Five years later, town still coping with deadly tornado

JARRELL (AP) With a steady breeze blowing on a Sunny and cool spring day. Dorothy Jones feels a million miles and light years away from one of the deadliest tornados in Levas history.

But she's not Jones is standing on the spot where just five years ago a twister spawning winds of more than 300 mph pulverized this hamlet, killing 27 people.

Today, the land where the Igo tamily Larry and Joan, daughter Audrey and twin sons John and Paul lived and died is a municipal memorial park. Children play on swing sets and slides on the spot where the Igo home once stood before it literally vanished under the storm's fury.

"This is beautiful," Jones said, the cool breeze brushing back her hair. "That was horrible.

At her feet is the park's underground storm shelter. eight steps leading down to a dank, concrete bunker for safety in case another storm ever churns here again.

"A lot of people were ask ing. Why would God let something like this happen to us?" she said.

Joint session Cyber Net Of City, PEDC is called off

SUNDAY, MAY 26, 2002

STAFF WRITER

Pampa City Commission and the Pampa Economic Development Corporation are not going to sit down together and discuss their differences at least not on Tuesday night following the Pampa Commission meeting. The possibility of such a meeting was discussed during a PEDC meeting Monday, May 20. The PEDC board members indicated they would like to sit down with the city commission and clear up any misunderstandings regarding the duties of each during the dissolution process of the PFDC

However, it looks like the the two entities will want for an out side party to make the dear ion. The City of Pampa requested an Attorney General's opinion in March on who has authority over the dissolution. That decision is expected to be received by September 23.

The stumbling block to hadding the nicetims was whether to meet in public or private

Dalton Lewis, president of the PIDC, said Monday night that Mayor Lonny Robbins wanted the commission and PLDC to go into an executive session to disce their differences. However, Lewis said the Open Meetings Actidose not permit two government entities to go into a closed a sign to meet. The PLDC board members said they would as res to meet with the commission in open session

Lewis told The Pampa News Linday evening that he talked with Robbins on Hausday. He said Robbins was not in layor of an open meeting. "When I read the Amarillo paper this morning, Hearned we were not going to meet," said I ewis. He said he did not talk with Robbins on Friday

Texas tidbits ... Odds and ends from latest Census figures

Some facts from Friday's release from the 2000 Census

The percentage of families living in poverty nearly doubled in Mayerick County, jumping from 17 percent in 1990 to 32 per cent in 2000. Fifteen counties saw double digit declines in their family poverty rate. McMullen County had the largest reduction. tumbling 29.7 percent, from 45.6 percent of families in 1990 to 15.9 percent in 2000.

Tiny Willamar in Willacs Counts had the highest percent age of residents with a high school or equivalent diploma, with 100 percent. None of the community's 14 residents who responded to the Census survey had a college degree

Seven places had no residents with a high school diploma: Cuevitas, Brundage, Butterfield, Guerra, La Paloma, South Fork Estates and Tradewinds

Singles seeking a potential mate may want to visit Butterfield, where everyone 15 years and older reported having never been married. Quintana had the state's highest divorce rate at 31.8 percent

In Santa Clara, just northeast of San Antonio, 57.4 percent of homeowners reported having three or more vehicles, double that of wealthier cities like Highland Park near Dallas, where more than a third of residents make $200,000 or more annually.

While the Pampa Independent School District has operated a summer lunch program since 1995, child nutrition director, Debbie Middleton said nothing like this has been done before. Previously the lunch program has operated in one school cafe.

It's all thanks to Carolyn Stroud and the other people at Harvest House who have signed up more than 80 volunteers who'll donate two or more hours a day to serve the lunches and supervise the youngsters, said Middleton. Harvest House, estab lished in 1998, distributes food weekly to those in need as well as helping that population in other ways.

The program will begin Tuesday. June 4, and will run through Friday, Aug. 9, said Middleton said Friday it had agreed to temporarily close the public footpath running alongside Coldham Hall in Stanningfield, eastern England, on the grounds of public safety — a measure the local church group said was "going overboard."

The council said it had made the decision after consulting with police and security guards working at the hall ahead of Schiffer's Saturday nuptials to film producer Matthew Vaughn.

Guests at the wedding and reception were expected to include Vaughn's friend Guy Ritchie and Madonna, Ritchie's wife.

The footpath, which runs about half a mile around the house before going into the village of Stanningfield, had tury building that was reopened allowed journalists to stand a few yards from the rear 1955 after being gutted at the entrance to the grounds of the Members of the public had also been free to walk on the path and watch the wedding preparations.

The council did not say how long the order would remain in place.

Barenboim's complaint came four days after an aged hydraulic stage lift collapsed during a performance of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," bringing down with it parts of the decor. No one was injured, but the performance was interrupted for 20 minutes.

Barenboim called for the urgent release of funds to restore the opera house on Berlin's famed Unter den Linden boulevard, an 18th-cenend of World War II. Last renovated in 1986, its condition now poses a "really great danger," he asserted.

The opera management reportedly estimates that $91.7 million is needed to carry out repairs that would fulfill mod-

The city government is struggling with huge debts but also is keen to promote Berlin as a world-class center of culture, and the current mayor has dropped his predecessor's plan to merge the Staatsoper with a modern cross-town rival meant

Last September, Barenboim signed a new contract to keep him at the Staatsoper through 2007 after the federal government promised more funds for the orchestra.

NEW YORK (AP) -Pavarotti's Luciano "Pavarotti & Friends" concert in Modena, Italy, on Tuesday will include performances by Andrea Bocelli, James Brown, Grace Jones, Lou Reed and Sting.

Each artist will perform a solo plus a duet with Pavarotti on stage at the Parco Novi Sad in the tenor's hometown. Elisa, Augusto Enriquez Y Su Mambo Band, Gino Paoli and Zucchero are also scheduled.

Proceeds will go to the Nations United Commissioner for Refugees for medical, educational and water facilities to benefit almost 80,000 Angolans in refugee camps in Zambia.

Last year's concert raised $1.5 million for Afghan refugee children in Pakistan, while a 1999 concert collected $1 million for Kosovo

"It is deeply gratifying that so many wonderful musicians come to our concert each year to give their talents and time to help these vital causes," Pavarotti said in a statement this week.

Pavarotti, 66, recently canceled two performances of "Tosca" at the New York Metropolitan Opera because he had the flu.

through dirt and leaves as they looked for blood, fibers, hair or any other evidence to assist their investigation into the death of Chandra Levy.

Law enforcers are revealing little of what they've turned up, other than to say the skull they found was not "pristine" and the bones were scattered. Teanis shoes, a jogging bra and a sweat shirt also were found in the remote section of a park where the young woman's skeletal remains were discovered this week.

The police said they do not know whether Levy, 24, of Modesto, Calif., died where the body was found or someone dumped her there.

Investigators scoured the crime scene — a steep, heavily wooded slope in Rock Creek Park — in their search for evidence that could tell how Levy died, how her body got there and, perhaps, who killed her.

District police added an important piece of forensic evidence with the discovery of a knotted piece of clothing that may have been used to restrain Levy, The Washington Post reported Saturday, citing law enforcement sources.

Levy's stretch leggings, found near her remains, were knotted in a way that suggests they might have been used to tie her up, the Post said.

Police refused to confirm the report. Dr. Jonathan Arden, Washington's medical Police are talking to nearby residents and joggers to see if they recall anything unusual on May 1, 2001, when police believe Levy disappeared. They also may re-interview people, including Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif., and Ingmar Guandique, convicted of assaulting two female joggers in the same park in the weeks following Levy's disappearance.

Guandique, 20, pleaded guilty in February to assaulting the two women, who told police they were jogging when a man with a knife grabbed them. He is serving a 10-year prison

Police Chief Charles Ramsey said Guandique said "nothing to implicate himself" in the Levy case when investigators interviewed him last year.

Condit, 54 and married, has acknowledged an affair with Levy, a police source says, but denies any involvement in her disappearance. Police interviewed him four times and repeatedly have said he is not a suspect.

LEATHERS TO THE EDITOR

Frustrated with happenings

This letter is in response to the unfortunate closing of C&C Cattle Co. I was appalled at the reasons for their closing. It seems to me that the owners worked very hard to give our community a lively, upbeat and beautiful restaurant which Pampa greatly needed.

I drove by many times before the restaurant opened to see them diligently working. They put a lot of time and effort into the restaurant only to see it destroyed by their own city.

As with any new business, they needed to work out a few things to better serve their customers, but I feel they were trying hard despite all the obstacles they were faced with. In time we could have all had a great restaurant to be proud of.

What is up with all this "landscape ordinance" stuff? I would think our own city would be more interested in the success of a business. It seems our city is causing businesses to fail and making it almost impossible for anything new to come to

Why are we so afraid of change? I think it would do our city good. One would think that instead of crying over a little spilled "water," the city could have looked at the big picture to see that the amount of water the restaurant would have used over the years would have been much more beneficial to them and to our city's economy and that a parking lot full of cars was better than the one that now sits empty, along with so many oth-

It is getting to the point where "shop Pampa" first is not even an option. I can understand the owners' frustration for I; too, am frustrated with the things that go on in our town.

Dad disagrees with decision

To start with, my boy has had problems in Pampa Middle School. He gets in his fair share of trouble. I've agreed with 99 percent of the punishment he's had. This time I feel the school is wrong.

Two boys got in a fight. His involvement was only asking a question. They said my boy was making offensive comments for the seeming purpose of making the other boy angry. A joke was played on this boy. My boy took this as a joke and asked a question about the joke. They suspended him for one day, but he wasn't involved in the fight.

The school has refused to discuss this matter further.

What has happened to our freedom of speech? Even a kid has this right, or does he?

I asked the school if there was not some other way of dealing with this. The answer was, "No, we are comfortable with

Our courts reverse decisions. Why can't our school even look at this again?

In closing, there were three other witnesses that said that he was not trying to start a fight. Disciplinary action must be kept in our schools, but the people that run it are human. They can make mistakes also.

They could have said, "We are sorry, but this is our decision," but they said in a cold tone, "We are comfortable with this decision.'

What happened to the days (when) schools and parents worked together? Now, what they say is law.

I've told my son to think before he speaks. But he has a right to speak without fear of punishment.

It's your money, after all

I'm sure I am not alone in my disappointment last week that the Pampa Economic Development Corporation went into executive (I prefer the word closed) session last week to talk about issues outside public earshot.

I'm not so sure it was proper to do so given there is no contemplated litigation. And the law permitting closed meetings is written very narrowly. Their new lawyer said it is proper given they were getting legal advice.

Legal advice as to what?

Legal advice that is so sensitive in nature that the public can't be privy to it?

I wish I could seek an AG's opinion on that but newspaper reporters aren't on the list of folks who have that privilege.

AND, even if it is legal, there's nothing that says a body has to go behind closed doors just because it can. (Excepting employee privacy, maybe, unless the employee opts otherwise.)

KATE B. DICKSON ASSOCIATE PUBLISHER

The PEDC shouldn't meet in closed session. Especially with all this city's been through over the PEDC - all the public trust issues, etc.

Don't forget, the public should - at least morally - be entitled to hear discussion given that every single PEDC dime spent is taxpayer funded. It's paid for in half-cent sales tax increments.

Simply put: The citizens are carrying the freight on all the deals and are the ones who will be - and have been - left holding the bag when something goes

If nothing else, the PEDC board should respect that enough to hold their meetings in the sunshine and give no appearance there's something to hide from us.

Last week, the board willfully cut the public out of a discussion of the Foster Street (old U.S. Bus) property, Crall Product loans, Promise Land Park Models, Section 53 property and the Criminal Justice Training Program.

Remember. It didn't have to. It just did. These are my opinions and I hope you agree for the sake of openness in government. If it is, let the powers that be know or write a letter to the editor.

But heck, you know me by now, please say or write even if you think I am 110 percent in the wrong. I don't care.

Just do something ... anything, don't just sit back ... after all, it's your money.

Tinsley Bruce þ Fillmore Mallard

Don't ever say 'too busy' again

Perhaps, like me, you are vaguely familiar with the name of Douglas Southall Freeman. Perhaps you recall him as the author of a multivolume history of the War Between the States called "Lee's Lieutenants" or as the editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader.

If, because you have no particular interest in either the Civil War - as Yankees call it - or the news business, you think a biography of Freeman would be dull reading, then pards, you are riding off on the wrong trail and will miss a beautiful vista. What is beautiful and fascinating about Freeman is not his subject matter, but the man himself. He was, to put it mildly, a most astounding person.

Check out this schedule: Rise at 2:30 a.m., dress, pray in your alcove chapel, fix your own breakfast, and arrive at work at 3:30 a.m. Conduct the affairs as editor of the daily newspaper, do a twicedaily ad-lib radio broadcast, write editorials and columns, and then return home at 12:30 p.m. for lunch and work in the garden. A 30-minute nap from 2:30 p.m. to 3 p.m., then three hours of solid work on meticulous historical research. Dinner and family time from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., then off to bed and start it all over again at 2:30 a.m. the next day.

The amount of work this man accomplished is astounding. In addition to all of the newspaper editing and history research and writing, he played an active role in his church, in his community and indeed in his nation. He became a friend of such men as Dwight Eisenhower and George C. Marshall. He gardened, he sailed, he attended baseball games, taught classes at his church, gave speeches and wrote Pulitzer Prize-winning biographies of Robert E. Lee (four volumes) and George Washington (six volumes). And he had a long and successful marriage.

David E. Johnson, a Virginia attorney, has written a wonderful biography about him ("Douglas Southall Freeman," published by Pelican Press). Biography can be slow reading, but I picked up this book in the early evening, and it was 2:30 a.m. before I reluctantly laid it aside. That's no exaggeration. Johnson not only brings to life his subject, but also the times and the place. Freeman's sense of timing was extraordinary. He would arrive at the radio studio precisely one minute before airtime and then, without notes, launch into a precisely timed commentary. On one occasion, when delivering a memorial speech to an outdoor crowd in particularly cold weather, Freeman announced he would keep them no longer than 14 minutes and 32 seconds. He then delivered an impromptu and moving speech that ended precisely 14 minutes and 32 seconds later.

One of his techniques was to write memos to himself. At age 14, in preparation for a date, he wrote: "1. I shall fix my cuffs; 2. I shall choose a necktie; 3. I shall fix my shirt; 4. I shall wash all over; 5. I shall take care to wash my hands that I may get the marks off; 6. I shall choose a hat; 7. I shall black my shoes; 8. Get out my shirt; 9. Put tickets and wherewithal in my pocket; 10. I go to bed."

Part of the charm of this biography is Freeman's early years, when he vacillated among wanting to be an actor, a preacher, or a historian. But very early in life he formed the habit of undertaking two or three jobs at the same time, and he managed to do them all well.

Freeman was born in 1886, and his father was a veteran of the Confederacy. As he was coming of age in Virginia there were still many living veterans and even famous generals. The author rightly begins Freeman's story with that of his father fighting in the war. His father and Robert E. Lee were the great influences in his life, and from both men he was inspired to live a Christian life and to work hard at everything he undertook.

There aren't many idealists in the world who faithfully put their ideals into practice, but Freeman tried mightily, and mostly succeeded. His life, as revealed by Johnson, is an inspiration - not to journalists or writers in particular, but to

He was living proof that people can do more than they often think they can. On his tombstone is written, "Tis not too late to seek a newer world."

WT announces new scholarship

CANYON — A scholarship fund at West Texas A&M University is being established in honor of longtime West Texas educators Easton and Lila Wall, both of whom graduated from the University in the 1950s.

Families of the Wall's two daughters - also graduates of the University - are spearheading the effort and expect to have the minimum $5,000 endowment assembled by the start of the fall 2002 semester. The scholarship will benefit future professional educators and is being established in honor of the Wall's 50th wedding anniversary.

"We wanted to do something special for our parent's 50th anniversary, and establishing a scholarship in honor of their commitment to education in Texas seems meaningful and long-term," Gail Wilberger said. "Plus, they both attended the University, just like my sister and I did.'

Chuck and Gail (Wall) Wilberger of Atlanta, Ga., and Joe Dan and Cappie (Wall) McBeth of Midland launched the drive to establish a scholarship to honor the Walls.

Easton Wall received his bachelor's degree from the University in 1957 and his master's degree from the University in 1963. Lila (Robason) Wall completed her bachelor's and master's degrees at what was then known as West Texas State University in 1951 and 1957, respectively.

Easton Wall became a coach, principal and superintendent, and Lila Wall went on to teach and serve as a school counselor from the 1950s until their retirement in 1988. The couple served schools, chronologically, in Olton, Amarillo, Spearman, Clayton, N.M., Hart, Plainview, Stratford, Canyon, Vega, Moore, Okla. Amarillo (again), Dumas and finally Angleton, where Easton Wall was superintendent of schools from 1981-88

The Walls presently reside in San Angelo.

The scholarship being established in their name will be awarded each year to a fulltime junior or senior WTAMU student pursuing a pre-professional education degree with a sincere interest in acquiring teaching credentials as an elementary or secondary teacher in Texas. Applicants must have a minimum 3.0 grade point average in all University classes, and preference will be given to applicants from Angleton, Canyon, Dumas,

Stratford and Vega. However, any students with Panhandle roots may apply.

Leadership, need and campus and community involvement will also be considered.

Juniors who qualify for the scholarship may have it renewed during their senior year if they still qualify. For information on how to contribute to the Wall scholarship fund or any other scholarship fund at the University, contact Pat Cathcart, executive director of the WTAMU Foundation, at (806) 651-2066.

Border agents look for stolen cyanide

EL PASO, Texas (AP) -U.S. and Mexican customs officials are on the lookout for 8 tons of potentially lethal sodium cyanidé that was stolen from a truck in Mexico earlier this month.

"The idea for the alert is that it's also possible that the chemical could cross the border and be used in potential terrorist acts in the United States," said Agustin Hernandez, deputy director of the federal Mexican customs agency in Juarez, just across the border from El Paso.

U.S. Customs Service spokesman Roger Maier said several alerts have been issued on the U.S. side since the truck transporting the toxic chemical - which can be lethal if inhaled or swallowed was stolen in Mexico's College Set interior earlier this month.

Volunteers sought for park program

he Adopt-A-Park program is a chance for Pampa's citizens, businesses, and organizations to show their civic pride by volunteering time and effort to keep our city cleaner parks and presentable.

Clean Pampa, Inc., and the City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department are currently seeking volunteers to serve in its Adopt-A-Park Program, established jointly by the two entities in 1988.

The Adopt-A-Park program is a chance for Pampa's citizens, businesses, and organizations to show their civic pride by volunteering time and effort to keep our city parks cleaner and presentable.

The program has helped to promote increased interest in pays approximately $25,000.00 annually.

The procedure to adopt a park is quite simple.

Upon submitting a request to adopt a park, and upon approval by the city's Parks Department, the adopting party enters a trial period in which their commitment to the program is monitored. If that commitment is found satisfactory, the adopting party is recognized with a routed sign placed at the entrance of the park. The sign reads, "This Park Is Adopted By ...'

Duties include picking up litter and debris, watering (where applicable), painting and/or repairing benches and picnic tables, planting trees, flowers or shrubs, etcetera, on an "as needed" basis. Operation of mowers and/or power tools without the advanced, written permission of the park department is strictly prohibited.

Adoptees also agree to watch out for the general welfare of the park, notifying either Clean Pampa or the park department as

It is important to understand that adoption of a park does not grant the adoptee any special privileges or consideration concerning the use, or scheduling of use, of that particular park. All City of Pampa parks are public property, and as such, equal access by the general public cannot be denied.

Livestock producers may face tough summer

Texas (AP) - Livestock producers may face difficult times this summer because of continging drought throughout the state, Texas Cooperative Extension reports.

Currently, Texas' rainfall is varying dramatically, with some areas of the state having abundant moisture, while others are suffering severe defi-

Range conditions continue to decline in the Panhandle from the lack of adequate moisture. During the past week, isolated thunderstorms have showered between onehalf and three-quarters an inch of rain in this North Texas

This is not enough, as significant amounts of rainfall are needed throughout the area to help alleviate the heavy irrigation demand, said Bob Robinson, district Extension

According to District Director Charles Neeb, up to 80 percent of the cattle have already been sold off in Culberson County in Far West to most producers.' Texas as a result of the drought.

Also, dry weather conditions in the West Central Texas region are deteriorating the range and pasture conditions, said District Extension Director Scott Durham.

Forage quantity and quality are becoming extremely poor, and livestock numbers continue to decline.

In South Texas, a small number of counties received rain this past week but not enough to solve drought problems. Soil moisture problems are worsening, non-irrigated crops are suffering and pastures continue declining, said Terry Lockamy, district direc-

However, there are certain from last year. areas, such as the Stephenville vicinity in North Central Texas, that are not being affected. Rainfall has been adequate or even above average in this area, according to Steve Hammack, professor and Extension beef cattle spe-

"Pasture conditions vary from poor to good, depending mostly on how producers have stocked and managed during the last several years,' Hammack said. "Poor managers always seem to be short of grass, or close to it. Good managers stock at lower levels to allow adequate forage reserves for all but the most extreme droughts. Nature is not the only thing that determines pasture conditions."

"When there is a drought, especially when it relates to mature beef cattle, the producer is generally reluctant to think about supplemental, feeding," said Larry Boleman of College Station, professor and Extension beef specialist. "Most producers think about drought during the winter when food shortages are they are not recurring on a expected.

"This leads to summer being one of the most neglected times concerning cattle's needed nutrient requirements. Probably not even 10 percent of ranchers plan for supplemental feeding during the summer. It is so far out of their minds that when it begins to occur, they are in rejection of it. 'Hey, this isn't happening to me. It's going to rain."

When ranchers do recognize there is limited forage, they either have to reduce their cow herd or begin some sort of feeding and/or supplementation program, Boleman said.

"In the worst-case scenario, they may have to begin a full feeding program, which would constitute forage, and if this forage is available, supplemental protein would be required," Boleman said.

"The thing about feeding beef cattle is they are so big that when you do get around to feeding them all their needed requirements, it just becomes so expensive and prohibitive

If ranchers do not plan ahead, they may wait until it is too late to buy in bulk supplies, he said.

"When it is on top of you, you are unable to take care of the routine things that would save you money. You have to · react, and you don't have time to plan for it," Boleman said.

"People learn from their mistakes. If a producer has to do it this year — sell cattle or spend a lot of money on feed he'll say, 'Hey, wait a minute, maybe next year I need to plan for that.' If this became a reoccurring event, more ranchers would take precautions.

In several parts of Texas, this year's drought is lingering sion of the 1950s.

year, that's bad enough, but what if you have a drought the next year right behind that greater preparations, spend greater amounts of money or reduce your number of cattle. What if you have another one? It could turn into a catastrophe where you have to eliminate all your livestock," Boleman

This could ultimately hurt. consumers financially,

"Weaning weights will be less due to the limited forage. There won't be as many calves to sell or as much income to generate. It will take longer to feed in a feedlot because they did not make their weight on the grass, and this will raise the prices," he said.

"Also, if those cows have not had enough to eat, they may not breed back. This will give a lower calf crop percent for next year."

The drought is affecting more than just pasture and livestock conditions, with dryland crops growing poorly throughout the state.

The high winds and extreme lack of moisture in South Texas continue row crop deterioration.

In the South Plains, most cotton producers are awaiting rainfall before continued planting because dry winds are depleting any existing moisture, said Jett Major, district Extension director.

In Southeast Texas, corn is beginning to tassel, and moisture and temperature will be critical in the next two weeks.

Some ranchers in West Texas are saying the drought conditions in their area are worse than during the depres-

LOS ANGELES (AP) -

Shaquille O'Neal', didn't accuse anyone of flopping in Game 3 of the Western Conference finals — a good thing since it was the Los Angeles Lakers' big man and his teammates who fell flat.

Now, the two-time defending NBA champions face an uphill battle if they're to accomplish a three-peat.

The Sacramento Kings, owners of the best regular-season record and proud of it, built a shocking 27-point lead before settling for a 103-90 victory over the Lakers on Friday night and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Game 4 will be played Sunday at Staples Center, where the Lakers had won 19 of their last 20 and had a 10-1 record against the Kings

Boston Celtics, tied 1-1, play Game 3 of the Eastern-Conference finals Saturday at the FleetCenter.

Chris Webber had 26 points, nine rebounds and six. assists and Mike Bibby added 24 points and five assists for the Kings, playing in the conference finals for the first time since 1981. The decisive victory gave the Kings a 5-0 road playoff record and 17 wins in their last 19 away games after they began the season by going 13-14 on the road.

"No, I'm not surprised," said Bobby Jackson, who had 11 points and was one of six Kings to score in double figures. "We have a lot of confidence on the road. There's a lot of people who weren't giv- throws with 9:21 remaining. The New Jersey Nets and ing us a chance to win this game or this series. We know what we can do."

Lakers face uphill battle against Kings

If the Lakers didn't know before, they do now.

"I don't think we get a lot of credit," said Vlade Divac, whose defense was a key factor and was praised by O'Neal, who has been calling the Kings center a flopper for years. "We have confidence.

"They're still the champions," cautioned Divac, who had 11 points, nine rebounds, four assists and three blocked shots. "For us to beat the Lakers, we have to play 48 minutes the same way."

The Kings took command early, rolling to a 32-15 lead after a near-perfect first quarter, and they led 83-56 after Doug Christie made two free a fight on our hands.

Lakers suddenly scored 14 points in a span of 45 seconds on two 3-pointers by Kobe Bryant, one each by Devean George and Lindsey Hunter, and a layup by Hunter after a steal by Brian Shaw.

That cut Sacramento's lead to 12 with over seven minutes left, but the Lakers weren't closer than 11 after that despite making eight 3-pointers in 17 attempts in the fourth including four by Bryant and two by Hunter.

"We just did not take care of business, we are not going to make any excuses," O'Neal said. "This is just one of those days for us where we did not play well and the other team played well, and now we have

"We just have to fight, and It was 87-61 when the we play better when we O'Neal had 20 points and 19 rebounds, but scored only five points in the second half and committed five turnovers. Divac said the Kings doubled O'Neal more in the second half than the first and were generally more aggressive on defense.

"Nobody can play him 1on-1," Divac said

Divac said O'Neal's constant flop talk doesn't bother

"It would be different if I know he's a bad man," Divac said. "Shaq is a good man. I like Shaq as a player. I respect him a lot. When I'm on the floor, I'll do everything I can to win the game except hurt

Indy history favors driver in front row position

first-team all-district pick.

Sure, it's a long race — a lot can happen during those 200 laps and three-plus hours. But history shows the closer to the front a driver starts, the greater the likelihood he'll cross the finish line first, especially this year with the fastest and perhaps deepest lineup in Indy history.

"It is an advantage," pole-sitter Bruno Junqueira said. "There won't be any traffic in front of me. Hopefully, there won't be any traffic in front of me for the whole race."

The first Indy winner, Ray

Harroun, started from 28th place in 1911. Since then, only 12 winners have come from farther back than the fifth row, including just three from farther than the inside of the eighth row. The front row, however, has accounted for 36 victories, including a record-16 by the pole-starter.

Ashlei Jordan and Jared Spearman received the banquet held last week. The "Harvester Up" award is the highest award given to a Harvester tennis player. Both Jared and Ashlei are seniors and were

The Flying Dutchman will be starting from the second-worst position of his 17-year Indy

"You have a possibility of a lot of different strategies depending on what happens out there," Luyendyk said. "You can't have one plan. You have to have a plan A, a plan B, a plan C, a plan D."

The plan that is used depends on the timing of pit stops, especially during yellow caution periods.

"If the car is unbelievable and it's looking like your picking 'em off one by one, you might stay with the same (pit) plan the leaders have," Luyendyk said. "If not, you might stay out on the track when the leaders come in and then hope for another quick yellow."

Greg Ray, who started from the pole in 2000, will begin from the inside of the last row this

"I started in the back of the field in my very first Indy car race back in 1997," Ray said. "It was not a pleasant experience. You can't believe how much dirt, sand and methanol fumes swirl around in the air. It will have to be a tactical start because of all the trouble that can happen in front of you. You just have to remember it is 500 miles and it takes a long time to settle out."

Each of the 33 drivers qualified faster than last year's pole speed, and the entire field averaged a record-228.648 mph more than 5 mph faster than last year and almost 1 mph quicker than the former record set six years ago.

Junqueira, who last year was the fastest rookie and finished fifth, took the pole at 231.342 mph. The slowest qualifier was Billy Boat, another former polestarter, at 226.589.

The rest of the field including nine rookies and former winners Luyendyk, Al Unser Jr., Eddie Cheever, Buddy Lazier, Kenny Brack and Helio Castroneves — will be trying to gain on Junqueira and frontrow starters Robbie Buhl and Raul Boesel as quickly as they can.

Experienced Boston duo downs Yanks

By The Associated Press

An unlikely veteran combination in Boston doomed the New York Yankees.

Carlos Baerga hit a sacrifice fly to short centerfield in the 11th inning to score Rickey Henderson as the Red Sox beat the Yankees 9-8 Friday night.

Baerga and Henderson helped the Red Sox save face after they had pounded Roger Clemens early, but squandered a six-run lead late.

"It's unbelievable," Baerga said. "We never get down."

With the score tied at 8, the 43-year-old Henderson reached first with a headfirst slide for an infield single and then ended the game with a feet-first slide, nine hits. beating the throw from Yankees centerfielder Bernie Williams.

Yankees manager Joe Torre thought Henderson left third base early.

"I don't believe an outfielder is throwing me out, so I don't have to leave early," Henderson said

In other games, it was Cleveland 5, Toronto 2; Chicago White Sox 12, Detroit 1; Oakland 9, Tampa Bay 8; Minnesota 5, Anaheim 1; and Seattle 6, Baltimore 2. The Texas-Kansas City game was postponed because of rain.

Baerga is usually Boston's chief cheerleader. He has become a popular teammate since he signed as a free agent last December after spending two years out of the majors. The 33-year-old spent most of his career with Cleveland and the New York Mets.

That was my biggest at-bat of my year," Baerga said. "After almost three years out of baseball, to come back and win this game, I was looking for this opportunity."

Baerga, playing in just his 20th game, had been 1-for-5 as the designated hitter before his liner to medium center field scored Henderson, who has filled in nicely for the injured Manny Ramirez.

"I tried to get Baerga to hit a groundball," Yankee pitcher Steve Karsay said after allowing his first run in nine outings.

After Henderson singled, he moved to second on Shea Hillenbrand's fourth hit of the game, a single to left. They moved up on Trot Nixon's sacrifice bunt before Jason Varitek was walked intentionally, loading the bases for Baerga.

The Yankees had come back from an 8-2 deficit to tie it with five runs in the seventh and one in the eighth after Clemens lasted just 3 2-3 innings, allowing seven runs, five earned, and

Meals on Wheels

Keeping Seniors Independent

By NANCY YOUNG Managing Editor

There's a changing of the guard at Pampa's Meals on Wheels

Cindy Gindorf has been active with the local organization the past eight and one-half years, and has served as its director the last five years.

But that is changing as she and her husband; Jack, along with their daughter, Rebecca, who is 15, are moving to Austin.

While Cindy hates to leave her hometown, she is looking forward to being nearer her two older children.

Her son, Hank, and his wife Jennifer live in Houston while daughter, Melissa, and her husband Christoper Harrison, live at College Station where he is a student...

Assuming the new director position is Jeane

Retired from the Community Supervision and Corrections Department since 1997, Jeane is changing directions. It will be a change for her after working in the criminal justice system for 22 years. However, she is sure she will enjoy

Moving to Pampa from Wheeler in 1986, she had previously been director of the CSCD in Hemphill, Lipscomb, Roberts and Wheeler

"I love working with people and feel this is a very worthwhile organization," she said. She has worked with the organization as a volunteer delivering meals for several years.

Jeane wants to keep continuity in the organization, and is quite complimentary of the staff

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit, service of meal delivery to Pampa residents 55 years of age or older. People from all socio-economic levels are eligible for the service.

Persons under 55 with a disability that hinders or limits the preparation of a well-balanced meal qualify for the program. A letter from the doctor which states the reason for needing meals is required prior to starting meals.

Friendly, caring volunteers deliver the meals each weekday, beginning around 11 a.m. The volunteers spend a few minutes visiting with the people who are recipients of the meals as well as inquiring about their well being:

The organization is seeking volunteers to provide assistance this summer when other volunteers are vacationing. Jeane said she would like to have middle school and high school-students as well as any teachers.

"It would be so good for the students," she said. "They would learn a lot while contributing to their community."

Meals are delivered 52 weeks a year and include meat, two vegetables, salad and a dessert. Special diets are accommodated. The cost is determined by the person's ability to pay. Wind wreaks havoc on vegetation

This howling, dry wind drives me crazy. (I know. It's a short trip ... don't pack a sack lunch.) When my hanging baskets hang horizontally, I have had about as much as I can tolerate.

The wind uprooted the potted orange cosmos, whipped mess and tangled the tails of Purple Fountain Thi chick had it.

Strangely enough, the hanging baskets suffered less than the plants in the ground. Have I discovered a new physics law? Kathy's Corollary: A moving target avoids wind damage. (Unless the wind whips it off the hook and cracks the glass door.) However, what I know about physics would fill a thimble and leave room for a splash of coffee. Even the new greenhouse where I work fought with the wind ... and lost. Our facility manager alerted us that the wind whipped off the shade cloth over the pond room. He thought we might find it on Highway 60!

Through all this raging tur-the Japanese iris into a frayed moil and in spite of the windy conditions, customers still breeze in and out of the greenhouse, ever hopeful for a calm day to plant their flowers. Eventually the wind will lay. Tufts of newly planted flowers will punctuate pots and spread across flower beds.

Purple Fountain grass is an annual in our area. This graceful, swaying grass adds texture and height to any pot or garden. Its beauty overrides the cost of replacing it each year. The slender leaves are a deep maroon. Tall, feathery plumes sway gracefully from the center of the plant. Even a small plant grows quickly.

The professional tree and shrub growers use a growing method that I will share with you. They dig holes in the ground and drop pots into them. New plants are potted into the same size containers. The new plant in the new pot is dropped into the pot in the ground. At selling time, the planted pot is removed, leaving the earthly pot ready to receive a new plant.

This little trick is great for growing plants which are not winter hardy in our region. When Jack Frost approaches,' remove the plant from the buried pot, bring it indoors and its leaves stay warm all winter. As with any good trick of the trade, there is a down side. Digging holes.

Hopefully by press time, the wind has laid and we have been blessed with rain. Happy Birthday, Mother. I love you!

UT researchers link gene with kidney stones

DALLAS — A team of researchers at UT Southwestern Medical Center has identified a set of genetic abnormalities that increase risk for kidney stones and could indicate increased risk for osteoporosis:

The research team's findings, published in a recent edition of the Journal of Clinical Endocrinology

Metabolism, associate six base substitutions – deviations from a particular gene's normal structure - with absorptive hypercalciuria (AH), a condition that makes the intestine absorb, too much calcium and causes about 45 percent of all kidney stones. .

The presence of at least one of the six base substitutions identified in the study translates into a 2.2- to 3.5-fold increase in the risk of having AH. The presence of more than one of the base substitutions increases risk even more; people who carry any five of the base substitu-

POSTPARTUM DEPRESSION

While about 80 percent of new mothers experience a condition known as "postpartum blues," which usually resolves within one to two weeks, "postpartum depression" can last much longer. This condition affects about 10 to 15 percent of women following childbirth and can be very serious, with such, symptoms as sleep deprivation, anxiety. and: hopelessness leading to everything, from social withdrawal to suicide. Sleep by the round-the-clock demands of a newborn, has been identified as one of the biggest contributing factors to the problem. The good news is that most cases can be successfully treated with a combination of psychotherapy, lifestyle changes, family support, and antidepressant medications.

Some-women are reluctant to tell their doctors that they are experiencing depression following childbirth because they think it means they aren't fit mothers. But having a new baby means making a lot of physical and emotional changes and adjustments abruptly. If you are having difficulties with these adjustments, discuss this with your doctor. Help is available. To schedule your next OB/GYN appointment. phone my office at (806) 273-7771. We are located at 106 S. Bryan, Borger. New patients are welcome.

P.S. Postpartum blues are linked to the hormonal changes that new mothers endure following childbirth.

tions are 11.5 times as likely to have AH as those with normal structure in the gene in question, an adenylate cyclase gene.

Dr. Berenice Reed-Gitomer, associate professor of internal medicine and the principal investigator of the study, said there is much to be learned about the molecular mechanism that ties the genetic abnormalities to the resulting disorders, but simply connecting specific genetic abnormalities with AH was an important step. She said it has long been known that kidney-stone formation runs in families, but identifying a genetic connection was elusive.

"We started about 10 years ago looking for a genetic cause," Gitomer said. "We picked out several individual genes that we thought could be involved, but we hit a blank. It would have been like winning the lottery to find it that way."

Gitomer and her team changed their approach. They turned to families with AH and looked for genetic similarities. That comparison pointed to a particular location in the human genome. Through study of the genes from this region, the team focused on a new gene that was similar to a recently described rat gene (with function unrelated to calcium metabolism)and subsequently identified the six base substitutions in this gene measured, and the presence of that occurred far more frequently in AH patients.

Dr. Charles Y.C. Pak, senior author of the study and director of UT Southwestern's Center for Mineral Metabolism and Clinical Research, described the study as a landmark.

"It represents the molecular elucidation of a clinical syndrome," Pak said. "It is the result of 30 years of work on a clinical syndrome and its molecular explanation."

The study involved 212 participants: 80 unrelated AH patients and 132 "normal" volunteers. The AH patients were diagnosed at the Center for Mineral Metabolism and Clinical Research's kidney stone clinic. In the control group, volunteers with any personal or family history of stone disease, osteoporosis, history of abnormal serum parathyroid hormone (which helps control calcium and phosphate balance in the body), or abnormal calcium were excluded from the study.

The study provides a definite marker for kidney-stone risk, but it also could lead to earlystage identification and treatment for bone loss and osteoporosis, Gitomer said. As part of the study, patients' bone mineral density in the lower spine was

Study: special geriatic care aid to frail, elderly

BOSTON (AP) — Frail, elderly patients do better and feel better with specialized geriatric care than they do with regular treatment, but they do not live any longer, according to the biggest such study yet.

Geriatric specialists hope the study by the Veterans Affairs Department will give a boost to their relatively new, understaffed field

Patients who got specialized geriatric care reported significantly less pain and far more improvement in their mental health a year after leaving the hospital.

The patients were treated by geriatric teams that included a geriatrician, social worker and nurse. A geriatrician is a doctor trained to focus on the common conditions and special needs of the elderly.

"I think it's extremely encouraging," said Dr. James Fanale, a geriatrician in Worcester, Mass., and board chairman of the American Geriatrics Society. "This study demonstrates there clearly is benefit."

The study was reported in the New England Journal of Medicine. The researchers picked 1,388 patients age 65 and older who were sick at one of 11 veterans hospitals. They were randomly split into groups for geriatric or regular treatment, while they were in the hospital and after their release.

By the time of release from the hospital, the group treated by inpatient geriatric teams showed a range of advantages in physical and basic living capabilities. After one year, however, those advantages evaporated, except in the categories of pain and mental health. Geriatric treatment also failed to help patients live longer.

Two decades ago, there was little special training in geriatrics Today, with an expanding percentage of elderly in the population, there are more than 9,500 certified geriatricians.

What to do for the flu?

HOUSTON - Until recently, the best you could do once you got the flu was to crawl into bed, treat your symptoms, keep your fever under control and try to ride out your bout with the flu. Most cases of flu last from one to five days, but the flu can linger for two weeks or more.

"Now we have several medications that actually kill the flu virus once you get the flu," said Dr. Philip C. Johnson, professor of medicine at The University of Texas Medical School at Houston. "But they need to be given within 48 hours of the beginning of flu symptoms, so contact your physician immediately as soon as symptoms arise."

The antiviral influenza medications currently available in the U.S. are:

·amantadine (trade names: Cerebramed, Infectoflu, Endantadine, Symmetrel, Tantron), approved for treatment of type A influenza in 1966;

•rimantadine (Flumadine), approved for treatment of type A influenza in 1993; and •zanamivir (Relenza) and oseltamivir (Tamiflu), two newer medications approved in 1999 that treat type A and type B flu strains.

If tonsillitis is suspected, contact the child's pediatrician. The doctor may pre-scribe antibiotics, particularly if the infection is cause by Group A streptococcus. Be sure the child takes the medication as directed by the doctor.

Happy Marriage Fails To Dispel Sister-In-Law's Hate For Wife

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful man for more than a year. (We've been together for seven years.) It's a second marriage for both of us, and together we're raising four beautiful children.

When I married this man, I knew full well his sister bitterly disapproved of me but hoped she would get over it with time. Now that we've been happily married for a year, she's worse than ever.

I don't know what I ever did to cause my sister-in-law to hate me She was like a mother figure to my husband when he was young, as she is 25 years older. She disliked my husband's first wife, too, but wasn't nearly as cruel to her. In fact, now that they're divorced, she's friendly with her.

It's gotten back to me that my sister-in-law has told hurtful lies about me and my children to family members and the community. She has also insulted me to my face at family gatherings. Now I get anxious to the point of feeling ill before attending a family function.

much pain her daughter causes me and becomes upset, as do my husband and children. Everyone thinks could turn things around - so I she is jealous of me. That's no came up with a plan: excuse, as far as I'm concerned.

I am a respected mother and anniversary my husband and I wife and have given this woman no went out to dinner. Afterward I reason to hurt me. Please, Abby, could you advise me on the best way drove to one of those little instant to handle her? I have carried this wedding chapels, so we could renew heartache for too long

SCORNED SISTER-IN-LAW IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR SCORNED: I'm mystified that you and your family continue to attend gatherings that make you physically ill. Whoever hosts these family gettogethers and allows this verbal abuse to happen is partly to blame by not letting her know her behavior is unacceptable and will not be tolerated. If she refuses to cooperate, it would be a relief to all concerned if this sister-in-law were excluded from family gatherings until she agrees to be civil and act

Citizenship rates down among foreign-born in South and Midwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the foreignborn population in the United States soared stood at nearly 2.9 million in 2000, almost half during the 1990s, the percentage who were citizens declined in many states across America's heartland and in the South.

The 2000 census data for 33 states offers the first detailed breakdown of the nation's foreign-born population, which soared over the decade thanks to a wave of Hispanic immigra-

The figures come from answers given on the Census Bureau's "long form" census packet, which asked only whether a person was a citizen. It did not ask about legal status of noncitizens and federal law requires that individual answers be kept confidential.

A fear of governmental authority among some immigrants may have led people to ignore the citizenship process or to lie on their census form, which would cause data on the question to be understated, immigration experts say.

In the case of many newcomers, applying for citizenship simply held a lower priority on the to-do list than finding a job. New immigrants filled positions from meatpacking plants in Nebraska to textile mills in North Carolina.

"They want to be able to participate in the community. With citizenship comes voting rights and other privileges," said William Frey, a University of Michigan demographer.

"But that's not the first thing on their agenda usually. Like U.S. citizens when they move to a new place, they want to find a job and get settled first," he said.

The situation has long existed in traditionalimmigrant gateways like Texas and Arizona, two of four states to receive census data on Friday. It is a fairly new issue in places like Grand Island, Neb.

There, Paulo Reynoso helps run an outreach center that offers programs promoting literacy and health education for new immigrants.

"They are here, helping the economy. Don't you want a healthy community, and a population that can read?" Reynoso said. In Nebraska, 68 percent of the foreign-born population were not citizens, up from 46 percent in 1990.

"They are here to stay, so it's in everybody's benefit to help them," Reynoso said.

Figures also were released Friday for New Mexico and Louisiana. Data for the rest of the country will be released by early June.

Among the findings on Friday:

—The foreign-born population in Texas of whom arrived during the 1990s.

-Arizona had one of the highest percentages of foreign-born residents who were not citizens: 70 percent in 2000, up from 61 percent a decade earlier.

States including Nebraska, North Dakota and North Carolina, which have relatively low immigrant populations compared to Texas and Arizona, still had some of the largest percentage increases in noncitizens. For example, in North Carolina, it increased from 57 percent to 74 percent during the decade.

-77 percent of New Mexico's foreign-born population arrived from Latin America, one of the highest shares in the country.

While the census offers a glimpse of how things changed over the 1990s, other factors have swayed many immigrants since then.

Cecilia Munoz, a vice president with the Hispanic advocacy group, the National Council of La Raza, said citizenship applications in some cities are up since the Sept. 11 attacks.

Some apply out of patriotism, she said, while others feared they could be targets of an anti-foreign backlash after federal authorities questioned dozens of people of Middle Eastern descent after the attacks.

"There has been a real perception in immigrant communities that they have less rights after Sept. 11, that they are targeted as threats unfairly," said Joseph Berra, a lawyer with the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund in San Antonio.

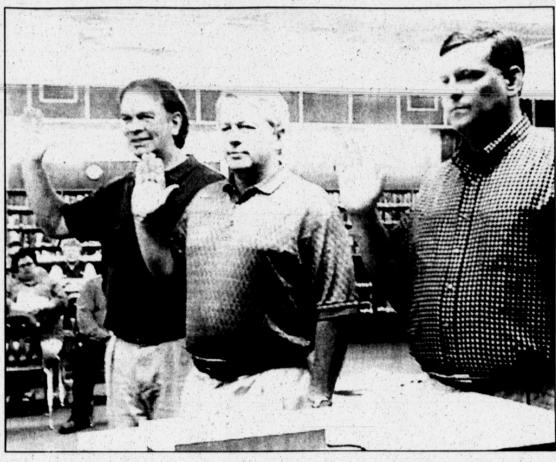

Also, a federal law passed in December 2000, which expired the next April, offered undocumented immigrants with relatives or job sponsors in America to apply for visas and pay a fine of $1,000 without leaving the company.

About 200,000 people did it, because without the dispensation, they must leave the country and apply from their own country in a process that can take years.

While not official data, Census Bureau estimates released in January that also take into account Immigration and Naturalization Service figures showed 8.7 million undocumented immigrants living in the United States in 2000, up nearly 5 million during the decade.

EPA: Biggest polluters hard-rock mining, coal-burning power plants toxic polluters during 2000 were hard-rock mining companies and coal-burning power plants, responsible for nearly two-thirds of the chemicals that industry says were released into the nation's air and water.

Toxic chemicals spewed into the U.S. environment declined 8 percent from 1999, from 7.7 billion pounds to 7:1 billion pounds, the Environmental Protection Agency said

EPA Administrator Christie Whitman 'said the data can provide a powerful tool for the agency and citizens alike to identify pollution in communities and make decisions how to protect the environment.

But critics said the EPA's annual Toxics Release Inventory focuses on chemicals that industry says were released into the environment, not the entire amount produced. Jeremiah were calculated in the EPA report. Baumann, environmental health specialist for Four mining states, Nevada, Utah, Arizona and Alaska, had the highest volume of toxic releases: Nevada with 1 billion pounds; Utah, 956 million pounds; Arizona, 744 million pounds; and Alaska, 535 million pounds.

Americans preparing for cookouts warned of 155,000 dangerous gas grills

WASHINGTON (AP) — People preparing for Memorial Day barbecues should avoid using Red Devil gas grills because they have a design flaw that has already caused serious burns, safety officials warned.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said Friday that it had wanted the importer of the grills to recall about 155,000 of them, but the company — known as both Quantum North America Inc. and e4L Inc. of Encino, Calif. has gone out of business.

The design problem allows consumers to light the grill at an air intake tube, instead of at the burner, the agency said. Though the grill appears to work normally, gas inside the tube ignites and the tube can get dangerously hot. The heated tube can also damage a plastic support piece on many of the grills and cause them to collapse.

The company and the government received 44 reports of grills collapsing and consumers suffering burns to legs, hands and fingers, including some third-degree burns. Before the company went out of business, more than 1,000 consumers returned grills that had col-words "Red Devil" and "The Portable Outdoor Kitchen." The black plastic base, above the tripod stand, reads "QUANTUM HOMEWARES.'

The company sold the grills directly to consumers through television infomercials from May 1998 through January 1999 for about $160. Stores and Web sites also sold the grills.

Earlier this year, the Home Shopping Network and QVC warned their customers directly about the grills and provided instructions on how to light them properly, the agency

The government said that for grills purchased elsewhere, consumers should stop using them immediately and dispose of them to prevent injuries. Since the company has declared bankruptcy, no refunds, replacements or repairs are available. For more information, consumers can call the safety commission at 1-800-638-2772.

About 19,300 of the grills, sold directly by e4L, were recalled in July 1998 because the burners could disconnect from the burner pan. Even if consumers participated in this previous recall, the CPSC said the grills are still dangerous and consumers should stop using them.

Ralf Panitz, 42, was convicted in March of second-degree murder in the July 2000 death of Nancy Campbell-Panitz.

Campbell-Panitz was beaten and choked on July 24, 2000, shortly after the airing of an episode of the Springer show in which she was confronted by her ex-husband and his new wife, Eleanor, who the ex-wife didn't know about.

Prosecutors said they believe the killing was a judge from living in his ex-wife's house. The couple had been divorced since 1999 but lived together off and on, even after Panitz secretly married Eleanor in March 2000.

The Springer show episode, taped months before the killing, was titled "Secret Mistresses Confronted," and the audience jeered as Campbell-Panitz was ridiculed as being "fat" and "old."

Horoscope BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, May 27, 2002:

Your interpersonal abilities help you relate to others in a style that might be stronger than usual. Others flock to you. In fact, your popularity easily could overwhelm you. Networking will play a larger role in your life. Through July, focus on making money and adding to your personal assets. During August, work on better communication and broadening your circle of friends and associates. A new car could be in the offing or, perhaps, a new computer. If you are single, your social life will pick up in August, adding someone fun and rewarding to relate to. If you are attached, plan a special trip together for late summer. The planning phase proves to be as important as the trip. SAGITTARIUS can be challenging.

Designing a healthy menu

While the foods we purchase may be low in calories, fat and sodium, whether they stay low depends on what is added during home preparation, what cooking procedures are used, and what extras are added at the table.

There are ways to cut fat, added sugars, and sodium when preparing foods. Even if food is not usually prepared at home, these tips will be helpful in choosing wisely among the foods offered in restaurants and cafeterias.

■ Cutting Fat

-Choose lean cuts of meat and trim fat from meat before or after cooking. Remove the skin from poultry before or after cooking.

-Brown meats without added fat. Drain off fat before mixing in other ingredients.

-Roast, bake, broil, or simmer meat, poultry, or fish rather than frying.

-Chill meat or poultry broth until fat becomes solid; spoon off the fat before using the broth.

-Season vegetables with herbs and spices rather than with fatty sauces, bacon or bacon grease, butter or mar-

Cal Farley's to host youth cowboy poetry reading

This summer youth from across the country are invited to Cal Farley's Boys Ranch, near Amarillo, to be a part of the first-ever Youth Cowboy Poetry Gathering. The event kicks off Thursday, June 6, with an evening performance featuring cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell and singer Don Edwards. Activities will continue throughout the weekend with Friday and Saturday night performances, youth seminars and open-mike sessions, a trail ride and chapel services on Sunday, June 9.

This educational event also features such well-known poets and musicians as Red Steagall, Sons of the San Joaquin, Larry McWhorter and

R.W. Hampton. The Youth Cowboy Poetry Gathering is unique in that its primary purpose is to offer young people the opportunity to learn about western folklore, cowboy values and the history and culture of the Old West. Featured guests and other experienced professionals will mentor youth during open poetry and music sessions as well as a variety of seminars and workshops.

Boys and girls can choose from creative writing seminars by Waddie Mitchell and Oklahoma poet and singer Chuck Milner, a song writing seminar taught by Andy Wilkinson and Stephanie Davis and a variety of art workshops and demonstrations by such well-known western artists as Rick Jackson and featured artist Don Dane.

Other performers such as Steagall, Hampton and McWhorter will emcee youth open-mike sessions in which young people are invited to perform poetry and music.

They will compete for prizes and the opportunity to perform their selections during the evening headliner shows on Friday and Saturday nights. All activities, including the evening performances, are free to youth participants. Details are available on the event website: www.youthcowboypoet-
