A QUESTION FOR MR. ALLRED

Despite the almost unanimous support of Texas lawmakers in passing the Small land bill, and its approval by the State Supreme court, it is being proposed that the suit initiated more than four years ago by the State to recover the sand beds of the North Fork of the Red river be carried to a legal conclusion.

This comes as a surprise and a keen disappointment to citizens of Gray and other counties, who thought the last chapter had been written in the famous "navigable stream" litigation.

It is said that this suit will be prosecuted to determine whether the state is entitled to have the sand and gravel rights in the "stream" and also to determine whether or not the state shall have the right of navigation therein. It is also reported that there will be involved the question of whether the public will have the right to fish in such streams. To residents of this section, this would seem extremely humorous, except for the fact that it is tragic. The land owners have already incurred thousands of dollars of expense in presenting their claims to the legislature and in defending the pending suit. It is feared that the state will not attempt to saddle off on these land owners $25,000 to $30,000 of court costs, incurred by those who sought to take away from the lawful owners the oil and gas rights in the North Fork of Red River. The landowners bought and paid for this property and have paid taxes on it for many years. There are no fish in the North Fork and there are no valuable sand and gravel deposits. Of course, the navigation rights are absurd. Yet it is reported that to establish the state's rights in these matters our people will again be harassed by a tedious and expensive trial. This is not the worst feature of the litigation—if the state should prevail and win the supposed valuable rights it seeks to recover it will attempt to cause the land owners of this section to pay the enormous costs involved. Whether intentional or not, the result would be to reimburse Reed and Caswell, who sought permits on the North Fork for oil and gas purposes, to the extent of $25,000 or more at the land owners' expense.

IT IS INCONCEIVABLE THAT THE STATE SHOULD PROCEED IN SUCH A COURSE. Attorney General Allred in his campaign stated that he was prosecuting the land bill case before the Supreme Court so that if the land owners should win, their titles would be perfected and the case would be dismissed. The constitutionality of the Small land bill was affirmed. The oil and gas rights were all that were involved. Surely Attorney General Allred should give his own personal attention to a matter of this great importance and should uphold the good faith and integrity of the state by dismissing this suit and no longer harassing the citizens of Texas by further prosecuting the suit to sustain any such vague and uncertain theories. Reed and Caswell, intervenors in the suit, have lost. Surely the state does not desire to mulct from the land owners, defendants in the suit, many thousands of dollars to be repaid to these intervenors. A large portion of this sum was paid in a fanciful effort to locate the boundaries of the stream of the North Fork.

The Pampa Daily NEWS believes that in a case of this kind, involving the integrity of the State of Texas and the protection of land owners of this state, the attorney general should give the matter his personal attention, and that he should not permit his department to be used in any Don Quixotesque tilting with imaginary streams in order that the losers in this land-grabbing scheme may escape the cost of their folly.

Hawaii is out of beer already, and the nearest brewery is 2,000 miles away. Water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink!

Stocks certainly fell down far enough. It oughtn't to be a surprise to see them go "Boom."

Speech may be silver, and silence gold, but paper money seems to be doing all the talking these days.

Actor's Wife Sues Fay Webb Vallee

NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—Mrs. Fay Webb Vallee, wife of Rudy Vallee, was named defendant in a $100,000 alienation of affections suit filed in supreme court today by Mrs. Kathleen Leon, wife of Garfield Leon, an actor.

Mrs. Leon, in her complaint, charged that last January Mrs. Vallee offered Leon sums of money to go with her to Santa Monica, Calif., and in other ways tried to induce him to leave his wife. The complaint alleged that sometime during the present month Mrs. Vallee induced Leon to leave his wife.

IMPEACH JUDGE WASHINGTON, April 27. (AP)—Rep. Smith (D., Va.) today impeached Federal Judge James A. Lowell of Boston in the House, charging high crimes in connection with the freeing of George Crawford, negro, wanted at Middleburg, Va., on charges of murdering two white women.

The White Cockatoo

by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Jim Sundean has been released from jail by the French police, but not freed of the suspicion that perhaps, after all, he had murdered the unidentified Russian found in the corridor outside his hotel room. Sue Tally, whom Sundean should suspect from the evidence, has sent David Lorn to aid him. Gretche Lovestheim, wife of the hotel manager, calls in an effort to pump Sundean and uses her personal charm generously, but with no result. Then Sue arrives, confessing her distaste of the dark corridors and strange noises of the old hotel.

Chapter 18
SUE'S FEAR

SUE took a long breath. Her hands had met and were faintly pink against the black velvet of the coat she wore—the same coat she'd worn the previous night, and the same slender scarlet slippers with their shining silver heels were there on the rug with the flickering lights on them, too.

"I've come to let you know—what I know. Because you see—" she hesitated—"you see, I'm afraid that the man was killed—" she hesitated again, and then the words came out in a little rush—"because of me!" she said amazingly and looked at me again.

"Because of you!" she said. "It's terrible, isn't it?" she said. "Are you sure you want to hear?" "Of course I want to hear," I said. "But don't be frightened. Don't look as if you were blaming yourself. Let's talk about it coolly and sensibly."

Her cheeks grew pink. "It's not being sensible," she said indignantly. "But it is dreadful. I shall never forget how he—" She stopped herself abruptly and went on: "I'm not frightened. And I'm not silly and nervous over nothing."

"I know that," I said hastily. And I did know it. There was courage in the very lift of her head on her slender white neck. "Tell me anything you wish, and don't feel that you are burdening me with your troubles. As a matter of fact, I'm in a rather unpleasant sort of fix myself, and I've got to get myself out of it. And while I've got notions in plenty about all this business there are few things I know definitely. And I thought, of course, that your—experience of last night—"

"Abduction," she said firmly. "Yes. That it was likely the murder somehow concerned it. Otherwise one would be expecting too much of coincidence."

"Very well," she said. "I'll have no more scruples, then. But it's a rather difficult story, and it has to do with things that one does not ordinarily tell—strangers—" she paused over the word and chose another—"that one does not ordinarily tell friends. I don't know where to begin."

"Tell me why you were abducted," I said, liking the word friends. "Do you know why?" "Oh, yes," she said at once. "I was abducted because of something I possess." She laughed rather sadly and continued: "I haven't any money. But I've got something that's worth, roughly, about five millions."

She looked at me doubtfully and added: "Dollars, I mean." "I believed her. I was a little stunned, but I believed every word she'd said."

The amazing thing about it was that I believed it in spite of a voice which was saying inside me: "That's right. Believe her. She'll say next that she's got some of the Russian Crown jewels and that a gang of Bolsheviks are after her and them. And you'll believe that too."

"In that case," I said, "you'd better put it in a safe place."

"YOU don't believe me," she said quietly. "Yes, I do. I don't want to, but I do. I know that every word you've said is the truth."

"And after I've gone," she said very quietly, "after I've gone, you'll wonder how you came to credit it for a moment. Well, I can quite understand it."

"You don't understand in the least," I said brusquely. "I offered her a cigarette, lighted one myself at her nod, and threw the match toward the fire and said: 'All right. What next? As I say, you'd better put it in a safe place, whatever it is.'"

"Oh, it's in a safe place," she said. "And actually I've only got half of it—what I have isn't worth a cent all by itself. But you see—this is the fashion as he had written, saying only that I had it and not what it was. Then my father died; there was business for Francis to see to. Francis sent Mr. Lorn—the detective, you know—to see me. He evidently reported that I appeared to be actually Sue Tally. And Francis—" She smiled a little wryly. "Perhaps I'd better read you the letter Mr. Lorn brought me from Francis."

She unbuttoned her velvet coat. Under it was some kind of black frock through which there were glimpses of white. She reached under the laces and brought out a letter. Then she leaned over and held the letter toward me.

Trade Gains In Many Sections Spur Hopes For Prosperity

RECENT PRICE RISE IS NOT A FALSE OPTURN

AUTO PRODUCTION MAY SHOW GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

By The Associated Press.
FROM Wall Street, where stocks have perked up, to the Pacific Northwest, where the lumberman's axe is swinging more busily, better business and re-employment are reported in many sections of the nation.

Herewith the Associated Press presents some conservative high-lights of the situation.

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER, Associated Press Financial Editor. (Copyright, 1933, By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—Commerce and industry in the past month have experienced one of the most striking revivals of recent years.

Sharp percentage gains reflect, of course, the rebound from the extremely low levels of the March banking crisis. Nevertheless, some lines are approaching, or have actually crossed, the levels of this period last year. Much of the improvement has been against normal seasonal trends.

The false upturns experienced previously in the depression have taught business executives to examine such bulges as the current one critically. Reports from many parts of the country, however, indicate a pronounced rebirth of confidence, together with fastening order books.

Automobile production for April, according to present indications, may show a gain over April last year. After falling to some 90,000 cars and trucks in March, the swift quickening in output this month, according to trade authorities, should carry it above the 146,300 produced in April, 1932.

Steel production has risen to the best levels in more than a year. Freight car loadings have gained steadily in April, contrary to the seasonal trend, which usually carries them to a peak in March.

Last week's production of electric power in the United States, as estimated by the Edison Electric Institute, was only 2.6 per cent under the like week of last year, the smallest such divergence in 21 months.

Latest mercantile reviews report a sustained volume of retail trade. The usual pronounced slump after Easter seems to have failed to materialize. The moderate rise in commodity prices, coincident to inflationary psychology, has evidently stimulated buying.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—The Slater Manufacturing company, a textile mill at Greenville, S. C., has received orders which resulted in an increase in operations from 30 hours a week to 110, with day and night shifts working. The mill now has 400 employees. Some other mills, particularly those making woven goods, plan to increase operations shortly.

SAN FRANCISCO—The Federal Reserve bank for this district says business has recovered "moderately" to the February level. The wholesale trade expansion is described as more than seasonal.

MIAMI, Fla.—More building permits have been issued at Miami Beach this month than in any month since last September. Half a dozen good sized realty deals have been recorded. Miami merchants say prospects are good for an excellent summer. The season just closed was the best since 1926, they say.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Better business, appearing in several spots, is considered sufficient to show an upward trend. There has been a noticeable increase in the number of charters granted to business concerns since the middle of March.

A macaroni factory reports it is two weeks behind orders, with an 80 per cent increase in employment. The Pioneer cotton mills at Guthrie are putting on a full force. The Henryetta glass factory of the Pittsburgh company increased its force recently.

DALLAS—The Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad has reemployed 715

SALVAGE OF WARSHIP TREASURE DUE TO ATTEMPT OF BRITON TO CLEAR RELATIVE OF WAR CHARGE

By W. J. EADS
NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—Recovery of a fortune in gold from H. M. S. Hampshire, the British warship which carried Earl Kitchener to his death in the North Sea during the world war, was disclosed today.

The salvaged treasure amounted to 15,000 pounds, the first yellow metal to be taken from the Hampshire's strong boxes. Its recovery brought to the world the first authentic information that Kitchener carried a large treasure on his ill-fated mission to Russia to help bolster the Russian armies in the cause of the allies.

Discovery of the gold was disclosed in a brief message from the salvage ship Europa.

Sought True Facts.
Behind the message lies a story that reads like a chapter of one of the sea tales of Joseph Conrad, for the report is that the search resulted, not from the lure of sunken treasure, but from the determination of a man to clear the name of a relative he said was accused of having given information to the Germans and thus aided in sending Kitchener to his death in one of the major tragedies of the world war nearly 17 years ago.

The names of the participants in that effort of vindication have not been disclosed. As the story goes, it began four years ago, when this man determined to try to locate the Hampshire to settle for himself the question in his own mind of how the Hampshire was sunk. He proceeded, even though the records show that the warship struck a mine.

He first sought every sailor connected with mine layers in the district of the West Orkney Islands during the war. After long and fruitless effort he was about to give up, when finally he located a man who had worked on a mine layer (the) had operated in the district.

The sailor had kept a scrapbook record of every mine his ships had laid, and after a search the old scrapbook was located in the attic of the sailor's home in Germany.

Armed with this information, the relative interested a fishing captain in his quest and soundings were taken. It was a long and arduous process, but finally he located what he believed was the wreck of the Hampshire. Going down in a diving suit, he recovered a piece of corroded snookstack which convinced him his find was genuine.

Then came the effort to interest someone with capital in the venture, but it was only after the relative learned the Hampshire carried gold that he received any backing.

Salvaging operations since have been going on at a feverish rate, but the depth of the sea, the shifting of the ocean's bottom and the heavy armor of the ship have somewhat hampered progress. Before the strong boxes were reached part of the side of the ship was taken out to give divers access to the hold.

That preliminary work apparently has been completed, and the recovery of the treasure disclosed today apparently has spurred the salvaging crew to greater efforts to recover more of the gold.

The district is composed of all the Panhandle of Texas, southeast to Brady and Temple and northeast to Denton and Fort Worth.

persons this month. Slightly better passenger business is reported, with freight unchanged.

The Corsicana cotton mills are reopening on full time schedule, employing 175. The general manager said orders insure several months' operation.

Collector Left 1,000 Pitchers To a Relative

BROWNWOOD, April 27. (AP)—Mrs. A. P. Jones, pioneer Brownwood citizen who died recently, left to her granddaughter, Miss Elinor Spratt of Brownwood, a collection of 1,000 pitchers. During the last fifteen years Mrs. Jones had collected pitchers as a hobby from all parts of the world. The collection included pitchers of every imaginable shape and design and of almost every kind of material.

The collection was started by accident. A friend who traveled extensively gave Mrs. Jones a few pitchers some fifteen years ago. Other friends swelled the original collection with gifts of pitchers of odd and interesting design from different parts of the world.

Many people from Texas and other states came to Brownwood every year and viewed the unusual collection. Mrs. Jones could tell something interesting about every pitcher and also the name of the person who gave each piece.

TEACHERS AT AUSTIN
AUSTIN, April 27. (AP)—Several thousand school teachers, from all parts of Texas invaded the state capitol today, lending their presence in support of revenue producing measures pending before the state legislature.

Maytag To Launch Great Campaign On New Machine

In anticipation of greatly increased business due to the introduction of a low priced washer, Maytag Southwestern company 2115 Griffin street, Dallas, distributor for Maytag washers in Texas and southern Louisiana, is hiring 200 extra salesmen throughout its dealer and self-operated outlets, numbering 96 in all, in Texas.

Fifteen new dealers have been franchised in the past few days and it is anticipated that there will be at least 40 more dealer operations in Texas by May 15. This also will provide extra local employment.

The big Maytag factory at Newton, Iowa, is reported to be working more men and more hours this month than at any time in the last three years.

Advertising the new low prices and new low terms will be published generally throughout Texas Thursday of this week. Maytag dealers and managers report that the greater portion of the 200 men to be hired will be started by the time the advertising breaks.

THIS "SOUND MONEY"
Certain interests in this country are seeking to keep commodity prices low by insisting on "sound money" as opposed to inflation under control. What is sound to Wall Street money-changers is "dishonest" to farmers who have no money but considerable wheat, corn, and livestock. Marvin Jones, author of much farm legislation, explained the inflation movement as follows: "We often speak of using dollars to purchase commodities. That depends upon which side of the bargain the trader is located. One man uses money to purchase wheat. The farmer uses wheat to purchase money. When one borrows money to be repaid in the future, it is essential to fairness that the value of that dollar remain substantially the same, measured in the terms of the general commodity price level. Here is where the hitch comes. Translated into farm commodities, the dollar is worth twice what it was a few years ago. The private debts of America run into staggering billions. It is impossible to pay these debts with dollars of the increased value of today. Yet the obligation rests not only upon the farmer but upon other producers and upon manufacturers to pay these debts with greatly appreciated dollars. This is responsible for a great deal of the grief and stagnation from which the country has been suffering. The strange part about this whole situation is that the debts we owe, we owe to each other. Not a dollar is owed abroad. Yet both agriculture and commerce have been chained and almost destroyed by the high-priced dollar. The credit of the country has been so greatly contracted that the only practical way to offset it is through an adequate supply of money on a sound basis."
