CLAIM LIST OF JURORS ALTERED

National Figures in Railroad Circles Here for Trip Over New Line

Get ready for something good.

As to Proof
As proof that it will be good, we have the word of Mrs. Glen Pool. The event is the spring style revue to be presented by the Business & Professional Women's club Wednesday evening at the LaNora theater.

Customary
It is the custom this week to compare all entertainment with the Lions revue-minstrel. Mrs. Pool is doing this. She says the style revue will "beat the Lions" at entertainment.

More of the Same
But Mrs. Pool has reason for her forecast about the style revue. No. 1: "We will have more good looking girls than the Lions had." We questioned her more closely. Note that she didn't say more beautiful girls, meaning quality of pulchritude, but more as to number, inferring equal quality with more quantity.

Ouch!
As her reason No. 2, Mrs. Pool admits that, "while we do not have as many men, our men are better looking." (Remembering the back row at the minstrel, we ignored that one!) And if this reason is of any interest to feminine readers, make the most of it.

And Some Music
Reason No. 3: John Sturgeon, with the minstrel off his mind, will sing some "powerful good" songs. No. 4: There will be a better looking tap dancer than the Lions had. In fact, she is the best looking tap dancer in this section—and how she can tap! No. 5: R. E. Smith is going to give Cuba a fit on that tuba of his; he blows a "wicked horn."

Better Than Eddie.
Reason No. 6: "We have a clever comedian, one Hen-

THE WEATHER

WEST TEXAS: Cloudy with snow in north and rain or snow in southeast portion tonight and Tuesday; colder tonight, freezing in southeast portion. Protect livestock.
OKLAHOMA: Probably snow tonight and Tuesday; somewhat colder tonight. Protect livestock.

AND A SMILE
SHANGHAI (AP)—A nudist cult promoter might do right well here without much sales talk. Utilitarian Chinese, who customarily wear winter clothes in summer and vice versa, have been so hard hit by war and floods many have had to hock both sets and now are a quantity.

HUGE RANSOM NOW DEMANDED

FEAR MEASURE WOULD HINDER PRESENT CASE

ASKING OF RANSOM IS DENIED IN NEWEST VERSION

MISINFORMATION GIVEN

JOHNSON QUESTIONED AGAIN; NEW CLUES FOLLOWED

SIDNEY, N. Y. March 7 (AP)—A letter to Colonel Lindbergh demanding a ransom of $500,000 for the return of his baby and proposing a meeting with his representative at the Cross Trail restaurant near Mansfield, Pa., tonight, was intercepted by New York state police.

Elmira. Sergeant George Hofer of the Sidney barracks told The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7 (AP)—The senate judiciary committee today postponed action on a bill to make interstate kidnaping a federal offense punishable by death, believing that to act on it now would endanger safe return of the Lindbergh baby.

For more than an hour the committee discussed the Lindbergh case and the pending bill by Senator Patterson (R., Mo.) and concluded that top as on it now would frighten the kidnapers, add to the agitation and publicity and work against the child's safe return.

TRENTON, N. J., March 7 (AP)—Governor Harry Moore today told newspaper men today that he was powerless to grant immunity to the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby but added that he would be willing to withdraw the police if Col. Charles A. Lindbergh should request it.

NORWALK, Conn., March 7 (AP)—Jimmy Bistany, owner of a restaurant on the East road between Stamford and Norwalk, reported a Norwalk police today he had sold a bottle of milk at 11:30 p. m. Tuesday to a man accompanied by a woman and baby.

Bistany told police the man, who was riding in a green (Chrysler) coupe, answered newspaper descriptions of Henry (Red) Johnson of New York, J. J. questioned in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

By FRANCIS JAMIESON
HOPEWELL, N. J., March 7 (AP)—Captain J. J. Lamb of the state police announced today that no demand for ransom has ever been made for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby and that neither the Lindberghs nor the police have ever had any communication from the kidnapers.

This statement was in direct contradiction of information given out by investigating forces at the Lindbergh estate last week that a note had been pinned to the nursery window still demanding ransom and threatening harm to the baby if the text of the note was made public.

It was reported that this note demanded $50,000 for the baby's return but this was never officially confirmed.

Capt. Lamb made this announcement today at the morning press conference at which he replied to a long list of prepared questions.

The list of questions and answers follows:
Will the police say officially whether there was a demand for ransom in the note left by the kidnapers?

The family and police both deny there was a note left demanding ransom.

No Note Known
Will the police reveal the contents of the note?
Police know of no note or contents.

How much ransom was demanded?
Same answer as number one.

Did any note instruct Colonel Lindbergh to announce Spitalo and Bits as intermediaries four days after?

Merchants to Meet Tonight

HE RESTS

Travis Lively Will Preside Over the Trade Relations Session at B. C. D.

Merchants were urged this morning to attend a meeting to be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the city hall auditorium. Trade relations between Pampa and residents of this territory will be discussed. George W. Briggs, manager of the Board of City Development, said.

A program for this evening was planned this morning by the committee in charge of sales day plans. Travis Lively, chairman of the committee, will preside at the session tonight.

Houston's Night Clubs Are Raided

HOUSTON, March 7 (AP)—After two of Houston's most popular night clubs had been raided while the evening's gaiety was at its height, four men associated with them were charged with possession of liquor and maintenance of a nuisance.

Those charged were August Boyesen, manager, R. E. Gasnoway, floor manager, and Frank Purdy, cashier, all of the Old Town cafe, and Ely Kaplan, proprietor of Kaplan's sea food resort.

Federal prohibition officers conducted the raids. Small quantities of liquor were taken from guests and the club's ginger ale stocks were confiscated. No liquor was found in the clubs' stocks.

Huge Sum Being Spent to Watch Kidnaping Case

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 7 (AP)—It's costing thousands daily to supply the world's appetite for tidbits of the hunt for the Lindbergh baby.

Metropolitan newspapers and press associations pushed their forces to the scene, until now there is an army of close to 200 men checking every rumor, tracking every lead.

The maintenance of these men is costing about $4,000 a day. In addition, every 24 hours there is an added cost of approximately $1,200 in telegraph tolls. Fort-three wires, operated by the two major telegraph companies, are carrying from Trenton, New Jersey, and Princeton a load of 350,000 words a day on the search.

Photoregraph expeditions and newspaper news planes at an airport near Hopewell to rush out latest pictures. The planes are available for flight to New York constantly.

Broadcasting companies estimate they are spending $7,500 a day to put developments on the story on the air. Four newsreel companies have "sound crews" here to cover the story for motion picture audiences. Based on the figures of a leader of one of the crews, the combined expense of the four companies is $2,000 daily.

Foul Play Is Suspected in Fire

SALINA, Kas., March 7 (AP)—Suspecting foul play, officers today pushed their investigation of a fire which destroyed the farm home of John Baxter, 48-year-old bachelor, near Kipp last night and left in the ruins two charred bodies.

One of them was identified as that of Baxter; the other was not identified. Dr. S. T. Baldes, coroner, said he believed it that of a man.

Officers said a shotgun which was always in the Baxter home and a gold watch could not be found in the ruins. Investigators said it was impossible to determine if the bodies bore marks of violence.

PRESIDENTS OF 3 SYSTEMS ON TOUR OF WORK

FINISH BY JULY FIRST IS SURE, ACCORDING TO BUDD

HE'S PROUD OF PAMPA

"DOES HIM GOOD" JUST TO SLEEP HERE, HE ADDS

The Fort Worth & Denver is going to set a record for rapid railroad building in the construction of the line from Childress to Pampa. Ralph Budd of Chicago, president of the Burlington system, said this morning before he and high ranking officials of the Burlington, Great Northern and Northern Pacific, left Pampa on an inspection tour of the road.

Mr. Budd reiterated a previous announcement that the road would be completed around July 1 of this year or by the time wheat harvest opens. A branch line of the Denver on the south plains was constructed quicker than any railroad in the state, but the Childress-Pampa route will be built more rapidly. Mr. Budd said about 20 miles of the road have been completed.

The railroad president and his party spent the night in Pampa and left here early this morning. It was Mr. Budd's second visit to the city. He was here about a month ago.

In Private Cars
With the Burlington official were W. P. Kenney, president of the Great Northern and Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific.

How to Finance Baby's Hospital Care Is Problem

A two-month old infant is thriving in a local hospital because of medical attention and proper nursing, about $20. About $100 will be required to keep the infant in the hospital a month. The child was being kept by its grandmother until a local physician advised the woman that the babe, through no fault of the grandmother, was slowly starving to death.

The grandmother is financially unable to care for the infant properly. Physicians said that it would die if it were not given proper food and medical attention in the next month. Contributions will be received at either The NEWS or the Welfare board.

ABATEMENT PLEAS DENIED

Defendants in Ouster Suits Lose Their Latest Effort
AUSTIN, March 7 (AP)—Judge J. D. Moore of Travis county district court today overruled pleas of abatement and misjoinder filed by defendants in the state's oil trust ouster suit. Constitutionality of the ouster law will be the next question considered in the case.

BANQUET DATE IS SET

Chamber's Annual Event To Be March 22—Small Coming
Directors of the Board of City Development today set March 22 for the annual banquet of the chamber of commerce.

The place of the event will be announced later. Trinity Baptist church here, has not been seen in Abilene since 7 o'clock Saturday evening. Marked concern was felt today over the continued unexplained absence of the young evangelist, and yesterday police joined in the search.

FOUR MEN CHARGED

LONGVIEW, March 7 (AP)—Burglary charge will be filed here today against four men caught in the act of trying to rob the Northcutt Hardware store safe yesterday. The men also were wanted in Shreveport for robbery of a laundry safe.

NURSE OF BABY LINDY

Because she was the first to discover baby Lindbergh was missing, Betty Gow, labco nurse in the Lindbergh home, has held an important place in news of the investigation. Reports from the Lindbergh home state she has spent hours weeping in her room in one of the wings of the house. Picture above is a closeup snapped shortly before the kidnaping.

SNOW AND COLDER WEATHER FOR PANHANDLE PREDICTED

Severe Temperatures Are to Be Felt Over Much of the Western Territory.

By the Associated Press
Warnings against a cold wave sweeping into Texas from the northwest were issued by the weather bureau today to stockmen, shippers, and fruit growers.

Stockmen were informed that dangerously low temperatures, probably would prevail over most of the state in the next 24 hours. The threat to fruit was limited to the northern portion of the state.

Shippers were urged to protect against temperatures ranging from 10 to 20 degrees above zero in consignments to the north. Shippers to the east and west probably will be affected by temperatures between 22 and 28 degrees. To the south and southwest freezing temperatures were anticipated.

The forecast for East Texas indicated there probably would be rain in the southeast portion and to the west and north. It will be colder tonight with a hard freeze in the north portion. The cold wave was expected to bring freezing temperatures to the southwest portion of West Texas.

West Texas probably will have snow in the north portion and snow or rain in the southeast portion. It will be colder tonight with freezing in the southeast portion of West Texas.

Minimum temperatures this morning: Amarillo 14, Abilene 28, Plainview 18, Wichita Falls 23, Lubbock 19, San Angelo 31, Gainesville 27, Longview 37, Corsicana 29, Palestine 40, Fort Worth 33, Houston 45, Brownsville 58, Dallas 34, Del Rio 46, El Paso 46, Austin 46, Galveston 58, Corpus Christi 62, and Pampa 12.

Tulsa Grocer Is Tortured, Robbed

TULSA, Okla., March 7 (AP)—M. L. Bercutt, grocer, was tortured with knives and beaten early this morning by two unmasked robbers who entered his store as he opened for business and forced him to reveal the hiding place of $926, the Saturday receipts.

When the robbers found only $26 in the cash register and Bercutt told them he had no money at the store, the robbers tied him and jabbed his hands with knives, Bercutt told police.

He told them where the $900 was hidden when they held a knife against his throat.

Injured Workman Succumbs Sunday

Ernest Scott, 28, who suffered a fractured skull in a lime tank explosion Saturday afternoon at the Shell gasoline plant nine miles south of town, died at 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning at a local hospital. His eyes were badly burned in the explosion.

Funeral services had not been announced at noon today. The body is at the G. C. Malone Funeral home. He is survived by his wife and one son, Tommy Wayne; a brother Lon, Scott, Mt. Ida, Ark.; four sisters Mrs. H. Stafford, Mrs. M. M. Johnson, also of Mt. Ida, and Mrs. M. V. Daily, Crystal Springs, Ark.

Mr. Scott had lived in Pampa six years.

ERASURES OF NAMES CITED THIS MORNING

OFFENSE IS NOTED AS THE NEWS PRINTS NAMES

E. S. CARR IS FOREMAN

NOEL MOVED TO LAST BUT REPLACED TODAY

The grand jury for the 12-week term of 31st district court which opened here this morning was selected after Judge W. E. Ewing had announced that the order in which names were originally written on the list had been changed. E. S. Carr was appointed foreman by Judge Ewing.

Before naming the 12 members of the grand jury, Judge Ewing transposed the names on the list to conform with testimony given in court by M. P. Downs, member of the jury commission that selected the grand jury at the close of the last term of 31st district court.

Mr. Downs testified that he himself typed the names on the regular grand jury form and that there were no erasures made at the time. Judge Ewing exhibited the form and declared it was clear that erasures had been made and that the order of names on the list had been transposed. Ordinarily, he tends to pick for the jury the men toward the top of the list.

Mr. Downs stated that the name of J. L. Noel was juror No. 12 and not No. 16; that W. A. Bratton was No. 16 and not No. 8; that J. P. Wehrung was No. 15 and not No. 12; that Jeff Seitz was No. 8 and not No. 15. Mr. Downs said that the name of J. M. Saunders, who name the commission wrote in the fifth blank. The name of Roy Vaughn was allowed to remain in the fifth blank, as they appeared on the list after the alleged changes were made, were as follows:

Mont Noel, Scott Johnson, W. T. Wilson, J. Sam Morse, McLean; Roy M. Vaughn, Pampa; W. S. Willa, Groom; W. A. Glass, Alanred; W. A. Bratton, Pampa; Larry D. Rizer, Mt. Vernon; J. M. Saunders, C. McKnight, J. P. Wehrung, E. G. Barrett, E. S. Carr, Jeff Seitz, and J. L. Noel.

The jurors as selected by Judge Ewing were as follows: Mont Noel, Scott Johnson, W. T. Wilson, Roy M. Vaughn, J. M. Saunders, C. McKnight, J. P. Wehrung, Thirteen of 16 men whose names were on the list were present. Larry Rizer was excused, and Mr. Glass was kept away from the city.

Diphtheria Fatal To Qualls Child

De Lois Qualls, two and one-half-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Qualls of the Texas Elm camp, was suddenly stricken with diphtheria Saturday night, and died in Pampa at 8 o'clock yesterday morning two hours after she was brought to the city.

Funeral services are being held this afternoon, beginning at 5 o'clock at the chapel of the G. C. Malone funeral home. The child is survived by her parents and two brothers, Leon and Kenneth.

Interment will be in the local cemetery.

TALKS TO LINDY

SAN ANGELO, March 7 (AP)—A San Angelo magnetic masser, Dr. W. H. McKnight, today telephoned Charles A. Lindbergh to tell him his missing baby is in an old house, 28 miles northwest of the Lindbergh home. Dr. McKnight said Lindbergh talked graciously and seemed calm, asking that the information be sent in an air mail letter.

Crusading Pastor Missing

ABILENE, March 7 (AP)—Rev. J. A. (Johnny) Lovell, 24-year-old crusading pastor of Trinity Baptist church here, has not been seen in Abilene since 7 o'clock Saturday evening. Marked concern was felt today over the continued unexplained absence of the young evangelist, and yesterday police joined in the search.

Missing, too, is his automobile, a Ford club sedan, black body with green wheels and bearing highway number F-94-118 and motor number A-467143. Police have sent description of the minister and his car to neighboring cities.

Exhaustion from overwork and a recent illness, producing temporary loss of memory, is the theory commonly accepted among his friends, in his church, and at Simmons University where he has been working on his master of arts degree. These circles—and police—are not taking seriously suggestions that he may have been forcibly detained by elements against whom he has been inveighing.

First concern was felt Sunday morning when Lovell failed to keep a regular 7 a. m. radio appointment, or to put in appearance at the church tabernacle, constructed last year through his efforts. His membership is one of the largest in the city and last night nearly 3,000 persons waited for him at the tabernacle until 10 p. m., holding a song service and saying prayers for his safety.

SHORT SELLING EVILS The question whether or not a man ought to be permitted to sell stock that he does not own is evidently about to become one of the leading issues of the day.

The administration at Washington wants the right restricted, officials of the New York Exchange oppose this plan. And the ordinary man, vaguely distrustful of both politicians and stockbrokers, does not always have a very clear notion of what all the shooting is about.

Short-selling is one of those ingenious devices that only a race of very clever traders could ever have thought of. It works like this. You order your broker to sell for you a certain quantity of some stock.

You have now fulfilled your obligation to the purchaser, but you must make good on your borrowing from the broker; so you go into the market and buy stock in order to make delivery to him.

Obviously, the only way in which this is going to be profitable for you is for the price of the stock to decline between the time you make your original sale and the time you have to buy stock to cover your borrowing.

But its possible abuses are obvious. Unless a very well-reasoned defense can be set up, the general public will agree that a curb is needed.

Hollywood Sights

By ROBBIN COONS HOLLYWOOD—James Todd, like a good sport, admits the joke is on him.

Nearly a year ago Todd, young, good-looking, with three years' experience in the Theater Guild, came to Hollywood with a contract, as one of the several juveniles being considered for the boy's role in "Bad Girl."

With him came Ethel Gray, his bride, who gave up her own stage career to accompany him here and play housewife.

As you know, another Jimmy named Dunn got the "Bad Girl" part, but Jimmy Todd remained at the studio, where he has been used in small parts and bits in several pictures.

WIFE GOES TO WORK

Meanwhile Mrs. Todd, who had been stage manager for "Strange Interlude" when Jimmy was playing in it and their romance began, found household duties not enough to occupy her time and she stepped out and picked up parts for herself.

Her first was that of the mean wife of the wicked brother in "Over The Hill," and she has been going from one film to another since. But Jimmy isn't sore about it. He's proud, and as soon as his own contract is up, he is planning to go out free-lancing and see what he can do about grabbing parts.

VACATION FOR ADRIENNE

Adrienne Ames, whose wealthy husband can afford to telephone her from New York every night, was surprised recently to receive two calls the same night.

Stephen Ames thought it was about time Adrienne chucked pictures and took a vacation trip to Europe with him. So Adrienne, who thinks she is just getting started, compromised. After her next picture they'll go to Honolulu instead.

Adrienne, by the way, has been deceiving us all a little. She says the studio, or some official there, thought it would be good policy not to tell interviewers that Stephen is her second husband, nor that she had tried to break into pictures, unsuccessfully, before she was "discovered" and "persuaded" to take a contract.

Joan Bennett denies having made any plans yet for her wedding to Gene Markey, screen writer. "What's the use of making plans, anyway," she wants to know.

But the wedding, she intimates when it is planned, won't be surrounded by the secrecy that marked sister Connie's to the Marquis.

would, if followed, make Pampa the vassal, the commercial slave of bigger cities. Why should Pampa, with a wealth of too often ignored talent, turn over her batons, her chairmanships, her fun-making, her leadership to outsiders? You said it; there is no good reason!

What we do not have, we can import, but that which we have let us use, develop, encourage, and make into the manpower and womanpower which a territorial metropolis must have.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified crocote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold actions: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, crocote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to crocote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

BRILLIANT FASHION REVUE INDICATED BY REHEARSAL

Pampa Women are Principal Speakers at LeFors Meeting on Saturday

LARGE CROWD IS EXPECTED FOR SHOWING

PRESENTATION WILL BE MADE WEDNESDAY AT LA NORA

With all models save one in attendance, a rehearsal yesterday for the style revue to be sponsored Wednesday evening at La Nora theater by the Business and Professional Women's club, indicated that the final showing would be one of rare beauty and authenticity.

Another rehearsal is scheduled for Tuesday evening at 11:20 o'clock at the theater.

Curtains for the revue will be drawn Wednesday evening at 8:15 o'clock, when fashionable clothing for all occasions for both men and women will be shown.

Some mystery hovers over the name of Henri Andre, who is said to be a famous stylist to attend the fashion revue.

There will be a tap dance by Joyce Smith, accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Webb, a vocal solo by John Sturgeon, accompanied by Miss Jackie Jones, and a tuba solo by R. E. Smith, accompanied by Miss Clara Lee Showmaker.

Models will be as follows: Violet Shopp—Miss Lola Hill, Miss Aurelia Miller, and Miss Mildred Haggard.

Gordon's—Miss Florida Freeman and Mrs. Luke Mitchell.

Mitchell's—Mrs. N. A. Heistand, Miss Ruth Hollenbeck and Mrs. Jack Dunn.

Levine's—Miss Etha Jones and Miss Viola Haggard.

Hayter Brothers—Jack Dunn, Frank Hill and Earl Isley.

Many Countries Are To Be Seen By Club Women

Russia, Finland, Poland and Scandinavia will be on the itinerary of the 1932 Good Will Tour of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Miss Josephine Schain of New York City, International Relations Chairman of the organization announced.

"Our fifth annual Good Will Tour will not visit new countries," Miss Schain says. "Instead, representatives of the Federation will go back to countries already visited to strengthen acquaintanceships and to make a more intensive study of conditions."

Twelve countries, Miss Schain announces, are on the itinerary for the tour, which will travel in two sections, one group going to France and the Riviera, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium and England, while a second group visits France, Germany, Poland, Russia, Finland, Sweden and Norway.

Mrs. Gene MacDonal, Boston, president of the Federation, will lead the Russian group; Dr. Grace H. Beardsley of Baltimore, the other party.

Both groups will sail together on July 6, and landing at Cherbourg will go directly to Paris for a meeting of the board of directors of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, of which Miss Lena Madessin Phillips of New York City, former president of the National Federation, is president.

At the close of the board meeting the groups will separate, one going on to Russia and Scandinavia, the other to Central and Southern Europe.

REVIVAL CLOSURE

The revival at the Assembly of God church, which has been held with great interest in Pampa for the last four weeks, will close tonight. The Rev. Clyde C. Goree then will leave to attend district engagements which he has postponed for the last week. Tonight the sacrament of the Lord's supper with feet washing will be observed. All are invited to attend.

This has been a great revival. The church has been built up. Christians have been encouraged, and many persons have been converted and some baptized. Ten were baptized Sunday and will partake of the Lord's supper tonight.

The pastor wishes again to extend thanks for the kind co-operation of the other churches and everyone who helped to make the revival a success, and extend a welcome to all who have not a church home in Pampa.

ALWAYS IN BUSINESS, WOMEN HAVE BRILLIANT FUTURE

By HOLLYCEE SELLERS HINKLE

American women have always been business women. So in the fifth annual observance of national business women's week the nation is commending in its feminine citizens those qualities of energy and enterprise that have been evident since the first women arrived in this country. It was, in fact, the lesson of early hardships and labor that laid the foundation for women's present-day strides and that made the recent depression not a thing to be feared but merely a new challenge.

America's first women did not work for money, yet in their families they saw the demand, and they themselves insured the supply. There were no bakeries and can openers, yet there were hungry mouths to be fed. There were no clothing stores, yet there were children to be clothed. The first women were, by necessity, successful producers.

Then came modern conveniences—even luxuries—of home life, but the women were changed but little. While many women in other countries were content to "oversee" their households, to "walk" their poodle dogs, and to participate in amusements, American women, still pioneers, were exploring a new field, that of gainful occupations.

The day of pioneering in business is about over, as is evidenced by the more than 1,300 Business and Professional Women's clubs of the United States, and women have entered practically every vocation available. But women continue to push upward. Each year they claim new triumphs. Theirs is a brilliant future.

Mrs. Glen Pool Receives Letter From German Writer Who Tells of Long Depression in Her Country

To Mrs. Glen Pool came a letter from Germany written by Marianne Beth, Ph.D., a prominent Business and Professional Women's club member. The writer won a prize recently in a contest for the best book on philosophy written in Germany. Both men and women participated, but the names of the writers were concealed from the judges until after decisions were made.

Note the clever, yet simple wording of the letter.

"Let me say to you how delighted I am to have your charming and encouraging letter and how I thank you for your kind wishes, and most of all for remembering me at all. My husband is just admiring the sweet picture of your house, which arouses simply the wish to sit in your nice company with you on the sofa, and being the possessor of us, though we, too, are not of the very slender people."

"I should love to see you again. The work is advancing very well in spite of the depression. The depression, be sure, is not lighter in Europe. It is only still longer lingering over us. We are rather accustomed to suffer under a depression and I ponder just now an essay under the heading 'Twenty Years of Depression—And Still Alive.' But I suppose it shall never be written as so many other essays that look so nice, as long as you just fancy them. We are just trying to get a club home of our own for the federation. But the question of how to raise the necessary funds is not settled. Some ladies think we may get them by having the permanent exhibition of goods that are produced by our members. But prices for rents are very high; everything is costly and we have not the slightest idea how the economic situation might develop in 1932."

"I hope that I shall come to the United States next fall. Miss Phillips has invited me to some for a lecturing tour and I am delighted. I should love to come and say to you about our problems and how we meet them and especially that we can never overcome our troubles if we do not decide to work together as closely as possible. And then I hope I shall meet you and the other friends which I saw in Geneva."

"So long, dear Mrs. Pool, and give them my love and accept the expressions of my sincerest friendship and my best wishes for a very happy and successful year."

Fathers Will Be At P-TA Session

When "dad" night is observed by Woodrow Wilson Parent-Teacher association tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock there will be a reading by Mrs. R. F. Dirksen, a talk on child welfare by Miss Ivan Mayfield, public school health supervisor, and a talk by Supt. R. B. Fischer. Refreshments will be served during the evening.

All interested are invited to attend.

TO SEE GRAND-DAUGHTER

H. E. Castleberry, editor of the Mobeetie Journal, was in Pampa this morning on his way to Borger to see a grand-daughter. The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom W. Holson. Mr. Holson is associated with the Borger Daily Herald.

GATHERING POSTPONED

The Baptist Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. gathering of the Canadian Baptist association which was to have been held in Miami this evening has been postponed one week.

Mrs. David M. Warren spent Saturday and Sunday visiting relatives in Amarillo.

ART AND CIVIC CLUB GATHERS FOR LUNCHEON

MRS. LEECH AND MRS. ROSE TELL OF THEIR WORK

Mrs. F. Ewing Leech and Mrs. Tom E. Rose, both of Pampa, were speakers at a luncheon meeting of the LeFors Art and Civic club Saturday in the LeFors school. Mrs. Leech, chairman of the women's division of the Washington bicentennial celebration in Pampa, told of that celebration, and Mrs. Rose, program chairman for the seventh district, Texas Federation of women's clubs, told of federated club work, general state and district.

Mrs. Vera Carpenter opened the meeting by singing a solo, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and Mrs. A. Carpenter presented the officers. The honor of being an officer was discussed by Mrs. Josephine Sparks.

Following talks by the guest speakers, the group joined in singing "Texas, Our Texas."

The menu, served in the domestic science rooms by girls of that department, consisted of chicken a la king, rice, potatoes, star salad, radishes, clover leaf rolls, cake, ice cream coffee, and candied cherries.

In addition to the Pampanas, the following were present: Mesdames E. Bachus, W. A. Breining, W. W. Breining, Roy R. Calvert, A. Carpenter, G. O. Carruth, Everett Clark, Paul Diehl, Joe Gourlay, Jo. Sipp Davis, Joseph A. Lewis, R. A. Nipper, Ralph Ogden, L. A. Roll, J. H. Richey, Will Salomon, Josephine Sparks, J. G. Wheeler, J. G. Williams, and Ira Vanarsdale; Misses Vera Carpenter, Grace Lee Cranston, Ruth Darnell, Anna Bell Evans, Lynette Franklin, Mildred Matteson, Eleanor Miller, Sinclair Rice, Katherine Simmons, Anna Marie Ward, Imogene Wood, and Miriam Wilson.

DEATH VISITS A VILLAGE

"Unclay," as individualized and figurative as its title, is T. F. Powy's symbolic version of the forces that influence human life.

Death, with a man's appearance and both human and superhuman traits, comes to a village to "unclay" a man and a woman. He loses the paper containing the names of the two persons, and it is discovered and kept by the man whom Death has come to find. To involve him further with the village people Death falls in love with the girl whom he has been sent to unclay.

Together with the subtly woven parable, Powy's sketches a realistic picture of the villagers and brings both together in a freshly turning plot.

Richard Boleslavski, identified with both the Russian and American theater, draws upon his experiences while serving in the Polish Lancers, with the Russian army in the World War for his book, "Way of the Lancer."

The book stands out among many other concerned with phases of the war, because of the variety of action and scenes. These conversation and colorful description lend speed to the narrative.

FEERING INTO FUTURE LIFE
A new hypothesis of future life is outlined in "Bany Mansions," by Henry C. Rowland, who allows his two lead characters to briefly visit in futurity and then return to this world.

Jim and Cynthia discover that there are many modes of life after one dies, regulated by the choices made before death. A finely balanced justice apportions to everyone the good and bad things for which he has striven in life.

Vesper Service In April To Be Given by Group

Decision to hold a vesper service the first Sunday in April was made at a meeting of the Treble Clef club Saturday afternoon at the Methodist church.

Rehearsal under the direction of E. J. Thomas held interest for the following women: Mesdames H. C. Price, A. N. Dilley, A. W. Mann, Sam Irwin, Grace Brown, W. A. Bratton, W. R. Chafin, Charlie Thut, W. C. de Cordova, Dorothy Mills, M. M. Robinson, J. L. Long, Raymond Harrah, Philip Wolfe, M. W. Jones, Miss Josephine Thomas, Miss Iva June Willis, and Miss Leota Brown.

Third Kidnaper of Boy Is Sought

NILES, Ok., March 7 (P)—A special grand jury was summoned today to consider indicting two alleged kidnapers of James DeJute, Jr., 12, who was rescued Saturday after 76 hours of captivity.

A third man, described as a former bootlegger, was hunted as the suspected leader and "brains" of the plot.

The other two, who said they were Dowell Hargraves and John Demarco, both of Youngstown, were hiding with the boy when they were captured in a secret room of an abandoned gambling den near Youngstown.

Under Ohio law, the men if convicted will face prison sentences of one to 20 years. Ten years additional might be added if evidence was found that ransom was demanded, but the father of the child, a wealthy contractor, already has denied that any money was asked.

WHOLE BLOCK BURNS

PAULS VALLEY, Okla., March 7 (P)—Fire swept through virtually an entire business block here today, destroying five buildings with damage estimated at $100,000. No one was reported hurt.

Miss Vivian Dillender of Webb City, Mo., is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. Wilkes.

Miss Lois Stallings, teacher in Junior high school, is ill.

Sousa's Body Is Taken to Capitol

WASHINGTON, March 7 (P)—A snow-hushed capital sheltered today the body of John Philip Sousa, the great march king, whose career as a bandmaster over 40 years led him to the pinnacle of international acclaim.

Sousa died in Reading, Pennsylvania, early Sunday morning. It was just a few hours after the 77-year-old conductor had directed a rehearsal of a local band. He attended a banquet given in his honor, retired to his room and was found shortly after by his secretary, stricken by a heart attack.

They brought his body to Washington—home. He was born here and here his father obtained him a place in the Marine band when 13 years old. He will be buried Thursday at Congressional cemetery with such honors and ceremonies as his family will accept.

They were gathered today, Mrs. Sousa and two daughters coming from New York, the conductor's son, John Philip, Jr., on his way from California.

PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS LOOK STRONGER THAN EVER

NO WEAKENED OUTFIT TO BE PUT IN FIELD

GOOD HEALTH WILL BE MAJOR FACTOR THIS YEAR

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Writer

PORT MYERS, Fla., March 7 (AP)—Instead of either being broken up, as some experts predicted, or showing any tendency to disintegrate after three straight years at the top of the American league, as many expected, the Philadelphia Athletics now appear stronger than ever.

If anything is going to stop them from running up a record streak of four straight pennants it likely will have to be the old-fashioned law of averages. This factor, aided and abetted by Cincos, Hallahan, and Martin, accomplished the downfall of the Athletics last October, but it has damaged neither the class nor the morale of the club. Of its seven rivals it fears only the New York Yankees.

Barring accidents, Connie Mack will stand pat on the lineup that spreaded the pennant field last season. The only outside prospect of a shakeup lies in the possibility of Big Jimmie Fox being shifted to third and replaced at first by Oscar Roettger, now trying a come-back. Unless there is some mishap, however, the team will start the 1932 season with Fox, Bishop, Williams and Dykes again composing the inner defense.

The twin factors on which the A's base their confidence in the forthcoming campaign are: First, the apparent good health and strength of all the seasoned stars, most of whom suffered from illness or accidents last year; and second, the acquisition of several of the best young players the club has had since Grove, Earnshaw, Cochrane, and Simmons established themselves as the "big four." The A's are rich in reserve power.

The training sign has revealed unusual pitching prospects in Lew Krausse, the 19-year-old Philadelphia boy, and Joe Bowman, 21-year-old recruit from Portland of the Pacific Coast league. Both are right handers. Merrit Cain, from Harrisburg, Pa., is another good right-handed prospect.

Grove and Walberg were late in signing contracts. Grove was understood to have obtained an increase, giving him a $25,000 salary and making him the highest paid pitcher in baseball. Earnshaw has been getting into condition at Hot Spring, Arkansas, along with the mighty Al Simmons.

LOTT BEATS HIS OLD FOE

Conquers Wilmer Allison in Havana During Four-Set Encounter.

HAVANA, March 7 (AP)—For the first time in four years, George Lott, Chicago tennis star, has taken the measure of Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, in tournament play.

The Chicagoan conquered Allison, 6-4, 3-6, 13-11, 6-2, in the singles final of the Vedado club's international tournament which ended here yesterday.

In doubles, however, Allison and J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., defeated Lott and Marcel Rainville of Montreal, 6-4, 8-5, 6-2.

Blizzards And Baseball Fitting

PORT WORTH, March 7 (AP)—"Blizzards and baseball everything is fitting and proper," exclaimed bosses of the Fort Worth baseball club today as they hung out the welcome sign for returning athletes at La Grave field.

Official training for the battery-men starts today when colder weather, with probable snow, is predicted.

"It's happened so often," said business manager Roy Meehan, "it wouldn't be right to start under any other conditions."

Only Manush Is Still Holdout at Senator's Camp

BLOOMING, Miss., March 7 (AP)—The entire squad of the Washington Senators was looked for on the playing field today by manager Walter Johnson.

Orders were for all to report and the only doubts were about the appearance of Heinie Manush, the big left fielder who has not signed his 1932 contract. He is believed to have been offered a cut. Joe Judge, the only other player not signed up, reached camp last night.

CLEVELAND IN WIN SUNDAY

Defeat New Orleans Pelis 10-5; Peckinpaugh Much Pleased.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 7 (AP)—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh was well pleased today with the Cleveland Indians' 10 to 5 victory yesterday over the New Orleans Pelicans.

Earl Averill got a double and two slugs in the Tribe's 13 hits, while three Cleveland hurlers held the Pelicans scoreless except for one inning.

This Game of GOLF

By O. B. KEELER

Dr. Alistair MacKenzie, golf course architect—at the moment he is at work on the new layout for the National Golf club of Augusta, Ga.—is a loyal Briton and does not hesitate to say that he considers the best British courses superior to the best American.

"It has been suggested," says the good doctor, "that the superiority of American golfers over British golfers may be due to the superiority of American golf courses. But there are two points, at least, to which I would like to direct attention, in contradiction of this theory.

How About the Ladies?
"First, it is American men who play better golf than British men; but one would hardly say that the British ladies are not able to hold their own, and a bit more, with the American ladies, who have favored us with some very brilliant invading parties.

"This brings up the second point. American men as a rule take the game far more seriously than the British. Americans almost always keep careful cards on their rounds; Britons rarely do. Americans practice assiduously and study the game more than Britons.

"There, I think, is the correct answer for masculine superiority on the American side.

"But the British ladies go to the game with much the same spirit as American men; they practice and practice assiduously and study the game more than Britons.

Match The Thing
His views of amateur golf are interesting—and may well be pondered in our country.

"On the whole," he says, "I believe the British attitude among amateur golfers to be the right one—and I believe they get more enjoyment from the game, more real happiness, than their American cousins, or their own more seriously inclined womenfolk.

"In Scotland, for example, the question after a round is always 'Did you beat him?' or 'Was it a tight match?' In America, the question usually is concerning the card—what score was made.

"I believe you can get more fun out of licking an opponent, perhaps for five or ten dollars in a class match—maybe by lofting a styimie (which, by the way, ordinarily is not played in friendly golf in America) at the last green, than you can ever get by keeping books on your score.

"If the score's a good one, it's fun to remember it; but if it's a bad one, why make life a burden with it? And there always must be more bad scores than good ones.

Cincinnati Hitting Shows Up Poorly

TAMPA, Fla., March 7 (AP)—More batting practice for the Cincinnati Reds was planned today after their failure yesterday to get more than three hits off three Tampa hurlers.

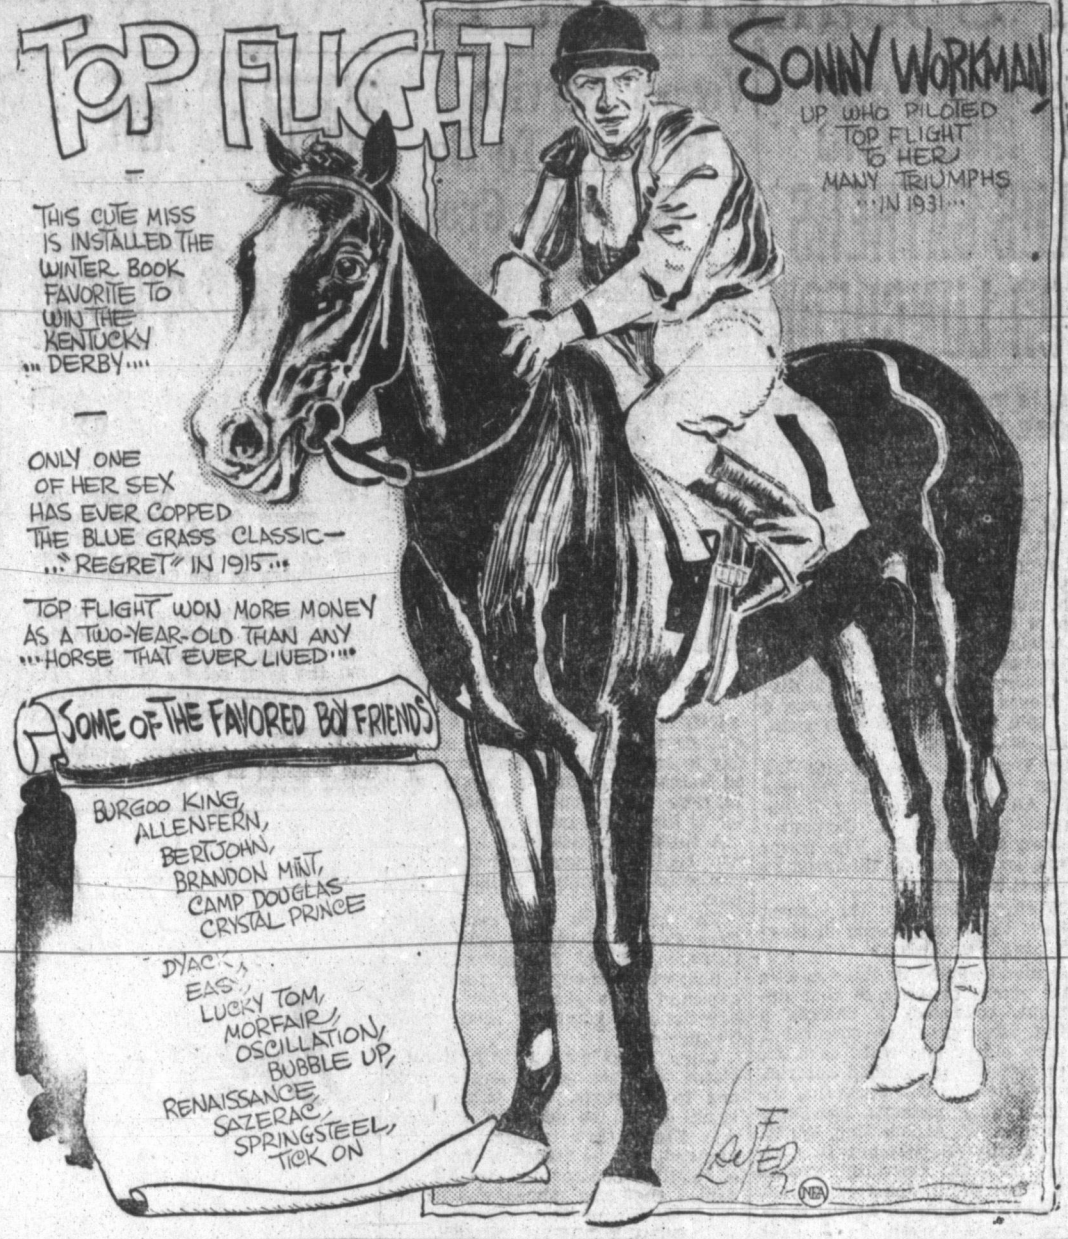

The Reds won the game 5 to 0, however, with one of the hits a home run by Mickey Heath and another a triple by Gene Moore.

Walter Hilcher, Oliver Eckart and Young Mills, rookie hurlers for the Reds, held the Tampa team to three hits.

BY ALAN GOULD

If the enterprising mayor of Daytona Beach, E. H. Armstrong, has his way about it, there will be a carnival of speed kings on the ocean speedway there next February when moon and tide combine to smooth out the world's most famous racing stretch.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, far from satisfied that his 253.968 miles-per-hour record is the best he can do, has promised tentatively to return for his third straight battle with Old Pop Time.

Norman "Wizard" Smith, who has been making gestures at Campbell's records on Ninety Mile Beach, in New Zealand, will be urged to pack up his Napier-motored machine and ship it to the United States.

On top of this, J. M. White, Philadelphia manufacturer whose ill-fated Triplex once set a world's mile record at Daytona, is understood to be planning a new speed creation, and the old master for the Americans, more than Barney Oldfield, talks with enthusiasm about returning to Daytona at the wheel of a new Miller racing car.

The chances, of course, are against all of the prospects bearing fruit. Nevertheless the consistency with which the British drivers and British cars have been coming over here to take the speed records apart finally has prompted some homebred patriotic activity.

"We can build cars just as fast or faster," declares Oldfield, "why let these fellows keep coming over here and make us look like back-numbers at the game we started. It's positively embarrassing."

From the way Campbell talked before leaving, however, it would look like a good idea for the Americans to figure on starting at 300 m.p.h. and working up. Sir Malcolm thinks he may be traveling that fast himself in another year.

If he does they may have to add a few miles to the ocean speedway. Eleven or twelve miles won't be enough in which to get the maximum acceleration, at that rate.

Campbell Near-Sighted
Campbell doesn't like to discuss it, but the fact is that the noted British driver is near-sighted, as a result of having been knocked unconscious several times in accidents. He has difficulty reading but at long range his sight is perfect.

Since it's far-sightedness that counts when you are moving along at better than four miles a minute, the captain's ocular condition does not come under the heading of a hazard. He isn't worried about it.

Babe Collects On Golf
Golfing has helped add years to Babe Ruth's baseball career, for two big reasons.

First, it has given the Babe a healthful hobby. Second, it has done more than anything else to strengthen his legs.

On top of that he has ambitions to become a tournament star. He isn't consistent enough now to hold his own for more than a round or two in fast company.

Babe is a better match than medal player but his game unquestionably has improved steadily. Where as he used to be lucky to break 80 once in twelve rounds he now turns the trick at least once in every three rounds, without regard to the battleground.

West Texas Teachers of Canyon, Texas, was paired in a first round game in the lower bracket with the Kansas City Athletic club.

Yankees Need Man to Replace Henry Johnson

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7 (AP)—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees still is looking for a right hander to fill in until Henry Johnson recovers from his operation for appendicitis.

The answer to McCarthy's prayer may be John Allen, right hander obtained from the International League. Allen won 21 games and lost nine for Jersey City and Toronto last season. He has been the most impressive rookie pitcher in camp so far.

CUBS BREAK EVEN
SANTA CATALINA ISLAND, Calif., March 7 (AP)—Having broken even with the New York Giants in the first two real contests of the training season, the Chicago Cubs today settled down to trying to learn some more baseball.

The pitchers worked well against the Giants, although Abe Miller's wildness in the tenth inning of yesterday's game started the Giants toward a 6 to 3 victory.

A bridge tournament for the benefit of the unemployed was a prominent winter event at the Okmulgee, Okla., Country club.

RACING AUTO JUMPS RAILS AND HURTS 9

TWO WOMEN STRUCK AND LIMBS ARE BROKEN

HOUSTON, March 7 (AP)—A racing car left the track at a turn on a speedway here, hurtled through the rail and injured nine persons, none fatally.

Rip Bales of Galveston, the driver, was only shaken up. Mrs. Rosalie Workman, 20, and Mrs. J. L. Gentry, 26, suffered broken legs.

Spectators packed around the railing at the north turn made a frantic effort to get away when they saw Bales would not round it successfully. They were virtually powerless to move, however, because of the mass of people behind them.

The machine tipped off on two wheels and then crashed into the guard turned the automobile around and it spun on the ground, knocking down several bystanders.

More than 24,000 persons have registered for courses in the University of Wisconsin's extension division this year.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN
By SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

The old adage which tells us that "good cooks are born, not made" is an exploded theory today.

Modern methods and equipment, standard measurements and definite and precise information regarding recipes make it possible for the most inexperienced cook to prepare tasty repasts.

If every untried cook could realize that a recipe is nothing more or less than a "formula" and attack her cooking problem with the same attitude of mind that she used for her chemistry "lab practice," she would serve palatable food and there would be no failures—providing of course that reliable recipes were used.

Before attempting to use any recipe read it through at least twice. This familiarizes one with ingredients and method.

Be sure all ingredients are in the house.

Organization Is Important

Assemble all the ingredients and utensils before beginning the mixing. This will prevent delay at any time and save minutes spent in frantic search for material to cook or articles to cook with.

Consider the time required for preparation, cooking or baking and perhaps chilling in relation with the rest of the meal.

Measure all ingredients accurately, using a standard measuring cup and spoon. If possible have two sets and one for liquidstheoisteaos ents first and the liquids second. Professional cooks who must have the same perfect result constantly weigh their ingredients in order to insure absolute accuracy.

Any ingredients that need special attention before combining, as in the case of sifting flour for cake, should be prepared before any actual mixing is started.

All measurements are level. "Heaping" cups and spoons leave much to the mixer's idea of the meaning of the word. A "heaping" teaspoon might equal two level teaspoons as measured by one person or one and one-fourth as measured by another. To measure a cupful of any given dry ingredient, fill the cup, using a big spoon or a scoop, and rounding the material above the top of the cup. Tap lightly to be sure any air holes are filled, and with the dull edge of a knife scrape off the surplus, making the contents even with the top of the cup or "level full."

Flour, confectioners' powdered and granulated sugar are usually sifted once before measuring. Brown sugar is rolled before measuring.

Follow directions exactly. This applies to the method of procedure as well as using the specific ingredients and using the specific ingredients in their original form. It can be changed to suit personal tastes.

It's a good idea to write only comments about a recipe on the margin. This "data" should be put down at once while the whole thing is fresh in mind, for by the time the meal is served and the dishes washed the definite and helpful suggestion may be forgotten.

Judgment and "common sense" are as important for successful cooking as they are for successful experiments in chemistry. They must be developed individually in order to insure uniform results, for no matter how "fool proof" a recipe may seem to be, the properties of ingredients vary and decisions must be made, even in cooking.

BOY CRAZY

by Grace Perkins

SYNOPSIS: "Lead me your husband," Hope Ross begs her best friend, Judy on Judy's wedding trip. Hope has stayed on the boat because Hope's former husband, Dickey Dale, is aboard. Her father annulled her marriage, but Hope wants to see whether Dickey still loves her.

Chapter 30
INTERRUPTED HONEYMOON

"Oh, how rich!" giggled Judy. "Come on into our place and we'll tell Tom, and have a drink. But listen! One good eye out of you in Tom's direction and all is over between us."

"Except in public," coaxed Hope. "I must go—go to my husband in public."

"Yeah? Well, control yourself!" Hope dressed with high content that night, blessing her wisdom in her hasty packing, cursing the lack of a maid and the small staterooms shared with Millie Seabrook.

But when at last she emerged, gowned in pale pink lace, assured by the ecstatic Millie that "you all look divine!", she and Tom went arm and arm into the dining-salon, and were seated at a table on the balcony of the dining-room. Hardly had she made her effective entrance, and coyly permitted Tom to order her wine and light her cigarette, than Hope realized that Dickey and his father were seated directly opposite her on the other side of the balcony.

Dickey was looking at her. Aghast! His eyes unbelieving—as she gazed steadily straight back at him.

A voice in her ear startled. Tom trying to talk to her. But she could not tear her eyes away.

Until she saw Dickey turn to his father and say something. Put down his napkin and push back his chair. A second later Dickey had left the dining-salon!

She turned then, in spite of Hickey's troubled gaze. Turned to Tom, who was irritably pointing out Judy, who, according to their plan, was seated at a single table a few feet away.

She gave a nit-witted smile to Tom, and nodded stupidly. Heard herself inviting Judy over to join them.

She picked her way through the meal, conscious of Hickey's eyes fixed on her throughout the endless dinner.

"It worked!" she mumbled excitedly to the bride and groom. "It worked. I won't need Tom as my husband much longer. He got up and left the room, Judy. Surely that means he's jealous—he cares?"

"Pipe the way his father is watching you," Judy admonished. "Maybe that doesn't mean anything."

"Say, couldn't we talk about our romance?" suggested Tom over the soup. "You know—just a few words, here and there?"

Hope lifted her wine glass. "May I propose a toast?" she said solemnly. "To the dearest kids in the world who let me but in on their honeymoon. And I'd do as much for you two, God forbid!"

Not once again that evening, however, did Hope catch a glimpse of the Dales. Not at the dance, nor in any of the salons. Discouraged, she relinquished a fatigued Tom to Judy around eleven o'clock and went to her own cabin. Only to receive a radio at midnight that made her bluer than the sea.

YOU SHOULD KNOW BETTER THAN TO PUT ON THE SAME SHOW TWICE STOP DON'T BE SILLY YOU ARE AS BADLY OFF WITHOUT A DAUGHTER AS I AM WITHOUT A FATHER STOP MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING

The radio messages she received thereafter, as a counter-distraction to her main interest in life, burned up the ether between the old home in Westchester and the ship that was ploughing farther and farther toward the old country. Papa Ross had plenty to say.

Mama Ross, too, sent frantic radioes every time she thought of protesting against Hope's behavior; asking where Hope had left her car, whether Hope had worn clothing with her, and finally threatening to follow Hope across on the next boat. But Goody didn't follow up her parents' outbursts with a single word, and in one way Hope felt comforted.

Goody and she had grown closer in the last few years. It was a triumph when Goody sent her own prissy little wife telling Hope that she wished her luck, and would be happy if Hope really won her love at last.

But what was more to the point, never once did Hope hear from Rusty.

Meantime three days more on ship-board had brought things to a most distressing pitch.

Dickey had shown up with a girl. A very startling, vivid, husky-voiced Jane with whom Dickey played deck tennis, shuffleboard, bid at the ship's auction during the evenings, and had at his table with Hickey and himself practically every meal.

The girl, so Hope instantly made her business to learn, was the leading ingenue of one of Hickey's late musicals.

Every morning and every evening Hickey bowed distantly to Hope. But never once was there a glance of recognition in Dickey's eyes.

The officials and attendants on the ship had been most kind, attentive and lenient. Certainly Hope had caused them plenty of difficulties and much speculation. In fact, the purser had personally wired her father to get an identification upon the captain's request.

But a new difficulty presented itself in the shape of Judy and her fairly ruined honeymoon.

"Look, Hope," protested Judy, close to tears. "I wish you'd quit toting Tom around like you do. After all some people on this ship know us and know you. It looks as if you're cutting me out on my own honeymoon!"

"But, Judy, you said—"

"Now, please don't try to get around me. I'm fed up, Hope. And Tom's fed up. He's terribly fed up!"

"Thanks for the compliment!" "Listen, we don't mind being sports and helping you pull a stunt. But it isn't working. Anyone can see that. You're never going to get a rise out of Dickey. You're making a fool of yourself, and it's high time you stopped. It was a clever idea, Oh, no end. But damned uncomfortable for me, if you don't mind my saying so."

"I can imagine. I guess I'm no go anyway you look at it!"

"Oh, forget it, Hope! You should have forgotten it years ago. The man is clean gone on that actress."

Misty-eyed, Hope turned toward the port-hole of her stateroom, her back to Judy.

"Listen, Hope darling," Judy's voice softened. "I'll go through with helping you. Honest I will! If you only let me have my husband for one afternoon!"

Still Hope didn't turn.

"He's so rotten sick of playing bridge," added Judy with a pathetic wail.

"He's a rotten player," mumbled Hope crossly. "Go ahead! Go to your sassy old husband! I wouldn't have a crooner for a booby prize!"

"Is that so?" fared Judy angrily. "Well, I'd hate to tell you what I think of your big tanned and scarred hero!"

And Judy left Hope's cabin, and banged the door to punctuate her statement.

So Hope only sat against the port-hole weeping herself red-eyed, with Sassy pawing her hair as comfort.

It was impossible to sleep. Impossible to stay in that stateroom. Out on one of the farthest edges of the uppermost sea-sawing deck, Hope wrapped herself in blankets like a cocoon, and let the salt sea spray and the salt tears fight it out between them.

It was nearly three a. m. when at last she stiffly got to her feet and headed against the wind to the shelter of her cabin.

Millie, as might be expected, was awake when she entered.

"Something too grand for words happened to you tonight," murmured the schoolteacher. "You won the auction?"

"I did! Honest?"

"I was just there, when they called it out. Only it was under the name of Mrs. Thomas Post, and your friend Judy explained that you had asked her to play for you just to turn your luck."

Hope scowled. So Judy had rebelled and had announced wide-spread that even a bride has her pride, yes? Well, who could blame her? And who cared?

Fats and the captain throw Hope and Dickey together—Monday. An electric situation results.

SYNOPSIS: A sudden decision hurries Hope Ross out to the boat carrying her friend, Judy, on her honeymoon. Dickey Dale, whom Hope wed only to have the wedding see annulled by her father, also is on board—and Hope has decided to find out whether he still cares for her.

Chapter 31
BADGE OF CONQUEST

ON her bed Hope found the usual daily telegram from her mother, and an envelope of ship's stationery. This she tore open tremulously, finding it only an invitation from the captain to lunch with him the next day.

She went the next noon, mostly because her winnings had caused such excitement among those she knew, and partly because Judy and Tom were also invited, and it was necessary to show Judy that there was no ill feeling.

Others had evidently been invited and had foregathered before her arrival. Even as the captain himself came forward to greet Hope and Judy and Tom, Hope saw Sassy standing, glass in hand, watching her. Saw Dickey rise.

The captain turned to introduce them, but Hickey came forward, hand outstretched.

"I know Miss Ross," he said formally. "I've been tempted to speak to you on this trip, but our meeting was too long ago I was afraid—"

"Why, who could forget you, Mr. Dale?" Hope smiled up at him, her heart beating a trip-hammer. "Or Dickey? How do you do, Dickey? Is it too late to congratulate you on your show? Please meet Mr. and Mrs. Post. My old friend, Judy (unt. Perhaps you remember. And Tom Post, who is almost nice enough for Judy!"

Automatically she felt herself go through the motions. But though the captain was a masterful host, and Lillian Toff's punching-bag conversation kept the room buzzing, Hope held on to the arms of her chair, and simply could not reach out to accept a proffered cocktail.

She heard the captain's words and heard herself answer:

"I'm afraid—I'm awfully. I must ask you to excuse me. I'm sorry."

Unsteadily she started to rise, and blessed Judy for the gesture that caused Tom to sink gratefully back in his chair instead of leaping to her assistance.

Another form rose swiftly. Another hand was under her arm. Another voice was telling her to watch the narrow, twisting stairway. . . . Quite gently he guided her down the corridor and threw open her stateroom. She caught at his arm for support so that he had to enter with her.

A white streak leaped from the berth. And Sassy, huge and proud and soft-eyed, scratched at the rug and bowed before them.

Hope had not noticed. Her own thought at the moment was a breath of thanksgiving that Millie Seabrook was not in the cabin. But she showed herself as she glanced at Dickey, who was gazing, with an ugly expression on his mouth, at the

"That—that's Sassy!" Hope laughed weakly.

"You still let him around, huh?" demanded Dickey with a sharp and cynical remark. "Oh, I've heard about it! You wanted me to hear about it, didn't you? Making it up at Harcourt, so that it was the joke of the club? You've been him everywhere and showed him 'I, trying to make me a laughing stock—"

"But, Dickey—"

Dickey, however, wasn't listening. He was bowing to the cat with a deep flourish.

"A triumphant badge of conquest!" he said flippantly. "But I've long ago got over the rub!"

He turned, blithered and aloof to Hope.

"I'll call your stewardess for you." And without a second's hesitation he left!

For a second Hope stood quivering. Then, her hands outstretched and fists tightly clenched, she screamed. Screamed at the top of her voice.

"I hate you!" her voice rang out, and she glared in the full power of her throat. "I hate you! I hate you!"

Millie found her roommates around four that afternoon, face downward on her bed.

Judy came, and the school teacher obligingly erased herself from the scene. Judy sat beside Hope and tried every known process. And when Judy was quite tired out and quite nervous about leaving Tom at long, Hope turned and said:

"If you're all finished, Judy, please don't let me keep you."

"Oh, all right!" At the door Judy hesitated and sighed. "Will you be at dinner?"

"Sure. Of course, you'll see me at dinner. If you like, you and Tom can call for me at seven."

Judy got to her feet purposefully. "Let's have coffee upstairs," she suggested. "No, let's have it in our suite. Tom and I have some swell Cordón Rouge."

Hope giggled.

"Darling, I won't disagree you. I promise," Hope said.

In the bar, Judy watched her, dividing her worry between Hope's heart-breaking hell-raising, and her new husband's impatient disgust with the entire proceedings.

The hilarity and general thawing of behavior that so often marks the last night on board ship, filled the ballroom with echoes of dozens of shrill voices.

The auction for the Sailors' Fund was to take place in the dining-salon, and a table had been reserved. Mrs. Carter caught at Hope's hand.

"I'm donating a shawl to be auctioned off," she announced.

"Sassy'll donate something too," agreed Hope with a muddled smile. "I've got a swell cat. A perfectly swell cat. They can auction that off. Anybody would like that!"

"Hope!" Judy turned, puzzled and reproachful.

"Judy, you know what a slick cat it is!" Hope insisted feverishly. Judy turned with a helpless glance at Tom.

"No use," she mumbled. "When she gets like that, there's no managing her."

Hope, quite the gayest of a large table, which seemed to grow in numbers as the half-hours ticked by, bid and outbid for everything that went upon sale.

Until at last the verbose politician walked to the center of the room holding the immaculately white Sassy high over his head.

Hope, keyed to that tense moment, suddenly noted two figures far across the room. Saw them rise and leave the salon: Hickey and Dickey—retiring from the field of battle!

Somehow the game lost flavor. Hope watched while her heart ached for the white figure in the auctioneer's arms, being carried from table to table for women to caress and admire. Wishing she had gone out too—as the Dales had done. . . . The bidding went on joyously. With Lillian Toff the loudest and most insistent. With Lillian Toff pronounced the owner. . . . Stupidly Hope watched. Every trace of blood leaving her cheeks, and every vestige of good savage anger, that she was ever capable of, rising in her heart as Lillian came out on the floor and gathered the cat into her arms; playing with it, holding Sassy up for more admiration and bowing to the outburst of applause. . . . Then suddenly Hope came out of the daze. Something happened that caused Lillian's wide mouth grin to turn to a wild expression of pain and anger. From the shoulder downward, on Lillian's plump white arm, Sassy had buried his claws and scratched one unmerciful stroke as an expression of his opinion!

SYNOPSIS: A last attempt to straighten out the bitter situation between Hope Ross and her former husband, Dickey Dale, fails. She has sailed on the same boat with him and his father, Hickey. Realizing failure, she vows to annul her marriage, but learns he has married his secretary.

Chapter 32
DAY OF JUDGMENT

HOPE read it twice—and looked up, abbergasted. Passed the wire to Judy, who passed it to Tom, who snifed and passed it back to Hope.

"My day of judgment has come!" Hope shrieked hilariously to drown out the heartache. "Wait until Rusty gets the message I sent him at four o'clock. I sent him a proposal to marry me! I hope he just turns over with chagrin. I bet it'll put a crib in his whole honeymoon, and I bet his father's secretary will have a hell-of-a-time taunting it off!"

Judy tugged at Hope's shoulder, and her voice was full of the old hint to soft pedal.

"Don't you realize, Hope dear," she said, looking Hope straight in the eyes, "that Mr. Crandall's secretary is Angel? Did you forget that?"

Hope opened her eyes wide.

"Angel!" she gasped. "Why, of course, Angel. After all these years she's landed him! Yes, I had forgotten. Oh, I'm glad it's Angel—she'll be good to him. She's loved him so. She's loved him like I've loved—"

Judy got to her feet purposefully. "Let's have coffee upstairs," she suggested. "No, let's have it in our suite. Tom and I have some swell Cordón Rouge."

Hope giggled.

From the shoulder downward, on Lillian's plump white arm, Sassy had buried his claws and scratched one unmerciful stroke as an expression of his opinion!

Without realizing that she had tipped her glass of champagne all over Judy's lovely white chiffon gown, Hope got to her feet. Silently, blindly, she fled away from the voices that called to her from her table—following Lillian.

Lillian Toff turned half-way up a staircase and shouted something over her shoulder to Hope. Something that sounded like a dare.

Like a streak, Hope was after her. Up the stairs and toward the deck doorway where Lillian had swiftly disappeared. Pulling at the door, and bracing herself against the lunging wind that struck full force against her. . . .

Even then, Hope could see. She could see Lillian at the railing lifting Sassy high up by the neck. . . . "Stop!" shrieked Hope. "Stop, you—"

But her words were choked as she headed into the fine-night wind out on the deck. Where, realizing what was happening, she leaned breathlessly up against the side of the ship, panting with relief.

For someone besides herself had seen Lillian. An arm had gone up, and a voice had spoken with a snarling sharpness. The voice of a man, smoking in the darkness as he leaned against one of the lifeboats.

Swiftly Sassy had been drawn back. Wrenched from Lillian's startled grasp, and was held now by that man who was shouting through the wind—shouting angry, unpeppable things at Lillian. . . . "Hickey!" cried Hope with a glad rush forward. "Hickey darling!"

Her arms went out, hugging him close, as she flung herself on him, her head buried in his shoulder.

She heard Hickey's voice, and felt his arm around her. Let herself be guided up the sea-damp deck-stairs, and finally drawn into the grateful warmth of an upper passage-way. Before she had caught her breath she found herself in the sitting-room of Hickey's suite.

He let her sit down and cry it out while he fixed himself a whiskey and soda, and settled himself in a chair opposite her.

"What must you think of me?" she repeated at last as she gazed miserably over at him. "Well, child," he said at length. "I think you're a terrible fool. But I think—we're all fools."

"Oh, Hickey, I've wanted so often to talk to you!"

"God, if you only had, Hope! I didn't know what to think of you, really until tonight. Your friend, Mrs. Post, dug me up just a few hours ago, and told me all about things. Even then I couldn't quite believe it—that you cared, that much. Truly cared for my boy—after all—well—that's happened."

"Hickey!" Red-eyed, Hope leaned forward in her chair. "I care so damn-it-all much that I would wait Dickey even if it was only for my money. I love him so much that I—"

"What do you mean—money?" "Papa said—"

She stopped short at Hickey's expression.

"Your father told you it was your money that my boy wanted? Is that it? Did he tell you how he hurt the kid? How he struck him down? Did he tell you that?"

"Hurt him?"

"He didn't tell you! Struck him down, he did, with a billiard cue, and God knows what kept me from letting my dog on him. He didn't tell you then, that Dickey was laid up for six weeks—"

"Is that—the scar on Dickey's face now?"

"Yes, that's the scar! Given him the night after your wedding when Dickey and I went to see your father, and we quarreled down in your billiard room—"

"Oh, Hickey!" Hope covered her eyes with the back of one hand. "Dad wouldn't—he wouldn't do it to me! He wouldn't!"

"Well, he did!"

"He told me Dickey or you never came near him! That you were perfectly willing to have it annulled—"

"Did he ever tell you that I went up to the White Plains Court and entered a protest against that annulment? Appeared just as a matter of form because Dickey wanted me to do so badly?"

"I wrote that note to Dickey—about never wanting to see him again—because he never answered any of my letters. Hickey—did he ever get any of my letters?"

"Not a word! On my Bible oath, Hope. And that letter you did send him gave me the worst year of my life!"

"Go to him now—go find him. Hope, for the love of God, I can no longer do anything or mean anything to him."

"You mean—Hope jumped to her feet—"he still cares for me?"

(Copyright, Grace Perkins)

Hope's happiness depends on Hickey's answer. What if Dickey did love her—how could she break down his wall of pride?

SYNOPSIS: "Dickey still cares for me!" Hope Ross asks her former father-in-law, Hickey Dale. She has sailed on the same boat, hoping to meet Dickey. Hope has just learned that her father decided her when he had her marriage annulled, and that Dickey was presented by Mr. Ross from reaching her.

Chapter 33
SOMETHING BLUE

HICKEY laughed. A crooked, broken laugh.

"Your picture is still in his watch-case," he said slowly. "Go and ask him to show it to you."

For one second Hope stood poised. Then, forgetting Sassy, and forgetting Hickey, she turned and raced out of the room.

Hope was on a wild-eyed search. Ah—over the boat, from bar to salon, up and out on the decks, without hat or cape, fighting her way through the wind from one end of the ship to the other. And finding him, eventually in a forbidden spot, quite meant that she had to climb chains and railings to get up to the bridge where Dickey stood with the captain.

"Dickey," she cried. "What time is it? Tell me, honey, what time is it?"

They brought her, still demanding the time, down to the captain's suite.

"No. By your watch, Dickey," she insisted. "I must know the time by your watch!"

Dickey went gray around the lips, and turned to the captain.

"I don't think Miss Ross is well," he stammered.

"I understand," nodded the captain. But he didn't—quite. Until much later that evening.

For Dickey and Hope, with so much to say, so many questions that didn't need answering any more, suddenly found that hardly a spot on that huge vessel was sacred to lovers.

Meanwhile, Judy, in spite of Tom's white-faced annoyance, was searching grimly for Hope, sending the Carters in one direction, and any steward within sight to search out every known corner. And when at last Hope rushed up to Judy and nearly knocked her over with hugs and kisses and breathless explanations, Judy almost faltered with relief.

Quite unplanned and unexpected was the round-up in Hickey's suite. Nobody knew just who made the suggestion that they get married then and there by the captain. But Dickey leaped at the idea, his eyes lighting up into that old blue spark, and a broad shy grin gratefully hiding the scar of stitches on his jaw.

"Will you, Hope? Will you marry me—right now?"

Hope tried to say yes. She really did try. But her face wrinkled up into a childish pucker and she nodded her head instead, gulping back her happiness.

After that, there was a general mad-house. Everyone had a suggestion, everyone a gift, everyone was talking at once.

Not even to change her black velvet would Dickey permit Hope to leave his side.

"Listen, cricket," he said with that memorably bossy air of his. "Last time you married me just as you were. This time you're going to do the same. That's orders, baby!"

The old pet name, the old ring in his voice, and Hope was glad of the confusion that prevented the need of answering. For suddenly through her tired, happy, confused mind, there rose a picture of her old home in Westchester, of the brook that ran beneath her window, and the weeping willows that bent in the breezes. . . . Of the times that Dickey would call for her in a monstrous atrocity of a roadster, and of that long ride from the Country Club to the Justice of the Peace—where she had found neither justice nor peace. . . .

"Something blue!" You all must wear something blue!" drawled a voice in her ear. And Millie's southern leg went up to be stripped of a blue satin garter.

"Something old," Hickey piped in as he drew the cork of a wine bottle. "I'm something old, and by thunder, I ought to do for any wedding."

"Let's get started," suggested Dickey as he slapped his father on the shoulder and nearly spilled the wine. "We can drink all the toast later. Come on, Hope."

"Oh, Lordy!" wailed Millie as she grasped the arm of her westerner, and watched Hope and Dickey head down the corridor. "I just have a feeling something awful's going to happen. . . . Now isn't that too silly, but I can't help it. It's like a premonition!"

"Shut up, for heaven's sake," snapped Judy as she followed Hickey. "Or there'll be murder at sea."

Flight after flight they climbed, the whole gabbling crew, joined by every person they recognized, or who had known Hope and Dickey. Joined by everyone that is, but Lillian Toff, who was perched on a table in the bar, hoping that she intended to sue Hope for alienation of affections. . . .

At the narrow-twisting staircase that led up to the captain's room, Hickey commanded the party to halt. Up he went himself to announce the excitement, and to request the captain to make way for a wedding.

For the longest time he was gone. Gone behind the door of the captain's room. While at the foot of the staircase stood Hope and Dickey, side by side, breathless, wordless, listening to all that was said, and grinning idiotically.

The minutes dragged. A sense of restlessness ran through the crowd. Tighter became Dickey's grip on Hope's clammy hand. . . . And at last the captain's door was flung open and Hickey appeared. A crestfallen and sad-eyed Hickey, gazing down on them. With the captain smiling quizzically behind him.

"You can come up," announced Hickey sorrowfully. "But you won't like it!"

Dazed, Dickey and Hope looked at each other.

"Why, in the name of God?" shouted Dickey from the foot of the staircase.

The captain pushed his way to the front. Explaining, most apologetically, that stories, tales and romances notwithstanding, he could not read a marriage service for them. Not even considering the friendship he felt for both Dickey's and Hope's fathers. Only when one is dying and wishes to marry another so that the estate might be inherited, or when the ship was doomed to sink; only in cases of extreme emergency was such a marriage permissible.

To the selected few who were invited up a few moments later, the captain went on to placate the deplorable lovers.

"It is not a ruling of the steamship companies," he sighed with true sympathy. "It is a land rule. You've no idea how many requests I have for wedding services. And no idea of what troubles and entanglements it would mean if I complied. Just figure for yourself! I would like nothing better than to oblige."

"Well," Hickey filled in the blank silence that followed the captain's ultimatum. "It's only fourteen hours until landing time."

Hope and Dickey gazed at each other tragically.

"Gee," Dickey breathed heavily. "We've waited so long. Darn near five years now."

"Say, what's the matter with you two?" Hickey grumbled with feigned irritation. "Here you kids have a happy ending, and still you're not satisfied. You're worse than the show business!"

"I just knew it!" Millie's voice poured itself softly through the room. "I just knew something terrible would happen!"

"Aw, will somebody step on that!" pleaded Tom Post nervously. "Judy, do you mean to tell me we can't get rid of Hope tonight?"

"Well," Dickey grinned as he accepted a special frosted glass from the captain. "This makes twice I've been done out of a real wedding. Believe me, tomorrow we're going to make the rounds. We're going to get married civil, church and every way they serve it."

Hope looked wistfully at Dickey, close beside her. "I'm game," she agreed. "But what wouldn't I give right now for a nice chaplain? And I don't mean Charlie!"

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK, March 7. (AP)—Stocks heavy; American Tel & Tel leads decline.

Bonds firm; rails advance.

Curb steady; changes narrow.

Foreign exchanges irregular; sterling at new 1932 high.

Cotton barely steady; southern selling; lower cables.

Sugar steady; commission house buying.

Coffee quiet; Brazilian support.

CHICAGO—Wheat easy; large increase visible stock, bearish Argentine crop estimate.

Corn easy; disappointing cash trade; increased visible stock.

Cattle strong.

Hogs active and higher.

COTTON IS LOWER

NEW ORLEANS, March 7. (AP)—Lower cables and hedge selling by spot interests made cotton prices slightly lower here the first half hour. The opening was very quiet with May the only active month. Basic stocks also tended to bring in increased selling.

The weather map was generally unfavorable. It being too cold for plowing in the northern section and too cold in Southwest Texas for proper germination of seed. Cables were 10 to 12 penny points worse than due at the opening here.

May opened 1 point down at 7.09 and traded down to 7.05, five points under the opening. July, inactive on the opening at 7.22, lost 4 points in the early trading.

ENGLAND GETS GOLD

NEW YORK, March 7. (AP)—Forced less than six months ago to abandon the gold standard because of dwindling supply of the precious metal, England today finds itself in the usual position of sitting still while much of the world engages in a rush to dump gold into her lap.

It is not likely that enough gold will be sent there to bring the British reserves even close to the large American total, but another six months to a year of the present trek of yellow metal to London will greatly help the British nation to consider plans for getting back on the gold standard, it is explained in international banking circles in Wall street.

Less talk is heard now of throwing the world off the gold standard, bankers point out. Now that gold is beginning to come out of its hiding places, and is beginning to exert its warming influence on credit, proponents of drastic changes in the world's monetary system have been turning their studies to other questions.

PUBLIC FORUM RAILROAD--

Easy Tax Money
Editor, The NEWS:
I am basing this letter on an article that appeared in the Sunday morning Pampa NEWS of March 6 concerning gravel payments.

Now I know nothing about the proceedings of the commissioners court, Tom Jackson, or what not, but as for the payments of this gravel bill as set out in the Pampa NEWS are true, I think it is the most flaming way of doing business I know of.

The idea of taking the $2,908.30 Jackson bill and paying them $500 more than was actually and originally demanded is an item that the taxpayers of precinct No. 2 should remember. It seems that the hiring of Tom Jackson by Commissioner Cox has given the commissioners court more trouble and expense in the last twelve months than any other business that came before them.

And it seems from the article in the paper that Commissioner Cox is trying to take over the duties of the Welfare Board through his office.

Japan Is Likely to Quit League

TOYKO, March 7. (AP)—Agitation for withdrawal of Japan from the League of Nations increased today as officials and the public digested reports from Geneva describing a condemnation of Japan's invasion of China by smaller nations in the league assembly last Saturday.

Even in official quarters the opinion was heard that Japan should withdraw from the league as soon as the present conflict with China is settled. The official said Japan proposed to retain a garrison in Shanghai's international settlement after withdrawal of the main force there.

LINDBERGH--

er the kidnaping?
No.
What token, if any, did the kidnapers leave to identify their later communications to Colonel Lindbergh from fake messages?
None.
Have the police or Colonel Lindbergh received any messages they believe are from the kidnapers?
None.
Do the state police or Colonel Lindbergh believe the baby is dead or alive?
We believe the baby is alive.
Man Is Released
Was Johansen Jung's husband of a seamstress in the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother) released after being questioned in Newark last night?
Yes.
Was the milk bottle found in Johnson's car the property of the company which furnished milk for the Lindbergh baby? (Henry Johnson, friend of Jung and suitor of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, was still being questioned in Newark today.)
I can't tell you anything about the milk bottle as investigators have not reported as yet.
Will Johnson be released under bond or will he be detained further?
That depends on the outcome of his questioning.
Has the report on the questioning of Johnson been received by the state police at the Lindbergh home?
No, not as yet.
What are the orders to the state police if the kidnapers, after negotiating satisfactorily with Colonel Lindbergh, attempt to bring the baby to the Lindbergh home?
Do everything possible to help them deliver the child.
Has Colonel Lindbergh asked the state police not to interfere with the negotiations and the safe return of the baby to the house? Has anyone made this request?
(A) Col. Lindbergh has made no such request. (B) no.
No Disagreement
What is the basis for the disagreement between the police and Col. Lindbergh as to the method of procedure in this case?
There is absolutely no disagree-

My business takes me all over the world

"Guess I'm like most Americans who travel a lot, I take many of my hobbies with me. Chesterfields, for instance. I've smoked 'em for years.

"They're not only made good, but they're made to keep good, and that's why they hold old customers like me.

"Take the tobaccos. That fragrant Turkish tobacco—your taste gets that, all right. And the whole blend—say, there's nothing like it for milder, better taste.

"But my point is, Chesterfields are just the same wherever I buy them—Argentina, India, New Zealand. The package is O. K.—moisture-tight, clean-looking—keeps the aroma in.

"Even the paper comes into it. As far off as Shanghai I've noticed how pure and white and fresh it is.

"I've never yet found a town where Chesterfields couldn't be had! And no matter where I've bought 'em, they've always been just exactly right!"
