HANCE PROPOSES ECONOMIC INCENTIVE TO END WASTE DISPOSAL

Congressman Kent Hance, a United States Senate candidate, told a joint committee of the Texas legislature that he will fight for a bill in Congress which will induce industry to stop burying toxic waste in landfills, especially in flood prone areas.

Noting that buried hazardous and toxic waste poses a serious threat to groundwater, Hance said, "I grew up in perhaps the most arid part of the State and have always had a deep appreciation for the quantity and the quality of our water for consumers, agriculture, and industry."

Hance proposed a tax credit as an economic incentive for oil and chemical companies to find other means of waste disposal. "The objective of the tax credit is to encourage companies to make capital investments for waste handling facilities," Hance said. The credit would be $60 per dry ton for those companies now landfilling in flood prone areas and $40 per dry ton for those using landfills in other areas. Hance argues the potential cost of cleaning up future contaminations far exceeds the investment made through this tax credit.

"Hazardous and toxic waste disposal is everyone's problem, industry's and the public's. We all have a stake in a cleaner environment, and it is essential for all concerned to craft the most effective and workable approach to ending landfill disposal," Hance added.

The Lubbock lawmaker also noted that recent studies show industry is already making corrections and some changes.

"Industry realizes the need to handle the problem," Hance said. "This economic incentive will give them the capital necessary to search for other methods of disposal such as recycling."

These new proposals will be offered to the Superfund Toxic Waste Clean-Up Law, which faces reauthorization this year. Superfund must be approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, where Hance has served for the last three years.

"We have an unusual opportunity to make the Federal Superfund program serve a purpose just as important as cleaning up sites that are contaminated by toxic substances," Hance said. "We're convinced this new approach will prevent the creation of still more uncontrolled hazardous waste sites."

White meets with Religious Leaders.

TEXANS TO AID RIO GRANDE VALLEY

Governor Mark White today, Feb. 2, said he has joined with religious leaders of different faiths throughout the state to organize a mass appeal for emergency assistance to the Rio Grande Valley disaster area.

The Governor gathered members of various religious groups in his office on January 30 and presented them with a plan to take up a special collection to meet the immediate needs of Valley residents suffering as a result of the December freeze. The Governor's plan was approved unanimously.

The Texans' Valley Disaster Relief Fund will be kicked off on February 19 when the second collection taken at churches, parishes and congregations throughout the state will be dedicated to helping Texans in the Rio Grande Valley. Special group contributions will also be accepted. A special non-profit corporation headed by religious leaders will be set up to handle the funds which will be distributed through existing local agencies at no cost to the fund. The Governor assured the church leaders that every cent collected will be distributed to those in need.

"My immediate concern is that $2.5 million in state funds already dedicated to the emergency are not enough to relieve the economic and human misery of the Rio Grande Valley, and as we plan for more projects to aid this area, I have become acutely aware that government cannot react quickly enough to respond to the desperate needs of our Valley residents," Governor White said. "Make no mistake about it: there are cold and hungry children and adults in our Valley that cannot wait until the next fiscal year."

STENHOLM HOPES TO BOOST REGISTRATION

Washington D. C.--In a move he hopes will boost voter registration in the 17th Congressional District "to the highest percentage levels ever," Congressman Charles W. Stenholm is sending registration cards to every household in the 35-county area.

The voter registration packets, due to be mailed next week, will go out to every prospective voter in the district, regardless of party affiliation or locale.

"I don't care who the folks go out and vote for," Stenholm said. "I just want them to be aware of their responsibility to select those who govern them and to exercise that privilege."

Potential voters receiving the applications should note that they need apply for registration cards only if they have not already received their renewed blue registration card (sent by most county tax assessors' offices last week) or if they live in a new address.

Stenholm said that although most Texas Congressmen have participated in similar registration drives every election year, this is his first District-wide effort.

"This is a presidential election year," the Stamford Congressman said, "making this one of the most crucial periods for voters to make their voices heard. I can't help but think that encouraging that participation is one of my most important duties."

Voters were urged to "vote for the candidate of your choice, but get out and vote," Stenholm said.

"If anyone inadvertently does not receive a registration application, they can be obtained at any county courthouse at the tax assessor's office," Stenholm said.

SAUCES ENHANCE FLAVOR OF MEALS

There is no dispute that sauces and pastes are best made at home, but in a busy world it is not always possible to brew great batches of ketchups or to crack the secret formula of Worcestershire sauce.

Some store-bought sauces have withstood the tests of time and changing tastes, and are to be found in almost every kitchen.

Tomato ketchup must head the list. Properly made, it is thick and clotted in appearance. It should be bright red and contain no artificial coloring. Homemade ketchup is delicious, of course, but only viable if you grow your own tomatoes.

Tomato paste is used in cooking rather than at the table and is highly concentrated. A tablespoonful will improve a stew, a teaspoonful will brighten a sad-looking sauce.

Worcestershire sauce--there is only one true variety, which is of Indian origin, although there are many types of this concoction, including the "steak" sauces. The real thing is hot, spicy and vinegary and contains tamarinds, molasses, sugar, anchovies, garlic, salt and other natural flavors. Worcestershire sauce, besides adding its own ineffable taste, heightens the flavor of whatever is being cooked. It is wonderful in devil sauces and in sauces for reheating cold meat and in tomato juice.

Harvey sauce is more of a relish than a sauce. It includes anchovies, garlic, soy, cayenne and vinegar and is used in the same way as Worcestershire sauce.

Chili sauce is a thick, hot Oriental sauce. Use it sparingly in stews and discreetly as a dip for morsels of Chinese food or spareribs.

Tobasco is an exceedingly hot, peppery liquid made from vinegar, red chili peppers and salt. The label suggests a multitude of uses: soup, gravy, breakfast eggs, even milk and insists "no seafood to be eaten without it." It also adds its heat to Creole cookery.

True soy sauce is a strange Oriental concoction of fermented dough made from soybeans and wheat or barley flour. Most commercially prepared brands are chemically fermented from defatted bean pulp and lack both flavor and natural vegetable protein.

When buying soy sauce, shake the bottle vigorously until bubbles form at the top. Naturally fermented soy will form a thick, foamy head that takes quite a while to disperse.

Good soy sauce has a rich aroma and a flavor both salty and pungent. It heightens the flavor of whatever is being eaten with it. In China and Japan it is a staple condiment, used extensively in cooking and at the table in place of salt. In Western cooking it has become a common ingredient in marinades and barbeque sauces.

EFAP-CORN PURCHASE PROGRAM

The Corn Purchase Program has been extended until the corn has been exhausted or September 30, whichever comes first.

Early application may be extended upon request.

Normal feeding period has been set until April 15 at the present time.

JANUARY 16-FEBRUARY 24: SIGN-UP FOR 1984 PROGRAMS

Those producers wishing to participate in the 1984 program must sign agreements to participate by February 24, 1984. This agreement is binding and cannot be changed after the final date to sign up. The agreement sets the limit of acreage of that crop that can be planted and the minimum acreage of Acreage Conservation Reserve (setaside) that will be given. These reductions from the base and the required ACR percentage of planted acres were sent to all producers. If you have decided to participate come in and sign up. This will help prevent long lines the last few days.

Producers that have authority to sign for owners may do so at the same time they sign. Producers that cannot sign for owners will be required to obtain these signatures. These forms must be returned by March 9, 1984. Those signatures not received by this final date will make the farm ineligible for program benefits.

This office has some appendixes with definitions that apply to the contracts. If you are in doubt about participating in the programs, you might come by the office and pick up a copy to study before you decide how to sign up. The appendix may be able to answer most of your questions.

REPORT COTTON PRODUCTION (503 CARDS)

Remember to complete your cotton production card and return to the office as soon as possible. Be sure to include all production. Please review the number of bales, total pounds, sign and date the card before returning. Don't forget to check the correct block above your signature on the card. Your 1984 yield cannot be completed until we receive this card. Failure to turn in the production by April 1 will result in a zero for your 1983 actual yield. Whole Base PIK farms also need to sign a card so we can compute your yields.

REPORT TO IRS

ASCS will only report to producer's PIK entitlement commodity and quantity to IRS as the producer's PIK compensation. No dollar amount will be reported. It will be the producer's responsibility to report the disposition of the commodity in the year the commodity is disposed of based on the IRS regulations.

1983-CROP UPLAND COTTON DEFICIENCY PAYMENT RATE

Eligible Upland Cotton Farmers will receive deficiency payments at the rate of 12.1 cents per pound on their 1983 production.

The 1983 deficiency payment rate is equal to the difference between the target price of 76 cents per pound and the national average price of 63.9 cents per pound received by farmers during calendar year 1983.

Producers who participated in the 1983 Upland Cotton Acreage Reduction Program are eligible to receive deficiency payments on a number of pounds equal to their cotton planted acres times their farm program yields.

Advance deficiency payments equal to 50 percent of the projected payments were made available to producers upon request. ASCS will begin making the balance of the 1983 deficiency payments during the latter part of February and March.

CORRECTION

For many years most physicians have used height-weight charts to determine if an individual is the correct weight. These tables were developed by insurance companies based on their records.

They indicated the weight ranges at which people of various heights and builds were statistically at less risk of premature death. Recently, these weights were revised upward by about 5 to 7 percent, although several health associations have advocated using the original lower weights.

COMPARABLE PAY FOR WHAT?

By Edwin Feulner

In another attempt to draw the federal government even more deeply into our day-to-day affairs, congressional liberals are reportedly readying legislation that could result in federal bureaucrats deciding how much we should earn in the private sector.

The legislation, rumored to be nurturing in the office of Senate Edward Kennedy (D.-Mass.), calls for the establishment within the U.S. Department of Labor of a national "pay comparability" panel, board, or office, modeled after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The commission would be charged with determining how much a certain job is worth; whether painters, for example, should be paid more than secretaries; or whether nurses are worth more or less to society than zoo keepers. In other words, the new federal authority would be charged with setting wage scales, in the process voiding labor-management contracts, and creating chaos within the economy.

The "equal pay for comparable work" scam—long on the radical feminist wish list—was given a big boost by a recent federal court decision which ordered Washington state to increase the pay of some 15,000 state employees, mostly women. The ruling will cost state taxpayers an estimated $225 million or more over the next two years.

But, the issue is not a feminist one; and be forewarned, it is a two-edged economic sword. If the government or courts assume the power to determine the "worth" of various jobs, it is by no means certain they will decide you're being paid too little. You could find you're being paid more than the bureaucrats say your job is worth.

Let's face it: no two jobs or careers are completely alike, just as no two individuals are alike. Different jobs require different skills, education, risk-taking, etc. The market thus determines, considering the supply of workers in a particular category, how much a job is worth. Nurses, for example, used to be paid meager wages; some say they still are. But the WASHINGTON POST advertises jobs for RNs paying more than $20 an hour; most cities report shortages of qualified nurses; and trained nurses are hotly pursued by "headhunters," who are prepared to offer them all sorts of bonuses and inducements to take jobs which now go begging.

Comparable pay is not a legitimate feminist issue; it has nothing to do with gender bias. Adopting this radical idea carries the clear and present danger of economic regimentation, bureaucratic regulation, lowered productivity, renewed inflation, increased unemployment, higher tax burdens, and less freedom for us all.

That is too high a price to pay to try and placate the demands of a small segment of the "working" population.
