REALIZING THE DUTY TO THE PUBLIC

In many ways the most hopeful thing about the present moment in American life is the fact that people generally are beginning to see the necessity of adopting a new ethical standard in their dealings with one another.

This new standard can be expressed very simply. It is the notion that a man's first duty is not to his pocketbook, but to the public at large.

You can find a direct statement of it in a speech delivered recently in Chicago by Earle W. Evans, president of the American Bar Association.

In this speech Mr. Evans urged that the lawyers take concerted action to drive crooks and shysters out of the legal profession.

"Let it be understood," he declared, "that our duty is first, last and always the public interest and not to the interests of the profession or of the lawyer. The public and the newspapers feel that we ought to be responsible for the crooks. I don't know but what the public and the newspapers are right."

"Who else is there who can do it? Let's clean house. It is not enough for the ethical lawyer to be ethical himself and close his eyes to everything done by his brother. He should see that the public is protected, and no ties of kinship or man are more sacred."

Here is an idea which goes far beyond the mere matter of driving crooks out of a profession: it calls for a reappraisal of the individual's aims and standards, and it applies not merely to the legal profession but to all professions and all jobs.

The banker needs to learn it—for what does all the current criticism of certain bankers amount to, except that they put their own good above the public good? The manufacturer needs to learn it, and the politician and the broker and the editor and everyone else whose calling touches the lives of the mass of his fellow citizens.

It is only in this way that we can make lasting success of our capitalistic society. The profit motive by itself never can do it.

But if we team it up with a new and enlightened conception of the duty the individual owes to society as a whole, we may find that the rules of the game need fewer changes than some critics believe.

Stuffed Cat Is Added to 'Uncle Bob's' Trophies

'Uncle Bob' Dunlop this morning displayed at the Schneider hotel the hide and stuffed head of a huge 'cat' he shot recently during a hunting trip to Arizona. The hide had just arrived from the tanners.

'Uncle Bob' hunted 'cats' with the best dogs in the country for many years but failed to be successful, and he had no thoughts of a kill when he walked upon his prize beauty.

PAMPA TOPICS OF OUR CITY

As we arrived, a young lady office assistant of about 11 courteously called us by name, LITTLE TOTS, affixing the title BIG HORNS of Mr. and bidding us follow her to the practice room. There Director Foster was busily instructing about twenty small children in the art of making music through the use of instruments. There were seven violins, three alto horns, five clarinets, one saxophone, two cornets, and a drum, accompanied by two small girls at a piano. The music was simple but it was very good, measured by the age and extent of the musicians. It is a beginners organization and makes no pretense of being anything else, but it is highly important to the school, to the children, and to Pampa.

'JOBYNA STEPS OUT' WILL BE PRESENTED AGAIN ON THURSDAY EVENING AT CITY AUDITORIUM

Second Performance Of Comedy Is Demanded

"Jobyna Steps Out," the senior play which was presented at a public play last week, will be given at the City Auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The three act comedy of youth has presented last Thursday before the largest crowd ever to attend a high school play here and was an even bigger success than the class had hoped for. Since so many other things were scheduled for the same night, there has been a popular demand for a second performance of the play. Last week's show netted the class about $175 toward expenses of the proposed trip to Carlsbad Cavern next spring.

Rehearsals are now in progress for the second performance with every effort being made to strengthen the weak points. The cast is particularly being urged to speak more loudly. Every seat was filled last week with people lined around the walls, and it was sometimes difficult for those at the back to hear.

Tickets are on sale by all seniors. Admission prices are 20c for students and 35c for adults. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

P. H. S. SPORTS

Football Is Over at Last

Football is over at last. We're not too sorry—it's time to think of basketball anyhow. We are proud of those Harvesters. They played a hard game against the Bobcats even if they didn't succeed in taming them completely.

The team has certainly shown marvelous improvement this year—more than ever before, we think. Who would believe it was the same team that was held to a tie by McLean early in the season that gloriously won the bi-district championship and at last was defeated in the quarter-finals for state by the narrow margin of 7 to 6? It goes to show what a couple of good coaches can do with green material in one season. We have several boys who should make all-state.

The exhibit put on by Mr. Kelley's advanced tumbler between halves of the San Angelo game was a credit to our school and won a great deal of applause from the grand stands.

Perhaps we can get down to basketball in earnest now. Football suits were turned in yesterday afternoon, and Coach Mitchell issued a call for all boys interested in basketball. The Harvestettes and the Gorillas entered the tournament at LeFors last Friday—but nobody was even interested in staying in the race with the big football game on in Lubbock. Both boys and girls played White Deer here this afternoon.

DEAR SANTA--

Dear Santa Claus: It is with all respect that we, the staff of the Little Harvester, send you this letter. The small articles mentioned are only a few which could be used, but realizing the conditions under which you are working, even the N. H. A. we have tried to limit ourselves to the following requests:

The editor suggests more help for writing the editorials, while the business manager would sincerely appreciate some business to manage.

The general news editor would be very pleased with a "newsy nose," all the better to scent news with, and the society editor requests invitations to more parties and social events of the school.

The sports editor should be satisfied with passes to all sports events of P. H. S., but he seems to insist on having the basketball championship now.

The Snopless Snooper reports more space would satisfy him, while the Nimble Nit Wits, almost in despair, promise to faint if they should receive a lovely new joke for their column.

Did You Know says it would appreciate just anything, but prefers more space on the ground that it is the most popular column anyhow.

Ajas and slack, the requests of the reports are too numerous to mention, although the gift of the ability to write more stories would be received with great joy.

Ah yes, Santa, you must not forget to bring our faculty adviser a big bunch of "blue" pencils, which she dearly deserves, with an extra one for the editor, who will never use it. Also bring her a big bag of patience, to be used in the coming year when she is reading our articles.

Last, but not least, dear Santa we think the readers would enjoy more than anything else, a better Little Harvester.

Affectionately yours, The Little Harvester Staff.

The Snooper heard that Mr. Denard gave all the ladies a break the other night and went stag to a prominent social event.

Wiley Reynolds set many a feminine heart aflutter as he went through the halls yesterday in his military uniform with brass buttons and decorations enough for a major-general.

The girls who are working at Woolworth's during the rush season have developed quite a complex. The other morning when Mr. Denard asked Dorothy Jane Adams a question, she promptly replied, "Five ounces for 15c." Vivian Baker invariably answers the roll with "Thank you. Call again." and June Cooley greets everyone with "What can I show you, please?"

Snooper saw a football player give his English teacher his dessert in the cafeteria one day last week. Sweet!

Forbidden Valley

By WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson has slipped away from his camp in the Canadian wilds, hurt and a little bewildered. He and his partner, Paul St. Clair, have picked up Sonya Volkov, saved her from certain death at the hands of the Kioshee Indians, and Curt has fallen in love with her. Now he finds she has sent a letter declaring her love to Igor Karakhan, millionaire crook whom Curt is trying to bring to justice. Unable to face Sonya's treachery, Paul too pads away from camp.

Chapter 32.

CURT DECIDES

Paul wondered if Curt would throw up this Karakhan case altogether. What a stew Sonya had made of it! Except for her, the world already have closed in on the man. Not only had they waded previous days, but their best hope had gone glimmering, the hope of shadowing LeNoir, for without a doubt he suspected them now and would never let them follow him to his chief.

Occasionally he glanced down toward the Eskimwah mouth, but saw nothing of his partner. A little before noon he could stand it no longer. Dropping down lake, he landed and walked back into the pines.

Curt was sitting against a boulder, tracing meaningless patterns on the wolf-foot with a stick. He was plunged into deep thought, motionless, a dead pipe in his teeth. His face was gray and haggard, his eyes had a hard light in them; and when he looked up and smiled, it was a bitterly cynical smile.

But in spite of those ravages and of the many times when Paul had seen the steely self-control that lay deep-down in Curt, he was surprised that his partner could have taken so terrible a blow and then, within the space of a few hours, could have shaken it off and got himself in hand. He no longer seemed confused and bewildered, as last night at the sentry rocks.

Curt pointed with the stick. "See that pair of black lilies there, nodding their heads together? The smaller one is Sonya Volkov, and the other is her Cousin. I'm going to pull Karakhan's head off in a minute. I'll do it as an agent of the law, and not out of any jealousy over her. Lord, no—I couldn't be jealous of anything that he owns. I'll take the blossom over and give it to her, and then, after we nail him, I'll tell her what I meant by it."

"Nail him? You're still going ahead with this hunt?"

"Why not? We started it, we'll go through it. And from now on there'll be no more pussyfooting or generosity to strangers. I want to get through with this mess and get back down north to our Three Rivers country. I've been thinking of the Nahanni Mountains. Prospecting in the Nahanni will be a good way for a fellow to forget."

He got up, put on his jacket, and plucked the taller of the two black lilies. Over the other one he hesitated a moment. A shudder went through him as he took hold of it. Then with a savage gesture he flung it away, and brushed his hands.

"How're you going to find him?" Paul queried. "LeNoir is suspicious of us. He won't ever let us shadow him now."

"We won't try to shadow LeNoir. We've got an easier way of finding Karakhan. Sonya Volkov has been hard luck for us so far, but we're going to turn her into good luck. We'll use her. It's only fair, she used us."

"Use her?"

"Well, she's going to him, isn't she? What's to prevent you and me from following her? She'll be a down times easier to shadow than that bush-sinker. We'll use her as our bait. She's a pretty bait. When she goes to join him, we'll go along; and when she gets there, we'll be there, too!"

After a day and night of hard traveling, LeNoir stood in Karakhan's cabin once again. "Dis in your," he said, and with no other explanation he handed over Sonya's letter.

"Mine?" Karakhan echoed, struck all in a heap. "It's for me, you say?" His face turned ashy. "Who knows I'm here? Who in hell pumped that out of you?"

LeNoir trembled. "Read heem," he urged. "You understand, det."

His eyes went to the table behind Karakhan where lay his chief's heavy automatic. He backed up a step, and his fingers closed over an iron-tipped ski staff leaning against the wall. If this girl was not friend of his chief's but an enemy who was playing some infinitely clever game, Karakhan might shoot him in his tracks.

Karakhan ripped the envelope and held the letter to the window where the gray dawn-light was filtering through. In bewilderment he scanned the first few lines, then whipped over to the last page and glanced at the signature to see who his correspondent was.

"Sonya Volkov!"

"Don't you know her? She no lie to me?"

The question went past the Russian unheeded—he had turned back to the first page and was reading the letter with an intensity that shut out everything except the words before him.

Even yet LeNoir could not tell whether his chief would burst out at him in a fury or would fill his pocket with money, as the girl had said he would. He watched anxiously.

But then, little by little, he saw how his chief was taking it. Karakhan's anger and astonishment passed swiftly and changed to disbelief, as though he simply could not credit his good fortune; and then came a leaping exultation which his habitual cold mask could not quite hide.

"Where is she, LeNoir?" The pages quivered in his unsteady hands. "Why the devil didn't you bring her along with you, man?"

LeNoir drew a breath of immense relief and his jump nerves smoothed themselves out. The girl had spoken the truth!

"She down der at dat camp wit' de u'ders," he explained. "Thinking this a good chance to impress Karakhan with his caution, he added: 'How I know wedder she talkt straight or not? I don't know she av-right, until you say. Me, I don't tell nobody w'ere you hide, and I don't breeng no strangers here.'"

"But you should—No, suppose you did do right, since you didn't know the—uh, circumstances. Sit down. I'll get some coffee for us."

As LeNoir eased onto the wall bench his glance strayed over the window to the landwash where half a dozen lean honey-colored huskies were nosing along the water edge for dead fish. A pistol shot east of the hanger fourteen breibard came lay side by side on the sand like baking seals; and in the timber just behind them smoke was rising from three big campfires. The party was the Black Grizzly and his men, on their way south.

They had some a hundred miles without stopping even for food, and another hundred lay ahead of them. The sight of them comforted LeNoir a lot, after his two dismal failures to wipe out Reiston's party. He certainly could use thirty more men on the job. "One swoop and smash, and the business would be done."

The Russian came out of the boarded-off kitchen with a pot of coffee. He poured two tins and laced them with brandy. LeNoir drained his cup at a gulp. Slowly slipping his, Karakhan listened while LeNoir told him of the happenings down river.

About the two suspicious strangers who were drawing closer and closer to his hiding, the Russian asked no questions just then. He was unable to focus his thoughts on that pair—the sentences of Sonya Volkov's letter were galloping too madly through his mind, and his emotions were too much in a turmoil over her. She was near him, within a hundred miles! In five or six days more she would be there with him!

LeNoir suggested carefully, "She tell me do you be verre bigge for me breeng you dis letter and you pay me something, mebbe." He thought it good policy to mention the money matter while his chief was still in the first flush of elation and more likely to be generous. "When I go on dat weeloo islan' I take beeg chance on walk into trap; and den I make his long tresp fast'n hell."

Karakhan took out a billfold, selected a yellow note and passed it over. LeNoir blinked his eyes as he saw the denomination—two 0's trailing a 5. His chief had always paid him very handsomely, but half a thousand dollars, for one trip—the

SIXTY CANDIDATES FOR HARVESTER CAGE QUINTET REPORT FOR PRACTICE

PROSPECTS TO BE CUT TO 20 IN THIS WEEK

PRACTICE TO CONTINUE DURING CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

Fewer than a dozen players make a basketball team, and Coach Odus Mitchell of the Harvesters will have the job of selecting that number of boys from the 60 prospects when the first real practice started.

A number of boys have been working out for two weeks and their number was swelled last night when the football team "took things over". Coach Mitchell said that he will cut his list of prospects to 20 this week and that a further cut will be made during the Christmas holidays. There will be no let-up during the holiday week for the prospective Harvesters.

Three Pampans To Get Buffalo Eleven Letters

Three Pampa boys were announced eligible for letters when members of the West Texas Teachers college Buffaloes were banqueted in Canyon last night. A nephew of a Pampans was named captain of the 1934 Buffalo team.

Among those who will receive letters are Ralph Poe, Lloyd Moore, and Al Duncan. Duncan has played his last year for the Buffaloes. Poe will have another year, while Moore will have two more years. H. L. "Chicken Creek" Ledrick of Pampa will be eligible for a freshman letter.

The captain of the 1934 team will be John Walker of Spearman, nephew of Bob Fuller. The new captain is well known in Pampa, having played basketball with the Spearman Lynx here in other years.

"I consider John more a brother than a nephew," Bob has often declared. "He has lived with us since he was 2 years old and I certainly am proud of him."

It has been learned that Bob is putting his nephew through college.

J. B. Miller of Fort Worth was a Pampa visitor over the week-end.

Miles Marbaugh the only letterman back, the coach will have a job rounding out a squad to represent the local high school in both sectional play in the Interscholastic League race and the Class A, district 1, schedule, neither of which have been drawn.

The two lettermen will be assisted by such stars from last year and last year's Gorillas as J. R. Green, Bill Dunaway, Roscoe Pinnell, Lloyd Hamilton, Reg Brown, Elmer Irving, Everett Woodward, Tom Rose Jr., Edward Scott, Hazel Mackie, and others who are showing up well in practice.

E. N. Dennard and Harry Kelley will take the boys not kept by Coach Mitchell and develop Gorilla teams. The two mentors have been working for two weeks and have found a good combination. It will probably be broken up by some of the players remaining on the Harvester squad.

The Harvestettes are trying to get used to playing on a "two-court" floor instead of the old type. They are looking better at every practice. T. H. McDonald and Ben Gull are in charge of the team.

The Harvesters and Harvestettes were to play games with White Deer at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The exhibitions were arranged yesterday afternoon and are return engagements. Both Pampa teams lost by close scores in White Deer last week. No admission was to be charged to the exhibitions.

HELEN JACOBS IS CHOSEN AS BEST ATHLETE

NET QUEEN ACCLAIMED LEADING WOMAN PERFORMER

(NOTE: This is the second of a series detailing results of the third annual Associated Press sports poll.)

BY ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP)—For her twin tennis achievements in saving the Wightman cup for the United States, with a deciding singles victory, and then dethroning her famous rival, Helen Wills Moody, for the American championship, Helen Hull Jacobs wins the acclaim of the nation's sports observers as the outstanding woman performer of 1933.

The results of voting in the third annual Associated Press poll, among sports editors and writers, show Miss Jacobs a decisive winner in a three-cornered race for the feminine honors of the year in all sports. She polled more than one-third of the votes, 64 out of a total of 180. Her nearest rivals were Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, the national golf champion, who finished second with 48 votes, and Lenore Kight of Homestead, Pa., new swimming queen, who was third with 31.

Due to the relatively limited sphere of noteworthy feminine competition, the voting was confined almost entirely to those engaging in tennis, golf or swimming. Outside of these three sports, the only names mentioned were Anne Townsend of Philadelphia, captain of the American international field hockey team, and Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, all-around Texas athlete. Miss Didrikson, now a professional, cap-

Oklahoma Oil Production Up 48,000 Barrels

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 19 (AP)—Oklahoma's 48,000 barrel increase offset a slight drop in other fields and increased crude oil production of the United States last week from 2,390,888 to 2,413,578 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal says. Federal allowable is 2,210,000 barrels. Oklahoma's output rose from 501,525 to 549,965 barrels a day. The federal allocation is 457,000 barrels.

Texas production dropped from 965,131, to 951,811 barrels, still considerably above the 888,000 allowable.

Kansas was down from 109,025 to 106,990, more than 5,000 barrels below the allowable of 112,000 barrels.

California was high above the 450,000 allotment at 496,750 barrels, though down from 504,000 barrels the previous week.

Rocky mountain production dropped 300 barrels to 79,790 barrels. The allotment is 77,500 barrels.

Eastern production was 500 barrels above the allocation at 123,700 barrels. The decrease was from 125,200 barrels a day.
