Pampa emergency services step up to help evacuees

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

The Pampa Fire Department sent its new decontamination trailer to Amarillo.

The Pampa Regional Medical Center was standing by to receive medical emergencies. Pampa Salvation Army and Red Cross chapters dispatched personnel to the Amarillo Civic Center. Amarillo was told Friday to expect from 500 to 700 evacuees from the Gulf Coast after Hurricane Katrina. Three plane loads, about 450 people, landed in Lubbock, but only one

"They were expecting quite a few of those people to need medical treatment," said Ken Hall, Pampa's Emergency Management Coordinator. "I think that's why they had everybody gear up, in anticipation of that."

As it turned out, Hall said Amarillo was able to take care of what medical needs they had at their hospital.

"They didn't have to transfer any-

From his bunker in the basement of Pampa City Hall Tuesday afternoon, Hall said Amarillo officials did request the Pampa Fire Department's decontamination trailer.

"That was the first thing they asked for from us," Hall said. "Chief Powell readily made that available and sent a crew over there with it."

The trailer was set up at the Amarillo Civic Center to provide showers for the evacuees.

Heidi Phelps with the Gray County Chapter of the Red Cross said Tuesday afternoon that three families had come to Pampa from the hurricane ravaged area. Two had gone on. One was staying, at least for a while.

Hall said the scale of the devastation of Hurricane Katrina is almost unimaginable. He says they only thing he can compare it to is the 1995 Pampa tornado.

It was five minutes from gavel to gavel. At a special meeting of the Pampa City Commission Tuesday, Mayor Lonny Robbins brought down his gavel at 4:01 p.m. and opened a public hearing on a proposed increase of the property tax rate in Pampa. No one spoke for or against the proposal.

City Manager John Horst explained that the tax rate would remain at 69.5 cents per $100 valuation, the same that it's been for the past several years, but if the city retains that tax rate, it will bring in more revenue for city coffers.

He said the increase was because of new businesses and added inventories.

One of the new businesses was expected to generate an additional $83,000 in tax revenues over last year, he

Horst said that if a residence had the same value placed on it as last year, the taxes should be the same.

A second public hearing on the proposed property tax increase will be at 4 p.m. Friday in the city commission chambers at city hall.

After the hearing, the commission unanimously passed on second and final reading the 2005-2006 Pampa operating budget.

At 4:06, Robbins brought his gavel down to end the meeting.

The school year is in full swing. I hope everyone has made the adjustment from summertime. Everything has been going pretty good so far with traffic, and such, except for a couple of concerns.

Today's school safety topic "Stopping for School Busses." The school district has 14 routes with about 150 total scheduled stops they make everyday to pick up kids. They have routes that take them to every part of town and outside of the city limits.

The drivers even go house-to-house picking up pre-K and kindergarten students. Most of the routes are in residential areas, but some are on major streets like

President will rebound from Katrina missteps

as floods, hurricanes, tornadoes and such are chances for the president to gain popularity and for his administration to shine. It was the unique and inexplicable inability of the Bush people to understand the magnitude of what they confronted and to respond to it quickly that managed to transform this chance for a big political gain into a monstrous liabili-

Americans will want to know why the trucks didn't start rolling when the winds started blowing. And when they quieted, where were the airlifts and evacuations that could have fed and watered thousands and prevented many deaths and much psychic and physical harm?

But make no mistake

Normally, disasters such next year, voters will see nonstop scenes of federal relief, rebuilding, renovation and reconstruction along with the empathy, sympathy and compassion these efforts imply in the heart of George W. Bush. He may have had a terrible first week, but he will rebound big time in the months to come.

The aid an administration gives in the aftermath of a momentous disaster will be covered continuously by the media. Every relief convoy will get a wide slice of publicity. As the pumps run and the city and the gulf region drain, the nation will feel a surge of heady optimism at our ability to bounce back from disaster. Happy visuals will replace tragic ones, and interviews with homeowners joyously moving back in about it: Every day for the will run instead of the tearful stories of refugees.

After Sept. 11, Bush was heavily criticized too. Remember the slowly ticking minutes in Michael Moore's film "Fahrenheit 9/11" during which Bush continued to read to a class of children even after hearing about the Trade Center attack? (Bush was absolutely right not to bolt from the room and traumatize the kids and the nation even more.) It was not until his bullhorn speech several days later that the president got ahead of the story. Soon his response to Sept. 11 was the mainstay of his popularity and of his

The recovery from Katrina may well follow a similar trajectory.

While the air Washington will be filled with recriminations about why the levee wasn't reinforced and why the aid was so slow in coming after the storm hit. the airwaves around the nation will be filled with evidence of the administration's response, just as they were in the months after Sept. 11.

All this is not to take away from our justifiable anger at the human pain, loss of life and needless suffering that FEMA's inability to get off claim for a second term on the dime fast caused. To watch those pictures of Americans crowded into what was increasingly called the Sewerdome is to simmer in rage at the dunderheads in Washington who stood on ceremony, budgetary considerations, bureaucratic constraints and chain of command rather than rushing to help those in need before a weather disaster became a human one. It is also not to take away from the need for a thorough examination, preferably through a Sept. 11-style commission, of why the levee was not strengthened after the warnings of Hurricane Ivan a year before and of why relief was so slow in coming.

But let the Democrats hold their rejoicing. In a year, Katrina and the relief and rebuilding efforts that are about to follow will be seen as having imparted a new and crucial momentum to an administration that was obviously increasingly running out of ideas, out of steam, and - like its nation out of gas.

Katrina has the capacity to shape the second Bush term in the same way Sept. 11 shaped his first term - not only in rebuilding New Orleans but in taking preventative steps around the nation to bolster our defenses against natural and manmade disasters and terror strikes.

Responding to disasters is a source of presidential strength and popularity, and Bush is about to show how it is done.

"The 700 Club," is not a Christian. No man who publicly advocates coldblooded murder for political reasons can claim to be a follower of Jesus Christ. Robertson did that on his television show, saying it would be cheaper to murder the president of Venezuela than to overthrow him with a war.

The president of Venezuela, Hugo Chavez, is a frequent critic of President George Bush and the United States. He is also democratically elected. It's funny how many people in the American elite who profess to advocate democracy tend to change their minds when the results of democracy don't suit them. Nowhere is it written that a free and democratic election will produce a leader whom we like. That should be obvious from that eye of the needle that Chavez seems to want to do

If you think the CIA has a bad record in finding weapons of mass destruction, let me tell you, it has an even worse record of picking leaders of foreign countries. # Sheehan public face of growing skepticism

It is difficult by now to try dispassionately to assess the phenomenon of Cindy Sheehan, the grieving mother whose son was killed in Iraq and who has been staging a peace vigil outside the president's home in Texas. But it's worth an effort.

There are two major reasons Sheehan has received so much attention from the media. The first, of course, is that when President Bush takes a working vacation in Texas, the White House press corps is obliged to follow him, but they end up doing a lot of standing around, hoping for a scrap

But I'm disgusted. I've had that longtime leader Hosni Mubarak portrayed as a major democratic reform.

More than 3,000 people marched through downtown Cairo at midafternoon. Police watched from a distance, despite government vows the day before that protests would not be allowed.

Egypt says the decision to allow challengers to Mubarak signals a move toward greater democracy in a country that has seen only authoritarian rule for more than a half-century.

Opponents, however, dismissed the reform claims as a sham. They note that Mubarak's party controls most of the government, including the electoral Until now, the 77-year-old Mubarak has been re-elected in referendums in which he was the only candidate and voters' only option was saying "yes" or "no" to his continuing in power. Mubarak has promised further democratic steps if re-elected.

Accountant Ahmad Ibrahim al-Shimi, 41, was one of many who joined the Kifaya march that started at noon in Cairo's main square, then swelled and spread to surround-the election will not make a difference. Other Egyptians seem to genuinely fear change in the country of 72 million and said they would freely vote for Mubarak, long seen as the country's father and protector.

"I can't take a risk at a time like this because this is the destiny of a country," said Mohammed Shahat Bilal, 58-yearold welder in Alexandria. "We don't want what happened in Iraq to happen here. We want a stable country."

Nine candidates are running against Mubarak, but only two are considered significant: Ayman Nour of the al-Ghad Party and Noaman Gomaa of the Wafd, the oldest opposition party.

Nour, a young, media-savvy candidate whose arrest earlier this year raised interprocess. And they argue the wide publicity given Mubarak national protests, said he hoped elections would be "conducted with transparency. And if this happens it will be a big achievement for Egypt." Mubarak was among the first to vote, casting his ballot in a school close to the presidential palace, accompanied by his wife and his son, Gamal, a rising politician. The country's election commission said today that private groups and observers were welcome to go inside polling stations, despite earlier rulings that only voters, judicial supervisors, election workers and some party representatives could enter.

There are loans and grants from the government that could make it possible for the low income here, but I was told about a month ago that basically there were more important people and things that needed to be done than worry about the poor people.

There are lots and lots of people living in unsafe houses, but a city official stated there was nobody here to apply for loans and grants. It's a matter they don't want to address, so look at the storm then look at our

Some people are skillful at reading the Bible out of context, but you won't find one word in the New Testament, which is the Christian Bible, that advocates murder for any reason. No one can be a Christian and a booster of political assassination, too.

Annan to face criticism in oil-for-food report

By NICK WADHAMS Associated Press Writer

Protest

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The U.N. Security Council and Secretary-General Kofi Annan will both face sharp criticism for allowing corruption and waste to overwhelm the Iraq oil-for-food program, according to a probe of the $64 billion operation.

The Independent Inquiry Committee's definitive report, to be released today, will fault U.N. management Saddam for allowing Hussein to manipulate the program.

"Neither the Security Council nor the Secretariat leadership was clearly in command," the preface to the report said. "When things went awry - and they surely did - when troublesome conflicts arose between political objectives and administrative effectiveness, decisions were delayed, bungled or simply shunned."

The preface called for four central reforms, including the creation of a chief operating officer at the United Nations. The U.N. General Assembly should demand that the changes go into force no later than a

Meanwhile, the Italian business newspaper Il Sole 24 Ore and the Londonbased Financial Times were to report in today's editions that Kojo Annan received more than $750,000 from oil trading companies being scrutinized by oil-for-food

PJHS 8th grade teams split with Westover Park

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS Sports Editor

The Pampa Junior High School 2005 football season kicked-off Tuesday with the 8th grade teams hosting Westover Park, while the 7th grade teams traveled to Canyon to face the Warriors.

B-team

The B-team started the season off in fine fashion, whipping the Warriors, 22-6.

Anthony Allen was involved in much of the Pampa scoring, with a 35-yard TD toss to Dylan Hendrix and a 7-yard pass for a touchdown to Zach Shaw.

Allen also scored on a 3-yard run. Zach Organ converted two extra points runs.

Safety Craig Conner sealed the win with less than six minutes left in the game with an interception. The Bteam record is 1-0.

The A-team faced Westover Park in rainy conditions throughout much of the contest. Despite a solid effort, Pampa fell to the Warriors, 26-12.

Nathan Webb scored all of Pampa's points on touchdown runs of five and seven yards. The A-team record is 0-1.

Both teams will host Hereford Tuesday. The B-team game will begin at 5 p.m., with the A-team game to follow at 6:30 p.m.

Eighth grader Craig Conner runs the ball after the Pampa Junior High School safety picked-off a pass to seal a 22-6 B-team win over Westover Park Tuesday. The play came with 5:38 to go in the game. The B-team is now 1-0.

PARIS (AP) - Lance Armstrong plans to train with his team this winter, increasing speculation he will end his retirement and attempt an eighth straight Tour de France win.

"It's definitely an open possibility, I know he is on the bike," Discovery Channel team director Johan Bruyneel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday.

"He absolutely wants to be part of the training camp in December and wants to get fit to compete with the guys there," Bruyneel said, adding that Armstrong can decide to return as late as February.

When Armstrong retired in July after his seventh straight Tour win, Bruyneel had to decide whether to recruit a new team leader. He opted not to do so, suggesting the door may have been kept open for the Texan.

"We didn't really look for some-body to replace him," Bruyneel said. "For one there is nobody, not a strong leader like he was. Without him we have a very good team ... but not the favorites.

The Amaury Sport Organization, which organizes the Tour, would not comment on the speculation.

"We will express ourselves only if Tour in his legs yet." and when he decides to come out of retirement," spokesman Christophe Marchadier said. "There is nothing to stop him coming back on the Tour as a professional cyclist."

'It's definitely an open possibility, I know he is on the bike."

 Johan Bruyneel Director, Team Discovery Channel

Armstrong, who turns 34 later this month, won this year's Tour by a comfortable margin — 4 minutes, 40 seconds ahead of Italian Ivan Basso and 6:21 ahead of Jan Ullrich of Germany. "I'm sure he could win (another Tour)," Bruyneel said. "The way he won this year ... everything pretty much under control and he never showed any weakness. He has another

Armstrong, who announced his engagement Monday to rock singer Sheryl Crow, issued a statement Tuesday confirming that he's considering a comeback in part to rankle French media.

On Aug. 23, sports daily L'Equipe, which is owned by the Tour organizer, reported it had evidence that six of Armstrong's urine samples from the 1999 Tour tested positive last year for the blood booster EPO. The substance was banned in 1999, but there was no reliable test at the time.

"I think he's been very offended," Bruyneel said. "If you know him he doesn't need a lot to find some motivation. I think it woke up the competitive side of him. Should Armstrong return, the media scrutiny surrounding him would be intense and he would likely receive a hostile reception from the French pub-

"He proved in the past that he can deal with that. He is at his maximum under pressure," Bruyneel said. "Physically and mentally he can deal

Pampa defeats Borger

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS Sports Editor

The Lady Harvester varsity volleyball team continues to roll on the road, taking care of Borger Tuesday, 15-25, 25-16, 25-15, 25-16. The win improved Pampa's record to 17-6 overall. Stats were not available as of press time.

Coach VanGilder and her team have two tough tests looming with a visit to Tascosa Saturday, and a home date with Amarillo High Tuesday. Seminole and Kermit separate those dates from the start of district play Sept. 20.

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The Denver County coroner's report confirmed what Thomas Herrion's family and friends already believed: The San Francisco 49ers offensive lineman died of a heart attack that was unpredictable and probably unstop-Herrion had heart disease and evidence of previous heart trouble when he collapsed and died after a preseason game in Denver Aug. 20, assistant coroner Amy Martin said Tuesday.

Herrion's condition was caused by factors that are often nearly undetectable, though fairly rare in a 23-year-old athlete in good physical condition. Iterrion had ischemic heart disease with significant blockage in his right coronary artery.

"It's not unheard of, but it certainly isn't extremely common in somebody who is otherwise fairly healthy," said Martin, a forensic pathologist. "Usually when it happens in somebody this young, there's some sort of factor that accelerates a process that we usually associate with aging.

"One of the biggest factors is genetics. If you're born to a family who is prone to get heart disease, then you're more likely to get

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Justin," and I have been together 12 years, married for five. We get along well, except for one thing, his so-called "jokes."

done something that bothers him, Justin will make a sarcastic comment, then insist he's "just kidding." If I forget to turn off a light, he'll say something like, "So, you're trying to make sure the electric company doesn't go out of business -- right?" If I tell him his unshaven face hurts when he kisses me, he'll say, "Most women would love it if their husbands gave them kisses all the time ... maybe I should have married one of them." No single remark sounds that terrible, but it's been going on for 12 years and I've had enough.

claims to be "kidding," he doesn't think I have a reason to get angry. He'll say I don't have a sense of humor, or that I'm "thinskinned." I tell him frequently that it bothers me. I have asked repeatedly that he just say what's on his mind, but he doesn't. How can I get through to him that what he's doing isn't "joking"; it's avoiding accountability for his comments? -- NOT DEAR MICHAEL: For someone 13, you AMUSED IN VERMONT

DEAR NOT AMUSED: It would be interesting to know something about the atmosphere in which your husband was raised, because emotionally, he's a coward. The term for what he's doing is "passive aggression." People who use it aren't secure enough to be directly confrontational, so they beat around the bush -- taking little jabs here and there, not enough to do serious damage. The measured doses of venom keep their victim off balance and in a constant state of irritation. (If the targets react, it becomes "their" fault.)

You must be a very strong person to have tolerated this for so long. I'm sad to say, your husband may be incapable of chang ing. However, a way to get him to Rather than coming out and saying I've recognize what he's doing, and how damaging it is, would be through marriage counseling. If he won't go, go without him. It will give you insight and perspective.

> DEAR ABBY: My mother has been living with this guy for seven years. We don't live with her, but when we visit, he mentally and emotionally abuses her. Yesterday he cussed me and my brother out, and threatened to beat us up.

My mother wants to leave but she can't. I know it's none of my business because I am only 13, but my brother and I want her No matter what he says, as long as Justin to get out. We don't like this guy and don't want to see him anymore. I have told my mother this. She says she'll leave, but she never does! What should I do? I need help to get her to leave this guy because mental abuse leaves a scar on your life that causes you to hate and fear others. -- MICHAEL IN NASHVILLE, TENN.

> are very world-wise. I respect that you want to help your mother get away. However, that will take not only careful planning, but a strong desire on her part -and I'm not sure your mother really wants

> Are her parents still living? If they are, tell them what you have told me. Does she have sisters and brothers? Tell them, too. If she has no one, give her the number of the National Domestic Violence Hotline: (800) 799-SAFE (www.ndvh.org). When she's ready, they can help her make a plan for leaving. But no one can do this for her. Ultimately, this is something your mother must do for herself.
