Anderson named to post

Robert L. Monaghan, regional chairman for the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign, today named Rich Anderson of Gail to coordinate the President's re-election campaign in Borden County.

Rich Anderson is a rancher who have been actively involved in many Republican Party activities, including serving as county chairman, Chairman for Reagan-Bush in 1980, Chairman for Goldwater, Tower and Clements campaigns in Borden County.

Anderson served as a member of the Borden County School Board for 12 years, is serving as a director of the Security State Bank in Big Spring, is a Director of Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers, Assn., and was a Director of Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring for 12 years.

U.S. Senator John Tower, the President's campaign chairman in Texas, said, "I am delighted Rich Anderson has agreed to organize our campaign in Borden County and I am confident he will help us tell the tremendous success story of this Administration."

"Because of President Reagan's strong leadership, our national defenses are being strengthened and our economy is growing again," Tower said. "The dramatic drop in inflation and lower taxes mean today, a Texas family earning $25,000 a year has $1,000 more in purchasing power."

Texas campaign co-chairman Martha Weisend added, "Our job in the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign is now to tell that success story in homes and schools and offices throughout this great state. Grassroots organization in all 254 Texas counties will allow us to do that," Weisend said.

"I am confident Rich Anderson will help us meet our goal of identifying every potential voter for President Reagan and getting those voters to the polls November."

Senate passes to block nuclear waste dump

Calling it "a message to Phil Gramm, the Washington Bureaucrats and the giant, greedy utilities — if they want to turn the Panhandle into a dump for their radioactive garbage, the answer is no, no, no," Senator Lloyd Doggett today sponsored and pushed through a resolution to prevent the burial of high-level radioactive waste in the Texas Panhandle.

Doggett's resolution, SCR20, instructs the Texas Water Commission to deny a permit to the federal government for exploratory work on a waste repository. The action effectively vetoes the construction of a nuclear waste dump in Texas, and can only be overridden by a joint resolution of both houses of Congress, a move Doggett said he will fight "with every weapon available to me — including a filibuster if necessary."

Doggett's Republican opponent for the U.S. Senate, Phil Gramm, in 1982 worked closely with the utility industry to weaken states' authority to veto a waste dump, and to dilute environmental protections in the Nuclear Waste Policy Act. "Fortunately," said Doggett, "Phil Gramm and his buddies, the giant Eastern utilities, lost their fight to make it harder for states to veto a dump site. But the mere fact that he stood with the greedy utilities and against ordinary Texans and voted to allow family farms and ranches to be turned into dumps for their radioactive garbage proves that Phil Gramm goes for the dough by siding with the greedy utilities instead of fighting for Texans."

Doggett's resolution was co-sponsored by Senators Bill Sarpalius of Hereford, John Montford of Lubbock and Bill

Sims of San Angelo. "This is the kind of decisive, courageous action we need in Washington," said Sarpalius. "The so-called 'Big-Shots' in Washington think that Texas is just land and not people, so they try to give us the shaft. We need more of this sort of Texas leadership in Washington."

Montford agreed, saying, "the passage of this resolution is a giant step in the right direction. Texans won't stand for the federal government turning some of our prime farmland into nuclear dumps."

The resolution, which passed the Senate unanimously, is awaiting House action.

As the name suggests, tranquilizers act to reduce anxiety. They are not intended to be used for the stress of everyday life, but for the excessive anxieties that may disrupt a person's life and make it difficult or even impossible to keep functioning normally.

Tranquilizers are used for anxiety which can occur alone or can be associated with physical illnesses such as heart disease, ulcer and other stomach disorders, arthritis and cancer. They are also frequently prescribed by doctors to reduce the anxiety which occurs in hospitalized patients before surgery or uncomfortable diagnostic procedures.

Certain tranquilizers are also used to treat the muscle spasm which results from sprains and strains as well as the muscle contractions produced by certain types of epilepsy.

When your doctor decides to prescribe a tranquilizer for anxiety, you can gain the greatest benefit by using it as one part of a larger, active effort to recognize and deal with the problems causing this anxiety.

Coleman falls short of Olympic goal

Ackerly's Mike Coleman, a former United States Trap Shooting champion fell a little bit short Saturday in this year's championship tournament and the trials for the United States 1984 Olympic Team.

Although Coleman made it through the first round of competition, things just didn't go the way he wanted. "I don't know really what was wrong," Coleman said. "If I did, I wouldn't have lost the contest."

The tournament was won by a soldier in the Army, with second place going to a member of the Army Reserve. "It's pretty hard to compete with someone who makes their living doing this," Coleman said.

He added, however, that he has beat both the two winners in competition before. "I can't remember the last time that reserver beat me. I won the championship two years ago beating the Army man, but he won last year. We have traded off but I guess he's one up on me now."

Although Coleman didn't find out his exact finish, he does know that he was in the top 44 men competing. "I didn't even look at the totals," Coleman said. "I just checked to see if I was in the top two."

This year was Coleman's ninth time to compete in the U.S. championship and he says that he will be back. "I'm not going to give it up," he said. "There's a contest in July at Ft. Benning and I'll go to that."

"Sometimes you do well and others you do not. Things just weren't right this time," Coleman said. "Sometimes that happens. I'll be back though."

1980's ESTABLISH FURNITURE TRENDS

Many food authorities agree that the 1980's are witnessing the beginning of a new, heightened interest in food, an interest the predict will continue. As a result, consumer's dining and shopping patterns are changing, and in turn, the marketplace is changing too.

The 80's Consumer

The taste-oriented consumers of the 80's have more food savvy than the shoppers of just a few years ago. They are "shopping smart," and are more knowledgeable about foods and cookery than ever before.

More consumers are cognizant of healthful eating trends, thanks to the current nationwide boom in health and nutrition awareness. They express concern over the kinds and amounts of food they consume. Time is spent reading labels, brochures and other product information before making a purchase.

And, even though many consumers have less time to spend on meal preparation at home, they still demand good-tasting, nutritious foods that can be prepared in a minimal amount of time. Greater choices and diversity of food products are important to the 80's shopper.

80's Dining Trends

Certain dining patterns are emerging as consumers make demands about the foods they eat.

— Meals are simpler, with fewer dishes being served at one meal. The emergence of the one-dish dining concept is widespread, with such offerings as skillet meals, stir-frys and main dish salads becoming mainstays in many households.

— Cuisines are no longer distinct; there is a definite blending. For example, a dish prepared using the Oriental technique of stir-frying might be made with ingredients that are distinctly Mexican or French. The "rule" is that food must taste good, not conform to strict preparation standards. Pleasing flavor combination and available ingredients often guide today's cooks.

— Dishes made with poultry and fish are becoming trendsetters. Rice is a perfect accompaniment for these; it also combines readily with them to make super one-dish meals. This trend is partially a result of the high costs of some meats as well as the push to increase consumption of complex carbohydrates and foods low in sodium.

Marketplace Response

Grocers and other food purveyors are responding positively to consumer's food needs and expectations. It was reported at the Food Marketing Institute's annual meeting, supermarkets are meeting consumers expectations by giving them access to more superior quality foodstuffs, a variety that would have been difficult to imagine only a few years ago.

Recognizing that consumers are demanding ease and convenience of preparation, and quality at the same time, supermarkets of the future are changing. Shoppers are beginning to see a proliferation of quality convenience foods in various forms — fresh, packaged, frozen and prepared. Extensive selections of fruits and vegetables from around the world, domestic and imported cheeses and huge selections of meats, poultry and fish will become commonplace as supermarkets become attuned to the upscale shopper.

Tire Of The Future

Traveling far into the future is this "Tire of 2001" which has a raised center rib extending above two other rows that flank each side. At highway speeds, the vehicle would travel only on the center rib, dramatically reducing rolling resistance, and improving fuel economy.

When braking or cornering, the center rib in this futuristic tire, designed by Uniroyal, a leading American tire maker, would become flush with the outside rows, either mechanically or pneumatically, providing more traction by putting more rubber on the road. This ingenious prototype offers an imaginative glimpse of things to come for drivers — down the road — in the future.

and 5 cents for each area thereafter. The tolerance on the reported acreage is 1.0 acre or 5 percent not to exceed 50 acres. An accurate and timely certification is a must for program eligibility. Measurement service is the way to have guaranteed measurements. The last day to request measurement service is July 16. Paid upon request.

EMERGENCY FEED ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Producers may continue to sign up for assistance through the Emergency Feed Assistance Program to purchase low-grade corn from the Commodity Credit Corporation. You can file a supplemental application or even have your eligibility recomputed. Please contact this office for more information.

CROP CERTIFICATION DEADLINE

July 16, 1984 is the final date to report acreages of cotton, grain sorghum and other spring seeded crops. When you report your acreages please know where all your crops are planted, planting patterns, out spots, etc...

GOOD PSYCHOLOGY

There's no harm—and a lot of good—in promising yourself a small reward for a task well done, psychologists say. If household chores have got you down, try to picture yourself relaxing with a tasty snack and a frosty glass of iced tea. Then after you've finished the dishes, the dusting or the laundry—put your feet up and put yourself in the picture.

Safety Corner

Farm Pond Safety

Farm ponds provide a useful source of water and a place for recreation. Make your pond safe.

- Ponds used for swimming or boating should have a "rescue station" containing a post with a ring buoy, rope and long pole.
- Keep your pond area clean and free of trash.
- A fence will keep out small children.
- If you boat on your pond, be sure the boat is seaworthy, and avoid overloading it.
- Do not swim in a pond shared with livestock, and do not swim in one polluted by runoff water.
