Friends pay tribute to Congressman

Congressman Bob Price

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Bob Price, a former U.S. congressman and state senator and a Pampa rancher, "is sorely going to be missed," according to Pampa rancher and businessman Bill Arrington.

The longtime Pampa resident, whose full name was Robert D. Price, died Tuesday at the age of 76. Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday, at First Baptist Church here. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery with military honors accorded by Altus Air Force Base, Altus, Okla.

Price was a U.S. Air Force jet pilot during the Korean conflict, where he received the Air Medal for his combat missions. He flew the SR-71 Blackbird, the F111-A and the F-4E Phantom aircraft.

"I first came to Pampa in 1956, after graduating from Oklahoma University. I met Bob shortly thereafter. I already knew his cousin, Buddy Price. Bob was just back from Korea, where he was a fighter pilot," Arrington said.

"He and I both flew. We would see each other at the airport.

"Our ranches adjoined each other. When we'd have a hard rain, it'd wash the water gaps out (of the fence) and we'd see each other putting them back. Bob and I cow-bayed together and were neighbors. Our children were friends."

'He really wanted and strived for good government.'

Price was elected in 1966 to represent Pampa and the surrounding area in the United States House of Representatives. He was elected in 1978 to the Texas State Senate for the Pampa area.

"He really wanted and strived for good government. He wanted to spend the taxpayers' money wisely on things that would benefit the citizens of this district," Arrington said.

"Bob was a good friend of mine. He was Republican when that wasn't the 'in' thing," remembers State Rep. Warren Chisum. "When he

PAAF Reunion Association dissolves, donates funds to Freedom Museum

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Pampa Army Airfield Reunion Association members voted to end three decades of preserving World War II history and remembering their contributions to the war effort with a major gift to the Freedom Museum, USA, located in Pampa at 600 N. Hobart.

Bray cited declining membership due to deaths and failing health as the primary reasons for the organization to end.

"When we met last year, James Baird (PAAF treasurer) moved that it be the last year for the reunion. A vote was taken and approved," Bray explained.

When some the members protested dissolving the PAAF, it was decided to give every member the opportunity to vote whether or not to keep it going.

On May 25, 240 letters were mailed to all the members with a proxy vote statement from Field's office, she said, adding that the final vote was held at the Aug. 7 meeting with the approximately 125 responses to the May 25 letter.

On Aug. 7, PAAF officers met and counted mailed-in votes from the organization's membership, said Thelma Bray, PAAF secretary. Members voted 101 to 19 to dissolve the association and to give the funds remaining in it's account to the Freedom Museum for a structure to house the museum's historic B-25B bomber.

"The funds are approximately $18,338," Bray said.

Ken Fields, attorney for the PAAF is completing the paper work for the transfer of the money, she said.

east of Pampa. Pilots and aircraft mechanics received advanced training at the base, which flourished until it closed on Sept. 30, 1945.

Remains of the control towers can still be seen at the old base that later became a dairy. Some roads and runways and vestiges of buildings remain as silent reminders of the once-bustling military base.

In 1972, persons who were stationed at or worked on the base began meeting each year for an annual reunion each August. Through the years, the PAAF sponsored major air shows and brought in military dignitaries to take part in the event.

The reunion association, along with Pampa Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1657, established the Freedom Museum USA, a unique military museum filled with artifacts and memorabilia including a B-25B bomber.

The B-25 is of special significance to the reunion group. It was used in Russian official: Flight recorders from plane crashes yield little info; terrorism top theory

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Russian official said Thursday that flight recorders failed to provide reliable information about what brought down two jetliners just minutes apart, but for the first time a government leader conceded that terrorism was considered the leading possibility.

A day after officials spoke cautiously about terrorism and stressed that other causes were being considered, presidential envoy Vladimir Yakovlev said that despite the lack of data, the main theory about the catastrophe "all the same remains terrorism," the IAR-Tass news agency said.

The apparent failure of the recorders to provide significant information was sure to fuel what appeared to be rising suspicion among Russians over the crashes that killed 89 people, a view embodied by a headline in the Nezavisimaya Gazeta proclaiming "Russia now has a Sept. 11."

"There are too many coincidences," said a Moscow pensioner, Ruven Suryaninov. Physician Natalia Kozhelupova said, "It's too suspicious."

Others found their suspicions mixed with perplexity. "I never trust what the authorities are saying, but in this case I don't know," said Yevgeny Skepner, a computer programmer.

ism in the crashes were bolstered by the fact they came just five days before a Kremlin-called election in warring Chechnya, whose separatist rebels have been blamed in a series of suicide bombings and other attacks in recent years. Officials previously expressed concern that militants might try to carry out attacks ahead of Sunday's vote.

Officials said Wednesday that while terrorism was a possibility, other factors such as bad jet fuel or human error also were being investigated.

Robert D. "Bob" Price, 76, of Pampa, died Tuesday, Aug. 24, 2004, in Pampa.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Barry Owens, associate pastor, and Dr. Johnny Funderburg, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery with military honors accorded by Altus Air Force Base in Altus, Okla.

served in the Texas Senate and the U.S. House, he was always in the minority. That was tough times in political life.

Chisum remembers approaching Price early in his political career. "He was a Republican and I was a Democrat, back then. I asked him if it would make a difference. He said, no, but he couldn't imagine why anyone would want to live in a glass house."

"Bob had great insight about the political world," Chisum said.

"I remember going with him to a pie supper down in Hedley. He bought the first pie sold. He left and I stayed for the whole thing. He said all they really wanted you for was to sell those pies."

Price and his wife Marty returned permanently in 1981 to Pampa and their ranch after his state senate term ended. They had four children, Carl, Janice, David Wayne and Robert Grant Price. David Wayne died as an infant, and Robert Grant died in 1987.

"Bob was the kind of fellow who always wanted to do what was right. He had integrity and character and was honest," Arrington said.

Chisum said Price's ranch is one of the few that remaining that is still owned by the family that settled the area. It was at this ranch, north of Pampa, that Price hosted a barbecue for Republican presidential nominee, Ronald Reagan. Chisum said the pit dug for the barbecue is still there.

"He lived a good life, at least a colorful one," he said of Price. "I used to talk to him about his travels. He went to China, all over the world. He went to places I wouldn't dream of going to. He was an interesting guy."

Though much of his adult life was spent at Austin, Washington, D.C., or around the world, Price's ranch remained his refuge.

"He loved to hunt and fish and sit around the campfire," Chisum said, adding, "We'll miss him. We sure will."

Investigations find no evidence that Rumsfeld condoned abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Release of two in-depth investigative reports this week on the Abu Ghraib prison scandal appears to have put to rest suspicions that Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld ordered or encouraged the use of abusive tactics against Iraqi detainees.

Rumsfeld and other defense leaders are faulted for lapses in oversight of the detention and interrogation system in Iraq, but unless the House or Senate launch new efforts to undermine Rumsfeld it seems the scandal will not force him from office, as appeared possible last spring.

Some senior military officers, however, may be in jeopardy. Disciplinary action has been recommended for a few commanders — none above the rank of colonel — and the three-star general who was in charge of the U.S. military in Iraq at the time, Ricardo Sanchez, is cited in both new reports for leadership failures that might stop him from getting promoted to a fourth star.

Taken together, the two reports — one by an independent panel of defense experts and one by a four-star Army general — provide what amounts to the Pentagon's best answer to the central question that arose when photos of soldiers abusing Iraqi prisoners shocked the world last April.

The question was: How could this have happened in a military that Rumsfeld and others call the best in the world?

The short answer is that a relatively small number of deviant soldiers (about three dozen) committed sadistic acts, knowingly violating Army ethics and common standards of decency. And some of their leaders were derelict in failing to provide supervision and support.

"We learned there were leaders who knew about this misconduct, knew better, and did nothing," said Gen. Paul Kern, who oversaw an Army investigation of the 205th Military Intelligence Brigade, which ran the interrogation operation at the Abu Ghraib facility near Baghdad. His report was released Wednesday.

Of those who committed the abuse, Kern said some simply chose to break the law with behavior he said ranged from inhumane — like exposing naked prisoners to extreme cold — to sadistic, like using guard dogs to frighten two-

Iraqi adolescents into involuntarily fouling themselves.

A part of the broader answer is that the Army was not fully prepared for the instability and insurgency that took hold after the fall of Baghdad. It didn't have enough people available to properly run the prison and interrogation system; many were not well trained for that duty, and those at Abu Ghraib were ill-equipped to deal with insurgent attacks on the prison.

Some in Congress had suggested that Rumsfeld indirectly encouraged excesses in the interrogation of prisoners in Iraq, but neither the Army nor the independent investigation found any evidence of this.

The independent panel, headed by former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, did conclude that Rumsfeld should have made fuller use of his legal staff in developing an interrogation policy for Iraq before the war began. More broadly, it said the Pentagon leaders failed to adjust quickly to an unanticipated Iraqi insurgency that began in the summer of 2003, putting great strain on the people and resources devoted to running the prisigated and they hoped the planes' data recorders would yield clues.

Yakovlev, the presidential envoy for southern Russia, where one of the jetliners crashed, told First Channel television that the recorders "turned off immediately ... this is probably the main affirmation that something happened very fast."

He said the recorders "had gone out of service already before the fall of the airliners," ITAR-Tass said.

Analysts were divided over whether the government has been trying to play down the possibility of terrorism.

Pavel Felgenhauer, an independent military analyst who is often critical of Russian authorities, said the government would have nothing to gain in a cover-up.

"From all viewpoints it would be better for the authorities to call it a terrorist act ... because otherwise it means that things are really bad here, that we have bad planes that crash to the ground one after another," he said.

Oleg Panteleyev, an independent aviation expert, speculated the authorities were trying to avoid another form of embarrassment. "For the special services, to miss such a major terrorist act would be to acknowledge their impotence," he said.

Actress willing to grow old without surgery

I try not to mention anything "Hollywood" in my columns. It is my belief celebrities get way too much attention, and while I may admire the art, I seldom admire the artist.

That said, I have always enjoyed movies starring Jamie Lee Curtis. I don't know much about her personally, but I like most of the roles she has taken on.

I find I like her even better after reading an article, "Curtis Keeps it Natural," at the web site of Warner Brothers "Extra" TV.

The reason I was drawn to this particular article in the first place was its somewhat deprecating attitude towards Curtis.

The author — who is not known to me since I could find no by-line with the story — took subtle digs at the actress for expressing her dissatisfaction with the film-world.

In the article, Curtis expresses her discouragement with the entertainment industry's preoccupation with female perfection, for its disdainful intolerance of women who show their age on screen.

It is, after all, okay to be a leading man with gray hair and wrinkles — witness Clint Eastwood, Harrison Ford, Robert Redford, Sean Connery, etc., but how many leading women, with the possible exception of Diane Keaton, can get away with looking so young?

The article said Curtis complains of, "The tummy tucks and the face tucks and things, and looking good and Victoria's Secret and bras and MTV and gyrating. I would throw the TV and the (Internet out the window if I had it in my house right now."

Furthermore, the author says Curtis "lash(ed) out against what she calls 'Hollywood's plastic surgery epidemic.'"

Well, how dare Jamie Lee.

While the tone of the story may have been what initially drew my eye, the quotes from Curtis kept me reading past the first and third paragraphs.

In the "Extra" interview, Curtis candidly admitted that she herself had undergone some plastic surgery — just how much or exactly what type of procedures was not clear. Perhaps she refused to say. I don't know. What she did manage to convey was that such procedures are sometimes risky, and that she finds the need for them objectionable.

Well, hooray for Jamie Lee.

"Jamie Lee admits," the article said, "to having gone under the knife herself, and in 2000, she told us about raising her own daughter in a place and time where beauty means everything."

Curtis, who is 45, said in the interview that she may soon be calling her movie career quits as she does not want to watch herself age on celluloid.

What impressed me most about Curtis is that, according to the article, she posed for the cover of "More" magazine sans-makeup.

At least this actress displays some backbone and the integrity to stand behind her convictions — a scarce commodity in the film-world.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Aug. 26, the 239th day of 2004. There are 127 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 26, 1920, the 19th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing American women the right to vote, was declared in effect.

On this date:

In 55 B.C., Roman forces under Julius Caesar invaded Britain.

In 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa began erupting with increasingly large explosions.

In 1939, the first televised major league baseball games were shown on experimental station W2XBS — a double-header between the Cincinnati Reds and the Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field. The Reds won the first game, 5-2, the Dodgers the second, 6-1.

In 1957, the Soviet Union announced it had successfully tested an intercontinental ballistic missile.

In 1961, the official International Hockey Hall of Fame opened in Toronto.

In 1964, 40 years ago, President Lyndon B. Johnson was nominated for a term of office in his own right at the Democratic national convention in Atlantic City, N.J.

In 1972, the summer Olympics games opened in Munich, West Germany.

In 1974, Charles

'Nothing has really happened until it has been recorded.'

English author; critic

Lindbergh — the first man to fly solo, non-stop across the Atlantic — died at his home in Hawaii at age 72.

In 1978, Cardinal Albino Luciani of Venice was elected the 264th Pope of the Roman Catholic Church following the death of Paul VI. The new pontiff took the name Pope John Paul I.

In 1986, in the so-called "preppie murder" case, 18-year-old Jennifer Levin was found strangled in New York's Central Park; Robert Chambers later pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Ten years ago: Congressional leaders and White House officials all but conceded that a health reform bill was dead for the year.

Five years ago: Attorney General Janet Reno pledged that a new investigation of the 1993 Waco, Texas, siege would "get to the bottom" of how the FBI used potentially flammable tear gas grenades against her wishes and then took six years to admit it.

One year ago: In the face of criticism, President Bush defended his handling of the war and reconstruction of Iraq, telling an American Legion conference in St. Louis the fight was essential to the U.S. campaign against terrorism.

Appeasing bullies never works

President Bush's foreign-policy critics at home and abroad share characteristics and visions that have previously led to worldwide chaos and untold loss of lives. These people believe that negotiation, appeasement and caving in to the demands of vicious totalitarian leaders can produce good-faith behavior. Their vision not only has a long record of failure but devastating consequences.

During the late 1930s, France and Britain hoped that allowing Adolf Hitler to annex Sudetenland from Czechoslovakia would satisfy his territorial ambitions. This was after a long string of German violations of the terms of the Versailles Treaty ending World War I. Appeasement didn't work. It was seen as weakness, and it simply emboldened Hitler.

At the Yalta Conference, near the end of World War II, Winston Churchill and Franklin Roosevelt thought they could appease Josef Stalin by giving away Eastern Europe and making other concessions that ultimately marked the beginning of the nearly half-century Cold War and Soviet/China expansionism. War-weary Westerners hoped that brutal tyrants would act in good faith. Failing to stand up to Stalin resulted in unspeakable atrocities, enslavement and human suffering.

Quite interestingly, Western leftist appeasers exempted communist leaders from the harsh criticism directed toward Hitler, even though communist crimes made Hitler's slaughter of 21 million appear almost amateurish. According to Professor R.J. Rummel's research in "Death by Government," from 1917 until its collapse, the Soviet Union murdered or caused the death of 61 million people, mostly its own citizens. Since 1949, communist China's Mao Zedong regime was responsible for the death of 35 million of its own citizens.

History never exactly repeats itself, but the vision of earlier appeasers was part of the West's vision of how to deal with Saddam Hussein. After devastating defeat in the first Gulf War,

Alternative investments too risky

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on pension fund problems:

During the prolonged stock market boom of the 1990s, public pension funds were riding high, and spectacular annual double-digit returns on investments became commonplace.

Some funds merrily boosted retirement benefits and jacked up their projected future rates of return, which provided statistical justification for the benefit increases. The party ended in 2000, when the stock market began an extended nosedive accentuated by a stunning collapse in high-tech stocks.

Pension funds' rates of return plunged from the stratosphere into the toilet. As a result, some public pension funds now are seriously underfunded. Their assets have shrunk as their long-term obligations have risen, raising doubts about whether they will be able to pay retirees' full benefits in coming decades.

Employees paying into these funds eventually could be forced to increase their contributions to compensate for funding shortfalls. Local, county and state governments also might feel obligated to increase the tax dollars they kick into the funds, with taxpayers footing the bill.

Managers of underfunded public pension plans — including the Teacher Retirement System of Texas and the Fort Worth Employees Retirement Fund — naturally are feeling pressure to achieve higher rates of return to shrink their plans' funding gaps.

Increasingly, some managers are investing in largely unregulated private equity funds, hedge funds and venture capital funds that offer the potential for higher returns. But these "alternative investments" also may pose considerably greater risk and entail higher research costs and investment fees, the Star-Telegram reported in articles published Aug. 15 and 16.

These investments — often highly complex — are tailored toward making money in startup companies, rejuvenating and reselling private businesses or doing

Iraq agreed to coalition peace terms. After documents were signed, every effort was made by the Iraqis to frustrate implementation of the terms, particularly U.N. weapons inspections.

Western appeasers, most notably Europeans, were quite willing to respond to Saddam Hussein's violation of peace terms in a fashion similar to their earlier counterparts' response to Hitler's violation of the peace terms of the Versailles Treaty. Had Britain or France launched a military attack on Germany between 1934 and 1935, when Hitler started his arms buildup in violation of the Versailles Treaty and before he fully developed his military capability, he would have been defeated and at least 50 million lives would have been spared.

What deters terrorists? We try to thwart them or kill them. What deters nations that might harbor or assist terrorist? We show them the kind of destruction we're prepared to rain down upon them. Whether we ultimately find nuclear, chemical or biological weapons in Iraq is one thing, but one clear message has been sent as a result of our actions in Iraq and Afghanistan. The world now knows, where it didn't know in the past, that we have the will to destroy a nation that supports terrorism. One measure of the benefit of that message is that Libya's Mohammed Qaddafi has decided to forgo his weapons program and Iran and North Korea might reconsider their agenda.

Some appeasers would like us to cut and run in the wake of terrorist threats just as Spain and the Philippines did.

'The world now knows ... that we have the will to destroy a nation that supports terrorism.'

Others, especially our increasingly anti-Semitic European allies, would like us to be more "even-handed" in the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. Even-handed might be translated as abandoning Israel. Such a move wouldn't bring any better results than when British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain sold the Czechoslovakians down the river to Hitler.

There's no evidence that today's fanatical terrorists and their nation-state sympathizers have any taste for compromise and negotiation. They want Western submission, and they just might get that with presidential candidate John Kerry's promise that if elected he will wage "more sensitive war on terror."

complicated stock market trades that often are off-limits to mutual funds. Alternative investments tend to be far less regulated, less open to public scrutiny and more difficult for boards overseeing pension funds to analyze and understand.

The Teacher Retirement System, the state's largest public pension plan, is committing more than $3.3 billion to these generally higher-risk investments in an attempt to elevate its returns and emerge from its underfunded financial hole.

As it stands now, TRS isn't projected to have enough money to pay promised benefits to the 610,000-plus active members who may retire in the next 30 years, the Star-Telegram reported. Unless it can close a funding gap of at least $3.2 billion, the burden could fall on teachers and taxpayers to bail out the program. Some teachers and pension experts are concerned that the higher-risk investments could backfire.

Alternative investments tend to be much less regulated, less open to public scrutiny and enveloped in secrecy. TRS has declined to release details of its alternative investment portfolio.

It will take years for many underfunded plans to dig themselves out of the hole they have created by making their retirement benefits too rich and being overly optimistic in projecting returns on investment. Some fund managers threw caution to the winds during the heady days of the 1990s stock market boom. They would be very foolish to do so again.

Citigroup acquiring First American Bank

NEW YORK (AP) — Citigroup Inc., which long has sought to expand its retail banking operations to Texas, said Tuesday it is acquiring the First American Bank of Bryan, Texas.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed. It is expected to close in the first quarter of 2005, pending regulatory approvals.

First American Bank has two branches in Pampa, at 221 N. Gray and 2500 Perryton Parkway. Five other Texas Panhandle branches are in Amarillo and Hereford.

Citi described First American as "one of the largest independent financial institutions in Texas." First American, with assets of $3.5 billion, has more than 100 branches with some 120,000 customers in Texas.

"Texas is a highly attractive market, and expanding Citigroup's Citibank retail distribution franchise in the United States, especially in important geographies such as this, is a key element of our strategy," Citigroup president and chief operating officer Robert B. Willumstad said.

He added: "To accomplish our goals, we intend to drive the growth of the retail banking operation in Texas."

Citigroup already has major consumer and commercial finance operations in Texas but no retail banking operations, Citi officials said.

Donald A. Adam, First American's chairman and chief executive, said he was "very pleased that Citigroup has chosen First American Bank as its entry into Texas banking. ... Our team of professionals looks forward to working with Citigroup."

Citi shares rose 10 cents to close at $45.92 Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The announcement said Citi plans to retain all of First American's branches and sales locations, along with most of its entire staff.

Following the acquisition, First American branch locations will be converted to Citibank financial centers, it said.

Marjorie Magner, chairman and chief executive officer of Citi's global consumer group, said Citi planned to change First American from a state-chartered savings bank to a nationally chartered bank.

Texas, she said, "is one of the markets we identified and talked about for several years" as an opportunity for growth because of its large population and good business climate. Another, where Citi does not have significant presence, is Florida, she added.

Ajay Banga, executive vice president of the global consumer group, said the Texas acquisition would give Citi an opportunity to expand services to the Hispanic community.

Citi's ownership of Mexico-based Banamex, he noted, would facilitate money transfers for individuals as well as cross-border business transactions.

Earlier this month, Fifth Third Bancorp announced it was buying First National Bankshares of Florida Inc. for almost $1.6 billion.

THE PAMPA NEWS COMICS

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "Living Like a Hermit in California" complained about her husband's unusual collecting behavior. "He owns 24 cars," she wrote. "None of them run; they just sit and rot. He buys old airplanes although he doesn't know how to fly and they, too, sit rusting away. He also collects cardboard boxes and anything in bulk." You suggested she contact a lawyer and get her husband a psychiatric evaluation.

His hoarding sounds like obsessive-compulsive disorder to me. I have depression and, during my worst times, I have voraciously collected metal washers. I found it soothing to have something to concentrate on besides my problems. The quality of my collection was a substitute for real accomplishment.

The fact that "Living's" husband is also withdrawn leads me to suspect that he has depression, OCD or a similar psychiatric problem. I got help for mine, and I feel much better. Her husband might never be normal, but a good place to start would be sympathy, patience and a caring doctor. OHIO HOARDER

DEAR OHIO: I advised "Living Like a Hermit in California" to consult a lawyer because she said her husband had moved them out of a house into a trailer and had spent all their assets on his "hobby." I agree that he may be mentally ill. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Living Like a Hermit" had a familiar ring. My neighbor exhibited similar behavior and was diagnosed with manic depression. When she was up, she collected; when she was down she withdrew from the world. Roger may be more than "eccentric"; he may suffer from a mental illness.

BEEN THERE IN TAMPA, FLA.

DEAR BEEN THERE: That may be true, but I am not qualified to diagnose him.

DEAR ABBY: Tell that woman to get off her duff, learn more about her husband's collection and then get on eBay! There are people rebuilding old cars who have to order custom parts when none are available. And in California, the movie business is always looking for props.

One studio rented my former father-in-law's car while shooting a movie about the Kennedy assassination in Dallas. They asked for permission to paint the car black. He said, "Sure, as long as you paint it white again before you return it." And they did!

NANCY IN HOUSTON

DEAR NANCY: I love your idea about turning her husband's "compulsion" into an income stream. They could use the money.

DEAR ABBY: "Living's" husband appears to have OCD. One of the manifestations of OCD can be saving things for the sake of saving them. And the tendency to avoid talking may possibly be a symptom of an autism spectrum disorder. These two disorders can coexist. I should know, as they run in our family.

There are therapies and medications that can help him. Please urge "Living" to educate herself about these disorders and try to get her husband evaluated.

NANETTE IN HAWTHORNE, N.J.

DEAR NANETTE: Thank you for suggesting it. An excellent place to start would be NAMI, the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, a grassroots, self-help organization that focuses on education, advocacy, research and support for people with mental illness and their families. Its Web site is: www.nami.org.

AN ODE TO COACHES

Coaching takes patience, skill and antacids

As stadiums across the Panhandle prepare to come to life with the sounds of high school football, I thought I would let you hear from a group that usually takes a back seat at this time of year. A silent but necessary part of the game without whom practices, scrimmages or the game, just wouldn't be the same.

The coach's wives. I received the following a couple weeks ago from Pampa High School Head Coach, Heath Parker's wife; Christy. I've read it a number of times. I've debated when, where, even how to use it.

And the more I read it, the more I began to think it simply needs to stand alone. If for no other reason than to offer an ode and insight to the coaches, assistant coaches and others who not only coach these kids, but also serve as counselors and con-fidants. Able to skillfully keep egos in check while honing their player's skill and potential.

And oh, by the way, deal with parents.

Any coach, at any level, in any sport, must be able to walk this tightrope and never let them see you sweat while doing so.

The Top Ten Things We Love About Our Coaches

10. The way he holds his head up after a loss, and still compliments the players on a job well done.

9. The way he hugs me after a great victory, or buries his head in my shoulder after an agonizing loss.

8. The way he winks at me from the field.

7. The secret we hold together, knowing how much we both sacrifice for the love of football and the chance for him to coach.

6. The way he brings the players over and talks with them, not just as players but as young men.

5. To watch him get excited when he has found a new drill, play or figured out a motivational video to show his players.

4. The way he takes the blame for the losses, knowing in my heart how hard he worked, but he has no control when someone fumbles or misses a pass.

3. His intensity and passion, seeing the joy he gets out of watching boys become young men. Watching him coach my son.

2. When he puts everything aside and takes me somewhere I want to go, and in the end I tell him we should get home because I know in my heart he wants to watch the game film one more time.

1. At the end of the season, when he thanks me for all I have done to get him through the season. I know he can't do it alone and I can tell it in his eyes that he needs me.

Though written by one coach's wife, I wonder how many others it applies to?

Park's first start since May ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Chan Ho Park will come off the disabled list Thursday and make his first start for the Texas Rangers since May 19.

Park (2-4, 5.80 ERA), who has spent more time hurt than pitching since signing a $65 million, five-year contract with the Rangers before the 2002 season, has been on the disabled list with a strained lower back. The right-hander will start the finale of a four-game series against AL Central-leading Minnesota.

"I feel great. I haven't really been off. I've been pitching in minor league games," Park said this week. "I want to pitch hard and to win, just relax and pitch like it's any other game. My back is pretty good."

Texas is expected to put right-hander Mickey Callaway, who has an injured right shoulder, on the disabled list Thursday to make room on the roster for Park.

In 10 rehab starts in the minors, Park was 1-5 with a 4.01 ERA. His last was Friday, when he gave up four runs on six hits over 6 1-3 innings for Triple-A Oklahoma against Memphis.

"We're going by what he tells us," manager Buck Showalter said. "He feels good and is ready to go. He showed us that in his last outing."

LLWS; Texas 8, North Carolina 2

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Texas is two steps away from a world championship.

Chance Murski hit a grand slam and Randal Grichuk hit a three-run homer to lead Richmond, Texas, to the United States final with an 8-2 win over Morganton, N.C., on Wednesday night at the Little League World Series.

Texas plays the winner of the Thousand Oaks, Calif., vs. Preston, Md., game on Saturday for the championship. The world championship is Sunday.

"I'm just about as excited as you can get. I'm just emotionally drained," Texas manager Jim Michalek said.

Vice President Dick Cheney watched the game from a hill beyond the outfield wall, and "Born in the USA" blared from the speakers as Texas played in its second straight semifinal.

In the second inning, Tyler Ford doubled, and Matt Daniels and Dustin Moehlig hit consecutive singles to load the bases for Murski. Murski, hitting only .167 in the series, crushed one to left field off Dykora Spiess (0-1) for a 4-0 lead.

"I hung in there and got that pitch," said Murski, who went 1-for-3. "I feel pretty good, but the rest of the at-bats I didn't do that well."

Grichuk, back for his second consecutive Little League World Series, added a three-run homer in the fourth to make it 7-0. It was his fourth homer of the series and sixth in two years. Grichuk is one shy of tying the career home run record held by two players, including Pittsburgh Pirates manager Lloyd McClendon in 1971.

Edwards comes from back to win at Bristol

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Carl Edwards came from the back of the field to edge Shane Hmiel in a NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series O'Reilly 200 race at Bristol Motor Speedway.

After qualifying fifth, Edwards' crew elected to make unapproved pre-race repairs to his Ford after a spin on his second lap of qualifying. That decision pushed him to the rear, but he methodically worked his way to the front, taking the lead on the 180th lap and holding on for his third win of the season.

The race was extended six extra laps after the eighth caution was issued. Edwards averaged just 74.496 mph while being bogged down by 50 laps under yellow.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two Nextel Cup crew chiefs were fined a total of $10,000 for violations discovered by NASCAR inspectors on Friday during the first inspection for Sunday's race at Michigan International Speedway.

Pat Tryson, crew chief for Mark Martin, and Marc Reno, who works with Bobby Hamilton Jr., were fined $5,000 apiece for using unapproved fuel system modifications.

Astros should play Phillies more often

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros sure wish they'd play this way against everyone else.

Jeff Kent hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the eighth inning, and the Astros beat Philadelphia 7-4 Wednesday to sweep the season series from the Phillies for the first time.

"Hopefully, we can play everybody the way we've played the Phillies," Houston's Craig Biggio said. "If you're going to win a lot of games, this is the way you've got to do it."

Kent also connected in the second inning, and Carlos Beltran and Morgan Ensberg each homered. Houston went 6-0 against the Phillies and won for the eighth time in 10 games overall. The Astros' only other season sweep was against Montreal in 2001.

Kent's big swing in the eighth ensured another frustrating flight home for the Phillies. Manager Larry Bowa plopped down into his chair after the game, the dejected look on his face betraying the optimism in his voice.
