York, says: "Tan cured my stomach trouble completely after three years of suffering. I built me up to perfect health, with a gain of 27 lbs. I was 20 years old and I still enjoy the best of health."

Tan is wonderful for indigestion and constipation, gas, pain, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest your food, and builds strength and weight. It contains no mineral drugs; it is made of roots, bark and herbs, nature's own medicines for the sick. The cost is less than a dime. Get a bottle from your druggist. Your money back if it doesn't help.

Oklahoma Gas Tax Increased Cent

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 25. (AP)—Gasoline tax throughout Oklahoma was increased from four to five cents a gallon today when Governor Murray signed senate bill 236. Bearing an emergency clause the bill became law immediately.

The increased tax collections probably will be in effect at all filling stations by tomorrow. The added cent levy will be collected until Jan. 1, 1932.

Under terms of the bill $600,000 of the increased tax will go to the state treasury to reimburse it for money already spent for relief purposes. An additional $400,000 or as much thereof as is necessary, will be set aside for emergency relief purposes.

All over $1,000,000 collected from the one cent increase will go to the common school fund.

Business Said To Be Moving Upward

"We are apparently on the upward trend of business and economic conditions," said Julian Barrett in a talk before the Rotary club today. He explained a chart showing the trend of business since 1893, its depressions and good business periods.

The signs of both conditions and the causes were pointed out and the regularity in which they occurred was shown.

Frank Allison was in charge of the program, in which students of the Sam Houston school played several harmonica numbers.

Fred Wierker of Berger and a former member of the Pampa Rotary club, was a visitor today.

A number of Pampa Rotarians will go to Clarendon Friday for an inter-city meeting. Pampa club members will furnish the program.

Virgin Islanders Welcome Hoover And Colorful Parade Is Staged

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, March 25. (AP)—President Hoover came ashore on the Virgin Islands this morning through a line of boats decorated with flowers and flags to receive an ovation from a large crowd gathered on the docks.

Going immediately to the governor's house he entered the reviewing stand to watch a colorful and interesting parade.

As the president landed, guns at the naval stations boomed a salute and the president's flag was run up over the governor's house. Practically the entire population of the islands either watched or took part in the parade.

Dr. Paul M. Pearson, new governor of the Virgin Islands, held a conference with the president aboard the Arizona this morning before the party disembarked for lunch.

When the president came on deck he was greeted by scores of boats with diving boys circling the battleship. The boats and canoes were decorated with tropical flowers and the boys yelled "throw us some pennies!" Many of those aboard the warship did so but the president refrained.

Dr. Pearson was greeted by the governor's salute as he came aboard the warship, and the band played the "Star Spangled Banner."

After luncheon with Governor Pearson at the West Side Tennis club the president assisted at tree planting ceremonies and paid a visit to the colonial council chamber, where he received memorials, greetings and petitions from organizations of the people. Later the presidential party was taken on a motor trip to various points of interest on the island.

Four Prisoners Escape BEEVILLE, March 25.
