DALLAS "BUILDS" IN REAL SENSE

No better example of real city building in the face of obstacles exists in Texas than that of Dallas and her Trinity river reclamation project involving millions of dollars.

This unsightly, low-lying area is being dried up, raised, and made into a fine industrial district, zoned by ordinance as to type and character of industry. The project is described in the Texas Weekly as follows:

"In order to provide her future industries with proper quarters, Dallas has moved the bed of a river an average distance of one mile. The Trinity river, usually a shallow winding stream, separates Dallas from its suburb, Oak Cliff. At most times of the year it is a narrow river with small flow, but during the flood seasons, leaves its banks and covers a large area. For this reason there has always existed an unsightly, unsanitary valley from 6,000 feet to two miles wide, dividing the two parts of the city, and serving as a barrier to growth of the business district westward. This great expanse of land, comprising almost 10,000 acres, was hardly worth as much as common farm land, although a great part of it was within ten minutes walking distance of the most valuable land in the city.

"The straightening and confining of the river within levees, with the resultant reclamation of this area, was first suggested to the city by the late George E. Kessler in 1910. Not until 1927, however, were funds for the purpose made available. On Dec. 15 of that year the efforts and planning of 17 years culminated in the voting of three huge bond issues, totaling $13,039,500. The gigantic project was to be a co-ordinated undertaking in which the city of Dallas, County of Dallas, and a body of 1,300 individual property owners were joined. The city's share of the expense was set at $3,200,000, that of the county at $3,339,500, and the property owners, incorporated into a drainage district, pledged $6,500,000. This last figure covers all cost of erection of the levees and other actual reclamation work. The property owners later pledged an additional $2,500,000 bringing their total to $9,000,000. Adding to these figures the expenditure of the railroads and utilities in the district, $5,500,000, gives the huge total of $20,044,500, which the completed undertaking will cost.

"At the present time the project is about 95 per cent completed and will be finished about Jan. 1, 1932. When completed, the river will be confined within a straight channel from 2,000 and 3,000 feet wide, between 25 miles of levees. The average height of the levees is 30 feet. They are 156 feet wide at the base and 6 feet at the crown. The old channel will be filled in with dirt removed by dredging of two immense turning basins between the levees. The job requires the moving of 24,000,000 cubic yards of dirt, the equivalent of 18,000,000 wagon loads.

"This project is a unique one in that it is the first large industrial district in the heart of any American city to be zoned and plotted exclusively for manufacturers. Never before has such a section been laid out so close to the center of a city, where they could build plants free from present or future entanglements. No matter how the city may grow, their plants will be free from the encroachment of residential districts, which condition has so seriously affected industrial plants in the large cities of the East. And yet, at the same time, they are easily and quickly accessible to laborers which is impossible for those far on the outskirts. It is only a ten minutes walk from the intersection of Industrial boulevard and Commerce street to the center of downtown Dallas.

By the proper zoning of so-called nuisance industries, which emit excessive noise, odor, and the like, the manufacturer is also secured against plants of a character which might interfere with his best interests. Thus safety from all future troublesome entanglements is assured."

OIL

Some experts believed the pool's production would not exceed 70,000 barrels on daily average from now until the end of the month.

Five important producers still were out of the shut-in line-up—Continental Oil, Century Petroleum, Champion Refining, Sinclair Oil and Gas, and Wilcox Oil and Gas. A few smaller producers, with one well each, still are producing in quantities at slightly more than the 22-cent price but their crude will not be a factor in the general situation.

TULSA, Okla., July 22. (AP)—A late meeting of mid-continent oil producers was called today for next Monday night in Tulsa to consider plans for spreading the shut down movement that has resulted from low crude prices.

being started by compressed air. Combustion is caused by the mixing of fuel-oil spray with air heated to 400 degrees centigrade by high compression in the cylinders.

Broken electrical connections thus removed as a fire risk that will not burn even when touched with a lighted match.

The technical difficulties overcome in trimming a Diesel engine down to a practicable weight for air service may be gathered from a comparison of a new motor with an ordinary marine Diesel, 2700-horsepower motorship carries about 800,000 pounds of motor; an airplane powered with four of the new Diesel engines would develop 2800 horsepower with but 7,000 pounds of motor.

BRIDGE

tie snapper expected it to have no trouble there.

"Tom foolery,"

The history of the free bridge has been a tumultuous one. When the hands of Texas were tied from opening it, Governor Murray of Oklahoma said he was willing to do the work and Governor Sterling replied he felt the Oklahoma executive was exceeding his jurisdiction. Rangers were sent to keep the Texas end closed and more statements and answers followed. Governor Murray finally suggested, presumably in jocular mood, that Texas and Oklahoma women meet at the bridge-heads and have a quilting and gossiping bee. Their presence, said Murray, would cause the opening soon enough. Governor Sterling called the statement "tom foolery."

The senate action was rapid. It took five minutes to accept the favorable committee report, engross the bill, suspend the rules, put it on third reading and final passage. All this occurred while most members were reading the morning papers and many did not look up except to answer "aye." One amendment was adopted, but the committee of the legislature did not admit the company had a "just or valid claim."

Senator George Puri of Dallas was the member who voted "nay." He did not say what his objection was.

Want Road Built

GAINESVILLE, July 23. (AP)—A citizens' committee today planned to call upon Oklahoma to do what Texas has thus far failed to do, furnish road machinery to expedite the work of completing 1.6 miles of highway in order that traffic may proceed across the free bridge over the Red river near here.

Yesterday a Cooke county road crew with the expenses of their project insured by the private subscriptions of Gainesville business men began work on the uncompleted stretch of highway.

The citizens' committee planned to call on Oklahoma officials in Oklahoma today and ask them to lend them road machinery to be used in the completion of the road.

mit oil producing agencies to cooperate in production, processing, and marketing oil and its products. The cooperative organization would be exempted from the provisions of the anti-trust laws and laws against monopoly. The bill was in line with a suggestion made yesterday by R. C. Holmes, president of the Texas company, that formation of a large cooperative organization would be an effective method to control oil production in East Texas and other fields.

Most of the senate's morning was spent in recess, after it had passed a bill designed to end the Red river bridge dispute, but the committee investigating the oil session resumed its session shortly before noon.

Brings His Charts

E. V. Foran, the expert employed by the central proration committee, returned with his charts to go further into the waste situation as he saw it, in East Texas and elsewhere.

Senator Tom DeBerry, in an examination of the witness, indicated he did not look with favor on the main conservation bill pending that having administration sanction.

During the questioning, the senator once told Foran:

"I'm trying to get you off your theoretical pedestal. I want to know as a practical matter whether you can accomplish your ideal (conservation) without putting the field (East Texas) under unit control. I'm not trying to lecture you. If under this bill you did not get close enough to your ideal would you then favor operating the field as a unit under one manager?"

"I don't care to theorize on that," said Foran.

Well, under the conservation ideal wouldn't you have to accept the common purchaser theory?"

"I have not studied that."

Denies Monopoly

"If the oil companies should be mercenary—and I am not saying they will—and you are going to make them take ratably, don't you then practically make a monopoly?"

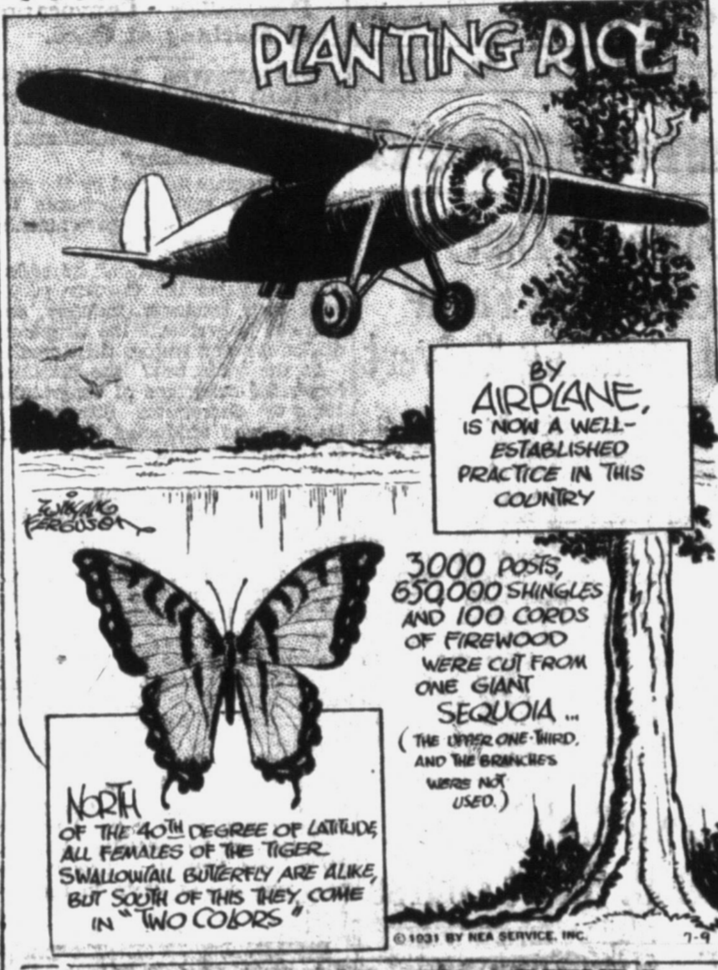

"No, sir, I do not believe so. I am unfamiliar, sir, with the workings of the pipeline law."

"Well," said De Berry, "if you were me and you were satisfied that to accomplish conservation you sold out the little guy lock, stock, and barrel, wouldn't you scratch your head a little?"

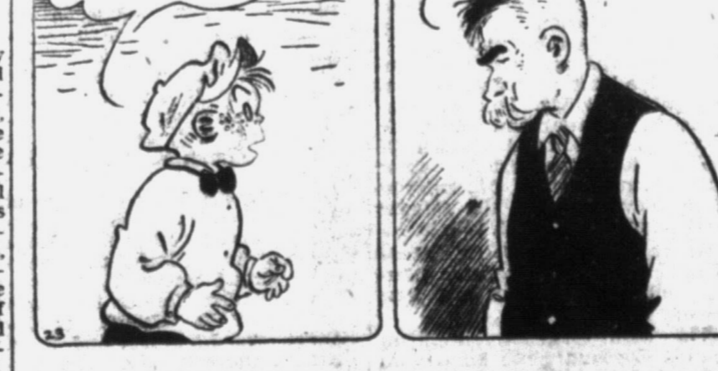

"I do not believe it would constitute a monopoly."

While the committee went ahead to accomplish conservation a bill, for introduction, probably tomorrow, to repeal the 39th legislature's statute which enables foreign com-

MOON OF DELIGHT

by Margaret Bell Houston

SYNOPSIS: Because Jason Divitt knows she was a stowaway on the ship where Umberto, his employer, had found her, Juanita Basara's fear of exposure keeps her a prisoner in his New Orleans gambling house. Divitt and his wife, Molly, are kind to her, and the dwarf, Gabrea, Conchita's son, nearly kills Umberto when he forces his embraces on Juanita. The Turkish disguise she wears as the sells cigarette has intrigued Adrian Fouche, who persuades his friend, Eric Ledbetter, who had lived in Turkey, to speak to her in Turkish. In their party are Kirk Stander, and his grandmother, Mrs. Belasie. As Ledbetter jests with the veiled Juanita, a newcomer, Senor Basara, of Mexico City, joins the group. Juanita, frightened, is about to run.

Chapter 8
A KISS IN TIME
The man beside Adrian Fouche caught Juanita's hand, babbling in Juanita left a kiss on Ledbetter's astonished cheek. The strange tongue. He turned to the newcomer.

"I was just saying, señor," he observed, "that she is beautiful as an hour and fragrant as the jasmine flower, and in spite of loyalty to the noblest sheik in New Orleans, I could love her to distraction. This is the prologue to the raising of the curtain on the most glorious spectacle this side of the Bosphorus."

Senor Basara smiled, his glance leaving Juanita an instant and traveling about the room. Juanita lowered her face, closing her eyes. Ledbetter began again his soft harp. Adrian spoke now in a fiery aside.

"I didn't bring you here to hold her hand and make love. I brought you to make a date for me. You said you could pull off her veil in a way that looked accidental. Now do it."

Illness shot through Juanita. Ledbetter had released her hand and she drew from him, her eyes encountering Kirk Stander's. Stander had been dividing his interest between their by-play and Mrs. Belasie's game. He was looking at Juanita now, smiling friendly. The exchange of glances lasted only an instant, yet a swift courage had entered Juanita when she looked again at Ledbetter. She had felt that she would fall if she tried to move. She knew now that she could not fall before those friendly smiling eyes. She could move now—she could get away. But there was Divitt watching her.

Quickly her hand moved over her tray. She selected a rose and, bending over Ledbetter, thrust it thru his buttonhole, then lightly, swiftly, left a kiss upon his astonished cheek—a kiss through the mesh and spangles of her veil, yet nevertheless, a kiss.

She was gone. Molly was smiling at her where she stood in front of the cashier's cage.

"Honey, that was great. Eric Ledbetter's got a million, and this is his first look-in. I thought for a minute that you were going to frost him. What's the matter, dear?"

"I'm ill. I can't stay."

Molly saw the dilated eyes, the hands that trembled at the edge of the tray. She set the tray on a table.

"Go to your room. I'll send Conchita to you."

Juanita slipped out a side door into the court. Juanita stood a dazed instant leaning against the cool stucco of the house, then she stumbled up the dark stair and into her room, locking the door, taking off her veil so that she could breathe. For a deadly instant her heart had stopped. Now it was beating in great beats that seemed to push against each other. Conchita came to the door and she bade her go away.

"A lit' orange flower water," pleaded Conchita. "He will cure anything."

Juanita drank the water. "Lay on de bed," ordered Conchita. "He

Church's Trouble Is Being Discussed

VATICAN CITY, July 23. (AP)—Conflicts between the church and state in Italy, Spain, Mexico, and Lithuania were discussed today by Pope Pius with 20 cardinals of the Curia summoned hurriedly to a meeting which took on the importance of a special controversy.

The session, in the Vatican library, lasted nearly three hours and was conducted in the "greatest secrecy. When it was over no statement was issued.

It was believed the situation in Spain was particularly prominent in the discussion on the basis of a report by the cardinal-archbishop of Tarragona, who flew from Barcelona to see the pope and returned to Spain by airplane yesterday.

It was assumed the pontiff gave the cardinals a detailed account of the situation here, in Mexico, Spain, and Lithuania and in some quarters it was believed the cardinals had been called into conference because of recent criticism in Italy that the

Lesters Are Home From Huntsville

J. L. Lester and daughters, Misses Macie and Hester, Ella, recently made a trip to Huntsville to accompany Mrs. Lester and another daughter, Miss Retha Lester, to their home in Pampa. Mrs. Lester and daughter have been attending Sam Houston State Teachers college, Huntsville, during the summer term. The family returned Tuesday evening.

Mrs. G. H. Winslow of Pasquon county, N. C., raised 299 chicks out of 306 hatched.

Evening Sandals

Featured among the exhibits at the recent New York Shoe and Fashion show were two sandals for evening wear made by the new compo method which does away with the use of tacks, staples and stitches. This method moulds the sole onto the upper permanently with a new chemical adhesive and makes the slipper not only more comfortable to wear, but also contributes considerably to the style element as it banishes the edges of the soles which sometimes develop ragged fringes.

The top sandal is of white plush with incrustations of embossed gold kid and the one at the bottom is of green suede with gold kid trimmings.

Even a business depression may have its advantages. It has caused a decrease in both marriages and divorces. While depression may, in rare instances, be a real stumbling block to Dan Cupid, it usually eliminates only those marriages which are hasty and unstable.

From Washington comes the following A. F. report. "The matrimonial market, riding the crest of a bullish movement from 1928 to 1929, in which marriages increased 4.2 per cent, fell off 8.5 per cent in 1930.

"Divorces decreased 4.2 per cent last year, falling from 201,468 in 1929 to 191,630, as compared to the 1928 marriage total of 1,232,550, and 1930's 1,128,180 wedded couples.

"Nevada had the highest divorce rating, 38.67 per 1000 population, but she also led the country with 67 marriages per 1000, while the national marriage average was only 5.2 per thousand.

"There were 5.9 marriages in the United States for each divorce."

When a woman's name is mentioned as being in radio the questions immediately arise, "Does she sing?" "What instrument does she play?" or "What part does she en-

"MOTHER OF BELGIANS" HAILED AS HER DAY DRAWS NEAR; SHINES IN PROFESSION, SPORTS

BRUSSELS, July 23. (AP)—Elizabeth, Queen of the Belgians, will be 55 years old on July 25.

Her birthday celebration will be purely a family affair, in the strictest intimacy, but that will not prevent the nation from taking part in its own way, for she is "Mother of the Belgians."

She was hardly known to the outer world before 1914. She made history the day she said: "A curtain of steel has been lowered between us former countrymen (she is Bavarian by birth) and myself."

Is Trained Nurse A trained nurse since the day she assisted her father, Duke Charles-Theodore, the regent, the queen turned the royal castle of Laxen into a war hospital where she personally dressed the wounds of the first war victims from Liege. She remained a Red Cross worker throughout the greater part of the war.

In those days she was called "Queen of Charities" and she has retained that title, as well.

Fights Sickness Today she is a frequent visitor of hospitals, and is deeply interested in the fight against tuberculosis, cancer and similar plagues. Founder of many nurseries for poor and destitute children, Queen Elizabeth is always to be found wherever human beings are suffering or in distress.

Hardly does news of a mine blast or railway disaster reach the palace than the queen rushes to the scene, nursing the injured, encouraging the rescuers and comforting the families of the victims.

Last winter she not only visited the homes of the poison gas victims, but immediately organized a committed for scientific investigation on the cause.

Centenarians, mothers of twins, golden-wedding parties are not forgotten by the queen and many can boast some royal souvenir.

Plays Violin Fond of music, the queen is a first class violinist and has played since she was a child. She is especially fond of Bach, Brahms and Max Schilling's compositions. She was especially friendly with Eugene Ysaie, the great Belgian violinist who died two months ago.

She encourages young musicians by inviting them to play at the palace and by instituting the Elizabeth Foundation in 1929 to publish and promote the work of Belgian composers and to help talented artists travel and provide them with instruments.

Because of her scientific training conversation on scientific topics does not alarm her.

Loves Sports Queen Elizabeth despite her frail constitution, is a modern woman. Born in the shadow of the Bavarian Alps, she has a natural liking for winter sports. She is also a good golfer and tennis player.

She never forgets that smart dressing is part of a queen's job and follows modern fashions as closely as her rank permits. But she never had her hair bobbed.
