MDA reports funds raised during lockup

According to officials from the local Muscular Dystrophy Association, a sum of $13,801.17 was netted during the MDA lockup held last week at Karen's Kitchen in Pampa.

To raise funds, participants spent an hour in jail where they had their mug shots taken and received a phone to call friends and "make bail."

The goal was to raise $16,000.

Each year in preparation for the Lenten season St. Matthew's Episcopal Church of Pampa sponsors its Annual Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper. Pancakes will be served this year from 5-8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 24 in the Parish Hall at St. Matthews, 727 W. Browning.

Wednesday, Shrove Tuesday begins the 40 days of Lent. In the old days, Shrove Tuesday was the last chance to indulge oneself and to use up foods which weren't allowed in Lent.

foods which wouldn't last through the 40 days of Lent gave rise to the French name, Fat Tuesday. Pancakes became associated with Shrove Tuesday as they were a dish that could use up all the eggs, fat and milk in the house before the abstinence and fasting of Lent began.

This year will be the 48th year the local church has been holding the pancake supper. The first Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper was held in 1956. Since 1976, the proceeds have gone to St. Matthew's Episcopal Day School.

"Jailers go to school, but the school is for corrections officers. I will get certified as a Texas peace officer if I'm elected, and I intend to pay for it out of my own pocket," Carpenter said.

Carpenter is against abolishing the office of constable in his precinct. One of his opponents in the race plans to resign from office if elected in order to begin the process of eliminating the Precinct 4 constable position.

"I don't think it would be a good thing. We'd load the sheriff's department up with more work. We still have a crime element here," he said.

"The thing I would like to see done is to have the constable's position as a full-time job. I want to be able to Carpenter is currently a jail sergeant work in McLean, Pampa and · Alanreed, and assist the sheriff's department and Texas Department of Public Safety, and serve the justice of the peace court," Carpenter said.

A lifelong Gray County resident, Carpenter and his wife Mary Ann, who is a Gray County justice of the peace with an office in McLean, have raised five children. He has farmed and ranched in addition to his work at Gray County Jail. He attended Lubbock Christian College.

Carpenter does not believe there would be any conflict of interest if he were elected constable for the same precinct in which his wife was a justice of the peace.

"I think we would complement each other and work well together. It's happened before in Dallam County," he said, explaining that in Dallam County, a wife was a justice of the peace at the same time her husband was a peace officer.

"I feel I can get along with the sheriff's department and DPS very well. I already am acquainted with them," he said. He intends to resign his position at Gray County Jail if elected as constable.

"I feel like I can serve the people of Pampa, McLean and Alanreed, and I have a desire to do it," Carpenter said.

Area 4-H, FFA members to exhibit at 2004 Houston Livestock Show

HOUSTON -- Excitement continues to build as thousands of Texas 4-H and FFA members make their final preparations before heading to Reliant Center to exhibit their livestock at the 2004 Houston Livestock Show March 4-21.

The junior show, which showcases the animal projects of FFA and 4-H exhibitors, as well as agricultural stock competition on Friday, March 12. Professional breeders and ranchers will compete for top prize money and global recognition in the livestock industry during the first part of the show, beginning Thursday, March 4.

Entries from both the open and junior shows, along with the horse division, combine to make the Houston show the largest event of its kind in the world.

More than 15,000 entries, representing about 1,100 Texas 4-H clubs and FFA chapters, will compete in this year's junior show. A wide variety of animals will be shown in the junior divisions of the livestock competition, including market steers, market barrows, market lambs, market goats, market poultry, beef and dairy heifers, breeding gilts, breeding sheep, llamas, alpacas, commercial steers, cavies and rabbits.

"The Houston Livestock Show is the pinnacle of youth competition for many 4-H and FFA exhibitors, and we are excited to be able to be an integral part of their agricultural learning experience," said John Sykes, assistant general manager, Agricultural Exhibits and Competition Department. "Through our junior shows and junior market auctions, we are helping make off for thousands of Texas students." The four market animal auctions (steer, lamb and goat, barrow and broiler and turkey) represent animals raised by junior exhibitors for food sources. The animals judged as best in each of these categories are eligible for their individual market auctions. In 2003, the Houston Livestock Show's junior market auction sales were $4.7 mechanics projects, begins with live- million (not including presales and cash contributions.)

The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo kicks off on Thursday, Feb. 26. with the World's Championship Bar-B-Que Contest presented by Miller Lite, slated for Feb. 26-28, in the southwest Reliant Park parking lot. Go Texan weekend is Feb. 26-29, including contests, the downtown rodeo parade and the ConocoPhillips Rodeo Run.

WINTER SPORTS BRING SPRAINS AND STRAINS

Millions of people ski, snow board, and sled ever year in the U.S. These winter activities result in scores of injuries, say chiropractors. They see a wide range of sprains, strains and subluxations or misalignments of the spine. Reduce the risk of being hurt by learning proper skills and only participating in activities that are at your ability level.

Wear equipment that is in good working condition. Have your ski or snowboard bindings adjusted properly at a local ski shop. Snowboarders should wrist guards and wear kneepads. Skiers and snowboarders should wear a specifically designed helmet to prevent head injuries from falls or collisions.

Snowboarders should stabilize and strengthen their upper extremities before going on the slopes, skiers need to strengthen their lower extremities, specifically quads and hamstrings. Spinal strength is important for both sports: When knees tire, more force is exerted on the spine. Exercise to ad extra strength and flexibility, as well as a thorough chiropractic wellness visit will help resist the rigors of skiing.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Feb. 22, the 53rd day of 2004. There are 313 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 22, 1732, the first president of the United States, George Washington, was born at his parents' plantation in the Virginia Colony.

On this date:

In 1819, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1879, Frank Winfield Woolworth opened a 5-cent store in Utica, N.Y.

In 1889, President Cleveland signed a bill to admit the Dakotas, Montana and Washington state to the Union.

In 1892, "Lady Windermere's Fan," by Oscar Wilde, was first performed, at London's St. James's Theater.

In 1924, Calvin Coolidge delivered the first presidential radio broadcast from the White House.

In 1934, the romantic comedy "It Happened One Night," starring Clark Gable and Claudette Golbert, opened at New York's Radio City Music Hall.

In 1935, it became illegal for airplanes to fly over the White

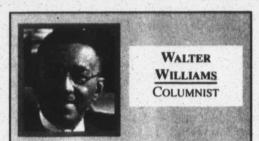

For every benefit there is a cost

The first concept an economics student learns is that for every benefit there's also a cost — or, as my longtime colleague and friend Nobel Laureate Milton Friedman has put it, "There's no free lunch." While the person who receives the benefit might not pay or even be aware of the cost, as sure as night follows day there is a cost paid by someone.

One of the effects of competition is that of revealing costs and least-cost methods of production. When the government gave AT&T a monopoly over much of the telecommunications industry and the Civil Aeronautics Board sponsored the airline cartel, both telecommunication and air travel were far more expensive than they are today. The introduction of competition not only revealed that the services could be provided more cheaply, but brought about massive innovation, as well.

International trade is a form of competition, and as such it also reveals costs and least-cost methods of production. American workers are the most productive workers in the world. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in 2002 the United States led the world in worker productivity: U.S. workers averaged $71,600 in output each (in 1999 dollars). The next highest country was Belgium, where each worker averaged $64,100. But worker productivity can be sabotaged.

Suppose an American textile worker is paid $100 a day, while his Indian counterpart earns $20. If the American is 10 times as productive as the Indian worker, then the wage costs of using the American worker is lower. However, $100 in wages is not the only cost of hiring the American worker. There are numerous federal and state regulations that add to worker costs, such as: OSHA requirements, EEOC mandates, Social Security and Medicare, Family Medical Leave and many other workplace regulations. Added to worker costs that businesses incur are: Americans With Disabilities Act, Clean Air Act, Endangered Species Act and many other regulations.

Then there are all sorts of frivolous and not-so-frivolous lawsuits brought against businesses. According to an Office of Advocacy of the U.S. Small Business Administration study, "The Impact of Regulatory Costs on Small Firms," federal regulatory costs on U.S. businesses were $451 billion in 2000. They cost small businesses (20 or fewer employees) about $7,000 per employee; medium businesses (20 to 499 employees) paid about $4,300; and large businesses (500 employees or more) paid about $4,400.

There're no two ways about it: There are benefits from all the costly federal, state, and local regulations imposed on American businesses. But we must also acknowledge that our federal, state and local regulatory agencies have no jurisdiction in India, China, Southeast Asia, Mexico and Latin America. That means for many products and services, people who are far less productive, in a physical sense, than we are can beat us in the global marketplace.

We all can agree that there's no benefit that's worth any cost. If that weren't true, we'd do damn near anything that has a benefit, and that would include mandating a 5-mile-per-hour speed limit. Why? The benefits would be enormous in terms of the tens of thousands of highway fatalities and injuries avoided. We don't have a 5-mile-per-hour speed limit because we've decided that its benefit is not worth the enormous cost.

As said earlier, competition reveals costs and least-cost methods of production. One need not take a position one way or another on the worthiness of the benefits of regulation to acknowledge that there are costs associated with them. But I think that intelligent decision-making requires that we take their costs into account. It's not intelligent to stick our heads in the sand and deceive ourselves by pretending that others are to blame for our lack of competitiveness in some areas.

The bleeding of American jobs

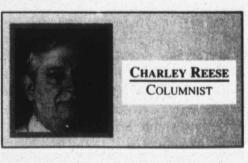

The United States must stop the bleeding of American jobs to cheap-labor countries. If we don't stop this job loss, we will eventually impoverish ourselves, since the overwhelming number of Americans must work in order to live.

There is only one way to stop this loss of jobs. Scrap the North American Free Trade Agreement, withdraw from the World Trade Organization and do what our Founding Fathers intended for us to do — negotiate trade agreements with individual countries.

With those countries whose living standards, wages, health and environmental regulations are the equal of or are superior to our own, such as Japan and Canada and Western Europe, we can negotiate free-trade agreements. Nobody is likely to close an American plant and move the jobs to Germany or Japan, where wages and benefits are as high as or higher than those in the United States.

With cheap-labor countries, however, we must impose not only protective but punitive tariffs. That is the only way to stop American capitalists who care nothing for their workers or for the country from moving jobs to cheap-labor countries.

So-called free trade, as it has been practiced, is a racket. If you haven't figured that out yet, let me explain it. The free-trade agreement with Mexico, for example, isn't designed to allow us to import tequila and tamales duty-free. It is designed to allow American manufacturers to close their American plants and relocate them to Mexico — where they can pay Mexican workers a pittance and ignore health, safety and environmental regulations. Then their products are shipped back to the United States to be sold at a fat profit.

Ditto with China and the rest of the cheap-labor countries. Most of these countries frankly have nothing to export. What they have is a surplus population and hence a huge supply of cheap labor. If we levy, say, a punitive tariff of $100 a pair on Nike shoes made in cheap-labor countries, I guarantee you Nike will reopen its American plants or go out of business.

As for American companies that farm out service jobs to cheap-labor countries, the answer is a punitive tax; say $5,000 per foreign worker. This would be fair, since there is a public cost for every unemployed American.

Economics is a lot simpler than economists and ideologues would have you believe. Capitalists are motivated by greed. End of story. To change their harmful behavior, you have to take away from them the only thing they care about — money.

By negotiating separate agreements with individual countries, as logic dictates, we can avoid the past problems caused by across-the-board protective tariffs. We could, as I pointed out, have free trade with other industrial countries. There is no reason to protect Ford from competition with Toyota. There is a good reason to prevent Ford from moving its manufacturing plants to Mexico.

Today is not yesterday, and today's problems are not yesterday's problems. The old argument of protective tariffs versus free trade is no longer applicable in this global economy, dominated as it is by huge transnational corporations. Capital is mobile; workers are not. Profits made at the expense of American workers and the American treasury should be viewed as hateful and wrong.

We now have a choice. We can stick with theory, even though it no longer fits the facts. We can continue to let big corporations buy favors from politicians. Or we can seize control of our own government and impose restraints on corporate greed.

To do nothing is to condemn our grandchildren to a bleak future.

ALL BUSINESS: Enron's Skilling finally takes his wal

By RACHEL BECK AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (AP) -Adelphia's John Rigas did it, so did Tyco's L. Dennis Kozlowski, as well as countless other corporate executives. But this was the perp walk that so many have been waiting for — a former Enron CEO being led in handcuffs.

Sure, it took some time to get here — it has been more. than two years since the collapse of the energy giant once considered one of the most innovative companies in the world.

But to many people whose lives were badly damaged by the Enron fraud, that matters little now that Jeffrey Skilling has taken the first steps in what could be a long walk of shame. He might finally have to face his day in court.

The 50-year-old Skilling became the highest-profile former Enron executive to face criminal charges when he was indicted Thursday for participating in widespread schemes to mislead government regulators and investors.

He resigned from Enron in August 2001, a surprise move that came four months before the company filed for bankruptcy amid disclosures that officials had hidden billions of dollars in debt and inflated profits to boost the stock could he really be so price.

Skilling has long maintained that the timing was pure coincidence, that he didn't know the company was in financial peril and was unaware of any wrongdoing -taking place in the ranks.

"I am not one of the perpetrators," he declared to the Senate Commerce Committee two years ago, bucking the trend of former Enron executives who had invoked their Fifth Amendment rights. "The entire management and board of Enron has been labeled everything from hucksters to criminals, with a complete disregard of the facts and evidence assembled."

He showed such confidence during that congressional testimony and media appearances around that time that some legal experts said that investigators might never pin anything on him. But his proclamations have done little to convince many of his innocence, especially those most hurt by this mess - the thousands of Enron workers who lost their jobs and the investors who saw their Enron holdings evaporate when stock plunged.

Their reasoning has merit: Skilling was the CEO of Enron, presumably in charge of running the company. How detached?

The answer may come before the court, where each and every one of his moves during his 11-year tenure at the company will surely be dissected to determine what he knew and when.

Skilling was named in more than three dozen criminal counts, 10 of them specifically accusing him of insider trading that generated $62.6 million from stock sold from April 2000 through September 2001. He faces a maximum total of 325 years in prison and over $80 million in fines if convicted of all the counts.

He has pleaded not guilty and will return to court March 11.

But this case against Skilling won't be a prosecutorial slam-dunk. It's taken two years to get this far, largely because it has been tough to build a trail of paper, or at least of testimony, leading up to him.

The key to a conviction may hinge on what information comes from other Enron executives.

Former CFO Andrew Fastow, who reported directly to Skilling, pleaded guilty last month to two counts of conspiracy, and has agreed to cooperate with the government. He has admitted that he and others manipulated publicly reported financial results to mislead investors, pump up the company's stock and maintain creditworthiness. And there could be more to come. Richard Causey, Enron's former chief accounting officer who also reported to Skilling, was named in the indictment unsealed Thursday. His lawyers have declared he has done nothing wrong, and will fight accusations that he was the principal architect of the fraudulent schemes.

Still, with dozens of individuals charged in this case, Enron's other top executive has yet to do his perp walk.

Former chairman Kenneth Lay hasn't faced a single charge.

Will this year's Oscars see any upsets, any surprises? Who will the big winners be?

BY ANITA HACKER AND CONSUELO HACKER GUEST REVIEWERS

Here it is, Oscar time again. The Academy is unpredictable. Sometimes nominee and sometimes it's just all politics. So here's my take on who should win and who will win.

Mom Struggles With Questions From Young Son She Gave Up

DEAR ABBY: At 19, I chose to give concerned. up my first child for adoption. "Billy" is now 5, and I have a great relationship with him and his adoptive parents. I've never regretted my decision.

We have been open about his adoption from the beginning. Billy often asks questions, much deeper than one would expect from a 5-year-old, and expresses some confusion. He understands that he came from my tummy but that he has his own parents. He knows that he is part of my family as well as his own, and when he met my mom, he chose to call her "Grandma." What Billy doesn't understand is why all his friends came from their mommy's tummies and he couldn't come from his adoptive mom's tummy. He also often expresses a desire for a brother or sister.

I am now engaged to be married to a wonderful man. We just found out that I am pregnant. I'd like Billy to be the ring bearer at my wedding, but I don't want to mislead anyone by introducing him and his family as "close friends of the family." We also don't want to overwhelm Billy with all this new information when he is struggling with so much confusion already. (Most of my extended family is not aware of Billy's existence.)

Also, since I'll be pregnant at the wedding and Billy knows he came from my tummy, a 5-year-old's deduction would be that he is finally getting a brother or sister. How do we explain that I loved him so much that I gave him to his mommy and daddy but I'll be keeping this baby? -- BIRTH MOTHER IN PHILLY

DEAR BIRTH MOTHER: I know you are well-intentioned, but I urge you to rethink having Billy be a part of your wedding. Please consider the effect it would have on him to be introduced to your extended family for the first time at your wedding. Also, the question of why you would "give him away" and keep the other child is one that should be dealt with over time -- and by his adoptive parents with support from you if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl in my last year of high school. Throughout school I have made good grades and participated in the band as well as my sport outside of school.

My problem is this year I coach my sport twice a week in addition to playing on the team, playing in the band, and trying to keep my grades up for university and scholarship applications. On top of that, I have a full course load.

Abby, I can't do it all! When I get home at night, I'm so tired I can barely finish my homework or study for tests. My marks have begun to suffer, I'm having trouble sleeping, and I cry a lot. I have begged my parents to let me drop something, but they won't let me. I really want to do everything, but I can't.

' How can I get my parents to understand? -- TOO TIRED TO STUDY

DEAR TOO TIRED: Since your parents don't seem to be getting the message, find an ally to whom they will listen. Confide in a trusted teacher or school counselor, and ask that person to intervene for you before your stress level gets any higher. No one can do everything, and perhaps your parents need to hear it from an educator. *****

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: May your heart always play a song of joy, and when there are tears, may they nourish the seeds of your dreams so. that they grow into reality. (Author unknown)

Study: Sleep essential for creative thinking

By WILLIAM MCCALL ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

Everybody feels refreshed following a good night's sleep. But can you wake up smarter? More artistic perhaps?

German scientists say they have demonstrated for the first time that our sleeping brains continue working on problems that baffle us during the day, and the right answer may come more easily after 8 hours of rest.

The German study is considered to be the first hard evidence supporting the common sense notion that creativity and problem solving appear to be directly linked to adequate sleep, scientists say. Other researchers who did not contribute to the experiment say it provides a valuable reminder for overtired workers and students that sleep is often the best medicine.

Previous studies have shown that 70 million Americans are sleep-deprived, contributing to increased accidents, worsening health and lower test scores. But the new German experiment takes the subject a step further to show how sleep can help to turn yesterday's problem into today's solution.

"A single study never settles an issue once and for all, but I would say this study does advance the field significantly," said Dr. Carl E. Hunt, director of the National Center on Sleep Disorders Research at the National Institutes of Health.

"It's going to have potentially important results for children for school performance and for adults for work performance," Hunt said.

Scientists at the University of Luebeck in Germany found that volunteers taking a simple math test were three times more likely than sleep-deprived participants to figure out a hidden rule for converting the numbers into the right answer if they had eight hours of sleep. The results appear in a recent issue of the journal Nature.

The study involved 106 people divided into five separate groups of equal numbers of men and women ages 18 to 32. One group slept, another stayed awake all night, and a third stayed awake all day for eight-hour periods before testing following training in the main experiment. Two other groups were used in a supplemental experiment.

The study participants performed a "number reduction task" according to two rules that allowed them to transform strings of eight digits into a new string that fit the rules. A third rule was hidden in the pattern, and researchers monitored the test subjects continuously to see when they figure out the third rule.

The group that got eight hours of sleep before tackling the problem was nearly three times more likely to figure out the rule than the group that stayed awake at night.

Jan Born, who led the study, said the results support biochemical studies of the brain that indicate memories are restructured before they are stored. Creativity also appears to be enhanced in the process, he said.

HEALTHBEAT: New supplements to replace ephedra

By LAURAN NEERGAARD AP MEDICAL WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) - People who think ephedra helped them lose weight are looking to new ingredients with names like guarana, bitter orange and green tea extract to replace the soon-to-be-banned dietary supplement.

There's little proof yet that ephedra alternatives actually burn pounds, and scientists warn that some come with health considerations of their own — including an ephedra mimic that might interact dangerously with medicines the dieter also swallows.

"There are a number of, quote-unquote, 'ephedra substitutes' on the market now where even less is known about potential side effects," Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Mark McClellan cautioned in an interview last week.

The FDA will pull ephedra off the market soon and wants consumers to stop immediately using the herbal stimulant, which is linked to 155 deaths and dozens more heart attacks and strokes.

Many consumers are ignoring that advice. There has been a run on remaining ephedra supplements since FDA's warning two weeks ago, even though studies show ephedra helps people lose only a few pounds more than dieting alone.

Still, as January ushers in postholiday diets, Americans are turning to the burgeoning ephedra-free market, too. Topping the lists of new ingredients are caffeine-containing supplements, some that deliver the buzz of at least three cups of coffee in one dose. Not all mention caffeine on the label; consumers may have to learn herbal aliases such as guarana and green tea to ensure they don't get caffeine jitters by taking multiple supplements.

The ingredient drawing the most attention is bitter orange, which McClellan says the FDA is monitoring closely because it contains synephrine, a stimulant chemically similar to ephedra.

Also called citrus aurantium, the peel of this very sour "Seville orange" is found in some foods like orange marmalade.

"It's not as potent as ephedra unless, you take it in much higher doses," says Mark Blumenthal of the American Botanical Council.

But some scientists note that synephrine can increase blood pressure and constrict blood vessels, as ephedra does, and question whether using it with caffeine could worsen those effects the way taking ephedra with caffeine does.

"There's not really a reason to think citrus aurantium will be safer," says Dr. Adriane Fugh-Berman of Georgetown University, an expert on herbal supplements.

More worrisome, she says, is that bitter orange could interact dangerously with prescription or over-the-counter drugs.

Why? It's related to a longtime warning against taking medications with grapefruit juice. Grapefruit contains a natural chemical that inhibits one of the body's drug-metabolism routes so that some medicines build up to dangerous levels, and bitter orange contains even more of that drug-boosting substance, says Fugh-Berman.

Studies to date show bitter orange inhibits metabolism of at least two drugs, the popular over-the-counter cough medicine dextromethorphan and the prescription blood-pressure drug Plendil.

As for shedding pounds, there's no evidence in people yet that it works.

Other ephedra alternatives: -Green tea extract. Green tea typically contains less caffeine per cup than coffee, plus many antioxidant vitamins.

Caffeine itself can be a mild appetite suppressant, and proponents say there may be other substances in green tea that could slightly speed calorie burning; There's no evidence yet that green tea causes weight loss, but Fugh-Berman calls the possibility interesting and says the substance probably is harmless.

-Guarana, used in a popular Brazilian soft drink, contains two to three times as much caffeine as coffee, Blumenthal says. Other caffeine-containing supplements are kola and mate.

-Garcinia, also called hydroxycitric acid. A Journal of the American Medical Association research review found no good evidence of weight loss.

-"Starch-blocking" pills promise to help starchy foods pass through the body with less calorie absorption. Most are made with kidney-bean extracts not thought to be harmful. Supplement giant Metabolife International cites a small study that found users dropped slightly more weight than regular dieters, but the research has not been published.

Old-fashioned fiber works on the same principle and can fill people up so they eat less, notes Fugh-Berman. But she says it's impossible to get as much fiber in a pill as from a glass of Metamucil, made with the soluble fiber psyllium.

-Bladderwrack, an herb that contains a lot of iodine, which could cause or worsen thyroid disease, notes a recent supplement review by University of Montana pharmacists. Germany, which strictly regulates herbal medicines, lists bladderwrack as unapproved, citing the health risk and lack of evidence that it burns pounds.

"This restructuring might be occurring in such a way that the problem is easier to solve," Born said.

Born said the exact process in the sleeping brain for sharpening these abilities remains unclear. The changes leading to creativity or problem-solving insight occur during "slow wave" or deep sleep that typically occurs in the first four hours of the sleep cycle, he said.

The results also may explain the memory problems associated with aging because older people typically have trouble getting enough sleep, especially the kind of deep sleep needed to process memories, Born said.

"Even gradual decreases in the total time for slow wave sleep and deep sleep is correlated to a kind of decrease in memory function, and in turn to a decrease in the ability to recognize hidden structures or the awareness of such things," Born said.

Other researchers said they have long suspected that sleep helps to consolidate memories and sharpen thoughts. But until now it had been difficult to design an experiment that would test how it improves insight.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) - Brian Cabral took over as interim head football coach at Colorado, pending the outcome of an investigation into a recruiting scandal that includes allegations of rape.

Cabral replaces Gary Barnett, who was placed on paid leave Wednesday night for criticizing the ability of former player Katie Hnida after she said she had been raped by a teammate in 2000.

Cabral played at Colorado and has been an assistant for 15 years. He was promoted to assistant head coach in 1999, shortly after Barnett was hired.

The investigation is scheduled to be completed by April 30. Cabral made it clear he expects Barnett to be reinstated.

Trio of Texas pitchers take big strides after injuries

- Texas pitchers Chan Ho Park, Jeff Zimmerman and Ricardo Rodriguez took big strides in coming back from injury when they took part in the Rangers' first spring training workout Friday.

Park spent more time hurt than pitching his first two seasons with the Rangers, making just seven starts last year (1-3, 7.58 ERA) because of a lower back problem.

Zimmerman, an All-Star rookie as a rookie in 1999, hasn't pitched for the Rangers since saving 28 games in 31 chances in 2001. He has since had arthroscopic and recon-

SURPRISE, Arizona (AP) as a free agent after spending last season in Minnesota, is expected to be the Rangers' No. 1 starter. Still, the 39-yearold pitcher isn't concerned with where he will be in the rotation.

> "I try to be prepared for whatever I do," Rogers said. "I know what they want from me and my standards are high enough to match their expectations. I felt good, but I didn't want to overdo the first day. I'm going to have enough soreness the next few weeks as it is."

Several position players, who are in camp in advance of their Tuesday reporting date, took batting practice on another field while the pitchers went through their workouts. Showalter said he's happy with the enthusiasm he's seen in the clubhouse in the wake of the unexpected late trade of American League MVP Alex Rodriguez to the New York Yankees.

Tiger Woods shot a 66 and didn't make up any ground, heading into the weekend eight shots behind Weir and Maruyama, who were at 12under 130. The leaders tied the 36-hole record set by Davis Love III in 1992.

CLEVELAND (AP) -

The odds of seeing Tim Duncan miss 19 shots were about as long for the Cavaliers as their chances of winning that Mega Millions jackpot.

Well, as they say, sometimes it's better to be lucky than good.

LeBron James scored 32 points, Zydrunas Ilgauskas made a key putback in the final minute and the Cavaliers caught Duncan on a rare off night, beating the San Antonio Spurs 89-87 on Friday.

The Cavs rallied from an eight-point deficit in the final 6:19 and survived a frantic finish to snap San Antonio's six-game winning streak and drop the defending NBA champions to 5-1 on their seven-game road trip.

"It felt like a playoff game down the stretch," said Cavs guard Jeff McInnis, who hit a crucial 3-pointer and two jumpers in the fourth to fuel Cleveland's comeback. "This was a big win."

After the final horn sounded, James ripped off his headband and fired it into the stands as red-and-gold confetti rained down from high above in Gund Arena.

For one night, the Cavs and their fans got a taste of what the NBA playoffs are like.

Duncan scored 21 points, but the reigning two-time league MVP had an awful shooting night, going just 9for-28 from the field.

"I got every shot I wanted, wide open," Duncan said. "I just couldn't make a shot."

The St. Louis Cardinals are banking on Albert Pujols.

On the day they opened spring training, the Cardinals announced the slugger's $100 million, seven-year contract Friday.

"One of the best moments of my life," Pujols said during a news conference in Jupiter, Fla.

Pujols, 24, hit a major league-best .359 last season with 43 homers and 124 RBIs. The first baseman/outfielder led the big leagues with 51 doubles and was second to San Francisco's Barry Bonds in National League MVP voting.

"This deal not only recognizes Albert for his accomplishments over the past three seasons," general manager Walt Jocketty said. "But all along, we felt that it was important to retain a player such as Albert who came up through our farm system, and see to it that he remained a part of the club's nucleus well into the future." Pujols was just the ninth baseball player to receive a $100 million contract. "The money will mean something in a small way with my family, but it won't change the way I play baseball," he said.

Pujols was among several position players in camps around the majors, reporting along with pitchers and catch-

Pittsburgh shortstop Jack Wilson was eager to get going, so he showed up early in Bradenton, Fla.

"It's the smell. I wish they could bottle it," Wilson said. "The dirt, the pine tar, the wood and the sound of the bat. I'll even come here and watch these guys pitch just to get back into it."

In Kissimmee, the Atlanta Braves started workouts in an unfamiliar position: as under-

Following the decision to cut payroll, and the loss of Gary Sheffield, Greg Maddux and Javy Lopez, it appears Philadelphia and the World Series champion Florida Marlins could end the Braves' streak of 12 straight division titles.

"Everybody thinks we're going down this year, which is the same thing I heard when I came to camp last year," Braves pitcher Russ Ortiz said. "That's really kind of crazy when you think about it. Why would an organization that has won for so many years in a row suddenly decide they don't want to win anymore?"

Although payroll has been reduced, the Braves are confident they will contend.

"You read something about our demise every year," general manager John Schuerholz said. "There was a little more of it this year and that always gets you up for your job, but if we were motivated every time someone criticized us, we'd never lose a game."

structive surgery in his right elbow.

The Rangers acquired Rodriguez from Cleveland last July and the right-hander missed the rest of the season with a right hip injury.

"It was important to get those guys out for the first workout," manager Buck Showalter said. "Three months ago Ricardo was limping around and Zim has been doing everything he can to come back for two years. With Chan Ho, it's a case of if he's healthy he's going to get the ball."

Park, Zimmerman and Rodriguez are among 32 pitchers in camp. Their first day of team drills included throwing long toss and going through defensive fundamental drills.

"To look at those guys' faces the first day, they can put that behind them," Showalter said. "Now they can think about doing their jobs and not just the injuries."

Veteran left-hander Kenny Rogers, who returned to Texas

"With all that has been going on the last five days, I've been happy with the energy and general excitement I've seen here," Showalter said. "You don't replace a guy like Alex. ... A lot of good things we will derive from Alex having been here, the example he set. That was the sense I was hoping to get, and I'm getting it."

Notes: Rangers left-hander Brian Shouse passed his physical with no hitches. Last spring, Shouse was sent home for further testing after an irregularity was discovered in his heart. "I've had this for a long time, it's nothing new," Shouse said.

Redskins reach deal with quarterback Brunell controversy, although that could happen in Washington. Ramsey has become a popular player in his two years with the team, and his agent recently suggested Ramsey might request a trade if Brunell were signed. Gibbs has said he has no intention to trade Ramsey.

Steinberg did not say Brunell received any guarantees from Gibbs about the starting job.

"Obviously Mark's been a starter since 1995 and is confident of his ability to lead a team," Steinberg said. "But he looks forward to the ability to compete for a starting job in training camp."

WASHINGTON (AP) -The deal that will send Mark Brunell to the Washington Redskins is done — finally.

Talks that began during Super Bowl week wrapped up late Thursday, when agent Leigh Steinberg and Redskins owner Dan Snyder agreed to a seven-year, $43 million contract with an $8.6 million signing bonus for the longtime Jacksonville Jaguars quarterback.

The deal becomes official once the offseason trading period begins March 3. The Redskins will give the Jaguars a third-round draft pick for Brunell, according to a source familiar with the negotiations who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Brunell is expected to displace Patrick Ramsey as the starter, giving Joe Gibbs the veteran the coach has sought in his first season back in Washington after an 11-year retirement.

"Mark and Joe Gibbs have been talking every day, sometimes multiple times," Steinberg said. "Mark's comfort level and excitement level with Coach Gibbs has grown every day. He became convinced throughout the process that the abil-Fame-caliber coach that had been to four Super Bowls was unique and too good to year - including a $2 milpass up."

Redskins director of player personnel Vinny Cerrato declined comment.

Brunell became Jacksonville' starter in the franchise's inaugural season in 1995. He completed 60.3 percent of his passes and threw for 144 touchdowns and 86 interceptions in 117 starts over nine seasons. But he became expendable when rookie Byron Leftwich emerged as the starter last season.

Brunell had one year left ity to play for a Hall of on his contract and was due to count $10.5 million against the salary cap this lion bonus due next month. The Jaguars were expected to cut him before paying the bonus, but the Redskins preempted the move by expressing interest in a trade.

At least three other teams - Miami, San Diego and Dallas - also inquired about Brunell, but the Jaguars allowed him to negotiate only with the Redskins. Gibbs flew to Florida to meet with Brunell on Feb. 9.

Brunell wanted to go where he could start and maintained he didn't want to become part of a quarterback

Henson says he's ready for return to football

HOUSTON (AP) - Drew Henson says he always felt more like a football player during his brief baseball career.

That feeling was reaffirmed this month when he left the New York Yankees organization then worked out for 20 NFL teams interested in acquiring him.

"It fits with me a little better being out here," said Henson, a star quarterback at Michigan who bypassed his junior year for a baseball career in 2001. "I get to be a little more athletic. I'll be able to be a little more emotional. I can really get after it. In baseball, I had to tone down my emotions. Here you can let it go a little bit."

Henson, 24, calls the switch in sports a change of heart. He rejects the notion his baseball career flamed out, although his bat never came around and he appeared to disappear from the Yankees' plans.

Whatever the reason, Henson gave up $12 million when he agreed to his baseball release and allowed the Houston Texans - who drafted him in the sixth round — to shop his services.

So how will he adjust after a three-year hiatus from football? He's sure to be rusty, but many who watched his Feb. 12 workout agree he has the skills to play.

Stadium proposal

DALLAS (AP) - A new Dallas Cowboys stadium proposal would replace the aging Cotton Bowl at Fair Park and return the team to the city that bears its name Cowboys owner Jerry Jones had earlier urged the construction of a retractable-roof stadium as part of a $1 billion, year-round entertainment development to replace Texas Stadium in the Dallas suburb of Irving.

"It is important that they come up with a project that dovetails with the city's agenda,"

Neil Stratton, who runs football Web site InsideTheLeague.com, broke down Henson's performance.

"Henson doesn't come completely over the top on all his. throws with good three-quarters delivery. He seemed to drop his elbow at times when he was focusing on being especially according accurate," to Stratton's report. "This might have been due to nerves and the fact he was pressing a bit to impress the scouts."

Stratton graded Henson at a B-minus, though he agreed with Bills quarterbacks coach Sam Wyche that such a display merely proved Henson can make the throws required in the NFL. It showed little about leadership, mobility, handling pressure and other intangibles.

"When you see this much attention," Wyche said, "you're probably talking about a very good player."

Another quarterback who left baseball for the NFL agreed, but said there will be an adjustment period.

"It's going to be an adjustment mentally, but he did play at Michigan in front of 100,000 people on a weekly basis," said former Washington Redskins quarterback Jay Schroeder. "Is he going to be anxious for the first game? You bet. Then he's going to get whacked for the first time and say, 'Oh yeah, now I remember what football is all about.""

THE PAMPA NEWS - SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 2004 - 11

Schroeder was a UCLA quarterback who was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays but struggled in the minors. The Redskins, where current Texans general manager Charley Casserly was in the front office, selected him in the third round of the 1984 draft. Schroeder, who played 11 years in the NFL, said Henson's time away will give him some advantages.

"I also think being away from the college game helped me a great deal because I didn't have two years of a college system to unlearn," said Schroeder, now a high school baseball and football coach near San Diego.

Schroeder wasn't the first successful NFL quarterback to leave an abortive baseball career.

Sammy Baugh was briefly in the St. Louis Cardinals system before becoming a star with the Redskins. John Elway spent a year in the New York Yankees organization before leaving for the NFL in 1983.

Former Stanford quarterback and minor-league pitcher Chad Hutchinson is the Dallas Cowboys' backup after a short career in the St. Louis Cardinals organization.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Feb. 23, 2004:

You intuitively know what others want. You could be adored by others but very hard on yourself. Understand that no one is as critical of you as you are. Spend some money to spruce up your self-image, if need be. Some of you will have an unusual artistic talent emerge this year as a major financial asset. You will be able to charm your way into making more money, but be careful not to spend it away, which will be a tendency. If single, you are likely to meet Mr. or Ms. Right if you are ready. Certainly the playing field is open with many options, no matter what your stage in life. If attached, you can renew the bonds that exist between you and your sweetie. You might also decide to buy something significant for the two of you. ARIES helps you make money.

The foundation was founded in 1983 to recognize the accomplishments and contributions of outstanding Texas leaders and to promote and inspire the values of entrepreneurial spirit, personal integrity and community leadership in all generations of Texans.

The mission of the organization is to honor the state's foremost past and present business leaders. Inductees are chosen based upon their individual accomplishments in business and on their contributions to their community.

The foundation awards scholarships in the amount of $5,000 each year to outstanding graduate business students exhibiting great entrepreneurial drive and leadership abilities who are enrolled full-time at a Texas university.

Scholarship recipients must be nominated by the dean of their respective university to be eligible for a scholarship.

One year ago, Freeman and three other students were nominated by Dr. R. Stephen Sears of Rawls College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

After completing the application process and participating in a satellite video-interview with the chair of the foundation's scholarship committee, Freeman was selected as the sole recipient of the scholarship at TTU.

Freeman was honored, along with other MBA scholarship recipients from across the state, during the 2003-04 Texas Business Hall of Fame Foundation Annual Awards Luncheon and Dinner held at the Legends Ballroom in the Houston InterContinental Hotel in Houston.

a party." Crow The contest was held informally for several Committee, a group that 208 hunters, including some from as far away as Kentucky and Arizona, killed 1.061 crows.

> "We aren't doing anything that's illegal," said Tom Lennox, one of the organizers whose tavern sponsors the contest.

"They like to portray us as bloodthirsty killers. These are people who go to the grocery store to buy slaughtered cows, pigs, chickens, turkeys," said Lennox, adding that many hunters eat the crows.

"And they're worried about Auburn's image. We have a maximum security prison here that has some of the state's most notorious murderers," he said, "and where they used the electric chair for the first time."

Residents in Auburn, a small city 20 miles west of Syracuse, have spent years grousing about huge numbers of crows roosting all winter long. About 15 years ago, Auburn became home to as many as 50,000 crows each winter, outnumbering the human population of 28,574. Many residents complain the crows, which flock into the city at dusk after daily feedings in the country, are a noisy nuisance that soil the city with their Ornithology Cornell Laboratory researchers say that's likely from the effects of West Nile virus, which is fatal to crows.

THE PAMPA NEWS - SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 2004 - 19

One recent protest by Sarnicola's group ended with a march to City Hall, where the group urged local and state lawmakers to outlaw wildlife shooting contests without limits on the number of animals that can be killed.

"What we should do is embrace this in a positive way," said Sarnicola.

Instead of a hunt, Sarnicola wants the city to put together a crow festival featuring music, entertainment and antiques while honoring someone who's done "something to crow about." Sarnicola also envisions the crowning of a crow princess. Sarnicola argues the hunt may just drive more crows into the city, where they are safe from hunters. Crow season runs from Sept. 1 to March 31, but crows can only be hunted Friday through Monday, a legal quirk that dates to the federal 1918 International Migratory Bird Act. Hunting is prohibited within city limits.

"If these were deer, there would be no objections to thinning the herd," Lattimore said. "The population here is overwhelming. It is affecting business downtown and the quality of life here."

Lattimore said the city also is considering other control measures, such as special firecrackers, sirens, spotlights, laser beams and predators including hawks and falcons.

Crow Busters, a national crow hunters' organization based in Lutherville, Md., says crows are regarded as highly intelligent creatures with the uncanny ability to detect trouble - a characteristic that hunters say make them a worthwhile adversary.

In the 1940s and 1950s, crow hunting reached a zenith. The federal government put a bounty on the birds during World War II, designating the "black bandits" as a public enemy and traitor for robbing the nation's farms of grain, according to the group's Web site.

Crow Busters say the birds feed on cultivated crops in the South and Midwest and eating the eggs and fledglings of waterfowl and upland game birds.

In the past 20 years, the crow population has exploded in suburban areas, especially in the East. One of the largest roosts in the country is in Springfield, Ohio, where as many as 100,000 crows have been wintering. Last month, officials there dropped plans to feed the birds poisoned corn to reduce the population because they did not think it would have any significant long-term effect.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Feb. 22, 2004

You know how to make money, and you will, as long as you don't take any wild, unprecedented risks. A steady approach will work for you. You might find that others frequently come to you for help or advice. Know when to say "enough" or when to close up shop -- so to speak. In October, a venture with someone could make money. You pull the wild card financially. If you feel like taking a gamble, do it, but make sure your budget can take a loss. If you are single, you will have to fight to keep that status. Your popularity skyrockets. You have many choices. If you are attached, your relationship will grow, especially if you defer more often to your significant other. ARIES helps you with money.

you want. Focus on work from Wednesday on CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You might not feel like doing much today. In fact, following the Taurus message might work for you, too. You might have extended yourself way too far.

Refuse to be pushed, though you might want to do some thinking about work.

Tonight: Get some extra sleep, if possible.

This Week: Stay in charge of work and express your sense of responsibility. In fact, everything will work perfectly if you

★★★★ You might be more in the mood to be an armchair traveler than to run around right now. Make calls and do what you need to do the easy way. You might want to give some thought to a vacation in the near future. A break will recharge

This Week: Kick back and listen to what others are really saying. With this knowledge, you'll make strong decisions from $\star \star \star \star \star$ Deal with a partner directly.

How you see a situation could change after a one-on-one conversation. You might want to discuss more common goals. Recognize how close you could be to this person if you did this more often.

This Week: Let others express their

Look for answers from Wednesday on.

★★★★ Defer to others more right now, even though you might want to say "no." A parent or older relative could become most demanding if you allow him or her to be. Discuss just how much you can and

This Week: You are able to make a difference if you want to, but you will have to play it (or at least pretend to) passively.

Let someone else think your idea is his or sage. You might want to slow down some.

Recent demands could have been exhausting. Do something easy at home, like getting a massage! You need to relax

This Week: Pace yourself Monday and strong feelings Monday and Tuesday.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ A partner might be uncomfortable with your associates or friends. You might need to sit down and have a longoverdue talk. You also might want to make sure he or she joins in on the fun and frolic. Through you, this person could lighten up. Tonight: Be a kid again.

This Week: Your creativity adds that extra touch to whatever you do this week. From Wednesday on, you might not enjoy yourself much, as everything seems like work. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Right now you might be having a hard time relating with certain key people. Worry less and lighten up. If you don't want to do something, make that clear. In fact, you might benefit from spending some downtime at home. Tonight: Order in.

This Week: If you can take some personal time, do so Monday and Tuesday. Demands from others will be very high from Wednesday on. Your ingenuity is needed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Others seek you out, but know and understand your limitations. You also might decide it is time for a checkup with the doctor. Meanwhile, let go and simply enjoy yourself as much as you can. Go to the movies. Tonight: At a neighborhood haunt

This Week: You will speak your mind, make calls and reach out for others Monday and Tuesday. Close yourself off Wednesday and Thursday if you want to accomplish anything.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You might want to solidify an emotional situation with a child or loved one. You must take a stand financially. You are the only one who has a personal impact on the situation. Do your best to cheer up your sweetie, a child or a friend. You do make a difference. Tonight: Your treat.

This Week: Finances play a role in decisions Monday and Tuesday. Take action and find answers Wednesday. You will find what you need.

22 - SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 2004 - THE PAMPA NEWS Celebrate Mother's Day by adopting a sea turtle

GAINSVILLE, Fla. - In Native American folklore, Mother Earth is embodied by a turtle floating in a huge, primal sea. This year, why not celebrate Mom's gift of life by adopting an endangered sea turtle from the Sea Turtle Survival League, a program of the non-profit Caribbean Conservation Corporation, as a Mother's Day gift?

details about the Adopt-A-Turtle program:

For a tax-deductible donation of at least $25, the Sea Turtle Survival League will send the materials contained. in this sample packet which includes a personalized adoption certificate, a sea turtle conservation guide, a colorful sticker and a magnet – all tions support the oldest and in a beautiful color folder. Plus, your mom will get a one-year subscription to the League's newsletter, "The Velador." Depending on donation level, she will also receive a special gift, as follows: $25, fun sea turtle pen; $35, set of five miniature sea turtle replicas; $50, plush sea turtle; $100, T-shirt.

STSL's Adopt-A-Turtle program offers the unique opportunity to adopt satellitetracked turtles. This highlypopular educational program utilizes space-age technology, allowing anyone with Here are a few important computer access to follow their turtle's migratory movements over the web by visiting www.cccturtle.org.

> Of course, you can always chose to adopt and name a turtle tagged by the league's researchers on the warm sandy beaches of the Caribbean.

Proceeds from turtle adopmost accomplished sea turtle conservation programs in the world, including the world's largest-running sea turtle monitoring project; research programs in Costa Rica, Bermuda and Panama; and a stateside education and advocacy program.

Sea turtles are global ambassadors to the state of our planet. They are ancient nomads that know no political boundaries; nesting on the shores of countless countries and inhabiting every ocean. And they are in danger of extinction due to ocean pollution, coastal development and other threats that have taken their toll on sea turtles.

"Factors that affect the health of sea turtles and their ocean habitats also affect mankind. Adopting a sea turtle for a holiday gift is a great way to help preserve a healthy environment, while ensuring the survival of sea turtles for generations to come," said David Godfrey, executive director of the league.

The Sea Turtle Survival League is a program of the Caribbean nonprofit Conservation Corporation. Founded in 1959 to support the pioneering work of renowned biologist Dr. Archie Carr, CCC is dedicated to the preservation of marine turtles and other coastal and marine wildlife through research, education, advocacy and the protection of natural areas.

To adopt a sea turtle for yourself, a friend or a loved one, call the Sea Turtle Survival League at 1-800-678-7853 or visit its web site at www.cccturtle.org

Angus breeder receives recognition

MHP Angus in Pampa owns one bull listed in the 2004 Spring "Sire Evaluation Report" published by the American Angus Association in St. Joseph, Mo. Issued in both the spring and fall, the new report features the latest performance information available on 5,428 sires and is currently accessible at www.angussiresearch.com.

"The report provides both Angus breeders and commercial cattle producers using Angus genetics with accurate, predictable selection tools for improving their herd," said Bill Bowman, AAA director of performance programs.

Expected Progeny Differences are generated from the performance database of the AAA which includes information submitted by nearly 8,300 Angus breeders this past year through the Angus Herd Improvement Records program.

EPDs are available for 17 traits including birth weight, weaning weight, milk, yearling weight and height, mature daughter weight and height and scrotal circumference. Carcass progeny measures generate EPDs on carcass weight, marbling, rib eye area, external fat thickness and percent retail product.

Ultrasound body composition data also generates end product predictors for rib eye area, intramuscular fat percentage, fat thickness and percent retail product. This report includes the initial release of $Value indexes which incorporates EPDs and industry relevant components into feedlot performance and carcass merit values expressed in dollars per head.

The semi-annual analysis for the sire evaluation report contains more than 11 million measures used to generate genetic predictions for the Angus breed.
