Win El Gordo Loteria? Fat chance!

By MARILYN POWERS
 Staff Writer

Gray County Sheriff's Department warns area residents of a lottery scam in which the person is asked for personal and financial information such as their name, address, date of birth, bank name, routing number and bank account number.

A Pampa resident brought in the envelope with two pages inside to the sheriff's department on Wednesday, said Chief Deputy Kelly Rushing. The envelope is slightly shorter and taller than a regular business-size envelope and has no return address. It bears a postage stamp from Spain.

Inside the envelope are two pages. One is titled an "award claim final notification" from the "El Gordo Loteria Primitiva". The address given is Plaza de Colon E-28830, Madrid, Spain. The notification is "from the desk of the managing director, international promotion prize award dept."

The notification states that the addressee's name was attached to a ticket which contained the numbers drawn in a lottery held May 5. The letter does not say where the lottery was held, and is not addressed to any specific person. The name of the person it was mailed to does not appear anywhere on the letter.

The letter claims that the addressee has won $615,810, which is deposited with a security company

Bush takes issue with finding 'no credible' proof of Saddam link

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disputing the findings of the commission investigating the Sept. 11 terror attacks, President Bush continues to insist there was a link between Saddam Hussein and al-Qaida.

"This administration never said that the 9-11 attacks were orchestrated between Saddam and al-Qaida," Bush said Thursday after meeting with his Cabinet at the White House.

— George W. Bush
 U.S. President

"We did say there were numerous contacts between Saddam Hussein and al-Qaida. For example, Iraqi intelligence officers met with (Osama) bin Laden, the head of al-Qaida, in the Sudan. There's numerous contacts between the two," he said.

Saddam's alleged link with terrorists was a central justification the Bush administration had for toppling the former Iraqi regime. Bush also argued that Saddam had weapons of mass destruction, which have not been found, and that Saddam ruled his country with an iron fist and tortured his opponents, claims that no one has disputed.

"The reason I keep insisting that there was a relationship between Iraq and Saddam and al-Qaida is because there was a relationship between Iraq and al-Qaida," Bush said.

The Sept. 11 panel reported this week that while there were contacts between al-Qaida and Iraq they did not appear to have produced "a

Insurgents clash with U.S. forces near Baqouba

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Insurgents clashed Friday with U.S. forces near Baghdad for the second time in as many days, and crews repairing a sabotaged crude oil pipeline expect to have full exports flowing by the end of next week.

A patrol from the U.S. Army's 1st Infantry Division came under fire about 7:45 a.m. in the town of Buhriz near Baqouba, 35 miles northeast of Baghdad. Troops returned fire, killing at least five insurgents who also fired mortars on U.S. positions, division spokesman Maj. Neal O'Brien said. There were no U.S. casualties.

U.S. troops cordoned off the area and fighting was reported through late afternoon Friday, O'Brien and witnesses said by telephone.

U.S. helicopters hovered over buildings and cars gutted by fire. Masked gunmen held up rifles and rocket-propelled grenades as they danced for the cameras. Women waited in the streets.

Baqouba, a largely Sunni Muslim area 35 miles north of Baghdad that formed a core of support for Saddam Hussein's former regime, had been the scene of frequent clashes between coalition forces and insurgents. Fighting in the city broke out again late Friday afternoon, witnesses said by telephone, but there were no further details from the military.

On Thursday, another 1st Infantry patrol came under attack in the same area. There were no U.S. casualties from either attack.

Military officials said seven insurgents had been killed in the two days of skirmishes, but officials at Baqouba

General Hospital said five people had died and 15 were injured. Insurgents often don't bring wounded fighters to the hospital out of fear of arrest.

Four Iraqi policemen were injured in the southern city of Nasiriyah when a bomb they were trying to defuse exploded, witnesses said. An Italian officer confirmed the explosion and the injuries.

In southeastern Iraq, British forces clashed with fighters loyal to a radical cleric, Muqtada al-Sadr, late Thursday, killing at least two insurgents, witnesses and military officials said.

and insured in the winner's name. The winner was reportedly selected from 25,000 names from "Asia, Australia, New Zealand, Europe, America and North America."

The winner is instructed to contact a claims agent, Juan Gomez, the foreign service manager of Santa Lucia Security Company S.A. in order to process and receive their prize money. A telephone and fax number are given.

The other page inside the envelope is a lottery payment processing form with the security company's name across the top. The winner is to complete the form and fax it to the security company. The form asks for the person's name, address, telephone number, occupation, date of birth and marital status. It also asks for the person's bank name, account number, routing number, address, telephone and fax numbers. A third section on the page asks for information on the winner's next of kin, including name, address, telephone and profession.

Rushing said the person who received the mailing had not entered any foreign lottery drawings and had not sought any type of contact from El Gordo Loteria Primitiva or the security company.

He cautions anyone receiving such a mailing to not call any of the telephone numbers, as they may be numbers with very high calling costs incurred by the person initiating the call. He also cautions against filling out the form and returning it or otherwise responding in any way to such unsolicited mail.

Rushing said it is never a good idea to provide bank account information such as that asked for on the processing form, because possession of that information could enable others to access the individual's bank account and steal funds from it.

For more information, contact Gray County Sheriff's Department at 669-8022.

No British soldiers were hurt in the fighting in Amarah, 180 miles south-east of Baghdad, a British military spokesman said.

The insurgents used small arms, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades in clashes that lasted about two hours, witnesses said.

Insurgents also launched attacks against British soldiers in Amarah on Wednesday after they detained militia leader Ahmed Hachi.

Al-Sadr's forces are skirmishing regularly with U.S. troops in Baghdad's Sadr City district, but they were routed by the 1st Armored Division in Karbala and their ranks were significantly reduced in Najaf and Kufa, coalition forces say.

Crews are completing repairs on a major pipeline system in the south that was sabotaged by insurgents a weeks ago. Full crude oil exports are expected by end of next week, but could come as early as Wednesday, coalition officials said Friday.

The smaller of the two lines damaged in the attack is nearly fixed, and could be tested as early as Saturday, said Dominic d'Angelo, a spokesman for the U.S.-led coalition in the southern city of Basra.

The damage to the larger pipeline is still being assessed, he said.

The resumption of full exports is expected "for the end of next week. They could come by the middle. Wednesday is a possibility," he said.

The attacks against the pipeline appear part of an insurgent campaign to undermine public support for the interim government which takes power June 30, marking the end of the American-run occupation.

In the boldest attack in months, a car bomber smashed into a crowd seeking jobs at a military recruitment center Thursday in Baghdad, killing at least 35 Iraqis.

collaborative relationship."

Vice President Dick Cheney vehemently disagreed with that conclusion, saying on CNBC's "Capital Report" that "the notion that there is no relationship between Iraq and al-Qaida just simply is not true."

Senior members of the commission seemed eager to minimize any disagreement with the White House.

"What we have found is, were there contacts between al-Qaida and Iraq? Yes. Some of them were shadowy but they were there," said Tom Kean, the Republican former governor of New Jersey, who is chairman.

Like Bush, he said there was no evidence that Iraq aided in the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

Former Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, the Democratic vice chairman of the panel, said media reports of a conflict between the administration and the commission were "not that apparent to me."

Although bin Laden asked for help from Iraq in the mid-1990s, Saddam's government never responded, according to a report by the commission staff based on interviews with government intelligence and law enforcement officials.

"There have been reports that contacts between Iraq and al-Qaida also occurred after bin Laden had returned to Afghanistan, but they do not appear to have resulted in a collaborative relationship," the commission's report said. "Two senior bin Laden associates have adamantly denied that any ties existed between al-Qaida and Iraq."

Bush said Saddam had ties to other terrorist networks as well.

"He (Saddam) was a threat because he was a sworn enemy to the United States of America, just like al-Qaida," Bush said. "He was a threat because he had terrorist connections — not only al-Qaida connections, but other connections to terrorist organizations."

The president said Saddam had links, for example, to the Abu Nidal Palestinian terror organization and sheltered Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, considered the most dangerous foreign fighter in Iraq and one of the world's top terrorists.

"He was a threat because he provided safe haven for a terrorist like al-Zarqawi, who is still killing innocents inside Iraq," Bush said.

Attention on al-Zarqawi has increased in recent months.

If I were a tree here, I'd want a transplant

I just knew it would come down to the cottonwood. According to TxDOT, the cottonwood is responsible for the auto/truck accidents that have happened on Highway 60 between Amarillo and Canadian.

I don't recall reading of alcohol, wreckless driving, asleep at the wheel, or speeding as the cause of crashes, just trees within 30 feet of the shoulder on either side of the highway as causing loss of life and property.

Is it true, a cottonwood can sense an approaching vehicle, discern if the driver is impaired, being wreckless, and plant itself to where the vehicle hits it head-on? That's what TxDOT is implying. Actually, cottonwoods have hindered transportation for many years. Just ask Charles Goodnight what that cottonwood did to him as he was evading some angry Cheyenne hot on his trail? Why that tree just came out on the trail and clotheslined him right off his horse.

Goodnight was so perturbed at the cottonwood for nearly beheading him and giving his scalp to an Indian — when he made it back to his ranch, he had his men cut all the cottonwoods down. Look what the cottonwoods did to Custer and the 7th Cavalry — they forced him to lead his men up and away from the Little Bighorn to some hills and the rest is history. Mankind cannot trust the cottonwood to stay put. Cut 'em down TxDOT. That's the remedy.

I know a lot of engineers hanging their diplomas on a TxDOT office are Aggies. Aggies have been missing their bonfire the past few years. If some trees are cut down along Highway 60, will they become fodder for a fire? I believe that's worth a special session for Governor Perry. But wait, he's an Aggie. If I were a cottonwood in the Panhandle, I'd seek a transplant.

Folks, what we have with Highway 60, east of Miami and through Canadian to Higgins, is one of the most beautiful drives in the Panhandle. Outsiders know the Panhandle as a flat and treeless plain, not the pristine stepped prairie, with Butte and Mesa up high, and tree lined waterways and highways below.

The cottonwoods and other indigenous trees along Highway 60 are an ecological gem. The trees are playing an active role in ecotourism to our region — a growing business that will help feed the regional economy. The trees have been there for hundreds of years. The trees provide nesting for raptors like the Mississippi Kite and Swainson's Hawk.

Did you know it is a federal offense to cut down a tree with an active raptor nest in it? Raptors come back to the same nest in the same tree year after year. TxDOT knows this little fact; but a biologist only has to report the tree is in the way of progress, and chop, chop.

Let it go, TxDOT. With wildcat watermen, drought, constant wind, hail, tornados and, yes, the occasional thud of an impacted automobile weighing heavy upon their weary trunk, the cottonwood's along Highway 60 deserve to remain.

There is no greater teller of history, provider and protector of nature's life, than the cottonwood.

Today in History

(AP) — Today is Friday, June 18, the 170th day of 2004. There are 196 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 18th, 1983, astronaut Sally K. Ride became America's first woman in space as she and four colleagues blasted off aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

On this date:
In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.
In 1812, the United States declared war against Britain.
In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte met his Waterloo as British and Prussian troops defeated the French in Belgium.
In 1928, aviator Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean as she completed a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in about 21 hours.
In 1940, during World War II, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill urged his countrymen to conduct themselves in a manner that would prompt future generations to say, "This was their finest hour."
In 1945, William Joyce, known as "Lord Haw-Haw," was charged in London with high treason for his English-language wartime broadcasts on German radio. (He was hanged the following January.)
In 1948, the United Nations Commission on Human Rights adopted its International Declaration of Human Rights.
In 1948, Columbia Records publicly unveiled its new long-playing phonograph record in New York.

Help stop tree cutting

To the editor,
We oppose Texas Department of Transportation's proposed removal of 1,185 trees over 180 miles of highway in Carson, Gray, Roberts, Hemphill, Lipscomb and Ochiltree counties.

Statistics do not prove the necessity of this plan. In all fixed object accidents in the last 10 years in this area, trees were least involved in both injuries and deaths. In the few tree accidents, alcohol, drugs or icy conditions were involved.

This would be a disaster for our area. Many of these trees are quite old and historic. Every October, Canadian has a Fall Foliage Tour. People drive in from all over Texas as well as other states to see colorful foliage. These trees are an important part of our livelihood.

Nature tourism has become a strong part of our economy. Texas Prairie Rivers Region, Inc., is headquartered in Canadian. If these trees were to be clear-cut, it could destroy the growing tourism so many have worked to build up. We are concerned about what the loss of these trees would do for bird and animal habitat.

Every "4th of July," Canadian hosts Texas' old-

Reagan family thanks America

The outpouring of love and respect for my dad the American people showed last week was astonishing. It was what really kept us going all week long.

Just to see the huge numbers of people who came out to join us in mourning Dad, whether it was at the funeral home in Santa Monica where they broke out singing "God Bless America," or at the Reagan Library in Simi Valley where over 100,000 people came to pay their respects, or in Washington while Dad lay in state at the Capitol and another 100,000 passed silently by his flag-draped coffin, it all left us breathless and filled with gratitude.

Seeing the firemen who had their fire trucks out, standing at attention and saluting as the hearse passed by on the way to the library and standing on the overpasses as the funeral procession passed by below, tugged at our heart strings.

After all, dad had not been in the public eye for 10 years but during that time which Nancy called "the long goodbye," it now appears that the love for him continued to grow as people came to understand the respect he showed for the office of president, and the respect he showed for each and every one of us and the optimistic vision he had for America's future — that we could always do better. His message was always hopeful and it inspired us and continues to inspire us.

I will always remember a little boy about the same age as young John Kennedy Jr. was when he saluted his father's coffin. He was standing on the median and saluting as the hearse passed by. Here was a boy maybe three or four years old who wasn't born when my dad was president, yet because of his parents' example he wanted to show his love for a man he never knew. All I can do is to say

Plan doubles world peacekeepers

One of the least-noticed developments at the G-8 summit of industrial nations at Sea Island, Ga., was the group's endorsement of an American plan — called the Global Peace Operations Initiative — to double the number of peacekeepers available for peacekeeping missions around the world. The United States, Canada and several European nations, which have been the primary sources of peacekeepers in the past, now have their hands full in places like Iraq, Afghanistan and the Balkans. In addition, the United Nations soon will be managing as many as 70,000 troops in almost 20 missions around the world. The system very nearly is running on empty.

Under the U.S. plan, an additional 75,000 troops from countries wishing to contribute to peace missions would receive training, equipment and logistical support from the United States or other G-8 members. These troops would be made available by their home countries for missions sponsored by the United Nations or by regional groups such as the Organization of African States or the European Union. The United States will put up at least the initial funds — reportedly $660 million.

This plan is a very good thing, as far as it goes. Everyone at the Sea Island conference was well-aware of the increasing scarcity of available peacekeepers as crisis situations multiply around the world. What the plan will not do, however, is shorten the reaction time for intervention efforts, which is sometimes measured in months, not weeks.

The problem is that, in so many cases, while governments debate whether to join a particular rescue effort, people are being killed, maimed, starved, enslaved or otherwise devastated. It is to fill this gap that the non-governmental group Citizens for Global Solutions proposed a United Nations Emergency Peace Service, which would be a small but highly trained and

Thank you, young American, with all my heart, thank you.

I can only say thank you to the 100,000 people who waited in line for hours to have a chance to walk by Dad's coffin at the library.

Thank you to the 100,000 people who stood in line in blazing heat for hours on end for a chance to spend a minute or two paying their respects to Dad as he lay in state in the Capitol rotunda.

Thank you to the members of the military for the magnificent job you did during the different ceremonies where your precision drills were perfect in every respect.

These things don't just happen and I realize how much effort you put into your performances of duty.

Thank you to President Bush, and Lady Thatcher and former President Bush, and Brian Mulroney for your touching eulogies at the funeral in Washington.

Thank you Rev. Danforth for your kind words and for the beauty you helped bring to the ceremony.

All of you made it so much easier for us to get through those emotion-filled days we spent in the public eye and under the glare of the TV lights. You helped turn what could have been a grief-filled experience into a week-long, awe-inspiring series of moments.

You made it clear that there was a massive support system out there — a support system that was praying for my dad and for us. It sustained us.

We had to go through this very publicly — there were no moments when we could mourn in private.

It was your love that turned what could have been a mere public spectacle into a mass outpouring of affection and love for my dad, and us, his family.

Thank you, John Kerry, for coming out here to California to pay your respects to a man with whom you disagreed so many times, yet respected enough to pay your final tribute.

Thank you, America. My dad loved you, and so do we. You are the finest, most decent and loving people in the world. And you proved that last week.

And thank you, Nancy Reagan, for taking such loving care of my dad and your beloved husband during the painful and extended ordeal of "the long goodbye."

Your selflessness and dedication were above and beyond the call of duty and for that we owe you a debt of gratitude.

Nations. That kind of navigation seems to be an administration trait these days.

Maybe Bush is actually learning from his mistakes. Global Solution's Don Kraus might have put it best when he said, "Begin with the assumption that the Bush administration will do the right thing ... only after it has exhausted all the other options."

The Bush administration's past foreign policy has brought a terrible cost in lives, dollars and reputation for America.

Americans and the world can rejoice if these new developments not only reflect temporary expediency, but represent a permanent reversal in White House doctrine.

Consider all of this and help stop this project. People who have lived here all of their lives have never thought of our trees as a danger. They are an integral part of our heritage.

Gayle Haygood, chair, and members of the Hemphill County Historical Commission camel's nose in the tent. Don Kraus, Global Solution's executive vice president, says the same objection also is made by a number of Third World countries, which see the idea as a threat to their sovereignty and see themselves as likely targets of emergency intervention.

Bush's plan nevertheless fills a serious international need, as well as an American need. With U.S. forces stretched so dangerously thin, the increase in the number of international peacekeepers should reduce the number of American troops needed for peacekeeping efforts.

This is quite a turnaround from the days when "peacekeeping" and "nation-building" were so bitterly scorned in the Bush administration.

Indeed, the whole Sea Island summit had a shape-shifting quality. Diplomats who were there described it as radically different from previous meetings. Germany's Gerhard Schroeder found "a remarkable change in American foreign policy."

Unilateralism was "at away, at least for the occasion. The Bush administration, this time, was not the bully, but a needy supplicant. Among other things, it wanted NATO peacekeepers in Iraq who could take some of the load off American forces there. Unfortunately, Bush did not receive any encouragement at Sea Island on that score.

But isn't it amazing? George Bush recently made a 180-degree policy turn regarding the United baseball diamonds, and more. Trees all along Highways 60 and 83 go by this complex.

Canadian River Wagon Bridge was restored with help from TxDOT. We are involved in a Main Street and Visitor's Center project along with TxDOT. We hope that TxDOT will regard the wishes of citizens of this area and not destroy our trees. Removing these trees would obliterate natural beauty that has taken years to develop. TxDOT planted a lot of trees in the last few years along the junction of U.S. 60 and U.S. 83, seven miles south of Canadian. My understanding is that these trees are scheduled for the axe also.

ready quick-reaction force — an idea I discussed in a previous column.

A serious barrier to such a quick-reaction force — and the reason President Bush's initiative is incomplete — is a long-standing American policy against the creation of a "standing army" at the United Nations.

The idea that a force of some 13,000 soldiers, police officers, secretaries and other support personnel could be considered a standing army is laughable, of course.

But opponents of the peacekeeping force see such a unit as the proverbial

U.S. Senate, House remain far apart on most aspects of corporate tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporate tax bills passed in the Senate and in the House are widely divergent, starting with their most essential ingredients and extending into the many extras that hopped on for a ride.

The House gave corporations a rate cut; the Senate opted for a tax deduction spread among manufacturers of all sizes. The House tacked on a tobacco buyout and a state sales tax deduction; senators inserted restrictions on overtime rules and billions of dollars in energy production incentives.

Rep. Max Sandlin of Texas said the legislation includes a provision he co-sponsored to allow state sales tax deductions from federal tax returns. Sandlin, D-Marshall, said the measure would save Texas taxpayers almost $1 billion a year, for an average federal tax savings of $300 for every Texas family this year alone.

Some businesses and many lawmakers want to see the bills passed as quickly as possible, and the bills must be reconciled before anything can become law.

The supporters urge quick passage to end escalating sanctions imposed by the European Union in retaliation for a U.S. tax break benefiting exports. The World Trade Organization declared it an illegal subsidy, and the corporate tax bill yanks it out of the nation's tax code.

In its place, the House and Senate proposed a combination of tax cuts for American manufacturers and simpler tax rules for multinational corporations. While lawmakers negotiate, punitive tariffs imposed on some U.S. exports to Europe, which now stand at 8 percent, will increase 1 percentage point each month.

"And remember," said Michael Baroody, executive vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, "the EU just expanded with 10 additional member countries from Central and Eastern Europe, and they also now are penalizing various U.S. exports."

The House voted 251-179 on Thursday to pass its version of the bill. Democrats gave Republicans their winning edge.

Gay marriage opponents look for support in the pews

BEAVERTON, Ore. (AP) — Ken Keeley spends his Sunday mornings at church — not just to worship, but to collect signatures for a ballot measure that would amend Oregon's constitution to ban gay marriage.

Keeley, one of roughly 2,000 members at the evangelical Beaverton Christian Church, describes himself as "not that political."

But he says the issue of same-sex marriage — and what it means to much of Oregon's religious community — drove him to join the petition drive.

"When everything's OK, you don't have a tendency to act," Keeley said. "But it gets to the point where you get concerned, and you have to act."

Organizers in Oregon and four other states — Arkansas, Michigan, Montana and Ohio — are turning to churches for support of their efforts to legally define marriage as between a man and a woman, a move that political analysts call savvy.

But some churches that support gay rights are worried the strategy will send the wrong message, while others have questioned the ethics and legality of bringing politics to the pulpit.

'We have seen what has begun in our culture across the nation.'

— Chris Stewart
Arkansas Marriage Amendment Committee

In Oregon, the Defense of Marriage Coalition has just two weeks left to collect the 100,840 valid signatures needed to place an amendment banning gay marriage on the November ballot. They're counting on 1,500 Oregon churches for help.

Organizers won't say how many they've collected so far, because the signature-validation process makes it difficult to get an accurate count.

"We're optimistic and we're hopeful," said Tim Nashif, the group's political director.

Chris Stewart, whose group, the Arkansas Marriage Amendment Committee, is leading efforts to ban gay marriage there, describes the petition drive as a "pre-emptive strike."

"We have seen what has begun in our culture across the nation," Stewart said. "And we realize it is coming to 'a town near you.'" Volunteers based in Little Rock, Ark., have already collected 109,000 signatures — 28,250 more than is needed by the July 2 deadline for a ballot measure there. Two church-based groups have yet to turn in about 25,000 more signatures, Stewart said.

In Michigan, volunteers with the Lansing-based group Citizens for the Protection of Marriage had signed up 130,000 people by the end of May. They need 317,000 valid signatures.

And the Montana Family Foundation in Laurel, Mont., has collected more than half of the 41,029 signatures needed to get its constitutional amendment on the November ballot.

Recent polls in Michigan, Montana, and Ohio show voters support a constitutional amendment legally defining marriage as between a man and a woman. There has been no such poll in Arkansas, but Stewart says the Bible Belt state doesn't need one.

Political analysts say visiting churches gives signature collectors access to a friendly, receptive audience. "It's a very, very politically astute move," said Laura Olson, a political science professor at Clemson University in Clemson, S.C. She edited a 2001 book on the role of the clergy in U.S. politics. "You know you're going to have a particular set of people who are going to be 95 percent in favor on this issue," she said.

The gay marriage debate has forged connections among congregations as disparate as Southern Baptists and Roman Catholics, evangelical Protestants and members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"Marriage is at the very core of who we are as people of faith," said Phil Burress, whose Cincinnati-based group, Citizens for Community Values, is leading the petition drive in Ohio. Volunteers there have to turn in nearly 323,000 signatures by Aug. 4.

But Rev. Tara Wilkins, an independent Portland pastor, says the churches' stance against gay marriage mistakenly gives the impression that no Christian congregations welcome gays.

Minister's Musing

Seeing everything through heaven's eyes

Beginning just after Easter I began praying about what I should be preaching on through the summer months. I was in hopes (being a person who likes to plan things very far in advance) that the Lord would point the way in just a few days. I kept praying for direction, but it seemed that the Lord was silent. Then on June 4, just two days before the first sermon of the summer, I got His input.

I was just praying about things in general on Friday morning, June 4, and said, "Lord, I just wished that this summer every Christian would want to be in church each Sunday as badly as they want to go to the lake." Bingo! Then I had His leading and His direction.

So this summer we are having sermons that focus on trips taken by people in the Bible to the lake or the river or the sea. A lot of Bible events happened in or near the water. Our first look was: "Moses' Float Trip."

Of course, Moses doesn't remember it. After all he was just three months old.

The account of the story is recorded in Exodus 1:8-2:10. From birth Moses was in danger and looked to have little hope. Pharaoh was after the Israelites and when increased work didn't stop their growth, he decided to have all of the male children killed. Since the midwives wouldn't co-operate, Pharaoh just passed a law.

Moses' mother hid him for three months, but then couldn't keep him out of sight any longer. She made a watertight basket, put him in it, placed him in the Nile River and entrusted him to God. From a human perspective there didn't seem to be much possibility for good. But that was only through man's eyes.

Through God's eyes there not only was the possibility for good, but for greatness. Seeing things through heaven's eyes makes all of the difference.

Through the eyes of the Lord one could see that the little baby would defeat Pharaoh and Egypt and become one of the greatest leaders that the world has ever known.

In the movie "The Prince of Egypt," Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, sings a song to Moses to help him get the right view of his life. It is titled, "Through Heaven's Eyes."

Here are a few of the lyrics: "A single thread in a tapestry, though its color brightly shine, can never see its purpose in the pattern of the grand design. And the stone that sits on the very top of the mountain's mighty face; does it think it's more important than the stones that form the base? So how can you see what

Vermont Episcopalians first in country to develop a liturgy for same-sex unions

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Vermont's Episcopal Diocese has become the first in the country to develop a liturgy — a script for a religious service — in response to a state law making same-sex unions legal.

"We have been living with the legal reality of same-sex unions for over three years," Bishop Thomas Ely said in a statement made public Friday. "It is appropriate and timely for the Diocese of Vermont to prepare and use these services for members of our congregations."

In 2000, Vermont became the first state to offer legal recognition to same-sex unions. The state did not legalize same-sex marriage, but established a parallel system of civil unions to offer gay and lesbian couples most of the same benefits and responsibilities that married couples have.

Some Episcopal dioceses have already sanctioned same-sex unions. But Vermont's is the first to do so in a jurisdiction that offers legal recognition to such unions.

It also is the first to do so in such a comprehensive manner, said Stan Baker, senior warden — similar to chairman of the board — of St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral, the Vermont Diocese's headquarters church in Burlington.

'We have been living with the legal reality of same-sex unions for over three years.'

— Bishop Thomas Ely
Vermont Episcopal Diocese

Baker was also the lead plaintiff in the case that produced what is widely called the Baker decision, a December 1999 Vermont Supreme Court ruling that called on the Legislature to offer something akin to marriage to gays and lesbians.

"There isn't another diocese that has this complete a policy, with theological background supporting it, the liturgy itself and resources for the couple," Baker said. Those include a plan for pastoral counseling of couples before they enter into what will be known as a holy union, he said.

The specifics are spelled out in a 36-page report prepared by an 18-member task force that Ely appointed last year. It was to be presented to clergy and lay leaders within the 51-church diocese in two public sessions: one Friday at St. James Episcopal Church in Arlington; and another Saturday at Christ Episcopal Church in Montpelier.

Baker and Ely emphasized in an interview that Episcopalians value the fact that liturgies are determined by the church's national leadership.

"In the Episcopal tradition having a liturgy is very important to people," Baker said. He said the 2000 ceremony blessing his civil union with Peter Harrigan "felt very complete to me," but "I was aware we were putting it together ourselves."

Anne Clarke Brown, director of communications for the diocese and also a partner in a civil union, said "it's really a conservative desire on the part of gay and lesbian couples to have our relationships recognized in the church. We want to be held accountable to the same values" as a woman and man making what are meant to be lifelong vows."

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl. My brother molested me. It happened only once, but since then he has twice offered me money to help him with his "fixation." He had a girlfriend for a few years and they had sex all the time. After they broke up, his next relationship lasted for only a few months before she broke it off. That's when he turned to me.

I haven't told anyone because I'm ashamed of myself. I don't want people to find out -- especially my friends. I'm afraid they'll think I'm gross or something. What should I do?

— 'TOY' IN INDIANA

DEAR 'TOY': What happened wasn't your fault. You have done nothing to be ashamed of. The person who should be ashamed is your brother. His "fixation" is sick, and he should not be trying to make you a part of it.

It is important that you get help. Your friends do not have to know. Tell your mother what happened. If she minimizes what your brother did, then pick up the phone and call your local rape hotline, or the Rape, Abuse, Incest National Network (R.A.I.N.N.) — 800-656-HOPE (4673). The people there will understand the seriousness of what happened and will help you during this difficult time. Please don't wait. Trust me, you are not as alone as you think you are.

DEAR ABBY: What is the protocol for avoiding a co-worker's third wedding? Everyone in our office was invited to her second one, a large, catered affair. We all knew the marriage wouldn't last because she was marrying a jobless, irresponsible parasite.

She is again marrying for the wrong reasons. She admits she doesn't love her fiance, but he provides security and takes care of her two sons from her first marriage, both of whom have problems she can't handle.

I don't plan to attend, so am I obligated to send a gift? She's having another large wedding, she says, because they need money for the house they just bought.

— DISGUSTED IN DETROIT

DEAR DISGUSTED: You are under no obligation to give your co-worker a gift if you do not attend her fund-raiser. Since you have to work with the woman, consider sending a lovely greeting card or token gift along with your good wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. I baby-sit for a family with three children. I watch them twice a week from after school until the mother arrives home from work. Lately, the kids have been involved in sports and after-school activities, so some weeks I am not needed.

Yesterday when I arrived, there sat the mother. She had taken the day off from work and didn't notify me. I'm afraid if I bring up the fact that I never know whether or not I should go to watch the kids, I'll lose my job. (Of course, when I don't baby-sit, I don't get paid.) I would appreciate any advice you have.

— GETTING FRUSTRATED

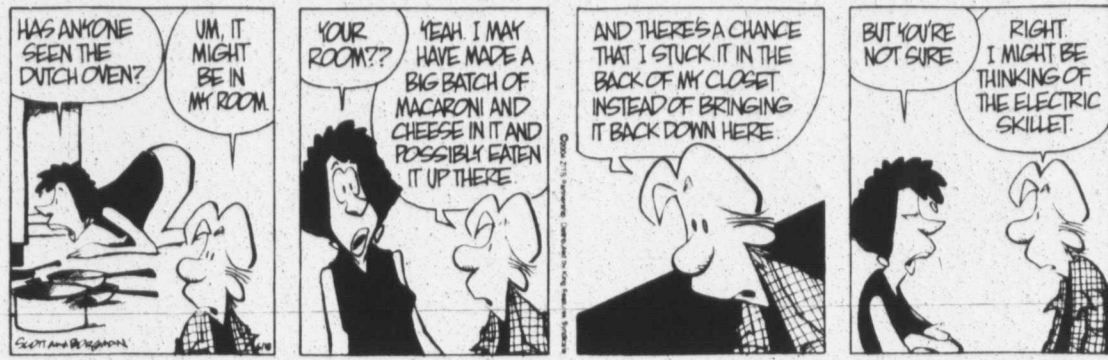

DEAR GETTING FRUSTRATED: It's time to expand your client roster. It appears you are being taken for granted and taken advantage of. For the mother to expect you to reserve a bloc of time and then not pay for it is inconsiderate and unfair. I recommend you institute a 24-hour cancellation policy. If you allot time to baby-sit someone's children, you should be paid for that time unless properly notified. Experienced, responsible baby sitters aren't easy to find.

Van Horn returns to Nebraska

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Except for a heckler yelling at him during Arkansas' practice, Razorbacks coach Dave Van Horn has received a warm welcome from Nebraskans so far.

Van Horn left Nebraska for his alma mater two years ago after leading the Cornhuskers to the second of their two straight — and only two — College World Series appearances.

"The people of Nebraska are good baseball fans. They understand what goes on," Van Horn said.

Well, there was that heckler spewing venom from the grandstand as the Razorbacks took batting practice.

"I got a kick out of him," Van Horn said. "He was ragging me up there. He was yelling pretty good. I think some of our fans got on him."

The Razorbacks, picked to finish last in the SEC West this season, are in the CWS for the first time since 1989. They will open against top-ranked Texas on Friday night.

Texas coach Auggie Garrido said Van Horn is a knowledgeable baseball man who is a good recruiter and good teacher.

"He takes the players he has, he molds them together and they establish confidence in their ability to perform both offensively and defensively," Garrido said. "They play with a lot of spirit, a lot of heart."

Those were the characteristics of Van Horn's teams in his five years at Nebraska.

Van Horn said it was difficult to leave Nebraska at a time when it was enjoying unprecedented success in baseball. But he couldn't turn down Arkansas, where he was an all-conference infielder in 1982 and an assistant under Norm DeBryen.

"If we would have had a couple years of being average, middle of the pack in the Big 12, it might have been easier to go back to Arkansas," Van Horn said.

Van Horn said it has been a hectic few days for him since Arkansas qualified for the series. He said he's done about 10 interviews a day since Monday.

A CHANGE AT THE HELM IN WHEELER

Tucker named football coach

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

One of the winningest 11-man football programs in the Texas Panhandle will go to a 6-man program with a new coach at the helm.

Toby Tucker has been announced as the man who will lead the Mustangs into their first season of 6-man football. Tucker takes over for Jim Verden, who resigned to take a similar position in Pottsboro. Tucker has been the head football coach at Groom for the past two seasons.

Fading enrollment numbers forced Wheeler to make the move from 11-man to 6-man football starting this season. The Mustangs have had a rich 11-man football history that includes 27 playoff appearances and 3 Class 1A state titles. The program has twice made it to the state championship game.

Given the history and respect the program has attained over the years, is leading the Wheeler football team still an attractive opportunity for a head coach? According to Tucker it is. "It's one of the top jobs in the state and the tradition is almost second to none," said the Tucker. Adding, "it's a wonderful opportunity for a young coach." Tucker, 29, brings a record of 6 and 14 to Wheeler after two years of rebuilding at Groom.

Doug Galyean will replace Tucker at Groom where he is also the basketball coach.

Surprises at the U.S. Open

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Now the real U.S. Open can begin.

The first round provided the surprises: The 50-year-old sharing the lead with the guy who couldn't even break par in a practice round at Shinnecock Hills. Not far behind, the former champion who hasn't won in eight years — and the feared ocean wind that wasn't.

Jay Haas, Shigeaki Maruyama and Corey Pavin had the spotlight in the opening round, but all the elements were in place for this tournament to take a more conventional course Friday.

Masters champion Phil Mickelson was right there. So were Ernie Els and Vijay Singh, both positioned to knock Tiger Woods out of the top spot in the world rankings. And it's never wise to count out Woods, determined to break an 0-for-7 slump in the majors.

"There's an awful long way to go," Woods said.

Mickelson and 56 others were bumped off the links-style course when fog enveloped the course Thursday evening. He returned early Friday to finish a 2-under-par 68, saving bogey from the back rough at No. 7 and sinking a 35-foot birdie putt on the next hole.

"Not too bad," Mickelson said, beginning the second round only two strokes behind co-leaders Haas, Maruyama and Angel Cabrera.

Ditto for Singh, who got in the last four holes of his round and also shot 68.

Els, a two-time Open champion, was off to a miserable start — 3 over through three holes, including a double-bogey at No. 11 (his second hole). But he recovered with some terrific wedge play and a few timely putts and gladly signed for 70.

"After my start, I played the golf course in 3-under par," Els said. "I felt I played well."

Woods needed to save par five times from bunkers — and once for his only birdie — in a pedestrian round of 72. It was the fourth straight time he failed to shoot par or better in the first round of a major. And he's never won any tournament when starting out over par.

If that doesn't change, his winless streak in the majors will go to eight after a 7-of-11 run from 1999-02.

"It's never going to stay that way," Woods said. "I had a great stretch where I played fantastic golf."

Pavin was fantastic in 1995, when he won the Open the last time it was held at Shinnecock Hills. He hasn't won anywhere since '96, but sure seemed glad to be back on Long Island.

He fired a 67, just one stroke behind the leaders and equaling his best round ever in the Open.

How about Haas? Two weeks removed a runner-up finish in the Senior PGA Championship, the 50-year-old continued his resurgence in surprisingly calm conditions Thursday. His 66 included birdies at both par 3s on the back nine.

"I'm hitting the ball longer than I ever have. I feel more confident with my putting, my chipping," Haas said. "But until I win, I won't say it's the best I've played."

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals already had the National League's best record. They showed they can pull off a comeback victory, too.

Pinch-hitter Reggie Sanders capped a three-run rally with a game-winning single in the ninth inning, leading the Cardinals to a surprising 5-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Thursday night.

It was the first time St. Louis came back from a ninth-inning deficit after being 0-for-24 in that situation.

"The early part of the year, we weren't able to win those late games," Sanders said. "Everything is clicking right now."

The Cardinals have won 13 of 17 and swept the A's, who came to St. Louis on an eight-game winning streak.

"Coming back like that against a good team like that is a good sign," Sanders said.

With Oakland leading 4-2, Edgar Renteria and Cody McKay opened the ninth with singles, and Ray Lankford was hit by a pitch to load the bases with no outs.

A's second baseman Marco Scutaro then booted Marlon Anderson's grounder to allow two runs to score.

Sanders followed with a single off Jim Mecir (0-5) to complete the comeback for the Cardinals, who are 39-27 and hold a two-game lead in the NL Central.

"We have so many clutch players, so many guys that are ninth-inning guys, that it's the first time we've reversed it," manager Tony La Russa said. "We should do it as much as anybody because we've got a lot of pressure, clutch guys."

In other games, it was: Cincinnati 4, Texas 3; Tampa Bay 4, San Diego 1; Kansas City 10, Atlanta 4; Seattle 6, Milwaukee 3; Boston 11, Colorado 0; San Francisco 8, Toronto 5; Pittsburgh 5, Anaheim 2; Minnesota 6, Montreal 4; Florida 2, the Chicago White Sox 1 in 11 innings; the New York Mets 6, Cleveland 2; Arizona 6, the

New York Yankees 1; Los Angeles 4, Baltimore 3; and Philadelphia and Detroit split a doubleheader, with the Phillies winning the first game 6-2 and the Tigers taking the second 5-4 in 11 innings.

In the only NL game, it was the Chicago Cubs 5, Houston 4.

At St. Louis, Ray King (1-0) got the last out in the ninth for the win.

Oakland's short-handed bullpen wasted a good effort by Tim Hudson, who allowed two runs on eight hits.

"Obviously, those guys want to get the job done, but for some reason it's been a struggle," Hudson said. "It's hard to say why it happens but it has been and it's just something we've got to somehow get past."

The A's were missing closer Arthur Rhodes, who's taking a two-day leave of absence, and Chris Hammond, who was unavailable due to a shoulder problem.

Reds 4, Rangers 3

At Cincinnati, Ken Griffey Jr. failed to hit his 500th homer, but the Reds pulled off another late rally for a three-game sweep.

Sean Casey had a pair of hits and a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the seventh. Griffey went 0-for-3 with a sacrifice fly.

Todd Van Poppel (3-2) gave up six hits in seven innings.

Devil Rays 4, Padres 1

At San Diego, Fred McGriff hit his 493rd homer to tie Lou Gehrig for 21st on the career list, and Tampa Bay extended its franchise-record winning streak to eight games.

The Devil Rays also swept consecutive series for the first time in their seven-year history. Before starting this trip, they beat Colorado three straight in Tampa.

Royals 10, Braves 4

At Atlanta, Darrell May (4-8) beat his former team, and Desi Relaford went 3-for-5 with three RBIs for Kansas City.

The Royals improved their AL-worst road record to 9-21 with their second victory in a row.

Mariners 6, Brewers 3

At Milwaukee, Scott Spiezio hit a tiebreaking homer leading off the eighth inning, sending Seattle to a victory.

Jolbert Cabrera homered and drove in three runs, and Randy Winn also connected for the Mariners.

Red Sox 11, Rockies 0

At Denver, Derek Lowe pitched four-hit ball for seven innings in the 25th shutout in Coors Field history, and David Ortiz drove in a career-high five runs to help Boston avoid a sweep.

Lowe (6-5) allowed just two flyballs and struck out three for his third win in four starts.

Giants 8, Blue Jays 5

At San Francisco, Michael Tucker hit a tiebreaking triple in the eighth, and the Giants completed a three-game sweep.

Pinch-hitter Barry Bonds was intentionally walked leading off the eighth. Ray Durham beat out a bunt single, and both scored on Tucker's drive to center off Justin Speier (1-4).

Pirates 5, Angels 2

At Pittsburgh, Tike Redman and Jack Wilson homered in the Pirates' go-ahead seventh, and Kris Benson (5-6) earned his first home win since May 10, 2003.

Jose Mesa worked the ninth for his 16th save in 16 chances, tying Mike Williams' club record for consecutive saves in a season.

Twins 6, Expos 4

At Montreal, Matthew LeCroy hit his third pinch-hit homer in three at-bats this season, and Minnesota rallied for a three-game sweep.

Torii Hunter's RBI double in the eighth put the Twins ahead to stay, sending the Expos to their sixth consecutive loss.

Marlins 2, White Sox 1, 11 innings

At Miami, pinch-hitter Matt Treanor singled home the winning run with two outs in the 11th, and Florida beat Chicago after losing Josh Beckett to another injury.

The World Series MVP left his start in the fourth with a muscle strain on the side of his back. He just returned from the disabled list because of a blister on his right middle finger. He's day to day.

The Marlins acquired reliever Billy Koch and cash from the Chicago White Sox after the game for minor league infielder Wilson Valdez.

Mets 6, Indians 2

At New York, Mike Cameron hit his first homer since May 10, and five Mets pitchers combined on a five-hitter.

Earlier in the day, the Mets tried to bolster their lineup, acquiring outfielder Richard Hidalgo from Houston for pitchers David Weathers and Jeremy Griffiths.

Diamondbacks 6, Yankees 1

At Phoenix, knuckleballer Steve Sparks (3-4) allowed one run in seven innings and Juan Brito hit his first major league homer for Arizona.

New York had a four-game winning streak snapped in losing for just the fourth time in 22 games and second in 19 interleague games dating to last season.

Dodgers 4, Orioles 3

At Los Angeles, Adrian Beltre snapped a tie with a homer in the eighth to lift the Dodgers to a three-game sweep.

Beltre's 16th homer came two innings after pinch-hitter Jason Grabowski hit a tying two-run shot off Rodrigo Lopez (5-3).

Phillies 6, Tigers 2, 1st game

Tigers 5, Phillies 4, 11 innings, 2nd game

At Philadelphia, Jason Michaels homered and drove in four runs for the Phillies in the opener of a day-night doubleheader.

Cubs 5, Astros 4

Chicago completed its first four-game sweep of the Astros since June 23-25, 1967.

NASCAR in Michigan; Tony Stewart to work on patience

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Tony Stewart, of all people, called for patience in the wake of chaotic races at Dover and Pocono.

Most of the problems grew out of the changing rules governing freezing the field when the caution flag flies and when the pit lane will be open to the competitors.

"In NASCAR's defense, the first time we were told as drivers about freezing the field, they said it would be a work in progress," said Stewart, perhaps NASCAR's most impatient driver.

"As frustrating as it's been for everybody, I think we have to be realistic about making rule changes.

"This wasn't just whacking a quarter-inch off a spoiler or changing the size of a restrictor plate. It was a pretty drastic change. And any time you change a rule like that you're going to run into a situation that somebody didn't think of, because there's only so many different scenarios you can think of."

Former series champion Rusty Wallace said he hopes racing Sunday at Michigan International Speedway will have a calming effect on the situation.

"I really think things will calm down a whole lot this week at Michigan and I'll be totally shocked if they don't," said Wallace, the leader among active drivers with five wins and 15 top-five finishes at MIS. "The last two weeks have produced enough weirdness, controversy and torn-up race cars for a quarter of a season, let alone just the two races.

"I'll tell you, it must be a situation where the moon is aligned with some of the evil stars or something weird like that. Man, with all the crashes, controversial calls and unusual stuff going on, you just wonder what could happen next."

Wallace himself had some misadventures over the past two weeks.

At Dover, he was able to avoid serious damage in the crashes but a stop-and-go penalty late in the race relegated Wallace to 13th when he appeared headed for a top five finish. Then, at Pocono, he had a brake failure and crashed hard into Michael Waltrip, finishing 32nd.

'It's just not a place where all the crazy stuff happens.'

Armstrong strongly denies claims

PARIS (AP) — Lance Armstrong wants the publisher of a new book filled with doping allegations against him to include his denial, and a Paris court will rule on the request next week.

The five-time Tour de France winner has strongly denied claims made by a former assistant in the book, "L.A. Confidential, the Secrets of Lance Armstrong." The assistant says Armstrong once asked her to dispose of used syringes and to give him makeup to conceal needle marks on his arms.

Armstrong wants a notice denying the allegations inserted into the French-language book, published here by La Martiniere. The court said Friday it will issue its decision Monday.

The book, which went on sale in France on Tuesday, was written by David Walsh and Pierre Ballester and relies heavily on allegations by former assistant Emma O'Reilly. Armstrong's lawyers have said they were starting libel proceedings in France and Britain against the authors and their publisher.

Cable One set to offer Golf Channel

PAMPA, July 1st, 2004 - Cable One tees up a treat for golfers as it adds The Golf Channel to its Digital Value Pak lineup. Starting July first, every golf enthusiast will be able to enjoy the world's first 24-hour network devoted entirely to golf programming.

Available on channel 300, The Golf Channel offers a full compliment of golfing know-how, from players and tournaments to instruction, fitness and equipment. Also featured is an exclusive blend of competition from the PGA Tour, Senior PGA Tour, NIKE Tour, LPGA and European tour.

"From Beginners to pros, everyone who enjoys golf will find something of interest on The Golf Channel," said Terry Harris, general manager "Whether you're improving your strokes or simply admire those at the top of their game, you can tune in to programs featuring tips from world-renowned instructors or take a video tour of the great courses of the world."

The Golf Channel joins more than 29 channels of programming in Cable One's Digital Value Pak, now available for $4.50 per month. Other popular favorites featured in the Digital Value Pak include Discovery Wings, National Geographic, ESPN News, The Outdoor Channel TV and History International.

Among The Golf Channel's many programming features are Golf Central, a daily 30 minute news expedition around the world of golf; Golf Channel Classics, reliving golf's most memorable highlights, and What's in the Bag, spotlighting what's new and useful in golf equipment. Others include Playing Lessons from the Pros, Champions Tour Learning Center, Golf Fitness Academy and Golf With Style.

Those interested can sign up for the Digital Value Pak by calling Cable One at (806) 665-2381.

Sprinter Jones releases lie detector test results

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marion Jones stepped up her public relations offensive by releasing results of a lie detector test her lawyer said proves she never took performance-enhancing drugs.

The move came just hours after she was accused of grandstanding by the international doping chief.

Jones and her legal team have sparred recently with IOC president Jacques Rogge, the United States Anti-Doping Agency and World Anti-Doping Agency chief Dick Pound in their attempt to clear the star sprinter of drug allegations.

The latest move by the five-time Olympic medalist involved taking a lie detector test Wednesday at her attorney's office and sending the results to USADA on Thursday.

"The passing of the polygraph just vindicates and supports fully the position Marion has taken through all of this time," Burton said on a conference call. "That's the position that she never, ever used performance-enhancing drugs at any time from anybody at all. This polygraph examination fully proves that."

USADA spokesman Rich Wanninger said the agency wouldn't comment on a specific case, but that "all credible information will receive the appropriate consideration."

Jones was asked two questions about performance-enhancing drugs by certified polygraph examiner Richard Homer, who determined she was telling the truth. Homer spent more than 20 years as a polygraph examiner for the FBI. Another examiner concurred after a blind analysis of the results.

The questions Jones was asked and answered "no" to were:
— Did you ever personally use performance-enhancing drugs?

— Are you now lying about any personal use of performance-enhancing drugs?

While the term "performance-enhancing drugs" was not defined, Burton said he took it to mean "anything that was illegal or improper."

Jones is one of the most prominent athletes who testified in a federal probe of a Bay Area drug lab accused of illegally distributing steroids.

USADA is investigating Jones for possible doping violations. She met with doping officials last month to discuss their evidence, and received a letter from the agency last week asking follow-up questions.

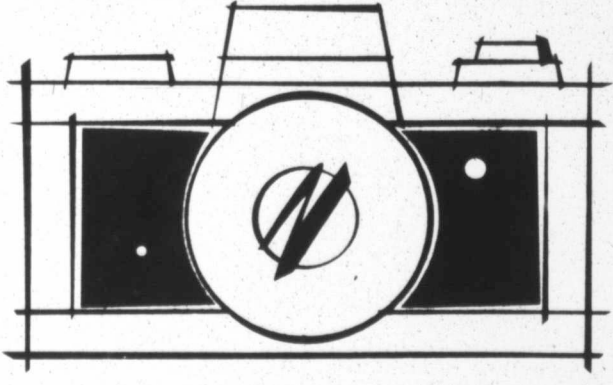

USADA is building cases based on documents and other circumstantial evidence deriving from the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative case. Athletes can be banned without a positive drug test.

"Certainly in our opinion, they have more than ample reason to close this matter and exonerate Marion Jones," Burton said. "This matter should be over if there is any fairness in the process."

'The passing of the polygraph just vindicates and supports fully the position Marion has taken through all of this time'

KIDS, INCORPORATED STREETBALL CHALLENGE

3-on-3 tournament scheduled

Amarillo's original 3-On-3 streetball event returns for the 13th consecutive year as Kids, Incorporated brings the ultimate in basketball to a new location at the Amarillo National Center, State Fairgrounds. Tip-off for the 2004 Streetball Challenge is scheduled for Saturday, July 10th, and Sunday, July 11th.

The tournament is open to male and female players. Divisions begin at the 10 and under age group, and progress through the adult Supreme court division. Teams will be grouped into divisions with teams of similar age and playing ability. Last year's event consisted of 265 teams competing in 40 divisions.

Entry fees are set at $96.00 per team with an entry deadline of 5pm Wednesday, July 7th.

Entry forms are to be turned in to Kids, Incorporated located at 27th and Osage in Amarillo. Each player will receive an official event T-shirt, and each team is guaranteed a minimum of three games. Prizes will be awarded to the first and second place winners in each division.

Special events this year include the traditional 10' Slam Dunk contest and 3-point contests. The popular 9' Slam Dunk contest will also make a return this year.

Entry forms are available online at www.kidsinc.org, or contact the kids, Incorporated office at info@kidsinc.org, or by calling (806) 376-5936.

All proceeds from the 2004 Streetball Challenge will support the athletic programs offered by Kids, Incorporated.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 19, 2004:

You make a difference in the lives of others, as well as your own life. You have a natural tendency to be excessive. The depth of your feelings intensifies this year, which allows others to become a lot closer than in previous years. Your family and personal life will benefit. You also might choose to spend more on your home, domestic surroundings and loved ones, especially through 2004. Your greatest pleasures come from this environment. Many of you will choose to work at home or have a home office. If you are single, relationships will flourish because of your natural charm and indulgent understanding. Close to your next birthday, you might decide that you have met the one to tie the knot with. If you are attached, the romantic pitch between the two of you surges. Do more as a couple. CANCER helps you spend!

'Elvis' impersonator Carl Laugher of Borger croons to High Plains Cruisers member Linda Simmons in the Pavilion at Recreation Park last weekend. Elvis was "in the building" adding a special 1950s, 1960s flavor to Sunday's activities. He told "Burnin' the Bricks" organizers that he had so much fun he plans to return next year.

Authorities search Riyadh for info about U.S. hostage

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — With helicopters flying overhead, thousands of Saudi police searched for American hostage Paul M. Johnson Jr. on Friday as a 72-hour deadline loomed for the kingdom to release al-Qaida prisoners or see him killed.

Police went through several Riyadh neighborhoods from Thursday night through Friday morning, but authorities gave no indication they were any closer to Johnson, an Lockheed Martin employee who was kidnapped Saturday by a group calling itself al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula. The organization is believed to be headed by Abdulaziz Issa Abdul-Mohsin al-Moqin, the top al-Qaida figure in Saudi Arabia.

In Johnson's hometown of Eagleswood Township, N.J., relatives held a vigil Thursday night to pray for his safe return.

The kidnappers released a video tape of Johnson on Tuesday night saying they would kill him unless the Saudi government released all militants in its prisons within 72 hours. The Saudis have rejected the demand.

It is not known exactly when the deadline expires as the time of the video tape's release to an Islamic Web site was not clear. But it is presumed the deadline runs out Friday evening Saudi time or Friday afternoon eastern U.S. time.

People living in the districts, which lie in western and southern Riyadh, suggested that the kidnappers enjoy popular support, partly because of U.S. policy in Iraq and its perceived backing for Israel.

"How can we inform on our brothers when we see all these pictures coming from Abu Ghraib and Rafah," Muklas Nawaf, a resident of Dhahar al-Budaih, said as he ate meat grilled on a spit at a restaurant called Jihad, Arabic for holy war. He was referring to the pictures of Iraqis abused by U.S. soldiers at the Abu Ghraib prison in Baghdad and Israeli military incursions and killings in the Gaza refugee camp of Rafah.

'This is not a little skirmish. It is a war.'

— Muklas Nawaf
Saudi citizen

"This is not a little skirmish. It is a war," Nawaf said.

A man who was shopping in Sweidi with his family said Friday he saw little prospect of Johnson's life being spared.

"These (kidnappers) are holy warriors, heroes, who never waver, even if they will fail," Mizahen al-Etbi told the AP. "All Saudis hate Americans, not only these heroes."

But the preacher of Riyadh's Imam Sultana Mosque implored the kidnappers to release Johnson in a column published in Al-Riyadh newspaper on Friday.

"O, youth of the nation who have trodden the wrong path, come back to the fold of the community of Islam. Avoid this sedition and be obedient to the ruler of the Muslims," Sheik Mohammed bin Saad al-Saeed wrote.

since Iran's undeclared program came to light that "a number of questions remain outstanding."

Hours before the resolution was adopted, the United States accused Tehran of bulldozing sites to prevent discovery of evidence of a nuclear weapons program.

Agreement on the text came despite Iranian efforts to substantially tone it down, including tactics that forced IAEA head Mohamed ElBaradei on Thursday to acknowledge mistakenly accusing Tehran in one instance of holding back information.

The IAEA is investigating nearly two decades of covert nuclear activity by Iran. Tehran says its nuclear program is for generating electricity, but the United States claims it is for making weapons.

Iranian delegate Amir Zamaninia told the meeting the tone of the resolution was affected by "wild and illusionary allegations of a secret Iranian nuclear weapons program."

And he warned that his country was reviewing its "voluntary confidence building measures," an indication that Iran might rethink the suspension of its uranium enrichment activities. Enrichment can lead to fuel for electricity or weapons-grade uranium for warheads.

ElBaradei admitted he incorrectly stated in a report to the board that Iran did not report the purchase of 150 magnets for centrifuges it was building secretly.

His admission came after Iran submitted an audiotape recording an IAEA inspector being informed about the purchase.

The report also said Iran inquired about buying thousands of such magnets on the black market.

Iran: Diplomats say photos may suggest new cover-up

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The U.N. nuclear watchdog agency censured Iran for past cover-ups in a resolution adopted Friday, and warned Tehran to be more forthcoming if it wants an investigation of suspect activities to end.

Tehran warned it might retaliate by reconsidering plans to suspend its uranium enrichment.

The resolution submitted by three European powers — France, Germany and Britain — was a product of days of diplomatic maneuvering at a meeting of the 35-member board of governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency. It did not hand down sanctions against the country.

The document, passed by consensus, "deplores" that "Iran's cooperation has not been as full, timely and proactive as it should have been. It notes "with concern that after almost two years"
