Charged with possession of a controlled substance was Deron Johnson, 28, the officer said. Cassandra Morris 27, was arrested on Pampa warrants. Both remained in the Hutchinson County Jail

Webb said the two "were visiting" at the Alabama Street address when the narcotic search warrant was served at 10:55 p.m.

Some of the items seized during the search included 2.9 gross grams of what is believed to be crack cocaine, a 12-gauge shotgun and a .38-caliber handgun, Webb

The investigation is continuing and more arrests may be made, he said.

"Is it always like this?" World War II veteran Ted Dyke asked in a raised voice as high early afternoon winds blew through Perry LeFors Field

Dyke is a volunteer who came to Pampa this week with a few members of the Oregon National Guard to dismantle the Freedom Museum's B-25 bomber that will be trucked to Oregon later this week.

Told the wind is frequent but not always as bad as it was Wednesday, Dyke replied, "Well, it was like this when we came in February to look at the plane. I thought they said we were going to Tampa (Florida) so I didn't have any thing but short-sleeved shirts with me. I almost froze."

Although the local museum is losing its World War II bomber, that won't be the case for long because the U.S. Navy is sending a replacement soon, said CW2 Grant Rush, a member of the Oregon National Guard.

The base where Rush's unit is stationed in Pendleton, Ore., is the spot where the their B-25s in order to fly 47 or Chinook helicopters. from short aircraft carrier

Rush said the aircraft switch is being made because the Pampa B-25 is of the same model as that flown on April 18, 1942, by then Lt. Col. James "Jimmy" Doolittle's pilots. The plane will become part of a memorial to the Raiders.

Doolittle, later promoted to general, served in both World War I and II and was instrumental in helping to develop aviation

The 1942 raid, carried out by 16 B-25s and their crews, was launched from the carrier Hornet. A huge victory was scored by the dropping of bombs on Tokyo, Yokohama and other Japanese cities.

It's a time Dyke says he wishes folks better remembered as he reflected briefly on the "7,000 aircraft" lost in World War II and "50,000 men" associated with them who died.

Dyke, who volunteers at an aviation museum, said he was "a sailor" during the war. "I was a 17-year-old kid when I joined the Navy.

Michael Anthony Moreno, 28, received two 45-year prison sentences and two $5,000 fines Wednesday in exchange for his plea of guilty to the brutal assaults of his father and girlfriend.

Moreno was charged with beating Stephanie Lynn Nunley with a board at the house the two shared at 345 Miami on Sept. 13, 2000. According to police reports. Moreno then walked over to 918 N. Gray where his father Porfirio Huerta "J.R." Moreno lived and hit the disabled man in the head with the Both victims suffered serious injuries in the assaults and were hospitalized in an Amarillo hospital's intensive care unit for a time, officials said.

As part of the plea bargain agreement, there was no finding of a deadly weapon having been used in the beatings and an unrelated assault charge pending against Moreno was dismissed.

According to Texas law, a finding of a deadly weapon would mean that Moreno would have to serve at least half of the sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

Both victims, accompanied by family members and a victim's assistance coordinator, were present at the hearing in 223rd District Court Wednesday afternoon. Victim's Impact Statements were entered as evidence, but were not read aloud in court.

Moreno spoke softly with his parents while District Judge Lee Waters read the statements.

For a few tense moments, it appeared that the plea bargain agreement would fall through and the case would go to trial.

When Judge Waters asked him if he was freely agreeing to the plea arrangement and asked him about a psychological examination included in the pre-sentencing report, Moreno began saying such things as, "I was scared of making Mr. (District Attorney Rick) Roach mad...," and "I feel so pressured," and "I'm scared of a life sentence."

Moreno seemed indecisive for a time, saying, "I don't know what God wants me to do.

"I don't have a direct phone to the Lord," Judge Waters said, "You'll have to tell me what to do."

The judge asked Moreno's attorney Mike Warner if his client had understood the advice he had been given. Warner said he had.

Waters then asked Moreno, who had earlier dismissed two other attorneys appointed to represent him, if he was satisfied with Warner.

City official hears update on TxDOT plans

An estimate is being worked up on what it would cost to widen FM 282 (Price Road) to 23rd Street, but the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) has no anticipated bid letting

Once the estimate is done, the project can be put on the TxDOT planning list and it could move to the letting schedule as funds become available, said Kenneth Petr, TxDOT planning and development engineer in Amarillo.

Petr made the remarks in a letter to Pampa Public Works Director Richard Morris who said he had asked about the possibility of the project as "a reminder."

Morris said he'd not seen the project, which was requested by the city some seven or eight years ago. show up on any TxDOT planning lists thus prompting his inquiry.

GOP, Democrats duke it out in tax cut debate

BY CURT ANDERSON AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Trying out political themes for the fall elections, House Republicans say making last year's huge tax cut permanent would create jobs and restore economic confidence. Democrats say it would be an unwise raid on Social Security.

tax cut will show clear differences between the sure up for a floor vote this year.

parties for voters. Democrats contend the cut is largely to blame for draining much of the government's budget surplus, meaning that the $374 billion cost of extending the package through 2012 would be financed by Social Security where a surplus still exists. Although the Social Security money would have to be repaid when needed to pay benefits and the transfer would have no impact on the level of retiree benefits, the program remains a potent political weapon — particularly among older voters. "They are spending Social Security money," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. "I'm happy to have this debate. We'll hold their feet to the fire on how they've dealt with Social Security.' Led by President Bush, Republicans claim Democrats are advocating a massive tax increase that would drag down the economy if the package of cuts is allowed to expire on Dec. 31, 2010, as it will under current law. That would bring back pre-2001 income tax rates, resurrect the estate tax, cut the child tax credit in half and reduce or eliminate a number of other tax benefits. "Democrats might want this automatic tax increase, but I think that is irresponsible,' said House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill. "This automatic tax increase will play havoc with the lives of the American people."

Democrats also contend that in the decade after 2012, the cost of the tax cuts will balloon to at least $4 trillion counting interest and assuming certain necessary tax changes. Republicans say the tax cuts will ensure a robust economy that will generate plenty of revenue for the government.

The debate is largely for political consumption because the Senate's top Democrat, Both sides say a vote planned Thursday on Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota, aking permanent the 10-year, $1.35 trillion emphatically opposes even bringing the me

"We're going to be opposing it very aggressively in the days and weeks ahead," Daschle

The tax cuts will expire because of an obscure Senate budget rule, named for veteran Democratic Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, effectively forbidding any legislation that would worsen the deficit, or reduce the surplus, that is projected beyond the budget's 10-year window.

Conveniently for sponsors, this rule kept the cost of the bill at the $1.35 trillion figure 'required by last year's budget and ensured the tax cut needed only a majority of 51 votes instead of 60 to pass the Senate.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress on Wednesday that most businesses are making investment decisions on the assumption that the tax cuts will be extended at some point. Yet Greenspan, too, said it would be better for the economy if the situation were clarified, particularly in such areas as the estate tax — which would be repealed in 2010 only to resurface in 2011.

"I think it has to be clear where the longerterm tax structure in this area is," Greenspan told the Joint Economic Committee. "Wherever the Congress comes out, I think it's far more important that it come out clearly and unequivocally, and not have an issue pending ... an issue which would create a degree of uncertainty."

Plane slams into building in Milan; 2 reported dead only the pilot on board crashed Thursday into a 30-story landmark skyscraper in downtown Milan that houses the regional government offices, authorities said. Two people were reported dead.

Smoke poured out of the building, but firefighters quickly put out the flames, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

The weather was clear at the time of the crash, which occurred at 5:54 p.m. near the end of the work day.

"It sounded like a bomb. The pavement shook like an earthquake," said a woman identifying herself only as Lucia.

Police officer Celerissimo De Simone said the pilot of the Piper aircraft had sent out a distress call at 5:54 p.m. just before the crash near Milan's main train station. RAI state TV reported that the pilot said the SOS was because of engine trouble.

Earlier, in Rome, the senate's president, Marcello Pera, said it "very probably" appeared to be a terrorist attack. But Pera's spokesman later said he had spoken with the Interior Minister and the crash didn't appear to be any kind of an attack.

The plane had taken off from Locarno, Switzerland, and was heading to Milan's Linate airport, said De Simone, the police offi-

"It was a violent explosion," said Stefano Bottazzi, 35, works in a skyscraper 500 yards from building. "The clock fell to the floor."

An unspecified number of people were rescued from elevators blocked in the building, ANSA said.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A small plane with man with a bloody shirt holding his head. Ambulances streamed into the area and pedestrians peered upward.

The crash put a hole in the 25th floor of the Pirelli building. Police cordoned off the area as people gawked at the skyscraper.

At 30 stories high, the Pirelli structure, located near the central train station, is Italy's first skyscraper and one of the world's tallest concrete buildings. It was built in 1958 and designed by architects Gio Ponti and Pier Luigi Nervi. The building is one of the main symbols of Milan, along with the city's cathedral.

White House press secretary Ari Fleischer opened his lunchtime press briefing Thursday with this statement:

"The president just moments ago was informed about the incident in Milan. I have no additional information at all for you at this time. This is a breaking story and we don't have anything else beyond that — the president has been informed."

National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice and White House chief of staff Andrew Card broke the news to President Bush, Fleischer said.

"I think you can presume that we will be if we are not already — in touch with Italian authorities and will ascertain precisely what the facts are," the spokesman said.

The FBI was trying to learn more about the incident. But one official, describing the matter on grounds of anonymity, said bureau personnel were assisting their Italian counterparts in the investigation.

On March 27, the State Department issued a warning for American citizens traveling in four Italian cities, including Milan, during Easter.

The warning said the possible threat was based on information about "extremist groups."

The announcement did not identify the groups or elaborate on the nature of the threats, but it warned that "these groups do not distinguish between official and civilian targets."

A U.S. official said the warning was based blue sky from the building where the aircraft on very specific information that was "developed in very close cooperation with Italian authorities." Italian anti-terrorism officials

"I'm sure a lot of people who are in jail think it doesn't look good for the home team," Judge Waters said.

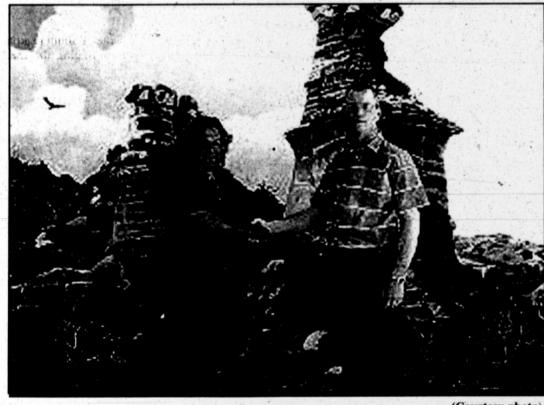

Before he finally agreed to the plea bargain, Moreno asked the judge if he would receive mercy if he went to trial, saying he was a young man and he wanted mercy. The judge remind-

Texas court rules in international custody case

DENTON (AP) - A Norwegian who claimed her ex-husband kidnapped their daughters and brought them to the United States flew to Norway with the children immediately after winning a favorable court order.

Denton County District Court Judge Vicki Isaacks' ruling Wednesday was stayed several hours later by the 2nd Court of Appeals in Fort Worth.

On peace in the Mideast.

From The Dallas Morning News:

Here's one of the many dangers in the Middle East inferno: Even if Israel succeeds in dismantling Yasser Arafat's tenuous power base, it remains unclear what would happen.

Some Israelis like former Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who spoke last week in Dallas, believe strongly that the Mideast would be better off without the Palestinian Authority chairman. Others like Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres worry that matters would grow worse if Mr. Arafat is toppled.

It is likely that in a post-Arafat world, hard-liners could dominate, Palestinian anger at Israel and the U.S. then could destabilize moderate Arab nations like Jordan. And the war could widen to include nations like Syria. Hence the need for intermediaries like Secretary of State Colin Powell to deal with Although Secretary Powell has been frustrated so far in dealing with the weak and corrupt Palestinian leader, organizations like Hamas and Islamic Jihad might step into the vacuum if Mr. Arafat is dislodged. And they clearly do not favor a twostate solution.

But no matter which side of the Arafat divide one comes down on, and no matter how brutal the situation becomes, it remains important to consider strategies that could help several steps down the road. Mr. Netanyahu offered some interesting ideas at his National Center for Policy Analysis appearance.

He suggested that Saudi Arabia invest some of its vast petrowealth in rebuilding Palestinian communities. The Saudis say they want stability in the region. Here's their chance. Rather than hand out money to families of suicide bombers, the Saudis could invest more in schools and housing. Without a viable economy and better infrastructure, the poverty in Palestinian communities will undermine any chance at stability.

Likewise, Mr. Netanyahu suggested that Palestinian business people in the U.S. could greatly aid Palestinians in the Middle East.

The major reform that would benefit the Palestinian cause any cause, for that matter is the development of genuinely free elections. Democracy could take long to plant, but the U.S. should include free elections as part of a longer-term vision for Middle East negotiator George Mitchell, who helped broker the cease-fire in Northern Ireland, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors last week that the Israeli-Palestinian conflict may have to get worse before it gets better. What brought both sides to the negotiating table in Northern Ireland, the former senator said, was that they finally became sick of the killing, sick of seeing the coffins of children on the news. Sadto say, he may be right. Still, the search for peace must continue. It is never too soon to imagine a better situation.

Positive Pampa impressions

When I first came to work at The Pampa News three years ago I was cautiously optimistic. Even though I was now working only 40 miles from where I lived, it could have been 40 zillion miles away with what I knew about Pampa.

One of my first impressions of Pampa was the cleanliness as well as the extremely friendly people. The number of parks in the community and how well they were kept made a favorable impression. The concept of having so many small parks impressed me.

I saw some very, very Positive Pampa People and so many positives to the community.

The number of small stores in the community was impressive to me, and the many people who work in civic organizations.

The facilities for public use in the community are impressive. M.K. Brown Auditorium is a place many area communities would love to have.

As I listen to people talk about how bad the economy is here, I often wonder if local residents realize just what all they have in this community.

Do the people realize how much it helps them to have a state representative who lives here? A direct line to Austin is a tremendous positive.

Do they realize how much the former representatives have done to make Pampa what it is? Walter Rogers, Bob Price, Foster Whaley, Grainger McIlhany — all did so much for this community years ago and their past efforts continue to benefit the town. Many communities the size of Pampa would love to have a Social Security Office or a Railroad Commission office.

I remember coming to Pampa in 1974 to see a California politician at a bar-b-que at Bob Price's ranch. That politician later became U.S. president!

There are so many activities throughout the year in Pampa. Some towns only have one or two major annual events, but Pampa has several.

Top O' Texas Rodeo, Country Fair, Celebration of Lights, Tri-State Senior Golf Tournaments, and Chautauqua are just a few of the major events. There are many, many more.

The Woody Guthrie Folk Music Center was recently opened. There are several authors who still live in this community and some who used to live here who have recently written books.

Many civic groups are continually raising funds to help battle diseases as well as assist those who need help with social issues.

It takes people — dedicated people to put in the endless less hours to havethese many projects.

People are dedicated to helping people. So many events are held to assist others. Relay for Life and Pregnancy Support Center are two which are coming up soon. Each year the Harvest House helps students have the needed school

Pampa High Class of 1959 are helping Tommy Hill and his family by raising funds to assist with medical bills following a lung transplant.

Schools and churches continually work to have programs to improve the quality of life in the community. Church members pray for those who need. I know. They prayed for me when I was diagnosed with cancer in 2000.

The local hospital and medical community are a plus to local residents.

While the population is declining, there are good things going on in this community.

Kentucky Fried Chicken will probably be re-opened in a week to 10 days. A Sears store will soon be opening locally. A company which hauls oil has recently opened here.

When a local greenhouse burned last year, it was rebuilt and has re-opened. West Texas Landscape has built a new building and expanded. Bourland & Leverich Supply recently expanded.

Now, the U.S. Army has re-opened its recruiting office in Coronado Shopping

The annual rabies drive will be held May 3, May 4, and 6th.

Restoration at the Gray County Courthouse will soon be actively under way. The added traffic from the renovation will also bring more dollars as workers eat here, buy gas here, etc. All that means more sales tax dollars, too.

Speaking of sales tax, Pampa has shown continuously increasing sales tax figures for the past year.

Each community has good news and they have bad news. We at The Pampa News try to report the good, as well as the bad. Let us know if you know of news. Maybe we haven't heard.

There are so many good things happening in Pampa. Let's count our bless-

Surely it's ignorance, not dishonesty

The Enron case made headlines because fraud and deception of such magnitude is fairly unusual in the corporate world. Washington fraud and deception of a much greater magnitude doesn't make the headlines because fraud and deception in government is standard practice. That's what's so disgusting when politicians posture and demand that something be done to ensure honest corporate accounting practices.

You say, "Williams, what are you talking about - Washington fraud?" Suppose a company had run up debt that it wanted to conceal from its stockholders, lenders and the Security Exchange Commission (SEC). The CEO comes up with the accounting gimmick of transferring money from its employees' retirement account to the company's budget

That way, when auditors come around, the books are balanced showing no debt. While the company's books are balanced, the company's debt has not disappeared. It still has debt. It's just owed to a different group of people: its employees. If a CEO commits this kind of fraud and deception, he should be summarily jailed.

Washington politicians have for decades been doing precisely what Enron has been accused of doing - concealing with accounting tricks. Congressmen tell us that our Social Security taxes go into a trust fund to pay for future retirement pensions. That is a boldface lie. The Social Security trust fund has no money in it. What Congress does with Social Security trust fund money is buy government bonds. The purchase of government bonds disguises the deficit by reducing the national debt.

In essence, here's what happens: Congress takes $100 billion of Social Security trust fund money to retire government debt, and the national debt will be $100 billion dollars less. But now the Social Security system is owed $100 bil-

You say, "Williams, what good does that do them? There's still $100 billion dollars worth of debt." That's where you're wrong and where congressional treachery and accounting gimmicks comes in: Money owed by one government agency to another is not counted as part of the national debt. Thus, Congress' accounting gimmick is to move debt from where it's counted (public debt) to where it's not counted (Social Security debt) but'it's debt nonetheless.

How will Congress cope with the forthcoming fallout of its crooked accounting? It will be easy. Congress will simply cheat people out of their retirement pension by gradually raising the retirement age. For example, Congress can legislate that 75 years of age, instead of 65, is when you're eligible for Social Security benefits. Unfortunately, they can't legislate that you live 10 years longer. That means you will have been cheated out of 10 years of Social Security

Enron used accounting gimmicks to hide debt and make corporate executives look good and earn fat bonuses. Congress does the same thing. Each year, it transfers vast sums of money from the Social Security and the Federal Highway trust funds to hide debt, and they boastfully lie to us saying they've not only balanced the budget but created a surplus.

Corporations employ accounting practices promulgated by the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) that established Generally Accepted Principles (GAAP). Accounting Government accounting practices don't come close to the honesty of private accounting practices.

But the mystery to me is why Americans are so upset over an isolated case of a private company using devious accounting gimmicks and demanding that Congress do something, while we accept without question the accounting fraud and deception that has become an inherent feature of government.

I'd like to think that it's ignorance rather than a preference for government dishonesty.

HONG KONG (AP) -The war on terrorism would be easier if China shared more intelligence information with the American military, the chief of the U.S. Pacific complained Command Thursday.

Defeating shadowy terror groups requires unprecedented pooling of information, and although progress is being made across the Asia-Pacific region, Beijing seems to be coming up short on specifies, Adm. Dennis C. Blair told reporters in Hong

"With other governments that we're operating with more closely, like the Philippines or Singapore and Malaysia, it's very detailed, tactical information of the type you need to take action," Blair said. "I think we need to get to that level with Beijing, and it's not quite there yet."

He added: "When we have all countries doing that in a very effective way, we will go a long way towards winning this campaign."

Blair, who retires on May 2, declined to provide any concrete examples and acknowledged he doesn't know how much useful information Chinese intelligence officials might have. But he described the sort of details he'd like to Ashraf al-Kurdi, who has said the Palestinian leader's regular checkup was four months overdue. Several years ago, Arafat developed tremors in his lower lip. Doctors have said it was a nervous tic. Media reports have speculated he suffers from Parkinson's disease, a degenerative neurological disease.

Jenin camp in the northern West Bank was the scene of the deadliest fighting in the offensive launched by Israel to crush Palestinian militias after a string of suicide bombings, Israeli soldiers battled Palestinian gunmen in the camp for days, and Israeli shelling and bulldozers reduced large areas in the center of the camp to piles of rubble.

U.N. envoy Terje Roed-Larsen took stock of the devastation on Thursday.

'We are shocked," he said alongside his delegation after the tour. "This is horrifying beyond belief. Just seeing this area, it looks like there's been an earthquake here, and the stench of death is over many places where we are standing.

The envoy said he came across the body of a boy who appeared to be about 12 years old and had been burnt. "Evidently, there are lots of other corpses. And the stench is telling its own story around here," Roed-Larsen said.

Palestinians claim hundreds of people may be buried beneath rubble in the center of the camp. Israel says the casualties were much lower, and that those killed were mainly Roed-Larsen demanded that Israel give immediate access to aid organizations and the United Nations so they could mount a "major humanitarian operation." Red Cross and Red Crescent teams have been operating in the camp since Monday, but say they do not have the equipment they need to recover bodies and to mount an extensive search for any survivors.

Sharon's chief foreign policy adviser, Danny Ayalon, said Israel was already allowing some aid teams to operate. He said more would be let in shortly, and that troops would be out of the camp "very soon."

On Wednesday, troops withdrew from parts of the adjacent town of Jenin and were expected to pull out of the West Bank's largest city, Nablus, within a few days. However, troops on Thursday raided a West Bank village near the town of Tulkarem, carrying out arrests and searching for explo-

Opposition resumes against Chavez

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Despite pleas from the head of the Organization of American States, Venezuelan opposition leaders resumed their political offensive against President Hugo Chavez, insisting he cannot unite a country fractured and demoralized after a failed coup.

During a stormy parliamentary debate Wednesday, most opposition parties insisted Chavez resign and presidential elections be held.

ing constitution would allow such a vote in 2004. Chavez's term runs to 2006.

"It's not enough to talk," said Liliana Hernandez, whose Justice First party also proposed that the entire National Assembly resign.

"There are moments for changing and moments to act. The moment for changing has past," she said.

"Fascist!" shouted ruling legislators after Hemandez spoke. Cesar Gaviria, secretary general of the OAS, warned embittered Venezuelans to talk to one another or risk the loss of their democracy. "This country has to learn from the traumatic events of last week," he said. "On both sides there is a theory that confrontation is inevitable, as if this is impossible to solve. Those theories lead to instability and war." Gaviria was completing a fact-finding mission into the uprisings that overthrew

Chavez on April 12 and brought him back to power Sunday.

At least 49 people died some say more than 100 - in massive street protests in the capital as soldiers first ousted Chavez, then brought him back. Both sides blame the other for most of the deaths.

Chavez, whose initial popularity in office allowed him to run roughshod over opponents, has admitted errors and appealed for the country to calmly retreat from violence.

Opposition legislators didn't formally introduce the referendum proposal. The move was unlikely to succeed because of Chavez's majority in Congress. Ruling party legislators urged opponents to work with Chavez.

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander today delivered $272.7 million in monthly sales tax payments to Texas cities, counties, transit departments and special purpose taxing districts. Sales tax allocations to local governments are down 1.4 percent compared to April 2001. So far this year, local sales tax allocations are down 0.5 percent compared to the first four months of 2001.

April sales tax rebates include local sales taxes collected in February and reported to the Comptroller in March. The state's share of sales tax collected during this period was $1 billion, down 1.5 percent compared to a year ago.

Comptroller Rylander sent sales tax rebates of $182.5 million to 1,116 Texas cities, down 0.6 percent compared to April 2001. April sales tax rebates of $15.8 million went to 121 Texas counties, up 2.6 percent compared to one year ago.

Another $7.2 million went to 66 special purpose taxing districts, a 5.9 percent increase compared to April 2001. Texas' six metropolitan transit authorities and two city transit departments teceived $67.1 million in sales tax rebates, down 5 percent.

Canadian soldiers slain in errant U.S. bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American F-16 fighter mistakenly dropped at least one laser-guided bomb on Canadian soldiers participating in a nighttime live-fire training exercise in Afghanistan. Four soldiers were killed and eight injured, Canadian officials

The soldiers were the first Canadians killed in a combat zone in a half-century.

It appeared the pilot didn't know he was flying over an area restricted for training and so fire from the training exercise made him believe he was under attack, officials at the Pentagon said.

Canadian Defense Minister Art Eggleton, who called the deaths shocking, said Thursday that one of the injured had lifethreatening wounds and the other seven were in stable condition.

U.S. and Canadian officials said they don't know what went wrong in the attack that occurred at 1:55 a.m. local time Thursday (5:25 p.m. EDT Wednesday) near Kandahar, a former Taliban stronghold. The two countries planned a joint investigation.

'As to the circumstances of what appears to have been a terrible accident, clearly there are many questions that the families, and all Canadians, expect to have answered," Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien said in a statement.

Chretien said President Bush had called to offer his condolences. The White House did not issue a formal statement on the incident Wednesday evening, beyond noting that Bush had telephoned Chretien.

Canadian defense officials said their soldiers were on a training exercise about 10 miles south of their Kandahar base. A U.S. Air National Guard F-16 dropped one or two 500-pound, laser-guided bombs, U.S. and Canadian military officials said.

Canada's defense chief, Lt. Gen. Ray Henault, told reporters in Ottawa that the U.S. fighter jet was not involved in the training exercise. Henault said the area was recognized as a training area and the aircraft were using very strictly controlled routes.

"How this can happen is a mystery to us. Without a doubt, there was a misidentification," Henault said.

Officials said the site of the accident was a former al-Qaida training camp now used daily by coalition forces for live-fire exercis-

Canadian defense officials said two of the wounded soldiers had life-threatening injuries, one had very serious injuries and five suffered serious injuries.

Canadian forces are fighting alongside U.S. and European troops seeking to hunt down remnants of Osama bin Laden's terrorist organization and holdouts from Afghanistan's former ruling Taliban militia.

At the Bagram air base in Afghanistan, Maj. Bryan Hilferty, a U.S. military spokesman, offered his condolences to the

We do everything we can to mitigate risk," he said. "We try to make sure we have all sorts of procedures, tactics and techniques in place to mitigate risk. But unfortunately, it's an inherently dangerous business."

At the Kandahar air base, where both U.S. and Canadian forces are posted, the American and Canadian flags flew at half staff Thursday morning.

The bombing is among the worst friendly fire accidents since the U.S.-led campaign in Afghanistan began in October.

On Dec. 5, a B-52 dropped a bomb on U.S. and Afghan forces near Kandahar, killing three Americans and at least seven Afghans, and slightly wounding Hamid Karzai, now Afghanistan's interim leader. The investigation isn't complete, but officials have said there were errors in transmitting target coordinates to the B-52.

On Dec. 22, U.S. aircraft struck a convoy near Khost, killing dozens of Afghans. Some Afghans say the convoy was carrying tribal leaders to Karzai's inauguration, but U.S. military commanders insist it was a legitimate target.

Missing minister wants to return from the dead

ABILENE (AP) - A minister who claimed to have amnesia when he resurraced after a 16-year disappearance has gone to court to have his death certificate reversed and his estate returned to him.

Wesley Barrett "Barre" Cox disappeared 1984 while driving from Lubbock to Abilene, and he was presumed dead after his ransacked car was found off a remote highway. He was married, had an infant daughter and was a family minister at MacArthur Park Church of Christ in San Antonio.

He was recognized in December 2000 while in the pulpit of a Dallas gay church, where he was using the name James Simmons and auditioning to be pastor. Simmons has said he is gay, has amnesia and does not remember a wife and daughter, who now live in Franklin, Tenn.

The application for "reversal of presumption of death and for restoration of estate" was filed March 25 in Gray County in the Texas Panhandle, where Cox was ruled legally dead on

The suit seeks a ruling that Barre Cox is alive and entitled to the return of his estate, as well as any profits from it since he was declared dead and any further relief.

Beth Cox, who never remarried after her husband's disappearance, told the Abilene Reporter-News that she used all the money to raise their child and would have to declare bankruptcy if Simmons wins his suit.

After her husband was declared dead, she received lease payments on part of a ranch owned by the Cox family in the Panhandle. She also received some money when the ranch later was sold.

"He's saying, 'I want all that back," Beth Cox said. She has said she wonders whether Simmons really has amnesia or faked his abduction and forged a new life after realizing he was gay.

Her attorney, Ed Bailey of Nashville, said Simmons filed suit after Tennessee began proceedings to collect back child support payments for the couple's daughter, who turned 18 on Jan. 1.

But Bailey said that happened only after Simmons failed to reach an agreement the past year with his former wife about paying for their daughter's education:

"We had really hoped he would be more responsive to his responsibilities as a parent," Bailey said.

Simmons attorney, Christopher Wright of Amarillo, said he does not know if the child support issue prompted Simmons to contact him. The child support case has been transferred to Dallas. A hearing will be held June 7.

Columbine review finds in favor of police

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Nearly three years after the massacre at Columbine High School, Brian Rohrbough is satisfied that he knows who killed his son.

"I believe for the first time in three years we have the very first plausible explanation for what happened to my son," Rohrbough said.

The cause of Daniel Rohrbough's death has been the source of a heated dispute between his father and law enforcement. Brian Rohrbough has alleged Denver police Sgt. Daniel O'Shea accidentally killed his son, while police maintained it was teen gunman Eric Harris.

On Wednesday, authorities released the results of an independent investigation led by El Paso County Sheriff John Anderson that determined O'Shea was not yet on the scene when the deadly shot was fired. It also found that the bullet in Rohrbough's body was a "textbook match" Harris' weapon.

Rohrbough, 15, was among 12 students and a teacher killed by Harris and Dylan Klebold during the rampage in suburban Littleton. The gunmen then killed themselves in the school library.

Denver police said O'Shea would not be available for comment. But police Chief Gerry Whitman said he welcomed the findings.

"It is also tragic that Sgt. O'Shea has been subjected to public accusations claiming that he took a life, when in fact he courageously risked his own life to save others," Whitman

The investigation was conducted by the El Paso County sheriff's office and detectives from Colorado Springs at the request of the Jefferson County sheriff's department, the lead agency in charge of responding to the attack. El Paso County's deputies had no role in the initial response to the attack.

Jefferson County investigators had reported in May 2000 that Rohrbough was shot by Rohrbough's parents, left with questions over who killed their son, filed a lawsuit alleging O'Shea accidentally killed Rohrbough. The lawsuit was dismissed

Jefferson County investigator Kate Battan declined comment on the new findings until she could review the full report. Sheriff John Stone was out of town on business and unavailable for comment.

DEAR ABBY: As a child, I wanted to be a teacher to follow in my grandmother's footsteps. I made my sister play school. I made the neighbor kids play school. Nobody was safe from my teaching.

I never went beyond high school, married young and had a family right away. On my 38th birthday, our home and all possessions were burned in a fire. My life changed for-ever. I became a firefighter. At the age of 42, I began taking college classes in fire science. With 60 hours of college credit, I became a substiher on my days off from the

I retired from the fire service in tion. 1998 and, at age 55, entered college full time. It took 2 ½ years to complete my degree.

DEAR ABBY: After being frustrated about not being able to track down and properly thank some of the teachers who helped me get where I am today, I had an idea. Wouldn't it be wonderful if each teacher had an e-mail address assigned to him or her - even after they retired? If teachers heard from their former students, they would better understand the impact they made on our lives. Perhaps some great former teachers would even return to their profession. GRATEFUL DOCTOR IN DALLAS

DEAR GRATEFUL DOCTOR: Your idea has merit. However, until that day arrives, a phone call, or better still a letter, can achieve the same goal.

DEAR ABBY: Do you have space for one more "birds and bees" story? When my son and his playmate were very little, some big boys horrified them by bluntly telling them the "facts of life." Left alone, the two little boys talked the matter over anxiously. They finally decided, with a great surge of relief, that the big boys had been lying through their teeth.

"Of course they were lying!" my son's little pal assured him tri-umphantly, "and I can prove it. You see, maybe my mother might, but I know for sure my daddy would

Former Cowboy reflects on career

ABILENE, Texas — Drew Pearson did not have to be pushed or persuaded. Coaches never doubted his ability to think on his feet or to make decisions under pressure on the football field.

Maybe even more than his unusual athletic talent, that was what made the early part of the former Dallas Cowboys wide receiver's experience as a high school and college football player special. Pearson was a black quarterback, and that was just fine with his coaches at Southriver High School in New Jersey and the University of Tulsa in the 1970s.

Pearson was a part-time quarterback early on in high school only because he was playing behind an older player by the name of Joe-Theismann. Once Theismann graduated and went on to Notre Dame, Pearson remained a quarterback until midway through his college career at Tulsa. And Pearson's race had nothing to do with the reason he moved to wide receiver as a junior.

"When I was coming through college I realized that I was not that big or strong, so why create even greater odds of making it to the NFL," Pearson said recently following a press conference at Fairway Oaks Country Club announcing he would headline the Golf Classic. "Just before my junior year at Tulsa I insisted that I play wide receiver.'

The way Pearson looked at it, playing receiver was his best chance to make it to the NFL, which did not have a team select a black quarterback in the first round until James Harris in 1970.

"I certainly was not going to be a quarterback in the NFL, and I was not going to be a cornerback because I didn't like to hit anybody," said Pearson, who signed as a free agent with the Cowboys before the 1973 season. "I didn't mind getting hit, but I was not going to hit anybody, so I knew if I was going to make it I needed to be a wide receiver."

Pearson displayed a few nifty moves as a football player for the Cowboys over the years, but the decision to move to wide receiver may have been his best of all. Pearson was named an All-Pro in the NFL three times, played in three Super Bowls and also produced one of the most memorable moments in football history.

Pearson caught a "Hail Mary" pass from Roger Staubach with just 24 seconds left in an NFC Divisional playoff game against the Minnesota Vikings and scampered into the end zone to give Fellowship of Christian Athletes the Cowboys the win in 1975.

Mays fall to fourth place in Western Conf.

Tsakalidis scored 19 points and Stephon Marbury had 15 points and 13 assists Wednesday night as the Phoenix Suns beat Dallas 89-76, relegating the Mavericks to fourth place in the Western Conference.

The Mays went into the finale tied with San Antonio Spurs at 57-24. But the Spurs held the tiebreaker, and their victory at Utah an hour earlier PHOENIX (AP) - Jake ended Dallas' shot at its first division title in 15 years.

This loss completed the playoff seedings, because the Los Angeles Lakers, who played later, held the tiebreaker against the Mavericks. The two-time defending champs are seeded third and will play Portland.

Dallas will play Minnesota in the best-of-five first round.

Joe Johnson had 16 points off the bench, Shawn Marion scored 14 and Dan Majerle, who made his first start for the Suns since April 4, 1995, scored 10 points and eight rebounds in the final game of his 14-season career.

Majerle initially rejected the offer of coach Frank Johnson to start, but reconsidered on game day. He was honored in a pregame ceremony.

Wang Zhizhi led the Mavericks with 12 points and Johnny Newman had 11.

Ichiro Suzuki swung at the low-and-away slider, a nasty pitch that would've struck out most hitters, and simply flicked it foul. He did even better with the next breaking ball, lining it for a game-breaking, three-run double.

"I think he can hit anything," teammate Bret

Hardly a surprise considering how well things are going for the Seattle Mariners these

The Mariners completed a 10-0 road trip Wednesday night, with Suzuki's eighth-inning double ensuring a 7-4 win over the Oakland

"Not a bad way to start out," Suzuki said through an interpreter. "What do you want to me to say? We're not playing to make records but to accomplish something.

The Mariners, who set an AL marks with 59 road wins and 116 victories last season, won four games at Anaheim, four more at Texas and finished with a two-game sweep at the Coliseum.

Seattle became the sixth team to start a season with at least 10 straight road victories. Atlanta was the last club to do it in 1994.

"We felt in spring training that we had a good team, but winning like this just reinforces it to the players," Mariners manager Lou Piniella

In other games, Boston beat Toronto 10-3, Chicago downed Cleveland 7-2, New York defeated Baltimore 7-1, Kansas City routed Minnesota 16-3, Texas topped Anaheim 4-1 and Detroit defeated Tampa Bay 7-6.

At 13-3, the Mariners once again have the best record in the majors. Oakland lost its third

"They have a killer instinct," Athletics manager Art Howe said. "Right now if you make a mistake against them they make you pay." Jeff Cirillo's RBI single off Tim Hudson put the Mariners ahead 4-3 in the sixth. In the eighth, Seattle loaded the bases with no outs for Suzuki, the reigning AL MVP and Rookie of the Year. Reliever Mike Holtz got two fast strikes before Suzuki delivered the clinching "Ichiro put the game out of reach for us. It's so nice to have him come up there and hit the ball for us," Boone said. Red Sox 10, Blue Jays 3

Manny Ramirez homered, drove in four runs and scored three times to lead Boston over

Ramirez had four hits, making him 7-for-9 with seven RBIs in the two-game sweep at SkyDome.

The Red Sox have won three straight games overall and are 5-0 on the road.

Yankees 7, Orioles 1

Jason Giambi homered for the first time in pinstripes, and New York connected five times to beat Baltimore.

Giambi, who's been getting mixed cheers and boos at Yankee Stadium, doubled in the fourth inning and homered in the sixth. Urged by Derek Jeter, Giambi acknowledged an ovation by taking a curtain call.

Alfonso Soriano, Jorge Posada, Rondell White and Shane Spencer also homered for New York, which won for only the second time in eight games.

White Sox 7, Indians 2

Mark Buehrle became the AL's first fourgame winner and Ray Durham drove in four runs as Chicago again beat Cleveland.

The White Sox won for the seventh time in eight games. The Indians, who had their 10game winning streak stopped Tuesday night at Comiskey Park, have lost two in a row for the first time this year.

Knockdown

Welterweight boxer David Cano (left) of the Youth Survival Club of Pampa knocks down Nick Alcozar of Hereford enroute to a winning decision at the Portillo's Boxing Club Invitational in Plainview. Cano was entered in the Open Division. Boxers from Odessa, Hereford, Garden City, Plainview, Taos, Amarillo, Hobbs, Dimmitt, San Angelo, Lubbock and Slaton competed in the tournament. The Pampa boxers return to Plainview this weekend for another tournament.

Senate nears vote on drilling in Alaskan wildlife refuge WASHINGTON (AP) -Barring a big shift in sentiment, Senate Republicans are likely to fall short in their push to open an Alaskan wildlife refuge to oil drilling, which has been one of President Bush's top energy priorities.

Several GOP senators conceded late Wednesday they don't have the 60 votes needed to cut off a Democratic filibuster blocking an amendment to a broad energy bill that would open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil companies.

A showdown vote over ending the filibuster was scheduled for Thursday. If unsuccessful, Republican sponsors of the proposal are likely to withdraw their amendment.

Drilling for the billions of barrels of oil believed to lie beneath the coastal plain of the sprawling refuge has been a centerpiece of Bush's energy plan released a year ago - and the most contentious issue facing senators trying to craft energy legislation.

Bush repeatedly has argued that the oil can be extracted without harming the environment or wildlife, and he has cited Iraq's current oil embargo as proof that new drilling is needed more than ever.

But environmentalists and many Senate Democrats — as well as a handful of GOP senators — argued the oil can be found elsewhere without risking the refuge and its wildlife, including a herd of 123,000 caribou that calves each year on the coastal plain.

The House approved an energy package last year that includes refuge drilling.

During two days of sometimes emotional debate, drilling supporters assailed "radical" environmentalists who have opposed drilling and talked as much about the recent turmoil in the Middle East and Iraq's suspension of oil shipments as about the refuge itself.

"There's an inferno in the Mideast and we're importing more than 50 percent of our said Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, arguing that extracting the oil in ANWR, as the refuge is commonly known, is a matter of national security because it will cut the need for imports.

Drilling opponents scoffed at that argument.

"I've learned a few lessons about national security as a soldier and a senator, but the mathematics I learned in elementary school prove that Arctic drilling won't make a difference for national security," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., a decorated Vietnam veteran.

Kerry, who has led the filibuster against refuge drilling, said the United States has 3 percent of the world's oil and uses 25 percent of the world's supply. "The solution is not in the Arctic," he said.

If energy security was the issue, he said, Republicans should have supported his proposal, which was rejected earlier, to require increased automobile fuel efficiency.

The drilling issue has attracted intense lobbying by environmentalists who have made it their No. 1 issue. Stung last summer when the Republicancontrolled House passed an energy bill that would open the refuge to oil development, they vowed to press the issue in the Democratic-controlled Senate.

"Oil rigs do not belong in the Arctic Wildlife Refuge," said Mark Van Putten, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, lashed out at the "reactionary, radical environmental groups' that he said were using the Arctic refuge issue as a fundraising tool.

Geologists believe ANWR's 1.5 million-acre coastal plain may contain 11.6 billion barrels of oil, almost as much as has been taken from nearby Prudhoe Bay.

At peak production, ANWR would supply about 1.9 million barrels a day, according to the Interior Department estimates. The United States today uses 19 million barrels a day, 57 percent of that from imports.

With indications that they were significantly short on drilling supporters explored ways to bring senators to their side.

Stevens offered a proposal to funnel money from oil lease sales in the refuge to help coal miners and steelworkers, an overture that fell flat. And Murkowski offered to limit areas to be disturbed by exploration and another to expand the wilderness area of the refuge - even a requirement that some of the oil be earmarked for Israel if the country needs it.

Economy: Jobless claims edging up

New claims for unemployment insurance inched up last week, suggesting the some people are having trouble holding onto their jobs even recession.

For the work week ending April 13, new claims for jobless benefits edged up by a seasonally adjusted 1,000 to 445,000, Labor the Department reported Thursday.

Employment is considered a lagging economic indicator because businesses, which had shed workers during the slump, want to make sure the rebound is here to stay before hiring them back.

A government analyst said that the layoffs picture continues to be clouded by a technical fluke, which has caused the level of claims to be inflated over the last several weeks.

The distortion is coming from a requirement that laidoff workers seeking to take advantage of a federal extension for benefits must required to submit new claims.

Congress recently passed legislation signed into law by President Bush that provided a 13-week extension of jobless benefits.

Because of the refiling requirement, the weekly claims figures could be volatile in the weeks ahead.

The more stable four-week moving average of new claims, which smoothes out

WASHINGTON (AP) - week-to-week fluctuations, also rose last week to 448,750, the highest level middle the since November.

Federal Reserve Chairman as the economy recovers from Alan Greenspan, testifying before Congress Wednesday, believed that the labor market is improving and didn't foresee a period of chronic unemployment.

Businesses added jobs in March for the first time in eight months, a clear sign that the economy is bouncing back from a recession that began in March 2001. Job growth wasn't strong enough to prevent the nation's unemployment rate from rising to 5.7 percent.

Thursday's report also showed that the number continuing to receive unemployment benefits rose to 3.84 million for the work week ending April 6. That was the highest level since Feb. 26, 1983.

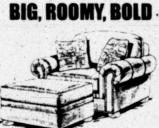

That number, the government analyst said, is not being affected by unemployed people receiving benefit extensions under the new law.

Greenspan said that the behavior of consumers and businesses in the coming months will be the key to how strong the economic recovery turns out to be.

Consumers continued buying throughout this recession. Given that, they may not have a lot of pent-up demand coming out of the slump, which would make for a less than sizzling rebound.

Judge places hold Texas man's assets

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has issued a preliminary injunction on the financial assets of two businesses owned by an East Texas man accused of conducting an illegal telemarketing scheme.

U.S. District Judge John Ward issued the order Wednesday to convert a temporary restraining order into a preliminary injunçtion for two businesses -TeleCom 2000 Independence 2000 America - and their owner, Allen Petty Jr.

The court issued the temporary restraining order on April 4 at the request of the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Petty, 68, of Overton, Texas, created the two businesses last year, advertising Telecom2000 as a total communications network that would provide cellular phone service, long-distance phone service and financial independence, the U.S. Attorney's office said in an affidavit.

An FBI special agent claimed in an affidavit that Petty created a Ponzi scheme, in which funds paid in by later investors are used to pay artificially high returns to the original investors, thus attracting more funds.

In issuing a preliminary injunction Wednesday, the court found "a substantial probability the government will prevail on the issue of forfeiture in this case in that there is a substantial probability it will convince a jury beyond a reasonable doubt that Petty violated" the law, according to a statement from the office of U.S. Attorney Matthew D. Orwig:

The court said property could be moved or destroyed without a preliminary injunction.
