Hereafter, references in this column will be to Skippy, "the family dog."

For Skippy, we are informed, is the father of two bouncing wiggling, baby pups.

This column wishes to congratulate the Rotary club on completion of a fine clubhouse for its Boy Scout troop. Furnishing of the building has begun.

WORDS has a new hobby which over the protest of Skippy, he proposes to develop. It is the making of a cactus garden, with examples of all the thorny plants which nature produces in West Texas. Contributions will be appreciated.

The world is pretty bad, but it is well said that no war has ever been started on Christmas day.

Musing of the moment: Rigid enforcement of the new liquor laws is needed. Enforcement officials would do well to have schools instruction in the statutes. With college graduates jobless, some excellent material for policemen, firemen, and the like is available. Big cities which are hiring such men are like the U. S. Department of Justice, proving that training plus experience get results.

Brevitorials

MEMORIES OF Christmas trees crowd upon memory's stage as warmly flickering lights appear on Pampa streets at night. He who has not enjoyed Christmas trees in small towns has missed some of the best entertainment in life. Of trees center around church groups on Christmas eve, and folks are there who never enter a church at any other time. At first they are inclined to feel conspicuous, but this backwardness is forgotten as the program proceeds. Young hopefuls of the Sunday school are padded forth in costumes, there is much bustling about and delay and false starts in the singing of Jingle Bells, but at last the child voices reach maximum volume on the final note. Of course, some of the prominent folks are embarrassed when their offspring look silly and merely mumble while the tots and across the tracks do well, but it is Christmas, so why worry? One must look nonchalant, at any rate.

The oldtime tree usually include the jingling of bells outside, as if Santa had just arrived with reindeer, and the old fellow romps in with a huge pack on his back. This usually contains candy and nuts, some of the prominent folks are embarrassed when their offspring look silly and merely mumble while the tots and across the tracks do well, but it is Christmas, so why worry? One must look nonchalant, at any rate.

HANGING UP the toys was always a diplomatic problem. One of course could not hang Deacon Jones' presents higher than Banker Smith's. Of course, Banker Smith may have given his boy Jim a full-fledged, over-stuffed toy, while the other child, who is a little less fortunate, has a little tin of marbles and a few pieces of string. The man-about-town led the merchant until his name was read, then he turned reddish purple, took the gourd and in wrath broke it over a pew, and stormed out.

Memory furnishes an example of the pre-civic club days when presents were taken seriously. An old-fashioned general labeled for a man-about-town was so high on the huge tree that the tallest man available was asked to remove it. Now a gourd is a respectable vegetable and makes the world's best dipper, but in some places it implies that the recipient thereof is pumpkin-headed, or shall we say as "empty (headed) as a gourd?" The man-about-town led the merchant until his name was read, then he turned reddish purple, took the gourd and in wrath broke it over a pew, and stormed out.

IT WAS OUR habit, while a college student, to visit country schools when they held their trees. In the small, isolated schools of that day, visitors were unexpected and some consternation often resulted. We students usually enjoyed the consternation. On one occasion, an especially timid bachelor teacher of a one-teacher school was in charge of a Christmas eve program. Undoubtedly it was the first public program of the year. One of the Christmas plays was scheduled. The teacher, a boy, and the two oldest girls in school were the players. A coal oil lamp hung from the ceiling at the front of the stage, almost beyond reach. The teacher came from behind the scenes, switched on the lamp, and when the visitor was noted, looked as if he had forgotten his words of welcome. Looking toward to avoid direct gaze at anyone in the crowd, he saw the handsome boy. With an expression of relief, he reached up, fumbled with the lamp, and possibly lowered

Milne Gasps Details Of Brutal Kidnaping As G-Men Seek Quartet

LEAGUE FIGHTING FORCE ADVOCATED

KIDNAP HOUSE IS LOCATED IN PENNSYLVANIA

VALUABLE LEADS GIVEN BY TORTURED YOUTH

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Dec. 20. (AP)—Ace man-hunters of the department of justice centered their search for the kidnapers of Caleb Milne, fourth, in the Philadelphia area today. While G-men all over the country have been asked to aid in the search, the detail specially picked by headquarters in Washington was reported convinced the abductors are somewhere in eastern Pennsylvania.

A ramshackle farmhouse and another property not far from Doylestown were centers of scrutiny as the result of a rambling, broken story of abduction and torture told the agents by the young actor-mystery writer in a hospital last night. Authorities in New York rejected the idea Milne was the victim of Alvin Karpis, "public enemy number one."

One official said "Karpis must be pretty mad about being mentioned in this thing. He is a master craftsman. This was a bad job, probably the work of an amateur."

Another spokesman said authorities have "a pretty good idea" as to the identity of the kidnapers. A hat and coat believed to have been worn by Milne the day he disappeared from New York were found behind a school house near the spot where he was picked up by motorists.

After examining the apparel, the agents locked themselves in Milne's

Dresses Needed For Dolls To Be Given Needy Tots

Seventy more dolls to go. Seventy smiling, happy faced dolls awaiting proper clothing before going to meet some young new owners at the Christmas tree for the needy children, which will be held at the city auditorium Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

Dressing of these dolls is held up for lack of dress material. Half a yard will dress three dolls. Or scrap material can be used. Pampa women are asked to contribute suitable material to the relief office so that the Council of Club members can dress the dolls. Meanwhile, the Christmas tree continues to grow. Mrs. Chas. Ochiltree, general chairman, today said that Mrs. Phoebe K. Worley had contributed $10, Judge W. R. Ewing $2.50, Miss Mary Hunter $2, and Mrs. L. E. Miller $2.

Cowboys Ball To Be Held Tonight

ABILENE, Dec. 20. (AP)—Up at Anson, twenty-three miles north of here, tonight folks will "gather in for miles" to commemorate an event which has been made epochal in poetry and story—the "cowboys' Christmas ball."

Posse Of 50 Men Seek Snyder Man

SNYDER, Dec. 20. (AP)—While a posse of 50 men was scouring the rough area between Snyder and Justiceburg in search of Truman Cannon, whose blood-stained car was found near here yesterday, charges of murder and selling liquor without a permit were being prepared this morning against a suspect who was taken in custody here Thursday afternoon. County Attorney R. W. Webb said the charges would be completed by noon.

Bloodstained Car of Missing Salesman Is Found

The suspect, a resident of Justiceburg, was removed from the county jail to a lone cell in the city jail this morning. Cannon was believed to have had $400 or $500 with him, probably most of it in cash. He was expected to return to Big Spring Wednesday night. His car, with blood stains on the front seat and glass shot out of the door on the driver's side, was found early Thursday on a detour road near here. A hat found near the car was identified this morning by Cannon's wife as belonging to him. She came here from Sweetwater, where she teaches school.

J. T. Johnson to Put Centennial Badge on Market

It was announced today J. T. Johnson, owner of the Johnson Hardware company, prominent Pampa business man, has purchased all patent, manufacturing and state-wide distribution rights of the Texas Centennial badge from a group of local men who designed and developed the beautiful souvenir. Residents of the Panhandle will remember the badge as the official badge of the Pampa Pre-Centennial celebration held here last June. Mr. Johnson intends to form what will be known as The Longhorn Novelty Art company, and set up a state-wide sales organization immediately, also securing concession space in Dallas on the Centennial grounds for handling his product during the celebration there. Beginning next month it is the plan of Mr. Johnson, who is to head the new company as president, to direct badge campaigns in every town and city in the state, giving women's clubs, civic clubs, or churches the opportunity to handle the sale in each community, much on the same idea as the one used here during the Pre-Centennial. A long time Pampa resident, Mr. Johnson has developed many business contacts over the state, which have expressed every confidence in

THELMA TODD MURDERED IN NEW THEORY

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20. (AP)—Kidnap threats and a new report that Thelma Todd was seen alive after the time an autopsy indicated she had died complicated the grand jury's investigation of the death of the glamorous screen actress today.

FREE MOVIE TO BE GIVEN TOTS IN THIS AREA

Attention, children of 12 and under and parents of such children in this area—here's something interesting. Pampa Lions, La Nora theater, and The NEWS will give their annual free Christmas movie at the theater next Tuesday morning, Dec. 23, at 10 o'clock.

Two in Hospital—Car Overturns West of Pampa

An automobile accident last night near Kingsmill put a young couple in Pampa hospital and demolished a car, a 1936 Ford V-8 coach. Holmes Oldham of Abilene, driver of the car, was dangerously injured internally and his companion, Miss Peggy Durkin of Amarillo, suffered from shock.

Fees For Sale Of Liquor To Be Fixed Here

The Pampa city commission will meet tomorrow to adopt an ordinance setting up the maximum fee for sale of liquors, and providing penalties of $25 to $200 for violations.

P. O. To Remain Open Until Six O'Clock Saturday

The local postoffice will remain open until 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in order to take care of the Christmas rush, now in progress.

Foils Doherty

That smile lighting up the face of George W. Doherty is a smile over success in serving papers on Henry L. Doherty, oil magnate, in 14 suits brought by stockholders. An amateur actor at George Washington university in under-graduate days, he donned white tie and tails to crash the exclusive Gridiron Club dinner in Washington, where Doherty was a guest.

BLIND SENATOR STRUCK BY CAR, SERIOUSLY HURT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20. (AP)—Friends feared today for the life of Thomas D. Schall, blind republican senator from Minnesota, who was struck down by an automobile last night as he walked across a highway near his Berwyn Heights, Md., home.

Both bones in the senator's left leg were crushed. He suffered from a serious head injury and had not regained consciousness. Orel Leen, 39, secretary to the 58-year-old senator, also was hit as he helped Schall across the street. Though he suffered scalp lacerations, leg bruises and a possible concussion of the brain, his condition was not considered grave.

I Saw...

J. S. Wynne looking expertly at a ring around the sun yesterday. "Sign of bad weather," he said. Dick Walker reported one of his roosters crowed last night. Said Miss Roy Riley, "now if we could just find someone whose bunion hurt especially."

BRITISH FEAR ATTACK FROM DUCE'S UNITS

NATIONS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE FORCE

GENEVA, Dec. 20. (AP)—The suggestion was advanced in international circles today, following the lead of Prime Minister Baldwin of Great Britain, that the League of Nations' council should consider asking league members to contribute fighting units to a league military force.

This military force, which could include land, sea, and air forces, would be used for the protection of the league covenant.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

London—The domestic crisis eased by a vote of confidence in the government, England's cabinet turned to selection of a new foreign secretary to replace Sir Samuel Hoare, resigned during agitation against the Franco-British peace proposals.

Geneva—An atmosphere of peace replaced anger and despair born of the suggestions to end African war. League enthusiasts hailed the rejection of the recommendations as a heartening demonstration of the power of public opinion.

SAN ANGELO WOMAN DIES

SAN ANGELO, Dec. 20. (AP)—Mrs. S. H. Robinson, 74, wife of a San Angelo merchant, died of a heart attack while conversing with a friend in a local drug store shortly before noon. The family moved here from St. Louis in 1927. Burial will be in Fort Worth Sunday afternoon. The husband and two sons, a farmer received $10.12. Processing taxes (which go to pay the farmer

LAVAL DECIDES NOT TO RESIGN PREMIER POST

FAILURE OF PACT NO FAULT OF HIS, HE SAYS

BY RICHARD G. MASSOCK. (Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.) PARIS, Dec. 20.—Premier Laval decided today he would not resign. It was officially announced after conferences with President Lebrun and rightist members of his cabinet. Laval and the president talked together half an hour. Laval was quoted as having said: "There may be an epidemic of resignations but I do not feel affected by the contagion."

The French press pictured France as the last big power of the League of Nations to hold out against the peril of a general European war.

Friends of Eduard Herriot, influential minister of state who resigned as president of the dominant radical-socialist party because of criticism against Laval, said he likewise was resigning with the cabinet to the last.

Barring unforeseen developments, informed sources expected Laval to leave his future as premier, and that of his government, up to the chamber of deputies where foreign debate has been set for Dec. 27.

Government supporters insisted the failure of the Franco-British peace plan was no fault of Laval's, and urged that France's domestic political situation be undisturbed by attempts to settle the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

France had only the role of conciliator to play in the international situation, Laval's supporters insisted.

Laval and Sir Samuel Hoare were described in French press dispatches from Geneva as victims of "duplicity" by Italy's Premier Mussolini.

Instead of the acceptance in principle of the settlement proposals which Duce had given them reason to expect, the noted commentator, Fertinax, said, Laval and Hoare learned a motorized troop division embarked December 10 for Benghazi, in Italy's north African possession of Libya, bordering on Egypt.

French officials declined to comment on Sir Samuel's speech yesterday to the British house of commons.

International Sunday School Lesson

By DR. J. E. NUNN

General Topic: What Shall We Give Our King?

Scripture Lesson—Matt. 2:1-12.
1. Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem.

2. Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

3. When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

6. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, art thou the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

7. Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9. When they had heard the king, they departed; and lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.
11. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented him gifts; gold and frankincense and myrrh.

12. And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod they departed into their own country another way.
Golden Text: Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for thus it is he that shall save his people from their sins. (Matt. 1:21).

Introduction

"Jesus entered into the world with all the circumstances of poverty. He had a stable for his bed-chamber; and a manger for his cradle. The angels sang hymns when he was born; but he was cold and cried, uneasy and unprovided." (Jeremy Taylor).

"God adapts his methods to the mental capacity and ordinary circumstances of men. To the Jews, prophecies were given. To shepherds, accustomed to stories about angelic visitors an angel was sent. To astrologers, a meteor appeared" (F. J. Austin).

"Follow you the star that lights desert pathway. Yours or mine, Forward, 'Till you see the highest Human Nature is Divine." (Tennyson).

The Gospel of Matthew

We are to keep before us the fact that Matthew writes primarily for the Jews, and to prove to them that Jesus is the Messiah. We naturally wonder that he should give an account of the coming of the Wise-men. One of the proofs, to a Jew, that Jesus is the Messiah, would be the fulfillment, in the coming of the Wise-men, of the prophecy of "the gathering of the Gentiles to the light of Israel"; he, therefore, gives in detail the account of their search for the Messiah.

Verse 1. "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king." Bethlehem, just a few miles south of Jerusalem, the scene of Ruth's life with Boaz; the birthplace of David, a descendant of Ruth and ancestor of Jesus (Matt. 1:5). Christ was born during the reign of Herod the king. We know that "he was the first Governor of Galilee, but he had been king of Judaea since 40 B. C. It is not made plain by Matthew, how long before the death of Herod Jesus was born. Our traditional date A. D. 1, is certainly wrong, as Matthew shows. It seems plain that the birth of Jesus cannot be later than 5 B. C. (Robertson).

"Wise-men from the east." There are all sorts of tradition about who these men were and where they came from. We know just what is here said, and no more. The fact that they said: Verse 2. "Where is he this born King of the Jews? for we saw his star in the east, and are come to worship him," has led to conjecture that they came from Arabia, Babylon, or Persia.

"King of the Jews." Perhaps they knew of the Messianic hope. Some contemporary writers like Virgil had thoughts along this line. An atmosphere of expectancy was everywhere. In any event, here is evidence that God moved on hearts other than the chosen people.

Verse 3. "And when Herod the king heard it, he was troubled, and Jerusalem with him." We will want to realize that this king was an inhuman monster, who, knowing that he was a usurper was jealous of his throne, and suspicious of every possible aspirant. He was guilty of the murder of his wife, his son, and the relatives of his wife. He had destroyed everyone who might be a rival. Now an old man, diseased and full of fury, the announcement of the Magi stirs him with apprehension and murderous purpose.

Verse 4. He inquired of them where the Christ should be born. Now came the chief of Priests and scribes of the people," to look up prophecy concerning the advent of the Messiah, and they found it clearly and unmistakably stated.

Verse 5. "And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written through the prophet.

"And thou, Bethlehem, land of Judah,

"For out of thee shall come forth a governor.

Who shall be shepherd of my people Israel."

"That word 'shepherd' includes governing, protecting, and feeding—a form of expression applied to kings, both in Scripture and in classic, and repeatedly used in Messianic prophecies." (Broadus)

Verse 7. "Then Herod privily called the Wise-men, and learned of them exactly what time the star appeared." Herod proposed to set aside Jehovah's decree. He seeks to do it by duplicity and false piety, and so he instructs:

Verse 8. "Go and search out exactly concerning the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word, that I also may come and worship him." Now this sounds plausible, and if the Magi had been merely matching skill against Herod, they likely would have been duped; but the Infinite Wisdom was guiding them, Herold failed.

The Wise Men Find Jesus

Verse 11. "And they came into the house, and saw the young child with Mary his mother; and they fell down and worshipped him." Several words should be emphasized—the house—the child—worshipped.

Doubtless Wise men, looking for a king, expected to see pomp and glory of kingly state. They were accustomed thus to view rulers. Here they find a child, poor, obscure, lying on his mother's breast, and giving no outward sign of his dignity and state. They worshipped him and they did homage to what was revealed. That was sublime faith!

"And opening their treasures, they offered unto him gifts, gold, and frankincense, and myrrh." We will pass over the traditional thoughts as to the significance of these gifts, and remind you that they were a full, free joyous expression of their homage to the One who, they knew, was no ordinary being, though they may not have known that he was "the Christ, Son of the Living God."

True to their evident custom of seeking for guidance, they probably prayed and were instructed in a dream "not to return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way." And so the well-laid plans of awicked earthly king was thwarted by divine wisdom and guidance.

WAR AND TAXATION REMEMBERED

The current effective outcry of peoples of many nations against war is not merely the result of a love for abstract peace. Except for those nations which are striving to better themselves by forced expansion, the world seems rather well educated to the fact that war without conquest is an economic loss. When hope of conquest is denied, war will be much less likely.

Millions of signatures are being attached to petitions for peace and disarmament. It has always been the contention of THE NEWS that war will end only when people decree it, hence these movements involving individual action are not to be mocked.

Most persons lose in a war. Profiteers are few in number compared with those who must pay dearly in blood and cash. And post-war depressions ruined many a profiteer. Labor is opposed to war, although a few short-sighted persons remember wartime wages and hope for a return of such inflation.

Taxation threatens to become as vital in the next ten years as it was, without representation, in Colonial days. Today, it appears, we are a bit too well represented. Federal expenditures can be classified in two divisions: Budgetary and emergency. Appropriations for unemployment relief meet an emergency need. Citizens must not starve. But there can be a paring of the multitudinous services which governmental units have been providing.

Today's taxes, involving yesterday's and tomorrow's wars, are high enough without adding a war today.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Memories of great men participating in great events are not to be trusted.

That's at least one lesson emerging from recent discussion and debate as to how we got into that World War and whether the chief reason was to save democracy or the bankers or to serve the British or the munitions makers.

Certainly one of the most important documents of the war bearing on that point was a letter from Secretary of State Robert Lansing to President Woodrow Wilson, urging reversal of the previous neutrality policy stated by Secretary Bryan which barred flotation of war loans for the Allies or Germany in this country.

Lansing said he and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo agreed that if Americans didn't lend money to "belligerents," European nations (which meant only the Allies) couldn't buy our goods, which would mean depression over here. That was in September, 1915.

Bryan had put the administration on record formally as holding such loans to be "inconsistent with the true spirit of neutrality."

Lansing pointed out that this had become "a source of embarrassment" and said he was seeking some way of "harmonizing" it with the flotation of general loans.

Wilson acquiesced. The great British and French war loans were floated—mostly by Morgan & Co. Neutrality evaporated. Former Premier Andre Tardieu of France commented that "from that time on, whether desired or not, victory for the Allies became essential to the United States."

By March, 1917, Ambassador Page at London was cabling that government loans must back up the private loans to avert panic, that if we declared war on Germany the best thing we could do for the Allies would be to open up the Treasury to them. And along came the war.

Although the general public was unaware of it, a highly conservative engineering society allowed itself to be scandalized recently when Director Morris L. Cooke of Rural Electrification Administration spoke to it on "Power Distribution Costs."

No such controversial subject had ever been allowed on the agenda before and many at the convention grew rather hot about it, especially since public utilities and their engineers have long insisted that distributors costs of electricity were "too involved, complicated, and difficult" for ascertainment.

Cooke implied this attitude had been maintained in order to preserve exorbitant rates by "hokus-pokus" accounting procedure.

Outlining methods of distribution cost findings, he told how in New York state he and others of the New York Power Authority had found that distribution costs didn't exceed 2½ cents per kilowatt hour to homes using 600 kilowatts annually—the national average—and that it would be but 1.7 cents for a 1200-kilowatt average and 0.7 for 4800.

The inference, coupled with Cooke's insistence that it was "imperative for the industry to replace confusing data with orderly data," was that since generation and transmission costs would hardly total more than 1 cent per k. w. h. and allowing a 7 per cent profit, consumers should pay around 3½ cents instead of a present average of more than 5 cents. And that the more you electrify your home, the cheaper should be the juice.

CAPITOL CHATTER

BY CHARLES E. SIMONS

AUSTIN, Dec. 20 (AP)—It is not the problems of state alone that cause Gov. Alfred uneasy moments because he often shows serious concern over the affairs that touch the happiness of citizens.

The recent Nottley case, in which extradition of a father was sought for removal of his son from Michigan to Texas after custody of the child was awarded to the mother, brought many wrinkles to the gubernatorial brow before he decided it.

The governor said he believed Nottley erred in removing the child, a felony under the Michigan law but no offense under the Texas statute.

"I cannot find it in my heart to unduly censure him, especially since the boy wanted to come to Texas with him and now tearfully insists that he be permitted to remain," the governor commented. "I dislike making a decision when the mother is not here and realize the grief that must ensue from any course this case may take other than a reconciliation between the father and mother. The disposition of this case calls for greater wisdom than I possess."

Rejection of the request for extradition, marked the first time since his inauguration in January Alfred refused to honor the requisition of another state.

After deciding the boy should remain in Texas with his father, Gov. Alfred invited him over to the mansion to play with the governor's oldest son, "Jim Boy."

The governor also ponders deeply over requests for executive clemency before approval or rejection. He requires that a strict investigation be made into circumstances of each case by the pardon board and advised with local officers. The extra-legal aspects—items not admissible in evidence at court trials—often are investigated thoroughly to give the governor the proper background for his decision.

In many instances the governor has convicts brought from Huntsville to Austin so he may talk to them about their lives, their crimes and their general attitude.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 20 (AP)—A serenade by 27 members of a college legal fraternity pleased Gov. Alf M. Landon—and all the lads, who were greeted by the governor and presented cigars. "The Gov's a great guy," commented a vigorous puffer.

'Gift of God' Baby Goes Back To Servant Girl

S. LOUIS, Dec. 20 (AP)—Anna Ware's infant son was restored to her Thursday by the St. Louis court of appeals, bringing to an end the bizarre "gift of God" baby case.

Denying Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muech's motion for a rehearing of the court in a brief session ordered the baby turned over to the Pennsylvania servant girl.

The court's marshal, Joseph E. McDermott, promptly carried out the court's instructions. He accompanied Miss Ware to a children's hospital, where the child had been kept under court order, and had it delivered to its mother.

The baby had been the center of a dispute almost without parallel in modern legal history. The Bible records a somewhat similar case.

Mrs. Muech, wife of a St. Louis physician, announced the birth of a son on August 18. A day previous, Miss Ware, unwed domestic, gave birth to a son, which she permitted to be taken from her for adoption.

Seeking to regain her child, she filed the suit in which she alleged Mrs. Muech's child was her son. Her contention was upheld by the court.

A special commissioner, who heard lengthy testimony, declared in a report, which the court approved, that Mrs. Muech never bore a son. He asserted she announced the birth to gain sympathy from a jury which later tried and acquitted her on a charge of complicity in a kidnapping case.

Chapter XXXVII.
Larry Glenn drove slowly out the road that led north from the town of Midlothian, and repeated to himself the directions that had been given him at the filling station.

First white farm house on the left side of the road after you pass the little grove of oaks," he mused. "Let's see—this must be the grove; now, when I get past it . . ."

He touched the brake and crawled along even more slowly. The oak grove slipped to the rear, followed by an orchard; beyond the orchard a pleasant-looking farm house with a veranda across the front and a fringe of trees along the side of its yard came into view. Larry swung into the driveway, drove to the back yard, parked, and went up to the back door and rapped.

He heard slow footsteps inside the house; then the door was opened part way and a man peered out at him.

The man was stooped and rather shrunken-looking, with shaggy gray eyebrows, a tanned bald head, and an untidy mustache that straggled dejectedly down the corners of his mouth. He wore baggy gray trousers, old shoes, and a faded gray flannel shirt and held a blackened pipe in one fist, and he bent upon Larry a look of sullen suspicion.

"Mr. Engle?" said Larry. The man nodded reluctantly.

"My name's Harder," said Larry politely. "I'm doing some field research for Uncle Sam, collecting statistics on the triple-A-corn-and-hog program, and I'm afraid I'll have to bother you to answer a few questions."

The man peered up from beneath his overhanging eyebrows and hesitated. Larry smiled, in the manner of one who knows that he is making a nuisance of himself but proposes to get it over with as painlessly as possible, and said, "It won't take but a minute or two."

The man looked at him again, and grudgingly opened the door. "Come on in then," he said ungraciously. Larry followed him into the kitchen.

The kitchen was a large room, in the old-fashioned farm manner. A wood-burning range stood at one end, and at the other was a large table spread with a checkered gingham cloth and covered with used breakfast dishes. Mr. Engle sat cautiously in a straight-backed chair and waved Larry to another, beside the table. Larry sat down, drew a notebook from his pocket, opened it, and leaned forward with another ingratiating smile.

"Now, let's see, Mr. Engle," he said. "You've got 20 acres in field corn this year, and a two-acre plot of sweet corn, so we'll skip it. Twenty acres, and last summer you—"

And he went on, reciting facts and figures that he had gleaned half an hour earlier in the office of the county agricultural agent; and Mr. Engle, nodding occasionally and sucking at his empty pipe, found no reason to suspect that his visitor was anything except what he represented himself to be.

"—and here you your copy of the agreement with the county agent? I'd like to glance at it, Mr. Engle," said Larry, in conclusion.

Mr. Engle looked helplessly about him then got to his feet.

"Hi!" he called. There was no answer, and he repeated the call. "Em!"

"What'd you want?" said a woman's voice, rasping and impatient, from somewhere upstairs.

"Where's my copy of that corn-hog agreement?"

"Wherever you put it, which might be most anywhere," said the voice. Mr. Engle stared blankly at the ceiling. There was a moment's silence; then the woman's voice called down. "Did you look in the desk in the front parlor? Might be—"

The rest of it was lost, as the woman apparently moved from one upstairs room to another. Mr. Engle looked blankly at Larry, then mumbled, "It'd better go look for it," and shuffled off, through a swinging door, to the front of the house.

Larry, left alone in the kitchen, looked about him with keen interest. He had already learned, from the county farm agent, that the Engles were childless and had no hired help; how was it, then, that at least six people had eaten breakfast in the kitchen that morning—as the used dishes on the kitchen table clearly testified? Was the penciled phone number on the wall of that Chicago apartment which had led him here to have a look at things on the off chance that he might learn something—was it a hotter tip than he had dared to suppose?

He listened intently. Someone, the woman probably, was moving about upstairs. Engle seemed still to be in the front, looking for the agreement. Larry looked over the plates on the table. Moving deftly and silently, he picked up a knife from each plate, wrapped them all carefully in a handkerchief and slipped the bundle into an inner pocket; then, standing, he looked over the table a second time.

The people who had eaten here had smoked after eating. Here was a saucer full of cigar ashes; here was a sodden cigar butt in the holder; and here, tucked under this bread and butter plate lay another cigar butt. He looked at the latter closely, saw the faint red stains of lipstick, and pursed his lips into a soundless whistle.

Then he heard Mr. Engle returning. Larry slipped into his chair again and was looking absently at the range when the farmer reentered the kitchen.

"Here 'tis," said Mr. Engle, extending a creased and soiled document. Larry took it, scanned it with an air of vast interest, and laid down a couple of notes in his little book, and then returned it.

"I'm sorry to have bothered you," he said, smiling. "Now, if I can have a look at your stock, I'll go away and leave you in peace."

He got up to follow the sluggish Mr. Engle out the back door; and at that moment he heard more footsteps in the hall, the swinging door thumped and swung, and a stout, red-faced woman came into the kitchen, carrying an enormous armful of sheets rolled into a huge ball.

She stumped across the room and dumped her load into a wicker basket; then, turning, she saw Larry, and looked at her husband in quick inquiry.

"This 'one of those AAA fellows," said Engle. "He's inquiring about my corn, and so on."

She looked at Larry uncertainly, then turned back to the clothes basket.

"Well," she said, "I'll get on with my washing. You won't need me, will you, Mister?"

Larry smiled and shook his head, and followed the farmer out into the back yard, thinking, "Six places for breakfast, and enough used sheets to sleep a regiment—for a family of two—!"

He followed the farmer through the outbuildings, squinting hard at the pigs, pretended to take more notes, and managed to observe from the indentations in the soil and the black grease-drippings on grass and gravel that at least two cars had been parked in the back yard very recently; and finally, half an hour after his arrival, he shook hands with Engle, wished him good day, got into the roadster and drove away.

Instead of turning back to Midlothian, he hurried on to the county seat, 10 miles away. There he returned the car to the garage from which he had rented it that morning, and took a taxi to the little city's airport. The chartered plane in which he had flown down that morning was waiting for him, its pilot loitering in the hangar.

"Get her warmed up, quick," said Larry. "I want to get back to Dover as fast as you can put me there."

It was still before noon when he entered his office in Dover. He took from his pocket the little uncle of pilfered table knives from the Engle kitchen and carefully unwrapped it. Then he called for Tony LaRocco.

"Tony," he said as the Italian entered the room. "I think you can make some prints off these. Try 'em and see what you get, will you? And—step on it."

Tony took the exhibits and departed, while Larry sat at his desk and took hurried glance at various papers and memoranda that had been accumulating during his absence. He raised his eyebrows over one memorandum, studied it with care, called Agent Frank Watson into his office and talked with him earnestly. The third day he laid honest, hard-fisted friend, Detective Sergeant Mike Hagan of the Dover police, and held a telephone consultation with him. As he hung up Tony came back into the room carrying a huge blotter on which lay the photographic prints, still wet from the fixing bath.

"Three of the knives were too smudged to do any business with," said Tony. "I got these off the other three. Here's what looks like two fingers and a thumb, from one. Then here's a couple of fingers, from another. The third and fourth smudges and one half-way decent impression. . . I dunno."

Larry looked at the prints, automatically drawing out the envelope in which he carried the fingerprint impressions of Red Jackson, Wingy Lewis, and Sandy Harkins up laid the cards on the table, and Tony bent over them with him.

"This one we don't have," mused Larry. "We'll send it to Washington. This single, here . . . by the Lord, Tony, if that isn't Red Jackson's 'look'!"

They made a careful, painstaking comparison, checking loops and whorls with methodical exactness. Then they straightened up, looked at one another, and nodded.

"This other one—looks like a woman's," said Tony. Larry looked at the prints. "You're right, so much, you can't tell," explained Tony. "But on the silver the prints were a lot smaller than the others. I bet it's a woman's."

"Might be Mrs. Engle's," said Larry slowly. "Or maybe the Brady kid with 'em. Well, it doesn't signify—"

He broke off as his bell tinkled, and took up the telephone. He smiled and spoke a word of greeting into the mouthpiece; then, as he listened, he grew tense, and his face became stern.

"My God, man, it can't be!" he said. "Listen—"

BORAH APPROVES HIS CANDIDACY FOR PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—Senator Borah of Idaho was closer today to being an outright, avowed candidate for the republican presidential nomination than at any time since pre-campaign preparations began.

Two republicans from Wisconsin, after conferring with the Idaho man, made an announcement last night that aroused much political interest. They said he had o. k.'d a proposed drive to elect a Borah-for-president delegation to represent Wisconsin at the republican national convention, and that they were going home immediately to circulate nominating petitions.

When reporters questioned Borah about this, he said:

"I told them that whatever they did along that line I would stand in with them."

His two visitors, State Senator Phillip E. Nelson, of Maple, Wis., and former State Senator Bernhard Getteman of Milwaukee, said it was fitting that their projected Borah-for-president organization be formed in Wisconsin because "the republican party was born in Wisconsin and at this time should be reborn there."
