STATEWIDE

Deep South Texas and Gulf areas will see rain today, with possible heavy rains locally. The heaviest rain will be southeast of a Victoria to Laredo line and will bring 1-2 inches of rain, with 3-4 inches possible locally. Deep South Texas will also see thunderstorms today. Widespread severe thunderstorms are not expected, but isolated intense thunderstorms could produce heavy rain there as the Gulf system moves inland.

Temperature extremes in the last 24 hours ranged from 61 at Marfa to 98 in Fort Worth.

In South Texas, rain is also likely in southeast Texas today and is possible in the Hill Country and south central areas. It will be partly to mostly cloudy over the region today with highs in the low to mid-90s except cooler on the coast and deep south.

Chances of rain will diminish beginning Wednesday, and temperatures will slightly increase through the end of the week.

In West Texas, it will be partly cloudy today with highs from 90 to 95, and a chance of scattered and isolated showers and storms on the Edwards Plateau and far west.

These conditions will continue Wednesday, with rain also possible in the panhandle. It will be cooler in the panhandle on Thursday. The region will otherwise maintain highs in the low to mid-90s through the week, partly cloudy skies, and a chance of rain.

North Texas today will be partly cloudy with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs will reach the lower 90s in the west to near 100 northeast, and a slight chance of showers will exist tonight.

Wednesday it will be partly cloudy with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms and highs in the 90s. Thursday and Friday it will be partly cloudy, with highs in the lower to middle 90s and a chance of thunderstorms.

One arrested in sandwich slaying case

BALCH SPRINGS (AP) — An ex-convict was in custody Tuesday in connection with a double slaying at a Subway sandwich shop where he worked until he was fired a month ago.

Terry Darnell Edwards, 28, of Lancaster, was arrested after he was seen dumping a gun into a trash bin next to a cafeteria across the street from the sandwich shop in suburban Balch Springs. Lancaster is 25 miles east of Balch Springs, a southeast Dallas suburb.

Edwards was jailed on two probable cause capital murder arrest warrants. His bond was set at $1 million on each count.

Police said they found a .380-caliber hand gun in the trash bin.

"It appears the casings are similar," said Balch Springs police chief Ed Morris.

Two men entered the sandwich shop Monday as it was opening, shot and killed the manager, Tommy Walker, 34, and an employee, Mickell Goodwin, a 26-year-old mother of two, both of Dallas. The men fled after taking money from the register, Morris said.

Both were shot in the upper torso, Morris said. He said police found three spent cartridges.

No one else was in the shop at the time, officials said.

The second suspect was not immediately identified. An arrest warrant was issued, but police said they weren't sure they had the correct name. He was described as a black man about 5-feet 8-inches tall and 160 pounds.

Morris said he had no details on why Edwards was fired.

"The motive appears to be money because we found money on the suspect, and the other one has money, too," Morris said. "We're looking at it as a robbery. Whether there is any other retaliation, we could only speculate and that's all it would be."

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice said Edwards was sentenced in November 1997 to concurrent five-year terms for theft in 1992 and for possession of cocaine in 1997 with intent to deliver. He was released from prison on Oct. 1, 1999 and was to remain on parole until Aug. 14.

Walker, who was 6-foot, 350 pounds, was an ordained minister who had planned to leave the Subway job and open his own tattoo parlor soon, family members said.

"He was a big teddy bear," said Walker's wife, Beth. "He was famous for making people laugh. His kids and grandkids were his life. He got himself ordained so he could preside at his own kids' weddings."

She said Edwards was an assistant manager at Subway and had visited in their home.

Goodwin and her husband, Bruce, lived with two daughters, ages 6 and 5, in a mobile home park in southeast Dallas County.

Corporate accounting scandals making public somewhat jittery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like many Americans, attorney Larry Anderson is nervous about corporate accounting scandals and their possible future effects on the stock market, but he's keeping his investments in Wall Street for now.

Public attitudes about the economy haven't changed much over the last six months, despite well-publicized problems at big companies like Enron and WorldCom. People have become slightly more nervous about the economy's future prospects and jobs, say those who track such attitudes.

"It's very disheartening," said the 50-year-old Anderson, who is from Atlanta. "I'm still riding the stock market out ... and I'm hoping everything is corrected very soon."

President Bush was traveling to New York on Tuesday to outline how he will address growing public concerns about big companies that misrepresent their financial picture.

Bush said Monday that a "key element of economic growth is consumer and investor confidence in our markets and in the integrity of corporate America. And right now, that confidence has been shaken."

The public is sending mixed signals about the economy, say economists and opinion researchers.

The number of investors who say they will put more money or less money in the market has not changed significantly over the last six months, said Thomas Riehle, president of the polling firm of IPSOS Reid, which polls for Business Week and the Cook Political Report.

"Investors are reserving judgment as opposed to making new judgments," Riehle said. "I wouldn't expect to see investors running for the exits."

Greg Cole, a 34-year-old corrections officer who lives in Mercersburg, Pa., said he isn't worrying much about the ups and downs of the stock market.

"I'm in it for the long-term," he said. "I really don't pay much attention to it. I'm young yet."

One reason many people don't panic with each gyrations is that so many have their investments in programs like 401(k) retirement accounts, economists say.

"Most of the money that goes into the stock market is almost on automatic pilot," said economist Mark Zandi, chief economist at Economy.com, a consulting firm in West Chester, Pa. "It takes an effort to stop those flows. The market would be in much worse shape if contributions weren't on automatic pilot."

ABC News pollster Gary Langer said "all the hand wringing about the effect of corporate irresponsibility has been somewhat overblown."

Consumers have continued to spend on big items like cars and homes.

"Consumers certainly recognize that inflation is still low, interest rates are low," said Richard Curtin, director of consumer surveys at the University of Michigan. "That's helping to maintain their spending."

Riehle said his polling suggests "people have grown more comfortable with their household budgets compared to six months ago."

Economist Ken Mayland of ClearView Economics in Pepper Pike, Ohio, said he sees many signs that the economy is growing stronger, including healthy consumer spending and increased industrial production.

Harris County investigates allegation against fire marshal

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County's fire marshal should know by the end of the month if a sexual harassment complaint against him will put his job in jeopardy.

County Attorney Mike Stafford has the option of seeking Fred Windisch's removal from office if he determines the marshal acted inappropriately or engaged in any misconduct with an assistant who claims Windisch sexually harassed her.

Stafford hopes to have his inquiry complete in time for the next Commissioners' Court meeting, scheduled for July 23.

Harris County District Attorney Chuck Rosenthal also is investigating the allegations against Windisch and whether any state laws were broken.

Laurie Olson, who worked as office manager at the fire marshal's office from November 2000 to February 2002, claims Windisch raped her at an Austin motel in 1999. She said the pair later began an affair. Olson, who never reported the rape allegations to police, had previously worked for Windisch when he was chief of the Ponderosa Volunteer Fire Department.

Windisch, who became Harris County's fire marshal in January 2000, denies Olson's rape and harassment allegations.

A number of commissioners' court members have said they have lost faith in Windisch, who also came under scrutiny last year for hiring an expensive private fire-fighting company to battle a large wood fire.

work extends to Disney World.

"This is something special the students wanted to do for the Centennial," said Jordan, who was enthusiastic that so many could be involved.

Each horse has a different design, although red, white and blue colors reflecting Sept. 11, predominate. The original designs include a sunset scene, the six flags under Texas, a section of the Panhandle map with Gray County noted, windmills, a rooster design in the horse's head, a set of eyes with a tear, Indians, cowboys, oil wells, barbed wire and checkered decorated — a wonderful example of creativity by some Pampa youth.

The centennial "Texas" project will be looking for a permanent home after the October celebration.

POLICE

Currently, the city contracts — for $50,000 annually — with the sheriff's office to provide jail services because the city no longer has a jail.

Asked how the two forces of officers would be combined if the change is made, Copeland said current Pampa police officers would not automatically come on board. He said, "... they would have to apply over here" for jobs with the sheriff's office.

Peet agrees with the others that there would be a cost savings now for the city but says there is much to consider before making a decision.

"We can't look at just today," he said, "We have to look at the impact five, 10 and more years down the road. We want to look at all aspects. Yesterday was our first real meeting. There are lots of questions ... questions about manpower, additional responsibilities, equipment ... there's a whole gauntlet of things to look at."

But from one financial savings aspect, Peet said city taxpayers who also pay county taxes are now paying for two law enforcement agencies.

The current timing of the talks was made "opportune" by the recent retirement of Pampa Police Chief Charlie Morris, Robbins said.

No advertisements for a new chief have been published and Ken Hall, emergency management director and former deputy police chief, is serving as interim chief.

Also, Robbins said, "I, the sheriff and others have been asked about this by citizens who want to know if there could be a consolidation of law enforcement under one umbrella.

"It would save a considerable amount of money if this can be accomplished," the mayor said.

"It can begin a process of helping to solve some of the city's financial problems. We really are trying to solve some of these financial problems that we face from year to year in the city budget and in the county.

"It's one of the things that somehow we have to get a handle on ... if we don't, there's not a light at the end of the tunnel unless we start a cooperative effort between the city and the county," he added.

Immigrants unhappy after FBI search dozens of jewelry stores

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Customers usually enter Tariq Hussain's jewelry store browsing for diamonds or gold rings. Recently, he was visited by people looking for something much more sinister.

Hussain's Intrigue Jewelers kiosk in suburban Pittsburgh was one of several across the nation searched by FBI agents hunting for ties to the al-Qaida terrorist network.

"They took everything, my paperwork, bills, my computer, my checks," said Hussain, 27, a recently discharged U.S. Army mechanic. "I told them, 'I don't have any links to anything like that.'"

About 75 stores have been searched by investigators hoping to discover financial backing for terrorist groups, said a law enforcement official, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The raids have taken place in several cities over the past two weeks, including Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Atlanta and New York. Dozens of foreigners, mostly from Pakistan, have been detained or questioned.

The shop owners have been asked about their accounting practices and whether they send money to any foreign organizations on a regular basis. They also are asked whether they support al-Qaida or know anyone who does, officials said.

Immigration attorney Neil Rambana, who is representing three Pakistani men and a woman from Nepal arrested in a raid at the Governor's Square mall in Tallahassee, Fla., said the FBI and INS were on a "fishing expedition."

"There is no proof and no one has presented any evidence that would put these people under suspicion," Rambana said. "This was all about abusing people's rights in the hopes that there were a few guilty people among them."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service declined to comment on the raids, other than to acknowledge they had taken place. A U.S. official said more than a dozen people are still in detention following the raids.

Justice Department spokesman Bryan Sierra said immediately after the raids that federal agencies were "looking at illegal immigrants working at kiosks," but he refused to elaborate.

The largest raids took place between June 28 and July 2. Agents swept jewelry stores in Pennsylvania, Florida, California, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and North Carolina. Since then, smaller raids have taken place in Texas, California and Massachusetts, officials said.

Most of the raids involved Intrigue Jewelers franchises, which are licensed through Gold Concept Inc., a Florida company owned by Orlando businessman Arif Rajan.

Rajan's attorney, Phillip Calandrino, said neither the company nor its owner have terrorist ties.

He said Rajan, a native of Pakistan and a U.S. citizen since 1991, has been cooperating with the FBI for several months and has voluntarily turned over company records to investigators.

"He is just like any small businessman that you might run into. He didn't do anything wrong," Calandrino said.

President defends Texas oil dealings as he proposes corporate crackdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, on the defensive about current-day corporate scandals and his own record as a businessman a decade ago, pledged Tuesday to "expose and punish acts of corruption."

In a speech on Wall Street, the president was calling on the U.S. Sentencing Commission to recommend longer prison terms for corporate executives guilty of fraud and announcing a new task force for the pursuit and prosecution of corporate criminal activity.

According to a White House summary released in advance of the midmorning speech, Bush also wants to double the maximum prison term for mail fraud and wire fraud to 10 years, and strengthen laws criminalizing document shredding and other forms of obstruction of justice.

"The president wants to expose and punish acts of corruption, move corporate accounting out of the shadows, and protect small investors and pension holders," the White House statement said.

Bush addressed the controversy and its political implications for his administration at a White House news conference Monday.

"I'm an avid backer of the free enterprise system, but I also understand that that requires trust," said Bush, the first president to hold a master's degree in business administration. "And we've had some destroy the trust of the American people, and we need to do something about it."

On Wall Street, Bush was additionally calling for:

- New provisions to strengthen the ability of the Securities and Exchange Commission to freeze improper payments to corporate executives while a company is under investigation.
- Publicly traded companies to prevent corporate officers from receiving loans from their own companies.

—Stock markets to require that a majority of a company's directors — and all members of the company's audit, nominating and compensation committees — have no material relationship with the company so that they are truly independent.

It was unclear how much his get-tough message would penetrate public outrage over the scandals at business giants such as Enron and WorldCom. At Monday's press conference, Bush was bombarded by questions about his record as a director at Harken Energy Corp. in the early 1990s. The SEC forced the company to amend its books to reflect millions of dollars in losses that had been hidden by the sale of a subsidiary to a group of insiders.

As Bush described it Monday, when the SEC cried foul on Harken's sale of a subsidary to a partnership of its own executives, which had the effect of concealing $10 million in losses, "There was an honest difference of opinion as to how to account for a complicated transaction."

The president rejected comparisons to Enron Corp., where sham off-the-books partnerships were used to hide hundreds of millions of dollars in losses. Arthur Andersen LLP was the accounting firm in both cases.

Asked if he, as a member of Harken's board at the time, approved of the questionable transaction, Bush shrugged. "You need to look back on the director's minutes," he said.

Bush, who was on the company's audit committee, was the subject of a separate insider-stock trade investigation. The SEC took no action against Bush in that inquiry, which also found he had disclosed his sales of Harken stock later than the law requires on four occasions.

We've opened Pandora's box

Once you've opened Pandora's box, you can never close it again.

In Greek mythology, the god Zeus created the first woman — beautiful and gifted — and named her Pandora. He also gave her a box, warning her never to open it.

Pandora couldn't stand it. She had to open the box and when she did, she released all the ills of the world — disease, war, pestilence, death, among them.

In my opinion, cloning is a Pandora's box. So is atomic energy. Mankind has acquired this knowledge and there is no going back.

A scientist on a news program I watched last week described cloning as "unstoppable."

Regardless of any laws that are passed, man will continue to use this knowledge. Many will use cloning to do good, others will use it for gain, and some will use it for evil.

This is what man has done since time began. When mankind learned to make tools, it also learned to make weapons.

DEE DEE LARAMORE
EDITOR

We discovered that substances can heal — and kill.

In Christian history, a story similar to Pandora's box is told. In the book of Genesis, God creates Adam and Eve and places them in the Garden of Eden. He tells them they can eat anything they want, except for fruit from the Tree of Knowledge.

Like Pandora, Eve cannot resist the temptation. She bites the apple and offers some to Adam. Suddenly, their eyes are opened and they recognize that they are naked.

They have acquired this knowledge. Adam and Eve can never go back to blissful ignorance. They must leave paradise.

I don't know why it's the woman who succumbs to curiosity in both these tales. As far as I can tell, it has been primarily men who have "opened the box" throughout history.

All the laws in the world will not stop persons who have the knowledge to create life from doing so.

Laws will be needed to set limits on how this knowledge will be used. These laws won't keep those who plan to use cloning for evil purposes from doing that. They'll only provide a means to punish those who are caught.

It's frightening to think of how this knowledge can be used. It's also heartening to know there are many ways that it can be a blessing. The principles of cloning can create stem cells to correct genetic diseases and even "grow" organs for transplant. Research indicates that this knowledge can be used to heal spinal cord injuries and reverse paralysis.

No matter if the knowledge is used for good or bad. The bottom line is — the box is open. We cannot go back.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Only the facts, please

The article of June 28, "Court denies request by Skinner for DNA testing" makes some statements and leaves some impressions that are inaccurate, unfair, and extremely damaging.

The Pampa News has reported in good faith, but has certainly been provided false information. In fairness to you and your readers, I feel it necessary to point out the following:

The statement, "In December 2000, hair found clutched in Twila Busby's hand was reported by forensic scientists as belonging to Skinner." That statement is not true.

Ex-District Attorney John Mann told national media and The Pampa News that the report would state that. He made his statement before the lab report was available for public inspection and claimed he had been informed by phone. His inaccurate statement has been widely publicized.

The Gene Screen lab report states exactly the opposite. Instead of being Hank Skinner's hair, the report indicates it can't be ruled out that the hair is from Twila Busby herself "or from a maternal relative." I have copies of that report. Any citizen interested in the truth can get one.

To continue reprinting Mr. Mann's statement when proof of its untruthfulness is available in the lab report, should be avoided.

Another statement needs some clarification. You wrote "The 31st District Attorney at the time, John Mann, agreed to test any items that Proress requested."

This leaves the impression that Mann had the items tested. Although he made that promise on national television — his words and actions did not accord with each other. He selectively had only a few items of evidence tested.

Many things Mr. Mann left untested could shed light on who the murderer was. Some of the murder weapons weren't tested. The rape kit wasn't tested. Material under the victim's fingernails is still untested. She'd fought with her killer. Police photos of Skinner's body showed no scratches whatever. Wouldn't it be of interest to know who she scratched?

The news article quoted Mr. Mann as saying the DNA report showed no evidence that anyone else was present at the crime scene. The report indicates blood from another, as yet unidentified, person there.

It might also interest readers to notice that Judge Emmert (had) the appeal for DNA testing for nine months before ruling against it. The Skinner defense team has done everything it possibly can to speed up this process.

The state legislature authorized DNA testing. They don't want to execute any man unless his guilt is certain.

Since a young man's life is involved, great effort should be expended to ensure that what's printed is accurate. I appeal to you to dig deeper than (former district attorney Mann's) news releases and public statements. The News owes better than this to its readers. "Only the facts, please, only the facts."

Whatever a reader's view about capital punishment, surely we all agree that no one ought to die for a crime he did not commit.

Our 'image' needs to change

A recent letter to the editor spotlights the disarray of Pampa's local government and how this is affecting the "image" of this city.

These comments cause us to recall the words of Dr. Wm. J. Weida, a recently-retired professor of agricultural economics who graced our town in January with his presence and his insights regarding commercial pig factories. He once commented that "Hog factories will tear your community apart." Truer words were never spoken.

Add to that the dissolution of Pampa Economic Development Corporation which was mandated by at least 1,750 citizens. Although we had no part in the recent request for investigation of that body by the Attorney General's office, we agree that it needs to be done in order to resolve the issues.

The people of this area have every good reason to express outrage.

The truth is that the Panhandle of Texas is presently covered with pigs to the tune of one million or more animals. The pig corporations continue to apply for permits to expand these numbers.

Separate from that is the latest plan to produce at least four million more pigs per year in the four-county area of Moore, Sherman, Hutchinson and Hansford counties, to be slaughtered at a packing plant near Dumas, plus the 50,000 pigs planned for Pampa by National Pig Development which will guarantee more in the future.

This "image" desperately needs to be changed!

Why July Fourth is so important

OK, do you want to live in an independent United States, or would you prefer to be incorporated into a world government?

It's no contest, as far as I'm concerned. I will answer to no laws except those of the United States. I believe it would be a crime if the present generation resubmerged the United States into a world empire after our forefathers fought a bitter war to get us out of one.

And why did they do that? Because they believed that the people in this land ought to have the right to govern themselves, to write their own laws, to set up their own form of government. That's what the Declaration of Independence states: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness — that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

There is the essence, the principles of the American Revolution.

CHARLEY REESE
COLUMNIST

Rights come from God and cannot be taken away or transferred. That's what "unalienable" meant. Our rights, so our forefathers believed, are beyond the reach of man.

The sovereignty lies with the people, not with the government. The people set up the government for the sole purpose of protecting their rights. Its only "just" powers are those given to it by the people.

When government abuses the rights of the people, the people have the right to overthrow it. That, of course, is just what they did with the British colonial administration. They seceded from the British Empire.

Later in the Declaration, this right to revolution is emphasized. It states: "But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government."

So whenever Americans see a lot of abuses and usurpations of their rights that show a pattern of intending to place them under a non-free government, they not only have the right but the duty to throw that government off. And the only way a despotic government can be thrown off is with force and violence.

Now, I hope, you see why the right to keep and bear arms "shall not be infringed." It would be stupid to say to people that they have the right and the duty to overthrow an abusive government but deny them the right to have the means to do so. And the right to keep and bear arms is one of those unalienable rights that comes from God, not from the government. That's why Americans should oppose licensing gun owners. Rights don't need a government license, and if a government license is required, then it is not a right.

America, as it was conceived by our Founding Fathers, was the most wonderful country in the history of mankind. Naturally, we have messed it up, but at least as a minimum, today's generation of Americans should not surrender the independence of their country to any type of international government.

The trick is to back off and look at the big picture. Don't ever give up what you are celebrating July Fourth. Your freedom depends on it.

Gun play in Israel kills one

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian gunman opened fire on Israeli police officers just outside the walled Old City of Jerusalem on Tuesday, wounding one, and a passer-by was killed in the ensuing gunbattle, police said.

The shooting came after a Palestinian militant died in the West Bank, apparently as a result of a clash with Israeli troops, and just before a second round of high-level meetings between Israeli and Palestinian officials aimed at easing tensions after 21 months of violent conflict.

The Jerusalem shooting occurred when a policeman spotted a Palestinian man who looked suspicious close to Herod's Gate, which leads into the Old City, and tried to check him, police spokesman Kobi Zrihen said. The gunman drew a pistol and shot the policeman. The wounded police officer was in moderate to serious condition, said Yael Bossem-Levy, spokeswoman for the Hadassah Hospital at Ein Karem.

The passer-by, whom police described as an Arab, was shot and killed in the fire. Earlier police said it was the gunman's fire that killed the passer-by, but police then said they weren't sure since officers also fired shots, trying to stop the fleeing gunman. A man's body, covered in black plastic, was seen under a tree.

Police erected road barricades, vacated the area and launched a search for the gunman, and a suspect was arrested about an hour later.

The shooting occurred in the eastern section of the city, an area dominated by Arabs and normally bustling with people shopping in local markets.

Samir Abbed Rabbo, a U.S. citizen from Clifton, N.J., said he saw the gunman pull out a pistol from his jacket and fire at the officer.

"I thought it was a plastic gun," Abbed Rabbo said. "I tried to call him to say 'what the (expletive) are you doing?' He threw his gun away and all of a sudden there were about 20 policemen shooting all over the place."

In the West Bank shooting, a Palestinian gunman bled to death before he made it to the hospital, the militant group Islamic Jihad said. The group said Moamar Daraghmeah was armed and on a mission against Israeli targets when he set off from Yamoun village in the West Bank.

Daraghmeah, 30, was brought to a hospital in nearby Jenin but he had already bled to death, said Haitham Abu Moudis, a nurse from the Palestinian Red Crescent.

The army said it was investigating the shooting.

Since back-to-back suicide bombings two weeks ago killed 27 Israeli citizens, most villages and towns in the West Bank have been effectively occupied and locked under curfew. The Islamic Jihad has killed scores of people in suicide bombings inside Israel.

Lawyer defends suspects in U.S. reporter's slaying

HYDERABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The lawyer for three of the four defendants in the kidnap-slaying of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl claimed Tuesday that the prosecution fabricated the case to appease American anger over the journalist's death.

In his second day of closing remarks, lawyer Rai Bashir said testimony and evidence against his clients was inconsistent, uncorroborated and possibly fabricated.

Briefing reporters after the closed-door session, Bashir said he accused prosecutors of pursuing the case at the behest of "foreign enemies."

"They don't care for the country and countrymen but have a lust for dollars," Bashir said. "They are just trying to please their foreign masters."

Reporters are not allowed into the courtroom during the trial, but lawyers brief them after the sessions.

Chief prosecutor Raja Qureshi declined to comment on Bashir's remarks.

Bashir's clients — Salman Saqil, Fahad Naseem and Sheikh Muhammad Adeel — have been on trial since April 22 along with the principal defendant Ahmed Omar Saeed Sheikh, who is being represented separately.

Pearl, the Journal's South Asia bureau chief, disappeared in the southern city of Karachi on Jan. 23 while investigating links between Islamic militants in Pakistan and Richard C. Reid, who was arrested in December on a flight from Paris to Miami with explosives in his shoes.

Shortly afterward, e-mails with photos of the journalist were sent to news publications. They were signed by a previously unknown group demanding better treatment for the suspected Taliban and al-Qaida men being held in Cuba by the American military.

Police said the FBI traced the e-mails to Naseem, who then identified Saeed as the mastermind. In statements to the court, all four have claimed police fabricated evidence against them.

On Tuesday, Bashir said prosecutors had failed to prove that the e-mails were sent from Saeed's laptop computer and that Internet records showed Saeed did not even use his account on the day when one of the e-mails was sent.

Bashir said the prosecution case was riddled with inconsistencies relating to the dates of his clients' arrest and the serial numbers of the laptop and other equipment allegedly used to produce and send the e-mails.

He also accused police of failing to follow up leads that might indicate other people were involved. Documents showed that calls were made from a mobile phone of Pearl's for a month after he disappeared, and for three weeks after his clients had been arrested, Bashir said.

Bashir noted that police accused other witnesses of lying when testimony differed.

"In such circumstances, when the investigating officer is denying the evidence of other prosecution witnesses, the court could imagine that the case was fabricated on false grounds and ... there are doubts," Bashir said. "The benefit of that doubt should go to my clients."

Summer Recreation Program

(Left-right) Terrell Johnson and Brendon Rice concentrate on a beading project they learned in the City of Pampa Summer Recreation Program arts and crafts class. Approximately 100 students participated in the City of Pampa Summer Recreation Program during the month of June. Six different recreational activities were taught at Pampa Middle School. Arts and crafts was taught by Sarah Porter and Stefani Goldsmith; volleyball and beginning Spanish by Mike Lopez; basketball by Dustin Johnson; and gymnastics and cheerleading by Katy Cavalier. Each two-week class taught the basic skills and fundamentals of the activity and the students received certificates upon completion of the class. According to Summer Recreation Coordinator Melody Youree, many of the 100 students enrolled for numerous classes and remained at the school for all four sessions offered each day.

Survey: Catholic-Protestant gap growing in Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Roman Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland are increasingly divided in their outlook and less willing to live and work together, a survey published Tuesday found.

The Northern Ireland Life and Times Survey, based on interviews with 1,800 adults conducted in October-December 2001, documented substantial Protestant antagonism to the 1998 peace deal.

The study, which has a margin of error of around 1 percent, found strong majorities on both sides of the community did share one key belief — that the distinction of British Protestant and Irish Catholic would split their society forever.

Among Catholics surveyed, 54 percent said they were happy with the peace process, while just 26 percent of Protestants shared that optimism. Many more Protestants registered their feelings as either "mixed," "unhappy," "disappointed" or "betrayed."

While two-thirds of Catholics said they felt confident or optimistic about the future, as high a proportion of Protestants said they had mixed feelings or fears. And while 65 percent of Catholics said they believed both sides of the community had benefited equally from the peace process, 63 percent of Protestants countered that Catholics had benefited more.

Perhaps most surprisingly — given that the core of the peace deal involves a joint Catholic-Protestant government formed in 1999 — both sides of the community increasingly say they would prefer to live, work and send their children to schools exclusively among their own.

While majorities still prefer to mix, the survey found that 32 percent of Protestants and 22 percent of Catholics favor single-religion neighborhoods; 21 percent of Protestants and 14 percent of Catholics prefer single-religion workplaces; and 37 percent of Protestants and 29 percent of Catholics want their children kept academically apart. All these figures represented substantial rises from the 1999 survey's responses to the same questions.

Turkish deputy premier calling for early election

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Deputy Prime Minister Mesut Yilmaz called for a new government Tuesday as the ruling coalition crumbled further with the resignation of three more Cabinet ministers, bringing the two-day total to six.

Yilmaz issued the call a day after three ministers, including Deputy Premier Husamettin Ozkan, and 18 lawmakers resigned from ailing Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit's Democratic Left Party, bringing the country's coalition government to the brink of collapse.

On Tuesday, Education Minister Metin Bostancioglu and state Ministers Hasan Gernici and Mustafa Yilmaz as well as three other lawmakers resigned.

The resignations were a serious blow to Ecevit's efforts to remain in power despite being hospitalized and suffering from various ailments during the past two months. They also could hinder his party's drive to pass European Union-required legislation, such as abolishing the death penalty and expanding rights for minority Kurds.

Ecevit ignored growing calls for him to resign and reshuffled his cabinet Tuesday to fill three of the empty posts, the Anatolia news agency reported.

The political chaos comes as Turkey has taken over leadership of the international peace-keeping force in Afghanistan and Washington is considering military action against Iraq. Turkey borders Iraq and hosted coalition aircraft during the Gulf War.

The first to resign was Ozkan, who was ordered to quit by Ecevit after rumors surfaced that Ozkan was negotiating in secret with coalition partners to replace the ailing premier.

Ozkan's departure triggered an exodus of party legislators tired of Ecevit's iron-fisted methods and who believed that the government was slowly falling apart under the ailing Ecevit, who seemed determined to hold on to power.

"Mr. Ozkan was the glue that held this coalition government together," Yilmaz, leader of the center-right Motherland Party, told private Channel D television. "It can be asked now how this government will continue without him."

As the coalition government crumbled, the eyes of political observers in Ankara turned to Economy Minister Kemal Dervis, who recently said he was planning to take a more active role in politics.

Vogue Cleaners - outstanding service

Vogue Cleaners is proud of the outstanding services the business provides for its customers.

Owned by Don and Dorothy Rosenbach, the cleaning establishment has new cleaning equipment in operation. Two new pieces of equipment — a brand-new pants press and a finishing board — have recently been installed at the local cleaners at 1542 N. Hobart.

Rosenbach said additional new equipment has been ordered and will soon be operating at the business.

Many services are offered to customers by Vogue Cleaners that none of its competitors provide, said Dorothy Rosenbach.

Cedar bags are available for purchase at the local business. These bags are used to place winter woollens inside to protect them from moths.

"Particular cleaning for particular people" is the motto at the local business. "We try to do the best that can be done," she said.

Hand pressing shirts is one of the many services provided. Dorothy said her staff is quite skilled in hand pressing, and that the quality is much better than machine pressed garments.

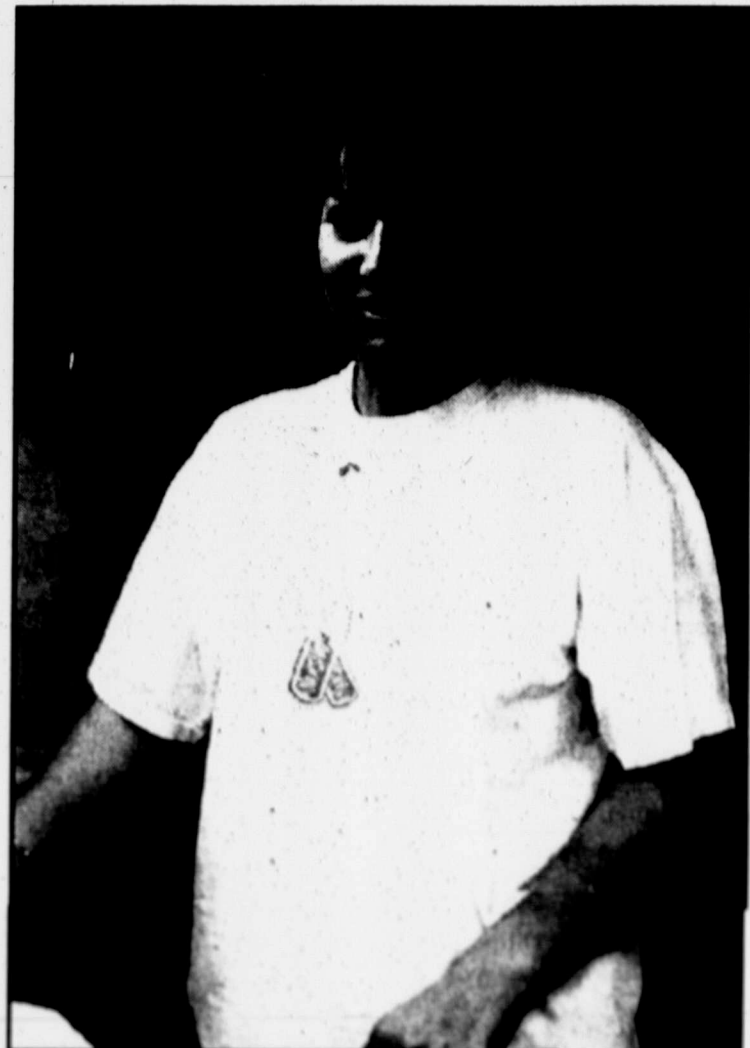

Vogue Cleaners also is the only cleaning establishment in town to use Smithsonian wedding boxes to preserve wedding dresses for their customers, said Dorothy.

The Smithsonian Institute uses the special boxes to preserve historical garments and clothing of historical figures at its famous museum in Washington, D.C., she explained.

"The late President John F. Kennedy's suit is stored in one of the Smithsonian boxes," said Dorothy. "If those boxes are good enough to preserve his clothes, it ought to be good enough for Velia Perez is one of the employees at Vogue Cleaners who takes great pride in her work. A presser, she carefully presses each garment at the local cleaners.

Lorena Fierro participates in one of the last phases of the cleaning process as she irons clothes.

the wedding dresses. "We are very proud of what we do with the wedding dress," she said, explaining that special attention and care is given to the wedding dresses.

Dorothy also said the business will assist in restoring older wedding dresses. She and her staff recently restored a 40-year-old wedding dress which had been worn by a local woman. The woman's daughter wanted to be married in the same dress, but it was stained.

She said the mother remembered that a guest spilled a beverage on the dress 40 years ago at the wedding. But the dress was not cleaned immediately following the nuptials, and the bride was unable to remember what liquid substance splattered her dress. Four decades later Vogue Cleaners was able to get the stain out, she said. Dorothy spent many long hours beading the dress to cover the rust stains on the lace caused by the lengthy time period the liquid remained in the fabric.

Alterations to the dress were also made by her staff to accommodate the daughter. "It was a lengthy process, but it was very worthwhile," she said. "It was a gorgeous dress."

Also, Dorothy said Vogue Cleaners is the only cleaners in town to provide petroleum cleaning to the garments and fabrics for its customers.

She said the odor caused by other chemical cleaning agents is not present at Vogue's Cleaners. "We believe in being kind to the clothes and to the bodies which wear them," she said.

"We send out our customers' leather products to be cleaned, just as do all the other cleaners in town," said Dorothy. "The quality of services provided by the leather cleaners we use is excellent."

She also said the local business sends out western hats to be cleaned and blocked, and said the people provide outstanding quality of work.

The Rosenbachs have been in business in Pampa since June 1983.

"We provide a drapery service to our customers in which we will take down the drapes, clean them and rehang them," she said. She added that the local business also has a special drapery machine. Dorothy also mends sweaters as well as beading garments. "We try our ultimate for all our customers," she said. Quilt and comforter cleaning are also a specialty of the business as well as antique linens.

"We also have reweaving of sweaters available," she said, explaining that Vogue has contracted with a professional reweaver for many years. "We send the garment off, and it takes awhile, but the quality of work is superb."

The business provides all kinds of window treatments for the home. Not only do they clean the window coverings and sell custom made drapes, but the business sells window blinds as well as all types of window coverings.

The cleaners also has a 24-hour drop box for their customers. Customers may simply drop the fabric in the box with their name and any instructions attached. Also, Vogue has a drive-up door for customer convenience.

"We try to do the best that can be done," she said.

Dorothy is very proud of her staff. "All employees are experienced," she said. "And we have the best alteration lady in town. We try the ultimate for our customers."

Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

The couple welcomes all old and new customers to visit them at Vogue Cleaners.

Have BATH FITTER® Install
A New Tub OVER Your Old One!

Commonly Asked Questions?

Q. Why install a tub liner instead of removing my old tub?
A. Removing a bathtub is difficult, disruptive, messy job. The process can damage the wall, the flooring and the plumbing and can put your bathroom out of use for days. A custom-molded Acrylic BATH FITTER tub liner is installed right over an old tub in a matter of hours and can be used the same day.

Congress moves to put together plan for new security department

By JIM ABRAMS
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heads of key law enforcement agencies slated to become part of the new Homeland Security Department urged Congress on Tuesday not to split them into pieces, as some lawmakers have suggested.

Officials from the Customs Service, Coast Guard, Secret Service and the just-created Transportation Security Administration told a House Judiciary subcommittee that all of their duties are intertwined and would suffer if not transferred entirely to the new agency.

"The greatest danger to any Coast Guard mission would be to fracture the Coast Guard," said Adm. Thomas Collins, commandant of the service. "The Coast Guard has always met its full set of responsibilities, regardless of department location."

Some members of Congress are concerned that the Coast Guard's nonsecurity duties, such as fisheries management and maritime search and rescue, could become lower priorities under the new department proposed by President Bush. The Coast Guard now is part of the Transportation Department.

"Some fear that the Coast Guard may be put in a position of compromising your other duties," said Rep.

Howard Coble, R-N.C. Questions have also been raised about the Secret Service, which investigates financial crimes such as counterfeiting in addition to protecting officials such as the president and overseeing security at major U.S. events.

The Secret Service director, Brian Stafford, told the panel that both duties "are thoroughly intertwined and interdependent. ... They are the heart and soul of the Secret Service," which is now part of the Treasury Department.

Bush said Monday he was encouraged by congressional action on his goal of moving many of the disparate agencies charged with security issues under one departmental roof.

Congress is moving "with speed and skill and a constructive spirit of bipartisan cooperation," he said at a news conference. Bush contrasted that with congressional delays in approving other White House priorities, including money for defense and anti-terrorism and giving him new trade negotiating authority.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., has given a dozen committees until Friday to vote on various pieces of legislation forming the new department. The measure is then to be given to House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, who is heading a special committee responsible for preparing the bill for House floor debate later this month.

A House Judiciary subcommittee hearing Tuesday is to explore the roles of various security agencies, including the newly created Transportation Security Administration, as part of the Homeland Security Department's mission to stop terrorist attacks within U.S. borders.

John Magaw, chief of the Transportation Security Administration, was to testify along with the heads of the U.S. Customs Service, the Coast Guard and the Secret Service.

The agency would combine 100 scattered federal entities with 170,000 employees and total annual budgets of at least $37 billion.

The Senate also hopes to act on legislation before

Bush vows to combat Hussein

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is vowing to "use all the tools at our disposal" to bring down Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Taking a now-familiar hard line but not specifically saying he intends to use force, Bush is again stirring speculation that the United States may be preparing an armed attack.

Describing himself as a patient person, Bush said at a White House news conference Monday that he was convinced "the world would be safer, more peaceful if there is a regime change" in Iraq.

Bush called reports of preparation for an attack speculation and he mildly admonished lower-level U.S. officials not to engage in it.

Still, he said, "It is the stated policy of this government to have a regime change ... and we'll use all the tools at our disposal to do so." He dismissed the question of whether he would make the move in his first term as hypothetical.

Earlier, the State Department demanded that Iraq "come clean" on its suspected weapons programs and confirmed it was conferring with Middle East governments on the threat that it said Iraq poses to its neighbors and the world.

"It's a major concern," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said.

Plans to oust Saddam with the cooperation of other Arab governments are known to be under consideration within the administration.

Bush has deflected questions about a possible U.S. attack on a regime he branded in January as part of an "axis of evil." His standard reply is that no war plan is on his desk.

However, he has not denied that plans are being prepared.

The rhetoric at the State Department followed last week's failure of the United Nations to persuade Iraq to permit the return of U.N. weapons inspectors after a 3 1/2-year lapse.

PFAA Summer Arts Program

Olivia Johnson worked diligently on her painting in the PFAA watercolor class taught by Kay Crouch and Carol Peet. Creativity flourished at the Pampa Fine Arts Association Summer Arts Program conducted at Pampa Middle School this year. Students worked with seven area artists to learn a variety of art styles and techniques. Linda Nowell taught pottery while Kay Crouch and Carol Peet taught classes in other media including watercolor. Janice Sackett taught china painting and James Hinkley taught printing techniques. Adults learned ribbon embroidery from program coordinator Ruth Barrett.

Multiple investigations to examine police conduct during arrest of teen

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The mayor, police department and district attorney have pledged to investigate the arrest of a teen-ager who was videotaped being slammed onto a police car and punched in the face while he was handcuffed.

Police Officer Jeremy Morse, a three-year police veteran, was relieved of duty and placed on administrative leave following the arrest of 16-year-old Donovan Jackson, police Lt. Eve R. Irvine said Monday.

"It was wrong," Jackson said at his attorney's office. The youth, whose right eye was red and swollen and who had a mark across his neck, said nothing else.

The police and sheriff's departments began separate internal investigations. The district attorney's office was also investigating, spokeswoman Sandi Gibbons said.

"What occurred within the video is extremely disturbing to the Inglewood Police Department and to the administrators of the city," she said.

The videotape was taken by a tourist Saturday at a motel across the street from the gas station where the arrest took place. It shows the teen hoisted to his feet by Morse and slammed onto the trunk of a police car.

The officer put a hand on the back of the teenager's neck, slugged him with his other hand and then appeared to choke him. Two officers appeared to intervene, with at least one trying to pull away the first officer's arm.

Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Richard Myers said the teen-age passenger became "combative" and was subdued with force and taken into custody. Jackson was booked for assault on a police officer.

A request to Inglewood police to interview Morse was referred to the Inglewood Police Association. Association officials did not return calls for comment Monday.

Roosevelt F. Dorn, mayor of the city of 115,000 in southwestern Los Angeles County, called the tape disturbing and pledged a thorough investigation.

"I also want the public to know that the conduct of this one officer does not reflect the attitude and conduct of the Inglewood Police Department," Dorn said in a news release.

What happened before the camera began taping was unclear.

The Inglewood officers were assisting two Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies who were investigating a car driven by Jackson's father that had an expired registration. Irvine said Jackson lunged at a sheriff's deputy, provoking the altercation.

The videotape showed a bloody gash over Morse's left ear. Irvine said the officer also had lacerations on his elbow and knee. He was treated at a hospital and released.

The family's lawyer, Joe Hopkins, said the teen is developmentally disabled and a special education student with no arrest record. "I doubt he is emotionally capable of doing what they say he did," Hopkins said.

According to Hopkins' account, the father and son pulled into the station to get gas and the son went to get potato chips. The deputies passed by and came back, then ordered him against the car, Hopkins said.

"From there it went crazy," he said.

Summer Recreation Program

(Left-right) Coach Mike Lopez helps Nathan Sprinkle practice his serve in the Summer Recreation volleyball class. Approximately 100 students participated in the City of Pampa Summer Recreation Program during the month of June. Six different recreational activities were taught at Pampa Middle School. Arts and crafts was taught by Sarah Porter and Stefani Goldsmith; volleyball and beginning Spanish by Mike Lopez; basketball by Dustin Johnson; and gymnastics and cheerleading by Katy Cavalier. Each two-week class taught the basic skills and fundamentals of the activity and the students received certificates upon completion of the class. According to Summer Recreation Coordinator Melody Youree, many of the 100 students enrolled for numerous classes and remained at the school for all four sessions offered each day.

NOTEBOOK

FOOTBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — The expansion Houston Texans have reached a verbal agreement with free-agent linebacker Keith Mitchell, a television station reported Monday.

Sources told KRIV in Houston that Mitchell, who played for the New Orleans Saints last year, has reached an agreement in principle for a one-year deal with the Texans.

Texans General Manager Charlie Casserly declined comment.

Mitchell had 6 1/2 sacks, an interception and returned two fumbles for touchdowns with the Saints last year.

BASEBALL

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jason Giambi and the New York Yankees keep insisting they aren't home-run hitters.

Yet baseball's leading longball team now has the game's Home Run Derby winner.

Giambi overcame Sammy Sosa's dazzling display of power early and easily beat him 7-1 in the final Monday night.

"I think I'm a gap hitter that hits a lot of home runs," Giambi said after going deep 25 times.

Giambi, who has 22 of the Yankees' major league-leading 134 homers, joins Tino Martinez, the player he replaced in New York, as the only Yankees to win the Home Run Derby.

After Sosa hit seven 500-foot homers in the first two rounds, including three that left Miller Park on the fly, the Chicago Cubs slugger could only go deep once in the final.

HOCKEY

DALLAS (AP) — A new coach and new players for the Dallas Stars. The same recurring theme from an owner who wants another Stanley Cup.

The Stars missed the playoffs last season, ending a five-year postseason run that included winning the 1999 Stanley Cup, but owner Tom Hicks is confident that his team is ready to make another run at a championship with the additions of right wings Bill Guerin and Scott Young and defenseman Philippe Boucher.

"We've got a great nucleus of talent and great talent on our team," Hicks said Monday. "These are the missing ingredients our nucleus has missed to return us into position for the Stanley Cup."

General manager Doug Armstrong had focused his attention on the three new players before free agency began July 1. He got them all signed in the first week.

Guerin was the prize catch, the NHL's most sought-after free agent after scoring a career-high 41 goals for the Boston Bruins last season. He had many offers, but was impressed by Hicks' commitment.

The Pampa Junior Girls All-Stars won the District 1 Softball Tournament and are going to the State Tournament to be held July 27-30. They will be having a fund-raising dance Friday night from 9 to 12 at the Optimist Club to help pay expenses for the trip. Ages 12 to 15 are welcome. Team members are (front row, l-r) Meredith Coutts, Whitney Wichert, Nicole Clark and Stephanie McVay; (middle row, l-r) Jackie Gerber, Cassy Tice, Amy Youree and Autumn Darden; (third row, l-r) Maggie Hopkins, Callie Cobb, Logan Winkelman and Kenzi Nickell; (back row, l-r) coaches Randall Tice, Layne Clark and Doug Youree. The Pampa All-Stars won the District 1 Tournament at Dumas by beating Borger 10-4 in the finals. They dominated the tournament, outscoring their opponents 56-13.

Aggies plan Amarillo golf tournament

AMARILLO — The fifth annual Scholarship Classic Golf Tournament, hosted by the Amarillo A&M Club and Amarillo A&M Mother's Club will be held Aug. 10, starting at 8 a.m. at Ross Rogers Golf Course East in Amarillo.

The four-person scramble will have a shotgun start. Entry fee is $70 per person.

Each player will receive a quality polo shirt, green tee with golf cart included, sleeve of golf balls, lunch provided by Hoffbrau and free drinks. Entry deadline is Aug. 2, or first 100 paid participants, non-refundable.

Prizes will be paid to the top two teams for three flights. Also, prizes are available for closest to pin and longest drive. Also, prizes will be available for closest to the pin and longest drive.

This is a scholarship golf tournament benefiting Amarillo-Texas panhandle students, who are going to Texas A&M University.

To sign up, contact Steve Sykes at 806-886-8693 or Tom Horton at 806-463-1060.

Strike, steroids main topic at All-Star game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — John Smoltz, A-Rod and all the All-Star players, it seems, are talking about No. 9. Too bad they don't mean Ted Williams.

The next baseball work stoppage would be its ninth, and that was main topic — along with steroids — going into Tuesday night's showcase.

"You can't come into the All-Star break and not expect to deal with it and have everything be hunky-dory," Houston outfielder Lance Berkman said Monday. "Obviously, steroids and labor issues are the two dominant stories of the first half of the season."

Arizona outfielder Luis Gonzalez had to agree, reluctantly.

"The thing that's frustrating is that we're not talking about the All-Star game. We're talking about all the issues that take away from the luster coming from the All-Star game."

Commissioner Bud Selig, who lives in Milwaukee and formerly owned the Brewers, could tell things were amiss. He was booed Monday night when he presented the Home Run Derby trophy to Jason Giambi of the New York Yankees.

Earlier in the exhibition, Sammy Sosa became the first player to hit a ball completely out of Miller Park, sending a 502-foot drive through the open windows in left-center field.

But a thunder-and-lightning storm put a damper on the evening for a few fans in the sellout crowd of 41,732. The retractable roof at the 2-year-old stadium is very leaky, and Arn Tenhula, 85, had to resort to opening an umbrella in the second deck behind home plate — even with the lid closed.

"I was hoping this wasn't going to happen on national TV," sighed his daughter, Janet Ewald.

The Brewers tried to excuse the flaw in their $400 million ballpark.

"It's unrealistic to have 10 acres of roof that moves and not have a drop of rain," said Scott Jenkins, vice president of stadium operations.

Players, meanwhile, were worried about something else. "The guys know in the back of their minds that a strike is a possibility," Smoltz said. "But you can't let it take away from these three days. You can't stop playing baseball because of the doom or gloom."

Boston shortstop Nomar Garciaparra was one of the few to bring up Williams, the Hall of Famer who died Friday. The Red Sox have honored the "Splendid Splinter" by carving his No. 9 into left field at Fenway Park.

"I lost a friend," Garciaparra said. "I feel a part of him every time I step on the field."

Baseball will pay tribute to Williams on Tuesday night. The All-Star MVP award will be named in his honor, and there will be a pregame ceremony in which his son, John Henry, and one of his daughters are expected to be on the field.

Armstrong is an easy rider in second stage of Tour de France

SAARBRUECKEN, Germany (AP) — While many around him crashed or cramped, Lance Armstrong breezed through the second stage of the Tour de France under a scorching sun.

The three-time champion crossed the finish line in the middle of a pack after riding through a forested region of western Germany. He was 61st Monday, slipping to fourth place overall, but riding just as he planned.

"I was surprised by the huge crowds; I was impressed," said Armstrong, the U.S. Postal Service cyclist who is favored to win a fourth straight title.

Spain's Oscar Freire won the 112-mile stage and Switzerland's Rubens Bertogliati retained the leader's yellow jersey.

Thousands lined the route between Luxembourg and Saarbruecken, many cheering German sprint specialist Erik Zabel of the Telekom team. One woman had "Zabel" written on her stomach in his team's pink colors.

U.S. Postal officials said the team was sticking to its strategy of protecting Armstrong and riding in the front of the pack, where accidents are less likely, in the early stages. The Texan intends to step it up a notch in the later mountain stages, one of his many strengths.

"It was nervous today, but quite easy," Armstrong said. Some who sought to push the pace in the relatively flat stage ran into trouble.

Norway's Thor Hushovd shared the lead for much of the day but finished last after stopping several times to nurse a leg cramp. At one point, he hunched over his handlebars in pain and had to have his thigh massaged by a trainer. He struggled to the finish 19 minutes after the main pack.

There were four crashes, one involving Armstrong teammate Benoit Joachim, who wasn't seriously hurt. Spain's Samuel Sanchez of Euskaltel injured his right knee and right elbow in a crash and was taken to a hospital in Saarbruecken for X-rays.

Freire spoiled Zabel's homecoming in a sprint in the final few yards. Freire, the world road champion, sped over the line just ahead of Zabel and a pack of 176 other riders.

Freire finished in 4 hours, 19 minutes, 51 seconds, the same time as the main pack. Australia's Robbie McEwen placed second while Zabel, who wore the green jersey awarded to the Tour's fastest sprinter, was third.

"To return to my country in the green jersey, it's still not too bad," he said.

Bertogliati finished 29th but kept the yellow jersey he took from Armstrong on Sunday. Armstrong had lost the yellow jersey only once before — in 1999, the year of his first Tour victory.

Horoscope BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY For Wednesday, July 10, 2002.

You'll have an extraordinary year with many special happenings. You're starting a new luck cycle, being an unstoppable force right now. Be direct in your dealings with others. You will be unusually gracious and understanding, as you grow spiritually and emotionally. Understand what a powerful force you are, whether personally or at work. Your financial situation flips to the plus side this coming year, with a pay raise or job change. Curb a tendency to overspend, and, by your next birthday, you could have a nice nest egg. If you are single, you'll kiss that status goodbye, as you're likely to meet someone very special, if you haven't already. If you're attached, use this year to tie the knot, go on a second honeymoon or do something else you both have longed for. CANCER adores you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Make a decision to give more of yourself in your present domestic life. Sometimes you get so involved with causes or friends that you forget the importance of a key friend. Carefully consider options that surround a domestic offer. Tonight: Happy as a clam at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You might finally make a decision about a purchase that could make your daily life more fun or easier. Others might opt to let someone know how they feel about their relationships. Let feelings flow. Tonight: Find a reason to celebrate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Consider options that surround a money situation more carefully. Be smart and take an offer, even if it might cost you more than you're aware of. In the long run, you'll be a lot happier because of this advance or step you take. Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Express your positive personality. You're full of fun and understanding. You'll cruise through any project once you focus. Use your high energy and personality to clear your desk. Know that anything is possible right now. Tonight: You choose.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

You could be surprised by another's offer. Pinch yourself. Before you say yes, recognize the implications of going along with this associate's plan. Be sure this is OK with you. Consider a present carefully, knowing that you don't need to get it immediately. Tonight: Take a break from it all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Realize that you can have what you want without greasing the wheels of change. Consider your options. A meeting might be far more positive than you surmise. Carefully realize limits that revolve around a new friendship. Tonight: Go for what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Recognize what is happening with a work-related matter. An associate thinks you're the best thing since sliced bread! Grab an offer right now, even if you think it's too good to be true. Maintain a level of skepticism, and you will prevent disappointment. Tonight: Work as late as need be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

With new information and the ability to break patterns both emotionally and mentally, you will come out ahead. Accept an offer that might involve some travel or education. The more open you are to change, the better off you will be. Tonight: Take a drive. Listen to a favorite CD. Stop for an ice-cream cone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

An associate goes out of his or her way to make amends. Relate on a one-on-one level with this person, whether your bond is emotional or intellectual. As a result, you'll gain positively if you follow with another's beat. Tonight: Continue the theme. Dinner for two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Your fun-loving ways come out with a jovial associate. You cannot put a stop to what is happening here. Be more playful and high-spirited, going for the moment. Later on, in several months, you might look back at this period as one of your happier times. Tonight: Follow along.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Recognize a work opportunity. Zoom in and go for what you want. You have what it takes to help others be enthusiastic. Don't hesitate to be an office leader. Cruise through work! Schedule a checkup with the doc in the near future. Tonight: Do what you find relaxing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

A relationship might be more overwhelming than you realize. Loosen up with another, enjoying what he or she offers. Use that person as a muse, and you'll get a lot more done quickly. Your imagination goes pleasantly haywire. Tonight: Enjoy the moment.

Judge will be asked to decide fate of Ted Williams' body

By MIKE SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer

HERNANDO, Fla. (AP) — Ted Williams' estate will ask a judge to decide if the baseball great's body should be cremated or frozen, a move to try to resolve a family feud over the remains.

Al Cassidy, the executor of the estate, will file Williams' will in state court on Tuesday or Wednesday and ask the judge to rule on the issue, John Heer, a lawyer for Williams' oldest daughter, said Monday. Heer contends Williams wanted to be cremated.

The daughter, Bobby-Jo Ferrell, has accused her half brother, John Henry Williams, of moving their father's body from a Florida funeral home to Alcor Life Extension Foundation, where bodies are frozen.

She says John Henry Williams wants to preserve their father's DNA, perhaps to sell it in the future. The brother has not returned repeated calls seeking comment.

Ferrell plans to "rescue" her father's body from the cryonics company in Scottsdale, Ariz. She says the body already is frozen.

"My dad's in a metal tube, on his head, so frozen that if I touched him it would crack him because of the warmth from my fingertips," Ferrell told Boston's WBZ-TV. "It makes me so sick."

Karla Steen, a spokeswoman for Alcor, would not confirm Monday that Williams' body is at the facility. Ferrell has said she was told by the funeral home that the body was taken to Arizona.

Ferrell did not return several phone messages Monday and no one answered the door at her house. Bill Boyles and Pam Price, attorneys for the estate's executor, also did not return a phone message.

Ted Williams, the last major league hitter to bat better than .400 in a season, died Friday at age 83.

No funeral will be held, according to the wishes of the former Boston Red Sox slugger.

Two memorial services are planned on July 22 at Fenway Park.

George Hommel, a fishing buddy of Ted Williams, said it was a shame family members are fighting over the body.

"Something like this makes you sick to your stomach," he said.

1 Public Notice

NOTICE OF RECEIPT AND INTENT TO OBTAIN A VOLUNTARY EMISSION REDUCTION (VERP) AIR PERMIT APPLICATION.

Cabot Corporation, P.O. Box 5001, Pampa, Texas 79066-5001, has applied to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) for issuance of a Voluntary Emission Reduction Permit, Air Quality Permit NO. 49161, which could authorize changes to the existing operation of the Acid Treating Unit in order to obtain emission reductions. The facility is located three miles west of Pampa on US Highway 60, Pampa, Gray County, Texas. The following air contaminants will be evaluated for authorization: nitrogen oxides, carbon monoxide, sulfur dioxide, particulate matter, and organic compounds. This permit will not authorize new construction or an increase in emissions. This application was submitted to the TNRCC on August 30, 2001. The application is available for viewing and copying at the TNRCC central office, the TNRCC Amarillo regional office, and the Pampa City Hall, Office of Emergency Management, 200 West Foster, Pampa Gray County, Texas. The facility's compliance file, if any exists, is available for public review in the Amarillo regional office of the TNRCC. The TNRCC executive director has determined the application is administratively complete and will conduct a technical review of the application. PUBLIC COMMENT/PUBLIC MEETING You may submit public comments or request a public meeting or a notice and comment hearing to the Office of the Chief Clerk at the address below. The TNRCC will consider all public comments in developing a final decision on the application. The deadline to submit public comments is 30 days after newspaper notice is published. After the deadline for public comments, the executive director will prepare a response to all relevant and material or significant public comments. The purpose of a public meeting is to provide the opportunity to submit comments or ask questions about the application. A public meeting about the application will be held if the executive director determines that there is a significant interest in the application or if requested by a local legisla-

1 Public Notice

A public meeting is not a contested case hearing. After the final deadline for public comments following any public meeting or notice and comment hearing, the executive director will consider the comments and prepare a response to all relevant and material or significant public comments. If any comments are received, the response to comments, along with the executive director's action on the application, will be mailed to everyone who submitted comments or is on the mailing list for this application. OPPORTUNITY FOR A NOTICE AND COMMENT HEARING A person who may be affected by the emission of air pollutants from the site may request a notice and comment hearing. The TNRCC may grant a notice and comment hearing on this application if a written hearing request is filed within 30 days after publication of this newspaper notice. The purpose of a notice and comment hearing is to provide an opportunity to submit comments on the draft permit. If a notice and comment hearing is granted, all individuals who submitted written comments or a hearing request will receive written notice of the hearing. This notice will identify the date, time, and location for the hearing. Issues such as property values, noise, traffic safety, and zoning are outside of the Commission's jurisdiction to address in this proceeding. MAILING LIST In addition to submitting public comments, you may ask to be placed on a mailing list to receive future public notices for this specific application mailed by the Office of the Chief Clerk by sending a written request to the TNRCC Office of the Chief Clerk at the address below. INFORMATION Written public comments or requests for a public meeting or requests for a notice and comment hearing should be submitted to the office of the Chief Clerk, MC-105, TNRCC, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711-3087. For more information about this permit application or the permitting process, please call the Office of Public Assistance, Toll Free 1-800-687-4040. General information regarding the TNRCC can be found at www.tnrc.state.tx.us. Further information may also be obtained from Cabot Corporation at the address stated above or by calling Mr. Douglas B. Williams, environmental Coordinator at (806)661-3130. L-48 July 9, 2002

Accounting industry draws heat in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top WorldCom Inc. officials, along with auditor Arthur Andersen LLP and a Wall Street analyst, are drawing heat from lawmakers as the accounting scandal radiates political shock waves.

Senior executives of WorldCom clashed with a former auditor at a House hearing Monday over responsibility for nearly $4 billion in accounting improprieties at the major telecommunications company that have rocked already-battered U.S. markets.

WorldCom's former CEO and finance chief refused to testify to the House panel investigating the debacle, becoming the latest in a parade of corporate leaders who have trooped to the Capitol this year and invoked the Fifth Amendment.

President Bush, meanwhile, faced a rising chorus of calls from Democratic leaders and some Republicans — notably Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. — for the resignation of Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Harvey Pitt, in part because of Pitt's former ties to the accounting profession.

Aiming to shore up investor confidence, Bush was delivering a major speech in New York City on Tuesday on corporate responsibility and proposing tougher penalties, including jail time, for company officials who lie on financial statements.

"We'll vigorously pursue people who break the law. ... That will restore confidence" in the markets, the president told a White House news conference Monday.

Bush stood behind Pitt, saying he "was put in place to clean up a mess and he's working hard to do that."

Bush gave qualified support to legislation now before the Senate written by Banking Committee Chairman Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., that would tighten oversight of the accounting industry.

Accounting firms can no longer be trusted to police themselves, Sarbanes said in a Senate speech Monday as he began pushing for passage of the bill.

The Justice Department and the SEC, which has filed civil fraud charges against WorldCom, are investigating the company.

Those ongoing probes prompted the attorney for WorldCom's former chief executive officer, Bernard Ebbers, to advise him not to answer lawmakers' questions at the packed hearing of the House Financial Services Committee.

"I do not believe I have anything to hide," Ebbers said. When all the facts are out, he said, "I believe that no one will conclude that I engaged in any criminal or fraudulent conduct."

WorldCom's former chief financial officer, Scott Sullivan, also invoked his constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Former Andersen partner Melvin Dick, who did testify, said that auditors rely "on the honesty and integrity of the management of the company." He noted that Sullivan apparently has acknowledged he never told the accounting firm about the questionable bookkeeping.

Members of the panel — Democrats and Republicans alike — attacked WorldCom, the Andersen accounting firm and Wall Street analyst Jack Grubman, who promoted WorldCom stock while his Salomon Smith Barney firm did investment-banking business for the telecom company.

Health spending highest in Northeast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents in the Northeast spend more on personal health care than those in Western states like Utah, Idaho and Arizona, the government says, due to higher incomes and greater costs in cities.

Per capita health spending was 15 percent higher in Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island than in the rest of the country in 1998, according to the survey by the Department of Health and Human Services' Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

"Urban areas in general tend to be higher-priced than rural areas," said Anne Martin, one of the report's authors. "There's also more concentration of population that can support teaching hospitals and other specialized facilities that can cost more."

Katie Levit, who is in charge of national health statistics for the agency, cautioned that the numbers cannot be used to determine if residents of one state are getting better health care than those of another.

"People in lower-spending states may be younger, may be healthier, may live in lower-cost areas," Levit said. "It doesn't necessarily mean they're not getting adequate or effective care. More research needs to be done to unravel all of these effects."

Personal health care spending includes amounts that a person and his health plan pay for such things as hospital care, physician services and prescription drugs.

Agency economists conducted the study by examining Internal Revenue Service receipts for for-profit health care businesses, the American Hospital Association's Annual Survey of Hospitals and other data on population, wages and salaries. The study appears Tuesday in the journal Health Affairs.

In 1998, personal health care spending in the United States totaled $1 trillion. The national average per resident was $3,759.

In Massachusetts, which led all states, spending was $4,810 per resident. The average in New York was $4,706; Connecticut, $4,656; and Rhode Island, $4,497.

Washington, D.C., had spending of $6,656 per resident.

On the other end, Utah had the lowest health spending for 1998 — just $2,731 per resident. Idaho spending was $3,035 per resident; Arizona, $3,100; Nevada, $3,147; and New Mexico, $3,209.

The last time the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services examined state health spending figures was in 1991.

Tuesday's report showed that the slowest growth in spending was in the West. California's health spending per resident rose at average annual rate of 3.5 percent, from $2,690 in 1991 to $3,429 in 1998.

Some states saw huge growth. Maine's health spending per resident rose 7.3 percent annually, from $2,464 in 1991 to $4,025 in 1998.

Overall, however, the Plains region — which includes Kansas, Minnesota and Missouri — had the fastest average annual growth, 5.9 percent.

The report also examined per-person spending within the states for Medicare, the government's health insurance program for the elderly, and Medicaid, the health insurance program for the poor.

PFAA Summer Arts Program

Darian Snell and Ryan Thompson had fun using pastels in Kay Crouch's art class during the Pampa Fine Arts Summer Arts Program. Creativity flourished at the Summer Arts Program conducted at Pampa Middle School this year. Students worked with seven area artists to learn a variety of art styles and techniques. Linda Nowell taught pottery while Kay Crouch and Carol Peet taught classes in other media including watercolor. Janice Sackett taught china painting and James Hinkley taught printing techniques. Adults learned ribbon embroidery from program coordinator Ruth Barrett.
