American Airlines top officer resigns

FORT WORTH (AP) — On one of the most turbulent days in American Airlines' history, the embattled chairman and chief executive resigned, the board met in emergency session and the company's unions split over concessions designed to slash labor costs.

By late Thursday night, the world's biggest carrier was right where it started the day: staring down the barrel of a potential bankruptcy filing.

The outcome may rest with flight attendants, who balked at approving a slightly sweetened package of concessions.

Crall, PEDC negotiate agreement

By NANCY YOUNG
MANAGING EDITOR

Crall Products, Inc., and Pampa Economic Development Corporation are working together to keep the 28-employee business in Pampa and get it current on its payments to the entity.

Most of those employees attended a special PEDC meeting Thursday night to listen as the five PEDC board members and company owner Curtis Heard discussed Crall's past due payments to the PEDC.

Recently Heard said he had experienced numerous financial reversals with the economic downturn in recent years. Last night he told the board he wanted to work out an agreement with them.

Approximately 70 to 80 local residents were at the meeting which began in the second floor conference room of Pampa City Hall. The meeting had to be moved to the City Commission Chambers on the third floor to accommodate the large overflow crowd of people who attended the meeting. Still, people were standing.

Following a discussion between Heard and board members it was agreed that Heard would meet with his accountant and consider re-amortization of his loan. Board members will review the proposed restructuring of the loan at the next meeting scheduled for May 12.

Earlier in the day, Heard's staff received a visit at his business from an attorney, Mark Flowers, who represents the county in tax collection matters. Flowers, who is from Odessa, drove to Pampa to discuss the past due taxes with Crall Products. Crall Products paid $13,000 towards past due taxes and worked out an agreement to pay the taxes to the entities in Gray County. The taxes were on inventory, supplies, furniture and fixtures. Flowers said an agreement was worked out for payment of the remainder of the taxes due on the business.

He added that there would have been a seizure of property Friday morning if there had not been a substantial payment made on Thursday.

The paid taxes were from 2000 and 2001.

As most, if not all, Crall employees looked on Thursday night, Heard told the PEDC board that sales at the local company have decreased from $3.5 million annually to just over $1 million this past year.

Heard borrowed over $350,000 total on two notes for property and equipment from PEDC in 1997 for his business with three percent interest.

At the April 14 meeting of the PEDC, Heard, who is six months past due on his payments to the PEDC, sent

Superintendent finalist may 'fill the bill'

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
EDITOR

After a series of interviews with a cross-section of the community last February, consultants hired to help Pampa Independent School District's board of trustees select a new superintendent developed a set of desirable qualities that came close to describing Superman.

Ironically, when two school board members visited superintendent finalist Barry Haensch's district in Merkel Monday, people there used many of those qualities to describe Haensch.

Pampans said in February that they wanted an effective communicator, delegator, and leader that gets along well with the staff and the community. They wanted someone who was a confident decision-maker, and manager. This person also needed to be an experienced educator who could motivate staff and students to their highest achievements.

And they wanted someone with high moral standards, personal ethics, and integrity.

Merkel school district staff and community members described Haensch as an educator who was respected by staff and students alike. He was "approachable," they were told, with high moral integrity. They said he was a good communicator who struck them as being honest, positive and thoughtful. And one of the bankers saw him as being "rock solid."

After a state-mandated 21-day waiting period ends and the hiring finalized, Haensch is set to become Pampa ISD's superintendent, effective June 1. He is being hired on a three-year (plus one month) contract at $94,500 per year, school officials said.

"This is a career opportunity and a chance to the area," Haensch said in an interview Wednesday.

He said he and his wife, Linda, also an educator, want to return to the Panhandle area where they've lived longer than anywhere else. For 16 years, they lived in Gravel where Haensch moved up the ladder from teacher/coach, counselor, principal, and for seven years as school superintendent.

As Pampa ISD superintendent, Haensch said that while he has no specific plans for the future, he intends to continue with his basic philosophy: "First it's critical to teach children to read," he explained. "The best predictor of whether or not a child will drop out is how well they read."

His one goal, he said, is "to prepare every child to be successful in every endeavor they want to be in." This includes academic, college preparatory, sports and technical and vocational training, he said.

"I like the idea of a variety of programs, a variety of opportunities which Pampa has," he said.

Mesa pulls petition

By DAVID BOWSER
STAFF WRITER

MIAMI — In a surprise move, Mesa Water, Inc., is withdrawing its petition to form a fresh water supply district in the Texas Panhandle. Roberts County Judge Vernon Roberts said today that he had not been officially notified, but if such a request was mailed in Dallas Thursday, it may be Monday before he'd get it in Miami.

"I have not seen anything at all," Judge Cook said this morning. A lawyer for Mesa Water, Robert L. Striwell, said Thursday the Mesa landowners can sell their ground water without the fresh water supply district.

Mesa had petitioned the Roberts County Commissioners' Court in November, asking for establishment of a 46,000-acre fresh water supply district.

The move by Mesa was seen as an effort to gain the a written proposal to the board requesting to settle his account with them by paying $48,565.21 on a property note of $250,000 and $12,160.31 on an equipment note of $100,000.

The PEDC board responded last week by deciding to attempt to sell the notes and ask him to make payments on the interest.

In an interview with The Pampa News following that meeting, Heard said he still owed about $190,000 on the land and building note and about $48,000 on the equipment note. While behind on the notes, he said he has paid approximately 40 percent in interest.

During Thursday night's meeting, Heard said he would like to work out an agreement with the PEDC.

"Our sales are coming back. We've got some good things working in the future. We've got about $400,000 in-house (work for his business) right now that we are working on," he said. "We've got projects coming in all the time, and we have cut, cut, cut. I would like to make some kind of deal with you as far as our notes. Right now, I'm just doing everything I can."

Board member Steve Phillips explained that the current PEDC board is charged with closing down the PEDC. He told those attending the meeting that the voters decided in November 2001 that the PEDC should be dissolved, and that all members of the current board are charged with collecting the debt and getting it closed down.

It was estimated the PEDC could possibly be closed by the fall of 2004. When it does close, voters can petition and hold an election to open another EDC in Pampa.

Making a referral to Crall's business with the PEDC, another board member added that the current board wants the community to grow and prosper.

"While we're (the current PEDC board) not in the business of economic development," said board member Gary Sutherland, "we're not in the business of shutting down businesses either." He said the EDC wants to work with Heard.

management administration and superintendency.

His accomplishments at Merkel ISD include improving the district rating to exemplary in 1999-2000 (the year he became superintendent) and 2000-2001. Three of the five campuses were rated exemplary in 2002-2003, while two were rated as recognized. During his tenure, the district received two major grants for technology and renovation and many of the facilities were upgraded. The district also received a clean fiscal audit each year he served as superintendent.

While at Gruver ISD, the district improved to exemplary status for the last two years of his time there. He instituted a number of programs to assist Hispanic students with limited English skills, as well as their families, when the Hispanic population of Gruver significantly increased.

"I don't have any answers," Haenisch said in his initial interview with Pampa ISD staff. "I don't have an idea of what the questions are," he told them. "But you do."

He said he was willing to listen and learn. "Then we'll get together and we'll decide how to address these things as a team," he said.

Pampa has responded to him enthusiastically, so far, Haenisch said.

"It's been great," he commented. "But I knew it would be. This community has a reputation that precedes it."

ability to issue tax free bonds to finance project and use the power of eminent domain across the state to build a pipeline to from Roberts County to an end user.

Roberts County landowner and Dallas businessman T. Boone Pickens, who organized Mesa Water three years ago, said initially that he intended to sell water from beneath his ranch and the ranches of his neighbors who joined him to either the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolplex, San Antonio or El Paso, although he did not rule out other buyers.

Last year, high impact pumping permits were approved by the Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District, allowing Mesa to pump one acre-foot of water from beneath each of the 150,000 acres they represent.

The permits are similar to ones granted earlier to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, who provides water to 11 communities, including Pampa, and to the City of Amarillo.

Mesa's petition for a fresh water supply district and a petition submitted in January by a group of Roberts County landowners wanting a countywide fresh water supply district were pending before the county commissioners, who are awaiting a Texas Attorney General's opinion on procedural matters.

Stilwell said Thursday that Mesa's decision to suspend their effort to form a fresh water supply district in Roberts County was made in response to recent progress in finding a buyer for their water.

"We feel our efforts right now should be focused 100 percent on marketing our water and not on this unduly protracted administrative matter," Stilwell said.

Visiting preachers inspire outdoor revival meetings

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles by local historian, Eloise Lane, detailing the evolution of religious observance in Gray County.

By ELOISE LANE
SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

There were no priests or preachers, in the area of present Gray County in 1875 when U.S. soldiers came to build a fort to protect settlers coming into the area. After the fort was constructed near Mobeetie, there was always a chaplain at the fort that came to be known as fort Elliott. For a time Father Sullivan came from Dodge City, Kan., about once a year and, after 1880, an occasional preacher drifted into the settlements.

When preachers visited the area, families for miles around would gather enough food and clothing to last a week and camp out at the revival meeting grounds. A big tabernacle would be constructed, or a tent set up, to house the services. Families would sing, listen to sermons and enjoy visiting with each other.

with a preacher from first one denomination and then another visiting the area. Baptists and Methodists seemed to be in the majority in the early days.

From these tabernacle services arose union churches in schoolhouses, homes or wherever there was room enough for Sunday School classes and preaching services.

In 1884, Rev. C.W. Alexander, who was assigned by the Presbytery to organize a church at Mobeetie, was the first Protestant minister in the Panhandle of Texas. After his death in 1886, his wife, Mary Jane, became the first woman rancher in the Texas Panhandle.

Ben F. Williams, an experienced teacher, came to an area near future Laketon in 1885. He taught the first school in Gray County and organized the first Sunday School in the county. About the same time, Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson and two of her sons, Jim and Burl, came to neighboring Roberts County. Another son, B.F. (Frank) Jackson, was in school at Vanderbilt University.

Also in 1885, Frederick William Jahns came to the area and filed on land several miles north and east of future Laketon. The next year he brought his wife, Permilia Ann, and their four children. The family of six lived at first on two half dugouts with dirt floors and roofs.

The Jahns family built a house and began to invite friends and neighbors from miles around to come to their home whenever a preacher was available. The first religious services in Gray county were held in the home of Permilia Jahns who had a pump organ. She asked Frank Jackson to preach when he was home on vacations. She told him that she would furnish the congregation if he would furnish the sermons.

The families who came to these services prepared and brought much food, and the entire day was spent in worship, singing and fellowship. The preachers must have found it difficult to stand alone and try to feed the souls of those present while good cooks, vying with each other for being the "best cook," fed their stomachs from food-laden tables.

Next week: Laketon settlers build "Highwindy" - school, church, gathering place.

We can learn a lesson from little Cliff

I had the honor and privilege to speak at a funeral today; a funeral of a 19-month-old baby named Clifford Blake Allen. The focus of my message was twofold. First, there is no doubt where Cliff is. He's with the heavenly Father. Second, any adult who wants to see Cliff again better be a "real deal, born again" disciple of Jesus Christ. But that isn't what I want to share with you. Something happened after the celebration service that really spoke to me.

At the close of the celebration balloons were released by many in the crowd. It was to be a sign of affirmation as to Cliff's new home - Heaven - and our commitment to live in such a way that we would see Cliff again when we get there. Then everyone began to hug and visit.

At one point I walked over to the side to watch a particular red balloon. The winds were powerfully strong. Just about the time the red balloon left my sight, someone released another balloon. It was purple, I think. The wind immediately caught it and pushed it straight for a tree near the Super Playground. Sure enough it landed in the branches. Part of me was a little sad because it was too high up in the tree for me to reach. But then the wind which had driven it into the tree, pushed it right through the limbs and into the air again.

Then it missed the school building and was forced by the wind into the trees south of the school. It hit one tree and bounced around until it made its way through and into another tree. And then through that one and into another. And then through that one and into another. But then the wind, the culprit that had forced the balloon into the trees, caught that balloon and shot it skyward. The last time I saw that balloon it was heading for the heavens.

That is when the Lord showed me how Cliff was like that balloon. He was born with so many physical difficulties that he shouldn't have made it long past birth. But he did. For him it seemed that life was one struggle after another. Four heart surgeries and more poking and shots than any child should ever have to go through. But even through all that he loved his family and Veggie Tales. He was a Veggie Freak.

The troubles persisted and increased until the day when he headed to heaven - April 11th, 2003. That was his Graduation Day.

What I want to remind everyone of is this: Your life may be seem to be or, might even be, mainly a series of troubles and hurts. And you might even think there isn't any hope. But you would be wrong. Learn from Cliff. Even in all of the troubles and pain there are people for you to love, people who love you and good things to go bunkers over. Just make sure that you are ready for the trip on your Graduation Day. If Jesus isn't your Savior and Lord, you aren't ready. So get ready. Surrender all of you to Him. Then one day He'll send His angels to come and fetch you to His side. And like that balloon you will shoot skyward like a rocket. And on that day every trouble and every ounce of pain will seem insignificant. If you don't believe me, just ask Cliff. God bless.

Southern Baptist convention posts membership gain

NASHVILLE (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention, America's largest Protestant body, grew again last year.

The Southern Baptists reported Tuesday that membership reached 16,247,736 in 2002, a handsome gain of 194,816 people, or 1.2 percent over the previous year.

The conservative denomination also reported increases in local congregations (42,775) and missions (5,439). However, there were slight declines in annual baptisms (394,893) and Sunday School enrollment (8,174,493).

Total financial receipts increased by 6.4 percent, to $9.5 billion.

Istanbul patriarchate elects Greek Orthodox bishop

NEW YORK (AP) — The bishops of the Ecumenical Patriarchate in Istanbul, Turkey, have unanimously elected Archimandrite Evangelos Kourounis to be the Greek Orthodox metropolitan for New Jersey, ending a vacancy of nearly three years.

The Greek archdiocese in New York said Kourounis was the first choice among three names submitted to Istanbul by the U.S. bishops.

Kourounis, 42, was ordained a priest in 1989. He has been dean of the Cathedral of St. Demetrios in the Queens borough of New York City the past two years.

Draft will be first major test for Parcells, Jones

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Whom the Dallas Cowboys take with the fifth pick in the draft will only be part of the story Saturday.

How they do it will be far more interesting.

Will Bill Parcells have the final say? Or will Jerry Jones remind his new coach who signs the checks and proudly announce that he's taking "the next Quincy Carter?"

As intriguing as it sounds, the reality probably will lack fireworks.

The coach and owner-general manager haven't shown the slightest hint of conflict in their first four months together, with both praising their "partnership."

The draft, however, will be the first major test.

"It's been great," Parcells said during league meetings last month, which was the last time he spoke to reporters. "It really has. Are things a little different than what I'm used to? Sure. I'm sure they're different for him, too."

Jones has been calling the draft-day shots in Dallas since Jimmy Johnson left 10 years ago.

With far more misses than hits, the Cowboys have won only one playoff game since their last Super Bowl title in 1995.

They've gone 5-11 the last three seasons, prompting Jones to hire a proven winner in Parcells.

Parcells has plenty of holes to fill as he tries pulling off another of the rapid turnarounds he made with the New York Giants, New England Patriots and

New York Jets.

At No. 5, he could boost his plans with players such as cornerback Terence Newman of Kansas State, sack specialist Terrell Suggs of Arizona State and offensive lineman Jordan Gross of Utah.

Then again, all three — or maybe just the one they want most — might be available a few spots lower.

And the oil wildcatter in Jones does tend to come out on draft day, making it possible that Dallas tries scooting down. Jones said it would take a fabulous offer for him to drop very far.

"We are keeping our options open about whether or not we trade up or trade down," Jones said. "Someone asked me the other day, would you rather have a great player or two good players? Well, if I knew which we picked him high he was going to be a great player, then that answers itself."

Last April, Jones was widely praised for dropping two spots and still getting the player he wanted, safety Roy Williams, while adding picks that helped Dallas land receiver Antonio Bryant in the second round. It wasn't without drama, either, as the 15-minute draft clock expired before the swap was announced and commissioner Paul Tagliabue even announced that the Cowboys had passed.

Since Jones bought the team in 1989 and made the no-brainer first overall pick of Troy Aikman, he's kept his top pick only twice. Jones also has made a trade during every draft except one.

Parcells also showed a tendency to wheel and deal when he ran the Jets' draft from 1997-2000.

"Bill Parcells has been in many draft rooms and he's excellent with talent," Jones said. "He will be the first to tell you that he doesn't make all of the right picks over the years, but certainly he has a lot of experience and we are going to draw on that."

The Cowboys probably will use one of their eight picks on a running back.

Troy Hambrick is still the front-runner to replace Emmitt Smith, who was released in February, but his promotion opens a backup spot.

Quarterback doesn't appear to be much of a priority, at least not through the draft. Should Parcells want options beyond Carter and incumbent Chad Hutchinson, he's more likely to trade for a veteran or sign someone who gets released after June 1.

GOLF

PAMPA — Vernon DeVoll of Pampa had his first hole in one Monday at Hidden Hills Public Golf Course.

He used a 3-wood to ace the 172-yard, No. 8 hole. It was witnessed by his son, Coy DeVoll.

BASEBALL

CHICAGO (AP) — Fans with upper-deck seats at Chicago White Sox home games won't be allowed into other levels of the ballpark unless they have season tickets.

The change was made after the team conducted an internal review of security and crowd management at U.S. Cellular Field. The review was partly prompted by an attack on an umpire during a game last week, White Sox spokesman Scott Reifert said.

Eric Dybas, 24, ran onto the field on April 15 and grabbed umpire Laz Diaz around the legs during a game between the White Sox and Kansas City Royals.

HOCKEY

DALLAS (AP) — The eighth and final period began with the public-address announcer telling fans, "Good morning."

Within a minute, Anaheim's Petr Sykora made it feel like a long, bad night for the Dallas Stars.

Sykora ended the fourth-longest game in NHL history when he fired a shot past the stick of Dallas goaltender Marty Turco 48 seconds into the fifth overtime early Friday, continuing the Mighty Ducks' stunning postseason run with a 4-3 victory in the opener of their second-round series.

"It was a bang-bang play," Turco said. "That's the way it goes. We need to concentrate on emotionally getting back and preparing for Game 2."

"Of course it hurts. It hurts all over. But we've got to play tomorrow."

Seventh-seeded Anaheim, which swept defending Stanley Cup champion Detroit in the first round, is 5-0 in the playoffs, with three wins in overtime. The Ducks have needed nine extra periods, but goalie Jean-Sebastien Giguere has made it worth every second.

Anaheim will certainly be on an emotional high when Game 2 begins about 37 1/2 hours after this one ended. The Mighty Ducks' upset of the second-seeded Red Wings began with a three-overtime win. Now, they've gone five extra periods to beat the No. 1 seed.

"We played hard, that's all," Anaheim coach Mike Babcock said. "Guys are exhausted and guys are dehydrated, but a win gives you a chance to get your energy back."

Mets turn back Astros

NEW YORK (AP) — Pedro Astacio was itching to get back into the rotation and the New York Mets were eager to have him.

They all seemed pretty pleased after Astacio's performance Thursday night.

Activated from the disabled list before the game, Astacio pitched six neat innings in his first game of the season and also contributed at the plate, leading the Mets over Houston 7-4.

"They want me, they need me, and I want to be out there and grab the ball," Astacio said.

The Mets matched their longest winning streak of the year at two and their season high for runs. They did it minus All-Star catcher Mike Piazza, a late scratch from the starting lineup because of a sore groin.

Astacio, projected to be New York's No. 3 starter, missed most of spring training because of tendinitis in his right shoulder. After four rehabilitation starts in Class A, the Mets deemed him ready to come back and start against his former team.

It was perfect timing, after David Cone went on the disabled list this week with a sore hip.

"It's a big lift for us," Roberto Alomar said. "Pedro coming off the DL, nobody expected the way he was going to throw the ball."

Alomar delivered, too. Once again providing a spark from the leadoff spot, he doubled twice, drove in two runs and scored two times.

"I don't think I have to show anything," Alomar said.

"Sometimes you have a down year and people give up on you. I just have to go out there and play my game."

Wade Miller was wild from the start and the Mets took advantage to drop Houston below .500 for the first time this year.

Astacio (1-0) got off to a shaky start, hitting leadoff man Craig Biggio with a pitch and giving up a single to Geoff Blum. But he got Jeff Bagwell, hitting .636 with runners in scoring position, to ground into a double play and had little trouble after that.

Bagwell hit an RBI single in the sixth, and Astacio left after the inning ended with a 7-2 lead. He gave up four hits, struck out four and walked one.

"It's a great feeling, my first game," Astacio said. "But I'm not really surprised."
