Editor Doubts Much Progress In Oil Planning

HOUSTON, Nov. 18. (P)—Peter Molyneux, Dallas, editor of the American Petroleum Institute, in an annual convention here, the oil industry, toward the oil industry, is maintained that it will be exceedingly difficult—if not impossible—to change this condition very materially.

"So long as the mass of men adhere to ideas that were born in a world of scarcity—and that are tenable at all only in such a world; so long as the political leaders of the people continue to make such ideas the basis of their views and acts with respect to public matters; so long as laws framed in accordance with such ideas remain in force and courts continue to interpret those laws in the light of precedents based on such ideas, just so long will it be difficult to make any progress toward an orderly, controlled and planned operation of the oil industry. And just so long will the social stake in the oil industry be constantly jeopardized and society's interest suffer."

as the present attitude of society toward the oil industry, and toward industry in general, is maintained that it will be exceedingly difficult—if not impossible—to change this condition very materially.

"So long as the mass of men adhere to ideas that were born in a world of scarcity—and that are tenable at all only in such a world; so long as the political leaders of the people continue to make such ideas the basis of their views and acts with respect to public matters; so long as laws framed in accordance with such ideas remain in force and courts continue to interpret those laws in the light of precedents based on such ideas, just so long will it be difficult to make any progress toward an orderly, controlled and planned operation of the oil industry. And just so long will the social stake in the oil industry be constantly jeopardized and society's interest suffer."

DEATH LIST GROWS

TOKYO, Nov. 18. (P)—Crippled communication lines brought in reports today that Monday's typhoon dead were known to number 58, and that 250 to 300 more were missing and feared lost at sea. The typhoon roared across six prefectures of central Japan, destroying 5,000 houses, damaging 10,000 more, and playing havoc with coastal shipping.

Find Flower Bulb That Kills Rats

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 18. (P)—An Oriental flower bulb has been found that will destroy rats and harm nothing else.

Such is the report of the biological survey station here, where the bulb, known as a red squill, has come as a boon and a relief from worry. It was not the discovery of this station of the survey, however, but presumably of the Denver bureau, where biologists here said it had been living a thorough test.

Its operation is based on the discovery that rats seemingly can not vomit.

As explained by George Kerr, bureau staff member, it sets up a violent irritation when eaten by rats or other animals in mixtures of grain mash or other bait. All other animals, once the irritation starts, immediately emit the mixture and are unharmed. Rats can do anything like that, however, and perish from the effects.

The bulb itself is like an enlarged tulip bulb, three to five inches in diameter and of orange-red color.

Michigan Senator Favors Submission

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (P)—The drive for a change in federal liquor law gained impetus today from an announcement by Senator Vandenberg, Michigan republican, that he favors immediate submission of a prohibition repeal amendment and liberalization of the Volstead law.

Vandenberg's announcement, made in a formal statement, came as anti-prohibitionists in the house were seeking to have the ways and means committee draft a beer bill in time for presentation when congress convenes.

Chairman Collier agreed to refer to committee members a suggestion from Representative O'Connor of New York, leader of the democratic wet bloc, that the group meet before congress convenes to draft a beer measure.

Vandenberg said he was in favor of "immediate resubmission of the eighteenth amendment" because "a just regard for the rights of majorities and the validity of law enforcement demands it."

OPENS OFFICE HERE

D. Brazel, assistant superintendent of the American National Insurance company, Galveston, arrived in Pampa today with Mrs. Brazel and small daughter. Mr. Brazel will open offices here. He has been living in Borger. His new territory includes, Clarendon, Shamrock, Borger, Pampa, and Wellington. Industrial insurance will be handled.

F. L. Warren of Tulsa is a Pampa visitor for a few days.

Roosevelt Will Attend Ceremony

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 17. (P)—For the first time, a president-elect is going to take part in New York's ancient biennial custom of formally inaugurating a governor.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, serving his last few weeks as governor of New York before vacating that office for the presidency, was announced to be present at the inauguration of the man he endorsed as his successor at Albany, Herbert H. Lehman.

"Sure," he said. "You bet I'm going to attend. Besides, it's always been customary."

B. L. Colchenaky of Okmulgee, Okla., is visiting with friends here this week.

A PATH TO PARADISE

ove our honey-jected as their Lux. "Let me live. I'm home."

ick for it, too-happily hedged that it would never mate with the market.

As they roared through pine forests, unpeopled and resinous, he listened to the sleepy murmur of her voice.

Why couldn't they dodge responsibilities; buy a cottage close to the Spanish frontier and bask forever in sunshine?

"If we were to get off at Bordeaux," she suggested mock-seriously, "we could be back in paradise tomorrow."

He smoothed his cheek against her dark head.

"It's the only sacrifice I wouldn't make for you."

In Paris next morning there was barely time to change to the boat-train. They reached Havre through Normandy orchards. Then all became haste.

They were waking from a dream; mercifully their awakening was gradual. A little respite yet remained; the Atlantic was a No Man's Land dividing illusion from reality. As they walked the docks, Santa's courage revived.

"We have each other; we can face anything."

The night before they landed, having danced till the orchestra had stopped, they were seated on deck, their chairs drawn together. Beneath the rug that covered their knees, Clive groped for her hand.

"Something on your mind?" she challenged.

"Santa, dear, this trip has taught me at least one lesson."

"Which? It's taught me many."

"That when one marries, it's wise to make a clean break with the past."

"Wise! When time kicks you, you have to."

"I'm referring to what happened at St. Jean—our bumping into Dak."

His brow she had been wearing vanished. Relief expressed itself in laughter.

"Clive, you're killing."

"What I mean is," he mumbled. She snatched his words.

"Do I intend to perform the Sob Sister Sade stunt each time we bump into him. I do not. Having said that, ghost, trot out the next?"

He turned the rug and helped her to her feet.

"There isn't a next."

But in the darkness of their cabin, when he thought her sleeping, she addressed him.

"I can hear you teasing. Stop worrying. All your ghosts are the same as Dak's."

"What's that?" He sat up.

"I'm here to protect you."

His gaze crossed at the vague outline of her childish figure. She, too, was sitting up.

"Protect me?"

"Never occurred to you, did it?" she giggled. "You fancy yourself so strong. Accept or leave it, that was the chief reason I married you."

Clive shrilled. It was new to pretend that she sheltered him.

On a Saturday afternoon in late August, soaring above flat shores New York took shape on the horizon. The liner which had been so swift and confident, slowed down to a crawl. To Santa and Clive it seemed they had never traveled; they had stood with the world had been moved by invisible scene-shifters.

No one of their own was on the dock. While trucks were being examined, they were handed a telegram, urging them to spend the week-end with Santa's parents at Cape Cod.

"We've too much to think about," Clive dismissed the invitation.

In the taxi, racing uptown, Santa thrust her hand through the air.

"It's a bit weird to lead back into so much uncertainty. But heaps of glorious things lie ahead. I'm sure."

He wasn't. She seemed to him another Nelson, raising the telescope to her willfully blind eye. Nevertheless, her confidence was reassuring. She had the knack of reducing his mountains to mole-

She continued to talk, making sunny remarks. He responded, but paid scant attention. The control of his life was slipping from him. All kinds of insidious influences were reviving. He must put up a fight before the memory of their recent equality had quite escaped her. While he was deciding how to tackle her, the parched greenness of Central Park grew up. A few minutes later the taxi was halting.

As they gazed across the threshold of their apartment he recalled how his parting wish had been that it and all that it contained might burn during their absence. Hand-in-hand they made a tour of inspection. Save for dust that had gathered, everything was precisely as they had left it. Without warning, Santa swung round and hugged him.

"It's good to be home."

He recognized the familiar intonation; she was expecting him to be grateful. That had been all right once. But since then they had spoken frankly; she knew how he detested the home of her providing.

"We're back—if that's what you mean," he grinned. "The dream's ended."

"But, old down-in-the-dumps," she flashed, "dreams begin again."

"Do we sleep here? What are our plans?" he asked abruptly.

"Guess so." She patted her hair. "Won't take long to make a bed. We'll have heaps of fun camping. Monday I'll engage a maid and we'll settle properly."

So that was the program! It was news to him. He wished he'd discussed with her their future on the voyage. The strong thing to do would be to brush aside her pretences—to treat her with the cold logic of a lawyer interrogating a witness. Abroad—especially that night in Paris—she'd been genuinely conscious-stricken in recalling the humiliation she'd caused him by compelling him to live in un congenial surroundings. All he had to do was to kick over the traces.

But he couldn't be brutal. He was in love with her.

Evening faded from gold to rose, from rose to twilight. Suddenly she rejoined him. She'd changed from head to heel. In her evening wrap and low-cut gown she looked irresistible.

"Did it for you, darling?"

He seized her small perfumed hands.

"Do you do everything for me, Santa?"

"Everything."

"Is there anything you wouldn't do?"

"Nothing—provided it was for your good." She peeped up at him slyly.

"You wouldn't make me a bought and-paid-for husband, would you?"

"Couldn't."

"Then good-bye to all this." He bowed to the shrouded furniture. "We'll continue our honeymoon."

"O, goodbye!" She snuggled against him.

He was in a mood to celebrate—to make a gracious gesture. When she discovered that their destination was the Angoulême, she protested.

"Too expensive."

He couldn't tell her that he was spending money to convince himself that he felt really sure of her. Over French dishes and boot-legged wine that he ordered, reminiscent of St. Jean de Luz, she reproached him.

"You don't need to do all this for me, darling. I'm your wife—not a phony-girl."

"Did you expect me to take you to Child's?"

"Shouldn't have minded, so long as I was with you."

"But you're not dressed to patronize Child's—no hat, bare shoulders, jewels."

"Never thought of that, Clive. But you do like me to be lovely?"

Beneath the table he caught her hezels.

Later she said:

"I've not forgotten how you hate the apartment. On Monday you'll be seeing Mr. Cleasy. After that we'll know where we stand."

"It's too late my job," he commented.

"If you have," she cut him short, "you'll find a better. Anyhow, to live a room at a hotel when we have a place of our own would be foolish."

"Suppose it would."

"And picture me," she added, "carting clothes back and forth. So let's endure the old apartment."

"Till Monday." He squeezed her fingers.

"Till we know where we're at." She returned the pressure.

Clive came to a bitter realization of his position, tomorrow.

NEXT LEGISLATURE CERTAIN TO ATTEMPT REPEAL OF DRY LAW

By CHARLES E. SIMONS AUSTIN, Nov. 18. (AP)—Observers are looking forward to some oratorical fireworks at the regular session of the Texas legislature next January, to be set off by the troublesome prohibition question. That an attempt would be made then to revise the state prohibition law was thought highly probable by members of the 42nd legislature who discussed the question informally during the second "lame duck" session of the present law making body. Opinion was pretty well divided among the group as to whether the attempts would get very far—belief being expressed that Texas had not advanced as far toward the liberal side of the liquor question as other portions of the country. Senator Gus Rusk of Schulenburg stated the first bill he would introduce at the regular session would be aimed at repeal of the bone dry Deane law, the state prohibition statute. Rusk stated the bill would be offered despite a prohibition clause in the state constitution. Rusk's action would be in line with anticipated submission by congress of repeal of the eighteenth amendment and modification of the Volstead law. The fact that repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and immediate modification of the federal prohibition laws, were planks in the national platform of the democratic party, was expected to exert considerable influence on the attitude of the next state legislature on the liquor question. It also was pointed out that Ex-Governor James E. Ferguson, whose wife will be Texas' next governor, is in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The precinct in which Ferguson voted adopted a resolution at its convention after the first primary last July calling for repeal of the Deane law. Another factor to be considered is that several of the staunch defenders of prohibition in the state legislature were defeated in the recent elections. The group included the Rev. B. J. Forbes of Weatherford, leader of the prohibition group, and two other ministers, Rev. George W. Coltrin of Mathis and Rev. W. H. Biggs of Paris. Forbes said he confidently expected the Deane law to be softened with the possibility that beer would be legalized. Forbes was frank to admit that the drys in the legislature had taken a hard drubbing in the elections and said he expected the Deane law to be revised without much opposition. Under the existing law, the first offense is classed as a felony, punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. Forbes said he expected the law would be modified by making the first two offenses misdemeanors, punishable only by a reduced acreage, the report shows. Weather conditions also have affected planting. In the section south of Amarillo to Lamb county, the soil was too dry early in the planting season, then later the farmers were kept out of the fields by too much rain. Farmers are "planting in the dust" on the North Plains. Many Panhandle farmers, the report shows, were unable to plant a new crop after the Reconstruction Finance Corporation denied them loans. As a result, much of the crop has been planted in poorly prepared land. Plenty of moisture during November will improve conditions. Buy it in Pampa. VICKS COUGH DROP ... Wheat Acreage In Panhandle One-Fourth Off

AMARILLO, Nov. 18. (AP)—Wheat acreage in the Texas Panhandle is 25 per cent short of that of last year at the same time, and the condition of the crop not more than 80 per cent of normal, according to a survey conducted by the Amarillo NEWS-GLOBE. The total crop will not exceed 1,200,000 acres in the upper 26 Panhandle counties, compared with 2,650,000 planted in 1931 and an average of 1,900,000 acres since 1924. Low prices for wheat and a lack of money to finance the planting of a new crop are responsible for the fine. He would not be surprised, he said, if the legislature went farther and removed the penitentiary sentence altogether.

MENACE OF DICTATORSHIP

During the past summer a new sentence crept into current American usage. You heard it in a good many places—at luncheon club tables, in Pullman smoking compartments, in business offices, at bridge parties and on.

"What this country needs is a dictator." An idea that no American would seriously consider a few years ago became commonplace topic of discussion during the campaign.

At bottom, of course, it simply illustrates the way in which the general public has become disillusioned about its government.

It reflects a widening belief that our democratic government is too cumbersome, unwieldy and slow-moving to handle a crisis like the one through which we have been passing.

To a great extent this disillusionment is justified. But those who talk glibly about our need for a dictator ought to remember that they are proposing nothing less than a complete revolution in our form of government.

Installing a dictatorship in a confused and sorely tried nation is a fairly simple job. Getting rid of the dictator after the emergency has passed, however, is not so simple.

Who would really support a dictatorship in America? All of the blind forces of greed and reaction that progressive leaders have fought ever since the days of Andrew Jackson.

All of this, of course, is self-evident. But it gets forgotten by those who dabble in this "we need a dictatorship" business. That phrase, voiced by a lot of people who ought to know better, represents one of the greatest menaces our country faces today.

That campaign saying about "grass growing in the streets" might have been worst. It could be growing in the cornfields, you know.

An insurance company suggests, "The next fire may be yours." Trying to cheer up everybody?

At the Chicago World Fair in 1933, a building made of paper will be exhibited. And that's a pretty good use for some of the paper we've heard of during the last few years.

Sympathy for the ousted republicans might be saved until it is learned whether they really were unlucky in that election or not.

An Ohio woman shot at her husband's boss the other day. That seems to be a break for friend husband, anyway.

A Harvard professor says spinach contains few calories, after all. We've known it to have sand, however.

Victorians Die After Remaining Shut in 30 Years

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 18. (AP)—Death, stealing upon them from a world they shut out for 30 years, has struck down the Misses Emma and Amelia Richardson, spinster sisters for whom time stopped at the year 1902.

In an old house which they had made a hermitage of Victorianism in a bewildering world of modernity, the sisters, 76 and 73 years old, were found dead yesterday, clad in the bustles and ruffles of a vanished day.

Today authorities decided that it was gas, one of the few conveniences in that quaint house, that caused their death. A partly opened burner on the kitchen range and the positions of the frail bodies told the story.

Miss Amelia, the younger sister, had fallen in the old-fashioned kitchen. Her hand clutched a box of pills, as though she had felt herself growing faint and misunderstood the cause.

Miss Emma is believed to have smothered the fumes as she lay in an upstairs bedroom. She wandered to the head of the stairs and toppled down. Her body, with the neck broken, lay not far from a what-not filled with bric-a-brac.

A grocer's boy, knocking in vain at the door, became alarmed and summoned police. They had to break down barred doors to get in. The sisters turned the key on the world 30 years ago, and neighbors had rarely seen them since.

On the death of their father, owner of a grocery in the days when Toronto was known as Muddy York, they moved with their mother, another sister, and a brother into the old house.

Hollywood Sights

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND...

By ROBBIN COONS. HOLLYWOOD—Loretta Young is one of Hollywood's soundest as well as prettiest answers to the question, "Is stardom necessary?"

In her still rather brief career she never once has been foisted upon the fans as a star, and yet from the beginning when she was 14 she has risen steadily in fan following and ability.

Pretty, cool—LORETTA YOUNG looking Loretta calls it "luck." In modest terms she traces her good fortune from the day when Mervyn Leroy called her house and wanted her sister, Polly Ann Young, for a role.

"Polly Ann was out of town, so I was sent down as a substitute," she says, "and here I am."

The star of that picture was Colleen Moore, who took a liking to Loretta and "sold" her to executives. Her first big lead was opposite Lon Chaney in "Laugh Clown, Laugh!"

"I was one of 48 girls tested for the part. Any one of the other 47 would have done just as well, if not better—and yet I got it."

Luck Is With Her

That's her way of explaining her success. It was luck, too, she says, which fulfilled her secret wish to play opposite John Barrymore—in "The Man From Blankley's." And luck that gave her the leading role in the successful "Life Begins."

"I was very lucky to have drawn such a fine script," she says. The modesty is a bit excessive, Young fans will agree, and it is more than luck that has brought her where she is. Prettiness, charm, a steady improvement in acting ability, all played their part.

A Featured Player

But not to be disregarded is the fact that she has been allowed to progress as a featured player, and not been forced to carry on her slim shoulders the whole burden of a starring vehicle.

Loretta once said, at a time when rumors were linking a reconciliation with former husband Grant Withers, or linking her name with various other suitors, that when and if she marries again the day will mark her retirement from the screen. That still holds, and she isn't thinking about retirement—yet.

Katharine Hepburn didn't know it, but her appearance at the preview of "The Conquerors" was the big excitement of the evening. The preview gang clustered around the door until the diminutive new find came out and drove away.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

WILLIAM BRAUCHER

All-America Gossip. It is going to be such a tough job for All-America selectors to think up a better halfback than Warren Heller of Pitt that maybe they won't try.

Mike Koken of Notre Dame is one of the greatest football players of the year. All-America pickers seldom choose two linemen from one team, but they can select Ernie Smith and Tay Brown, the Southern California tackles, and will not thereby offend me.

With Koken and Heller chosen in the backfield what are you going to do about those splendid Purdue backs, Horstmann and Purvis?

You couldn't go far wrong in picking Johnny Oehler of Purdue as center. Neither could they resist you for naming Art Krueger of Marquette. But the man who probably will get the call is Jack Blockson of Notre Dame and that guess is just as good as any.

Good Line Does It.

Ernest "Pud" Rentner of Northwestern has had a hard year, and may be omitted from the first All-America team even though he has played harder and more effectively than he did last year. The trouble this year has been in the line, not the fact that Northwestern's line isn't up to the game. Which is another example of a text, viz., that a good strong line helps many a back to an All-America appointment.

Four Suspects Taken to Borger

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 18. (AP)—After being viewed and questioned by Hutchinson county, Texas, authorities, four suspects today were ordered taken to Borger for further investigation in connection with Tuesday's robbery of the First State bank of Stinnett, 12 miles north of Borger.

What's In a Name?

A young man named "Gump" Ariall of Auburn is one of the year's best ends. And if they had made his nickname "Airmail" he probably would be All-America stuff. Maybe he will be, anyway!

All-America Hunk. Lew Hinchman of Ohio State is some place in the running. His performance with passes against Penn was inspiring. He also has a wonderful left hook, as Burchett, Penn end, will testify.

The game he plays against Notre Dame may make vital of Army one of the country's outstanding quarterbacks.

Matt of Columbia and Moss of Purdue are good enough ends for anybody's selection. Operatives also send in glowing words about Skladany, the Pitt end; Hal Moe, Oregon State back; and Jack Mandeg, Minnesota fullback.

Old Paul Again Is Casting About For New Cabinet

BERLIN, Nov. 18. (AP)—The full weight of Germany's domestic crisis fell upon the aged President von Hindenburg today as he set out grimly to attain his cherished ideal of a national concentration government tolerated, at least, by the disaffected reichstag.

Selected for these talks today were Alfred Hugenburg, the national party leader, Eduard Dingeldey, the German people's (populist) party chief, and Dr. Ludwig Kaas, acting for the Catholic center party.

Tomorrow the chief executive will see Adolf Hitler, leader of the most powerful single group in the reichstag, the national socialists, and Dr. Schaeffer of the Bavarian people's party.

Grant Descendant Injured in Fall

CHICAGO, Nov. 18. (AP)—Prince Michael Cantacuzene, great-grandson of former President U. S. Grant, was seriously injured yesterday during a hunt near suburban Midburn when his horse failed to hurdle a fence.

The Prince, a resident of Chicago, was taken to a hospital unconscious. Physicians, while saying he was seriously injured, declared he was not in grave danger. X-rays were to be taken today to determine the extent of his injuries.

Princess Michael, 34, was the son of Julia Dent Grant, the granddaughter of President Grant and wife of the Russian Prince, Michael Cantacuzene.

Fowl For Dinner On Thanksgiving Will Be Cheaper

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. (AP)—Thanksgiving day dinners are going to be gay on the pocketbook this year. Everything that goes into the traditional dinner that day is cheaper, much cheaper than last year, except eggs.

Whatever is chosen for the headline attraction, be it turkey, goose, duck or plain old roast beef, the cost will be almost enough less to permit buying of the "trimmings" with what is saved.

Turkeys are now quoted wholesale from 9 to 10 cents a pound lower in price than at this time in 1931. The average retail price will run between 25 and 30 cents a pound.

Chickens, ducks and geese are selling from 5 to 8 cents a pound lower, with demand for these goods reported to be heavy. Prices on these have not been as low since around 1905.

Garnishes for the dinner are low in price. Sweet potatoes are retailing around 6 or 8 cents for a quarter and can be purchased for a comparatively cheap price. Berries are also somewhat cheaper as are oysters for the dressing.

SPANISH DEPUTY SUES FOR COLLEAGUE'S ACRES

MADRID (AP)—Deputy Lamalhe de Clairac offered in parliament to give his lands to any deputy who brought the country back to the present government created by Perez Madrigal.

Perez Madrigal took him up and now has sued in Madrid district court for fulfillment of the verbal contract, citing Julian Besteiro, president of congress, as "presiding witness" to the transaction.

Judicial investigators say there may be something in Madrigal's case.

Panhandle Ruins Represent Highest Development of Ancient Civilization

AMARILLO, Nov. 18. (AP)—The archeological ruins of the Panhandle "represent the highest development of ancient civilization confined solely to the state of Texas," said E. B. Sayles of the Texas Archeological society, after studying the ruins.

Sayles, who is working in cooperation with the Gila Pueblo of Globe, Arizona, visited the Panhandle while making an archeological survey of the southwest. He came here intending to spend one week, but found the ruins so interesting and so numerous that he remained three.

"What part of the north Panhandle of Texas played in early life in America has baffled scientists since ruins were first discovered in this part of the state," Sayles told Floyd V. Studer, Amarillo business man and amateur paleontologist and archeologist, who has been made director of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society museum at Canyon.

"Who were the people who lived here, built stone houses and carried on agriculture where none is carried on now? Where did they come from, and what became of them? These questions are among those we would like to answer," Sayles said.

"The ruins of the ancient inhabitants of the north Panhandle are astounding," he continued. "Their extent can not be pictured until they studied on the ground. Interest in them will increase in the future, and the Panhandle is fortunate in having started the museum at Canyon, where material from these ruins may be studied by the archeologists and enjoyed by visitors."

Studer has located and mapped 193 of these ruins to which Sayles referred. The dwelling range in size from two or three rooms to 300 rooms, representing both vertical and horizontal masonry. Through the efforts of W. C. Holden, of Texas Technological college, working under auspices of the museum at Canyon, it was established this summer that the dwellings were occupied 600 years ago. But how much older than that the ruins may be is not known.

Prisoners Rob Sheriff of Car

AMARILLO, Nov. 18. (AP)—Amarillo police today received word from Snider, Okla., that Sheriff Young of Duncan, Okla., who left here yesterday with two prisoners had been overpowered by the men and robbed of his car and guns near Snider.

Young came here yesterday to return Charles Emmett Eubanks, 24, and Fay Bonner, 26, to Stephen county on a charge of car theft. Both signed waivers. Local police said they both had served terms in the Oklahoma penitentiary.

Tips on CONTRACT

Good Grand Slam Bidding

By TOM O'NEIL
Increased premiums for grand slams under the new rules are producing more contracts than ever to take all the tricks.

The number of cases of success is large, although when the rules were announced some experts predicted a malignant fever of grand slam efforts with sets when rubbers could have been attained by confining efforts to little slams.

Successful slams are largely divided into two categories: 1—when one partner has a mighty hand and the other a wee bit of aid; 2—when much strength is divided between hands of partners.

The second type involves precision in bidding and often in play as well. Mrs. Bruce Quisenberry of New York bid a grand slam in no trump after dealing herself the following:

S-A K
H-A K Q 10 6 4 2
D-A
C-A K 10

Her partner held:
S-4 3
H-J 7 5
D-K 2
C-Q 7 6 4 2

A club bid by partner over an original forcing bid of two hearts would have enabled Mrs. Quisenberry to bid grand slam forthwith with reasonable safety.

Arthur Sears of Brooklyn dealt the following:
Sears
S-A K J 5 2
H-J 3
D-A 4
C-A K 5 3
Partner
S-Q 3
H-A K Q 7 4 2
D-K 5 2
C-7 2

The bidding: Sears two spades; partner three hearts; Sears four clubs; partner four hearts; Sears five no trump; partner seven no trump.

The key bids were partner's rebid of four hearts, showing great strength in that suit and Sears' overall with five no trump.

Since the cards broke there was nothing difficult in the play for the first two hands cited. But in the Vanderbilt cup tournament a grand coup by Lewis Osborne was necessary to make a grand slam on cards which he and Hugh McElroy, Jr., held. The hand:

The bidding went: south one heart; west pass; north three hearts; west pass; north four no trump; east pass; south five spades; west pass; north six hearts; east pass; south seven hearts.

The ten of clubs was opened. North played the queen and south discarded a spade. After playing the ace and king of trumps, Osborne

HOW'S your HEALTH

The Kidneys
The kidneys are organs serving to eliminate wastes from the body. To be removed through the kidneys, the wastes must be soluble, that is, they must be in such a form that they can be suspended in water, for water is the vehicle in which the wastes are carried, the water and the wastes composing what is known as urine.

The kidneys are remarkably intricate in their structure. They are composed of about two million separate units, each one of which is itself a complex structure.

The essential parts of these physiologic units are a bundle of very fine arteries fitting into a cup-like structure, which is connected with a long miniature tube.

Through the bundle of little arteries passes the blood. From it are abstracted water and soluble wastes. This filtered fluid passes down the long and twisted tube and ultimately arrives by way of the ureter at the bladder, where, when a sufficient amount of it is accumulated, it is voided as urine.

Before it completes its passage down the miniature tubule, the urine undergoes concentration.

This concentration takes place by the reabsorption of water from the filtered liquid. That is, the water is reabsorbed and the wastes are thereby concentrated.

Nature has supplied man with a wide margin of safety in kidney substances.

There are four or five times as much kidney structure as is necessary for adequate elimination of soluble wastes.

Experimentally, it has been shown that three-fourths of the total animal kidney substance may be removed without the animal showing what is known as renal insufficiency.

Life, however, cannot be sustained without the kidneys. Their failure to eliminate waste products leads to death by uremia.

Mrs. R. M. Bellamy has returned from a ten-day visit in Dallas.

realized that east held the knave and seven. Accordingly he proceeded to eliminate everything except trumps from the south and east hands by playing three rounds of diamonds, discarding a spade on the ace of clubs, ruffing two clubs and playing the ace and king of spades. On one round of clubs east discarded a spade.

After 11 tricks north was in the lead, having left a spade and a club. East still had his two trumps, but south held the queen and ten of hearts in a fork over the east hand.

Whatever north lead east had to trump and south overtrumped, capturing east's last trump for the thirteenth trick.
