OBITUARIES

SERVICES TOMORROW

BRANDON, Betty Dillman — Funeral mass, 10 a.m., St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, Pampa.

TOMMY R. DANE

TOMBALL, Texas — Tommy Ruth Dane, 76, passed away, April 13, 2003, in Tomball, Texas, at the home of her daughter, Kathy Lee, with whom she lived for the past nine years. Tommy Ruth was born in Corpus Christi, Texas, on December 16, 1926, to Thomas and Alberta North.

Preceding her in death were her parents and her husband, B.W. Dane.

Tommy Ruth and B.W. married in 1945 and made their home in the Rio Grande Valley. They lived there and farmed for almost fifty years together. Tommy Ruth was a charter member of B.P.O. Does #90. She served as president during the year 1965. She recently received her fifty year pin.

In 1995 at the age of 68, she surrendered her life to Christ and was baptized at First Baptist Church of Tomball. She had attended Southwinds Baptist Church of Tomball when possible for the last several years. Though not able to attend church services regularly due to health problems, she spent time every day with the Lord in prayer and reading her daily devotionals.

Her favorite pastimes included feeding and watching the birds and squirrels at her home, reading, sewing, and most especially playing with and watching her two great-grandsons, Ethan, 2 years, and Gabriel, 4 months whom she loved dearly.

She is survived by her three children, Thomas Dane and wife, Joan of Harlingen, Karin Sutherland and husband, Gary of Pampa, Texas, and Kathy Lee and husband, Michael of Tomball, Texas. She is also survived by grandchildren, James Thomas Dane of Salt Lake City, Utah, Scott W., Shawn M., and Joseph P. Dane of Austin, Texas, Courtney Resendiz of Harlingen, Jason and Noah Sutherland of Pampa, Texas, Anita Staton and Caleb Lee of Tomball and Lisa Minchew of Conroe. Also by seven beloved great grandchildren, Lauren Resendiz, Kenadie, Lauren and Colin Sutherland, Zane Sutherland, Ethan Staton and Gabriel Minchew.

Visitation hours were held Wednesday, April 16, 2003, from 12 p.m. to 9 p.m. with the family present from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. to receive friends at the funeral home.

Funeral services were held Thursday, April 17, 2003, at 2 p.m. at Buck Ashcraft Funeral Home with Reverend David Mann officiating. Burial followed to Mont Meta Memorial Park.

Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Buck Ashcraft Funeral Home.

IRAQ

"We were prohibited from visiting these shrines for a long time by the Baath Party and their agents," Abed Ali Ghilan said in Karbala. "This year we thank God for ridding us of the dictator Saddam Hussein and for letting us visit these shrines."

Karbala was packed shoulder-to-shoulder with hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of pilgrims, waving black and green flags, chanting and beating their chests. Others carried photos of famous Shiite clerics.

Men wore mostly white robes; women were cloaked head to toe in traditional black dress.

Two groups of 100 men in white robes slashed open their own heads with swords, splattering blood on those nearby. Waving the bloody blades toward the shrine and screaming with joy, some were taken away in cars for medical attention. Others washed up at a traditional Iraqi bathhouse.

Water trucks were brought in to help the crowds endure the 90-degree heat and blazing sun. Roving watermen sprayed the masses to keep them cool.

The portrait of Saddam that used to hang on the main Imam Hussein shrine was gone, underlining the new sense of freedom enjoyed by Iraqi Shiites.

The U.S. military has continued to encounter pockets of resistance. Near Mosul, coalition forces took fire from a small, disorganized force and repelled it, Brooks said. "This reminds us that there will still be firefights like this," he said.

The Army's V Corps took responsibility for security over all of Baghdad, expanding into the eastern part of the city previously overseen by the Marines, Brooks said.

The United States also increased its troop presence in the ethnically tense northern city of Mosul, sending in an Army brigade to reinforce Special Forces and Marine units that had been struggling to restore order after the collapse of Saddam's regime touched off looting, arson and gunfire. Mosul, Iraq's third-largest city with a population of 1.7 million, is divided between Arabs and Kurds.

STATEWIDE

Most of Texas will see clouds for the next few days and chances of rain.

Any severe weather should be isolated today. On Wednesday, West Texas may see some isolated storms, but stormy conditions will be likely in central and north Texas. On Thursday, the eastern part of the state may continue to see rain.

Clouds should break beginning Thursday and fair weather is forecast over the state this weekend.

In West Texas, it will be mostly cloudy and breezy today, partly cloudy on Wednesday and sunny the rest of the week. The region will see scattered rain today. In the Panhandle, some severe storms may develop this afternoon near the New Mexico border and move through the Panhandle and South Plains this evening.

The Permian Basin also may see some severe storms this afternoon and evening.

On Wednesday, any severe weather should be limited to the eastern Panhandle, and clouds should decrease over the region. The cool temperatures today in the north should warm to the mid 70s tomorrow. Otherwise highs will be in the 70s and 80s this week.

South Texas will be mostly cloudy through Thursday, and warming as the week progresses. A slight chance of showers and storms is forecast over the region today, with better chances in the Hill Country and south Central Texas. Chances of severe weather are slight. Rain chances continue Wednesday, with some severe storms possible in south Central Texas.

Skies should decrease Thursday in the north and Friday in the south. The weekend should be mostly clear and free of rain. Highs should be in the 70s and low 80s for the next few days, warming some by the weekend.

North Texas will be cloudy today and Wednesday, with evening and nighttime showers and storms possible both days. On Wednesday, it will be windy except for the east, and severe weather will be possible in the afternoon and evening, with hail and some tornadic conditions.

Rain chances will continue Thursday in the east, but skies should begin to clear elsewhere then. Friday and Saturday should be partly cloudy, with no rain in the forecast. Highs will be in the 70s today, slightly cooler Wednesday. The rest of the week will bring highs in the 70s and 80s.

Medical clearance expected soon for former POWs

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Former prisoners of war from Fort Bliss who survived three weeks of captivity in Iraq are on track for release from an Army medical center.

The commander of William Beaumont Army Medical Center said Monday that the five soldiers who returned in a jubilant homecoming over the weekend could be released to their unit Wednesday or Thursday before going on convalescent leave.

"I met with all five of them (Monday) morning to get them started on their medical workups," Col. Glenn Mitchell, the hospital commander and a doctor specializing in emergency care, told the El Paso Times in Tuesday's online edition.

"Over the next few days, they will undergo a process to make sure they didn't pick up any infections from the food and water they had in Iraq."

The five, rescued on April 13 after spending 22 days in captivity, returned to Biggs Army Airfield on Saturday evening to cheers of thousands of onlookers waving American flags. On Monday, some of the soldiers' families received congratulations from U.S. senators touring the West Texas Army post.

The members of the 507th Maintenance Company were taken prisoner on March 23 near Nasiriyah, Iraq. Spc. Shoshana Johnson, 30, from El Paso, had gunshot wounds to both ankles during the ambush. Although others also were wounded, they have been able to walk on their own. Johnson has required wheelchairs to get around.

Nine members of the 507th were killed during the ambush and six taken prisoner, including Pfc. Jessica Lynch, who was rescued from an Iraqi hospital on April 1. She is still recovering from her injuries at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

The 507th soldiers taken prisoner were: Johnson; Spc. Joseph Hudson, 23, Alamogordo, N.M.; Spc. Edgar Hernandez, 21, Mission; Pfc. Patrick Miller, 23, Park City, Kan.; and Sgt. James J. Riley, 31, Pennsauken, N.J.

Mitchell said the soldiers had lunch with their families Monday and spent time with them.

Some of the soldiers' medical tests will establish a baseline for future treatment, Mitchell said. He said they were also advised about the availability of continuous treatment or support through the U.S. Navy's national Robert E. Mitchell Repatriated Prisoners of War Center in Pensacola, Fla.

"We want to be 100 percent sure they have the absolute best medical and mental health care," Mitchell said.

Following their release from the hospital, the soldiers will go on 30 days of convalescent leave before returning to duty at the post.

Military officials said four other members of the 507th were wounded in the March 23 attack, including Sgt. Curtis P. Campbell, 27, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Spc. James Grubb, 21, of Manchester, Ky., who are on leave with their families in El Paso. Cpl. Damien Luten, 24, of Indianapolis, and Sgt. Tarik Jackson, 28, of Miami, were also injured in the March 23 ambush and were treated at Walter Reed.

Other returnees included two First Cavalry Division Apache helicopter pilots from Fort Hood, Chief Warrant Officer Ronald D. Young Jr., 26, of Lithia Springs, Ga., and Chief Warrant Officer David S. Williams, 30, of Orlando, Fla.

A Fort Bliss spokeswoman, Jean Offutt, said the post has not received any information on when other members of the 507th will return from Iraq.

Teen who shot five goes back with parents

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — The middle school student who shot five Fort Gibson Middle School classmates left state custody Monday to begin his final year of psychiatric treatment before his release.

Seth Trickey was released into his parents' custody after a Muskogee County judge agreed to their request to receive a year's worth of psychiatric treatment at the Oaks Residential Treatment Center in Austin, Texas.

Associate District Judge Tom Alford also said Trickey could be set free if he successfully completes the program.

Trickey, a former honor student, was 13 when he pulled a 9 mm handgun from his backpack and fired a full clip of bullets at his classmates on Dec. 6, 1999.

A 12-year-old girl was shot in the face, three seventh-grade boys were wounded in their arms or legs and a fourth boy was grazed by a bullet that had passed through another victim.

Trickey has been held at the Oklahoma Office of Juvenile Affairs' Rader Diagnostic Treatment Center since August 2000.

He recently completed his treatment program at Rader and graduated from high school.

Military pets comforted, cared for by foster families during war

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When Marines from a nearby base were called to war, Terri Morgan's home, along the North Carolina coast, became a sanctuary for three snakes, a frog that makes strange noises, fish, a cockatiel and tarantulas.

Her hospitality is part of "Operation Semper Fido," an effort she started on behalf of military men and women who have no one else to care for their beloved pets while they serve overseas.

Using the Internet, she has found foster families as far away as Wisconsin and New York for nearly 600 dogs, cats, spiders, frogs — even a 30-foot python.

"I'm taking anybody and everybody," said Morgan, a police animal control officer in Havelock, 130 miles east of Raleigh. "If they (Marines) love it, I'll take care of it," she said recently.

Morgan is not alone. Trina Sage, who served 24 years in the Air Force and lives near Havelock, offered her patience and fenced-in yard to a 6-month-old mutt left behind by a Marine corporal from nearby Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station.

Serving as a foster mother to Lupey, a part-border collie still in need of housebreaking, "is just my way to do my part in the war effort to help the local Marines," Sage said. She already owns a dog, two cats and two goldfish.

Although she's ready to give Lupey back when the Marine returns for him, she knows it will be emotionally difficult.

"It's going to be tough," she said. "He's a really cute puppy. It's going to be really hard to give him up."

Those who monitor animal welfare say a number of factors have combined to make the problem of pets left behind by deployed soldiers considerably less severe during the current conflict than it was in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Fewer soldiers were deployed for this war, they say, and many families expect a short conflict, meaning more spouses and children have stayed near military installations instead of heading back to hometowns.

Also, the Internet helped spur the creation of networks of civilians willing to act as foster parents to pets in need of refuge.

"It does not seem to be a big crisis," said Betsy McFarland, program manager for animal sheltering at the Humane Society of the United States in Washington.

During the 1990-91 build up to the Gulf War, when 500,000 soldiers were sent overseas, shelters saw a surge in abandoned pets — and euthanasia, McFarland said. This time, about 300,000 soldiers have been deployed, and similar problems have been avoided.

North Carolina's State Animal Response Team, a non-profit, state-private partnership, expected maybe 30 volunteers when it spread the word in October that it needed foster homes for pets. Instead, about 500 calls came in, said Jodi Jackson, the team's executive director.

"We were overwhelmed," she said.

Many soldiers are single and live on-post, where commanders rarely allow pets. For those who do keep animals, the military takes no responsibility for what happens to them during a deployment.

"It is an individual responsibility," Pentagon spokeswoman Maj. Sandra Troeber said.

At the county animal shelter in Columbus, Ga., near Fort Benning, manager Francis Steed said officials have been able to keep up with the several hundred pets left for adoption since deployments began last fall.

Senior forensic scientist fired from Fort Worth police crime lab

FORT WORTH (AP) — A senior forensic scientist was fired from the Fort Worth police crime lab for not following procedures and for expressing concerns about her forensic knowledge, officials said.

Karla Carmichael received notice of her termination in a certified letter Saturday, said her attorney, John Hunter Smith of the Combined Law Enforcement Association of Texas. An appeal will be filed with the city's human resources director this week, he said.

DNA testing at the lab has been suspended since October, when the results of second-opinion DNA tests done by the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office conflicted with results of tests done by Carmichael. That prompted prosecutors in a capital murder trial to forego seeking the death penalty.

Prosecutors said they would no longer accept the lab's work unless it was verified by the medical examiner's office or University of North Texas Health Science Center.

Carmichael was named a "senior forensic scientist" based on the number of years she had worked at the lab, not on any special qualifications, her attorney said.

"We still fall back on the position that the city of Fort Worth did not properly train Ms. Carmichael," Smith said. "However, she still stands by all of the work she's done while employed by the city."

Carmichael, who has worked at the lab since 1999, had recently been placed on paid leave after a colleague alerted lab director Phil Aviles that she failed to follow protocol during a proficiency test.

Aviles requested that DNA experts with UNT, which is acting as the lab's technical adviser, review the test results.

In memos obtained by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram last week, the experts agreed that Carmichael failed the test and expressed "serious concerns" about her training and laboratory practices.

In their review of the crime lab, the experts said they observed inconsistent dating of reports, documents missing from case folders and questions about peer reviews.

Aviles then began reviewing almost 100 DNA cases processed in the crime lab, including Carmichael's work.

That prompted the department's major case unit to start an inquiry to determine whether a criminal investigation is warranted.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It's good to see participation

To the editor:

It's good to see a lot of participation in the upcoming election. It's nice to see some businessmen take part in our on-going debate about the death of our PEDC.

During the election to vote out the PEDC, the business community was deathly silent about it and they are and will be the first to feel the effects of a dying economy. I didn't understand their silence then and I still don't.

If they don't take an active part in this election and help vote in progressive people to guide our community in our effort to keep our city alive, we will all suffer the consequences. Our votes should pay particular attention to how individual candidates would handle the property Celanese gave to all of us. This property could be valuable in our city acquiring much-needed industry. We should all fight tooth and nail to keep this valuable property.

I don't think anyone that is part of the so-called "Concerned Citizens" group should ever be elected to anything, as all they have done is try to sabotage our local government and our economy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, April 22, the 112th day of 2003. There are 253 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 22, 1970, millions of Americans concerned about the environment observed the first Earth Day.

On this date:

In 1451, Queen Isabella I, who sponsored the voyages of Christopher Columbus, was born in Madrigal, Spain.

In 1509, Henry VIII ascended the throne of England following the death of his father, Henry VII.

In 1864, Congress authorized the use of the phrase "In God We Trust" on U.S. coins.

In 1889, the Oklahoma Land Rush began at noon as thousands of homesteaders staked claims.

In 1944, during World War II, U.S. forces began invading Japanese-held New Guinea with amphibious landings near Hollandia.

In 1952, an atomic test conducted in Nevada became the first nuclear explosion shown on live network television.

In 1954, the televised Senate Army-McCarthy hearings began.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson opened the New York World's Fair.

In 1983, the West German news magazine Stern announced the discovery of 60 volumes of personal diaries purportedly written by Adolf Hitler. However, the diaries turned out to be a hoax.

In 1994, Richard M. Nixon, the 37th president of the United States, died at a New York hospital four days after suffering a stroke; he was 81.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum was dedicated in Washington D.C. to honor the victims of Nazi extermination.

It is possible to refine war

"War is cruelty. You cannot refine it." That's what Union Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman told Atlanta officials in 1864. But the U.S. armed forces during the past month routed both Iraq's army and nearly 140 years of military doctrine.

Sherman was a military innovator, consciously going against the tradition of not waging war on civilians. During 1863, his forces in Mississippi pillaged and burned towns. In 1864 in Georgia, he ordered his men to "burn 10 or 12 houses of known secessionists, kill a few at random, and let them know it will be repeated every time a train is fired upon." In 1865, even one of Sherman's majors complained to his wife of "the frightful devastation our army was spreading" in South Carolina: "Women, children and old men turned out into the mud and rain, and their houses and furniture first plundered and then burned."

Sherman's doctrine produced victory in the short run. Had his army not taken Atlanta, a war-weary, disunited Union might well have elected Democratic candidate George McClellan rather than re-electing Abraham Lincoln. McClellan probably would have agreed to negotiations concerning Southern independence. Had Sherman not shown a willingness to wage war on civilians, the surrender of Robert E. Lee might have been followed by years of guerrilla warfare. But Sherman's success came at a price that went beyond individual suffering: for decades afterward, resentment and sometimes hatred of Yankees prevailed in parts of the South.

The American Civil War was a precursor in many ways to the wars of the 20th century. The machine guns that first emerged during the Civil War became central to the trench slaughter of World War I. Not until World War II, though, was the Sherman Doctrine taken to its extreme. Hitler's Germans tried to break British will by bombing the civilian populations of London and other cities. Children were just part of the body count. German troops in other countries replied to snipers by lining up civilians and shooting them.

Then came the counterattack. Allies dropped dumb bombs on German cities, pointing to military targets and factories but bringing huge "collateral damage." Later, American and British forces tried to break the German (and then the Japanese) will by going after civilian populations, as well. Regrettable, they acknowledged, but what was the alternative? "War is cruelty. You cannot refine it."

At the height of the Cold War, the United States planned to respond to a Soviet nuclear attack with "mutual assured destruction": They wipe out our civilian population, we wipe out theirs. It's no surprise that the left bought into this concept, lock, stock and gun barrel, assuming during the Vietnam War years that American involvement in Southeast Asia represented cruelty, and there was no way to refine it.

This past month was refinement time, and the place was Iraq. Yes, civilian deaths sadly occurred, but destroyed military targets often sat next to undamaged civilian structures. "Smart bombs" and very smart missiles provided the opportunity for a refined war, yet human decisions were still key, with military planners selecting ordnance and time and direction of delivery to ensure the least possible chance of civilian damage. An emphasis on speed, mobility and flexibility allowed soldiers to go around potential dangers rather than roll over them.

The Sherman Doctrine died during the past month in part because of a political strategy to influence the world's opinion of the war. It died in part because of technological progress. It died in part because we recognized that Iraq's regime, and not most of its people, was to blame. But it also died because, as often as the Bible will be ignored in the United States and the United Kingdom, many American and British leaders had grown up within an ethos powerfully influenced by a biblical understanding of compassion.

"War is cruelty. You cannot refine it." Not so.

Listening to Tim Robbins whine

Poor Tim Robbins. He thinks his rights are being stripped away — that he can no longer speak out, that he's being gagged by a president he despises — yet he managed to cry about this assault on his rights to free speech in front of the nation's media, which gleefully broadcast his views.

He's talking about his first amendment rights being violated, but where does he make this complaint that he's being prevented from stating his views publicly? Why before the National Press Club in Washington, about the most public forum around. Moreover, that speech last Tuesday has been rebroadcast and rebroadcast all across the nation. Some gag.

He keeps whining about Clear Channel and talk radio spewing out hatred and the dangers of limiting free speech at the very time he's threatening a correspondent from the Washington Post for having reported accurately that his live-in girlfriend's mother had said that he and her daughter, Susan Sarandon, were brainwashing her grandchild.

Free speech it seems does not apply to Washington Post reporters who write stories he doesn't like.

Robbins rails against the Iraq war — a war that was waged against a socialist regime. Could it be that he objected to an attack on fellow socialists?

Robbins' main complaint is not that he's being gagged — he can't claim that when just about every word he speaks gets reported by the liberal media — but that the American people can't be forced to pay attention to his ranting.

MICHAEL REAGAN

He's angered because the Baseball Hall of Fame had cancelled a joint appearance with Sarandon to celebrate the anniversary of the movie "Bull Durham." He can't understand that it is the right of any group to decide to whom they want to provide a forum — he is so blinded by his unique conviction that everybody everywhere must be forced to listen to his socialist drivel, that he denies that right to the Hall of Fame and other venues which have shown the good sense to shun him.

You can stand on my doorstep and spew hatred about my father, but I'm not going to invite you into my house to attack my dad. It's my house. He's complaining because baseball said he can't come back to Cooperstown because he's so political that they are fully aware that he will use the occasion for more of his vicious anti-American ranting.

He insists that America is bitterly divided on the Iraq war, implying that more than half the nation is opposed to it — but his arithmetic is somewhat faulty — fully 73 percent of Americans support President Bush and his decision to oust Saddam Hussein and his brutal socialist regime from power.

To listen to him you would think that Americans are cringing in fear, desperately afraid to speak out. It doesn't occur to him that they are speaking out, and what they are saying is not what he wants to hear — that in overwhelming numbers they approve of the war and applaud the President's deft handling of it.

He also rants about talk radio. He simmers with hatred for the one channel that gives the American people views opposed to those espoused by the dominant mainstream media awash in liberalism.

The American people listen to talk radio, to Rush and Sean Hannity and me because we discuss the values that unite most Americans. The reason why liberals can't succeed in talk radio is that their twisted values are not only not shared by the majority of Americans, but are anathema to them.

If Tim Robbins can't get his demented views across, it's not because he's being gagged, but because his fellow Americans don't want to listen to him spewing out his hatred for George Bush and all the values they hold dear.

Hong Kong progressing in struggle with SARS

HONG KONG (AP) — Quarantine measures appear to be paying off in Hong Kong's fight against SARS and the government leader expressed optimism about beating the disease, but experts say a sustained drop in new cases is still needed to claim victory.

Hong Kong took a step toward normalcy Tuesday as 200,000 secondary students returned to class after a three-week precautionary closure, but the teens and teachers were told to wear surgical masks and have their temperatures taken daily. Younger students were still staying home, and a few schools refused to open.

Chief Executive Tung Chee-hwa said Monday that Hong Kong was "slowly, but surely getting the figures stabilized" and added he was growing increasingly optimistic about containing SARS. The disease has now sickened more than 1,400 people in Hong Kong and killed 99, with five new deaths reported Tuesday, mostly in octogenarians with other chronic illnesses.

Hong Kong reported 32 new SARS cases on Tuesday, following back-to-back reports of just 22 each on Sunday and Monday, which had been the lowest totals this month.

Experts call a decline in new cases encouraging, but some say Hong Kong needs to see a sharp and sustained drop, and they warn the territory's proximity to mainland China, where the disease originated and is still spreading, could complicate matters.

"You really have to look at trends — the daily figure or two days or three days doesn't really mean anything," said Malik Peiris, a microbiologist at the University of Hong Kong. "Really what you need to look at is maybe on a week, two-week basis, is there a consistent trend downward? Then, one can feel more confident."

Hong Kong would appear heading in the right direction if new cases dropped into the single digits and stayed there, said Henry Niman, a Harvard University instructor who teaches surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital.

"It wouldn't mean Hong Kong was out of the woods, but it would be an indication things are contracting in Hong Kong rather than expanding," Niman told The Associated Press by telephone on Tuesday. "It needs to continue going down and getting into single digits on an ongoing basis would be a good indication things are getting better."

Hong Kong recently began quarantining anyone from the households of recent SARS victims, while stepping up efforts to find potential contacts, which Tung said Monday the efforts had led to 150 suspected cases being detected and getting early treatment.

4-H Clover Kids program offers up fun and learning

By JUDY ELLIOTT
FOR THE NEWS

"I like showing lambs, pigs and all that stuff" is how 8-year-old Renee Baggerman describes what she likes best about 4-H Clover Kids program, offered by Texas Cooperative Extension Service in Gray County.

4-H Clover Kids is offered to youngsters in kindergarten through second grades and gives students the opportunity to learn social skills, develop self-esteem and build family strengths while participating in informal, noncompetitive educational projects and activities.

This year's Clover Kids have participated in a variety of activities.

"We try to do activities that teach them about projects they'll get to do in regular 4-H," said program coordinator, Heidi Baggerman.

For example, while the 4-H program was conducting its foods and nutrition project, Clover Kids learned to make fun and nutritious snacks. They even made their own food dishes and served them at a tasting party held during this year's Gray Co. 4-H Food Show.

Clover Kids showed animals in the county stock show's Pee Wee Showmanship division, and, to go along with the clothing and textiles project, created their own T-shirt designs to model during the county fashion show recently.

Kashmir separatists reject talks with Indian; five die in blast

By MUJTABA ALIAHMAD
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — A bomb exploded beside a rural road in Kashmir on Tuesday, killing five people and injuring 12 others as an Indian government negotiator visited the area to try to resolve the dispute over the divided Himalayan region.

The explosion 40 miles south of Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu-Kashmir state, occurred along a road frequently used by army patrols — the presumed target of the attack.

The explosives were apparently placed by the road near a community pasture where the victims had gathered to milk and graze their cows.

No group claimed responsibility for planting the explosives, but authorities suspected separatist militants who have fought for 13 years to merge India's portion of Kashmir with Pakistan, said Ghulam Hassan, a local police officer.

The attack took place as former Indian Home Secretary N.N. Vohra made a weeklong visit to the state to explore the possibility of talks with separatist groups.

But separatist leaders said Vohra did not have the mandate to discuss the issues they want to raise.

"If he can declare that he is prepared to discuss the future dispensation of Jammu-Kashmir, only then a dialogue offer from him would merit our consideration," said Abdul Ghani Bhat, chairman of the separatist 23-party All Parties Hurriyat Conference.

The largest Islamic militant group in Kashmir said Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee's offer to hold talks with Pakistan was not made in good faith. Spokesman Salim Hashmi of Hezb-ul Mujahedeen called the offer "a deception to gain time to crush the freedom movement in Indian-occupied Kashmir."

Islamic militants have been fighting since 1989 for mainly Muslim Kashmir's independence from India or its merger with Pakistan in an insurgency that has claimed 61,000 lives.

Vajpayee said on Saturday that India would send a top foreign ministry official to Islamabad to draw up a schedule for negotiations if Pakistan announces an end to its support for cross-border attacks and closes training camps for Islamic guerrillas in its territory.

Pakistan says it is ready for talks, but denies there is any infiltration launched from its territory.

Hundreds drowned, many more missing after ferries capsize in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Rescuer workers have recovered 100 bodies after two ferries capsized on Bangladeshi rivers during a tropical storm and hundreds more people are missing, authorities said Tuesday.

The MV Mitali, with an estimated 400 passengers crowded onto its two decks, overturned Monday in the Buriganga River near the capital Dhaka, the Shipping Ministry said.

Authorities recovered 95 bodies, including women and children. Some passengers swam to shore, but more than 200 people were still missing, authorities said.

"The death toll is certain to rise," said Selim Newaz Chowdhury, spokesman for the Bangladesh Fire Brigade.

"No one really knows how many people were on board the ferry or how many of them survived."

Rescue workers used cranes to lift the sunken boat, where many bodies were believed to be trapped.

Hasina Begum, a school teacher, wept in front of the body of her 2-year-old daughter, Mithila.

"I could not save my daughter. I've no right to live," said Begum, who was returning to her home in southern Bangladesh after attending a conference in Dhaka.

Earlier Monday, the ML Majlishpur ferry, carrying an estimated 90 people in a wedding party, capsized in the Meghna River, 50 miles northeast of Dhaka.

Authorities said about 30 passengers swam ashore, but the others, including the bride, were missing and feared dead. Five bodies had been recovered by Tuesday, said Priyatosh Shah, a government administrator in the area.

Ferries in Bangladesh don't always keep a list of passengers, making it difficult to determine the exact number.

The capsizings took place as strong winds and rain lashed the South Asian country.

Separately, United News of Bangladesh reported that 12 people died when their house collapsed in the north. Hundreds of flimsy homes were damaged by falling trees and electricity poles.

Tropical storms are common this time of year in Bangladesh, a delta nation of 130 million people, as are boating accidents. On Sunday, storms killed at least seven people and injured 50 others, officials and news reports said.

U.S. Special Forces kill enemy fighter in gun battle

BAGRAM, Afghanistan (AP) — U.S. Special Forces killed a suspected enemy fighter in a gun battle during a night raid in southern Afghanistan, an army spokesman said Tuesday.

Thirty-six special force soldiers raided two compounds Monday night after intelligence reports said people in the area were planning attacks on U.S.-led coalition forces in Afghanistan, Col. Roger King told a news briefing at Bagram Air Base.

Seven people were taken into custody during the raid, King said.

King said he could not say where the raid took place because the operation was continuing.

About 11,500 troops from a 23-country coalition are in Afghanistan pursuing remnants of the Taliban regime — which was expelled from power in late 2001 — and hunting down fighters of the al-Qaida terrorist network who lived under Taliban protection.

It was not immediately clear if the dead man had belonged to either group, King said.

"The reason we knew he was an enemy fighter was because he picked up an AK and started popping caps — that normally is the defining moment," King said, referring to an AK-47 assault rifle.

ELECT
W. CHARLES SMITH
PISD School Board - Place 4
May 3, 2003

Hello, my name is Charles Smith and I am seeking your vote for Place 4 on the PISD School Board. I would like the opportunity to work with the parents, faculty and administration to provide our children the best possible education we can afford. I feel good communications and closer involvement are necessities in the process of the board and education. I also feel efficient use of funds is vital in our current system and in the future strength and vitality of our schools.

If elected, I will work hard to improve communication and efficient use of our school dollars.

Thank You

William Charles Smith

BUSINESS REVIEW

B&B Pharmacy offers personal service

A small town pharmacy offers services a larger pharmacy cannot provide.

Home-owned and operated, B & B Pharmacy is dedicated to providing personal service to all of its customers. Dennis Roark and his wife Donna have owned the local pharmacy since 1988.

The pharmacy offers a full line of medical needs, including ostomy supplies. Special orders can be obtained in one day. Crutches, canes, braces and wraps are always in stock. Medical needs for sports-related injuries can also be found.

Customers at B & B Pharmacy receive personal service from the Roarks. "We try to make our customers feel comfortable and free to ask any questions they might have," said Roark.

The staff at B & B Pharmacy strive to provide the personal service a big chain cannot provide.

"We try to stay away from the personalities of a big chain where you are just a number," he said. "Drugs have some interactions that can cause serious medical problems. We welcome our customers to come to us with any concerns about interactions with their medications. It is important to us to know them and their needs.

"If any person has questions about the over-the-counter medications and possible reactions with their prescriptions, I would be more than happy to assist them."

Long time customers know that the staff at B & B Pharmacy will do all they can to meet the needs of their customers. New customers will find the personal service appealing to them.

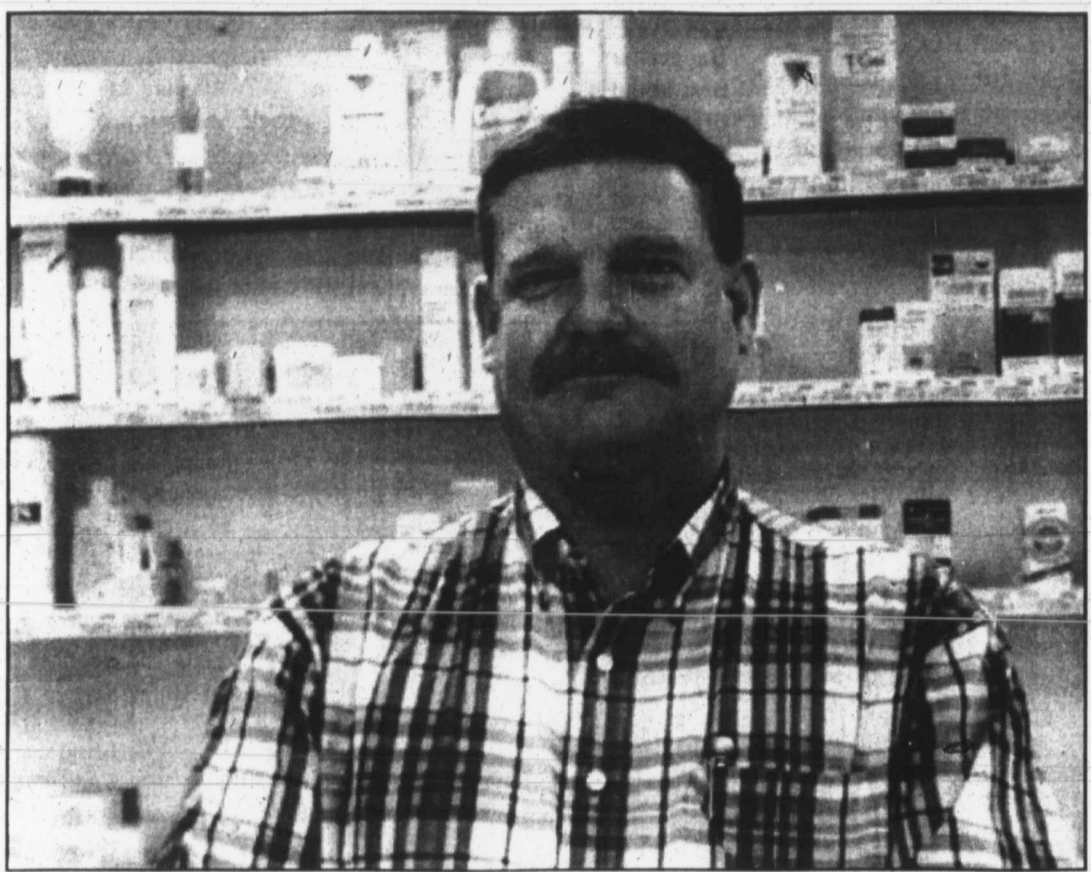

"We want to provide our customers with their needs," said Roark. "New customers are always welcome."

The store covers almost all insurance plans.

B & B also provides free prescription delivery service.

The pharmacy is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays. The business is closed on Sundays and holidays.

B & B Pharmacy is located at 300 N. Ballard, and their phone number is 665-5788.

Furor continues over management perks at airline

By DAVID KOENIG
AP BUSINESS WRITER

FORT WORTH (AP) — American Airlines chairman and chief executive Donald J. Carty says he thought employees would admire his plan to retain key executives, but instead the furor over management perks has left American dangerously close to filing for bankruptcy.

On Monday, the second of American's three main unions said it would hold a new election on the company's plan for cutting labor costs by $1.8 billion a year.

The Transport Workers Union joined the Association of Professional Flight Attendants in calling for another vote, increasing the possibility that the deal will be rejected. The third big union, representing American's pilots, said its board would meet in emergency session Tuesday.

All three unions voted last week to approve the concessions but say they were outraged to learn of executive perks while their own members were approving big pay and benefit cuts. American has vowed to file for bankruptcy protection if any of the unions fail to approve the cuts. Carty repeated that threat Monday.

Even before the transport workers' announcement, investors showed their concern by bidding down shares of American Airlines' parent, AMR Corp. In trading Monday on the New York Stock Exchange, the shares — which rose 52 percent last week on optimism that American would dodge bankruptcy — fell $1.15, or 23 percent, to close at $3.85.

In meetings with union leaders and reporters Monday, Carty took personal blame for not disclosing the executive perks sooner.

Last year, the AMR board approved large bonuses for seven executives, including Carty, if they stayed at the company through January 2005. It also approved $41 million in payments to a pension trust for 45 executives, including Carty, that would have been protected in bankruptcy, just like other employees' pensions.

The company has dropped the bonuses but not the pension funding.

Carty defended the payments as necessary to keep senior executives and said he thought the retention plan would win praise as more modest than plans at other airlines.

Although he didn't name them, Continental and Delta airlines have been criticized by workers for approving similar plans during a severe downturn in the airline industry.

"I really believed that we were going to look very good by comparison," he said. "I should have been a lot smarter."

The benefits were approved last year but only publicly disclosed last week, on the same day that employees were scheduled to finish voting on the concession deals.

Carty said the late disclosure in a mandatory securities filing was a mistake. He said he didn't release details sooner because he feared the public would think there was a mass exodus of senior officials from the company. Then there was another delay this month while the company's outside auditors reviewed tax treatment of the provisions, he said.

"All of our employees, union and nonunion alike, did what was necessary to help avoid bankruptcy, and then I stumbled," Carty said.

Union leaders said it was unclear whether Carty's apology would prevent the unions from reversing their earlier approval of concessions to head off bankruptcy.

"He was very sincere and apologetic," said James C. Little, leader of the transport workers' group, as he left the meeting with Carty. "I don't know if that's enough to satisfy the employees."

Presbyterian minister flouts church's ruling

BLUE ASH, Ohio (AP) — A Presbyterian minister whose denomination convicted him of violating church law by marrying same-sex couples says he will continue performing the ceremonies.

The Rev. Stephen Van Kuiken, 44, said he feels obligated to press the issue in hopes the Presbyterian Church (USA) will stop what he calls its discrimination against homosexuals.

"The status quo in the Presbyterian Church is inflicting pain. So we need to ensure that that pain is addressed and the issue is not ignored," the minister of 19 years said after a court of church officials announced its decision Monday.

In the church's first trial on the issue, Van Kuiken received the mildest form of punishment — a public rebuke that directs him to only marry a man to a woman. He could have been temporarily suspended or removed from the ministry.

The court acquitted Van Kuiken of the charge that he ordained as deacons and elders gays who do not adhere to a church rule of chastity for unmarried lay ministers.

The court said local congregations and their ruling boards select the lay people for ordination and it would not convict Van Kuiken of something not under his authority.

Van Kuiken said he appreciated being spared stiffer punishment, but admitted more charges and trials could follow because he will continue to perform same-sex marriages as pastor of Mount Auburn Presbyterian Church in nearby Cincinnati.

"I intend to appeal the guilty verdict because I believe that this decision is theologically wrong and contrary to the Scriptures," he said.

His appeal would go within 45 days to the denomination's next highest level of courts, the permanent judicial commission of the synod that oversees Presbyterian churches in Ohio and Michigan.

The highest Presbyterian court ruled in 2000 that ministers may bless same-sex unions, but cannot marry such couples.

Van Kuiken, a married heterosexual originally from Grand Rapids, Mich., joined Mount Auburn about three years ago from the Church of the Apostles in suburban Minneapolis.

He said he performed a same-sex marriage on April 12, four days after his trial, and he plans to perform another in May.

Van Kuiken was the first minister to be tried on accusations of marrying homosexuals as a result of complaints filed by Presbyterian activists in about 20 locations around the country. Some complaints were investigated and dismissed for lack of evidence, and others are pending.

Audrey Hepburn auction nets $177,000 for needy children

NEW YORK (AP) — She favored Givenchy ball gowns, traveled with Louis Vuitton luggage and wore Lacoste polo shirts during visits to some of the world's poorest villages.

On Monday evening, admirers of the late Audrey Hepburn had the chance to take home some of the Oscar-winning actress' personal effects and other donated items at a Sotheby's charity, which raised $177,000.

Hepburn's son, Sean Hepburn Ferrer, said the money would be used to support the Audrey Hepburn Children's Fund, which was founded in 1994, a year after she died, and works with the U.S. fund for UNICEF.

Before Hepburn's death from colon cancer at the age of 63, she served as an ambassador for UNICEF, raising awareness of children's issues around the world.

Among the items on auction were a Givenchy ball gown worn by the doe-eyed actress in the 1957 film "Funny Face," which sold for $17,000, and a new collection of 25 multicolor Lacoste shirts, which sold for $2,000. The sculpture "Spirit of Audrey," by the artist John Kennedy, sold for $6,000.

Hepburn won an Oscar in the 1953 film "Roman Holiday" and achieved icon status as Holly Golightly in the 1961 movie "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

High court to hear Texas death row inmate's appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court justices could use an appeal from one of Texas' longest-serving death row inmates to re-examine rules for evaluating whether a lawyer's poor performance affects the outcome of a trial.

Delma Banks claims his original lawyer failed to do all he could to save him from a death sentence, and that prosecutors sat on evidence that undermined the state's case.

The court stepped in to temporarily spare Delma Banks' life minutes before his scheduled execution in March, and will now hear his full appeal. The court will hear Banks' case next fall.

The court is already looking at a separate case that could restate similar rules that measure a lawyer's competence.

Both cases address an issue that has troubled at least two Supreme Court members. Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Ruth Bader Ginsburg have questioned the quality of some lawyers assigned to represent poor defendants like Banks.

Death penalty opponents say such lawyers are often ill-prepared and may have little experience with complex capital cases. Under the Constitution's Sixth Amendment and previous Supreme Court rulings, every defendant is entitled to an effective lawyer.

"These very important cases are being tried by some prosecutors who are cheating and some defense lawyers who are not living up to the Sixth Amendment," said one of Banks' new lawyers, George Kendall of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. "You have both those elements in this case."

Banks claims his original lawyer never told the jury about Banks' family and background that might have persuaded a jury to choose a sentence of life in prison.

He also claims prosecutors improperly withheld evidence that calls into question testimony of a key witness for the state. The witness later recanted parts of his testimony and hid the fact that another trial witness was a paid informant.

"In this capital proceeding, some court should review the lawfulness of the state's suppression of a transcript revealing that the state's key witness was unworthy of belief," Banks' new lawyers wrote.

Banks was convicted in 1980 of killing Richard Whitehead, a 16-year-old former co-worker at a fast-food restaurant. Banks had no previous convictions and maintains his innocence.

Witnesses reported seeing Banks with the victim the night he was shot, and driving the victim's car afterward. Prosecutors say the case against Banks is solid, and that time already has run out for Banks to make any more appeals.

The case has attracted national media attention and a group of prominent supporters. Former FBI Director William Sessions, also a one-time federal judge in Texas, joined other former judges and a prosecutor in asking the high court to hear the case.

"The paramount importance of adequate defense counsel in capital cases cannot be overstated," the Sessions filing said. "When a criminal defendant is forced to pay with his life for his lawyer's errors, the effectiveness of the criminal justice system as a whole is undermined."

The Supreme Court declined Monday to review Banks' claim that prosecutors wrongly kept blacks off the jury. Banks is black; his victim was white and the jury was all white.

Greenspan to undergo prostate surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is undergoing surgery for an enlarged prostate — a common problem for men his age — and is expected to be back at work later this week.

Greenspan is often spoken of as the second-most-powerful man in Washington because of the impact his words and the Federal Reserve's actions can have on interest rates and the economy in general.

The surgery was scheduled for Tuesday at a local hospital that Federal Reserve officials declined to identify.

"Chairman Greenspan on Tuesday will spend a short time in a local hospital to be treated surgically" for an enlarged prostate, the Fed said in a three-sentence statement. "He plans to be back in his office later this week."

The statement and Fed officials offered few details.

The enlarged prostate was detected during a regular examination, and follow-up tests conducted last week showed no cancer, Fed officials said.

Fed spokeswoman Michelle Smith said Greenspan would be treated as an inpatient and would not be under general anesthesia. She also said Greenspan underwent similar surgery in June 1994.

The Fed announced Greenspan's impending surgery on Monday after Wall Street markets closed for the day.

Greenspan, who turned 77 in March, has been serving as Fed chairman since August 1987. His current term as chairman runs to June 20, 2004.

The prostate is a walnut-sized gland that can enlarge as a man ages, making it difficult to urinate. More than half of all men over 60 have the condition, called benign prostatic hyperplasia, or BPH — and 80 percent of men get it by age 80.

DEAR ABBY

written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips

Earth Day Reminds Us To Clean Up Our Act

DEAR ABBY: Please remind your adult readers to be more respectful of our planet. At 13, I have observed people who are careless with their trash and abuse the Earth with toxic chemicals and in other ways. They forget that even though they won't be around when the Earth starts breaking down, we younger generations may be.

All my life I've heard adults say stuff like, "We love you and will never let anything harm you." But if grown-ups don't clean up their act, something will harm us. And it will be because of them.

WORRIED TEEN IN GEORGIA

DEAR WORRIED TEEN: Because today marks the 33rd anniversary of Earth Day, your letter is especially timely. When Earth Day began, there were no pollution controls on cars, people and entire cities dumped untreated sewage into rivers and landfills, industrial communities were often shrouded with smoke and smog, and some rivers were so polluted with chemicals that they actually caught fire.

We have made advances since 1970, but we cannot afford to become complacent.

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Roger," was recently divorced from his wife. His two sons, 10 and 12, are with him every weekend. Roger told me that after the boys stay at his home, things come up missing — CDs, tapes, loose change, etc.

Roger finally said something to his ex-wife, but she told him to deal with it.

Soon after that, the kids stayed at my home for a day, and sure enough, after they left, I also discovered items missing. Please tell us how this problem can be handled, Abby. I would like to show the boys' mother your response.

MICHIGAN GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: When couples separate, they still have a joint responsibility to the children they brought into this world. Topping the list of lessons that responsible parents should teach by example is how to be a good citizen and a person with character.

Big crimes usually start with petty ones. Your grandsons are crying out for attention in a negative way. Ideally, the mother and father should speak to their sons together, but if their mother chooses not to deal with the problem, then their father must do it alone. The boys must be confronted and the items returned. Your son should also consider spending more time with the boys, until they have adjusted to the new situation. If that fails, family counseling is in order.

DEAR ABBY: I overheard my cousin, "Jenny," tell our 16-year-old daughter that it was OK to consume alcohol, and that she was welcome to drop by her house any time if she wanted a drink. (Thank heaven she lives more than a hour and a half away!) While I trust my daughter not to take Jenny up on her "offer," I think she was out of line. Do teens really need the added pressure of an irresponsible adult telling them it's OK to drink before they reach the legal age limit? How should I handle this if it happens again?

MIFFED IN MARYLAND

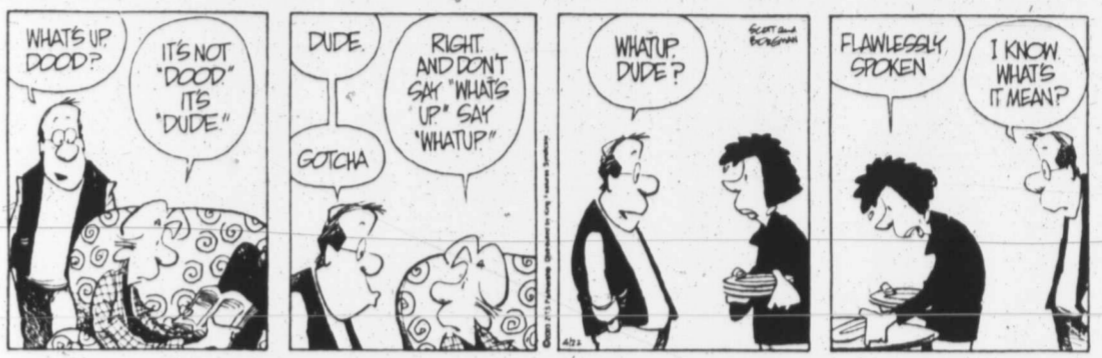

DEAR MIFFED: For Jenny to have made such an offer is a blatant attempt to circumvent your parental authority. Do not stand for it. Remind your cousin that providing alcohol to minors is against the law, and let her know that if it happens you'll inform the police. As a parent, your first responsibility is to your child.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Davis not impressed with Dallas defense

DALLAS (AP) — Statistics indicate the Dallas Mavericks have drastically improved on defense.

Portland center Dale Davis says otherwise.

"Some of the things they do are a little different, but they're pretty much the same Dallas team," Davis said. "It shouldn't be a problem."

But the Mavericks' D was a problem for the Trail Blazers in Game 1 of their first-round series.

After scoring 31 points in the second quarter, Portland had just 34 in the second half, turning a 10-point lead into a 10-point loss. Dallas won 96-86.

To Davis, that only proves that the Blazers have some kinks in their offense to work out. Game 2 in the best-of-seven series is Wednesday night.

"We just have to move the ball and keep cutting on them," he said. "When we do that, we're usually pretty good. When we stand around, we're not that good of a team. We have to move the ball and play together."

Defense used to be what the Mavericks did until they got the ball back. Not any more.

Ever since being outscored by Sacramento in the second round last season, Dallas has been committed to stopping teams from scoring. There's even a banner looming over their practice court that serves as a reminder. It notes that the Kings made "207 field goals with 115 layups and dunks!"

Then coach Don Nelson and assistant Del Harris devoted most of training camp to defense. They implemented a variety of zones and worked on their man-to-man coverage.

A 14-0 start proved the strategy was working. The Mavs kept it up to win a franchise-record 60 games. They also were still able to lead the league in scoring for a second straight season.

More proof:

— Although Dallas allowed 95.2 points per game to stand 16th in the NBA, it was 5.8 points lower than the previous season and the biggest improvement in the league.

— Opponents made only 43.8 percent of their shots, the lowest in franchise history and 12th-best in the NBA.

— Points allowed also were a better indicator of wins or losses than points scored. When Dallas broke 100, it went 43-9; when opponents hit 100, the Mavericks went 14-17.

"With our offense, we're always going to be in games," point guard Steve Nash said. "But we're going to win games consistently with our defense."

The Blazers know that breaking down Dallas' defense is the key to victory. They scored 73 and 88 in two regular-season losses to the Mavs and had 100 and 112 in two victories.

Game 1 followed that same pattern.

"I think they kind of buckled down a little more," Portland coach Maurice Cheeks said. "They made a concerted effort to try to defend and rebound the ball. When they stepped up their level, we didn't step up ours."

FOOTBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Bowl is getting Christmastime off.

The game, which for its first three years has fallen on the Friday after Christmas, has agreed with ESPN to play the afternoon of Dec. 30 this year.

"Playing on December 30th will greatly enhance ticket sales," bowl president Jerry Ippoliti said. "And now their families will be able to spend Christmas together and then travel to Houston for the game."

Dave Brown, director of programming and acquisitions for ESPN, said the network plans for a bowl doubleheader featuring the Houston Bowl, then the Holiday Bowl. Both will feature Big 12 teams.

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers are in better shape in the AL West under new manager Buck Showalter, even though they are still in last place.

Texas completed its opening 19-game stretch against AL West teams with an 8-11 record. That's just three games behind division-leading Seattle.

"It's the strongest division in baseball. We've faced three of the best teams in the first 19 games," said first baseman Rafael Palmeiro. "I'd like it if we'd won a couple more and be closer to .500. But we've shown we're a capable team."

At this point last season, the Rangers were 5-13 and already 9 1/2 games back, effectively eliminated from the division race the first month of the season. They finished 72-90, 31 games behind Oakland, after losing 13 of their last 16 against AL West teams.

Two years ago, Texas was 10-10 after the first go-round against the West and 5 1/2 games back of fast-starting Seattle. It just kept getting worse after that.

"If you get too far behind at the beginning, that's what you're going to face at the end," said outfielder Ruben Sierra. "It's going OK. We can be better. I think we're going to be better."

The Rangers took three of four last week from defending World Series champion Anaheim. They followed that by losing 9-0 (a six-hit shutout by AL Cy Young winner Barry Zito) and 12-2 at Oakland before a 2-1 win on Sunday night to avoid the three-game sweep.

Texans secretive about draft

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Texans general manager Charley Casserly dispelled any mystery about the expansion team's first draft pick. Quarterback David Carr already was house-hunting by the time Houston formally chose him at No. 1 in 2002.

This time around, the Texans own the No. 3 overall pick and have everyone guessing. What they decide to do could be the key to how things unfold next weekend.

"It's a different draft. There's no question about that," Casserly said.

If Houston keeps its pick, the most likely possibilities are Miami receiver Andre Johnson and Arizona State defensive end Terrell Suggs. Suggs acknowledges his stock dropped after a poor pre-draft workout he attributes to simply having a bad day.

The team also has hosted Kansas State cornerback Terence Newman and Utah offensive lineman Jordan Gross, both of whom could still be available if the Texans trade down a bit.

Or perhaps Houston will trade for Cincinnati's top overall pick and snare Michigan State receiver Charles Rogers, who also visited the team this month. But if the Texans don't move up, the Detroit Lions are a virtual lock to take the home-state product at No. 2.

"To make it simple, if we stay at 3, we're going to get a starter," Casserly said. "If we trade back we're going to get a player who will start for us and something else."

"We're looking at a lot of options, and we have for a long time. We're still debating a lot of issues."

Despite the horror show put on by the Texans' offense last season — Carr's record 76 sacks at the forefront — Johnson and Rogers say they're eager to come aboard and improve things.

"David Carr is a great player and great quarterback," Johnson said. "I've talked to him a few times. He said if I had any questions at all to give him a call. He's hoping I can be here with him. I'd like to be here a long time, and maybe we could start something great."

Rogers made it clear he'd be just as happy to come to Houston as he would be to stay close to home.

"People who know football know I'm the best player in the draft," Rogers said. "I make good plays. I make great catches. I run fast. I can stretch the field. I can get open. I'm all of the above. I feel like I'm the total package."

There are other intriguing names. Suggs could step in and fill a pass-rushing void left by Jeff Posey, who signed with Buffalo after leading Houston with eight sacks. Newman could make cornerback Marcus Coleman expendable, opening up salary-cap space.

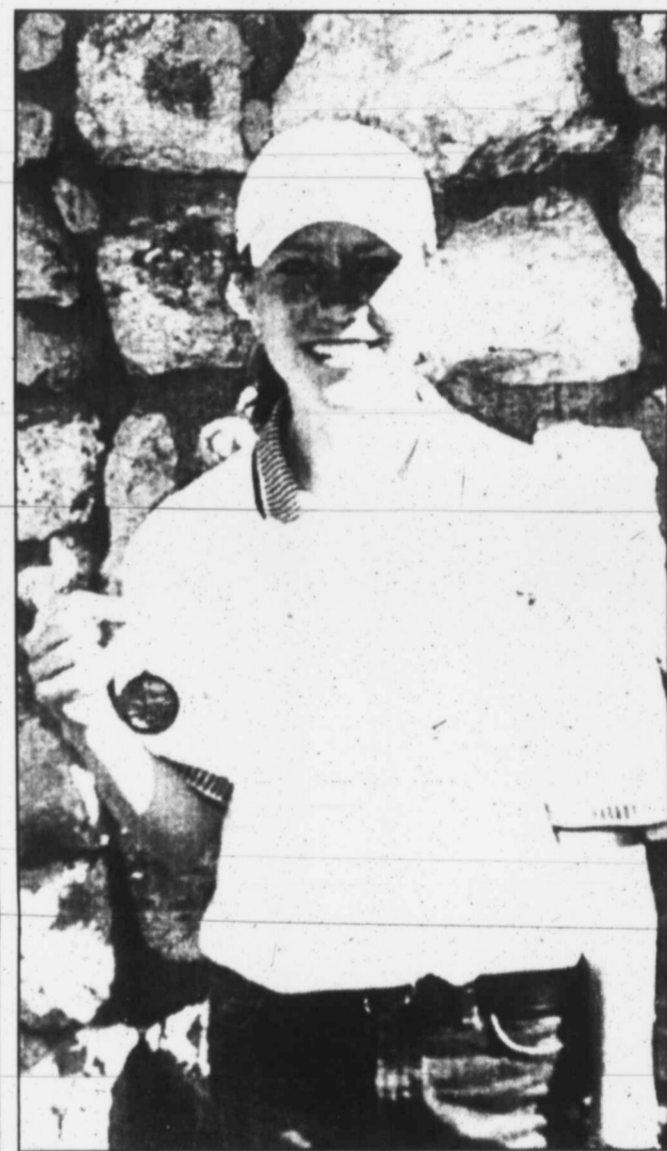

Or the Texans could take Gross so he could help keep Carr upright a little more often.

"If the Texans decide to trade (down), it's still an option. And if they don't, it's still an option," said the 6-foot-5, 306-pound Gross, who sees himself drafted anywhere from No. 3 to the low teens. "On draft day, I'll definitely be sitting on the edge of my seat for about two hours waiting to see what will happen."

Lost in the first-round speculation is the Texans' opportunity to add much-needed depth across the roster. Houston surprisingly boasted the NFL's 16th-ranked defense last year, but had precious little depth, a weakness masked by the unit's lack of injuries.

Of course, after fielding one of the weakest offenses in recent memory, there's plenty of room for improvement and depth at every position except quarterback.

Horoscope BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, April 23, 2003:

Your playful ways draw others. Think in terms of what would be possible if you loosen up. Don't be so uptight about a strong authority figure. It isn't worth taking this person on; instead, learn to work with this associate. Extremes mark your life. Your home life might have a very special tone to it. If you are single, you will be in a relationship by the new year if you remain open to the possibilities. This person could arrive as soon as late summer. If you are attached, add more caring to your relationship through nurturing and other gestures. AQUARIUS can be pushy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)  What you want does count. Think in terms of gains and potential changes because of your ability to work in a group. Extremes tend to come through a relationship

UC latest to look at professor-student dating

By MICHELLE LOCKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — University of California professors are contemplating a new question this spring: Does dating your student flunk the ethics test?

Faculty are scheduled to vote on new rules this spring, completing a process that began well before the dean of UC's top law school left amid a sex scandal last fall.

The policy would make UC the latest school to ban the classroom courtships, joining such schools as the University of Michigan, the University of Iowa and Yale.

"It seems that more and more institutions are developing such policies in the hopes of avoiding having to deal with the issue when there's no policy in place," says Donna Euben of the American Association of University Professors.

Although UC doesn't have a no-dating decree — faculty recommended drafting a policy in 1983 but it was not made formal — there has always been an unwritten rule that getting involved with students is a bad idea, says Gayle Binion, chair of UC's Academic Senate and a political science professor at UC Santa Barbara.

Still, Binion says it's a good idea to get it in writing. Faculty have been working on a dating policy since late 2001, she said.

"Even though the vast majority already live by an ethical norm, you still need to ... show that the institution has a position and then to deal with the rare case of someone who violates it," said Binion.

The proposed policy would make it a breach of the code of conduct for a faculty member to engage in a "romantic or sexual relationship" with a student for whom he or she has, or should expect to have, academic responsibility.

Nationally, universities have taken different approaches to the question of professor-student relationships.

At Ohio Northern University, the faculty handbook dictates that "faculty and staff members should not have sexual relations with students to whom they are not married."

At the University of Michigan, romantic relationships are not forbidden but are considered to be a violation of ethics if the faculty member supervises the student. Faculty members are required to tell a supervisor if they are having a relationship with a student.

At the College of William and Mary in Virginia, all dating between professors and undergraduates was banned after a former instructor wrote an embarrassing article about his affair with a student.

At UC, some campuses, including Berkeley, already have guidelines on dating students, but the proposed system-wide policy, to be voted on by faculty in May, is more strongly worded.

Some outside the system think the new policy is a mistake.

"I think it's unethical. It's an intrusion into personal and private relationships," says Barry Dank, a sociology professor at California State University-Long Beach. "It's the bureaucratization of sexuality."

Dank married one of his students in 2000, although he notes the marriage raised no eyebrows, perhaps because his wife is his contemporary in age.

Dank argues there are laws forbidding illegal behavior such as sexual harassment and says dating policies confuse consensual relationships with harassment.

Laci Peterson's parents not mentioning her spouse

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Laci Peterson's parents spoke longingly of their daughter but would not publicly speak the name of her husband, the man accused of killing her and their unborn son.

Scott Peterson pleaded innocent to murder charges Monday. Hours later, Laci Peterson's anguished mother broke the public silence she has maintained since the two bodies were found last week on a San Francisco Bay shoreline.

"I can only hope that the sound of Laci's voice, begging for her life, begging for the life of her unborn child, is heard over and over and over again in the mind of that person every day for the rest of his life," Sharon Rocha said.

Scott Peterson, 30, is being held without bail on charges he acted "intentionally, deliberately and with premeditation" in killing Laci Peterson, 27. She was nearly eight months pregnant when she disappeared.

Hours before, Scott Peterson's name was read in a Stanislaus County courtroom during a brief but emotional appearance where he was charged with two counts of murder. The charges against Peterson include the special circumstance that he allegedly committed multiple homicides, which lets prosecutors seek the death penalty.

Documents filed Monday by prosecutors said the killings happened at the Petersons' Modesto home between Dec. 23 and Dec. 24.

The two corpses washed ashore last week about three miles from where Peterson said he was fishing in San Francisco Bay on Christmas Eve when his wife vanished.

Hours before the remains were identified Friday using DNA, Peterson, a fertilizer salesman, was arrested in San Diego County because police feared he might flee to Mexico. He was carrying nearly $10,000 in cash, his naturally brown hair was blond and he had grown a beard.

Peterson was clean-shaven as he entered court with his hands cuffed and ankles shackled.

Rocha wept as the charges were read. Jackie Peterson, Scott Peterson's mother, hugged Rocha before the arraignment but the two sat on opposite sides of the courtroom.

Public defender Tim Bazar was assigned to the case after Peterson said he could not afford to hire a lawyer. The case was continued until a May 6 bail hearing.

District Attorney James Brazelton said his office would probably decide by a May 19 hearing whether to seek the death penalty, but he told ABC News it was likely.

Defense lawyer Kirk McAllister, who had represented Peterson before the arraignment and met with him in jail Saturday night, said there was a good explanation for the cash his client had during his arrest, but declined to discuss that or other elements of the case.

"The press wants instant truth. The police want self-serving truth. Hopefully, there will be a process to get to the whole truth about what happened."

McAllister said. "The police had to make an arrest in this case or they would have looked like Mayberry RFD."

Investigators had long declined to name Scott Peterson as a suspect, even as they seized his truck, fishing boat and more than 100 items from the couple's home. Peterson maintained he had nothing to do with his wife's disappearance, saying he last saw her when he left to go fishing the day before Christmas.

New machinists can get strike benefits in Lockheed Martin walkout

FORT WORTH (AP) — The union striking for better wages and relief from high medical insurance and prescription drug costs at Lockheed Martin Aeronautics Co. says new machinists at the plant which manufactures fighter jets will qualify for strike benefits.

About 450 employees newly hired at Lockheed Martin Corp.'s North Texas aircraft manufacturing plant were approved for benefits of the International Association of Machinists even though they haven't yet worked the three months required by association bylaws to become eligible for such pay, the union's president said Monday. Pat Lane, president of IAM Local 776, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Tuesday's online edition that "this will help the solidarity of the union. There were quite a few new hires who could have fallen between the cracks but the union will take care of them."

The strike, the third since 1984, began on April 14 after about 4,000 IAM members voted against accepting a proposed contract with wage increases that some union members said would be sharply cut by higher health care costs.

One of the most objectionable provisions, according to workers, was a change requiring greater co-payments on prescription drugs by workers.

Union leaders and managers reported no negotiations or contacts on Monday. A federal mediator has been in contact with the opposite sides, but no sessions have been scheduled.

Striking employees at Lockheed Martin will miss their first paycheck this Friday. Workers under union rules can start receiving the $125 weekly strike pay after a walkout has lasted three weeks. IAM President Tom Buffenbarger wrote union members.

Bethesda, Md.-based Lockheed Martin's Fort Worth plant, the second-largest employer in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, will build the Polish government 48 F-16 jet fighters for $3.5 billion, the biggest defense contract by a former Soviet bloc country since the end of the Cold War, it was announced on Friday.

The plant which built hundreds of F-16s for the U.S. military in past decades has also been manufacturing the center section of the F/A-22, which will replace the F-16 but is not yet in use by the U.S. military. Lockheed also builds the F-2, another fighter jet, for Japan. The union's production workers will begin building the new F-35 Joint Strike Fighter later this year.
