AUSTIN (AP) - Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst said Tuesday that he expects Gov. Rick Perry will call another special legislative session to address congressional redistricting if a plan is not approved this session

Perry, speaking to reporters earlier, would not confirm that he would call lawmakers back ^x to the Capitol to redraw congressional districts if they fail to adopt a plan, but he left the option open.

"Oh, I never rule it out," Perry said.

Dewhurst, who presides over the Senate, said Perry told him he would call another session but Dewhurst also said he believes lawmakers should solve the issue now.

The state's top two officials made their comments a day after Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, joined 10 Democrats and said he would not support taking up redistricting, a potentially fatal blow to the move to the Before Burns and Officer Monty erwise to have been healthy, did not

Big Monday for troopers BY DEE DEE LARAMORE

Monday turned out to be a banner day for local Texas Department of Public Safety troopers who brought in more than 400 pounds of marijuana and four arrests.

The day started shortly after 9 a.m. when a trooper stopped a 2004 Dodge Intrepid for speeding in the eastbound lane of Interstate 40 near Shamrock.

A drug dog that had been in the area at the time of the stop alerted to the presence of drugs while doing a free air search, DPS officials said. Inside the Intrepid, troopers discovered about 75 pounds of marijuana concealed in a card board box and duffle bags in the trunk.

Richard Harlen Chapman, 52, of El Paso, was arrested and taken to Wheeler County Jail on marijuana possession charges.

Shortly before midnight, a DPS trooper stopped a 2003 Ford Windstar minivan for speeding on Interstate 40 near McLean. The occupants of the van all said they were coming from Los Angeles, but after that their stories conflicted, according to DPS reports, and a strong smell of marijuana also emanated from

TODAY IN HISTORY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, July 15, the 196th day of 2003. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 15, 1971, in a surprise announcement, President Nixon told the nation he would visit the People's Republic of China.

On this date:

In 1606, Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1870, Georgia became the last Confederate state readmitted to the Union.

In 1916, Boeing Co., originally known as Pacific Aero Products, was founded in Seattle.

In 1948, President Truman was nominated for another term by the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

In 1964, Senator Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona was nominated for president by the Republican national convention in San Francisco.

In 1965, U.S. scientists displayed close-up photographs of the planet Mars taken by Mariner 4.

In 1976, a 36-hour kidnap ordeal began for 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver as they were abducted near Chowchilla, Calif., by three gunmen and imprisoned in an underground cell. The captives escaped unharmed.

Someone on the Right erred

What the President said during his State of the Union address has suddenly become a major problem for him, and while much of the criticism is nothing more than cheap partisan politics that can have a serious affects on America's future, the administration has got to admit that there have been some screw-ups.

The President had every right to do what he did. He did the right thing. However, there's no getting away from the fact that there were major gaffes by the FBI and CIA and administration staff. But whether the screw-ups involve 9/11, or Afghanistan, or Iraq, nobody has offered their resignation and said, "Excuse me, I screwed up."

The President didn't write the State of the Union address, his staff did. It's their job to dot the I s and cross the T s – to make sure the President has the right information.

While his critics focus on that one single instance where the information was based on a falsified intelligence report, his own people who were responsible for using it are letting the president hang in the wind.

Whoever wrote that speech, whoever failed to exercise due diligence to use correct information and allowed the president to say that, really gave the left something to grab onto and chew on like mad dogs. If that isn't disconcerting enough, what's worse is that there is nobody in the administration willing to stand up and take the heat. Instead they are letting the President just hang out there all by himself and twist slowly in the wind.

It's about time that the President starts letting heads roll at the CIA and the FBI and even inside the White House. It's long past time for them to pay for their failures.

Tragically, this episode is having a serious effect on our troops in Iraq. We have people over there who are dying. And these liberals who are exploiting this issue here at home are encouraging their killers to keep shooting our men.

The left-wing media such as CNN, NBC, CBS, ABC and the New York Times, play up the political battle going on in the U.S. and the Iraqis who want to regain control and go back to the days of Saddam Hussein are using those battles here at home as a way to rejuvenate their cause in Iraq.

It's patently obvious that what the left is trying to do is to prove we shouldn't have gone into Iraq in the first place which gives the Ba'ath party members in Iraq and other pro-Saddam elements that are killing our troops the hope that the U.S. will cut and run and put them back in power.

In short, the liberal attacks on the president are nothing less than an invitation to the terrorist elements in Iraq to continue to kill Americans in the belief that if they keep at it long enough, the American people will get tired of the whole mess and demand that we bring our troops home.

They saw it happen in Vietnam, they saw it happen in Somalia and thanks to the anti-war liberals here at home, they have every reason to believe that it can happen in Iraq.

I promise you that if Howard Dean or John Kerry get the Democrat party's nomination, one of the planks in their platform will be "if you elect me I will bring the troops home from Iraq." And that will be all the terrorists in Iraq will need to hear – that if they just hang in there long enough and keep killing Americans, sooner or later Americans will go home with our tails between our legs, we'll be gone, and they'll be back in power.

If that happens, then the whole world will be in turmoil and Armageddon will be right around the corner because the world will know America doesn't have the guts to finish what we start. And if that happens, we can blame it on the screw-up and those Democrats cynical enough to exploit it.

In 1978, President Carter, in West Germany for an economic summit, presided over a "town meeting" during which he fielded questions from an audience of about 1,000 Berliners.

In 1979, Carter delivered his "malaise" speech in which he lamented what he called a "crisis of confidence" in America.

In 1997, fashion designer Gianni Versace was shot dead outside his Miami home; suspected gunman Andrew Phillip Cunanan was found dead eight days later.

Sunblock yes, mind block no

This month and next, many people will lie on the sand holding "beach reading" -- light fare designed to give brains a rest as bodies bake. But one ambitious vacationer wrote me last month, complaining that he had received only a "feelgood sandbox education" in school and wanted to read some meaty stuff: "Any chance of helping with reading suggestions?"

Sure - because that victim is not alone. Most of us have come away from a "progressive" education system that gives us a little knowledge and makes us even more dangerous than those who are unschooled and aware of deficiencies. Nevertheless, opportunity waits: Those willing to read long and deep can go far on their own.

What to read? Many recent books are terrific. On American culture, Gertrude Himmelfarb's One Nation, Two Cultures, Tom Wolfe's Hooking Up and Thomas Sowell's The Vision of the Anointed are all good reads from the past few years. On the key question of evolution vs. intelligent design that Texas educational overseers are wrestling with this week, Phillip Johnson's Darwin on Trial and Reason in the Balance or Michael Behe's Darwin's Black Box are among the books worth surveying.

But we should also keep in mind the advice of C. S. Lewis ("On the Reading of Old Books"): read at least one classic for every three new books, and in that way "keep the clean sea breeze of the centuries blowing through our minds." So here come some suggestions concerning books written before 1700.

Which books? I'd start with the Bible. Unlike the scriptures of other religions, it portrays founders and heroes as real people and (with one exception) sinners all; it mixes theological exposition with realistic history and poetry that shows both ups and downs. Plato's dialogues are also well worth reading; I particularly like Gorgias, the one in which Socrates uncovers the threat and exposes the pretensions of a sophist who prizes style over substance and seems uncannily like some current politicians.

From ancient Greek drama, I'd suggest Antigone by Sophocles, which suggests the existence of a higher law that limits the power even of kings. From the Roman world, I'd pick a very late book, the Confessions by Augustine of Hippo, a vivid, honest and spiritually stimulating account of the inner life of a north African bishop whose theological insights are still vivid.

A top book from the medieval world is Dante's The Divine Comedy, an allegorical journey in which the punishments of Hell are symbols of the very sin that the lost souls embraced in life, evils chosen by their own will. At the end of that era stands Don Quixote by Cervantes, a parody of medieval romances that (as "The Man of La Mancha") became a hit in the modern world, since the saga of a man who insists on living in his own matrix is still both funny and thought-provoking.

Next on my list is John Milton's Paradise Lost, lots by Shakespeare (particularly "King Lear," "Hamlet" and "Macbeth") and John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, the allegory by a simple, uneducated repairer of pots and pans who happened to be a literary genius. I also like Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus, the legend of a man who sells his soul to the devil. In Marlowe's work, "Faustus" can repent at any time - "Christ's blood streams in the firmament" - but he won't, even as he is being pulled into the fires of Hell.

John Donne's Devotion's upon Emergent Occasions includes the rich metaphors and honest spiritual musings of a great poet as he faced death. Pensees by Blaise Pascal includes thoughts that remain fresh and provocative. From the 18th century, the time when novels become a popular literary form, Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe (get an edition that doesn't strip out the theological flavor) and Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels (again, not the cleaned-up version but the full-b e, withering satire on Enlightenment pretensions) are outstanding.

Almost all of these are available in inexpensive paperback editions that won't be hurt by a little sand. Sunblock yes, mind block no. For M See Our Ad U

Move To Assisted Living Gives Elderly Mom What She Needs

DEAR ABBY: Please allow me to offer my support to "Wants What's Best for Mom in New York," the woman whose mom is in her 70s. The mother's friends think she is "too young to be in assisted living' despite the memory problems she's having.

As you suggested, talking to them is a great idea. But she should emphasize to these friends that what she's doing is in her mother's best interests. It's relieving her of the burden of cooking, cleaning and paying bills. Relief from these burdens will cause her to relax and think more clearly - and her socialization will increase. Her nutrition will improve, and she will receive the proper dosage of her pre-scribed medications — at the right times. On some level, her mother knows her memory is slipping. Anxiety over that, as well as her responsibilities, causes more anxiety and more memory loss.

I have worked in assisted living for five years. Without feeling guilty, I placed my 79-year-old mother, who had similar problems, in the facility. The stimulation and support of others not only added to her life, but helped her feel she had a better life. She was free of her prior stresses. I have seen hundreds of cases of improved lifestyle, less depression, and more happiness and fulfillment in assisted living. That daughter needs to know she's doing the right thing. MICHELE B., ROSELAND, N.J.

DEAR MICHELE: Thank you for the helpful input, and for sharing your personal experi-ence. Now read on for more:

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Wants What's Best" to do what she needs to do for her mother. Get the assistance she needs and ignore the "well-meaning people." But first of all, take her car keys away from her. If she gets lost and doesn't remember what she's doing in the

Abby, please urge family members to do the "right" thing when they realize that elderly members of their families need help. MOTHER OF AN ANGEL IN MINNESOTA

DEAR MOTHER: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the tragic loss of your daughter. Your letter carries a strong message, and I'm pleased to share it. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Since I'm dealing with similar issues as that daughter in New York, it occurs to me that she might not know that in many places - and with many insurance programs supplementing Medicare — various services are available that can help to maintain individuals in their homes. It might be less expensive and more satisfying for all concerned to try this alternative before going to assisted living.

In my case, the insurance company provides a care provider who helps with housekeeping, meal preparation, giving meds, bathing, and trips to the doctor, pharmacy, grocery shopping, etc. And all for a minimal co-pay for any visit to pro-vide the needed care. DIANE IN INDIO, CALIF.

DEAR DIANE: For some people — not all — that's a viable alternative. Families who are interested should check with the local office on aging, local senior centers, the Visiting Nurse Association, their Medi-care supplemental insurance provider, Meals on Wheels, and local transportation companies to inquire if they provide free or low-cost transportation for seniors to get to doctors, pharmacies, markets, etc.

Pampa 14-15 All-Stars advance to state finals

SEMINOLE Optimist 14-15 Babe Ruth All-Star Team defeated Levelland 11-6 and Snyder 9-5 to advance to the finals in the West Texas State Tournament here Saturday and Sunday.

Eric Kingcade supplied the power with three home runs and six RBI against three different Levelland pitchers.

In the first inning both teams loaded the bases without scoring. Levelland scored the first run of the game in the second inning and scored again in the third. Pampa prevented another run from scoring with a 4-3-2 double play from Kingcade to Jake Craig to Keenan Davis.

Davis reached first on an error and Jonathan Carr was put in as a pinch runner. Robbie Dixon followed with a single to center and Kingcade's three-run homer put Pampa ahead 4-3. Craig ripped a double and scored on a single by Ryan Torres.

Levelland knotted the score at five with three hits Kingcade at second, Moler at

In the sixth inning, Levelland had the bases loaded with one run in, but Hickman choked off the rally, starting a 1-2-3 double play by throwing to Davis, who fired to Craig.

A sixth-inning single by Hickman was followed by Kingcade's third home run to provide the final margin.

CHICAGO (AP) Here comes the Rocket. Baseball, wanting players to take the All-Star game seriously, added Roger Clemens to the American League All-Star team Monday, saying Oakland's Barry Zito was unavailable to pitch.

Nonsense said Zito, who was befuddled about the bumpoff.

Zito said he found out about the switch while sitting with his All-Star teammates in a hotel ballroom, giving interviews. The commissioner's office said the decision was made by the Athletics, who said they told the lefthander Sunday.

"If I had some black-andwhite explanation, it would make more sense," he said.

Clemens, who had returned to Houston on Sunday night from the New York Yankees' series in Toronto, was told of his ninth All-Star selection Monday morning. The only six-time Cy Young Award winner then made plans to jet to Chicago on Tuesday.

Elite was edged 4-3 by the Lady Texans.

In the nightcap, catcher Jennie Rogers threw out two runners in the BadCats home half of the sixth, sealing the 7-6 victory for the Elite. Also for Pampa, centerfielder Callie Cobb fielded a base hit in the third and, threw out a BadCat at home with Rogers applying the tag.

In the fourth, firstbaseman Teryn Garner and thirdbaseman Haley Bowen combined for a double play on a grounder back to the pitcher.

Tice threw to first for the first out and Garner

Bowen knocked in two runs while Youree had an RBI and two stolen bases.

Tice picked up the win in six innings, allowed six hits and two earned runs while striking out six, walking two and hitting three batters.

Tice improved her record to 2-1.

The Elite's big inning was the fourth when four runs crossed the plate.

The Elite left three runers on and the BadCats four.

Schramm hired Tom Landry as the Cowboys' first coach and was with the team for the first 29 seasons. He left in 1989, two months after Jerry Jones bought the club and fired Landry, and was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame two years later.

Without playing a down, Schramm did as much as anyone to shape today's NFL.

"He played a major role in building the NFL into America's passion by developing a glamour franchise with national appeal and by his leadership on so many league issues," Tagliabue said.

Instant replay, sideline radios in quarterback helmets and starting the play clock immediately after the previous play were his ideas. So were wrinkles such as wide sideline borders and wind-direction strips

But for 12 years, Schramm remained the Cowboys' only Hall of Famer not to be inducted into the club's Ring of Honor because of a strained relationship with Jones

In April, Jones decided the man who created the Ring should be in it. Schramm, who brought the first 11 inductees to the Cowboys, was going to become the 12th member this fall.

"I never gave up hope," he said at a news conference announcing his selection, his eyes filling with tears. "Things that should happen to people that deserve them, usually do happen."

A strong personality with an imaginative football mind, Schramm had a protective love of the NFL.

Schramm was a significant force in the AFL-NFL merger in 1966 and was the original chairman of the league's competition committee, a position he held from 1966-88.

His first committee members were Vince Lombardi, Paul Brown and Al Davis.

Armstrong keeps yellow jersey despite bumpy ride

GAP, France (AP) fields and stomach viruses have made for an eventful Tour de France for Lance Armstrong.

Armstrong, seeking a record-tying fifth straight and he couldn't control it, and Tour win, narrowly missed crashing Monday for the second time in the race's centennial year.

Just over a week ago, he was lucky to avoid serious injury in the race's opening stage -, emerging with just bruising from a pileup involving 35 riders.

by Kazakhstan's won Alexandre Vinokourov, only quick reactions and a penchant for improvisation prevented a potentially disastrous fall.

Sweeping down a steep

High-speed crashes, near in Gap, Armstrong had to misses, treks across bumpy swerve suddenly as Spain's Joseba Beloki — a fraction ahead of the Texan jammed his wheel and fell from his bike.

> "The back wheel locked up then the back tire rolled and exploded," said Armstrong, recalling his rival's crash.

Now, Armstrong has ridden in many of Europe's quirkiest locations, but the sight of him trundling across a sun-parched field was a new experience.

In avoiding Beloki, who In Monday's ninth stage, lay prone on his side and was then rushed to a hospital, Armstrong had no option but to skid off the road. To rejoin the race; he decided against getting back on the tarmac. Armstrong turned left into a field, rode a short way, then descent close to the finish line lifted his bike onto his shoulder, as he delicately trod down a small hill of about 3 feet

> Because he didn't gain any time and didn't do it on purpose, Armstrong was not penalized for skipping the bend he missed when he went through the field.

He eventually got back on the road as a swarm of riders zoomed past him - including former U.S. Postal teammate Tyler Hamilton, who patted Armstrong on the back as he cycled past.

"I was lucky that the field was there like that. It could have been full of crops, it could be a drop. off, I was lucky," a relieved Armstrong said after finishing fourth in the stage.

He remains in first place overall, with 11 stages remaining.

Americans don't mind the links game at British Open

SANDWICH, England (AP) — Amie's Army led the invasion more than four decades ago.

The impact is still being felt through a new generation of American golfers, who have become quite adept at bumping and running their way around the links on this side of the Atlantic.

Six of the last eight British Open champions have come from the United States, a country that once scorned the oldest of the four majors.

"We've dominated it ever since we began to take it seriously," said Lee Janzen, practically thumping his American chest Monday after a practice round at Royal St. George's. "We've dominated all the ditions." The American renaissance began in 1995, when John Daly pulled off his improbable playoff victory at St. Andrews. Tom Lehman won the following year, then came Justin Leonard in '97 and Mark O'Meara in '98.

Scotland's Paul Lawrie broke the U.S. streak in '99, but Tiger Woods and David Duval won the next two British titles. Ernie Els of South Africa is the defending champion.

"It goes in cycles," said Sweden's Jesper Parnevik, who once played the European Tour but now is a regular on the American-based PGA Tour. "For the last six or seven years, America has had the top players in the world."

majors, for that matter."

Actually, he's embellishing the truth just a bit. The rest of the world took control of the British in 1984, the start of an 11-year period in which Mark Calcavecchia was the lone American winner.

Suddenly, it became fashionable to say that U.S. golfers, accustomed to playing lush courses and shooting straight at the flag, couldn't handle the stark, barren links of golf's roots

"It definitely takes some getting used to," U.S. Open champion Jim Furyk said. "I wouldn't want to do this every week. But the best players adjust, no matter what the con-

Ben Hogan played the British Open one time, won it and never came back. In those days, it cost more to make the trip to Europe than an American player could win.

But Arnold Palmer's first British appearance in 1960 after he already won the Masters twice and the U.S. Open once — sparked a change in attitude.

Palmer finished second in his British debut, then won the tournament in '61 and '62. Over the next two-plus decades, Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino, et al. helped maintain American dominance.

Several Pampa youngsters participated in the Buff Basketball Camp 2003 at West Texas A&M in Canyon last week. Winning competition awards were (front, I-r) Farmer Schaeffer, free throw contest; Hondo Schaeffer, most improved player; (middle, I-r) Michael Robinson, hustle award; Chase Harris, hustle award; Craig Crowell hustle award, and Tyler Hall, layup contest; (back, I-r) camp assistant Augie Larson, 1997 PHS graduate; Rick Cooper, WT head coach, and Jerry Schaeffer, WT assistant coach and former PHS head coach. Robinson, Harris, Crowell and Hall will be on the Pampa freshmen team this coming school year. They also played in the Kids Inc. 3-on-3 Streetball Challenge in Amarillo and placed second in their division.
