billion. The government will have to borrow to pay for the packages, adding to already huge federal deficits.

The latest request includes $4.5 billion for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which provides assistance to individuals and to state and local governments.

That means that if the requests are all approved, FEMA would get more than $8 billion for the four storms that have pummeled the Southeast since mid-August. The most FEMA has ever spent for a natural disaster was $7 billion after the 1994 Northridge earthquake in California.

The latest request was coming to Capitol Hill as the remnants of Hurricane Jeanne, the fourth in a row, rumbled north into Georgia after adding to the damage its predecessors caused in Florida.

While the first two requests focused on hurricanes Charley and Frances, the latest was supposed to include damage caused by Ivan — and some initial funds for recovery from Jeanne.

The new package also contains $889 million for the Defense Department to repair military facilities in the affected area.

Other requests in the $7.1 billion package include:

—$600 million to make emergency repairs to hurricane-damaged roads and highways.

—$472 million in Small Business administration loans for businesses and homeowners.

—About $400 million for the Agriculture Department to aid farmers suffering crop and other losses.

—$81 million for the Army Corps of Engineers to restore navigational channels and other repair projects.

in order to "stabilize" prices.

By increasing capacity, Saudi Arabia will be able to raise production when it wants. A Saudi oil ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that the kingdom would increase production "depending on demand."

The capacity increase by the world's largest oil exporter will go into effect within weeks, using new fields where production has just begun, Oil Minister Ali Naimi said.

"The fields of Abu Safa and al-Qatif, which have just started production, will be used to increase the kingdom's production capacity in the coming few weeks to 11 million barrels per day," the minister said in a statement.

"In light of the recent developments in the oil market and the increase in prices that exceeded $50 ... Saudi Arabia is closely monitoring the various developments in the international oil market and is working on stabilizing that," he said.

Naimi added that the increase was meant to control "prices so that they will not harm international economic growth."

Earlier Tuesday, Purnomo Yusgiantoro of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said producers are trying to bring prices down, but the group thinks supply is not the problem because it has at least 1.5 million barrels a day of spare capacity.

By midafternoon in Asia, light sweet crude oil for delivery in November traded at $50.47 per barrel, up 83 cents from the close of Monday's regular session in New York.

You know you're getting older when ...

I make lists for two reasons.

First of all, I like to make lists. It feels like an achievement to write down a list, even if not one single thing on it gets done. The list-writing is an end in itself.

Second, I need lists. Without them, I'd forget lots more than I already do. There's nothing more aggravating than, say, getting home from the grocery store and finding you have to make another trip because you forgot some essential item on the first try.

Making a list also makes you feel organized and in control, even if the feeling is just self-deception.

Mainly, though, I'm worried that my growing dependence on lists is another of those irritating little signals that I am, as they say, starting to get "long in the tooth."

So I'll indulge my list-making compulsion and set down some other clues that my salad days may have wilted.

To mangle a phrase from a country comic, you know you're getting old when:

- The mixing bowls you were given as a wedding gift, and which you are still using, are selling for $75 and up for the set as collectibles. You run across other items identical to your everyday household contents in antique stores.

- Your first new car would now qualify for "classic car" license plates.

- It looks like your face is about to fall off when you bend forward and look into a horizontal mirror.

- Your scalp would be easily visible if you pulled out all your gray hair.

- You can confirm that feet, earlobes and noses really do keep growing slowly throughout a human's lifespan.

- Children ask you what it was like in "the olden days."

- You answer those children with harrowing stories of your life as a child in the Dark Ages.

- They believe you.
- Anyone under the age of mid-life crisis time calls you "ma'am" or "sir" (depending on which you are, of course).
- Your doctor starts scheduling more annual tests, until your yearly physical reminds you of the Olympic decathlon.

- In the Battle of the Bulge, the bulge is winning effortlessly.

- You start getting offers in the mail from the AARP and Medicare supplement insurance companies, and you read them.

- You can easily remember when there weren't any cell phones, home computers, cable television or microwave ovens.

- You can imitate one of the Three Little Pigs with the hair on your chinny-chin, and you're not a guy.

- You can no longer wear the latest in clothing and makeup styles without looking absurd.

- The clothing and makeup styles now in vogue are things you wore the last time they were "the latest styles."

- You don't want to listen to the latest popular music, and you don't recognize the latest crop of television and movie stars.

- All the music you enjoy listening to is classified as "classics" or "oldies."

- When people say the fighting in Iraq has gone on for a long time, you're confused because you remember Vietnam.

- You witnessed the first lunar landing and the Kennedy assassinations on TV (even if you weren't quite old enough to understand all of them).

- You remember all the 10 codes used to talk on citizen's band radios because you had one when everyone else did.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 28, the 272nd day of 2004. There are 94 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 28, 1066, William the Conqueror invaded England to claim the English throne.

On this date:

In 1542, Portuguese navigator Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo arrived at present-day San Diego.

In 1781, American forces in the Revolutionary War, backed by a French fleet, began their siege of Yorktown Heights, Va.

In 1787, Congress voted to send the just-completed Constitution of the United States to state legislatures for their approval.

In 1850, flogging was abolished as a form of punishment in the U.S. Navy.

In 1924, two U.S. Army planes landed in Seattle having completed the first round-the-world flight in 175 days.

In 1939, during World War II, Germany and the Soviet Union agreed on a plan to partition Poland.

In 1974, first lady Betty Ford underwent a mastectomy at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in Maryland, following discovery of a cancerous lump in her breast.

Tower safety concerns them

To the editor:

This letter refers to the Wireless Cellular Phone Tower being erected west of town. I feel the article in The Pampa News, Sunday, Sept. 26, 2004, left readers with the impression that we do not want this for aesthetic reasons. Not true.

It is a monster eyesore, but health and safety are our greatest concerns. We have spent hours trying to halt the construction so these questions could be answered.

Let me start by saying the FCC issues permits based on longitude and latitude. When I phoned I was told they don't see housing. FCC says tower location is the responsibility of local jurisdiction.

This has been a difficult situation as we were unable to even confirm what was being erected. We were told it was a house. The records I searched out were for "CONFIDENTIAL." It is being built by one company for another company for other customers.

We contacted our county commissioner and our county judge to get an injunction to halt construction until numerous questions could be answered. We requested to be heard at the Oct. 1st Commissioners meeting, which we were told the county can do nothing and we can appear for information purposes only.

Mike Keefe THE DENVER POST 2004

Why liberals rule academia, media

For years, I've minimized any talk of conspiracies and emphasized the importance of the battle of ideas. But now along comes a book, "The Secular Revolution," edited by University of North Carolina professor Christian Smith and surprisingly published this year by the liberal University of California Press, that shows a whole lot of plotting going on.

"The Secular Revolution" is difficult reading because most of its chapters display the academic dislike of plain English. But it is worth study for its specific detail on how anti-Christian intellectual leaders substituted for biblical hope "their own visions of secular progress," and became famous and rich in the process.

As Smith puts it, "Intellectuals are not any more 'above' the pursuit of status, power and wealth than others." Bribes often thinly-disguised as university chairs and foundation grants — are as effective among intellectuals as among others. A relatively small group of people who control the mechanisms of laud and lucre can have a tremendous influence on ambitious academics.

"The Secular Revolution" shows how key influencers pushed universities to teach that the perfection of social mechanisms will deliver us from evil, including the evil of that primitive human invention known as religion. Other chapters show how, starting in the 19th century, the National Education Association and interest groups of secularizing scientists appropriated for themselves the sole franchise for defining the public good in education and research.

The book also includes a fascinating case study of the destruction of moral reform politics in Boston, through ridicule and sarcasm. A chapter on those who sold the concept that law is socially constructed (rather than natural) provides good background for understanding how the Supreme Court came to assert its supremacy

Bush's stand-up comedy act on Iraq

President George Bush's denial of the reality of Iraq is beginning to sound like a stand-up comedy routine.

"Mr. President, the insurgency has spread to the whole country."

"We're making great progress."

"But Mr. President, the attacks against coalition forces have escalated dramatically."

"We're making great progress."

"But Mr. President, all but 2 percent of the Iraqi people want us to leave."

"We're making great progress."

"And the interim government has no support and in fact can't step outside the Green Zone without being surrounded by American security."

"We're making great progress."

And so forth. Whether the president is actually in denial or is misleading the public for partisan purposes, I will leave to your judgment. It would be less dangerous if he were engaged in deliberate deception. That, at least, is a sign of sanity.

Some are now speculating that the president's solution to the morass in Iraq will be to launch an attack against Iran — after the election, of course. There can be no other reason to sell Israel bunker-buster bombs. The only possible target would be Iran's nuclear reactors.

The Iranians would retaliate, and, of course, the United States would join the war in defense of Israel. Widening the war to a country with 60 million people might sound stupid, but with this administration's record of stupid decisions, it's not to be ruled out.

Nothing would destroy the democratic movement in Iran quicker than an attack by Israel and the United States. The same stupid people who thought we would be greeted as liberators in Iraq, however, might actually think Iranians would welcome an attack. People who spend their lives in academic surroundings can be forgiven for not knowing much about human nature. The most basic response of all humans is to rally around their country's government when it is attacked by a foreign power. The Iranians would certainly do that, as they demonstrated in the Donnie Ford from Dobson about moving the tower five to 10 feet and adding landscaping. I told him that we wanted it moved away from the houses and five feet would only get the base out of our front door and that was not far enough away. We offered to find them land. There is so much acreage around here and they can put it where it is not a hazard to houses and people.

Are we going to be cooked on high or low? The FCC-FDA websites have numerous regulations for towers of all types and heights. We were first told the tower was 180 feet (tall) then 200 feet and according to the article in Sunday Pampa News, it is going to be 220 feet. There is also a difference in strength for urban and rural. Urban towers are weaker. Rural can be numerous times stronger. The FCC uses terms unfamiliar to the consumer such as MHZ or megahertz, RF power, and the number of channels. How strong is this tower going to be? The website refers to levels in excess of the FCC's exposure limits but what are they in terms of this tower and the close proximity to people exposed 24/7?

Emissions can reach as far as 2 1/2 miles and even further.

Microwave towers can affect hearing aids and pacemakers. It can throw pacemakers into battery mode and zap the battery. We are not talking about people passing, or being taken around various locations, but exposure at close range for long periods of time day and night.

Yes, it is an eyesore, but our greatest fear is our health and safety of residents, children and citizens that frequent the area.

We still have numerous questions.

Mount St. Helen's quaking

SEATTLE (AP) — Small earthquakes rattled Mount St. Helens at the rate of one or two a minute Monday, and seismologists were working to determine the significance of some of the most intense seismic activity in nearly 20 years.

Early tests of gas samples collected above the volcano by helicopter Monday did not show unusually high levels of carbon dioxide or sulfur.

"This tells us that we are probably not yet seeing magma moving up in the system," said Jeff Wynn, chief scientist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Vancouver, Wash. He noted additional tests are necessary to better define whether there's magma moving under the mountain's crater.

Scientists are trying to figure out what is going on beneath the 925-foot-high dome of hardened lava within the mountain's gaping crater. They want to know whether the quakes are the result of water seeping into the mountain or magma.

In either case, they'll continue to watch the volcano — which erupted to devastating effect in 1980 — from the Cascade Volcano Observatory in Vancouver, about 50 miles away. Additional flights are also planned but not yet scheduled, Wynn said.

A helicopter carried scientists and instruments over the crater Monday to assess the gases and ground deformation that would indicate pressure building below the dome.

Measurements of ground movement "will tell us whether there's any new magma coming into the system," said Seth Moran, a seismologist at the observatory. That data will not be immediately available.

to clear Constitutional intent. Similarly, a chapter on journalism shows how "key persons within journalism (especially publishers and editors, and also journalism professionalizers from the ranks of the universities and the active press) actively sought to minimize and ultimately to undermine traditional religion."

That accelerated journalism's slide from a sometimes erratic mix of truth-telling and cultural conservatism toward a leftist ideological tilt so profound that CBS and Dan Rather ignored elementary principles of verification in their irrational exuberance over "getting the goods" on President Bush.

"The Secular Revolution" provides many valuable insights into why secular revolutionaries succeeded in journalism as in other fields. They turned science from a pursuit that supported them into one that viewed Christianity as a barrier to true knowledge. They turned colleges from sites where faith and knowledge would be integrated into fortresses of bias against faith.

Smith repeatedly shows that secularization was not "the natural and inevitable byproduct of 'modernization' (but) was in fact something much more like a contested revolutionary struggle than a natural evolutionary progression."

— Marvin Olasky
Columnist

His bottom line: "The secularization of the institutions of American public life did not happen by accident or happenstance. ... (It was) an achievement of specific groups of people, many of whom intended to marginalize religion. The people at the core of these secularizing movements, at least, knew what they were doing, and they wanted to do it."

In other words, educational and media institutions change because of cultural pressures but also because some people promote their friends, buy off in various ways their enemies and purge those who cannot be seduced.

The battle of ideas is also a battle for power. We should not overlook the ambitions and arrogance of people who claim to be unbiased experts and public servants, especially since intellectual peacocks of a feather flock together.

"The Secular Revolution," with all its stories of Christian and conservative defeat, is actually a hopeful book. If conscious activity moved American society one way in the past, a new type of activity can, with God's grace, move it another way in the future.

Marvin Olasky, Ph.D., is a journalism professor at University of Texas at Austin. He is the editor of "World," a national weekly news magazine.

1980s when Saddam Hussein attacked them.

As all democratic nations do, we have uneven luck in choosing our leaders, but this is the first administration that actually scares me. There is nothing so stupid and wrongheaded that I can't visualize them doing.

Bush has no real compassion. That's why he forbids ceremonies for returning dead. According to Ollie North, President Reagan was at the airport every time a dead American serviceman's body came home. The British also formally greet their returning dead with honor and respect. Only in the United States does the government even forbid news organizations from greeting the dead.

Bush and his corporate cronies care for Bush and his corporate cronies. If Reagan was the Teflon president, Bush is the irresponsible and unaccountable president. Not only has he created a bloody mess in Iraq, his economic policies have forced many American working men to endanger their lives by going there to work. Naturally, wages in Iraq, for everybody but the troops and the Iraqi people, are exorbitant, since the taxpayers are footing the bills.

I've noticed that Bush has stayed out of Iraq, except for his short dead-of-the-night sneak into and out of the Baghdad airport for a photo op. If we are making such great progress, as he keeps insisting that we are, surely he could visit the country in the daytime. Other national leaders have done so.

But the Bush policy in regard to Iraq has been a fraud from the beginning, and it remains a fraud with the appointment of an old CIA leech as prime minister to oversee the rape of Iraq by the favored corporate pirates. The Iraqi people know the score. The question is, Do the American people?

THE PAMPA NEWS COMICS

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I read with concern the letter from "Sleeping Beauty's Mother-in-Law," whose son locks his 5-year-old daughter in her bedroom when he leaves for work so his wife can continue sleeping.

When I was a child, it was my job to lock my younger brother in his bedroom after he had eaten breakfast and before I left for school. I did it because my mother also wanted to continue to sleep.

Unbeknownst to me or my mother, my brother had found a cigarette lighter. He had it in his room one morning when I locked him in. To make a long story short, he started a fire in his room that resulted in his death. I have lived with the guilt of this tragedy for nearly 20 years, despite years of therapy.

The grandmother who wrote that letter has good reason to be concerned for the well-being of her grandchild. Please remind your readers that children are not a convenience. They require the supervision of responsible people who will care for them unselfishly.

— FLORIDA FAMILY THERAPIST

DEAR FLORIDA THERAPIST: Please accept my deepest sympathy for your little brother's death. It was not your fault. The responsibility was your mother's. You were only a child yourself, and obeying her orders.

If it's forgiveness you are looking for, I forgive you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The letter from that grandmother gave me chills. My daughter-in-law gave birth to two children, but had only one when she met my son. The other had been locked in his room while she slept. Somehow he got tangled in the cords on the blinds while he was playing and strangled. When she awoke, she found her son dead.

My daughter-in-law lives every day with the knowledge that her son died as a result of her negligence.

No child -- or adult, for that matter -- should be locked in a room. Without supervision, children often do things they're not allowed to do -- such as jump on the beds and perhaps bounce to the floor, hitting the corner of a piece of furniture on the way and getting injured. Just knowing you are locked in and unable to get out (trapped) can also be psychologically damaging. — A READER IN ALASKA

DEAR READER: It goes without saying that a caregiver should be awake and capable of supervising the child. Anything less is child abuse.

Whether "Sleeping Beauty," the mother in the original letter, suffers from mental illness, depression or substance abuse, an intervention is called for. Because the parents seem oblivious to the danger, I advised the writer to notify Child Protective Services. While some readers felt this was drastic, it is better to take action and ensure the child's safety than to do nothing and regret it forever.

DEAR ABBY: If a woman proposes to a man, who should buy the ring?

— DEB IN KNOXVILLE

DEAR DEB: Call me old-fashioned, but if the man is a gentleman he should buy the ring. And if he refuses, the woman should enter into that marriage with her eyes wide open and no illusions about what her future will be.

Lady Harvesters look for second district win against Palo Duro

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Coach Shannon Stroud and her Lady Harvester volleyball team will try to bounce back from their weekend loss at Hereford against Palo Duro tonight. First serve scheduled for 6 p.m.

Pampa enters the night with an overall record of 7-17, 1-1 in District 3-4A competition. Palo Duro is 8-21, 0-2 after losing to Randall over the weekend.

Said Stroud of her team's performance against Hereford, "We did not play as well as we can. Actually, we did not even come close. We did not have the fire and intensity like we did against Randall." Stroud said Hereford is good but, "I feel we made them look even better."

Stroud points out her team's inability to execute and defensive woes as contributing factors in Saturday's loss.

Areas she and the Lady Harvesters will be working on this week.

Still, 1-1 in district play isn't bad,

"Considering who we have had to start out with," said Stroud. She added, "I would feel much better about the loss if I knew we had fought till the very end.

'We certainly can not overlook them because they are a very athletic team and can stomp on you when you are least expecting it.'

disappointed because I know they can do so much better.

So what would a win over Palo Duro tonight mean to her Lady Harvester team? "A win over Palo Duro would be a great come back. We certainly can not over look them because they are a very athletic team and can stomp on you when you are least expecting it," said Coach Stroud.

Stroud said it will be important for her team to hit the court ready to play, noting, "It will prove a lot if my team comes out with so much fire and we can score many points right off the bat. That is what I am looking for. This will be a good game to see how well we come off a bad loss like on Saturday."

And with a road trip to Dumas looming this Saturday, a win over Palo Duro could be the confidence boost Pampa needs as district play continues.

"I am excited for the game tonight. It is always great to play at home in front of your home crowd. We have such great supporters."

That is were the disappointment comes in. I have so much confidence in my team that when we don't give 100 percent all the time, I do get very

Group to protest NASCAR events

(AP) — An organization calling itself the National Association for Minority Race Fans has set up a web site and is apparently planning protests at some NASCAR Nextel Cup races before the end of the season.

The NAMRF has made inquiries to officials in Hampton, Ga., the home of Atlanta Motor Speedway, about the possibility of staging a protest during the week of the Oct. 31 Bass Pro Shops MBNA 500. There were also indications the group might hold a protest before the EA Sports 500 at Talladega Superspeedway on Sunday.

Matches are to get underway at 4 p.m. The Harvester tennis team served up goose eggs at Hereford this past Saturday with the JV team taking a 14-0 win. The Varsity team left town with a 19-0 victory.

Big 12 players of the week

DALLAS (AP) — Taurean Henderson of Texas Tech and Baylor's Willie Andrews and Braclon Davis were named Big 12 players of the week on Monday.

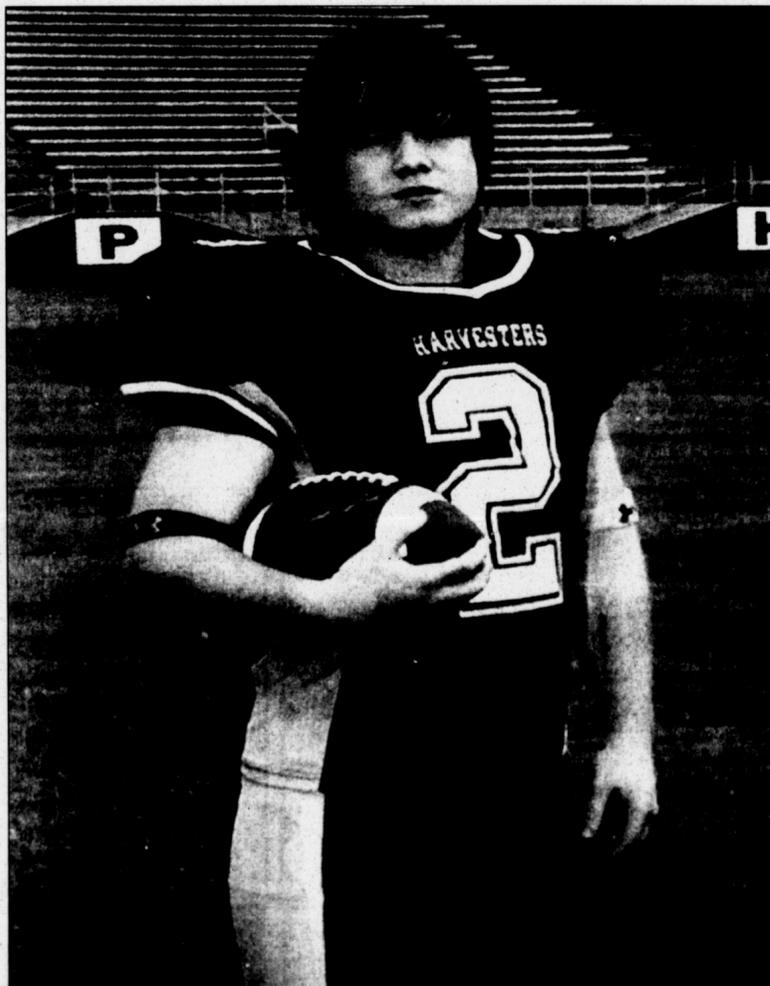

Henderson had 169 yards rushing, including a game-winning 70-yard touchdown run with less than 3 minutes remaining in Texas Tech's 31-30 come-from-behind win over Kansas.

He averaged 9.9 yards a carry and had a 1-yard touchdown-run in the third quarter. The performance makes him one of only two active Division I-A players with 1,000 receiving yards and 1,000 rushing yards in their careers. The other is Eric Roberts from Navy.

Andrews forced a fumble, had five unassisted tackles, including three for a loss and two sacks in Baylor's 37-14 win over North Texas. He also had six punt returns for 49 yards, including a 21-yard return.

New crop of voters inundating their local election offices

By ROBERT TANNER
AP National Writer

New voters are flooding local election offices with paperwork, registering in significantly higher numbers than four years ago as attention to the presidential election runs high and an array of activist groups recruit would-be voters who could prove critical come Nov. 2.

Cleveland has seen nearly twice as many new voters register so far as compared with 2000; Philadelphia is having its biggest boom in new voters in 20 years; and counties are bringing in temporary workers and employees from other agencies to help process all the new registration forms.

Nationwide figures aren't yet available, but anecdotal evidence shows an upswing in many places, often urban but some rural. Some wonder whether the new voters — some of whom sign up at the insistence of workers paid by get-out-the-vote organizations — will actually make it to the polls on Election Day, but few dispute the registration boom.

"We're swamped," said Bob Lee, who oversees voter registration in Philadelphia. "It seems like everybody and their little group is out there trying to register people."

Some examples, from interviews with state and county officials across the country:

— New registered voters in Miami-Dade County, a crucial Florida county in 2000, grew by 65 percent through mid-September, compared with 2000.

— New registered voters jumped nearly 150 percent in Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) in Ohio, one of the most hard-fought states this year.

And that's with weeks left until registration deadlines fall, beginning in October.

Curtis Gans at the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate said a clear national picture won't emerge until more applications are processed next month.

'Turning people out to vote is tougher than getting them to register.'

— Doug Lewis
Election Center chief

And Kay Maxwell of the League of Women Voters cautioned that some years that promise a boom in new voters turn out to be duds on Election Day. The danger is that new voters may not be as committed to showing up at the polls as longtime voters.

"Turning people out to vote is tougher than getting them to register," said Doug Lewis, who works with local election officials as head of The Election Center, a non-profit group.

Rural areas, which trend conservative and Republican, aren't necessarily reporting the same growth as urban, more liberal and Democratic strongholds: Brazos County, Texas, hasn't beaten its 2000 numbers so far, though officials said applications are now rolling in. The state of Oklahoma, however, saw new registrations in July and August increase by 60 percent compared with four years ago. Oklahoma officials said they had 16,000 new Republican registrations, 15,000 new Democrats and 3,500 new independents. In Oregon, where new registrations grew by 4 percent from January through Sept. 1, Democrats outregistered Republicans two-to-one.

'We're swamped. It seems like everybody and their little group is out there trying to register people.'

— Bob Lee
Philadelphia official

Lewis and others say that no matter what the partisan breakdown, the registration boom is real — driven by a swarm of organizations such as Smack Down Your Vote (a professional wrestling-connected campaign), Hip-Hop Team Vote, traditional groups like the League of Women Voters; party-aligned groups such as America Coming Together, made up of deep-pocketed Democrats; and many, many more.

"There seem to be hundreds of them," Maxwell said.

Student teachers

Southwestern Oklahoma State University students in Weatherford are doing their practice teaching assignments during a 12-week period of the 2004 fall semester. Their assignments will continue through Dec. 10. Among the SWOSU department of Education students participating are (left-right) Kimberly Porter of Pampa, teaching at Weatherford Middle School and West Elementary; and Katie Vanstonre of Aledo, teaching at Weatherford West Elementary.
