Railroad Traffic in Sharp Decline

AUSTIN, July 3. (AP)—The railroad as a medium of passenger transportation is steadily losing favor in the eyes of the public, according to a recent report of the Texas railroad commission, which showed that during the first quarter of 1931 passenger revenues declined 31.6 per cent under the revenue for the same period in 1930.

Increased use of the private automobile and inroads made by bus transportation were given as the major causes for the decline in rail passenger traffic.

Opposite views on the advisability of reducing passenger rates to meet competition of buses and private automobiles were entertained by railroad executives. Recently one railroad, the St. Louis-San Francisco, received authority from the railroad commission to return to its old rate, slightly in excess of three cents per mile.

It had operated several months on the basis of two cents per mile but claimed the reduction in the fare did not result in sufficient increase in business to warrant continuance of low rates. It was admitted the attractiveness of lower rates increased the volume of passenger traffic considerably but not enough to justify continued operations at two cents per mile.

The Texas and Pacific railroad, however, reported it had recovered approximately 85 per cent of its lost passenger business through use of the two-cent rate, with officials entertaining the hope that improved facilities for rail travel would permanently commit a major portion of the recaptured trade to the use of trains.

No figures were available on the success of the two-cent fare on the Texas-Mexican railroad. The Southern Pacific has the two-cent fare in operation on a short stretch of line to make the fourth Texas railroad experimenting with the practicability of the lowered fare.

While railroad passenger revenues showed a sharp decline during the first quarter, the decrease in freight revenues was almost as marked, being 26.9 per cent.

Texas Business Is Moving Upward

DALLAS, July 3. (AP)—Business was reflected as slowly but steadily climbing toward its once lofty pinnacle of plenty in the Federal Reserve district, according to the regular monthly review of the Dallas branch compiled June 15 and released today.

The report said construction activity, as evidenced by the valuation of building permits issued in principal cities in the district, showed a further gain of 9 per cent over the previous month, but was 16 per cent less than in May a year ago.

"Although mixed trends were visible, the volume of merchandise distribution at wholesale during May was fairly well sustained," the review stated. "Sales of groceries hardware and drugs were smaller than in the previous month, but those of dry goods and farm implements increased. The further gain in dry goods sales may be attributed in part to the fact that merchants bought sparingly early in the season and have found it necessary to make frequent orders to supply consumer demand. In the case of farm implements, the unusually large grain crops created a heavy demand for harvesting machinery.

"The review said collections in two reporting lines were larger than in the previous month, while they were smaller in three lines. "While the weather was almost too cool during the greater part of May to permit the proper development of row crops, growth since June 1 has been rapid and the condition of these crops at the present time may be considered generally satisfactory," the review said. "Planting operations are practically completed in all sections of the district and farmers have made rapid progress with the cultivation of crops. Fields generally are clean and in a good state of cultivation."

Two Arrested For Giving Tots Whisky

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 3. (AP)—Arrested yesterday by police on a complaint of 10 persons, Myrtle De Fer, 25, and Y. H. Brooks, 30, were held in the city jail today pending investigation by Mrs. Mabel Bassett, commissioner of charities and corrections, of charges that the two gave liquor to two small children of the woman.

The children are Idella, 5, and Jackie, 3. W. M. Turpin, who made one of the complaints, said the little girl fell five times while attempting to walk a block. He picked her up and carried her to his room, he said, where she became ill.

THE MELODY GIRL

Beryl Borden hopes a radio career will help her forget her hopeless love for Tommy Wilson, who is engaged to her half-sister, Irene Everett. Young Prentiss Gaylord pays attention to Beryl until Irene learns he is rich and tries to win him. She uses every wile to force a speedy proposal as she has promised to marry Tommy.

Tommy loses his position and Irene is glad of the chance to break their engagement for Prentiss has just proposed. In despair Tommy drinks heavily and joins evil companions. Fearing Beryl's anger at her deceit, Irene slips away and marries Prentiss. Then she telephones the news home.

Beryl develops throat trouble and the doctor advises rest. She catches cold while seeking Tommy to beg him to leave his bootlegging gang. Her throat becomes worse and she learns that her singing days are over. When Tommy realizes she has made this sacrifice to save him he reforms, gets another job and starts night courses to finish college.

Beryl is happy until Irene quarrels with Prentiss and comes home to get a divorce. Beryl's fears increase as she realizes that Irene is trying to win back Tommy's love. Mrs. Everett questions Irene about daily letters which she is receiving from another man.

The girl took it and put it on the stand by her bed without a second glance, waiting to be alone to read it.

Her mother assumed a firm pose and said heavily, "You won't like it, but I've made up my mind to ask you who writes those letters to you."

Irene was surprised, and showed it. "What?" she said, sitting up in bed and looking as though she couldn't quite believe what she had heard. Imagine her mother coming at her like that!

"It's a man, and I know it," her mother went on, with the bluntness of the timid suddenly becoming assertive. "You may think you're able to take care of yourself, but I'm your mother, and I want to know what's going on."

"Well, of all things!" Irene breathed, half-amused, half-angered. "I'm willing to believe that Gaylord is all to blame for your trouble with him." Mrs. Everett continued, "but I know you're going to be talked about if you start running around with Tommy Wilson in that car of his and you've no right to accept attentions from him while you're married to Gaylord. To say nothing of this other man!"

She pointed a finger to the letter on the stand, and Irene laughed, a bit nervously.

"Oh—Derry!" she said casually. "Why, he's only a kid, and I guess you know how kids are. They get foolish ideas and imagine they're going to feel the same for the rest of their lives, and all that, but it doesn't amount to anything."

"It could amount to something to a girl whose husband is getting a divorce from her," Mrs. Everett said ominously. "The boy lives in Oakdale, doesn't he?"

Irene lifted her eyebrows. "The postmark?" she said with an inflection that brought a flush to her mother's face.

"What if I did look at it?" she challenged. "Many a mother would have opened these letters and read them!"

"Yes?" Irene returned, "If it comes to that I'll leave."

Mrs. Everett was about to retort in kind when her husband's voice arose from below, calling for his breakfast. The interruption prevented what might have been a serious quarrel between mother and daughter.

When she was gone Irene seized the letter and tore it into bits wistfully reading it. Why couldn't Derry have some sense! She'd asked him to get out and go to work, and he'd come every day. For half a cent she'd not answer one of his letters again. But then, she told herself, "the young idiot would hotfoot it from Oakdale and spoil everything."

"Everything," was Tommy. Just the other evening before he'd started for school, Tommy'd said that flirts "ought to be shot." Of course she hadn't meant to encourage Derry but Oakdale hadn't been very entertaining. There were a lot of girls who were jealous because their most eligible young man had married outside of the town. They wouldn't let her feet at home. Some of them had attended boarding school in the east and thought if you hadn't done the same you couldn't amount to much. They let you know what they thought, too.

Worst of all had been the matrons who must have heard from the debutantes that Irene had never attended a finishing school. They tried patronizingly to induct her into their society for Gaylord's sake. These and the "stuffy old family friends" had driven her into a flirtation with Derry Meade, a nice-looking boy who could dance circles around anyone else the girls in Oakdale had to play with.

Derry hadn't much social background to boast of. He was, in fact, the only member of his family (a nice enough family, too) who'd ever seen the inside of the country club. He was welcomed because the girls liked him. Everyone liked him. He wasn't very earnest about anything, thought maybe he might set the world on fire if he knew how, but he didn't know how. And Derry was a fine dancer. He loved dancing.

Irene dazzled him. She was a newcomer as well as pretty and her clothes were ravishing.

The last day Irene and Prentiss spent in New York when she had shopped furiously had been delightful. The next day when they started for Oakdale it rained. Driving was difficult and Gaylord was preoccupied, puzzling over the best way to tell his father of his hasty marriage.

Irene, tired and cross, showed her irritation, and their day was spoiled.

Thinking back over the short period of her marriage Irene blamed Gaylord for every difficulty. He hadn't cared whether she enjoyed herself in his old home or not. All he could think of was the soap factory, and hunting. He left her whole days and nights at a time and came back with nothing but a couple of wild ducks to show for his time. What men could see in sitting for hours in a boat hidden in a bunch of seaweeds, Irene couldn't understand.

"Irene," her mother called up to her. "I've made some muffins. You'd better hurry down if you want them hot."

Irene put a dainty foot on the soft rug by her bed and sat with one knee swung across the other. She was still engrossed in the hardships of her life with Gaylord.

Of course her flirtation with Derry had been a mistake, but it wouldn't have amounted to anything if Gaylord hadn't found out about it. Irene hadn't forgotten what he said to her, his face white and furious. She continued to smart over his refusal to forgive her after she had "humbled" herself to ask him to do it.

She argued with him until seized with the conviction that he really wanted to be rid of her. She'd taunted him with this accusation and Gaylord had answered scathingly.

Then the conditions Gaylord had laid down! Irene wondered that she had agreed to them, but she had only to call to mind the vision of her husband's countenance as he declared himself to understand why she had done so.

She would marry Derry, Gaylord had done her the honor to take that for granted. It was tough on Derry, he unflatteringly admitted, but the boy had let himself in for it.

She would marry Derry, but she must not see the young man again until her separation from Gaylord was legal. On this condition alone would the young husband agree to get his divorce without scandal involving Derry's name.

Irene, shrinking from the thought of exposure before Oakdale society, consented to go away and allow Gaylord to divorce her without contest. There was promised to her a reasonable sum of money. Derry was required to remain in Oakdale where Gaylord could keep an eye on him.

For this last stipulation Irene was now thankful. And it wouldn't be so bad marrying Tommy now any having to wait for him to get somewhere. They could live with her family and she'd have all her own money for clothes. This would certainly be better than marrying Derry Meade and becoming a social outcast in Oakdale. No matter what status she might occupy there as the divorced wife of Gaylord Prentiss she would not be accepted by the town's elite as Mrs. Derry Meade. Derry could marry into the social set and be regarded favorably but if he married outside of it he would be lost along with his wife.

How could she ever have thought of marrying Derry? Irene was impatient with herself and her impatience put an end to her reverie. She put on her most becoming morning frock, changed it after lunch to her most fashionable afternoon dress and then, just before dinner, donned her finest informal evening gown.

Tommy arrived shortly before 6. He had hurried to get into clean clothes and come directly to the Everett home.

Beryl, an intensely miserable spectator, watched the couple drive away in Tommy's new car. She'd just reached home in time to change her knitted dress for a silk one, grab a bite of dinner, and then rush back to the store to make sandwiches for a boy's club.

Her heart was heavier than ever. Tommy had handed Irene into that car with the gestures of a nobleman assisting his lady fair into his chariot.

Irene praised the car and Tommy thought it was generous of her not to compare it with the motors the Prentisses owned.

Before they returned home from the short drive Irene had decided definitely that she would break with Derry Meade. She felt she had gained considerable ground with Tommy.

"When he said goodnight to me," she congratulated herself, "I'm sure he wanted to kiss me."

But the break with Derry did not come about as Irene had anticipated. Next morning she refrained from destroying Derry's letter unread and was glad she had. For the young man threatened to come to see her, thus breaking his promise to Gaylord. He declared he couldn't stand it any longer without at least a brief visit with her.

Irene was tempted to write him a long sberly letter but caution intervened. Derry was sure to come bounding on like a rubber ball at the end of a string. Then Tommy would know about him. Tommy wouldn't forgive her for this latest affair.

She had played with fire and now she must put out the embers, Irene told herself, at the same time making plans to accomplish this purpose.

War Veterans to Meet at Houston

AMARILLO, July 3. (AP)—War-scarred veterans of at least four different and probably more campaigns fought under the Stars and Stripes of this government, numbering more than 10,000, will assemble in Houston July 1, 2, 3 and 4, for the eleventh annual encampment of the Department of Texas of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Houston, at one time the seat of the department of Texas, was selected as a meeting place during the last state encampment at Amarillo, now department headquarters, over the bids of a number of other Texas cities.

Registration of delegates and various meetings of councils will take place July 1, and on the evening of that day, E. U. Bradley of Amarillo, state commander-in-chief, will be honored with a reception. On July 2, officers' reports will be made while later in the day, Paul C. Wolman of Baltimore, Md., national commander-in-chief of the organization, will address the assembly. July 3, Congressman Wright Patman of Texarkana will speak before the veterans, committee reports will be made, and in the evening the encampment ball will be held.

July 4, Darold D. Decoe, national senior vice commander-in-chief, will address the morning session from 9 until 10 o'clock; at 10 o'clock the next encampment city will be chosen, and from 10:30 o'clock until 12 m. nomination of officers will take place.

MONESTRY IS FIRED BY SPANISH MOB

CORUNA, Spain, July 2. (AP)—Surging out of a bull ring through the busiest section of the city, a mob of several thousand set fire to the San Jose monastery of the Capuchin order of Catholic priests yesterday.

They had met during the afternoon and listened to orators denouncing what they called the "re-entry on the religious orders into Spain".

As evening came on, they charged out of the ring in a rioting mass and swept to the monastery where some of them applied torches.

Tomorrow Will Be Another Gala Time for Mickey Mouse Clubites

MEMBERS WILL BE ALLOWED TO TAKE THEIR MOTHERS TO REX THEATER FOR 20 CENTS

Ken Maynard in Stirring Two-Gun Western Will Delight Youngsters.

Saturday will be a gala day at the Rex theater for members of the Mickey Mouse club.

As a special courtesy to club members, the sponsors have arranged for club members to bring their mothers as their guests to Saturday's program.

As usual club members will be admitted for five cents upon presenting their membership cards or displaying the official Mickey Mouse badge. Mothers of club members will pay only 20 cents.

Manager James Lucas of the Rex theater has arranged an unusual program featuring Mickey and Minnie Mouse in a delightful two reel comedy, also a thrilling western story with Ken Maynard in "The Two Gun Man".

Miss Katherine Vincent will also appear on the program presenting four interesting numbers. Jack Allison, club member, will entertain with his harmonica. Ernie Cella and Young Barber Kelly will delight the club members with a one-fall wrestling match. The Piggly Wiggly store will stage a potato rolling contest.

Saturday, July 11th, will be the expiration date of the present club and all children of Pampa will be admitted regardless of whether they belong to the club. W. H. Thomas of the Nehi Bottling company will have charge of the program. Five Nehi bottle caps and a nickel will be the price of admission to children who are not club members.

Sponsors of the Mickey Mouse club are as follows: Pampa News-Post, Rex theater, Dilley bakery, Creme-Top Drink stand, Waller Dental Clinic, Brownbilt Shoe store, Taylor Farm dairy, Canary Sandwich Shop, J. C. Penney company, Nehi Bottling company, Voss Cleaners, Piggly Wiggly stores.

Thirty Men Trying To Put Out Well

KILGORE, July 2. (AP)—Thirty men, under the direction of Sandy Fagan, miner from Picher, Okla., today continued to blast their way underground toward the burning Bell and Graddy No. 1 near here, in an effort to make contact with the well's casing and divert the flow of oil away from the flames.

The well caught fire last Tuesday night. Assisting Fagan in directing the tunneling work are George Patterson, Ben Patton and Bud Jones.

Thirty men are employed in the tunneling project.

BIG DONATION MADE
SHERMAN, July 3. (AP)—Judge Rice Maxey of Sherman, chairman of a Texas committee asking for funds for erection of a memorial for the late Former Senator Joseph Weiden Bailey of Texas, has announced contribution of $500 by the Red River bridge company of Denison.

Mr. Bailey, attorney for the bridge company, died suddenly in a court room at Sherman April 13, 1929, during a trial of one of the suits of the state of Texas against the bridge company.

Immigration decreed ELECTRA, July 3. (AP)—In order to obtain possession of a valuable estate consisting of farm land in Wichita county, cash, stocks and bonds left them by their uncle, the late Andrew Bauer, aged recluse who died here June 18, the children of Johann Keik, living in Germany, must come to America and live on the farm six miles northwest of Electra.

Lefors Nine Faces Phillips Outfit As Big Rodeo Opens

The sporting end of the old settlers reunion and free barbecue which was to start in Lefors this morning will be taken care of with three baseball games. This afternoon at 4 o'clock the first game of the celebration will be played between Lefors and the Phillips Oilers. Tomorrow afternoon at the same time the two teams will meet again.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock the Magnolia Mags and the Pampa Barbers will play a postponed game in their Gray-Carson baseball league schedule. The Mags must win to stay at the top of the league. A strengthened Barber nine will meet the Mags and a tough battle is predicted.

Batteries for the Lefors-Oilers games had not been named last night, managers deciding to keep their batteries a dark secret. The teams have met twice this season with a win to each. Manager Kirkpatrick of the Oilers said he was going to take both game, last night while Joe Duby, pilot of the Lefors nine, made the same prediction.

Phillips Petroleum company promptly met the new prices and other marketers were expected to follow suit.

E. S. Graves left yesterday for his home in Cleburne.

BROWNS HIKE STANDING TO FIFTH RUNG

Athletics See Hurlers Go Wild And Blow Up Four-Run Lead.

BY HUGH S. FULLETON JR., Associated Press Sports Writer
At home or away, inter-sectional games in the American league seem to bring about the same results for all the clubs except the St. Louis Browns. A complete round of games with the eastern clubs of the circuit playing in the west, which wound up yesterday, brought just one big change in the standing.

The Browns, who started their campaign at Sportsman's park against the eastern invaders in last place, finished it yesterday a good fifth in the standing while the Chicago White Sox dropped from fifth to eighth in the same time. St. Louis won 13 games and lost five while the White Sox had only five victories to 12 defeats.

The rest of the standing remained about the same with the eastern division pulling slowly ahead. Senators beat Browns Washington trouncing the Browns 13 to 5 in the final game yesterday, came home all square for the tour with eight victories and as many defeats.

The league leading Philadelphia Athletics took a 12 to 4 beating from Cleveland yesterday. The A's got a four-run lead on homers by Fox and Bishop then lost it when the wildness of their pitchers allowed the Indians to score 10 times in the sixth and seventh innings. The New York Yankees, aided by Babe Ruth's 19th home run, finished their tour with a 13 to 1 triumph over Detroit.

Tommy Thomas pitched Chicago to a final victory over Boston, holding the Red Sox to three hits while the pale hose won 2 to 0.

Robins Stang Out
In the National league, where a doubleheader today between St. Louis and Philadelphia winds up the inter-sectional campaign, the Brooklyn Robins stood out as much as the Browns in their home stand. Outlit 10-5 by Cincinnati yesterday, the Robins bunched three doubles for three runs in the sixth inning and defeated the Reds 4 to 3. The victory gave Brooklyn a record of 13 victories in 17 games against the western invaders.

Frank Hogan's home run and some expert fielding behind Fred Fitzsimmons enabled the Giants to reduce the St. Louis lead to 1-1-2 games with a 3 to 2 victory. The Chicago Cubs held their place three games behind the Giants by pulling out an 11-inning game with the Phillies by a 2 to 1 count.
