27 INJURED AT SAN ANTONIO
 SAN ANTONIO, July 22 (AP)—Automobile accidents in and near here yesterday and today sent 27 persons to hospitals, three of them with serious injuries. Most of the accidents were collisions. Seven members of one family were hurt when they were thrown to the pavement. Six mail carriers in a postal truck were injured in another crash.

THIRD ESCAPED CONVICT TAKEN IN MONTICELLO

MONTICELLO, Ark., July 22 (AP)—The last of three Texas convicts who sought safety in southeast Arkansas' dense woods was in jail today, trapped by his own hunger and the keen eye of a night marshal's wife.

The outlaw Harry Roberts, 54, was captured in a cave last night without a shot being fired. He had eluded for more than 24 hours a posse which killed one of his companions and captured another in a gun fight Monday.

Roberts, a pistol hidden beneath his short, came to the cave operated by Mrs. T. R. Scott, whose husband is night marshal here. While she served him sandwiches, Mrs. Scott noticed the bulge of the pistol.

She sent her 12-year-old son, Roby, for his father. Marshal Scott returned with State Trooper O. V. Whitted, and Roberts, surprised, surrendered without an attempt to draw his pistol.

He was placed in the county jail with James Rice, 30, who was captured Monday in the gun battle in which the third convict, W. H. Bybee, 26, was slain.

The three convicts escaped from the Texas state prison at Huntsville with 16 other prisoners June 15.

DROUGHT THREATENS IN CANADIAN WHEAT LANDS

OTTAWA, Ont., July 22 (AP)—Drouth again is stalking through the wheatlands of Canada's prairie provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, with human misery in its retinue.

Approximately 24,000,000 acres were sown with wheat in these provinces and in less seriously stricken Manitoba. Crop reports indicate today half the planting was a failure. More than 1,000,000 persons are affected directly and indications were that about 400,000 of them would need drouth relief.

Production which topped the half billion bushel mark in 1932 and then started a sickening drop may not amount to 200,000,000 bushels in this, the fifth successive season of drouth. Vast areas of western Canada, with southern Saskatchewan as the center, have suffered greatly. In Saskatchewan a broad strip of territory just north of the United States boundary has become virtually a desert.

The story for Alberta is less distressing. Optimistic estimators felt the crop there might not go far below one half of the 1928 yield of 171,000,000 bushels.

Some slight consolation remains in the increased price for grain this year.

ANOTHER 'SCOTTSBORO' NEGRO GOES TO TRIAL

DECATUR, Ala., July 22 (AP)—Another "Scottsboro" negro went to trial today, confronted by the state's unbroken string of ten convictions in the six-year-old case.

Imprisonment for 99 years was decreed yesterday for Andy Wright by the tenth jury to sit in judgment of one of the nine negroes accused of attacking two white women aboard a freight train.

Charlie Weems was called to trial today.

Jail Fugitives Caught at Dallas

DALLAS, July 22 (AP)—Bill Garrett, 25, and Henry Clay, 20, two of three Dallas men who broke from the Waxahachie county jail Monday, were police captives today.

Garrett was shot in the arm last night when officers closed in on him and Clay in a thickly-wooded section near Reinhardt. The pair surrendered without a show of resistance. Detective Jack Archer said he fired and hit Garrett when the fugitive ran.

Brackens, Huddleston, the third man sought for the Waxahachie break, remained at large. Officers believed he was in or near Dallas. A man who led officers to the pair's hideout under police orders was held on information he smuggled to the prisoners the pistol with which they made their break.

Washington Is Seething Over Political Conduct Since Robinson's Death

By RODNEY DUTCHER, Pampa Daily News Washington Correspondent. WASHINGTON, July 22.—There simply isn't any such thing as an Emily Post who could draw the line between courteous propriety and shrewd hypocrisy when it comes to the White House attitude toward election of a Senate majority leader to succeed Joe Robinson.

Other questions of good taste and hypocrisy arising since the death of the late Joe are easier to solve. For instance, the issue as to which side in the court fight first got busy behind the scenes to capitalize on the new situation.

The answer there is that each side got busy as it heard the news. The court plan opposition leaped into the backstage maneuvers no more quickly than administration forces. One side plotted attack and the other counter-attack.

Wheeler Drops His Guard. Then, take the question of which side has been most gauche and hypocritical in its public maneuverings.

Senator Burt Wheeler of Montana, opposition leader, then dropped his guard by beseeching Roosevelt to forget the court plan "lest he be defying God."

And out cracked the President's letter to Senator Barkley with its shrewd multiple effort to denounce those who lacked "decent respect" for Senator Barkley by implication for the Senate leadership, stiffen Roosevelt's own ranks and check the opposition's attempt to have Congress adjourned at once.

But then the President assured Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi that he was taking no sides in the fight between Harrison and Barkley for the leadership. This came at a time when Roosevelt agents were nearly killing themselves in Washington's preposterous summer heat, seeking to put Barkley over.

It is fantastic to assume that Roosevelt had not told these men he wanted Barkley and wanted him badly. His closest intimates pounded home the argument to senators that this leadership selection would decide the future of the New Deal and the Democratic party.

Profess to Be Neutral. The Democratic opposition had no illusions. It lined up against Barkley almost to a man, spreading the word that victory for Harrison would mean the end of the court bill. Everywhere this fight became to be regarded as the greatest test of the Roosevelt administration to date, and especially a real test for these senators who had kept insisting they were liberals but couldn't stomach the court plan. (Harrison always has been considered conservative and Barkley more than mildly liberal.)

And, yet, in the face of all this,

VACATION DIARY

BY JEAN SEIVWRIGHT

Copyright, 1937: NEA Service, Inc.

Chapter VII
Saturday: I tremble when I think what a different story I might be making in my diary tonight. . . but thank Heaven, Peter's alive. Luncheon was almost over, and there were still a few guests in the tearoom when a sudden storm blew up. As we scurried about to close the windows, a woman cried, "Oh, a boat's overturned on the lake!"

Instantly there was a stampede to windows and doors. I rushed to one of the French windows which had blown open, then suddenly thought of Peter as I glanced toward the lake.

"Has anyone seen Peter?" I cried. "I think he's with Cal in his work-shop." Tess said, so grabbing up an old coat I'd left behind the service door I rushed out into the storm. Such rain! I thought I'd be drowned before I reached the barn where Cal does his repairing.

"Is Peter here?" I called, pushing the door open.

"No, Miss Joy ain't seen him since morning . . . said he was going to play with Tad . . . he'll be all right, I reckon."

"But a boat's turned over . . . between here and Serene Shores and maybe Peter . . . I dashed out into the storm . . . maybe Peter was in the boat."

The wind had risen, and with lowered head I hurried along the shore path. At last, almost exhausted, I rested for a moment against a hemlock tree. Brushing my dripping hair aside, I looked ahead . . . a crowd of people were on the beach . . . I could hear the sounds of excited talking . . . then I saw someone jump from a boat.

Pulling the coat over my head and shoulders I battled once more against the storm . . . then above the roar of the wind I heard someone cry, "The boy's all right." A moment later my path was blocked, and a voice I knew well exclaimed, "Then it was Peter." Roger stood before me.

"You're sure he's all right?" I demanded, as I attempted to pass him.

"Of course he is. Coyne rescued him and Mrs. Coyne asked me to race along to The Golden Anchor and say the boy was all right; but I never dreamed it was Peter till I recognized you. What a fool I am to keep you standing here . . . you're drenched to the skin . . . better get home at once."

"I'm all right . . . I must go to Peter."

"Not till you change," said Roger and he turned me around. For one precious moment I thought he was going to take me in his arms . . . that our differences would be forgotten. Then he said, "I guess you'll find your way home all right now," and left me.

Tremendous excitement at the tea-house when they learned that Peter had almost lost his life . . . telephone service resumed half an hour after I returned. Mrs. Coyne assuring me my small brother was none the worse for his unexpected dip in the lake. . . that just as soon as the storm abated Mr. Coyne would bring him home.

Storm went as swiftly as it came . . . terribly rushed at dinner . . . noticed the two strange men again seated at a table near the door. They must have slipped in when I was attending to Miss Pegler's party. She gave a dinner for some of her friends this evening. Fixing another table in the vicinity I heard one say to the other: "Guess we're wasting our time here . . . think that tip was all wrong." Later in the evening, I caught another fragment of conversation: "He's just the sort of fellow who'd fall for something like that." Couldn't get these remarks out of my mind, all evening . . . felt troubled. Must tell Cal about these men . . . ask if he knows who they are . . . he should . . . keeps tab on visitors . . . what a swell newspaper gossip he'd make!

Came to bed rather early. Had just started to undress when Tess rushed into the room.

"You can't go to bed at this hour . . . it's only half past nine . . . hurry up . . . put on your best duds . . . Dick Pegler's downstairs waiting for you."

"Oh, I don't want to go out. After this hectic day all I want is to lie in bed and read."

"That's ridiculous. Joy. You've got to go . . . the gang's going in the station wagon, but you're going in Dick's gorgeous roadster . . . gee, I'd like a ride in that."

"Well, why don't you go with him?"

Tess shrugged her shoulders. "Jimmy didn't like my dancing with him the other night . . . reckon if he saw me drive up to Jerry's (that's where we're going tonight in a swanky car like Dick's we'd have a flareup."

"Well, I suppose I'll have to go," I exclaimed as I rose.

Determined I might as well be gay, I put on my prettiest frock, and slipping my tweed coat over it, went down to Dick.

We danced . . . sat in the car, and looked at the moonlight on the water . . . it was a perfect night . . . it would have been wonderful if I had been with the man I loved . . . but evidently he's gone out of my life. Dick asked me to marry him. I laughed.

"It's no joke, Joy," he said. "I've been crazy about you ever since we met. Please tell me you'll marry me?"

"I can't, Dick . . . I don't love you."

"You will, my darling," he said, and he told me all the wonderful things he would do for me . . . I refused to listen to his pleadings . . . begged him to take me home.

"Then you'll give me your answer tomorrow?"

"It won't be any different from what I've told you," I insisted when we finally started for the tea-house.

Monday: Peter still very repentant. Declares he'll never touch any of the boats again . . . really hadn't the heart to scold him . . . so glad to have him all safe and sound. Took Tad and Peter out on the lake today, for my small brother is crazy about boats. Was surprised to see how many people recognized him. Peter's a friendly sort of little chap. Serene Shores, which we passed, is really a lovely resort . . . wonder if those men are staying there . . . must speak to Cal about them . . . we've been so busy had no time to hear the latest from him. Too bad Mrs. Fenwick appeared when he started to tell me about Jigger."

"Taking a short cut through the woods after we had set Tad safely ashore near the cottage. His parents are occupying for the summer, we overtook a couple of men."

"Tough-looking characters," I thought and was surprised when I heard Peter say, "Got my puppy yet, Jigger?" as we passed them.

"No, sorry, but you'll sure get it one of these days."

A guilty look came into Peter's eyes, and he turned his head away . . . then I remembered about his nightmare . . . perhaps after all it wasn't a nightmare . . . Dick had made him promise not to tell anyone about something he had seen or heard. The child hadn't but the secret evidently burdens his mind.

Well, perhaps it's not a secret to me any longer . . . I'm convinced now that something's going on between Jigger and Dick . . . wish I'd paid more attention to what Tess said . . . walking with Jimmy she came on a parked car . . . heard men's voices, arguing . . . then Dick declared, "You'll get it when I'm married."

Wilmer Allison Resumes Winning Ways in Tourney

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 22 (AP)—The Longwood Bowl tennis tournament entered its quarter-finals today with only one of its two former winners and none of its three Murphys.

While third seeded Dick Murphy, the Massachusetts Littel and 1933 bowl victor, was bowing to Norbert Burgess of Chicago, the Murphy twins from Chicago, William and Chester, were being driven out of the tourney by second seeded Bob Harman of Oakland, Calif., and Paul Guibord of Melrose, who was rated seventh in the draw.

Top ranking Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, who can retire the eighth bowl Longwood has put up in 45 years with another victory, defeated Howard Stephens of St. Louis, in straight sets to move against Vernon Marcum of St. Petersburg, Fla., in the round of eight. The other survivors were Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Gilbert Hunt of Washington, and Alfred Jarvis of Tenafly, N. J.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan had to come from behind against Mrs. Tokuko Nakano of Tokio, former Japanese champion, to lead the seeded stars into the fourth round. Also qualifying for today's women's singles play were Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mrs. Bonnie Miller Blank of Haven Pederson of Stamford, Conn.

Mrs. John Van Ryn of Austin, Tex., Mrs. Maynard M. Johnson, Jr., of Boston, Norma Taubele of New York, Hope Knowles of Philadelphia and Mrs. Bonnie Miller Blank of Los Angeles.

To Those Who Have Inquiring Tastes

COORS is the ANSWER

Those whose tastes are sensitized to the finer flavor tones are particularly partial to Coors Export Lager. There are many u-m-m-s and a-a-hs and much lip smacking over the smooth, full-bloom mellowness of this thoroughly aged brew. Coors, they say, combines to a pleasant degree the enticing flavor of Bohemian hops with the rich, rare body fullness of Coors own barley malt extract. Then too, they sense that clean sparkling taste that comes from the chemically perfect Rocky Mountain spring water used exclusively in its brewing. If your taste is exploring the broad field of American brews for the utmost in beer perfection it will find what it seeks in . . .
