Former governor Ann Richards dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two years before she was elected governor of Texas, Ann Richards electrified the 1988 Democratic National Convention with a keynote speech in which she joked that the Republican presidential nominee, George H.W. Bush, had been "born with a silver foot in his mouth."

A longtime champion of women and minorities in government who was serving at the time as Texas state treasurer, she won cheers when she reminded delegates that Ginger Rogers did everything Fred Astaire did, "only backwards and in high heels."

Richards died Wednesday at 73 after a battle with esophageal cancer. Her single term as governor had ended in a 1994 defeat to George W. Bush, who went from besting his father's silver-haired critic to the governor's office to the presidency.

"Texas has lost one of its great daughters," President Bush said in statement after learning of Richards' death.

A homemaker before she entered politics, Richards cracked a half-century male grip on the governor's mansion and celebrated by holding up a T-shirt that showed the state Capitol and read: "A woman's place is in the dome."

She told an interviewer shortly before leaving office, "I did not want my tombstone to read, 'She kept a really clean house.' I think I'd like them to remember me by saying, 'She opened government to everyone.'"

Whether or not she succeeded at that, there was no question she cracked open the door.

Bush meets with GOP; Powell opposes interrogation plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Colin Powell endorsed efforts to block President Bush's plan to authorize harsh interrogations of terror suspects, even as Bush lobbied personally for it today on Capitol Hill.

"I will resist any bill that does not enable this plan to go forward," Bush told reporters back at the White House after his meeting with lawmakers.

The latest sign of GOP division over White House security policy came today in a letter that Powell sent to Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., one of three rebellious senators taking on the White House. Powell said Congress must not pass Bush's proposal to redefine U.S. compliance with the Geneva Conventions, a treaty that sets international standards for the treatment of prisoners of war.

The campaign-season development accompanied Bush's visit to Capitol Hill, where he conferred behind closed doors with House Republicans. His plan would narrow the U.S. legal interpretation of the Geneva Conventions treaty in a bid to allow tougher interrogations and shield U.S. personnel from being prosecuted for war crimes.

"The world is beginning to doubt the moral basis of our fight against terrorism," said Powell, who served under Bush and is a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "To redefine Common Article 3 would add to those doubts. Furthermore, it would put our own troops at risk."

Republican dissatisfaction with the administration's security proposals is becoming more prominent as the midterm election season has arrived. The Bush White House wants Congress to approve greater executive power to spy on, imprison and interrogate terrorism suspects.

Leaving his closed-door meeting with the House GOP caucus, Bush said he would "continue to work with members of the Congress to get good legislation."

"I reminded them that the most important job of government is to protect the homeland," he told reporters after the session. Bush was accompanied to the Hill by Vice President Dick Cheney and White House adviser Karl Rove.

In an effort to drum up support for its proposal, the White House released a second letter to lawmakers signed by the military's top uniformed lawyers. Saying they wanted to "clarify" past testimony on Capitol Hill in which they opposed the administration's plan, the service lawyers wrote that they "do not object" to sections of Bush's proposal for the treatment of detainees and found the provisions "helpful."

Two congressional aides who favor McCain's plan said the military lawyers signed that letter after refusing to endorse an earlier one offered by the Pentagon's general counsel, William Haynes, that expressed more forceful support for Bush's plan.

The aides spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the matter publicly. Asked if Haynes had encouraged them to write the letter, Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said, "Not that I'm aware of."

Bush was forced to propose the measure after the Supreme Court ruled in June that his existing court system established to prosecute terrorism suspects was illegal and violated the Geneva Conventions. The White House legislation would create military commissions to prosecute terror suspects, as well as redefine acts that constitute war crimes.

For Bush, the election season visit capped a week of high-profile administration pressure to rescue bills mired in turf battles and privacy concerns. It also gave GOP leaders a chance to press for loyalty among Republicans confronted on the campaign trail by war-weary voters.

County

2007. The 2006 county budget was $9,127,934, and the proposed 2007 budget totals $10,078,024, reflecting increased operating costs of various county departments, said County Judge Richard Peet.

The $729,721 difference between the proposed budget and proposed tax rate collection total could be taken from the county's projected $2.1 million which will be left over after this fiscal year ends Sept. 30, Peet said.

That would leave approximately $1.42 million in reserve funds, enough for a three-month cushion, Peet said. The county currently requires about $500,000 per month to meet expenses such as bills and salaries.

Three items of old business are once again on the agenda. They are amendments to the Gray County Personnel Policy Manual, updates to the Clyde Carruth Pavilion Rental Agreement, and the county's hazard mitigation plan.

A request from Wheeler County will be heard concerning having Gray County take over the salary and benefits package of a paralegal in the district attorney's office.

Commissioners will vote on whether to declare a Caterpillar 120 in Precinct 2 as surplus property.

Other agenda items include payment of bills and salaries, and the county treasurer's report.

funded in part from the water bill donation fund and the board recommended where it might best be spent.

Stokes said the board was also good about keeping the staff informed concerning broken or damaged equipment in the parks.

Horst said disbanding the board doesn't mean citizens couldn't make recommendations to the city.

"Citizens can still do that," Horst said. "I get calls regularly on various problems. Even without the board, citizens can still make recommendations."

While the advisory board was discussed, no action was taken.

Van Os

Van Os said the last time he was in Pampa, it was to represent Clifford Martindale in a civil matter case in Judge Lee Waters' 223rd District Court about 10 years ago.

Martindale and Waters were the only two to greet Van Os at the courthouse this morning.

Van Os' stop in Pampa today was the 185th stop in his planned campaign to visit each of the state's 254 counties. He's filing a promise of his intentions if elected attorney general at each county seat.

Two new solar panels unfurled on space station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA unfurled two solar wings on the new 17 1/2-ton addition to the international space station early today after overcoming a software problem that delayed the maneuver for hours.

As they opened separately like accordion window blinds, the solar wings looked like cosmic blankets of gold bars in the reflection of an orbital sunrise.

"Big day for space station. Congratulations," astronaut Pam Melroy in Mission Control radioed Atlantis commander Brent Jett. "We're all extremely happy."

The astronauts had adjusted the space station's position before starting, then halted each deployment midway for about 30 minutes so the solar panels could be heated by the sun to prevent them from sticking together, a problem astronauts have encountered before.

NASA engineers ran into one early glitch with the space station's new ferris-wheel-like rotating joint that allows the solar arrays to move with the sun to maximize the amount of power generated. They were able to fix the software problem, but it put the day's activities several hours behind schedule.

Space shuttle Atlantis' 11-day schedule is tightly packed, and the arrays needed to be deployed in order for astronauts to go on the third and final spacewalk of the mission Friday. The mission is the first since late 2002 to resume space station construction, which was halted after the Columbia accident in early 2003.

Museum expanding months before opening

Months before its anticipated completion, founders of a museum currently under construction in Ohio are already gearing up for an expansion project. The budding museum, located near Cincinnati, was dreamed up, reports AgapePress in a recent article, by Answers in Genesis.

Answers in Genesis, or AiG, chose, correctly enough, Creationism as the museum's main theme.

In its article, Agape cites AiG President Ken Ham as describing response to the project as overwhelming. So overwhelming that AiG has decided to expand the museum's parking area, restaurant and lobby or face woefully inadequate facilities for the current projected number of visitors.

The museum, to be called simply "Creation Museum," is expected to open as early as April.

What a great idea, and what a great place to take the family!

Creation Museum will take visitors through a number of exhibits, the largest of which is "the Wonders Room." "Creation Walk and Valley" are also among the museum's featured attractions.

AiG's Web site (www.answersingenesis.org) provides an illustration by Jon Taylor, museum illustrator, of the aforementioned Walk and Valley: "This will be an exciting area of the museum," the Web site states, "housing many of Buddy Davis' dinosaurs in an environment so natural that guests may think they are actually outside! The exhibit team is still working on the details for these exhibits, which will represent the events of Genesis 2-4.

"Guests will enter the path after walking through a dramatic portrayal of the six days of creation ... The exciting events of Adam's first day of life — naming of the animals, creation of Eve — will unfold in life-sized dioramas re-creating (on a much smaller scale!) the Garden of Eden."

In the Agape article, Ham reports that funding for the museum is on schedule, noting that AiG only lacks $2 million on the original budget and another $2 million for the proposed expansion.

According to the Web site, AiG defines itself as "an apologetics (i.e., Christianity-defending) ministry, dedicated to enabling Christians to defend their faith, and to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ effectively. We focus particularly on providing answers to questions surrounding the book of Genesis, as it is the most-attacked book of the Bible. We also desire to train others to develop a biblical worldview, and seek to expose the bankruptcy of evolutionary ideas, and its bedfellow, a 'millions of years old' earth (and even older universe)."

I say, build on, AiG.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 14, the 257th day of 2006. There are 108 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 14, 1814, Francis Scott Key was inspired to write his poem "The Star-Spangled Banner" after witnessing the British bombardment of Fort Mchenry in Maryland during the War of 1812.

On this date:

In 1812, the Russians set fire to Moscow in the face of an invasion by Napoleon Bonaparte's troops.

In 1901, President McKinley died in Buffalo, N.Y., of gunshot wounds inflicted by an assassin. Vice President Theodore Roosevelt succeeded him.

In 1927, modern dance pioneer Isadora Duncan died in Nice, France, when her scarf became entangled in a wheel of her sports car.

In 1948, a groundbreaking ceremony took place in New York at the site of the United Nations' world headquarters.

In 1959, the Soviet space probe Luna 2 became the first man-made object to reach the moon as it crashed onto the lunar surface.

In 1964, Pope Paul VI opened the third session of the Second Ecumenical Council of the Vatican, also known as "Vatican Two." (The session closed two months later.)

In 1975, Pope Paul VI declared Mother Elizabeth Ann Bayley Seton the first U.S.-born saint.

In 1982, Princess Grace of Monaco, formerly actress Grace Kelly, died at age 52 of injuries from a car crash the day before.

In 1982, Lebanon's president-elect, Bashir Gemayel, was killed by a bomb.

In 1985, Shiite Muslim kidnappers in Lebanon released the Rev. Benjamin Weir after holding him captive for 16 months.

Ten years ago: Bosnians went to the polls in their first national elections since the 3 1/2-year civil war that had ravaged the Balkan republic. Tara Dawn Holland of Kansas was crowned Miss America.

Five years ago: Patriotism mixed with prayer as Americans packed churches and clogged public squares on a day of remembrance for the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks. President Bush prayed with his Cabinet and attended services at Washington National Cathedral, then flew to New York, where he waded into the ruins of the World Trade Center and addressed rescue workers in a flag-waving, bullhorn-wielding show of resolve.

One year ago: Coordinated bombings killed at least 160 in Baghdad, the deadliest attack since Iraq's new government took office in April 2005.

'Civilizations die from philosophical calm, irony, and the sense of fair play quite as surely as they die of debauchery.'

Learning the 'networking' terminology

If you've ever been around a computer geek very long, no doubt you've heard one of the following terms: network, Internet, Intranet, LAN, WAN, Client/Server, etc. But what do they mean? (In normal English!)

Let's start at the very beginning. A "network" is simply two or more computers connected together so that they can communicate. On a typical network, information and printers can be shared by any of the connected computers.

Two basic types of networks exist: "peer-to-peer" and "client/server." A peer-to-peer network is the most simple and basic network design. Let's say you work in a small office with three computers and two printers. You want everyone in the office to be able to access information on the other computers and also be able to print on any of the printers. Setting up a small peer-to-peer network will meet that need.

To do so, you will need to buy a network interface card (sometimes called a NIC) for each computer. They run about $15 (or free with some rebates). Next, visit your local computer store and get some networking cable. Run it around to each computer, plugging it into the NICs. Windows and Macintosh computers already come with the software necessary to make the connection. Decide who needs access to what, grant privileges to different devices and information, and then sit back.

I know I wasn't too specific on the "how to's," but each operating system comes with instructions on the actual implementation of the network. As homeowners buy multiple computers, more and more non-business peer-to-peer networks are popping up all over the place.

Client/server networks are for larger organizations. If your company has four or more computers that need to be connected, you might want to consider a client/server setup.

Here's why: Once your peer-to-peer network grows beyond three computers, much of your mission-critical information begins to migrate to one PC. It just makes sense. You want all of your important information on one PC so that everyone can find it and so that it can be backed up much easier. Well, if you have three, four or six machines all trying to access one PC, that poor PC will slow down to unusable levels. Enter, the server!

The server is a normal computer with special software (server software, to be exact). This software makes it easy and efficient for numerous PCs to simultaneously access the information on the server. A server usually sits in a closet somewhere. No one actually sits down and types on it since that would slow it down for everyone else. A server's job is to simply divvy out information to all the other PCs, known as "clients."

If you are interested in setting up a client/server system in your office, you might want to contract the work out. Configuring server software is not for the technologically timid. Usually, you will have three choices in server software: Windows Server (http://www.microsoft.com/server), Novell Netware (http://www.novell.com), and Linux (http://www.linux.org).

I listed them in order of "ease of use." If you want to try your hand at administering your network, go with Microsoft. Only computer gurus should attempt to use Linux.

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ Sept. 4

San Antonio Express-News on lenders and the military:

The Pentagon has discovered something that Texans already knew: Unscrupulous lenders are targeting the military community.

A recent Defense Department report estimates 17 percent of military personnel use payday loans. The average loan amount is $350, typically due in 14 days, for which borrowers pay an effective annual interest rate of between 390 percent and 780 percent.

The report is filled with accounts of military personnel who, unable to repay such loans on time, fall into an accelerating cycle of debt. In one case, an airman took out a payday loan for $500 with an agreement to pay back $600 in two weeks. Unable to do so, the total payments after more loans and rollovers reached $12,750.

The Pentagon says predatory lending is undermining military readiness, harming morale of troops and adding to the cost of fielding an all-volunteer military. Among Navy personnel, for instance, financial problems account for 80 percent of security clearance revocations and denials.

In 2005, the Texas Legislature passed a bill prohibiting lenders from garnishing military paychecks and preventing collection efforts against military members or their spouses while they are on combat deployment.

Now the Defense Department is asking for help from Congress. It wants a cap of 36 percent on annual interest rates for loans made to military borrowers. U.S. Sen. Jim Talent, R-Mo., and Bill Nelson, D-Fla., added the cap in an amendment to the defense bill passed by the Senate in June.

The amendment and the bill are currently bottled up in a House-Senate conference committee. Meanwhile, the payday loan industry has well-heeled lobbyists working the Capitol's corridors.

All low-income workers, not just military personnel, are potential victims of predatory lending. But it's particularly galling that individuals who have volunteered to wear the uniform should be abused in this way.

Capping payday interest rates at 36 percent is a small way to protect the wallets of men and women defending the nation.

Canada: Shooting leaves 19 wounded

MONTREAL (AP) — A man with a black trench coat whose shooting rampage in a Montreal college killed one person and wounded 19 others before he was slain by police said on a Web site in his name that his favorite Internet game was about the Columbine shootings.

The gunman who opened fire at Dawson College on Wednesday was Kimveer Gill, 25, of Laval, near Montreal, a police official said Thursday, speaking on condition of anonymity because authorities were not ready to announce it publicly yet.

Six victims remained in critical condition, including two in extremely critical condition.

The official said police had searched Gill's home.

In postings on a Web site called VampireFreaks.com, blogs in Gill's name show more than 50 photos depicting the young man in various poses holding a rifle and donning a long black trench coat and combat boots.

One photo has a tombstone with his name printed on it — below it the phrase: "Lived fast died young. Left a mangled corpse."

The last of six journal entries Wednesday was posted at 10:41 a.m., about two hours before the gunman was shot to death after the college shooting.

He said on the site that he liked to play "Super Columbine Massacre," an Internet-based computer game that simulated the April 20, 1999, shootings at the Colorado high school by two of its students that left 13 people dead.

'Before our technique was to establish a perimeter around the place and wait for the SWAT team. Now the first police officers go right inside. The way they acted saved lives.'

— Yvan Delorme
Montreal police chief

Montreal Police Chief Yvan Delorme said the lessons learned from other mass shootings had taught police to try to stop such assaults as quickly as possible.

"Before our technique was to establish a perimeter around the place and wait for the SWAT team. Now the first police officers go right inside. The way they acted saved lives," he said.

Witnesses said Gill started shooting outside the college, then entered the second-floor cafeteria and opened fire without uttering a word. At times, he hid behind vending machines before emerging to take aim — at one point at a teenager who tried to photograph him with his cell phone.

Police dismissed suggestions that terrorism played a role in the lunch-hour attack.

The gunman opened fire haphazardly at no target in particular, until he saw the police and took aim at them, Delorme said.

Police hid behind a wall as they exchanged fire with the gunman, whose back was against a vending machine, said student Andrea Barone, who was in the cafeteria. He said the officers proceeded cautiously because many students were trapped around the assailant, who yelled "Get back! Get back!" every time an officer tried to move closer.

Eventually, Barone said, the gunman went down in a hail of gunfire.

Delorme said some officers were at the school on an unrelated matter when the shooting erupted. He said reinforcements rushed to the scene and took part in the shooting.

Scores of students fled into the streets after the shooting began. Some had clothes stained with blood; others cried and clung to each other. Two nearby shopping centers and a daycare center also were evacuated and subway service was disrupted.

"I was terrified. The guy was shooting at people randomly. He didn't care, he was just shooting at everybody," said student Devansh Smri Vastava. "There were cops firing. It was so crazy."

Three other terms you need to know: LAN, WAN, and MAN. All three are acronyms. LAN is short for "Local Area Network."

Whenever a computer is connected to a network that consists of computers in one office or building, they are said to be "on the LAN."

WAN is short for "Wide Area Network." WANs typically connect LANs over long distances. For instance, XYZ Corp. has offices in Los Angeles, New York and Amarillo. Each office has their own LAN. These LANs are connected to each other to create a WAN.

The term, MAN, is relatively new. It stands for "Metropolitan Area Network." Typically installed by large cities, MANs connect multiple businesses in an area to foster electronic commerce. MANs are usually funded by tax dollars and administered by city employees.

That leaves us with the last three terms you've probably heard banded about: Internet, Intranet and the newest one: Extranet. We've all heard of the "Internet."

Essentially, the Internet is the largest public WAN on the planet. Anyone can connect to it. Today, most companies have set up Intranets. A company "Intranet" operates just like it's older brother, but is only accessible by employees of the company. Large corporations are putting employee handbooks, policy manuals and other resources on their Intranets, instead of printing them.

An "Extranet" is simply a multi-company Intranet. Certain vendors and suppliers might set up extranets with their customers to facilitate product ordering. Off-limits to you and I, these networks exist on the Internet, but are only accessible by certain companies.

Over the next few years, networks will change. Look for data to merge with video and voice. Your computer, telephone and television may someday be the same device ...

One final note: All of the vocabulary terms you saw mentioned in this article are clearly defined at one of my favorite Web sites: WhatIs? (<http://www.whatis.com>). See you in Cyberspace!

Bat tours offered this month

QUITAQUE — Caprock Canyons State Park and Trailway is offering tours to view the bat emergence flight from Clarity Tunnel through the end of this month.

September is the last month that tours will be offered because the bats will begin their winter migration to Mexico in October.

Clarity Tunnel is an abandoned railway tunnel on the Caprock Canyons Trailway, which is home to about half-a-million Mexican free-tailed bats each summer.

During these guided vehicle tours along the Trailway, visitors view the bat emergence flight and enjoy spectacular views of the rugged and beautiful breaks of the Llano Estacado.

Tours are conducted each Friday evening and they take about 4 hours to complete. Reservations are required due to limited space in the Park van. Call (806) 455-1492 for reservations.

Reservations may also be made in the Park Headquarters office until 12 p.m. the day of the tour. Fees are $10 per adult, $7.50 for seniors (65 and over), and $5 for children (12 and under).

For more information, call (806) 455-1140 or (806) 455-1492.

Economy: August retail sales weakest in two months

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales in August posted the weakest showing in two months as worried consumers tightened their spending habits.

The Commerce Department reported that the nation's retailers saw a tiny 0.2 percent increase last month following a much bigger 1.4 percent rise in July. It was the weakest performance since sales had actually fallen by 0.5 percent in June.

Much of the August weakness reflected a sharp slowdown in auto sales, which edged up just 0.4 percent last month after having surged by 4.3 percent in July.

In another report, the Labor

Department said that the number of Americans filing claims for unemployment benefits fell to 308,000 last week, down by 5,000 from the previous week. The drop pushed claims to a seven-week low.

The tiny 0.2 percent rise in retail sales was slightly better than analysts had been expecting. They were forecasting an outright decline in sales of 0.1 percent.

Consumer spending, which has been the driving force in this economic expansion, slowed dramatically in the spring as consumers were battered by soaring gasoline prices, rising interest rates and a cooling housing market, which made homeowners feel less prosperous and less inclined to spend money.

The overall economy grew at an annual rate of just 2.9 percent in the April-June quarter after turning in a sizzling pace of 5.3 percent in the first three months of the year.

While the sharp slowdown had raised concerns of a possible recession, economists have grown less concerned about that possibility because of a retreat in oil prices, which have declined significantly from their mid-July highs.

CPS works to protect children

The mission of the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services is to protect children, the elderly and people with disabilities from abuse, neglect and exploitation by working with clients, families and communities.

The purpose of Child Protective Services is to protect children and to act in their best interests.

Through this program, the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services focuses on children and their families and seeks active involvement of the children's parents and other family members to solve problems that lead to abuse or neglect.

CPS staff understands the need for preventive and supportive services that originate from community involvement in the protection of children. They are committed to the development of resources and agreements to help families before abuse and neglect occur.

They work cooperatively with other department programs, other state and local agencies, the private child welfare sector and the voluntary sector. Without community assistance and support, CPS would have a difficult time serving the families and children of Gray County.

Everyone can make a difference in the life of a child who is being abused or neglected. If you suspect a child is a victim of abuse or neglect, contact the statewide hotline at 1-800-252-5400.

Together we can make it our joint mission to protect the unprotected.

People in the news

MOSCOW (AP) — Madonna will not be sent into space, despite a lawmaker's proposal to book a seat for the pop star on a Russian flight to the international space station.

State Duma member Alexei Mitrofanov, referring to Madonna's reported desire to become a "space tourist," proposed that the lower house of parliament send a formal inquiry to the Russian space agency about organizing a space trip for her in 2008.

"Because of the television possibilities, it would be a pretty serious event in the year of elections in the United States and Russia," he was quoted as saying by the RIA-Novosti news agency.

The Duma turned down the proposal, agencies reported Wednesday without specifying the vote tally.

Later, space agency spokesman Igor Panarin was quoted by RIA-Novosti as saying no seats on the Soyuz spacecraft would be available until 2009.

"Taking into account her good physical preparedness and financial capabilities, the dream of (Madonna) Louise Ciccone of a space flight could be realized in 2009," Panarin was quoted as saying.

Like many Russians, he didn't use the 48-year-old pop singer's first name, apparently sensitive to the Russian Orthodox Church's objections to her use of religious imagery, especially crucifixion, in her "Confessions" world tour performances.

Madonna took the stage at Luzhniki Stadium on Tuesday night, where a crowd of about 35,000 watched her perform in spite of religious protesters' threats to disrupt the concert. No disorder was reported.

Three private individuals have paid a reported $20 million each to be launched on 10-day trips to the international space station. American Anousheh Ansari is to become the fourth — and the first female — in a Sept. 18 launch.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Vince Gill and Jimmy Webb have unveiled a song touting Oklahoma's "guts, grace and mercy" as the state nears its 2007 centennial.

They premiered "Oklahoma Rising" in a performance at the Civic Center Music Hall that opened with the Rodgers and Hammerstein classic "Oklahoma!" — the state song.

Gill wrote the music and Webb wrote the lyrics for the song, which will be used during the centennial celebration in 2007, said Lee Allan Smith, chairman of Centennial Projects and Events.

The 100th anniversary of the state's admission to the union is Nov. 16, 2007.

Joining Webb and Gill at Monday's performance were Mohican Indian Bill Miller, the Ambassadors and the Canterbury Choral Society. Gospel singer Sandi Patty and the Rev. Joe Bias of First United Methodist Church in Tulsa also performed.

Gill said he found the music easy to write. "Jimmy's music comes easily, and he makes such pretty pictures," he said.

Webb, 60, and Gill, 49, have known each other for years, but this marks their first professional collaboration.

Gill is a Norman native who grew up in Oklahoma City. His hits include "When I Call Your Name," "Don't Let Our Love Start Slippin' Away" and "I Still Believe in You."

Webb, a native of Elk City who grew up in Laverne, has hits including "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," recorded by Glen Campbell, "Up, Up and Away" (The Fifth Dimension) and "MacArthur Park" (Richard Harris).

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paul Rodriguez has settled a lawsuit accusing his former manager of forging his signature to gain ownership of the film "The Original Latin Kings of Comedy," then striking a deal with a major studio, a judge said.

The lawsuit alleged that Scott Montoya and his company, Payaso Entertainment, forged the comedian's signature on a contract and then entered a deal with Paramount Pictures to distribute the film.

The lawsuit alleges the forgery and resulting deal were done after the two men had agreed in 2001 to split profits from the movie, which also starred Cheech Marin and George Lopez.

The allegedly bogus deal with Paramount would have given Montoya, who was hired in 1997, control of the production and made Rodriguez simply an "employee," the suit said.

Rodriguez said in court documents he found out about the alleged forgery in October, 2004. He was seeking $1 million.

"The entire action has been settled and dismissed," Superior Court Judge Susan Bryant-Deason said in court documents. The trial had been set to begin next week.

Calls made after business hours Wednesday to attorneys for Rodriguez and Montoya were not immediately returned.

The lawsuit alleges the forgery and resulting deal were done after the two men had agreed in 2001 to split profits from the movie, which also starred Cheech Marin and George Lopez.

Later, space agency spokesman Igor Panarin was quoted by RIA-Novosti as saying no seats on the Soyuz spacecraft would be available until 2009.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, my husband and I had to go back to our home state for a family funeral. We have been married more than 25 years. While we were there, his ex-wife came to his father's home (we were staying there), and later to the visitation and funeral. She and I seemed to hit it off well. On the way home, my hubby told me she waited until I left the room, then kissed him on the cheek in front of the whole family and told him she still loves him. That's not all. I asked him if, for one minute, he was sorry he had married me. He said, and I quote, "No, but if I had known she still loved me, I would have never remarried." I was crushed. After we got home he told me he would not leave me for her, but if I should die before him, he would be knocking on her door. That also hurt. Abby, she hadn't seen him or anyone else in the family for 25 years! Why would she even show up at the funeral if not for wanting to see if she could get back with him? I can't seem to get over the feeling that my husband never was really in love with me -- that maybe he just married me so he would not be alone. What should I do? Should I even bring this subject up to him again? It has been five months and I am ... BROKENHEARTED IN FLORIDA

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Your husband appears to lack sensitivity, good judgment and empathy for the feelings of others. He also appears to lack common sense, if he expected you would not take his comments personally. I don't think raising the subject would get you the result you are looking for. But my advice is not to obsess about this. It's water under the bridge, and possession is nine points of the law. Besides, women have a longer life expectancy than men, so the odds are in your favor.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about the letter you printed from "Wondering," whose parents don't want her to attend the same college as her brother. I think her parents should allow her to go to the same college. She will have completely different experiences than her brother -- joining different clubs, playing different sports. If her major is different, she won't even have the same classes that he does. Her college life will be entirely different because each person gets out of the experience what he or she puts into it. Also, I do not understand her parents' statement that she look elsewhere because she has "followed her brother" through school. If they lived in the same house, then they would've attended the same schools in their district. -- PAULA IN WENONAH, N.J.

DEAR PAULA: I told "Wondering" that her parents appeared to be intelligent people, sensitive to the needs of both of their offspring, and that having a college experience entirely on her own could be a growth opportunity for her. My reasoning was as follows: The parents know her and her brother well, their personalities, their strengths and their weaknesses. It is possible that the son has always been a "big man on campus," and "Wondering" has coasted along in his reflected glory. Or, if the reverse is true -- and the girl has always outshone her brother -- then the young man should not have to be overshadowed once again by his sibling at the same college. That said, not one reader I heard from -- and I heard from quite a few -- agreed with my answer. Ouch!

Pampa High tennis team wraps preseason; Green and Gold Tournament under way

The Harvester tennis team wrapped up the preseason with a loss to Tascosa at the Austin Tennis Complex in Amarillo. Coach Emily Laurence said afterward, "This was definitely a hard preseason schedule but we saw the benefits in our match against Tascosa. Although the scores aren't very impressive, the play of the team was." She added, "For the most part, everyone competed hard and played good tennis against good players."

Next on the schedule for the Harvesters is this week's annual Green and Gold Tournament. Every year the team is divided into two teams and they go through a week of competitions before the tournament on Saturday.

During the tournament, each player must find a doubles partner from the community and matches are played with lunch being served by the booster club.

Pampa will open the district season Tuesday by hosting Dumas. Coach Laurence encourages all Harvester fans to wish the team luck as they "Return to Dominance."

Easy's Pop Shop offers free drinks to F-5 winners

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Though I doubt stretch limos and Hollywood premieres are anywhere in our future, I am constantly amazed at the number of people who keep tabs on just how the Fantastic Five are performing week by week.

While standing at the north end of Harvester Field Friday night in anticipation of Pampa giving me a touchdown photo opportunity, I had two people come up to me and say, "You know, if you had taken TCU (who beat Baylor in week one), you would have been 18-1."

I get e-mails from people who either want to see me stay out front, or attempt to cast spells on me with demonic text messages, most likely the bidding of my fellow pickers, though jealous they may be.

Now comes word that a well known Pampa icon wants to raise the stakes by tossing a weekly bone onto the F-5 table. According to Donny Hooper, Easy's Pop Shop has offered to reward each week's winner with a virtual bottomless cup of his favorite fountain drink for a week.

Offer accepted.

So now there is more to play for than just bragging rights.

Go ahead Shane Stokes, enjoy your soda. Drink up. That is, if your conscience will let you (16-4).

Let the burping begin.

A shocking departure for Woods

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Unbeatable for two months, Tiger Woods' winning streak came to a swift and sudden conclusion today when Shaun Micheel knocked him out in the first round of the World Match Play Championship.

Woods had a 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole to keep alive his slim hopes, but he removed his cap and walked over to shake hands with Micheel as the ball was still rolling left of the cup. The score was 4 and 3, matching Woods' worst loss in match play.

"I don't think you're ever excited when you've lost," Woods said.

It's been a long time since he has.

His winning streak began about four hours away at Hoylake, where Woods won the British Open won the British Open for the first of five straight victories that restored some of his mystique. That meant nothing to Micheel, who was runner-up by five shots to Woods at the PGA Championship last month, but was hardly fazed on a cloudy afternoon outside London.

After falling behind on the first hole of the 36-hole match, Micheel won four straight holes in the morning to build a lead that he never gave up. Woods won the first two holes in the afternoon to cut the lead to one hole, but he missed an 8-foot birdie putt on the par-5 fourth — a recurring theme — and failed to win another hole until it was time to leave.

And he had plenty of company.

Jim Furyk, who rose to No. 2 in the world ranking by winning the Canadian Open on Sunday, got hammered by Robert Karlsson of Sweden, 6 and 4, highlighting a first round in which six of the higher seeds were beaten.

But the biggest to fall was Woods.

He was the overwhelming favorite in the HSBC World Match Play Championship, which set a record for advance ticket sales with the No. 1 player in the world competing for the first time in eight years. The fans were packed around every green and rushed from hole to hole with their umbrellas, although this isn't what they came to watch.

Micheel is No. 77 in the world rankings, and he hasn't won a tournament since capturing the '03 PGA Championship at Oak Hill. But he looked solid from the start, rarely missing the green and holing enough par putts that Woods couldn't make up any ground.

"Anybody can beat anybody on any given day out here," said Colin Montgomerie, a 1-up winner over David Howell. "And that's what is happening today."

Even so, Montgomerie walked into the press center for his interview in time to see Micheel make a 10-foot eagle putt on the 12th hole to go 4 up with six holes to play, and he watch on just as stunned as everyone else.

Woods looked bewildered on the greens, badly missing putts on the low side of the hole as he struggled to find the right speed.

"I just had a hard time with my pace, and if you have a hard time with your pace, it's hard to read greens," Woods said. "It got a little better in the afternoon on the back nine, but by then it was already too late."

Woods also lost 4 and 3 to Darren Clarke in the 36-hole final of the Accenture Match Play Championship in California six years ago.

The winning streak had been the longest of his career.

Woods won six straight PGA Tour events at the end of 1999 and the start of 2000, but he finished sixth in the Johnnie Walker Classic in the middle of that run. He will try to match that tour streak in two weeks at the American Express Championship outside London.

Next up is the Ryder Cup in Ireland, and Thursday was an ominous sign for a U.S. team that has lost four of the last five times. Woods and Furyk, the top two Americans and likely partners at The K Club, both were beaten badly.

The U.S. team is to arrive in Dublin on Monday, and it wasn't clear whether Woods and Furyk would stick around the British Isles for the next four days or go home.

"Good question," Woods said. "Right now I'll probably go work out and get some of this frustration out."

Furyk didn't have much of a chance against Karlsson, who will be making his Ryder Cup debut.

The Swede tied a tournament record by making four birdies on the par 3s in the morning round, leading by as many as six holes while shooting 64. He cooled slightly in the afternoon, but by then the lead was too much for Furyk to overcome.

Micheel shot 70 in the morning and was 3 under through 15 holes in the afternoon — not the best golf of the first round, but more than enough. Woods needed to birdie the 18th hole in the morning for a 72; only Simon Khan (74) had a worse score.

Even so, Woods had two good chances to get back into the match. Both times, his putter failed him.

In the morning, he had putts inside 18 feet on five consecutive holes for the win, but missed them all. And after winning the first two holes in the afternoon to cut the deficit to one hole, he chipped weakly to 8 feet on the par-5 fourth and badly missed his birdie putt. Micheel two-putted for birdie from 60 feet to go 2 up, then restored his lead with an 8-iron into 3 feet on the seventh.

His departure was a big surprise, but only the corporate sponsor was shedding tears.

"It makes our job a lot easier," Michael Campbell said after a 3-and-1 victory over Khan.

Campbell, the No. 1 seed as defending champion, and Luke Donald (No. 7) were the only top seeds to advance in the 16-man field that is chasing the $1.87 million prize, the richest among official golf tournaments. Donald went 36 holes before beating Tim Clark.

"I think we lose some TV ratings," Paul Casey said after whipping Retief Goosen.

Goosen was among a trio of South Africans sent packing, although one of them, Ernie Els, didn't have to travel far.

 Yesterday's Cryptoquote: IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED, YOU MAY BE AT YOUR LEVEL OF INCOMPETENCE ALREADY. — LAURENCE PETER

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Sept. 15, 2006:
 You have much more going for you this year than in the past. You zero in on what you want, making many of your hopes a reality. You might, at times, have an issue with a roommate or a real estate matter. These areas of your life will not flow as well as you might like. You will often need to stop and think about your choices. If you are single, you will head in a new direction. A friendship could be pivotal to a budding romance. If you are attached, join friends and go out and create much more of what you want. CANCER cheers you on.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
  Others want to belong or to be part of what is happening. You will not take being left out well at all. You know how to "Ram" your way in. That is exactly what you do. Oddly enough, someone stands up to you. Tonight: Learn that you cannot control anyone but yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
  Express yourself. You don't always need to rely on words. Often actions work just as well and draw a similar if not stronger reaction. Work with a controlling or difficult associate. You can make peace. Tonight: Why not accept different opinions?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
  You might want to indulge, despite logic and a recent discussion about self-discipline. Might you be surprised that a partner overreacts? Work with others, building security on the home front. Know what you want. Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
  You have far more influence than you realize. You might want to rethink a personal matter more carefully. You might need to step back, as you are unusually tired and drawn. Let your routine slide, for now. Tonight: What would put a smile on your face?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
  Keeping certain facts to yourself proves to be wiser than you know. Others express optimism and the ability to share. A risk could be a definite no-no, no matter what you decide to do or who you decide to be with. Play it calm. Yes, it could be hard. Tonight: Play it low-key.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
  You aim for much more than normal. You can pull white rabbits out of black hats. Use your innate luck to bring happiness to those around you. In fact, a spontaneous party could be right up your alley. Tonight: Find the gang.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
  You can assume what you feel is your rightful role of leader. You might like being pivotal, but you will need to choose your words more carefully. Someone easily could be out of sorts. You have precision on your side. Avoid becoming too picky. Tonight: Take charge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
  If you hang in the emotional, intuitive space you understand so well, events will fall into time. Your sixth sense works overtime and, at the moment, is lucky for you. Still, curb all money risking, for your sake. Tonight: Take in a movie.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
  Though you might not always have an easy time putting your best foot forward, do so today, especially when dealing with an important associate. You could be put off by a boss or someone who thinks he or she is in charge. Tonight: Enjoy a special person in your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
  Others run with the ball, but never fear, you will not be forgotten. You will accomplish much more than you thought possible. Sort through special invitations. Don't make anything harder than it needs to be. Tonight: Say yes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
  You might be very enthusiastic. This energy is contagious, with perhaps the exception of a friend who does bah humbug. You don't have to go overboard, but it is certainly your time to relax and regroup. Tonight: Easy does it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
  You have the energy and savoir-faire to accomplish whatever you want whenever you desire it. This positive attitude goes far in creating more of what you want. Romance knocks on single's doors. Children might play an important role. Tonight: Have fun.
