What CONGRESS is doing Thursday

of the status of business in the community. Buying, which is one of life's most important duties, cannot be effectively done without reading advertising, nor can a merchant properly reach his prospective buyers without this medium.

Welcome Gas Chicago, in the grip of a cold wave, was glad to have an extra portion of Panhandle gas. Industrial plants, in difficulties and unable to make site moves, are glad to obtain savings which gas means, plus undeniable conveniences it affords.

“DOUBLE” FOR LINDBERGH BABY

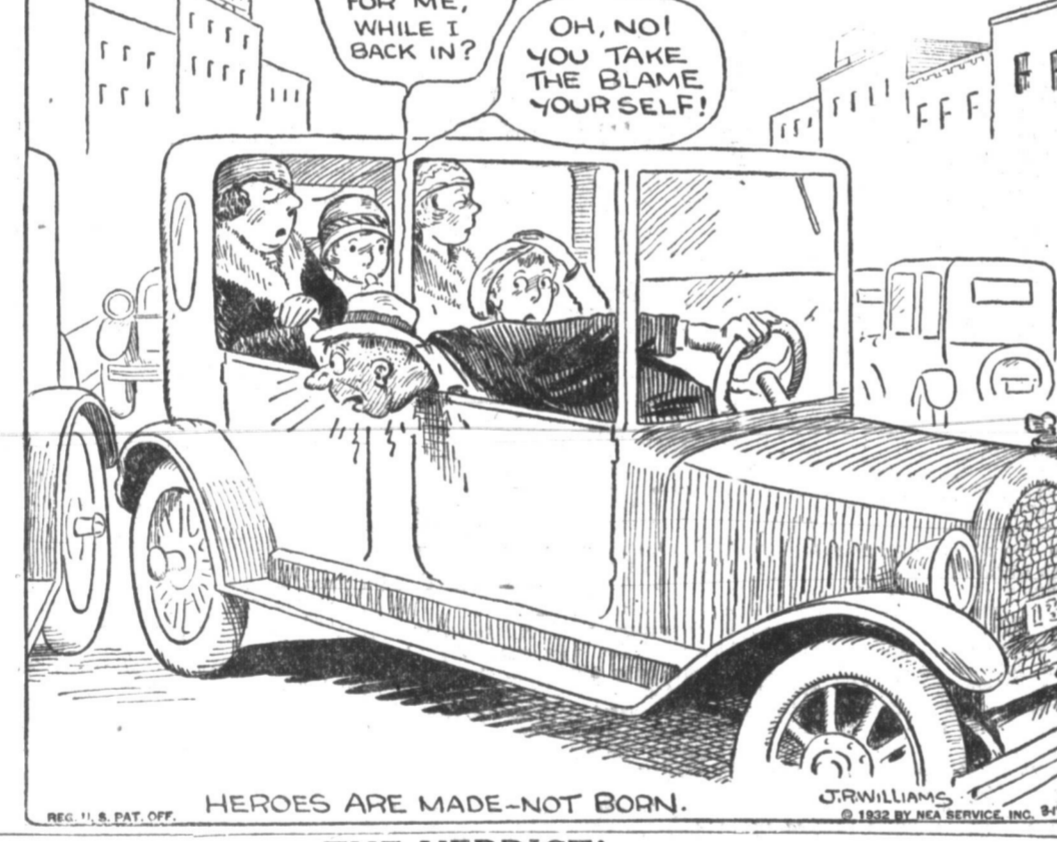

Excited throngs stampeded to Crossville, Tenn., during a quiet Sabbath afternoon when word spread that the curly-headed baby above had been located. The child, shown in the arms of Dr. V. L. Lewis of Crossville, at first was believed to be the kidnaped Lindbergh baby. But examination by Dr. Lewis showed that the descriptions, although distinctly similar, did not match.

MOVE AGAINST MAYOR SAN ANTONIO, March 17. (AP)—Recall petitions against Mayor Chambers and the city commissioners were set in circulation in the city today. Neither the mayor nor city commissioners were taking the matter seriously, however. All were of the opinion that the petition circulation was “another citizens league stunt.”

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

A few rays of light are beginning to pierce the fog of democratic disunion...

Two Roosevelt-dominated state conventions — in Washington and Minnesota — have adopted planks for a referendum by states...

The Roosevelt forces, if they do not actually control the national convention, are certain to be a very powerful factor in it.

It was a referendum that Chairman John F. Raskob favored at the spring national committee meeting...

To answer such a question is beyond the province of this writer. It is sufficient for the present to observe where, and in what manner the line of cleavage is forming.

To Rely on Hurley

The two brightest stars are missing from the troupe of 1928 republicans spellbinders, and party heads are pondering how to fill the void...

Much reliance probably will be placed in Patrick Hurley, the secretary of war...

The dramatic personae of the democratic stump-show cannot be predicted until certain other matters have been settled.

Has Slomp Retired?

If C. Bascom Slomp's recent resignation as republican national committeeman for Virginia really means his retirement from politics...

At a long succession of national conventions he has shown up with a substantial bloc of southern delegates in his vest pocket.

He is one of the quietest but most thorough workers in the whole republican vineyard...

His old friends do not believe he can break the habits of years. They expect southern delegations for a long time to come to show the influence of his fine Virginia hand.

Baker A Mystery

Whether Newton D. Baker really is a candidate for president remains one of the deepest mysteries in a democratic situation rich in mystery.

Political observers found circumstantial evidence of presidential aspirations in his statement disclaiming any intention to advocate a League of Nations plank this year.

For three days recently he was in Washington, attending a conference of racial and religious groups...

Yet Mr. Baker, a man of recognized ability as a public speaker, delivered extensively and with no show of oratory...

Surely if he is a candidate, he is giving the reverse English to the accepted methods of vote-making.

Large Chorus of Men Led by John Sturgeon and Male Quartet Sing At Christian Revival Wednesday

At the revival meeting at the First Christian church John Sturgeon led a large chorus of men, and a male quartet rendered a number last night. The crowd present commented most favorably on the fine singing. We trust that the men of the church, assisted by friends from outside, will help us another night soon.

The services are growing in interest and power, and persons are attending from considerable distances. The women of the church meet daily (except Sunday) in prayer meetings at 2 o'clock at the church and then go out in personal visitation. A real revival, with clear Bible preaching of good old time religion, and in the power of the Holy Spirit, is blessing the church and city. The services are at 8 o'clock every night, including Saturday, in the fine new church at 500 East Kingsmill Ave. Brother O'Malley has had wide and very timely experience in the regular evangelistic field, and knows how to bring the gospel truth to the hearts of the people.

Last night in discussing "Explanations That Do Not Explain" he began with Adam and showed how, down the ages, men made false excuses that in their very nature were absurd and untrue. Men complain that they are unworthy, and yet in the next breath complain of the church being imperfect. Heaven is perfect, and for perfect people, but the church is for sin sick souls, to restore, and develop righteousness; it is a school to teach the things of God. Our very unworthiness makes us proper subjects for Christ, came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Real conversion places us in the hands of the Great Physician, Christ, who can save and exalt even the lowest, who come in true repentance and earnest, obedient faith. The preacher especially urged immediate decision, saying that now, the present hour is God's time, and the only time man has, for the past is gone forever, and no man can reach into the future, or know what a day may bring forth. He referred to Bible records showing that those who were saved at once, while those who delayed for "a more convenient season" never turned to God, but perished in their sins. Men can not afford to trifle with this all important issue of salvation and eternal life, but should make it their chief concern until it is decided rightly and in their lives they "Crown Jesus Lord of All."

O'Malley, who maintained he was brought to the meeting "more for exhibition than for an oration, told many interesting things about St. Patrick, his work in Ireland, and the verdant country of the "Emerald Isle."

CLOCKS TELL DATE, WEATHER

BY MARGERY TAYLOR
Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's Magazine. Written for Pampa Daily News

Ever since clocks were invented, they have tempted man's ingenuity and sense of design, but there never were clocks in all history like the new ones.

It isn't simply that they run by electricity, but in design, also, they are as modern as tomorrow.

Mantel clocks, desk and table clocks, clocks for any room including the kitchen, all come in novel designs.

One clock, for instance, shows numbers on its face—there are just lines to mark the hours. A new desk clock, electric, not only gives you the right time, but also chimes with the day of the week and the date.

For the bedside table, there is a clock which has a small light bulb behind the face; the light may be turned higher to be a night lamp. This particular clock has a kindly but firm alarm.

Merten Parents Attend Program Given by Pupils

The Merten Parent-Teacher association was favored by pupils of the school with a program of music and readings Tuesday afternoon.

The numbers included: Songs, "The Seed Baby" and "The Robin and the Chicken" by the first grade pupils; a Dutch dance by pupils of the second grade, accompanied by the first grade rhythm band; song, "The Wise Bird" and "The Robin," by pupils of the second; song, "The Boy and the Bird," by Gene Alford and Ruth Ellis; reading, "The Little Dutch Shoes," by Billie Ben Knapp; songs, "The Little Doves" and "The Seed and the Weed," by third grade pupils; rhythm band numbers, "Clap Dance" and "La Czarine" by the third grade.

Mrs. J. C. Browning read letters from the state and district presidents.

Mrs. Stark Is Review Leader

Eleven women of the Central Baptist W. M. S., under the direction of Mrs. G. C. Stark, reviewed the book "Land of the Southern Cross" yesterday afternoon at the church in preparation for examinations on the book.

A monthly business meeting will be held by the W. M. S. next Wednesday.

For the man's room and the boy's room, you can get the popular ship model which is also a clock—as well as a thermometer and barometer. And then there are the new clocks in lamp bases.

Strangely enough, right in our age of electric clocks our old "feathered friend," the cuckoo clock, seems to be coming back. Perhaps he'll be electric, too, some day.

Mrs. Stroup Is Guest of Honor

Mrs. C. T. Funkapillar and Mrs. W. B. Campbell were hostesses at a shower given to honor Mrs. J. G. Stroup in the Stroup home on Sunday lease, LeFors, yesterday afternoon.

Sewing was the diversion of the afternoon, at the close of which refreshments, with Easter favors were passed.

Those attending were Mesdames W. Purviance, S. A. Hurst, M. M. Robinson, O. H. Booth, A. W. Babington, Lewis Robinson, B. Robinson, Siler Faulkner, and Mrs. Pebble of LeFors.

By WARE TORREY

NEW YORK—Twenty American industrialists turn economists in Samuel Crowther's "A Basis for Stability." Myron Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the U. S. Steel Corporation, suggests that the short week may become permanent in American business. Alfred Sloan, president of General Motors, finds that the depression followed a breakdown in our financial system not the business system. He suggests the possibility of a business man advisory economic council. Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is encouraged by the apparent friendliness with which government has come to regard the railroads. Former governor Frank O. Lowden says that American bankers are foolishly freezing farm loans in favor of more salable bonds even though farm loans probably will pay out better.

Other contributors are Henry Ford, who reiterates his gospel of high wages but denies that industry has a primary obligation to support a certain number of workers. J. C. Penney and Martin J. Insull.

Analyzing Literature

American thought, feeling and culture are dissected and then crystallized in Ludwig Lewishon's critical evaluation of American writers, "Expression in America." The book is a notably sensitive analysis of American literary history—the authors themselves, and what they stood for as well as what they wrote.

Nan Britton publishes a new book, "Honesty or Politics," amplifying "The President's Daughter," describing the work of the "Elizabeth Ann Guild," and telling of the difficulties of making her first book public.

Included in "Honesty or Politics" are letters from interested persons, photographs of Elizabeth Ann and a further account of interviews and documents affecting Nan Britton's claims.

New Novels Varied

Three widely variant novels stand out among the new books. John Dos Passos in "1919" slices keenly through the lives of certain representative Americans, making a panorama that is clarified by brief interpolations called "biographies," "the camera eye" and "newsreels." Vicki Baum's new novel, "And Life Goes On," is also an analysis of people and of a scene—the town of Lohwinkel—but it written in a more leisurely tempo that reveals the analysis with cumulative effect. "The Long Rifle" by Stewart Edward White is a convincing story of the early chapters which cut their way toward the west and thereby marked a way for Lewis and Clark and the Forty-Niners.

Harper Leech levels a revolutionary attack at traditional economic theory as embodied in the law of supply and demand in his book "The Paradox of Plenty." Leech decided that the law is not more sacred than other laws man has made to explain events, and insists it is false because there is no lack of supply of the coming fundamental necessity—power. The law of supply and demand means that scarcity makes value, Leech says. If there is no scarcity there is no value as well. Wealth must be determined on the "going concern" value rather than on the possession of tangible things.

Tips on CONTRACT TAKEOUT DOUBLES

By TOM O'NEIL

Doubling of an opponent's bid to compel one's partner to bid is often a successful method of arriving at the correct contract in bridge.

Novices at times get into trouble with such doubles because their hands are too weak. An informative, or takeout double, should be made primarily on weakness in the suit doubled. Indeed, an informative double is often advisable when the doubler holds the ace and more of the suit doubled.

The doubler must be prepared usually to support a response in hearts or spades especially if one of those major suits has been bid by an opponent.

Minimum requirements for the double ordinarily are three honor tricks.

Such a double is not made when partner has bid. In that instance the double would indicate a possibility of the opponent being set.

The great advantage of the informative double is that without danger it shows partner a much stronger hand than would be revealed by a bid of a suit, requirements for defensive overcalls being much less than the standards for opening bids.

Informative doubles in tournaments often have resulted in game being made by the partner of the doubler on four-card suits containing no honors. Here is a typical doubling situation:

WEST	EAST
♠9 8 7 6	♠AKQ2
♥5 4 3	♥A 2
♦K 10 9	♦J 6 5 4 3
♣AK 9	♣6 4

Assume that north opens the bidding with one heart. East's cards are better than a normal hand. His longest suit, diamonds, is too weak to bid. One stopper in hearts is insuffi-

KITTY FREW

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: Discovery that her mother-in-law is plotting to undermine her marriage determines Kitty Frew to persuade her husband to take her away from his parents' home. She has not been happy staying there, but Gar's mother persists in giving Gar money and telling him to have a good time instead of going to work. Her small-town background prevents her from fitting in with Gar's friends, and she is ostracized especially by Marge Crosby, who wants to amaze Gar. For some time Gar has been busy with Marge, helping direct a little theater group. Once during his absence Kitty met Gar's half-brother, David, who is estranged from the family, and whom she likes and trusts. Gar is young and irresponsible, and fails to realize Kitty's discontent and his mother's unfriendly attitude toward her. He scolds Kitty for not being warmer to his friends, but says he will work.

Chapter 13 ULTIMATUM

POUND was telling Mrs. Frew that Griffin was at the door with the car. They went away; Kitty heard Pound going from the drawing room with the tea things.

She went swiftly up the stairs; she shut the door of her room—Gar's room—behind her. Standing against it, she stared about her for a moment, as if the familiar things in the room had taken on strangeness. Gar's things, for the most part; her own few possessions seemed scarcely to show. She bathed, running the water to almost scalding heat, yet so hot was she still with anger that she felt it cool. She dressed, her fingers moving mechanically.

"I'm not going out with you any more until you can pay for our pleasure," Kitty told Gar.

Before her mirror she suddenly put down her brush. Why, that girl facing her wasn't Kitty Brandon! She gave a short half-laugh. Her chin—it was funny—thrust out! And then she remembered what David had said about her chin, other things David had said. "If you have a chance—"

And now she had her chance, right in her hand. She and Gar could go to a hotel for to-night and to-morrow they'd find a furnished apartment, a home secure from that woman's scheming.

She put on the dress she had traveled in, coming to Washington. She dragged her suitcase out of the depths of Gar's closet's. When you began to pack her clothes, she thought, support a home I'll come little heedlessly. She felt that on the new yellow shirt she had hooked when she heard Gar's mother on the stairs outside. She opened the door.

"Gar!" She clung to the door. "Was so big, so dear. Gar, I'm not to feel you!"

Then she straightened up and away to look up at him. She held a tight hold of his hand as he pushed him into the room. "Now, what's all about it!"

"It's going to be great, Kit. Decker caught Marge's ideas about it. We're going to keep the barn effect, the rafters and things—"

"But, Gar, I mean—your father! What did he say about the job?"

Gar was taking off his coat. He did not notice the pleading on Kitty's face. "Oh, that," he answered easily. "I didn't see Dad. I talked it over with the Mother, and she advised against it. She thinks I ought to stick around home this winter and give my time to this new theater venture. We're fixed comfortably, and it isn't as if Dad couldn't afford to keep us. Say—we've got to get dressed, Kit. The bunch is going to the Hoffman for dinner. Somers's going with Marge. Red's in a stew about that. Fix the studs in my shirt, will you, sweet? I'll jump into a bath—"

Kitty took a dress shirt out of Gar's bureau. She put in the studs and spread the shirt out on the bed. She found a collar and a tie and put them beside it. Socks— She was shivering; her whole body felt cold, numb, her brain a dead thing.

There was something she had to tell Gar, something she had to do— She took up the yellow dress, vaguely aware that it had to do with her purpose, and was standing, staring dumbly down at it when Gar emerged from the bathroom, rubbing his curly hair with a towel.

"That's right, Kit—wear that. It's going to be a big night to-night." His words, his tone released her brain from its numbing weight. She faced him, crushing the yellow dress in her hands.

"I'm not going to-night, Gar." He saw her face, then. He stared at it, puzzled, frowning a little. "Not going? What's the big idea?"

"I'm not going out with you any more until you can pay for our pleasure with money you've earned."

She could let in a faint surprise at the steadiness of her tone.

Gar's frown deepened. "Oh, lord, are you going to begin that old song? Well, you can't mind if I go without you."

"I can't mind it as much as the humiliation of going with you and knowing that your mother is—buying you!"

But Gar did not hear that. His angry glance had gone to the half-packed suitcase.

"What's this? Going back to the chickens and the pigs? Well, remember me to them and to Aunt Je-mima and Uncle Joshua—"

He looked so like an angry, spoiled boy, his hair rough, his suspenders hanging, his fingers fumbling with his collar, that a part of Kitty wanted to laugh, to manage the unruly collar button, to smooth his hair, to kiss away the dark smudges. But she did not move. She held the yellow dress she had driven in her arms to the door. "I'm not going to stay in this apartment to-night. When you are ready to support a home I'll come little heedlessly. She felt that on the new yellow shirt she had hooked when she heard Gar's mother on the stairs outside. She opened the door.

"Gar!" She clung to the door. "Was so big, so dear. Gar, I'm not to feel you!"

Then she straightened up and away to look up at him. She held a tight hold of his hand as he pushed him into the room. "Now, what's all about it!"

"It's going to be great, Kit. Decker caught Marge's ideas about it. We're going to keep the barn effect, the rafters and things—"

Brilliant Cast for One-Act Play Is Given an Appealing Production

Unpopular aspects of plays entered by Pampa high school in one-act play tournaments during the last two years seem to be lacking in "The High Heart," presented at the high school auditorium twice yesterday, in the morning to the school students and last night to the Little Theater.

Miss Ariess O'Keefe's latest entry in the Interscholastic League contest has an emotional appeal that was lacking in "Submerged" and "He," although these two plays probably have more merit than "The High Heart." When well performed there is nothing more touching than the spectacle of a youth sacrificing his life to save the girl he loves from dishonor and disgrace—and that scene is the climax of "The High Heart."

Miss O'Keefe's cast is the best she has ever assembled. The players have had experience in many plays during the last two years. This play is their best effort. Their work is almost perfect—and it's a wonder how Miss O'Keefe developed such good acting, cultivated voices.

STICKS TO CLAIMS

Barney McGeagan Denies That He Assisted in Slaying

HOUSTON, March 17. (AP)—Barney McGeagan, on trial as the slayer of gangster John Cherris, went through a stiff cross-examination by the prosecution today, but stuck to his claims of innocence.

About the most important admission drawn from the ex-convict, who is being tried as a two-time slayer and may not get less than a life sentence if convicted, was that he purchased automobile license plates the state contends were used on the automobile in which Cherris was taken for a ride.

ABILENE, March 17. (AP)—Pete Ramos is a young Mexican who "lifted" a chicken and got himself in a scramble trying to make restitution.

Ramos was on trial in 104th district court here today. He pleaded guilty and waived jury. N. E. Hicks the complaining witness, was on the stand.

"Well, you got your chicken back, didn't you?" asked counsel for the defense.

"It was this way," Hicks started to explain. "The boy stole a frier from me and I got a brown Leghorn hen back."

"That's enough of that," wearily broke in Judge W. R. Chapman, "let's get to something more important. Thirty days for you, Ramos and sentence suspended."

The beaming defendant got out of the courtroom before reporters.

CITES BIG SAVINGS

Land Owners Will Fight For Rights

EL PASO, March 17. (AP)—The West Texas Land Owners' association today began a more active campaign to obtain what its officers say is protection from the ruin to thousands of land owners made imminent by the decision of the state supreme court holding null and void senate bill 310.

This bill was designed to clear title to land bought from the state, on which oil and other minerals have been found.

The court decision places more than 8,000,000 acres of mineral classified land in West Texas in the same status as it was prior to enactment of the bill, and makes land owners liable to the state for half of lease bonuses and rentals, officers said.

By insisting on itemized statements from all state officers and refusing to accept "round figures," Governor Sterling said he had uncovered irregularities in various sections of the state.

NEW AIRPORT OPENED
