I want everyone to know that there are always people wanting to take your money. Many times the theft is disguised by the lure of getting a lot of money for little or no effort. The targets by the thieves always seem to be our senior citizens.

Lt. Courtney

Take a tip from me, Lt. Fred Courtney, also a senior citizen, to not allow yourself to succumb to "the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow" scam by unscrupulous people. If it sounds to good to be true or if someone wants you to put up some money or give them your bank account number, then it is probably a con artist after your money.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, April 6, the 96th day of 2005. There are 269 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 6, 1909, explorers Robert E. Peary and Matthew A. Henson became the first men to reach the North Pole. (The claim, disputed by skeptics, was upheld in 1989 by the Navigation Foundation.)

On this date:

In 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was organized by Joseph Smith in Fayette, N.Y.

In 1862, the Civil War Battle of Shiloh began in Tennessee.

In 1896, the first modern Olympic games formally opened in Athens, Greece.

In 1917, Congress approved a declaration of war against Germany.

In 1945, during World War II, the Japanese warship "Yamato" and nine other vessels sailed on a suicide mission to attack the U.S. fleet off Okinawa; the fleet was intercepted the next day.

In 1965, the United States launched the "Early Bird" communications satellite.

In 1971, Russian-born composer Igor Stravinsky died in New York City.

In 1985, William J. Schroeder became the first artificial heart recipient to be discharged from the hospital as he moved into an apartment in Louisville, Ky.

In 1992, science-fiction author Isaac Asimov died in New York at age 72.

Our readers write General wasn't American

I enjoy the personal columns from your staff. Young news intern Ben Briscoe should have a good career in journalism before him. However, his reference to the Pulitzer Prize photo from Eddie Adams depicting "the execution of a Viet Cong citizen by an American general" is incorrect.

The victim was a Viet Cong (the name given to the communist faction fighting in Viet Nam) who might or might not have been a Vietnamese - citizen. The executioner was NOT an American. He was a South Vietnamese General named Nguyen Ngoc Loan, a general in the South Vietnamese army fighting the "insurgent" Viet Cong. Loan later immigrated to the U.S. at the conclusion of the war.

After winning the Pulitzer prize, photographer Edward T. Adams said Loan should have been recognized as a hero for his

This letter is not a defense of Loan or a criticism of Ben. I only write in correction to his error and to give more detail to the story.

Wrong impression can be lasting

I would like to take this opportunity to apologize to my readers. In my column, which appeared in last Thursday's paper, I accidentally stated the wrong fact.

Eddie Adam's Pulitzer Prize winning photo was not a picture of the execution of a Viet Cong citizen by an American general. The executioner was not of United States breeding. He was a South Vietnamese general named Nguyen Ngoc Loan.

I am deeply sorry for my mistake. I am especially sorry if I accidentally offended anyone with this error. I had generally believed that it was an American general until it was so gracefully pointed out to me by Larry Heard (see "Our Readers Write" on this page).

I was stunned to discover that Heard was absolutely correct. I immediately pulled out my old notebook of filed papers from my World Geography Class that I took my freshman year of high school. It was in this class where I first saw Adam's ground breaking work.

I learned at a Rotary Youth Leadership Camp this summer that it can take up to three hours to reverse the opinion that someone forms about you within the first 10 seconds of meeting.

First impressions in our society hold far too much importance. From the old adage that "you can't judge a book by its cover," to the idea of believing the wrong fact because it was the first thing you learned, society's first thoughts about a person, a place or even a photograph tend to be more important than new items learned about this people and items after the initial formation of opinion.

As I said, I am deeply sorry for any offense I might have caused, but more than that, I am sorry that for the

Medicaid waiver not abortion issue

Preventive health care saves lives and money.

But attempts to expand access to preventive health services for poor women in Texas are being blocked by those who fear that doing so will somehow provide funding for abortions.

That is just not true. Senate Bill 747 by state Sen. John Carona, R-Dallas, allows for a Medicaid waiver that would expand eligibility for women in Texas seeking pap smears for cervical cancer and screenings for breast cancer, sexually transmitted diseases, hypertension, cholesterol and tuberculosis. Women on Medicaid currently are ineligible for the screenings if they earn more than $3,300 a year. The waiver would expand eligibility to women whose families make up to $34,000.

By expanding the eligibility, the state stands to recover $9 from the federal government for each $1 it 21 states. spends on the program. It would

This is the second attempt by the Legislature to approve the Medicaid waiver. Two years ago it was included in the ominous Medicaid bill, which was

Efforts to secure a Medicaid waiver should not be misconstrued as an abortion-funding issue. This is about expanding preventive medical services to lowincome women who lack health insurance.

The reality is that 25 percent of Texans do not have health insurance. It is estimated that 500,000 women would take advantage of the services if the waiver exist-

Hundreds mourn Terri Schiavo at funeral Mass

GULFPORT, Fla. (AP) -Speaking before hundreds of mourners at a funeral Mass planned by her parents, Terri Schiavo's sister said the severely brain damaged woman showed the world perseverance and determina-

Suzanne Vitadamo, whose family fought to keep Schiavo's husband from removing her feeding tube so she could die, said Schiavo's smile brought them great joy and she missed her.

"You didn't want to give up but God called you home, and he loves you more than " we do," Vitadamo said Tuesday.

Schiavo's parents, Bob and Mary Schindler, sat in the front row of Most Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church, joined by their two other grown children. Outside, mourners sat in folding chairs or stood as the service was relayed on loudspeakers. At least 800 people attended.

In the homily, the Rev. Frank Pavone, national director of the anti-abortion group Priests For Life, urged mourners to keep striving for what the late Pope John Paul II called a "culture of life."

"God calls us to go forth from this place to work together, to preach, to proclaim and witness together so what happened in this tragic case will never happen again," Pavone said to a raucous round of applause.

Michael Schiavo has not said when his memorial service will be held, but he is under a court order to notify the parents of his plans. His attorney, George Felos, said Tuesday night that "there has been no determination as to any further plans" for the ashes.

Inmate found with assistant warden's wife 10 years after escape says he was 'hostage-taker' in this rural community along the Texas-Louisiana line thought something wasn't quite right about Richard and Samantna "Sam" Deahl, who moved in about five years ago to run a few chicken houses.

It turns out they were onto something.

Richard was really Randolph Dial, a convicted killer from Oklahoma who escaped from prison nearly 11 years ago. And Samantha was really Bobbi Parker, the wife of the prison's assistant warden who says she was held captive all along. A tip generated by the TV show "America's Most Wanted" led law enforcement to the mobile home where Dial was arrested Monday, said FBI agent Salvador Hernandez. Parker was found a short time later working at a chicken farm. She told

"I was a hostage-taker and will probably live to regret it," said Dial, 60. "But now I don't. Doing a life sentence, at my age, I wouldn't trade it for the past 10 1/2 years."

Dial waived extradition and was returned to Oklahoma. He arrived at the Oklahoma State Penitentiary in McAlester early Wednesday and was placed in the prison's top-security department corrections spokesman Jerry Massie said.

On Tuesday, Parker, 42, was reunited with her husband as authorities tried to piece together details of the strange case. "It looked like a husband and wife who hadn't seen each other in 11 years," Texas Ranger Tom Davis said of the emotional reunion.

Tanya Joy Parker, the sister of Randy Parker, said the children did not make the trip to Texas. "They are elated, but after 10 years you'd be a little stunned," she said.

Sheriff Newton Johnson initially said Bobbi Parker wanted to stay on the chicken farm, but Hernandez said this was a misinterpretation. Hernandez said that while it is unusual for someone to be held against one's will for so long, it is not unprecedented.

"There have been cases of this kind and typically this will result when someone believes family members might be in danger," Hernandez said. The FBI continued to question Bobbi Parker on Tuesday in Texas.

Dear Abb By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this topic addressed in your column. My wife and I tove to eat out. Over the past year, however, we have both been trying to shed some weight and eat more sensibly. A solution that has worked for us is sharing one meal. One meal is often more than enough to satisfy the both of

Our problem: Every time we order one meal for the two of us instead of two meals, the service turns sour. This happens often, even though we tip as though we had bought two meals since the server had to serve two people. It is upsetting because we have found that sharing a meal allows us to continue eating out without going off our diets.

The attitude we encounter is almost always rude and condescending. I'd be interested in your opinion. -- DINER IN THE MPDWEST

DEAR DINER: Look at it from the server's point of view. Even though you tip for two, the server doesn't know that until the end of the meal -- so it may not be surprising that you're noticing a chill.

On the other hand, it's not unusual for diners to split a meal, and they do it for a variety of reasons. Since restaurants are supposed to offer hospitality as well as food, when you encounter problems with a server, you should discuss it with the manager (or try another restaurant).

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in three months. It is my fiance "John's" second marriage and my third. I would like to invite the president of the company John works for, and also his direct boss, the regional manager. I told John that it is only common courtesy, and there might be hurt feelings if they are not invit-

John said he prefers to keep his business life separate from his personal life. He asked me to respect his wishes, but I don't want to risk slighting his bosses for fear it will cause him problems later.

It worries me that maybe John is ashamed of me, or that he is afraid he won't be able to relax with them at our wedding, but he says that's not why he prefers we not invite them. I know it's not the cost, Abby; there's more than enough money to include guests, so that can't be why he asked me not to invite them.

If they don't want to attend, that's fine, but at least they'll have the option. What do you think? -- BRIDE-TO-BE

DEAR B-T-B: Ask your fiance for a list of the guests he wants invited to the wedding -and respect his wishes. He knows his bosses better than you do. If they receive an invitation, they may regard it as a bid for a gift. Don't do it.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I frequently attend concerts, the opera or the theater with another couple. Typically, the two women sit together in the center, with the husbands flanking either side. The result is that the women have an opportunity to chat with each other or with one of the men, but it's not easy for the men to converse.

Is there a proper seating arrangement for a foursome in this situation? Or do only the women get to talk with each other? -- GENERALLY SILENT

DEAR SILENT: If you feel you're missing something because you are seated on the outside, consider switching seats at intermission. However, please be aware that it's the height of rudeness to carry on " a conversation during a concert, an opera, a play or a

Red Sox manager taken to hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston manager Terry Francona was taken to a hospital Wednesday with tightness in his chest, and was expected to miss the Red Sox's afternoon game against the Yankees.

Francona, who turns 46 on April 22, said all morning he was not feeling well, according to general manager Theo Epstein. Francona was taken by ambulance to New York Weill-Cornell Medical Center in Manhattan, where he has relationships with several doctors.

"He was taken to the hospital for precautionary tests," Epstein said. "He had all his faculties about him, he was just going for tests.

Francona took the 8 a.m. team bus to Yankee Stadium and began his routine, even fulfilling media obligations despite not feeling well.

Epstein said the Yankees made all of their staff available to Francona.

Epstein didn't know what type of testing Francona was undergoing, but Red Sox team doctor Thomas Gill was monitoring his condition by phone from Boston, and team trainer Jim Rowe accompanied the manager to the hospital.

Bench coach Brad Mills was to fill in for Francona against New York.

Epstein informed the team about Francona after the second Red Sox bus arrived at the stadium around 10:30 a.m.

"It was scary because you're talking about reallife stuff, you're not talking about wins and losses," Boston first baseman Kevin Millar said.

Epstein spoke to Francona and said he was upbeat.

"He wishes he was at the ballpark," he said.

Francona, who led the Red Sox to their first World Series championship in 86 years in his first season as manager, had experienced chest pains before — a side effect of life-threatening blood clots that developed from a knee operation.

Ten days after having knee surgery in 2002, he was in Seattle interviewing for the Mariners' managing job when he experienced severe chest pains.

Upon his return home, Francona said, doctors discovered a blood clot had gone to his lungs.

He was given blood thinners and the problem was thought to be under control, but complications developed.

He had staph infections in both knees, which required four more operations, he said, and then developed serious hemorrhaging in his leg that ultimately required an additional two operations.

He was sent home after Thanksgiving, but more clotting ensued and he was hospitalized Christmas Eve.

In all, he said, he underwent eight operations to deal with the problem.

On more than one occasion, he said, the situation was life-threatening. Francona played 10 years in the major leagues as a first baseman and outfielder. He had already had 11 knee operations when he went in for the arthroscopic procedure in November Francona also managed the Philadelphia Phillies from 1997-2000.

Garden fans salute Miller in final appearance

NEW YORK (AP) — He had broken their hearts many times, drawn their ire even more. Yet, when all was said and done, the Knicks fans at Madison Square Garden chanted the name of Reggie Miller, saluting the Indiana Pacers player who had been one of the arena's greatest visitors.

"I've had some of my better moments against this team in this building," said Miller, who plans to retire after the season. "A lot of things have been said both ways - me to them and them to me. I really felt the respect and the love from the New Yorkers.

Miller's play in Indiana's 97-79 win over New York on Tuesday night wasn't very reminiscent of some of his best performances in the Garden. He shot just 3-of-15 from the floor and finished with 13 points.

Still, the crowd — including film director Spike Lee — saluted Miller, chanting "Reg-gie, Reg-gie" in the game's final moments.
"The response to Reggie was great," said Stephen Jackson, who celebrated his 27th birthday by leading the Pacers with 33 points. "He's had a lot of big games here in this arena, he's done a lot for basketball in this arena and I think the applause and everything was definitely what he deserved.

When the game ended, Miller raised his hand to acknowledge the crowd, walked across the court and embraced Lee, the die-hard Knicks fans who had watched the game from his usual courtside seat. The fans roared their K220

"A lot of things have been said between Spike and myself, but out of anyone in this building that I have so much respect for it's Spike," Miller

The often contentious relationship between Miller and Lee goes back more than a decade.

In the Eastern Conference finals in 1994, Miller scored 25 of his 39 points in the fourth quarter — trading verbal barbs with Lee along the way lead the Pacers to a 93-86 win.
