Boy's car wash raises $1,210 for victims

LAKE JACKSON, Texas (AP) — A 12-year-old has organized a car wash for evacuees that raised $1,210.

Ash Holt said he wanted to do something for the new students at Rasco Middle School. So he enlisted his older brother to encourage fellow classmates to participate. "People were starting food and money drives and no one was doing a car wash," Holt said. "I told my brother who's on the football team and he got them to come and help."

pray together

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — At shelters in Southeast Texas, volunteers witnessed acts of tolerance and selflessness.

At the Bridge City Baptist church, serving as a shelter, Muslims and Christians came together and prayed.

"We had a family arrive who are Muslim," said Bridge City business owner Barry Murchison, who is acting director of the shelter. "About midnight last Sunday they had come in and we got them settled and a group of us were sitting together visiting, waiting for the storm to hit."

While waiting for the storm, evacuees and volunteers got to know each other, he said.

"I've never had the opportunity to talk with someone who had read the Quran before and knew their religion (Islam) so well," Murchison said. "In turn, we shared our religion with them. We weren't forcing our religion on them, we talked a long time about religions and faiths and compared and contrasted them."

Is New Orleans America's 21st century Atlantis?

Today is the start of the second week after Hurricane Katrina made landfall on the Gulf Coast and caused such horrific devastation for Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

I am grateful for the way Texas responded to the emergency. We have accepted 230,000 evacuees into emergency shelters across the state. In early news coverage of the aftermath of the storm, I saw a Texas Parks and Wildlife truck among early responders working to rescue stranded victims.

There are many stories about what happened when the hurricane hit the coast, what happened afterward, and the latest news concerning the natural disaster.

I do not have the time to keep up with each and every minute detail of the whole story, but it seems to me that there are some major problems associated with local, state and federal responses to Katrina.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency's director, Mike Brown, said in an interview that he was not aware of the 25,000 hurricane survivors in the New Orleans Convention Center until four days later. Meanwhile, those survivors were in dire need of food and water and medical assistance.

How in the world could he not have been aware? It was included in media reports about the hurricane's aftermath from the start. Even I had heard about the situation.

One of the things Brown said caused the problem with immediate federal response to the disaster was a problem with communications equipment and systems. Information wasn't able to get out about the situation, he said.

Well, I first learned about 9/11 through news broadcasts, not through a telephone call. And I didn't need an official telephone call to realize what was happening.

Michael Chertoff of the Department of Homeland Security, in defense of the nation's disaster response, has been quoted as saying, "This was not just a hurricane; it was a hurricane that was followed by a flood."

Isn't a flood something that might be expected in the event of a hurricane, especially in a place like New Orleans, which had levees to hold back the Gulf? Think "storm surge."

State agencies also seemed overwhelmed and under-prepared to cope with the magnitude of the situation. And I haven't heard a peep out of New Orleans' mayor since the hurricane hit the city.

I liked one Louisiana parish's sheriff's reaction. He said we had "helped every other (expletive deleted) country in the world;" why couldn't we help our own people quickly and effectively?

Speaking of other countries, have any of them offered assistance or even condolences?

I also have not yet heard of any organized efforts at "disaster relief" by the entertainment industry. I'm sure we will eventually have "Katrina concerts" and "hurricane aid" shows to raise donations for victim assistance, but it hasn't happened yet, although Jerry Lewis did pledge more than $1 million of the donations collected during the Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon to the cause.

It seems that all our disaster drills and efforts at increased emergency preparedness, which are part of the 9/11 legacy, were not enough to provide adequate response in the face of a real disaster on the Gulf Coast.

Right now, we need to focus on helping the victims. They can't afford to wait for help while the system is fixed.

But later, when the immediate, urgent needs of those victims have been met, this country needs to work on its readiness for such events, before another one happens.

The Gulf Coast area hit by Katrina may be our own 21st century Atlantis. Let's not allow the next disaster, whether natural or man-made, to be our own Armageddon.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 6, the 249th day of 2005. There are 116 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 6, 1901, President McKinley was shot and mortally wounded by anarchist Leon Czolgosz at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y. McKinley died eight days later; he was succeeded by Theodore Roosevelt.

On this date:

In 1837, the Oberlin Collegiate Institute of Ohio went co-educational.

In 1909, American explorer Robert Peary sent word that he had reached the North Pole five months earlier.

In 1939, South Africa declared war on Germany.

In 1941, Jews over age 6 in German-occupied areas were ordered to wear yellow Stars of David.

In 1948, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands was coronated.

In 1952, Canadian television broadcasting began in Montreal.

In 1966, South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was stabbed to death by a deranged page during a parliamentary session in Cape Town.

In 1970, Palestinian guerrillas seized control of three jetliners which were later blown up on the ground in Jordan after the passengers and crews were evacuated.

Challenge Day good for all youngsters

On Aug. 26 of this year, I spent the day with my daughter and approximately 90 other students at a school-sponsored event called "Challenge Day." This day was incredible!

I know the lives of every student and sponsor who attended has been changed forever. This program is designed to teach students how their behavior impacts others and how much more we have in common with others than we realize.

It was amazing to see how the students and sponsors interacted with each other. By the end of the day, it was as if we had known each other all our lives. We were all challenged to stop judging our peers by their skin color, appearance or what they have, and to get to know what was in their heart.

Students were sharing stories of things happening to them and how it affected their lives, which led to students apologizing and stating they never realized how much these behaviors really hurt them. There were many tears and many hugs exchanged at Challenge Day.

I truly believe every student should attend a Challenge Day before they have completed their junior high years. The problem is

A hypothesis worth examining ...

Nationally, the average per gallon price for regular gasoline is $2.50.

Are gasoline prices high? That's not the best way to ask that question. It's akin to asking, "Is Williams tall?" The average height of U.S. women is 5'4", and for men, it's 5'10". Being 6'4", I'd be tall relative to the general U.S. population. But put me on a basketball court, next to the average NBA basketball player, and I wouldn't be tall; I'd be short. So when we ask whether a price is high or low, we have to ask relative to what.

In 1950, a gallon of regular gasoline sold for about 30 cents; today, it's $2.50. Are today's gasoline prices high compared to 1950? Before answering that question, we have to take into account inflation that has occurred since 1950. Using my trusty inflation calculator (www.westegg.com/inflation), what cost 30 cents in 1950 costs $2.33 in 2005. In real terms, that means gasoline prices today are only slightly higher, about 8 percent, than they were in 1950. Up until the recent spike, gasoline prices have been considerably lower than 1950 prices.

Some Americans are demanding that the government do something about gasoline prices. Let's think back to 1979 when the government did do something. The Carter administration instituted price controls.

What did we see? We saw long gasoline lines, and that's if the gas station hadn't run out of gas. It's estimated that Americans used about 150,000 barrels of oil per day idling their cars while waiting in line. In an effort to deal with long lines, the Carter administration introduced the harebrained scheme of odd and even days, whereby a motorist whose license tag started with an odd number could fill up on odd-numbered days, and those with an even number on even-numbered days.

With the recent spike in gas prices, the government has chosen not to pursue stupid policies of the past. As a result, we haven't seen shortages. We haven't seen long lines. We haven't seen gasoline station fights and riots. Why? Because price has been allowed to perform its valuable function — that of equating demand with supply.

Our true supply problem is of our own doing. Large quantities of oil lie below the 20 million acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR). The amount of land proposed for oil drilling is less than 2,000 acres, less than one-half of one percent of ANWR. The U.S. Geological Survey estimates there are about 10 billion barrels of recoverable oil in ANWR. But environmentalists' hold on Congress has

Infrastructure networks vulnerable to attack

Back in pre-computer days, if terrorists wanted to disrupt a power grid, they would have had to destroy generators or power stations or pull down transmission towers or lines.

Today, they can accomplish much the same goal by hacking into the computer network that controls that power grid.

"Networks run everything from water-treatment plants and oil refineries to power grids and transport networks. They constantly read data and adjust, opening a valve here, closing a tank there, often keeping the facility operating 24/7. In the wrong hands, however, such systems could be compromised," The Christian Science Monitor reported.

Unfortunately, hacking into "critical infrastructure" networks is not particularly difficult.

"In March, for instance, hackers gained access to the electronic control systems of the nation's electric power grid," according to The Monitor.

The potential for a cyber-attack on the United States is twofold: Terrorists could hack into the computer network running a petrochemical plant or shipping facility, shutting off the controls that keep it operating safely. The resulting explosion, particularly in a populated area, could replicate the deadly 1947 Texas City blast.

Terrorists could hack into computer networks running power grids, air and ground traffic, and emergency responders to paralyze a major metropolitan area or a larger region, softening it up for the second, deadly prong of the attack.

"People downplay the importance of cybersecurity, claiming that no one will ever die in a cyberattack, but they're wrong. This is a serious threat," Richard Clarke told The Monitor.

He previously served as the Bush administration's terrorism and cybersecurity point man. Paul Kurtz, who also served in the Bush administration before becoming the director of the Cyber Security Industry Alliance, echoed Clarke's concern: "In government, when it came to senior level focus after Sept. 11, 99.9 percent was skewed towards physical protection, and

Israel OKs construction of homes in Ariel settlement

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has authorized construction of 117 homes in one of the West Bank's largest settlements and approved preliminary plans for another 3,000 housing units there, officials said Tuesday.

The decision came despite repeated U.S. appeals that Israel freeze settlement expansion and threatened to raise tensions with the United States just days before Prime Minister Ariel Sharon travels to New York to address the U.N. General Assembly. He is expected to meet with President Bush and other leaders.

The plans also drew swift condemnations from the Palestinians, who claim all the West Bank for part of a future independent state.

Nachman told The Associated Press the Defense Ministry also has approved preliminary plans for a 3,000-home neighborhood in the southern part of his settlement. The project would nearly double the size of Ariel.

The new construction is planned in Ariel, a sprawling settlement of nearly 18,000 people deep inside the West Bank.

Ariel's mayor, Ron Nachman, said the government recently approved construction of the units in the center of town, part of a plan frozen in the mid-1990s by then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. The Defense Ministry and officials in Sharon's office confirmed the project's approval.

Nachman told The Associated Press the Defense Ministry also has approved preliminary plans for a 3,000-home neighborhood in the southern part of his settlement. The project would nearly double the size of Ariel.

Defense Ministry officials confirmed the plan received initial approval, though actual construction would need further authorization. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because of department regulations.

Construction in Jewish settlements is an especially contentious issue in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Palestinians want all settlements dismantled so they can establish an independent state in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and east Jerusalem, lands Israel occupied in the 1967 Mideast war.

"I think we have 3,000 more obstacles to peace and we will have, if this program is carried out, 3,000 reasons to undermine President Bush's efforts for a two-state solution," Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said.

Demand

prevented us from drilling for it. They've also had success in restricting drilling in the Gulf of Mexico and off the shore of California. Another part of our energy problem has to do with refining capacity. Again, because of environmentalists' successful efforts, it's been 30 years since we've built a new oil refinery.

Few people realize that the United States is also a major oil-producing country. After Saudi Arabia, producing 10.4 million barrels a day, then Russia with 9.4 million barrels, the United States with 8.7 million barrels a day is the third-largest producer of oil. But we could produce more. Why aren't we? Producers have a variety of techniques to win monopoly power and higher profits that come with that power. What's a way for OPEC to gain more power? I have a hypothesis, for which I have no evidence, but it ought to be tested. If I were an OPEC big cheese, I'd easily conclude that I could restrict output and charge higher oil prices if somehow U.S. oil drilling were restricted. I'd see U.S. environmental groups as allies, and I would make "charitable" contributions to assist their efforts to reduce U.S. output. Again, I have no evidence, but it's a hypothesis worth examination.

Dutch suspect in Aruba case flies to Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — An 18-year-old Dutch man who had been held by police on the Caribbean island of Aruba in connection with the disappearance of an American tourist arrived in the Netherlands on Tuesday.

Joran van der Sloot and his father arrived at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport, ignored questions from reporters, and quickly departed. The 18-year-old was to attend college in Holland, his mother said.

Van der Sloot, a resident of Aruba, and two Surinamese brothers who were suspects in the disappearance of American teenager Natalee Holloway were released on condition they remain available to police.

Holloway was last seen May 30, on the last day of her high school graduation trip to the Dutch Caribbean island, leaving a bar with van der Sloot and the two brothers, Satish and Deepak Kalpoe.

The three were arrested June 9 on suspicion of involvement in Holloway's disappearance. All denied any connection to the disappearance. Van der Sloot acknowledged spending the evening before with Holloway, but denied any wrongdoing.

The release of all three suspects on Saturday was a serious setback to the prosecution. Police insist the investigation into Holloway's widely publicized disappearance will continue, but legal observers in Aruba say the release indicates the government has no case.

cybersecurity took a back seat."

The Department of Homeland Security has added a new assistant secretary of cyber and telecommunications security post and is creating a national cyberspace response system. In addition, "in November, DHS will launch its first major national exercise - code-named 'Cyberstorm' - to test the government's ability to partner with the private sector in response to a major cyber incident," The Monitor added.

An online search of news articles on "computer hacking" produces a lengthy list, showing how vulnerable computer systems worldwide are to penetration. The culprits sometimes do so just to prove what they can do or to show how vulnerable cybersecurity systems are. Other hackers have more hostile intent.

Computer systems to which online access is available will never be entirely safe. And employees working on computer systems pose a security risk, too. For example, "a former America Online software engineer has been sentenced to a year and three months in prison for stealing 92 million screen names and e-mail addresses and selling them to spammers who sent out up to 7 billion unsolicited e-mails," The Associated Press reported.

Despite the impossibility of completely securing cyberspace, for critical infrastructure or for anything else, Homeland Security needs to pay more attention and devote more resources to this issue than it has yet. Fortunately, it may have gotten the message.

the cost of this program - $3,000 a day - and our school district does not have the funding to offer this more than once a year. This leads to only a small percentage of our youth being able to attend the Challenge Day.

The current goal is for every student to attend a Challenge Day before he or she is a senior at PHS. I believe that is not soon enough. I challenge everyone who has a child or grandchild in Pampa schools to contact Leslie Gershmel at PHS and make a donation to Challenge Day.

I truly believe our schools will be safer and much happier environment for our children and that your child will be forever changed.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: In response to the question of where to place one's handbag in a restaurant, you replied: "If you're carrying a small, dressy evening bag, place it on the table. However, if you're carrying a large handbag, put it on the floor next to your chair or beneath the table so the server won't trip on it."

I keep my smaller purses between my body and/or trusted companion or the wall, and I place larger bags on the floor, making sure my foot is in contact with it at all times. (Usually between my feet.)

I was in a service business for many years, and customers would confide the most outrageous details of their personal lives. Once, a young woman told me she visited large churches when it rained because she could use her umbrella to reach under pews and hook purses. Then she'd slip out before the final prayer.

Women need visual contact with their purses at all times. -- OLDER AND WISER, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

DEAR WISER: It's sad to think that not even a house of God is safe from purse snatching. I received a lot of mail about that letter. Not everyone agreed with my answer to that question, nor do they agree with each other. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Sadly, there are purse snatchers in restaurants, food courts, picnic areas, etc. I have seen women sling their open bag over the back of a chair and -- swoosh goes the handbag or wallet.

Other than an evening clutch on the table, I place my handbag either underneath the table, between my feet where I can feel it at all times, or sling the strap over my knee and let the bag hang or rest on the floor. It may not be the most comfortable option, but I still have my bag when I'm ready to pay my tab. -- VANESSA R., CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: Placing a purse on the table inconveniences the person sitting next to you. If you're at a table for two with no one beside you, it's still a bad idea. Even in upscale restaurants, the purse can be stolen.

You suggested putting the bag on the floor. Floors in public places are filthy! Large handbags should be left at home, but if you have no choice, it should be balanced on your lap, close to your knees. (This can be accomplished by keeping your feet flat on the floor or crossing them at the ankles.) -- V.A.R., JONESBOROUGH, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: Any purse placed under or next to a chair is vulnerable to theft. If a woman puts it on the floor, she should put the strap around the leg of her chair, so if someone tries to take it, the strap will be caught on the leg. Better yet, when she arrives at the restaurant, she should take out her billfold and lock the purse in the trunk of her car. -- DAVID F., KANSAS CITY, MO.

DEAR ABBY: A portion of your answer to that question was correct. Abby, in restaurants in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, a chair is always provided to hold a large purse. Only "ladies of the evening" put their purses on the floor.

Granted, not everyone is going to be going to Rio to a restaurant, but it is "food for thought" here in the States. -- JAN. R., BEVERLY HILLS, FLA.

Football

The Pampa Junior High football teams kick-off the 2005 season this afternoon against Westover Park. The 8th grade A and B teams will host the Warriors starting at 5 p.m. The 7th grade A and B teams will travel to Canyon.

Volleyball

Both the varsity and junior varsity squads will be in action this afternoon when the Lady Harvesters make yet another road trip, this time to Borger. Those games are scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

JV coach Bobbi Gill says despite her team's 6-11 record, it is constantly improving. "We are young in some important spots, but those girls are stepping up and handling the differences very well," says Gill. "We are excited about the game tonight and hope to come away with a win."

Lovins claims 68th annual Hart Warren Top of Texas Invitational tournament

Travis Lovins won the 68th annual Hart Warren Top of Texas Invitational at Pampa Country Club over the weekend. Lovins (72,65) finished two shots ahead of Jimmy Jameson and Rode McElreath. Ryan Ellis finished fourth with a final round of 67.

Tim Whipkey needed two extra holes before defeating Merlin Rose and Bob Hitt en route to the Presidents Flight trophy. Whipkey's birdie on the second playoff hole paved the way to the win.

Jimmy Cantrell finished first in the Super Senior Gross Division with a 237. J.C. Beyer took the Net with a 218.

Well-traveled Lady Harvesters finish fourth; Gerber named to All-Tournament team

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Another solid outing for coach Sonia VanGilder and her Lady Harvester volleyball team at the Wayland Baptist University Coca-Cola Classic in Plainview. Pampa advanced to the semi-finals of the Gold Division, where they fell to eventual tournament champion Frenship. The Lady Harvesters faced Lubbock Cooper in the consolation round. The two teams squared off in a hard-fought marathon meeting, before Pampa finally succumbed 20-25, 25-20, 26-24, 16-25, 12-15.

For her performance, Pampa senior and team captain, Jackie Gerber, was named to the Gold Division All-Tournament Team.

On the road since Aug. 9, the Lady Harvesters will not take to the friendly confines of McNeely Field House again until Tuesday, Sept. 13, when both the varsity and junior varsity squads host the Lady Sandies of Amarillo High.

Flanked by referees, Pampa captains Chris Smith (#65), Eric Kingcade (#40), Brody Smith (#19) and Jake Craig (#54) make their way to midfield for the first half coin-toss prior to the start of Friday's game at Clovis. The Harvesters (1-1) will host Amarillo High Friday night.

No. 14 ends losing streak against No. 9 Miami

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Another blown field goal try decided a Florida State-Miami game. Nothing new there.

The difference Monday night was the Seminoles were the team celebrating when Miami messed up, instead of the other way around.

The Hurricanes botched a short, potential game-tying field-goal attempt in the final minutes to hand Florida State a 10-7 victory that snapped Miami's six-game winning streak against their bitter rivals.

In a series that has seen

Bobby Bowden and the Seminoles lament more costly missed field goals than they care to count, Florida State wasn't about to feel guilty about catching a break.

"We finally stole one from them like they've been stealing them from us," Bowden said. "It's about time."

Jon Peattie lined up for the pivotal 28-yarder with about 2:30 left, but holder Brian Monroe dropped a low snap that bounced off his hands and rolled back into the pile, never giving Peattie a chance.

"It was like, 'Did that really just happen? That's supposed to happen to us,'" Florida State running back Lorenzo Booker said, laughing at the irony.

Failed field goals by Florida State have played a major role in six Miami victories since 1987, some costing FSU national title shots. Four times, Seminoles kickers went wide right, once wide left and last year they had one blocked.

"It made up for a lot of them, but not all of them," said Bowden, who improved to 12-19 against Miami with FSU.

After Miami's gaffe Monday night, all Florida State had to do was run out the clock to secure its first victory over the Hurricanes since 1999.

"When the law of averages goes against us, I don't like the law," Miami coach Larry Coker said. "I think it was just poor execution on our parts. Maybe it was just Florida State's time."

Florida State overcame its own inept offense (170 total yards) with a defense that registered nine sacks by seven players, two by Kamerion Wimbley.

"Defensively, we were determined not to put it in the hands of the offense and the kicking game," said linebacker Ernie Sims, who had one of Florida State's two interceptions.

Both Florida State's Drew Weatherford and Miami's Kyle Wright were making their first collegiate starts at quarterback and, at times, neither looked ready to lead a team to victory in one of college football's fiercest rivalries.

KATRINA AFTERMATH

Saints try regaining normalcy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Meetings in a convention center. A 10-minute bus ride. Then practice at a high school facility and a bus ride back "home," to their hotel.

That's the new routine for the New Orleans Saints, forced out of their normal surroundings by Hurricane Katrina.

The Saints returned to work Monday, trying to focus on their opener Sunday in Carolina instead of the awful pictures of what's happening in New Orleans.

"We all talked about what was going on before practice," said special teams standout Michael Lewis, who was born in New Orleans and has more than 30 relatives in the area. "Everybody in my family is OK. But now that we're here, we know what we have to do."

Coach Jim Haslett was glad to be doing something besides watching news reports on television.

"I think being on the field and in the meetings is a time that's away from all that," he said. "It's good for your mind to get on the field and practice and be where you're with your peers."

Though the Saints still are awaiting word where they will play the balance of their home games, the team expects to practice in San Antonio for the rest of the season.

The NFL announced Monday that their second game — which was supposed to be their home opener against the New York Giants — will be on Monday, Sept. 19, at Giants Stadium.

'It's good for your mind to get on the field and practice and be where you're with your peers'

— Jim Haslett
Coach, New Orleans Saints

The game will begin at 7:30 EDT on ABC, then be switched to ESPN at 9 p.m., when ABC goes to the regularly scheduled game between Washington and Dallas in Irving, Texas. In New York and Louisiana, as well as other parts of the Gulf Coast, ABC will continue to carry the Giants-Saints game, switching to Redskins-Cowboys when the Saints game ends.

The team left New Orleans a few days before the storm, then played their final preseason game in Oakland on Thursday night. Players had been off between then and Monday.

They gathered for meetings at the San Antonio Convention Center, then traveled by bus to a practice facility at the San Antonio School District Spring Sports Complex.

It's the same facility the team used temporarily last year while waiting out Hurricane Ivan, and also was used by the Dallas Cowboys during training camp in 2002 and '03.

Saints receiver Joe Horn said the field was "decent."

"I can take you over to the Astrodome or the Air Force base (in San Antonio) and show you a lot harsher conditions," he said.

The Astrodome and Kelly USA, formerly an Air Force base, are two locations where displaced residents from the hurricane-affected Gulf Coast region are staying.

Lewis, a Pro Bowl special teams player following the 2002 season, said the team's day off Tuesday doesn't give him enough time to get back to his home in Metairie, La., and check on his property and relatives.

He gave his grandparents the keys to his house when he visited with them over the weekend.

Museum Mementos: Bones Hooks made history in Pampa

"Bones Hooks: Pioneer Negro Cowboy," a new book by Bruce G. Todd of Amarillo begins with an account of Bones Hooks' historic ride on an outlaw horse. The event occurred south of the Santa Fe depot in Pampa on March 12, 1910.

Matthew "Bones" White Deer Hooks, born Nov. 3, 1867, in Robertson County, Texas, was the first of the eight children of Alex and Annie Hooks, a freed slave couple.

At the age of 7, Matthew got his first job — driving a meat wagon for a butcher. The next year he learned to ride a horse — probably on a farm where he worked.

Matthew was 9 years old when he began to work as a teamster on D. Steve Donald's DSD ranch in Denton County. While there, he proved that he could ride an outlaw horse and acquired the nickname that would follow him the rest of his life. Unaware that dice were called bones, he thought that one of the cowboys was calling him when he heard the cowboy say, "Hand me them bones!"

When Tom Clayton (a white man) died in the early 1890s, Bones took a bunch of white wildflowers to the funeral. This was the beginning of a tradition with Bones who ever afterward sent a single white flower to the funeral of every pioneer he knew.

In May, 1909, Bones left the range to work as a porter for the Santa Fe Railway. In the spring of 1910, he was working in a day coach when he overheard four men talking about horses. Bones said later, "I sort of hung around, dusting the seats, because I don't like to miss any horse talk."

The men were amused when Bones asked them to telegraph

the area cattlemen including Charles Goodnight and Alfred Rowe.

J.S. "Jess" Wynne, an expert horse trainer, helped Bones improve his skill of training horses.

It was said that Bones could take a wild colt and have it follow him like a dog in less than two hours.

On the Bar CC Ranch, Bones was befriended by Dave Lard who had fights with new hands for teasing Bones because he was black. Bones said that he was a black Angus in a herd of Hereford "white faces."

At the Fourth of July picnics in Clarendon, Bones sold hot tamales to get money to enjoy the holiday and to save for the next celebration. Once a stranger set up a rival stand, and when some of the cowboys started to buy from the stranger, they were reprimanded, "What do you mean? That feller'll be gone next week and Bones will be right here. Buy from Bones until e sells out."

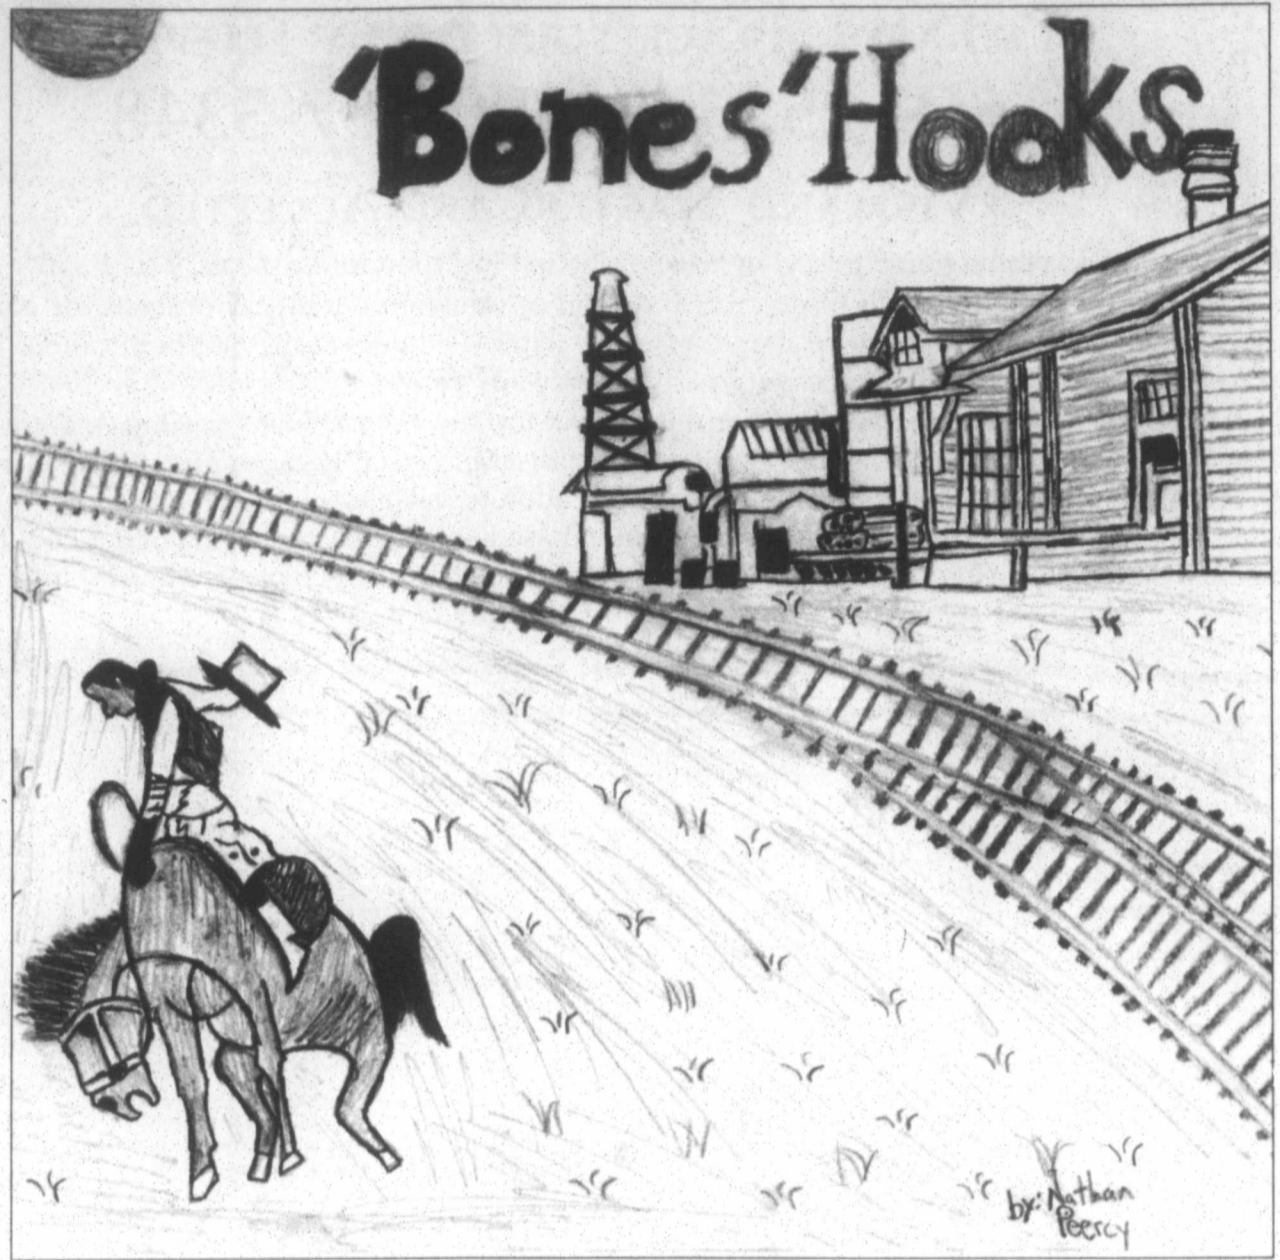

When Tom Clayton (a white man) died in the early 1890s, Bones took a bunch of white wildflowers to the funeral. This was the beginning of a tradition with Bones who ever afterward sent a single white flower to the funeral of every pioneer he knew.

In May, 1909, Bones left the range to work as a porter for the Santa Fe Railway. In the spring of 1910, he was working in a day coach when he overheard four men talking about horses. Bones said later, "I sort of hung around, dusting the seats, because I don't like to miss any horse talk."

The men were talking about Old Bob, a black mustang that nobody could ride. The horse's owner was Moore Davidson, who lived with the family of his widowed sister-in-law, Myrtle "Mert" Davidson. The Davidson place was south of Pampa in Section 64 where there was a huge running spring of water.

Bones continued, "I broke in finally and said, 'I can ride that horse.'"

The men were amused when Bones asked them to telegraph

Davidson and ask him to have the horse at the depot when the train was scheduled to reach Pampa. This was arranged, and it was agreed that Bones would receive $25 if he succeeded in riding Old Bob.

Bones had broken horses for J. Frank Meers when Meers was the foreman on the Masterson Ranch, and Meers was one of the men who brought Old Bob to the place where a large crowd gathered south of the depot at Pampa. Lewis F. Meers, son of J. Frank, played "hooky" from school to watch the event.

It was about 2 p.m. when the train arrived at the depot. Bones, booted and spurred and minus his white porter's jacket, descended from the train. It is reported later that he said, "I combed that bronc from his ears to his tail, rode him to a standstill, collected my money, and was back on the train when it pulled out seven minutes later."

Bones Hooks' ride was widely publicized nationwide as well as locally.

Hallie Case (Mrs. A.A. Tiemann) was a young girl attending the Catholic convent at Canadian when Bones was a porter on the Santa Fe. It was customary for Bones to meet Hallie and her mother at the depot in Pampa and watch to see that she arrived safely at Canadian where a nun was waiting for her. Then Bones would meet Hallie at Canadian for the return trip to Pampa and watch until she was with her mother. In later years when Bones came to Pampa for rodeos or gatherings of old-timers, he always visited "my little Hallie."

Bones moved to Amarillo about 1911 and remained there for most of the rest of his life. He retired from the railroad in April, 1930 and thereafter devoted his time to participating in civic affairs and working for the betterment of his people. At his funeral service in February, 1951, the Mount Zion Baptist Church in Amarillo was crowded with his friends, white and black. One-by-one, they laid on his coffin a single white flower, his longtime symbol of respect.

is designated for males, the other for females, she said.

"It's still over there, and will remain there indefinitely until they get done with it," she said.

Pampa Firefighter John Evans returned to Amarillo on Saturday to help with the trailer.

Pampa's Texas Department of Safety office has sent four troopers to the Houston area to help provide security at the Astrodome, where a large number of hurricane evacuees have been housed, according to a DPS spokesperson.

The troopers are working 12-hour shifts to provide security at the sports facility. The Borger, Amarillo, Dumas and Clarendon offices have sent three troopers each to help in connection with hurricane victims, the spokesperson said.

Captain Gary Steward of Pampa's Salvation Army is in Houston with the Pampa Disaster Canteen, according to Bob Marx of the Salvation Army board of directors.

The Salvation Army is currently accepting donations for hurricane victims. Top of Texas Sharers, Inc. has teamed with the Salvation Army to collect items for hurricane victims by providing a cargo van to collect the items.

The van is parked at KGRO-KOMX Radio Station, 1701 N. Banks, and will remain there for the next few days, Marx said in a sion of a controlled substance. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $10,000. On Feb. 11, Henderson allegedly possessed four grams or more but less than 200 grams of cocaine.

Kerry Dean Janow, 50, was indicted for driving while intoxicated, third or more offense, enhanced. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $5,000. On Jan. 24, Janow allegedly operated a motor vehicle in a public place while intoxicated. On Feb. 11, 1997, Janow was convicted in Ochiltree County of driving while intoxicated. On June 10, 1998, he was convicted in Lipscomb County of driving while intoxicated, second offense. On Dec. 13, 1999, Janow was convicted in 84th District Court in Ochiltree County of the felony offense of injury to a child.

Jose Manuel Lara, 39, was indicted for possession of marijuana. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $2,500. On Sept. 8, 2004, Lara allegedly possessed news release.

Persons wishing to donate may bring canned food, staples, water, wheelchairs and walkers to be placed in the van. The items will be sent where needed most, Marx said.

"The greatest need right now is money, because it can be used to purchase what is needed immediately," he said.

"Donations can be left at KGRO. All gifts will be acknowledged with a tax-deductible receipt either from the Salvation Army or TOTS," Marx said.

Clothing is the least-needed item, according to the press release, although it may be called for at a future time.

For more information, call the Salvation Army at 665-7233, or TOTS at 665-4807.

2,000 pounds or less but more than 50 pounds of marijuana.

Richard Wayne Osbin, 46, was indicted for driving while intoxicated, third or more offense. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $5,000. On April 4, Osbin allegedly operated a motor vehicle in a public place while intoxicated. On Nov. 21, 1995, Osbin was convicted in Gray County of driving while intoxicated. On Oct. 13, 1998, he was convicted in Gray County of driving while intoxicated, second offense. On May 8, 1978, Osbin was convicted in 31st District Court in Gray County of the felony offense of burglary of vehicles.

Emmanuel Ruiz Reyes, 18, was indicted for eight counts of aggravated assault. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $20,000. On May 26, Reyes allegedly threatened Natasha Alvarez and seven minors with imminent bodily injury by striking their vehicle with his vehicle.

Joe Bob Davis, 41, was indicted for injury to a child, enhanced. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $25,000. On Feb. 13, Davis allegedly struck a child 14 years of age or younger in the forehead with his hand. On June 29, 2001, Davis was convicted in district court in Potter County of the felony offense of possession of a controlled substance.

Jackie Terrell Hembree, 23, was indicted for three counts of aggravated assault. Bond on the second-degree felony was set at $15,000. On May 18, Hembree allegedly pointed a firearm at Cole Dampier. On May 6, Terrell allegedly pointed a firearm at Andy Ritchie and Justin Wehrenberg.

tively cool way: namely, it corrects high-frequency hearing loss without plugging-up the ear canal. It lets natural sounds just pass through the ear canal unamplified and gives a hi-fidelity boost only to soft speech sounds. The silicon brain of the product is about the size of a paper clip and is worn in the crease just behind-the-ear. Digitally processed sound is transmitted into the ear canal through a transparent tube, which is virtually unnoticeable.
