'To seek admission here?' 'Oh, I ran a country printing plant On earth for many a year. The gate swung open sharply.

As St. Peter touched a bell. 'Come in,' he said, 'and take a harp. You've had enough of er trouble!

After what I've been thru In the newspaper game, This is sure gonna be a relief!

And to which we wearily add: The editor, standing at the bring of h—l. Knew the place by its sulphurous smell; 'Gosh, I'll hate it here—I think; Reminds me again of printer's ink.

Two Extremes The right to vote is a privilege which cannot be denied anyone, but it is a far cry from re-submission's possibilities to the evils of the saloons. There are evils in conditions surrounding efforts to prohibit intoxication, but a must not be forgotten that the corrupting effects of strong drink are devastating. Somewhere between these two extremes there may be a happier solution. Few who remember the saloons would wish to re-submit them—that is not the solution.

Many Modern Evils Mere repeal, without an other plan of control, would remove few present-day evils. It would not end boot-legging and tax-evasion. It would not lessen drinking. It would not end the racketeer, who has devised many lucrative methods of chiseling apart from liquor. It would not purge politics. It would not make the home safer, young people easier to rear, temperance easier to attain. Most any kind of control would be preferable to the saloons, running wide open on every corner, turning drunken burners upon the streets.

Short Memories Some people have short memories. Some do not remember how working men spent money to satisfy the drink habit when their families were hungry, their children ragged. Some have never seen this condition. Those who did see the saloons and who remember the evils will hardly vote for their return. The saloon as an issue would rank with the economic situation. But re-submission of a plan to lessen evils of prohibition without bringing back the saloons should get thoughtful attention of all people. There are too many other bigger issues to justify placing the coming presidential campaign on booze alone. Both major parties in their leadership are wet for political expediency. Then why should members of either on a lesser issue? The country is waiting for leadership big enough to see basic economic principles and the courage and insight to apply them to domestic and foreign conditions. This writer, personally speaking, would not attempt to obstruct re-submission as a right of suffrage, but he would not like to see the saloon made a political issue.

Diverting Attention Republican unholy alliances need rooting out of the whole economic structure of this country. Do you think it can be done by soft-pedaling this issue? We don't. The pampered pets of the G. O. P. include many of the beer barons of old and President Hoover begins his second campaign for the presidency with certain important tasks definitely cut out for him.

The wounds left by the prohibition duel at the Chicago convention may not heal easily, and directly indirectly the leader of the party will find himself obliged to do what he can to alleviate them.

He will be expected to put before the voters a new program of rehabilitation, projecting into the future the lessons of two and a half years of economic adversity.

In the matter of internal party affairs alone, he and his advisers will be compelled to do something about campaign financing, for the republican treasury is badly drained and prospective contributions are few and far between.

These are only a few of the problems Mr. Hoover faces as he accepts since more the standard of republicanism. Many others of a less pressing character already are on the waiting list, and still more are sure to appear as the campaign warms up.

Prohibition

Those who know the president's mind do not expect him to touch publicly about the prohibition issue.

He talked very little about it in his campaign speeches four years ago, and this time he is on still more delicate ground, after what happened in Chicago.

Through his lieutenants, however, he unquestionably will seek to restore the harmony that was rudely shattered in the process of writing a prohibition plank. It was in this same indirect fashion that he tried hard to keep peace at the time the plank was being written. He was surprised at the outcome, for he had expected no real flare-up over the resubmission proposal as first presented.

The guess of those who have followed the whole course of the question is that he will say something directly in his speech of acceptance, and then depend on quiet negotiation to get recalcitrants back into line.

Looking To 1937

For long time Mr. Hoover has been studying how a long-term economic plan might be applied, not only to cure present conditions but to guard against their return.

He has hinted at the trend of his thoughts once or twice in public utterances, but there is no evidence that a rounded-out program has yet taken shape in his mind.

When he bids for another four years of power, he will come before the country in a slightly different character.

He will be looking to March, 1937, not merely to the end of the present administration. Without doubt he will discuss national problems in that light, particularly the national problem of a new economic deal.

Filling The War Chest

The question where the campaign money is coming from is more acute than party leaders like to admit. Lean times never con-

Prohibition Agents Freed by Judge

DALLAS, June 22 (AP)—Prohibition Agents L. C. Smith and N. D. Heaton were freed today of legal responsibility for the slaying of P. M. McGlothlin, country store-keeper, April 8. United States District Judge William H. Atwell ordered an instructed verdict in their favor yesterday.

On motion of the prosecution all other charges against the agents were dismissed, as well as those against Buddy Board, an informer. McGlothlin was shot and his wife wounded when the agents tried to arrest a suspected bootlegger at his store. Mrs. McGlothlin said the couple mistook the agents for robbers.

Judge Atwell said the agents had a clear case of self defense. The McGlothlins were shot after the wife seized a pistol and the husband a shotgun.

Jesse J. Goad of Miami visited briefly here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wrinkle of LePors were in town yesterday.

One business man of national reputation who raised $200,000 for the republican party four years ago and whose home town has been particularly hard hit by the depression, has served notice he does not know where to turn for a single dollar now.

Of course it is not that hopeless everywhere, and the general expectation is that republican manna will arrive, in moderate amount, if the petitioning is sufficiently earnest.

Dublin Is Host To Huge Meeting

DUBLIN, June 22 (AP)—Dublin became a cathedral of heroic size today for the formal opening of the thirty-first international eucharistic congress.

Out of the half million or more people from 2 nations here for the great religious jubilation, only 2,400 could get into the pro-cathedral as first-hand witness of the colorful opening spectacle.

Loudspeakers carried the words and the songs, if not the color, to hundreds of thousands of others massed in the streets outside.

Before the procession formed, the bishops and other clergy not concerned in the ceremony assembled in their places within the cathedral, which was decorated with palms.

This Delegate Is Resourceful

LAMESA, June 22 (AP)—The depression and lack of funds aren't going to keep Gordon Treadway, Dawson county school teacher, from attending the national democratic convention in Chicago next week.

With a sign on his back bearing the word "to the democratic national convention, Chicago," Treadway is going to the windy city in the conventional manner—hitchhiking. He left here Tuesday and expects to be in Chicago by Saturday or Sunday.

Treadway, 24, is one of the 180 Texas delegates to the convention, having been named as a representative of his district at the state convention in Houston.

Franco-British Accord Looming

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, June 22 (AP)—The prospect of a Franco-British accord on the question of reparations rose over the conference of European powers here today and warmed what had been a virtual stalemate into new activity.

The new hope sprang last night when Premier Edouard Herriot of France informed Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain that France was ready to adopt a new policy, differing widely from her previous attitude and including the virtual scrapping of the Young plan.

The new French plan has three main points. It calls for:

1. Suspension of German reparations payments for one, two or more years.
2. Continuation of Germany's deliveries in kind.
3. A suggestion that, at the end of the suspension period, France would ask that a final global sum be fixed, spread among the United States and countries receiving reparations payments.

The new proposal had developed so far that the French and Belgian representatives even began a discussion of how much this final sum ought to be.

Congress Not To Rush Its Session

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Congress now expects to remain in session until the middle of next week, through at least part of the economic national convention which opens in Chicago Monday.

The expectation is based on the senate's deliberate slowing up in its consideration of the highly controversial unemployment relief bill, which is now the only major trouble spot on the congressional program. An agreement for a final vote today on the bill was sought, but even this was believed to be coming too late for adjournment by Saturday.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 22 (AP)—A severe attack of grippe kept Carlos Davila, president of Chile's ruling Junta, confined to his bed today while the weight of the army was thrown against communist forces which have threatened his regime.

President Davila's illness was said to be complicated by overwork during the strenuous two weeks in which he has been the principal figure in a revolution and counter-revolution.
