OB unit's future in question

BY NANCY YOUNG
MANAGING EDITOR

The future of the obstetrics (OB) department at Pampa Regional Medical Center will be discussed at a noon meeting Thursday of the hospital's board members.

Norman Stephens, PRMC administrator, said Monday afternoon a news release will be issued following the board meeting on Thursday. Rumors have been circulating in the community that the OB unit will be closed.

He said the unit is being staffed temporarily by physicians out of Dallas who are handling the obstetric/gynecological needs of the local patients, including infant deliveries.

Obstetrician Dr. Mark Lobaugh moved from Pampa at the end of October to open a practice in California. Stephens said Lobaugh was in Pampa for four months.

The only other Pampa obstetrician, Dr. Ann E. Harral, said in a telephone interview Monday afternoon she has not been contacted about the possible closing of the unit although she has heard the rumors.

"No one from TRIAD (owner of the hospital), the hospital administration or the board of directors has talked to me or consulted me on this matter," said Harral.

She said she has not done any deliveries or any procedures since May.

"I have privileges to do surgeries and procedures, and I want to do the procedures," she said. She said while she was out on medical leave beginning in June, her physician has released her to return to delivering babies and doing procedures, but would not expand on why she is not treating patients at the hospital.

Harral did say she is seeing patients half-days in her office. She said she has been in Pampa since 1988 and said she is concerned about the patients in Pampa and the eastern Panhandle.

Harral said she was extremely disappointed Dr. Lobaugh left Pampa. "He was very good and he was well-liked," she said.

She said she was not aware of the board meeting until contacted by The Pampa News. The doctor said she would not comment further until after the board meeting on Thursday.

Stephens said the administration and board are trying to work out the situation.

"We are trying to handle it responsibly," he said. "We have coverage on the unit through the end of November. We don't want to close it."

Officials checking cause of a.m. fire

City Fire Marshal Gary Stevens today continued to search through the remains of a trailer house on Murphy Street destroyed in an early morning blaze, seeking an answer to how the fire started.

Shortly before 1 a.m. today, five Pampa Fire Department units and 11 firefighters were called to battle a structure fire at 916 Murphy. Despite their efforts, the residence was totally destroyed, according to fire reports.

Stevens said the home was furnished, but no one was living there. He said he believed the owner Teresa Brown was staying with a relative.

The fire appears to have originated in the living room, he said, but he had no other details to release early today as he continues to investigate the cause of the fire.

No injuries were reported.

Letter disturbs juror

No law keeps convicts from contacting jurors in non-threatening way

BY DEE DEE LARAMORE
EDITOR

When Ronnie Bob Martin of Pampa received a letter recently from the man he had helped sentence to 60 years in prison, he became upset. Very upset.

He said he never imagined that when he was chosen to serve on the jury that the person on trial would eventually have access to his name and address. He wanted to know if there were laws that would keep the person from contacting him.

"Now I have a convicted drug dealer writing me," Martin said.

Martin was one of 12 local residents who served on the jury which convicted Kerry Layne Zeek for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver on May 1, 2001. Zeek received a 60-year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections and was ordered to pay a $10,000 fine.

Zeek is presently serving out the sentence in the Clements Unit in Amarillo.

In a letter dated Oct. 24, Zeek wrote to Martin asking him to sign an affidavit saying that he had received an incorrect charge from the court regarding the punishment and attesting that the jury foreman had spoken of personal experiences during the deliberations, which is not allowed by law.

Zeek's letter, a copy of which was given to The News, is respectful and non-threatening.

Friends, co-workers plan benefit events for family

Friends and co-workers are joining forces to help local paramedic and former firefighter Tim Waldie and his family.

Rural Metro Ambulance service personnel are planning a garage sale, silent auction and bake sale this weekend to help raise funds for the Waldies, said Jenny Standerfer. Tim Waldie works part-time as a paramedic for the organization, she said.

Pampa Fire Department personnel are also assisting with the effort, and have established a fund for the family at National Bank of Commerce.

Barbara Waldie, 37, Tim's wife, died recently from cancer. She was one week away from being eligible for insurance, Standerfer said. As a result, the family is faced with all the medical bills and funeral expenses, she said.

The garage sale begins Friday, Nov. 8, at 8 a.m. at the Trinity Fellowship gym, 1200 S. Sumner. It will continue until 5 p.m.

On Saturday, Nov. 9, the garage sale reopens at 7 a.m. and will stay open until 4 p.m.

Local businesses and crafts people have donated as many as 30 items for a silent auction to be held in conjunction with Saturday's garage sale. Standerfer said. The auction ends at 3 p.m., she said. Tickets for a $1 donation will also be sold for a drawing for a half of a processed hog or a DVD player valued at $230, she added.

Hot dogs and soft drinks will be served, also, she said.

"My daughter Ashton (age 6) heard us talking about it and she said, 'I want to help. Can I sell lemonade?'" Standerfer said.

So there's lemonade available, too, from Ashley's Lemonade Stand.

Donations for the garage sale can be made by calling Standerfer at 669-2721 or Hilary at 669-1533. Raffle tickets are available through the ambulance, the Pampa Fire Department or by calling the previously listed telephone numbers.

Direct monetary donations can be made to the Tim Waldie Family Fund at National Bank of Commerce, 1224 N. Hobart.

Election will determine control of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Halfway through a presidential term buffeted by terrorism and divided control of Congress, Americans voted Tuesday in elections that offered both parties tantalizing possibilities for the balance of power but no sure bets.

Voters came out under snowy skies in Wisconsin, light-jacket weather in Texas and North Carolina rain to redraw the battle lines of a Congress sharply divided, to elect 36 governors, reshape legislatures and settle hundreds of local ballot questions.

Suspense was especially thick over the fate of the Senate. At the American Legion hall in Rolla, Mo., Democratic Sen. Jean Carnahan cast her ballot and invoked the comeback spirit of a native son in her tough race against Republican Jim Talent.

Missouri surprise. Republicans and Democrats each had at least an outside chance of taking control of Congress. But the prospect of more of the same — the GOP holding the House, Democrats commanding the Senate and President Bush navigating somewhere between the two — was also very much in play.

Capping a five-day, 17-city push to elect congressional Republicans and governors, Bush voted quietly at the Crawford, Texas, fire station. He offered a thumbs-up and turned it sideways as if to say there was no telling how the day would turn out.

"I'm encouraging all people across this country to vote," he said, before driving off to get ready to return to Washington.

The congressional balance was in Mark Muro's mind when he voted for Democrats at his Chevy Chase, Md., polling station. "I think, especially now, there's a need for balance and offsetting Republican power," said Muro, 42, an urban policy analyst. "Fiscal issues are at the forefront now and I think Democratic stewardship is important."

House and Senate control was important as well to Robert Kolodny, 37, a naval reservist in Cleveland who voted Republican and with domestic security with mind. "The main thing was to make sure Republicans get in," he said.

In the Chelsea district of Manhattan, photographer Jane Schreiberman, 52, voted a straight Democratic ticket. "I used to pride myself on voting for the best person," she said. "But I just don't want to give the Republicans any more leverage."

In Florida, where balloting problems left the 2000 presidential election unresolved for more than a month and then plagued the primary in September, voters came early to some polling stations and lines were long, but fast-moving once voting started.

The midterm elections were helping to determine whether Bush and his Democratic opposition can build a record to run on in 2004. For many voters, the issues and candidates they cared most about were closer to home.

In East Syracuse, N.Y., mechanic Joe David, 36, voted for Republican Gov. George Pataki for the third straight election. "He's done a good job as far as I'm concerned," he said. "I think he was a strong leader after 9-11 and I think he has helped make New York a better place to live."

Bush stumped in the Midwest and South to close out a vigorous campaign for Republican candidates. He implored Americans to return Senate control to his party and end the obstructionism he blamed on Democrats.

for — some allies," Bush told Missouri Republicans on Monday.

Democrats fought to motivate voter turnout in a district by district drive to reclaim control of the House and protect their whiskeys from the Senate.

At stake Tuesday: all 435 House seats, several dozen of which were hotly competitive; 34 Senate seats, of which six to eight looked like tossups; and the 36 governorships. Voters also were choosing state legislatures, now split almost evenly between the parties, and deciding more than 200 ballot initiatives in 40 states.

The first national campaign in the age of terror ended as many campaigns do.

Democrats needed a gain of seven seats to win control of the House; polls indicated that would be tough, but conceivable.

Republicans and Democrats each hold 49 seats and there are two independents.

With memories still fresh of the 2000 Florida balloting fiasco, and more than 200 counties around the country trying new voting equipment, the suspense was not just over winners and losers but whether counters would be able to tell the difference.

Federal observers were dispatched by the hundreds to polling places in 14 states in the most ambitious monitoring of the nation's ballot boxes since the 1960s civil rights era. Florida got the most attention.

The president's party normally loses ground in midterm elections, although Democrats managed to add to their numbers in 1998 even when President Clinton was in the throes of the Monica Lewinsky scandal.

Democrats had effective Senate control going into the campaign, thanks to the defection from the Republican Party last year of Vermont Sen. Jim Jeffords, a Democratic-supporting independent.

With the Oct. 25 death of Minnesota Sen. Paul Wellstone in a plane crash, and the appointment Monday of an independent as a temporary replacement for the upcoming lame duck session, it's now divided 49-49 with two independents.

Report: Bigger hospitals may mean better care

DALLAS (AP) — The state's first examination of medical centers' performance shows smaller, rural hospitals in poorer health while bigger institutions in metropolitan areas may mean better care.

Some of the highest mortality rates were found at smaller, community hospitals, according to the state-mandated Indicators of Inpatient Care report, released last month by the Texas Health Care Information Council.

The report used patient billing records to compare how well 351 hospitals handled 25 medical conditions or surgical procedures, including treatments for heart attacks, strokes and abdominal aneurysms.

Consumer groups hope that the report, which was intended to give consumers a basis for selecting the best hospitals for their procedures, will influence how hospitals are run.

"The whole purpose is to put pressure on them to improve quality," said Lisa McGiffert, a senior policy analyst for Consumers Union in Austin, told The Dallas Morning News in Tuesday's editions.

The state's strongest advocate for hospitals, the Texas Hospital Association, cautioned that the data based on 2000 billing records doesn't yet constitute a trend. At least one independent expert on health care in Texas called the report card "a very rudimentary measure but a step in the right direction."

"Hospitals are going to oppose this kind of effort, arguing that it's not risk-adjusted and that consumers don't understand it," said Dr. Phil Decker, director of the health care administration program in the School of Business at the University of Houston at Clear Lake.

"But it's never going to be done perfectly. There's always going to be flaws, which is why you do it often," he said. "If you find the same result over and over, you have to figure it's probably true."

The mortality figures were "above dispute," said Jim Loyd, the Health Care Information Council's executive director, because they were certified by each hospital during a lengthy review process this summer.

East Texas Medical Center in Athens had the state's highest mortality risk for heart attack patients, at 36.8 percent, the report showed.

In the same report, Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dallas County's 997-bed public hospital, was rated as having a 7.2 percent mortality risk. The statewide average was 10.8 percent.

"It is impossible that Athens is the worst place to go for a heart attack in the state of Texas," said Mike Thomas, vice president of strategic planning for the East Texas Medical Center Regional Healthcare System, which operates the Athens hospital and 12 others.

Thomas said the hospital's mortality risk for heart attacks doesn't seem to take into account the fact that East Texas Medical Center transfers its more treatable cardiac patients to other hospitals.

Two years ago, 23 inpatients died out of the 50 who underwent treatment for heart attacks at the Athens hospital. Thomas said most of the deaths were among elderly patients who were too sick or too unstable to be transferred for aggressive cardiac treatment at a larger hospital.

LETTER

However, Martin said he feels threatened, simply because he is being contacted by the man he helped convict.

"It is not illegal for an inmate to contact a juror after a trial unless he makes a threat," said Gray County Sheriff Don Copeland. Copeland confirmed that the same laws apply whether they involve convicts or private citizens.

Generally, jurors' names are open to the public after a trial ends. "It's a last ditch effort on (Zeek's) part," said District Attorney Rick Roach, who prosecuted the case in 31st District Court. "That matter was addressed in the first appeal by (Zeek's attorney). There's no substance to it."

Zeek's attorney initiated an inquiry and filed a motion for a new trial based on what had reportedly been said during the deliberations, Roach said. "The motion was denied," he said. "Overruled by operation of law."

The DA said jury misconduct was not considered on appeal, "because there wasn't any jury misconduct."

Roach said Zeek's conviction was confirmed on appeal, but a petition for discretionary review is pending before the Court of Criminal Appeals.

"The only error on record at all is a matter I brought up during the appeal hearing on the issue of deadly weapon finding," Roach said. "It was brought up in punishment instead of during the guilt or innocence phase."

A deadly weapon finding means that the jury has determined that a deadly weapon was used in the commission of the crime. In Zeek's trial, police officers testified that a .22 caliber revolver was discovered on the passenger side of the vehicle in which Zeek was riding when he was arrested.

Roach said he discovered the error shortly before arguments were presented on the appeal.

"I asked that it be deleted from the judgment. The court removed the deadly weapon finding from the judgment which changed the time before he would be eligible for parole," he said.

As a result, Zeek will be eligible for parole in 15 years, he said.

A recent amendment to the constitution caused the confusion, Roach said.

The jury was instructed that Zeek would first be eligible for parole within 15 years, when actually, with a deadly weapons finding, he would not have been eligible parole before he served half his sentence - 30 years.

"It's not my job to put people in prison forever," Roach said. "It's my job to see that justice is served."

Roach said he is satisfied that Zeek could be released in 15 years.

"I believe that was what the jury intended, because that was what the charge said."

So while persons convicted of crime have the right by law to contact the jurors who convicted them as long as they do not harass or threaten them in anyway, the jurors also have the right to not respond.

Apparently, that's how the American justice system works.

Study needed on pain source

Paying too much attention to a spouse's back pain doesn't help. It will only make it worse, the Associated Press reported Monday.

A study by two German psychologists presented to the Society for Neuroscience's annual conference Sunday indicates that pain increased for people whose spouses tried to help with massages, medicine and attention. Husbands or wives who downplayed the pain by leaving the room or distracting their spouse seemed to help more.

It doesn't say in the study, but I couldn't help but wonder, could it be that the unhelping spouse was somehow the cause of the pain?

You've heard the expressions, "pain in the neck" and "pain in the rear."

Since these guys were psychologists, you'd think they'd look into something like that.

"It's as if the spouse has become a stimulating cue for the pain," said Herta Flor, the University of Heidelberg psychologist who ran the study.

DEE DEE LARAMORE
EDITOR

Flor saw this, yet didn't go on to study why the spouse seems to stimulate the other spouse's pain.

Come to think of it, my spouse suffers from chronic back pain.

You don't think? ... Nah! Surely not ... Well, maybe ...

In fact, Vic and I are total opposites in a lot of ways, especially when it comes to being sick or in pain.

When I'm sick or hurting, I just want to go get in bed, shut the door, and be left totally alone. Food is the last thing on my mind.

Vic, on the other hand, believes (and medically he's right in most cases) that eating gives the body energy to fight off whatever is wrong with it. He also appreciates attention when he's sick - a lot of attention.

I think if I keep working when I'm sick, it'll eventually go away and I won't miss anything.

Vic thinks people who go to work when they're sick are guilty of giving the germ to everyone else.

He's the one who kicked a bad case of bronchitis on his own after about three weeks of being sick. I ended up in the hospital with double pneumonia after about two months of being sick.

"Don't you get tired of being right all the time?" I ask him as I massage my aching neck.

"No," he replies. "Would you rub my back?"

Consequences of uninsured

From the Victoria Advocate:
 At the end of September, the Census Bureau reported that the number of Americans who do not have health insurance rose again in 2001.

This came as no surprise, given the uncertain state of the economy for the past year. Most Americans under the age of 65 get their health insurance through their workplace, or the workplace of a spouse or parent. Because health insurance in the United States is so closely linked to employment, a rising level of unemployment directly leads to a rising number of uninsured people in all age groups except those over age 65.

What difference does it make that more people do not have health insurance? To answer that vital question, the Institute of Medicine of the National Academies, an independent institution that provides health policy advice, convened a special committee to study the consequences of uninsurance. That panel is engaged in a continuing examination of the impact — not only on individuals, but also families, entire communities, and the nation as a whole.

Key findings from the committee's three reports thus far revealed some surprising misperceptions about the uninsured and revealed the strong link between adequate coverage and good health, including:

More than 80 percent of the uninsured have jobs, or are members of working families.

Adults who lack health insurance get less health care, suffer worse health, and are more likely to die prematurely than adults who are insured. Children of parents who lack health insurance are less likely to see a doctor and enjoy the benefits of regular health care, even if the child is eligible for coverage.

When even one member of a family lacks health insurance, the entire family is put at financial risk in the event of a serious illness or injury.

"Medicine today has the ability to prevent many diseases, alleviate symptoms, and extend life, especially when conditions are detected early," says Dr. Arthur Kellermann, professor of emergency medicine at the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta and co-chairman of the institute's committee on uninsurance. "People without health insurance miss these benefits because they cannot afford regular visits to a doctor."

In addition, Dr. Kellermann notes, cost concerns can result in uninsured persons forgoing early treatment of symptoms, and by the time they do seek care, illnesses often are advanced. The study panel has found that the evidence is clearest for conditions like hypertension and many types of cancer, where early detection and treatments can prevent premature death.

The committee also has found that uninsured people with chronic health conditions in particular are less likely to receive effective care. The committee looked at diabetes, heart disease, kidney failure, HIV infection, and mental illness, and found that uninsured Americans with these conditions have consistently worse medical outcomes than those with health insurance. Diabetics who lack insurance, for example, are less likely to receive the monitoring that helps to control blood sugar levels and prevent serious complications. With the economy still sluggish, the problem of uninsurance is likely to grow worse in the immediate future. Health care costs and insurance premiums, after several years of slow growth, are once again spiraling upward at alarming rates. Many businesses are passing these cost increases on to their employees through higher premiums, co-payments, and deductibles. More workers, particularly at lower pay levels, will no longer be able to afford the required cost-sharing.

Moreover, many employers tend to cut back on costly benefits such as health insurance during prolonged periods of economic downturn. In the boom years of the '90s, many companies offered benefits to compete for scarce workers. Conversely, when unemployment increases, employers can stop offering health insurance at little risk of losing employees.

The rise in the number of uninsured in 2001 would have been greater still but for the number of people, mainly children, who obtained coverage through public insurance programs like the State Children's Health Insurance Program. Now states are faced with rising program costs and diminished tax revenues and, as a result, many are preparing to scale back their health insurance programs. If this happens, many more families will lose coverage.

While the problem of uninsurance has been temporarily pushed off the congressional agenda, it will be back. Few Americans can assume that they and their children will always have coverage. This is particularly true in a shaky economy. Rapid growth in health care costs, coupled with a rising rate of uninsurance throughout the United States, is placing the health care system under terrific stress.

Left unchecked, these forces will have profound consequences for the health of all Americans, insured and uninsured alike. That is an intolerable situation, and Americans should not hesitate to tell their legislators that they demand meaningful action, rather than unending lip service, to correct it.

Be careful. You might get your wish

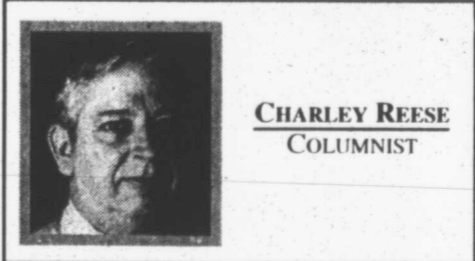

One of the old sayings is: Be careful what you wish for - you might get it. It certainly applies to Larry A. Silverstein, a high-powered New York City real estate mogul.

According to a news story, Mr. Silverstein had dreamed for years of leasing the World Trade Center. He put in a bid, but fell short. A few weeks later, the top bidder backed out, and Mr. Silverstein signed the contract. And you know what happened shortly afterward. His dream collapsed into rubble.

Now the poor fellow is in federal court, arguing with his insurance company that Sept. 11 involved two separate incidents. The insurance company claims it was only one incident. If it's one, the insurance company pays $3.5 billion; if it's two, the cost is $7 billion. But that's only one of the hundreds of lawsuits that have been filed as a result of the tragedy. Sept. 11 will be in the courts, I figure, for years and years. Maybe one day a modern Charles Dickens will write a novel about it.

That tragic event has set off a chain of circumstances literally involving millions of people. Its repercussions will go on and on, probably for generations. It sort of makes you believe in the chaos theory. As I understand it, that theory claims that even if one butterfly flaps its wings in China, it causes things to happen around the world.

Well, I don't know about that, but those 19 fanatics who knocked down the World Trade Center and damaged the Pentagon set off a chain of actions and reactions that stretch into the unforeseeable future.

CHARLEY REESE

It's peculiar to think about how the acts of 19 people on one day has had such tremendous effects - some tragic, some uplifting. I know it was a mighty good feeling, despite the sad loss of life, to see Americans come together after that attack, united and patriotic and reaching out to each other. It truly seems that people's finest hours come in the worst of times.

I suspect that people are innately good and brave, but most of the time circumstances don't allow them to show it in a noticeable way. People do good things and perform brave acts all the time. Most of the time, the media are just looking the other way, or these good deeds are done privately so no one knows about them except the people involved.

I was surprised years ago to learn, from some people who knew him, of all the good deeds Frank Sinatra did privately, without any publicity. Old blue eyes might have been tough and cocky on the outside, but on the inside, he apparently was a soft touch for people in trouble, especially kids.

There was a tough guy in my city, not always on the right side of the law, who was also a benefactor to people in need. For years, he supplied the homeless shelter with food. When he learned that the widow of a former middle school teacher had been left with nothing but a huge pile of debts, he paid them off.

It's been my experience that people can always surprise you, so the advice not to judge others is probably sound. Usually we are making judgments on the basis of limited information.

Look at Chief Charles Moose in Montgomery County, Md., where the sniper attacks began. Chief Moose has an outstanding record as a law enforcement officer, but you could clearly see the pain he felt because police were not able to stop the shootings.

He had a tough job dealing with members of the press who asked questions he couldn't answer without jeopardizing the investigation. He carried a terrible load on his shoulders, and I certainly sympathized with him. And here again, in the midst of sadness and terror, you saw people at their best. It's enough to make you an optimist.

TODAY IN HISTORY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 5, the 309th day of 2002. There are 56 days left in the year. This is Election Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 5, 1605, the "Gunpowder Plot" failed as Guy Fawkes was seized before he could blow up the English Parliament.

On this date:

In 1911, Calbraith P. Rodgers arrived in Pasadena, Calif., completing the first transcontinental airplane trip in 49 days.

In 1912, Woodrow Wilson was elected president, defeating Progressive Republican Theodore Roosevelt and incumbent Republican William Howard Taft.

In 1940, President Roosevelt won an unprecedented third term in office as he defeated Republican challenger Wendell L. Willkie.

In 1944, British official Lord Moyne was assassinated in Cairo, Egypt, by the Zionist Stern gang.

In 1946, Republicans captured control of both the Senate and the House in midterm elections.

In 1968, Richard M. Nixon won the presidency, defeating Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and third-party candidate George C. Wallace.

In 1974, Ella T. Grasso was elected governor of Connecticut, the first woman to win a gubernatorial office without succeeding her husband.

In 1989, death claimed pianist Vladimir Horowitz in New York at age 85 and singer-songwriter Barry Sadler in Murfreesboro, Tenn., at age 49.

In 1990, Rabbi Meir Kahane, the Brooklyn-born Israeli extremist, was shot to death at a New York hotel. (Egyptian native El Sayyed Nosair was convicted of the slaying in federal court.)

In 1996, voters returned President Clinton to the White House for a second term but kept Congress in Republican control.

Ten years ago: Malice Green, a black motorist, died after he was beaten by Detroit police officers outside a suspected crack house. (Larry Nevers and Walter Budzyn were convicted of second-degree murder, but the convictions were overturned; Budzyn and Nevers were later convicted of manslaughter.)

Five years ago: The House overwhelmingly approved a bill calling for the most far-reaching changes at the Internal Revenue Service in 45 years.

One year ago: Enrique Bolanos defeated former Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega in Nicaragua's presidential election.

Euro rises above a dollar, expectations dim for U.S. economy

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The euro rose above a dollar Tuesday and hit its highest level against the U.S. currency in more than three months amid fears that the U.S. economic recovery may be faltering.

The euro, trading early Tuesday around 99.7 cents, spiked up to $1.0038 in morning trading in Europe and held most of its gains by late afternoon, when it stood at $1.0022.

Tuesday's was the highest level since late July, when it rallied to a 2 1/2-year high of $1.0124. The latest rally was stronger than the one Friday which briefly took the euro to $1.0002, before it fell back.

The shift was due to dollar weakness instead of any newfound enthusiasm for the euro and the economies of the 12 countries that share it, said Michael Schubert, an economist at Commerzbank in Frankfurt.

He cited worries about growth for the U.S. economy in the current quarter, and drops in consumer and business sentiment surveys. The economy rebounded from 1.3 percent growth in the spring to 3.1 percent in the summer, but many forecasters fear it will slump again in the current quarter.

"What we have seen in the past week is a turnaround in sentiment," he said. "Everyone asks if an expected recovery in the U.S. will take place in the coming months." Diminished growth expectations push the dollar lower because investors who want to unload U.S. holdings must sell dollars to move investments to other countries.

Schubert said he didn't expect the euro to continue climbing, because growth expectations are just as weak in Europe.

"I am convinced that markets will detect that even if it is bad for U.S. growth it will be the same for Europe," he said.

The euro's rally above $1 in July gave a psychological boost to supporters of the 3 1/2-year-old currency, which European officials hope will increasingly rival the dollar as a currency for trade and central bank reserves.

A stronger euro also helps bring about lower inflation in Europe, since dollar-priced imports become cheaper.

That could give the European Central Bank, whose central priority is fighting inflation, more room to cut interest rates and spur growth. The ECB, which has kept interest rates unchanged for the past year, meets Thursday to consider rates.

Boomtown Theatre to present mystery-comedy by Carmichael

BORGER — The Boomtown Community Theatre, 407 N. Main, presents "Done to Death," a mystery-comedy written by Fred Carmichael, at 6:30 p.m., Nov. 7-9.

This season's production, directed by Sam Cornelius, offers dinner and entertainment for $15 per person. Thursday night only, the local band 4-4-1 will be performing before the play.

Seating is limited so reservations are needed. To reserve a seat, call Kaye Rice at 273-8093.

Boomtown Community Theatre has been around since 1982. It was started by the Magic Plains Art Council, a community organization for the continued support of the arts in the Panhandle. Boomtown has seen a total of 60 shows performed since the theatre started. The theatre is located in the old

J.C. Penney's store at 407 N. Main, an old building that is in need of restoration.

Performance profits, which pay utilities and other necessities at the theatre, are not enough to restore the building. Persons wishing to donate raw building materials such as tile, shingles, paint, bathroom lighting fixtures, bathroom sinks or other necessities or to donate the labor required to install these things, can call Kaye Rice at (806) 273-8093.

Monetary donations are always welcome and can be mailed to Boomtown Community Theatre, P.O. Box 5798, Borger, TX 79008-5798.

WTAMU's Old Main Society to induct new members

CANYON — West Texas A&M University will induct four new members into its premier donor-recognition society, and one current member will be elevated to a higher level in a formal induction ceremony Saturday, Nov. 9 on the WTAMU campus.

The Old Main Society was established in 1998 to recognize individuals, organizations and corporations that have given lifetime contributions of $50,000 or more to support the students and mission of WTAMU.

The ceremony will begin with an unveiling of portraits and plaques of honorees at 7 p.m. in the foyer of Old Main. Dinner for invited guests will follow.

Contributions from the Old Main Society donors endow scholarships and provide financial assistance to students, enhance instructional programs, provide faculty development opportunities and awards for outstanding teaching, and assist in the construction and enhancement of campus facilities.

"The generosity of these special donors has a continuing impact on WTAMU and its students," Lance Ortiz, development officer, said.

"It is the desire of the University and the WT Foundation to honor them for that generosity by making their portraits and plaques part of the permanent display in Old Main. That display serves as a reminder of their gifts to us."

New members whose contributions have reached the Bronze level ($50,000-$250,000) are:

Bob and Nancy Josserrand. Bob Josserrand of Hereford became a member of the WT Foundation Board in 1991. The Doug Josserrand Memorial Scholarship was established the same year to honor the memory of Bob and Nancy's son. The Josserrands have extended financial support to WTAMU's Buffalo Club, an athletic support organization, and WT Friends of Fine Arts, among several local, state and national organizations.

Glen and Pat Parkey. The Parkeys, owners of Sterling Properties in Amarillo, benefit the University by providing scholarships to those students who need and deserve financial assistance. The Parkeys are inductees in the T. Boone Pickens College of Business Hall of Fame and recipients of The Distinguished Alumni Award.

Highland Park Independent School District. In 2001, WTAMU, Highland Park

Independent School District and the State of Texas composed an agreement to insure that the demands for exceptional teachers in the "high need areas" of education were met, and these exceptional teachers were to be WTAMU graduates. Funds donated by Highland Park I.S.D. have impacted the lives of several WTAMU students and Texas Panhandle school children.

Saint Anthony's Auxiliary. Since 1953, the members of the Saint Anthony's Auxiliary in Amarillo have volunteered their time, money and love to the sick and injured patients in St. Anthony's Hospital. In 2001, at the request and desire of the Auxiliary, The Saint Anthony's Auxiliary Scholarship in Nursing and Applied Sciences was established at WTAMU.

In addition to the new inductees, the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, a current Silver honoree ($251,000-$500,000), will be elevated to the Gold honoree level ($501,000-$1,000,000).

The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo has contributed major gifts to the President's Endowment for Excellence and has established several scholarships in WTAMU's Division of Agriculture in an effort to assist in the education of future leaders.

In addition to the Bronze, Silver and Gold levels of giving, the Platinum level is for those whose donations have surpassed $1 million.

For more information about the WTAMU Foundation or the Old Main Society, contact Ortiz at 806-651-2647.

Parents Search for Right Way To Find Out What's Wrong

DEAR ABBY: Would it be OK to ask the parents of our daughter's fiancé exactly what's wrong with him? We can tell he's "not quite right."

All our daughter, "Cheryl," knows is that "Kirk" is "learning-delayed" because she overheard his father discussing it with someone else. Cheryl has not asked for further details and is wondering if Kirk's condition can be passed on to their children.

Our only experience with someone who has a learning disability is our niece, who has been advised by her doctor that she can have normal children. We are wondering if this is the case with our future son-in-law. Should we ask? If so, how does one ask a parent what is wrong with his or her child without seeming rude or nosy? Cheryl and Kirk love each other. It's apparent how happy they are. However, genetics are an issue we feel should be discussed.

Cheryl doesn't know how to bring up the subject, and neither does her father or I. We're well aware that hurt feelings could ensue without the utmost tact. We need some answers, Abby. Thanks for any you can offer.

IN THE DARK IN THE NORTHWEST

DEAR IN THE DARK: Since your daughter is engaged to marry this young man, any question she might have that could have an impact on her marriage is a legitimate one. Your daughter should speak up and ask her fiancé exactly what the problem is. If it's possible that his "learning delay" could affect their children, a talk with his family doctor — and possibly genetic testing — are in order.

DEAR ABBY: It is common knowledge that your readers are the most intelligent, well-informed people in the country. They are probably more informed than some of the people we have sent to Washington, D.C. That is the reason for this letter, Abby. I am asking you to urge your readers to vote in today's election. I am not asking you to endorse any candidate — that wouldn't be fair to his or her opponent, or to you.

I am just asking you to remind people to get off their collective rear ends, go to the polling station, do their civic duty and vote.

I personally don't care who a person votes for, as long as the turnout is greater this year than in 1998, when less than 40 percent of eligible Americans exercised their constitutional right. I would rather see "my candidate" lose by a whopping majority and have a record-high turnout, than win with another record-low voter turnout.

I'm fairly certain that the candidates who are running for office this year would agree with me on that point, even if they can agree on nothing else.

A PROUD AMERICAN VOTER, BLOOMFIELD, N.J.

DEAR PROUD AMERICAN: You asked for it — you've got it! Readers, a person who has the right to vote and doesn't do it is no better off than a person who doesn't have that privilege. This is not the time for any American citizen to say, "Let someone else do it." The direction our country takes — domestically and internationally — is to a great extent determined by the people who exercise their right to vote. So cast your vote — today's the day!

Favre returns to lead Packers by Dolphins

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Dave Wannstedt has been on the losing end three of the four times Brett Favre has come back from injury during his career.

This time, the Miami Dolphins coach got to share his misery with Cris Carter, who came out of retirement only to watch Favre steal the show again.

"He's the best," Carter said. "When God made him, he put a little something extra in him."

Favre had a much better return than Carter on Monday night, guiding Green Bay to a 24-10 victory over the Dolphins despite a sprained left knee that had threatened to end his decade-long starting streak.

Carter, coming out of retirement following a nine-month layoff, had three inconsequential catches for 31 yards. He fumbled away his first reception, leading to the Packers' first interception by linebacker Nate Wayne in the second half.

Favre, knocked out of his last game, extended his NFL record for consecutive regular-season starts by a quarterback to 165. He overcame an early interception in the end zone to lead the Packers to their sixth straight victory.

Favre didn't play like he was protecting his knee. Several times he scrambled toward the first-down marker with his usual abandon.

"I was saying, 'Just get down. Let me do the running,'" Ahman Green said. "I know he's a warrior and is going to do what he has to do."

"It didn't surprise me at all to see him out there. He was a legend before tonight."

And he only added to his lore, said Dolphins defensive end Jason Taylor.

"He was scrambling and running around, doing all the thing you always see him do," Taylor said. "I saw him limp once going to the sideline."

And that was after he threw a touchdown pass, no less.

The Packers, who have the NFL's best record at 7-1, also recorded four more takeaways to increase their league-leading total to 27 and held Miami running back Ricky Williams to 47 yards on 14 carries.

Favre was 16-of-25 for 187 yards and one touchdown. When he was replaced by backup Doug Pederson in the middle of a series in the fourth quarter, the crowd serenaded him with chants of "MVP! MVP! MVP!"

"It felt fine," Favre said of his knee. "A little stiff, but it's going to be OK."

The Dolphins (5-3) hoped Carter would provide a similar spark as he came out of retirement to shore up a depleted receiving corps and chase a championship.

But Carter was rusty.

"There are certain things you can't simulate," Carter said. "The game is moving a lot faster. It's just totally different. As a team, we were driving the ball early, moving the ball, but you can't turn it over at Lambeau and win."

Darren Sharper stepped in front of a pass by Ray Lucas and returned it 89 yards for a touchdown as the third quarter expired, giving Green Bay a 24-0 lead.

"When you get beat 4-1 in turnovers on the road, you aren't going to win," Wannstedt said.

Olindo Mare kicked a 46-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and Miami finally got into the end zone on Lucas' 1-yard keeper with 1:31 left — the first TD in eight quarters against Green Bay's defense, which has allowed just two meaningless TDs in its last three games.

"I thought our defense played an outstanding game," Packers coach Mike Sherman said. "We put pressure on their quarterback. We stifled their running game, and they have a great running game."

So does Green Bay.

Green rushed 19 times for 72 yards and caught six passes for 71 yards against Miami's stout defense. He accounted for all but 18 of the yards in the first half, when his 23-yard TD reception and 1-yard scoring run gave Green Bay a 14-0 halftime lead.

Lucas, starting for the injured Jay Fiedler, was replaced briefly by Sage Rosenfels when he strained his right shoulder on a hard hit by Vonnie Holliday late in the first half.

Favre sprained his left knee in the Packers' last game, Oct. 20 against Washington when he was sacked by LaVar Arrington.

Tascosa won the girls' division by only point (44-43) although Pampa won six of the 11 events.

FOOTBALL

WELLINGTON

Wheeler was shut out by Wellington 28-0 in District 3-1A action last weekend.

Wellington (7-2, 3-0) clinched a share of the district title with the victory. Wheeler's record is 3-6 overall and 2-2 in district.

Wellington quarterback Jacob Castor threw for 152 yards and two touchdowns. He also rushed for a score.

Much of Wheeler's offense came from Chris Gallagher, who rushed for 41 yards on 11 carries. Quarterback James Chapman completed 5 of 10 passes for 78 yards, but had one interception.

Wellington led at half-time 21-0.

The Skyrockets hadn't won a district title since 1991.

BASEBALL

LOUISVILLE, Ky.

(AP) — Barry Bonds and Mike Piazza won their 10th Silver Slugger awards Tuesday.

Chicago Cubs outfielder Sammy Sosa and Texas Rangers shortstop Alex Rodriguez were picked for a sixth time by Hillerich & Bradbsy Co., the maker of Louisville Slugger bats.

The awards honor the best offensive players at each position in each league, as voted on by major league managers and coaches.

Bonds led the majors with a .370 average and had 46 home runs, 110 RBIs and a record 198 walks. He helped the San Francisco Giants reach the World Series, where they lost in seven games to Anaheim. The 38-year-old Bonds hit .356 with eight homers, 16 RBIs and 27 walks in the postseason.

Piazza, a catcher, hit .280 with 33 homers and 98 RBIs for the New York Mets.

Flashback

1988: Shahe Bass and Chris Poole scored two touchdowns apiece as Pampa defeated Hereford 34-6 in an 8th grade football game.

Matt Clark scored Pampa's other touchdown.

Schaeffer honored

AMARILLO — Jerry Schaeffer, Pampa head boys' basketball coach, received The Kenneth Cleveland Sportsmanship Award last weekend at the annual Amarillo Officials Chapter awards dinner.

"This is a high honor for me. This award is named after my old high school coach," Schaeffer said.

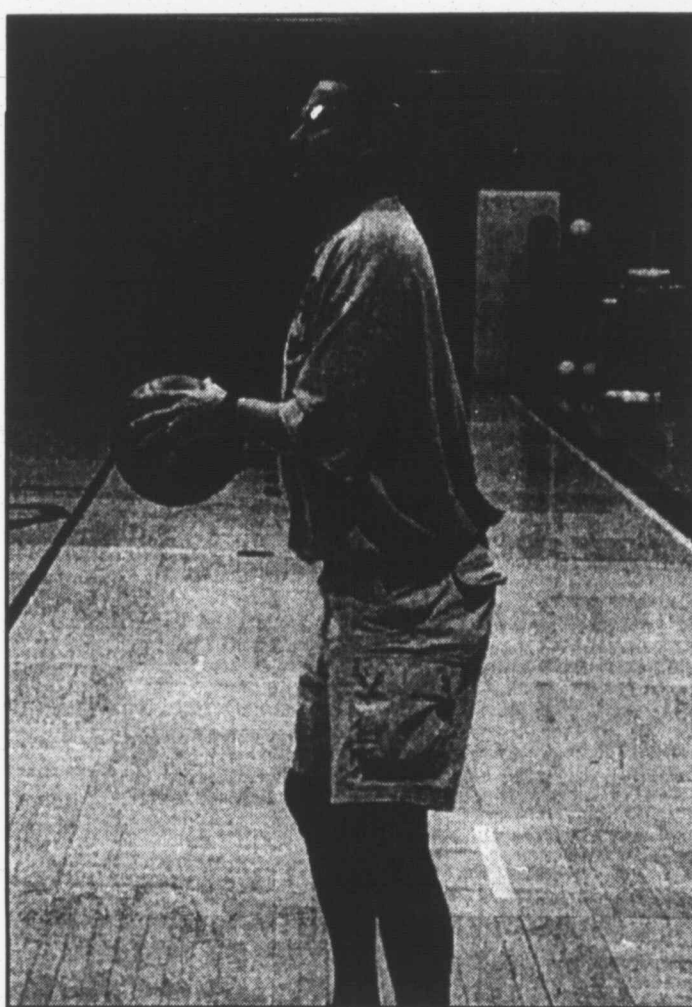

Schaeffer, who begins his fourth season as Harvesters' head coach, played for coach Cleveland at Dimmitt in the late 1970s.

The sportsmanship award is presented by the officials to an Amarillo area male and female basketball coach in Classes 1A through 5A.

The Harvesters open the 2002-2003 season Tuesday night on the road at Amarillo High.

Pampa scrimmages Dimmitt at 4:30 today at Highland Park High School.

"There's just eight of us right now and two are out with injuries," coach Schaeffer said. "However, if this was a track meet we'd win it. We're in great shape."

Pampa coach Jerry Schaeffer, shown at a practice last season, was honored recently by area basketball officials.

Baylor not waiting to see if Steele can have McCarney-like turnaround

DALLAS (AP) — Iowa State didn't give up on Dan McCarney, and the patience has paid off for the 21st-ranked Cyclones over the past few seasons.

But Baylor won't wait to find out if Kevin Steele can have the same kind of success in the long run. Steele, the fourth-year coach with a 9-33 record, was fired and will be allowed only to finish out the last three games of this season.

"Looking at the amount of time Kevin was there, that's not a great amount of time to turn a program around when it's down," said Nebraska coach Frank Solich.

Iowa State didn't give up on McCarney after he was 8-34 — one game worse than Steele — at the same point in his tenure. Now in his eighth season, the Cyclones (7-3) are already assured their third straight winning regular season and almost certain of a third straight bowl appearance.

McCarney knows just how difficult the challenge is of turning around a struggling program in the Big 12.

"This conference is the best conference and it does make your job tough," McCarney said Monday during the weekly Big 12 coaches teleconference. "It's an extremely tough job because of the talent, resources and tradition of the schools in the Big 12."

"I really feel bad for Kevin," he said. "He's just first class in everything that he does. He carries himself with a lot of class. You hate to see it."

McCarney was in his sixth season before the Cyclones had a winning season, in 2000 when they were 9-3 and beat Pittsburgh in the Insight.com Bowl, their first postseason game since 1978. After starting 6-1 this season, Iowa State got into the Top 10 for the first time in school history.

Even though he went through the same struggles as Steele, McCarney said it would be unfair to try to compare his situation then to Steele's now because he doesn't now the Baylor administration and what they want to accomplish.

Still, Big 12 coaches questioned the move and commended Steele for the job he has done, regardless of the poor win-loss record.

"I don't agree with changing coaches. It's an excuse," said Colorado coach Gary Barnett. "Steele put integrity in that program when it needed it. When you turn your back on that, you're making a stronger statement than you did when you first hired him."

Baylor athletic director Tom Stanton said Steele had made significant improvements in areas such as discipline, academics, organization and relationships with Texas high school coaches.

"There are few people with the character, integrity and faith that Kevin has," Stanton said. "However, the need for on-the-field success is always a focal point in the athletic arena."

Baylor, the only private school in the Big 12, hasn't had a winning season since 1995. The Bears have lost four straight games, getting outscored 181-21 since a 35-32 win over Kansas on Oct. 5 that snapped their 29-game conference streak.

Harvesters heavily favored over 'Horns

After a disappointing loss to Dumas two weeks ago, the Pampa Harvesters will be loaded for Longhorn on Friday night. At least the Harris Ratings System thinks so.

Harris has Pampa picked to beat winless Caprock by a whopping 35 points in a District 3-4A finale at 7:30 Friday night in Harvester Stadium.

For other district matchups, Harris has Randall over Dumas by 10 and Plainview over Palo Duro by 4. Hereford is open.

Pampa is still ranked as the district's top team at No. 36. Randall, which clinched a playoff spot last weekend, is at No. 55, followed by Plainview (74), Palo Duro (86), Dumas (97), Hereford (103), and Caprock (186). Pampa joins Plainview, Palo Duro and Dumas as the teams still alive for the remaining two playoff spots.

Randall and Plainview are tied at 4-1 and the Raiders can clinch at least a share of the district title by beating Dumas this Friday night.

Pampa is tied with Palo Duro at 3-2, followed by Dumas at 2-3.

Pampa has won the last two meetings with Caprock, 21-7 a year ago and 49-28 in 2000.

Highland Park replaced Ennis at Class 4A's No. 1 ranked team in this week's Harris Poll. Other No. 1 ranked teams are Southlake Carroll (5A), Jasper (3A), McGregor (2A), and Hubbard (1A).

Follett downs Miami to qualify for playoffs

MIAMI — Miami fell to Follett 34-12 in a District 1-1A six-man game last weekend.

Miami scored a touchdown in the first quarter on a 58-yard kickoff return by Jeffrey Browning and another touchdown in the fourth quarter on a 1-yard run by Hal Rogers.

Tanner Woods paced Follett, throwing for two touchdowns and rushing for another one. Woods completed seven of 17 pass attempts for 134 yards. Kyle Schultz and Trey Foster caught TD passes.

Follett held a 22-6 half-time lead.

Miami's record is 5-4 for the season and 4-2 in district play. Follett, which clinched a playoff spot, is 7-1 overall and 6-0 in district. Miami closes the season Friday night at Lefors. The Warriors will miss out on the playoffs this season after placing to Follett in the district race in 2001.

Fort Elliott joins Follett as the district's other playoff qualifying team. The two teams meet this weekend at Follett to decide the district championship.

Horoscope BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Nov. 6, 2002.
 Use your imagination and creativity to increase your security. You have very special ideas. Others support your excellent suggestions, especially professionally and within your community. Know that you do make a difference. Your influence grows, allowing for the potential of a pay raise or promotion. You drive a hard bargain, which enables you to lead and also to get more of what you want. Fall 2003 has a very special quality, socially. If you are single, someone will come along who easily could knock your socks off. If you are attached, your relationship will develop a special closeness, especially if you share yourself more often. SAGITTARIUS helps you make money.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
  Keep reaching out. Seek out answers. Your high energy draws others, who pitch in to make an idea a reality. You revise your thinking as a result of others' feedback. You build an even stronger idea, making success more certain. Tonight: Where the action is.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
  Work with associates, knowing what you're driving at. Review details with a trusted associate who often comes through for you. Choose to do nothing halfway right now. It is all or nothing. You take a hard look at a project. Tonight: Go for what you want.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
  Others seek you out. Enjoy your popularity. As someone reveals him- or herself, you discover a lot about this person and what you like and don't like. Lighten up about a personal relationship. In fact, the more playful you become, the more fun another is. Tonight: Join others for dinner or another fun get-together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
  Dig into work as if there is no tomorrow. You know what you want, and as a result, you will make it happen. A family member cheers you on and supports you. Understand just how much influence you have. Spend money on something you want. Tonight: Put your feet up.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
  Approach work as you would approach something you love. You'll find that you get much more done. What would it take to do something you love? What would that be? Start networking or considering your real options. Surprises surround you. Tonight: Celebrate the midweek marker.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
  Realize more of what you want through conversations and exploring your options. You present an unusually strong opinion. Others easily agree with your ideas. You express good sense where most cannot. Tonight: Stay anchored.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
  Your high energy makes waves. You're able to make a considerable difference if you push your ideas. Make calls. Network. Allow others to know and understand what's on your mind. Success results from your dynamic efforts. Tonight: Out among friends.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
  Others praise your actions. You choose the next step, and you gain. You have an opportunity to restructure your financial life, making your life more secure. Willingly spend in order to make more money. Spontaneity works.

Tonight: Pay bills first.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
  Your good mood energizes those around you. Make travel plans with a loved one. Go exploring, even if it is just on your computer. You might feel like a cheerleader with a group. You know how to get things moving. Tonight: Others want your companionship. Decide who, where and when.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
  What others say might not be comfortable to hear, but it could be important. Someone close to you at work could go on a tirade. It might be you! Choices made right now draw additional wealth and monetary success. Jump on an opportunity. Tonight: Go for what you want.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
  Adopt a goal-driven attitude, and you'll succeed. Listen to what someone close to you has to share. This person proves to be a fountain of great ideas. Together you greet a long-term goal in the near future. Take a risk. Tonight: Celebrate good news.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
  A financial or career decision gets another's support, though he or she might need to ask a lot of questions. Don't become defensive; rather, share your logic and ideas. Everyone gains through your efforts here. Tonight: Schedule a massage.
