Making Sound Conditions Known:

CONFIDENCE

Confidence is a thing contagious and by far the most constructive rejuvenating and depressionless thing we have to pass on to others. Pass it on, it gathers momentum as it goes.

Thinking people, weighing all things included in our present situation, can easily see that the proportions that justify confidence are overwhelming. In spite of the draw-backs, taken all in all, our achievement of 1931 and so far into 1932 in the Panhandle, command attention and respect.

Let us look about us and really observe!

What has happened to our confidence in our city and community? We had a generous supply of it in 1929. Have we any less of anything now than we had then?

Have our merchants failed us _____?

Certainly not—they have continued to supply us with desirable merchandise at prices that have left us a-gasp!

Have our banks lost our money _____?

No! Every penny with interest is there waiting for us.

Has our town become shabby—down at the heels _____?

To the contrary—and our imposing sky-line becomes more so day by day.

Have our friends betrayed or cheated us _____?

Friends become closer to us and we find them nearer and dearer, more eager to lend a helping hand now than ever before.

Where then is our loyal confidence? Has it crawled back into its shell for fear that it might be abused? Confidence, in hiding, lets fears and doubts take charge and there is bound to be trouble then.

Old Man Depression has been a hard task-master. He has hounded us, driven us to measures never dreamed of before; frightened us and paid us with despair in good measure. The employed along with the unemployed have been in his employ together. So long as we sat around and gloomed over existing circumstances, the old faker thrived, but we know better now. We have risen and are fast shaking loose his hold.

We may not gain our full measure of confidence this week or next, but as we weigh the good against the bad; the truth we KNOW against the false rumor we hear, we move closer to it and distrust and fear will disappear.

A world without confidence is a poor kind of place. Did you ever notice that you respect and deal with the people in whom you believe? Confidence inspires activity and precludes the necessity of delays. Business hums when confidence is the rule. When we gain confidence in our country, our city and our business associates; good business will not only come back but we will find that it is here already.

"Tarzan, the Ape Man" Begins at LaNora Theater

"Tarzan, the Ape Man", Edgar Rice Burroughs' widely-read African adventure novel, has been brought to the screen under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke of "Trader Horn" fame, and will be shown starting today at the LaNora theater.

Because the hero of this story is a white man who has been brought up in the jungle and lives like the apes in the tree-tops, making his way by swinging through them from limb to limb, difficulty was encountered in finding someone of sufficient athletic prowess to fill the exacting role.

Has Perfect Physique
The problem was solved when Johnny Weissmuller, world's champion swimmer and one of the finest examples of masculine physiques, was cast as Tarzan. Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith, as leaders of an English safari seeking ivory wealth, Maureen O'Sullivan as Smith's daughter, Doris Lloyd, Forester Harvey and Ivory Williams fill the remaining principal roles. Jungle thrills outdoing even those of the sensational "Trader Horn" are promised in the daring trek of the safari through the wilds of Africa in search of the curious "Elephant's Burial Ground" in the course of which the adventurers meet with terrifying obstacles. The wife of the white man are matched against those of beasts and savage pygmies with the primitive winning out in the end, while screen romance of the new order is entailed in the curious love affair of the Ape Man and English girl.

What are reported to be some of the film's most hair-raising episodes include an attack of lions by night upon the safari camp; the crossing of a river filled with hippopotami; a fight between Tarzan and a bull-ape; the rescue of a trapped elephant and the subsequent efforts of the grateful beast to aid his rescuers.

Captured by Pygmies
There is also an amusing episode in which the heroine is carried through the trees by a herd of apes; the capture of the safari by the pygmy tribe; their subsequent escape from death in a gorilla pit and the spectacular charge of a huge herd of elephants through the pygmy village leaving devastation and terror in its wake.

Settings of tremendous magnitude were required in giving the picture the authentic backgrounds of the original locales laid in the African region around Lake Albert and the Mountains of the Moon, where herds of giant apes are found. Hundreds of savage jungle beasts were used in the production for the filming of some of the most unusual animal scenes ever photographed.

Thomas Receives Inquiries About Train Exhibits

The exhibits on the Santa Fe demonstration train which interested the Gray county farmers most were the irrigation of gardens, creep feeders for beef calves, and hog self-feeders. If the inquiries that have come to County Agent Ralph Thomas' office are any indication. Since the visit of the demonstration train to Pampa and Miami numerous requests have come to the office of the county agent for more information regarding sub-irrigation of gardens. There also has been a great demand for blue prints for building creep feeders for calves and self feeders for hogs. A few inquiries have also come in regard to re-tracing of orchards, and the large

Moving? don't forget your telephone

If you plan to move, let us know when and where as soon as you can... preferably ten days in advance. A telephone in your new home will make the moving job easier.

There will be supplies to order... errands to run... little repairs to be made. Here are some of the people you'll probably want to call:

- the grocer . . .
- the druggist . . .
- the plumber . . .

If you'll give us sufficient notice, we'll try to have your telephone connected on or before the day you move.

And here's a suggestion . . . before the rush of moving begins, take time to plan for telephone service that will fit changed conditions. Perhaps you will need an extension telephone in bedroom or kitchen . . . an individual line . . . an extra directory listing . . . or other improvements in the kind of telephone service you are now using.

It's a good idea to plan such changes in advance. We'll be glad to help you. Just call the business office.

Kitts of Athens Will Coach at Rice Institute

BY BILL PARKER Associated Press Sports Writer Kitts Moves In After several years on the outside, Coach Jimmy Kitts has moved into the Southwest conference where he once started in football, basketball and baseball for the Southern Methodist Mustangs. Kitts, recently signed as Rice Institute's basketball coach, will remain in Texas instead of trekking to South Carolina where he had a coaching job offered him but could not agree with Carolina on salary. Graduating from Southern Methodist university after four years of athletic stardom, Kitts coached at Dallas Academy and at the University of Dallas. When athletics were abolished at the University of Dallas, Jimmy signed to coach at Athens high school. He is concluding his sixth year at Athens. His record as coach of the Mustangs includes three Texas Interscholastic League championships, two National Interscholastic championships, six district and bi-district crowns, one Southern A. A. U. high school championship, one Big Four League championship and runner-up in the consolation of one National scholastic event. He holds the honor of developing more All-American high school basketball players than any other coach. He is the only coach who has won three Texas Interscholastic League championships, gaining titles in 1927, 1928, and 1931. Kitts is about 31 years old. He is married and the father of a husky youngster. His job at Athens was ranked as the best high school coaching job in Texas because Jimmy was paid a year-round salary and enjoyed the cooperation of Athens' entire population in developing championship teams.

Many People in County Can Beef

When asked if there had been much beef canning in Gray county this year County Agent Ralph Thomas replied, "I would rather name over the farmers that have not canned beef this winter than try to name the ones that have." Since the first of the year County Agent Thomas has conducted a total of 20 demonstrations showing the improved methods of cutting beef for canning. Nearly 300 farm people attended and took part in these demonstrations. These people in turn assisted neighbors in cutting beef for canning in nearly every community in the county. In addition to the meat work in Gray county Mr. Thomas assisted Miss Margie Lyon, Home Demonstration Agent of Carson county in conducting a beef cutting and canning school near Panhandle which 36 people attended, representing the respective communities of Carson county. A beef cutting and canning demonstration was also held in Roberts county by County Agent Thomas, and Miss Ruby Adams, home demonstration agent of Gray county. This demonstration was attended by 30 farm men and women. After learning the cutting and canning methods, eight additional beefs were canned in the community during the week by people attending the demonstration. A Laketon farmer states that with the canning of beef his family will consume three times as much beef as they do now. In the cotton states league this season, Billings said he would leave Tuesday or Wednesday for the Louisiana city and was busy rounding up some promising youngsters to take with him.

TAKES OVER CLUB

DALLAS, April 2 (AP)—Josh Billings, former catcher for the Dallas Steers, said today he had closed negotiations whereby he will take over and operate the Baton Rouge, La., club in the cotton states league this season. Billings said he would leave Tuesday or Wednesday for the Louisiana city and was busy rounding up some promising youngsters to take with him. City, is after the job and will get plenty of consideration. Athens school officials admit they would like to talk it over with Bill Bushman, coach of the Sunset Bison at Dallas. These three are among the better known coaches whose names have been linked with the Athens job. Naturally, there will be a flock of young college graduates anxious to stand in line for the job but they will have a difficult time beating some of the more experienced coaches out of front places. Sister MARY'S KITCHEN BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer Modern inventions have made an exact science of baking and there is little reason for failure when a delicate custard or a pan of biscuits is to be baked. Every stove manufacturer realizes the importance of dependable oven structure and builds his range on scientific principles. Most modern ovens have an oven regulator which automatically controls the flow of gas, oil or electricity. It is almost impossible to maintain consistent results in baking without the use of an oven thermometer of some sort. So, if your oven is not equipped with a regulator, invest in an oven thermometer. It will pay for itself many times over. A knowledge of the heat requirements demanded in the cooking of each type of food product is, of course, essential. Perhaps bread offers the most difficult problem for many women. Bread is baked to check the growth of the yeast plant, to cook the starch in the grain and to diffuse the alcohol formed by the fermentation. To accomplish all this, the baking must be very thorough. Intense heat is needed to check effectively the growth of the yeast plant and a long period of oven heat is required to cook thoroughly the starch and overcome fermentation. Consequently, the "hot" oven of 400 degrees Fahrenheit is advised for the first ten minutes. The gradual reduction of heat until the thermometer registers 300 degrees for the remaining baking period. If the oven is too hot or over 400 degrees, a crust is formed before the heat can reach the center of the loaf and insufficient baking is the result. Other yeast-risen products such as rolls and buns require a hot oven and since they are small a temperature of 400 degrees may be maintained throughout the baking. Hints for Cake Bakers Cake baking is a law unto itself and requires entirely different oven manipulation. Thin batter rather than thick dough and a different leavening agent present a different problem. The oven temperature should be low when cake is put into the oven and gradually increased until the required temperature is reached to complete the baking. Three hundred and fifty to 375 degrees are good temperatures for so that the distribution of the heat may be even—top, bottom and sides. Layer cakes, because they bake more quickly, are less apt to rise evenly. Crisp cookies should be baked in a hot oven. Molasses cookies, which burn easily, require a cool oven of not more than 350 degrees. Baking powder biscuits demand an oven with increasing heat. They should be put into an oven of 375 degrees and the heat steadily increased to 450. Although they are made with the same leavening agent that is used in cake, they are a stiff dough and because of this and their thickness they require a higher temperature. Pastry, although it contains no leaven, requires a hot oven and thorough baking if it is to be flaky and digestible. Four hundred to 450 degrees should be the oven temperature until the pastry is baked. Then the heat is reduced to take care of the filling. All egg mixtures, custards, souffles and the like require low temperatures. Any pudding in which eggs and milk are used in a custard-like combination must be baked at a low temperature. The oven must not be hotter than 350 degrees at any time. Three hundred candidates this spring entered a baseball "school" at East St. Louis, Ill., conducted by Bob Coleman, manager of the De. catuir Three-Eye league club.

BEING PROUD OF PAMPA IS A PRIVILEGE which does not belong wholly to Pampans. It is a privilege which is exercised by people of this entire Panhandle, and one which is noted at once in visitors.

Many cities have had oil booms and periods of building activity. Many cities have had their booms in periods of national prosperity. Yet, even under the most favorable of conditions, can you name even one city which has come out of a boom in as fine a condition as Pampa?

Pampa has been built on a permanent basis. To do this, it was necessary to assume a per capita debt in line with other cities of similar size.

This writer sees a future in which Pampa will need every improvement which has been made. Only a continuation of national conditions—unlikely, but, if true, then there would be no hope anyway—can prevent Pampa's becoming the commercial and wholesaling center of this territory.

The building of the new Pampa, under pressure of constant demands for the facilities which most cities attain in several decades—instead of 5 years—was a monumental task. For one, this writer will not fail to recognize that fact, and to give credit where credit is due.

Before any political aspirants or platform writers began outlining issues, this department sketched a program which included readjustment of city finances in keeping with the lessened demands and the need for retrenchment.

The NEWS could not be consistent and countenance any installation of a fee system in city affairs. This newspaper made a vigorous fight to abolish the fee system under the old aldermanic plan.

Moreover, the cost of services intended to protect the health of the community or the property of the community should be borne equitably, and not saddled upon individuals or merchants in the form of fees.

The small taxpayers benefit by services largely paid for by the larger taxpayers. Stop and think a moment about that. Small reductions benefit the large taxpayer, but the owner of a little property can hardly tell the difference.

This column regretted, if a column may be said to do things like that, the necessity of omitting Friday's usual effusion. But one can't write with ice packs over his eyes and the flu tearing at his vitals.

NEW YORK

NEW YORK—There are many high-falutin places where the work of an artist may be displayed to gain the notice of the high-brows. But few of them serve as well toward attracting the attention of the general public as an advantageously located shop window.

After all, if the artist's ability is not intended to be kept a secret of the limited initiates, what counts is to catch the eye of the public—which can manifold or utterly ignore talent.

Frances Savage, a truly American sculptor, did a bronze bust of Abraham Lincoln. Her permission was requested for a showing of the bust in a Fifth avenue shop window during the week of February 12.

The bust interested the man on the New York sidewalk. He had been taught by his school teacher to regard Lincoln as an idol, but, what's more, he found that the art of Frances Savage meant something to him in some perhaps inexplicable way.

He wasn't equipped to talk about the "strongly marked planes, a roguish surface that conveys in visible terms the essential quality of the man," as one and more of the local experts since have commented, in effect. His impression was, "That's pretty swell."

As a consequence, the reputation of Frances Savage boomed until, during the showing of some of her sculpture at the Women's City club, she found herself among the muchly talked of artists of the day.

She exhibited busts in bronze, plaster for bronze, and cement, and the expert opinion was that she has "the invaluable quality of mutability."

The thing that counts, though, is that Frances Savage, by a showing in a shop window, snared the fancy of the public after her intensive period of training in this country and abroad.

In the future, whether she does bronzes of Jefferson Davis or Lee, or just more heels of Continental cabaret girls, she will hold the interest not only of the professional esthetes, but of the window shoppers—and they are the mangifiers of reputation.

This city knew little about the personal life and habits of Ivar Kreuger, the "Swedish match king," although he certainly was far from being a stranger.

Beaded ladies, fat ladies, giants, midgets and other freaks of the sidshow had their day in the movies at Flatbush recently, when an S. S. Van Dine short murder mystery was filmed with a circus setting.

The day after that prohibition vote in the House they turned on the water in that new pumping system which can give New York 18,000,000 gallons to drink every day.

Some of the Madison Square Garden wags have tagged a new first name on that fighter, Mr. Ran. They call him "Also."

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON—The wiry, quick-tongued senator from Virginia—Carter Glass—has been in the business of politics for a long time.

He has held down important posts during his political career, ranging from a seat in the Virginia state senate to a place in the official family of the President of the United States.

But the thing he points to with the most pride in his career in politics is what he terms his non-partisanship method of approaching legislative matters.

In the senate, not so long ago, he broke what he considered his most cherished record, covering a period of 30 years, by making a partisan speech.

This independence of Glass is always on the surface. It is likely to crop out at any time.

The other day, for example, it was noised around Washington that one of the things "Uncle Andy" Mellon would do upon his arrival at the Court of St. James would be to re-open negotiations on the war debt situation with a view to readjusting the contracts now in force.

The report alarmed certain senators and the matter was brought up on the senate floor.

Democratic criticism was becoming so severe that Senator Reed broke in with the statement that he had been authorized by the White House to say that there was no foundation whatever to such a report.

"It is absolutely and unqualifiedly untrue," Reed shouted. "I am authorized to make such a statement by the President."

Glass sat calmly by during all the discussion. Toward the close, he stood up and drawled.

"I myself, can very easily conceive that circumstances may arise, if they have not already arisen, which would make it imperative to our own practical interest to readjust this indebtedness."

Reed, an ardent foe of war debt cancellation, appeared as if he had not heard Glass' words correctly. So did some of his Democratic brethren.

"The senator loses me," said Reed. "I do not lose myself at all," replied Glass.

And he is proud of the fact.

KITTY FREW by JANE ABBOTT

CHAPTER 28 DOES A PRINCESS EAT? KITTY put the incident of the orchids out of her mind. Marge wore them often; any one of a number of admirers might have sent them to her.

Those "two hours or so" loomed threateningly until a saving thought came to her. She'd go to Dorcas' apartment, surprise them all in their merriment. They'd be glad to have her come. She ordered a taxi, cab, "92 Ketchum Street."

She heard laughter as she entered the old house, Dorcas' door stood open, flooding the narrow upper hall with rosy light. Kitty stood in the door for a moment before anyone noticed her.

Christmas occupied her time and thought. In a bureau drawer she had hidden her gift for Gar. It was a crayon sketch of a New York skyline. "Granite Mountains," Kitty had thought when she first saw it, and the rising peaks had made her think of the Panther range at dusk.

She planned how Gar and she would celebrate his, their first Christmas together. They'd have a tree, of course. They'd trim it and light it Christmas Eve.

But Gar laughed when she said they'd have a tree. "We won't be home long enough to look at it, Kit. Marge is throwing a party Christmas Eve, at the theater—a sort of christening. And mother'll want us over at the house on Christmas Day."

Kitty would not be dismayed. She only smiled when Gar called her a fanny little kid.

Gar's time was given over more than ever to the Players. It was necessary for him to go to these last rehearsals, he explained to Kitty. Every day he went over to the little theater; there was always something or other there to demand his attention.

She accepted his compliment with a vivid blush. "This one does, I'm ravenous! Oh, it's nice, being here with you tonight."

She was relaxing happily, the old security sweeping over her. It was nice, this feeling of belonging to this cheer that prevailed. She forgot what she had fled from!

David seemed particularly nice tonight, a different David than she had known, ready to laugh, ready with nonsense that made the others laugh. She liked this David! She liked the look he gave her now and then which was so wholly hers. It had something of Tubby's devotion in it. It was the new dress, of course, she thought.

Presently she took alarm at the lateness of the hour. While she was bidding each one good-by and exchanging wishes for the Christmas Day David went down to the street to hail a taxi. He put her into it and leaned for a moment in the open window of the door.

"I have a little thing for you, Kitty. It's a promise. I'm going to finish that book."

"Oh, David, that'll be the nicest thing of all! You know how much I want it."

As the taxi rushed her back to the Tudor Arms she thought of David's promise, feeling a little glow of satisfaction that it had been made to her. David had let her in, the sister who was ready with affection and pride and concern for his success. Of course she really could help him more than Dorcas could because their feeling for one another always stood in their way; it made Dorcas more critical, David less confident.

Gar had not yet come in. It was almost midnight, almost Christmas Day. The lamp which Kitty had left burning touched with soft light the waiting Christmas tree. Kitty stood for a moment, looking at it. Before they rushed off to the party at the theater she and Gar would take time for the ceremony of switching on the lights.

She went to the bedroom and laid out Gar's evening clothes. She heard a key in the door—Gar! She ran out to the entry to meet him. Tubby and Red Harding stood in the open door, supporting Gar between them. Gar's head was hanging limply, sideways, his face blotched, idiotically blank.

Where has Gar been, and what has happened? Kitty learns only too well on Monday.
