Summer is a busy time for the City of Pampa's Public Works division, with mosquito spraying, weed spraying and street seal coating currently scheduled.

City crews have been spot-patching on streets slated for seal coating.

"We've got several areas where we're doing the initial seal, and the contractor will come back and seal over the entire area," Morris said. 'We've got quite a bit of patching to do."

The oil industry is braced for a backlash in Washington, where elected officials are concerned about constituents in many parts of the country paying more than $3 a gallon at the pump. But some analysts say companies could face less criticism than usual given the attention focused on Middle East violence.

Whatever the political fallout, the industry has done right by Wall Street's standards. The five oil behemoths releasing quarterly results next week - BP

Pilgrimage to baseball shrines leaves a lasting impression

Pilgrims visit shrines.

That sums up my trip last weekend to visit my friends, Chet and Marcy Burchett, in Wilton, Connecticut.

I had better start at the beginning because I am sometimes easily confused.

The Burchetts used to live in Amarillo. We hired Chet as an assistant city editor when I was night city editor at the Globe-News. He came from the Waco paper. Marcy worked for a time as a co-anchor with Walt Howard at Channel 10.

Chet left for the Houston Post and subsequently went to work for Edelman, a public relations firm. He transferred to Chicago and after a time became president of Burson-Marsteller, another PR

He was then transferred to the New York office. Another opportunity came up and he is now president of Reed Exhibitions in Norwalk, Conn.

Years ago, I had the opportunity to visit the Burchetts in Chicago.

We took the opportunity to make the trek to Wrigley Field to see my beloved, albeit snake-bitten, Cubs for two games with the Phillies. True to form, the Cubs lost both

We even visited Comiskey Park to take in a White Sox game. I do not remember who was visiting or who won. What I do remember about Comsikey is that they have really good ballpark food. No vegeterian fare there.

The Wrigley Field experience was my first pilgrimage to visit a shrine, and it was a memorable

In a telephone conversation earlier this year, Chet asked me to come visit and take in a few baseball games at Yankee Stadium and Fenway Park.

Of course I bit. I checked the schedules and made arrangements

That is where I spent last weekend. A Friday night game at Yankee Stadium and a Saturday night game at Fenway.

Chet and I started out early for the Yankees-White Sox game so we could watch batting practice and take in the experience. What began as a 1.5-hour trip to the city ended up being a 3.5-hour trip in a traffic jam.

Dennis Spies Editor

We arrived in time for the game to begin and found our seats a few rows from the field a little behind third base. Alex Rodriguez and Derek Jeter were so close we could read their lips.

I looked around the stadium and could imagine Babe Ruth, Lou Gherig, Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford, Johnny Mize, Ed Lopat, Billy Martin and all the other Yankee greats playing the game.

But it has now morphed into the Evil Empire, even with the great players they have. It was nice to see future hall-of-famers like Rodriguez, Jeter, Mariano Rivera and perhaps Randy Johnson and Bernie Williams.

The next leg of the pilgrimage led us to Boston and Fenway Park.

We first visited the Burchetts' 17-year-old son who is in a summer program at Berklee School of Music.

Fenway is a lot like Wrigley in that it is surrounded by businesses selling souvenirs and restaurants.

We found an outdoor bar and sipped beer in the hot sun waiting for the gates to open. Watching the different people pass by was entertainment enough.

Food vendors began setting up kiosks outside the ballpark in preparation for what we discovered later was a big party after the game. The streets around the park are barricaded, and party-goers fall into a festive mood for the afterthe-game festivities.

Inside Fenway is a meticulous field. I cannot think of a nicer field in the four or five major league parks I have visited.

Our seats here were as good as it gets. We were 11 rows up just to the left of home plate.

Curt Shilling, another future hall-of-famer, pitched for the Red Sox against the Oakland A's. David Ortiz, who calls himself Big Papi, lined a home run to rightcenter. Manny Ramirez, the freest spirit of all the major leaguers, hustled and got his uniform dirty on several plays.

And I thought of Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr, Mel Parnell and others from my generation.

These two stadiums are historical landmarks, and I am pleased to have visited both of them.

Of the two, I prefer Fenway because it is more conducive to the way baseball was meant to be played.

"Old friends become telephone numbers in far away places," a poet said.

I am grateful that my old friends are more than telephone numbers. Thank you, Chet and Marcy, for a weekend I will never forget.

It was our first visit to the Big Apple in more than 15 years. Spending 48 hours around Times Square provided far more confirmations than adjustments of long-held perceptions.

In most ways, it remains a 'where it's at" city that's the nerve center, the trend-setter and a mob scene where the letter "R" is in the repertoire only of visitors' dialects.

Overheard: "Hey, Chahlie, you a visitah heah in New Yawk?" You get the drift. And before my wife and I could complete sentences, locals branded us as Southerners, often with this addendum: "And probably from Texas. ...

The old "small world" observation surfaced within hours of arrival. We were seated with a couple of hundred others to see "I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change," an off Broadway musical comedy completing 11 straight years at the Westside Theatre. We heard unmistakable "Texas talk" just a few feet away on the next row.

Yep, the drawling couple, their voices elevated enough to be heard above other "leather lungs" at intermission, are from Austin. Turns out we have dozens of friends in common.

The show was a delightful musical/comedy with a cast of four. It's amazing, really, how such verve and freshness stand out even after 11 years. And one of the male leads was in the opening show back in '95. ...

NYC still is a city rightly famous for its restaurants, large and small, fancy and otherwise. Even cart vendors, serving up heaven knows what, give Broadway a midway look, and if it's candied, fried, baked, boiled, steamed or frozen, street strollers have many choices available.

I don't often make travel suggestions. However, I very much believe that NYC is destination worthy of periodic visits. If you go during the summer, however, take a bucket of money for lodging. The rates bring to mind the shocking response of legendary Bob Murphey, one of Texas' all-time best story-tellers. When the desk clerk advised him of room rates, Bob said, "Mister, I don't want to buy the room; I just want to sleep here tonight!"

There was a suggestion by a Carnival staffer worth repeating, and it makes sense.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am 11. My sister, "Brittany," is 9. She always tries to make me feel dumb and little. She makes fun of everything I do and cracks rude comments about me. She kisses up to everyone else and makes them think she's an angel. I am fed up with Brittany's smart-alecky comments and rudeness. She constantly annoys me because we have the same room. She thinks it's a huge joke that I am going through puberty and holds her nose around me all the time. I have tried talking to her, my parents, my grandparents, and anyone else who will listen. They think we are "just being sisters" and that I complain too much. Help! -- FED UP IN GREENVILLE, S.C.

DEAR FED UP: Your sister is acting like a brat because she is only 9 and she's jealous of you. Please try to keep that in mind when she makes you feel "dumb" and "little," because you are neither. When Brittany teases you about going through puberty, remind her that in a few years she will be going through the exact same thing -- and how will she like you holding your nose around her? Puberty is a difficult time under the best circumstances, and sharing a room with a little pest can make it even more so. Perhaps that room could be rearranged so that you both have some degree of privacy? Think about it and discuss it with your mother, because it is doable.

DEAR ABBY: I recently ended a threeyear relationship, and afterward I found out my ex had fathered a child while we were together. This is not the reason I ended the relationship because I didn't know about it until after it was over. When I told our mutual friends that I knew, a few of them told me they had known the whole time, but were "giving him the opportunity to be a man and tell me himself." I feel hurt and betrayed because no one told me the truth. One of these "friends" was my own sister -- which has obviously put a strain on our relationship. What should I do? --BETRAYED IN FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR BETRAYED: Although you were told the reason they kept silent was to "give (your ex) the opportunity to be a man and tell you himself," it may also have been that they didn't want to hurt you. In other words, it was a misguided effort to protect you. So please try to forgive them. (That includes your sister.) And be grateful to the Lord above that you didn't waste any more time on that philandering jerk.

DEAR ABBY: I always read the advice you give everyone. I am depressed. Since childhood, I have always been a problem child. I always have this sense of loneliness in me. Due to that, I'm not very active. I never want to marry. I wish to remain alone. According to our customs here in Kuwait, marriage is compulsory. But I do not want to marry! I am a business student, and I wish to take a psychology course so I can be away from my parents and family. I want to be by myself. I just hate being with them. Am I doing the right thing? -- MID-DLE EASTERN GIRL

DEAR MIDDLE EASTERN GIRL: I agree with you that the reason you feel the way you do could be depression. Depression and feelings of isolation often feed upon each other -- each making the other worse. I see no harm in your taking a psychology course; such courses can be helpful. However, if there is a student health center at your school, my advice is to talk to a counselor there about your feelings. You need professional help beyond what I can offer in a letter.

Mets shut out Astros, 7-0

NEW YORK (AP) — In the hours day to protect El Duque from having before Friday night's game, New York Mets general manager Omar Minaya talked about how he was shopping for pitching as the trading deadline approaches. John Maine's performance against the Houston Astros may have reduced the urgency for Minaya.

Plugged in at the last minute, Maine responded with a brilliant four-hitter, shutting out the Astros 7-0. He had plenty of help with Jose Valentin hitting his second grand slam home run in two weeks and Carlos Delgado adding a two-run shot.

But this was Maine's show.

"How about that, huh?" manager Willie Randolph said. "Johnny Maine threw the ball great. He did an outstanding job. He kept hitting his spots and putting up zeroes. He was strong and stayed in his rythym."

Not bad for a guy who wasn't supposed to pitch.

Maine was slotted for Saturday's game against the Astros with Orlando Hernandez set to go Friday. But with heavy rains falling before the game, Randolph decided to move Maine up a his start interrupted by the weather.

"They told me about 5 o'clock," Maine said. "They said, 'Are you ready to pitch?' and I told them I was ready to go. I didn't have much chance to think about the hitters. I think that was the best thing for my performance. I located my fastball well and got away with some changes. I got some quick outs."

He threw 98 pitches, 67 for strikes and produced his first major league complete game. It was his first win since Sept. 5, 2005 when he was with Baltimore.

Houston manager Phil Garner was frustrated by the loss.

"We got fastballs, that's why," he said., "We put them in play but didn't get anything for it."

Maine (1-3) walked one and struck out four. It was his first complete game and the sixth shutout of the season for the Mets

Teixeira, Young hit back-to-back homers in Ranger's 10-3 win over White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Teixeira and Texas Rangers teammates are the latest team to rough up Mark Buehrle and the Chicago White Sox.

Michael Young and Teixeira hit back-to-back homers off Buehrle to lead the Rangers to a 10-3 victory on Friday night.

Buehrle has lost his last four starts and during the span he has given up 27 runs in 21 1-3 innings for the White Sox, who have lost eight of their last 10 games and are 1-6 since the All-Star break.

"If you expand the zone and swing at his pitch you're not going to have any success. We did a good job of hitting pitches we could handle and we got to him," said Teixeira, who broke out of a 2-for-20 slump with the home run.

Kevin Mench hit a three-run homer in the eighth for the Rangers and Brad Wilkerson added a solo shot in the Jim Thome hit his 462nd career home run and Joe Crede also homered for the White Sox.

With the loss, the White Sox trail the first-place Detroit Tigers by 6 1/2 games in the AL Central, but they maintained a 2 1/2-game lead over the New York Yankees in the wild card.

"I told them to just continue to play. We know we're going to win a lot of games, but the main thing is good teams come out of slumps quicker than others and we have to come out the quickest we can," White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen said.

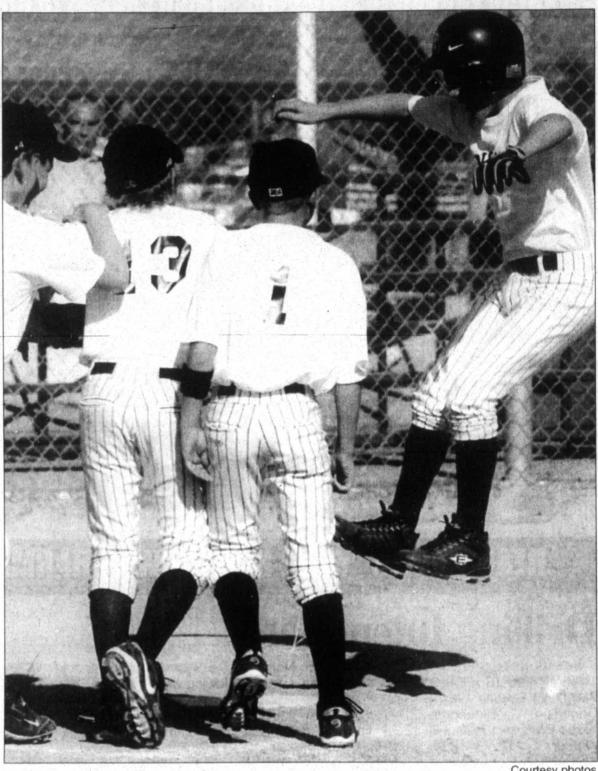

Trailing 1-0, the Rangers tied the game in the third inning on a sacrifice fly by Wilkerson. With two outs and a runner on, Buehrle walked Ian Kinsler and Young followed with his eighth homer, a three-run shot to left. Three pitches later, Teixeira followed with his 13th home run to left-center, giving the Rangers a 5-1 lead.

The Rangers have hit consecutive home runs eight times this season.

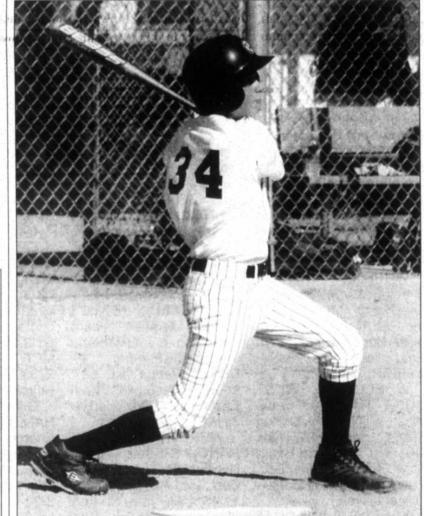

"Buehrle is tough. He's always been tough on me," Young said. "I haven't really been following his last couple of starts, but that's the least of my concerns. As far as I'm concerned he's still one of the best in the league and always will be. We know every time we face him we have our work cut out for us."

Buehrle (9-8) was booed as he walked back to the dugout after retiring the Rangers in the third. He pitched seven innings, allowing five runs and seven hits. He had four strikeouts and walked two.

Bonds relieved by legal reprieve received a temporary reprieve from his legal troubles only to find himself injured again on the field.

Bonds expressed "relief" that the federal grand jury considering possible perjury and taxevasion charges against him expired without an indictment.

Just when things looked up for the slugger and after he gave his right knee a clean bill of health, he hurt the other one.

Bonds left the Giants' 8-2 victory over San Diego on Friday night because of a bruised left knee following a leadoff single in the third inning, giving way to pinch-runner and defensive replacement Todd Linden. Bonds, hit by Jake Peavy's pitch in the first inning, was listed as day-to-day.

Bonds, who hit his 722nd career home run Thursday night in a win over the Padres, declined to talk to reporters Thursday only hours after federal prosecutors decided not to indict him for now, but he made a journal entry on his personal Web site.

"First off, I would like to say that what happened today is not a moment of joy for me, but one of temporary relief," Bonds said in his latest posting on http://www.barrybonds.com. "This has been an issue that has surrounded me for the past three years and I hope that this is the end. ...

"An investigation happened and hopefully it

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Barry Bonds is over. I do want to make it clear that there are no hard feelings for the legal process, but I feel there comes a point where everyone needs to move on."

> Asked later if he wanted to add anything to what he said on his site, Bonds told The Associated Press, "It speaks for itself."

He turns 42 on Monday and his right knee is feeling better than it has for a long time, he said. The Giants' star underwent three operations on the knee last year, causing him to miss all but 14 games in 2005. "I feel great," he said before the game Friday. "My knee feels 100 percent: I'm not lifting heavy like I used to. My body is just sore because I'm older."

Bonds had been running well again and has turned some of the extra weight he was carrying around his middle into muscle, though he noted his weight hasn't changed much. He is listed at 228 pounds.

"I haven't lost much weight, but I've lost my belly," he said. "I'm down from six or seven meals a day to three and supplementing with protein shakes."

Stress has affected his appetite, too, he said.

The investigation into Bonds is still ongoing, but it appears less likely that an indictment would have an impact on him and the Giants this season, which could be his last in San Francisco after 14 years with the club.

Kemp charged with drug possession

HOUSTON (AP) — Former NBA player Shawn Kemp faces a July 28 court appearance after he was arrested and charged Friday for possession of marijuana.

Kemp, 36, was arrested following a traffic stop for driving without a license plate shortly after midnight Friday. An officer with the Harris County Sheriff's Department pulled Kemp over and said he noticed the smell of burning marijuana coming from Kemp's vehicle.

The officer and later found less than 2 ounces of the illegal drug in Kemp's possession.

The six-time NBA All-Star player was released from the Harris County Jail after posting a $500 cash bond.

After 14 seasons with the Seattle SuperSonics, Cleveland Cavaliers, Portland Trail Blazers and Orlando Magic, Kemp retired from the league in 2003 and now lives in Houston.

NASCAR NEXTEL CUP

Childress team closing in on competition

(AP) — Richard Childress never got to the point where he hated coming to the race track, but there were times in the past five years when he rather would have been hunting or fishing. Since his longtime driver and friend Dale Earnhardt was killed in a crash during the 2001 Daytona 500, Richard Childress Racing, once considered one of the elite teams in NASCAR, has struggled just to be competitive.

"I hated seeing the faces in the race shop," said Childress, who won six championships with Earnhardt as his driver. "Nobody was smiling.

"We just couldn't find the right combination of people and equipment. It was tough on everybody on our team because we were used to winning races and winning championships and, all of a sudden, it wasn't happening.

For the first two years of NASCAR's Chase for the Nextel Cup championship, RCR was little more than an observer, with Kevin Harvick, the team's marquis driver, failing to qualify for the 10-man, 10-race play-

But thanks to some major personnel moves within the team, a lot of deter-mination and a renewed excitement, it looks like RCR is back

Heading into the Cup race this Sunday in Pocono, just seven races from the start of the Chase, Jeff Burton is third in the points and Harvick is eighth. Even rookie Clint Bowyer is having a solid season and is 16th in the standings.

"You've always got to be happy when you make any kind of progress," Childress said. "We know we've got a lot more we've got to accomplish to get the teams and the cars to where we want to be to win consistently and be racer Burton, who joined the team in the top five consistently. And that's midway through the 2004 season. what you've got to have to run for a championship.

"But the improvements alone that we've made in our aero programs, our engines, our cars, our chassis, personnel, it's been a pleasure to sit back and watch all these guys and ladies do their jobs and get these teams up and running. And the smiles are a lot bigger. So it's fun."

One big question heading into this season was whether Harvick, the driver who stepped into Earnhardt's big shoes in 2001, would stick around for the resurgence.

He spent much of the past two seasons complaining about team's lack of success and appeared ready to walk

Harvick would have been a free agent after this season and he certainly would have been a target for the new Toyota teams entering Cup in 2007. But, after seeing the direction RCR was headed late last season and early this year, Harvick signed a multiyear contract extension - perhaps the most significant evidence that Childress has turned it around.

'We're not all the way where we need to be with our cars and engines and things like that," said Harvick, who gave RCR its only Cup victory of the season early this year in Phoenix. "We've made a lot of strides, but we've got to continue to make progress. It's down to small things now. We've come a long way in a short amount of time. I think we're pretty

Childress, Harvick and Bowyer all give a lot of credit for the new attitude - and the improved results - to veteran

"Everybody at RCR has played a role, but Jeff has played a big role in the improvement," said Bowyer, who bears a resemblance to Burton, both on and off the track. "He has a lot of experience and he came from a successful team over at Roush (Racing). I think he's brought a lot to the table, a lot of ideas, a lot of input on where we need to be, where we need to change. And Richard listened to him.

Burton, the elder statesman of the RCR drivers at 39, said, "The big thing is, we have faster cars.

"When you have a 16th-place car, you finish 11th and you think you've done a really good job and everybody else thinks you're lousy," he added.
"You leave the racetrack feeling like you got all there was, but you finished 16th and you just can't get anything

"But, now, we have revisited and rebuilt every part of our program, everything from marketing and merchandising to shock expertise and chassis and bodies. For the most part, we've seen improvements in every Childress is a realist, though. He knows that a couple of bad races before the Chase could ruin a lot of good things that have happened this year. Still, he grinned when asked how big it would be for RCR to have two drivers in the playoff.

"It would be huge," Childress said.
"We've been in a rebuilding mode, a growth mode, since 2001.

"We're still not over the loss of Dale. We never will be, but it's one of those things you've just got to work past, and we're making progress."

Cowboys Training Camp

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A look at the Dallas Cowboys heading into training camp.

DALLAS (9-7) OPEN CAMP: July 28, Oxnard, Calif.

LAST YEAR: Nearly every game was decided in closing minutes, and all those close calls caught up to Bill Parcells' club. A 7-3 start gave way to 2-4 finish, leaving them out of playoffs for second time in Parcells' three seasons in Dallas.

IMPORTANT ADDITIONS: WR Terrell Owens, K Mike Vanderjagt, LG Kyle Kosier, LB Akin Ayodele, DB Marcus Coleman, RT Jason Fabini.

IMPORTANT LOSSES: LG Larry Allen, WR Keyshawn Johnson and DT La'Roi Glover were released. LB Dat Nguyen retired. TE Dan Campbell wasn't resigned and offensive play-caller Sean Payton became head coach in New Orleans. Campbell and Nguyen were team

CAMP NEEDS: Proof that Owens can fit in, or at least not be too much of a distraction. His relationship with QB Drew Bledsoe will be scrutinized, but how OL comes together without Allen could be biggest factor.

EXPECTATIONS: Dallas hasn't won playoff game in 10 years and is in tough division. Still, Jerry Jones was thinking Super Bowl when he took risk of signing T.O.

Texans Training Camp

HOUSTON (AP) — A look at the Houston Texans heading into training camp.

HOUSTON (2-14)

OPEN CAMP: July 28, Houston

LAST YEAR: After improving steadily in their first three seasons, the Texans sunk to 2-14, the worst record in the NFL and in the short history of the franchise last year. Houston opened the season 0-6 before beating Cleveland and then losing six more. The Texans got a win over the Arizona Cardinals and then lost their last two games.

IMPORTANT ADDITIONS: DE Mario Williams (No. 1 draft pick), WR Eric Moulds, LB DeMeco Ryans (secondround pick), DT Anthony Weaver, TE Jeb Putzier, new IMPORTANT LOSSES: DE Gary Walker, FS Marcus Coleman, backup QB Tony Banks.

CAMP NEEDS: New coach Gary Kubiak has had six months to assemble his staff and revamp his team, now it's time to see the group in action. Since they decided to keep David Carr, the first priority should be plugging in the right people to protect him _ a task the Texans have yet to master. They'll also be adjusting to the 4-3 defense after employing the 3-4 the franchise's first four seasons.

EXPECTATIONS: After last year's debacle, many don't know what to expect from Houston. But one thing fans will demand is an immediate contribution from Williams, after Houston passed on Reggie Bush. The team will almost certainly be better, but don't expect a miraculous one-year turnaround.

Ex-Pentagon officials accused of fraud

By DEBORAH HASTINGS AP National Writer

Two former Pentagon officials, including an acting secretary of the Navy, have been accused of scheming with a banned

American contractor to get lucrative rebuilding contracts in Iraq, The Associated Press has learned. The contracting firm, Custer Battles LLC, was suspended two years ago by the military for submitting millions of dollars in fake The charges come in a sealed federal lawsuit, a copy of which was obtained by The AP. It was filed by two whistleblowers one of whom won a $10 million judgment in another suit when a federal jury agreed that Custer Battles had swindled the government. The current suit names former acting Navy Secretary Hansford T. Johnson, former acting Navy Undersecretary Douglas Combs, and Custer Battles LLC officials including founders Scott Custer and Mike Battles, who were barred in 2004 after billing the government for work that was never done and for padding invoices by much as 100 percent.

Also named were six companies connected to the contracting firm, including Windmill International Ltd., a worldwide contractor run by Combs and Johnson, and a Romanian company, Danubia Global, which purchased Custer Battles in 2005.

The new lawsuit contends Custer and Battles, both Army veterans with Washington political connections, tried to get around the suspension order by plotting with Johnson and Combs "to set up sham companies (thereby) concealing their ownership and control of those entities."

According to the suit filed in Virginia, the shell companies committed other illegal acts, including selling weapons on the Iraqi black market, creating a dangerous possibility that "insurgents could buy them and use them to attack U.S. soldiers.

In both lawsuits, a plaintiff is former Custer Battles associate Robert Isakson. He is also a former FBI agent.

His $10 million judgment, won in March, is the first civil fraud verdict arising from the Iraq war. Isakson and a former associate contended Custer Battles created imaginary offshore companies that overcharged the Coalition Provisional Authority, which ran Iraq after the 2003 invasion, by as much as $50 million.

Isakson is joined in the current action by Rory Mayberry, a medic who said he was fired last year from a Custer Battles shell company after pointing out fraud. Under the federal False Claims Act, whistleblowers may file suits on behalf of the government and collect a portion of awarded damages.

Florida couple earns pretty penny from sale of rare coin

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Nowadays, pennies aren't even worth the metal they're made with. A rare few, however, can fetch 600 million times their worth.

Denis Loring and Donna Levin, of Singer Island, reaped a windfall from a copper 1792 penny the couple bought last year at a Beverly transaction. The couple took home Hills auction for $437,000.

Two months ago, the penny sold for a whopping $660,000 to "an East Coast energy company executive" who wished to remain anonymous, said Greg Rohan, president of Dallas-based Heritage Auction Galleries, which arranged the $60,000 commission.

The coin had originally been owned by descendants of Oliver Wolcott, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and Connecticut's governor in the 1790s.

The chocolate-colored rare coin, one of only nine known to exist,

> "As silly as it sounds, coins like this, you don't really ever own. You get to be a custodian," Loring said Friday. "It was here long before I was here, and it will be here long after I'm gone."

He said the new owner has a "multimillion-dollar coin collec-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, July

You will develop a greater sense of direction and knowledge this year. Do more listening than talking. As a Leo, this behavior might not be easy, but it's necessary. You will gain by detaching and centering. A low profile will work and will help you feel more in control. Come December, your life will take a major swing, and creativity and joy will earmark your days. If you are single, a new relationship heads your way that could be dynamic. In some form, this person could serve as a muse. If you' are attached, you add that old spunk and spark to your relationship. Take plenty of alone time together. CANCER reads you
