Tampering not suspected in E. coli tainted spinach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tampering is not suspected in an outbreak of E. coli linked to fresh spinach, federal health officials said today as they continue to probe the source of the contamination and warned consumers to continue to avoid fresh spinach products.

The Food and Drug Administration has linked a California company's fresh spinach to the outbreak, which has killed one person and sickened at least 109 others. Investigators are working to pinpoint the source of the bacteria. Possible sources include contaminated irrigation "At this time we have no evidence supporting tampering," FDA spokeswoman Susan Bro said.

Bro also dismissed a claim by Natural Selection Foods LLC, the country's largest grower of organic produce, that its organic spinach products had been cleared of suspicion. "The FDA has not cleared any products from the list and continues to recommend consumers avoid eating fresh spinach products," Bro said.

Natural Selection has maintained its recall of 34 brands of fresh spinach products. However, the company said late Sunday the manufacturing codes from packages of spinach that had infected patients turned over to health officials all were from non-organic spinach. The company packages both organic and conventionally grown spinach in separate areas at its San Juan

Armed man arrested after crashing Capitol barricade

WASHINGTON (AP) — An armed man crashed his vehicle into a security barricade at the U.S. Capitol today, ran into the building and was arrested, forcing the complex to briefly be locked down, authorities said.

The man was armed with a gun, said one security officer speaking anonymously pending an official briefing. The officer said the man was captured by police after running through the Rotunda in the center of the Capitol and down a stairway into the basement. He said the man appeared to be having a seizure, and was taken to a hospital.

Police shut down the complex as they investigated the incident, and to ensure that all people there were authorized to be there. The incident happened shortly before 8 a.m., EDT, witnesses said.

Water district board to consider drilling permits

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

WHITE DEER -- The Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District board of directors will hold hearings Wednesday on a drilling permit application for secondary oil recovery, a drilling application for an Amarillo car wash and proposed depletion study areas.

The board will meet at 9 a.m. in regular session to consider a tabled permit for G&C Lindel Dairy, review the district's investment policies and consider medical insurance plans for employees. They will also consider drilling permit applications in Potter County for one-inch wells from James M. Alfonte for a replacement well, Sam Coffer, Christi Cates, Don Shawhart and two applications from the Mays

The Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District also plans to drill a monitoring well near the River Road elementary school in Potter

County. The board will also consider a drilling permit application by Crow Hollow, LLC, for a four-inch well in Donley County and an application by Eric Wilcox for a three-inch well, also in Donley County.

At 11 a.m., the board is scheduled to hold a hearing on well drilling permits for Petco Petroleum in Gray County and Quick Quack car wash in Amarillo. Petco is seeking a permit for a six-inch well for secondary oil recovery near the intersection of Baggerman Road and Boydston Road. Quick Quack is seeking a per-

Astronauts don protective gear after noticing odor

HOUSTON (AP) — International space station astronauts pulled an alarm and donned protective gear today after smelling a foul odor that turned out to be a harmful chemical leaking from an oxygen vent, NASA said.

"We don't exactly know the nature of the spill ... but the crew is doing well," said Mike Suffredini, NASA's space station program manager. "It's not a life-threatening material." The crew first reported smoke but it turned out to be an irritant, potassium hydroxide, leaking from an oxygen vent, Suffredini said.

The crew donned surgical gloves and masks but did not have to put on gas or oxygen masks, Suffredini said.

NASA declared a spacecraft emergency for only the second time in the eight-year history of the station. The first time was for a false alarm of an ammonia spill.

NASA initially said that the crew in the orbiting lab 220 miles above Earth had been working on a Russian oxygen-generating system known as the Elektron. But Suffredini said no work on the system had been scheduled at that time.

The Elektron was activated at 6:30 am EDT and shut down about a half hour later. Russian cosmonaut Pavel Vinogradov reported the leak to Mission Control in Russia at 7:23 a.m. EDT.

Vinogradov described the liquid as transparent, "like distilled water." "At first, small-sized bubbles escaped, drops, four or five,"

Vinogradov said. U.S. astronaut Jeff Williams described the smell of burning rub-

In a speech, Gonzales said CIA interrogators lack guidance on how to comply with the international Geneva Conventions, saying the provisions banning "humiliating and degrading treatment" and "outrages upon personal dignity" are too vague.

"Such phrases standing alone mean different things to Americans," he said at a conference on citizenship. "Think of the differences in interpretation that will exist between differing legal systems and cultures of the nations of the world."

"Seeking this clarity is important to our efforts to continue gathering information about our enemies," Gonzales said. "In all that we do in the war on terror, we seek to promote the rule of law and protect freedom."

Trying to end a protest by dissident Senate Republicans, the White House says it's confident it can reach a compromise on proposed

But neither side is saying how an agreement can be achieved on whether to allow highly controversial methods by the CIA, such as electric shock, forced nakedness and waterboarding, in which a subject is made to think he is drowning. The Bush administration says those techniques have foiled terror plots. Opponents say they verge on

"The reason we have this program is these kind of hard-core terrorists who are most likely to have information to allow us to protect America are trained in counterinterrogation techniques," Stephen Hadley, President Bush's national security adviser, said Sunday.

"It was only when they went into this CIA program we were able to get information," he said. "This is not torture. This is not a program out of control. This is a program that is conducted pursuant to law."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., one of the Republicans not satisfied with the White House proposal, said he was committed to working out a deal but insisted that the United States must hold the moral high ground.

"They are people that when they are in our custody, they deserve nothing except the fundamental rights that all prisoners have under the Geneva Conventions," said McCain, a former prisoner of war. "We should not do things which would be condemned by everyone in the world."

The Supreme Court in June ruled the Geneva Conventions on the rights of wartime detainees should apply to suspected terrorists in CIA custody.

Those brands include the company's own labels and those of other companies that had contracts with Natural Selection to produce or package its spinach.

Meanwhile, Salinasbased River Ranch Fresh Foods added to its recall spring mixes containing spinach sold under the labels Hy-Vee, Fresh N' Easy and Farmers Market, FDA officials said. All contain spinach purchased from Natural Selection, they said.

The FDA and California Department of Health Services planned Monday to work toward tracing the infected greens to individual farms. The inquiry will review irrigation methods, harvest conditions and other practices at farms possibly involved.

The spinach could have been contaminated in the field or during processing. About 74 percent of the fresh-market spinach grown in the U.S. comes from California, according to the California Farm Bureau Federation.

There is no indication that the outbreak was deliberate, said Dr. David Acheson, chief medical officer with the FDA's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition.

The FDA continued to warn consumers not to eat fresh spinach or products containing fresh spinach until further notice.

"This is unquestionably a significant outbreak in terms of E. coli," Acheson said.

E. coli cases linked to tainted spinach have been reported in 19 states, with Wisconsin reporting the most cases, including the death of a 77-year-old woman.

Other states reporting cases were California, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico, Nevada, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming, according to the CDC.

Seven new cases reported Sunday were in states with previous illnesses, Acheson said.

In Ohio, state health officials said they were investigating the death of a 23-month-old girl who was sickened by E. coli to determine whether the case was related to the outbreak. The girl's mother said she often buys bagged spinach.

Natural Selection recalled its packaged spinach throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico as a precaution after federal health officials said some of those hospitalized reported eating brands of prepackaged spinach distributed by the company.

Daniel Smith was taking antidepressants

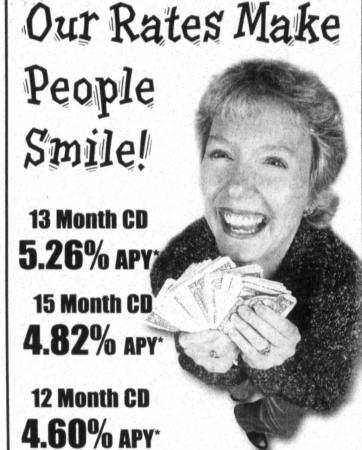

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)
— Anna Nicole Smith's son was on prescription anti-depression medication when he died at the hospital bed-side of the former reality TV star, a pathologist who did a second autopsy on 20-year-old Daniel Smith said today.

Forensic pathologist Cyril Wecht said Daniel Smith was being treated for depression that began about four to six weeks earlier, but he did not know whether the medication played any role in his death, which came three days after his celebrity mother gave birth in the Bahamas.

Wecht, speaking by phone from Miami a day after conducting the autopsy in the Bahamas, said he's still awaiting toxicology tests to determine the cause of death.

He said he and the Bahamian coroner who did the first autopsy agreed there was no evidence that Daniel Smith died from a "suicidal overdose."

Smith died Sept. 10 in the hospital room where the former Playboy model was recuperating from giving birth to a daughter.

ber, but Mission Control in Houston said that odor likely came from the overheating of a rubber gasket.

"That also jibes with the visible smoke coming from the rubber gasket," Williams said.

The station's third crew member is Thomas Reiter of the European Space Agency, who arrived for his six-month stay in July aboard space shuttle Discovery. Williams and Vinogradov are slated to return to Earth at the end of the month.

Because the station's emergency system was activated, the ventilation system was shut down, but ground operations reactivated it a short time later. Astronauts used a charcoal air-scrubbing device to remove the offensive smell and Williams said the odor "decreased significantly."

The potassium hydroxide, a corrosive that can cause serious burns and can be harmful if inhaled, was cleaned up with towels and wrapped up in two rubber bags, Suffredini said.

Potassium hydroxide can be used to power batteries and is also known as potash lye.

The Elektron system has given the space station headaches before. It had operated on-and-off for months before breaking down last spring. In June, the crew tried to reactivate it, with mixed results, after replacing a hydrogen vent valve outside during a spacewalk.

Space shuttle Atlantis' six astronauts departed on Sunday and a Russian Soyuz vehicle carrying two new station crew members and space tourist Anousheh Ansari were expected to arrive on Wednesday.

Life of Dan Moody included bumpy road to governorship

The two-story Victorian house in Taylor has been nicely restored, but when James Robertson and his sister Nancy had it built in 1887, it was just another residence on the outskirts of a Central Texas farming community and rail crossroad.

In 1890, Nancy married a railroad man, Dan'l (that's how he signed his name) Moody, a claims agent for the International and Great Northern. Moody bought his brother-in-law's interest in the house and the couple settled down to raise a family.

The Moodys had a daughter, Mary, in the summer of 1891. Two summers later, on June 1, 1893, the little girl got a baby brother, Daniel J. Everyone called him Dan.

The same year, the nation's economy went south, the resulting downturn eventually becoming known as the Panic of 1893. Having lost a lot of money in cotton speculation, Moody entered the dairy business to support his fami- attorney in 1920 and won. In 1922,

As soon as he had grown stout enough to lift a pail, young Dan had daily chores to do before school. As a seventh grader, he worked at a coffee roasting plant in addition to doing his lessons.

After graduating from Taylor High School, Moody strung electrical wire to make enough money to go to the University of Texas. He moved quickly through his basic course work and then concentrated on the study of law, graduating in 1914 at 21.

Following his admission to the bar, Moody began a private practice in his home town. For the first time in his life he earned money without having to tote or climb. But the advent of a global war interrupted his law career and he volunteered for the Army.

Back in Williamson County after the armistice, he ran for county

Gov. Pat Neff appointed him prosecutor for the 26th Judicial District. The district included Williamson and part of Travis County.

Texas Tales

What happened next would take a book to explain, which is what current Williamson County District Judge Ken Anderson did with his "You Can't Do That Dan Moody." (Eakin Press, 1998) In a sentence, Moody pulled the figurative sheets off the Ku Klux Klan in successfully prosecuting four members of the secret society for the beating and tarring of a young traveling salesman accused by the Klan of courting a widow.

The Williamson County case marked the beginning of the end of the Klan in Texas and propelled Moody into statewide office as attorney general under Gov. Miriam "Ma" Ferguson.

The politically powerful Klan tried to elect its own candidate, but Texans choose the lawyer from Taylor. During his two-year term as the state's chief lawyer, Moody filed a series of lawsuits to set aside improper highway construction contracts benefiting cronies of husband, governor's impeached Gov. Jim Ferguson.

Despite intense Klan opposition, Moody defeated Mrs. Ferguson in her bid for a second term, becoming the youngest governor in Texas history. He went on to serve a second term.

While best known for his successes, Moody had some interesting instances of reverse fortunes. He failed to convince the Legislature to relocate all state prisons to the Austin area, he could not get the votes for a Constitutional convention that could have given Texas governors more power and he lost a bid for the U.S. Senate in 1942.

Moody died in 1966 and lies in the State Cemetery in Austin. Mary Moody, who never married, continued to live in the old family home

Two years earlier, Taylor resident Ruby Cornforth had succeeded in getting a historical marker placed in the front yard of the Moody residence. She also convinced the Moody family to donate the house to the City of Taylor for use as a museum. The family deeded the city the structure in 1976. Four years later, Miss Moody died.

The rule of law of very delicate thing

It was nice of the president to finally admit that there are secret CIA prisons where people have been interrogated. He lied about the people not being tortured. Of course they were.

It's axiomatic that any man can be broken, provided his torturers are skillful enough to keep him from dying. Pain breaks a man, not clever questioning or sleep deprivation. There is a point for every man where he will do or say anything to stop the pain. No doubt the CIA has specialists who are skillful in causing pain. It has, I'm sure, a number of interrogators who show up with medical bags full of hypodermic needles and very bad chemicals.

Democrats will make a mistake if they think the general public objects to torturing people they consider terrorists. They deserve it, and the more the better, most Americans will say. If a man knows where a bomb is planted and he won't tell you where it is, the choice is simple: You either torture him or you consent to the deaths of innocent people. The deaths of Charley innocent Reese people are too high a Columnist price to pay for scruples and ethics, which are always theoretical anyway. When sensible Americans object to the president violating the Constitution, which he does routinely, it is not because of any concern for terrorists. It is because of concern for the American people. The Constitution and the Bill of Rights are, after all, pieces of parchment. If a police officer wants to kick daylights out of you, a piece of parchment can't stop him. The rule of law is a very delicate thing. It only works when all the people, especially those in authority, consent to play by the rules. If you start making exceptions, the then whole sys-collapse. Dictatorships start by telling the people they have nothing to fear, but this little group over here is an enemy of the people, and so you just don't concern yourself with what happens to that group. That truly is the slippery slope.

What we have here, folks, is a genuine moral dilemma. We want the rule of law, but we also want to stop bad guys from doing bad things your door down and beat the to good people. If we make an exception for the CIA, then why not the local police? Suppose they have a sex offender who has murdered a child and refuses to say where the body is, thus increasing the agony of the parents. Should police apply some pain to him?

> It is a dilemma that will never be resolved with any finality. It makes us all a little bit hypocritical. We must never give up the fight to make the government live by its own laws. On the other hand, in some dark corner of our heart, we are glad there are people who will deal ruthlessly with potential mass murderers. I doubt there is a country in the world that doesn't have its assassins and torturers. The best hopes and dreams of mankind rest on the reality

Houston Chronicle on Mexico's consulate in New Orleans: Four years ago, Mexico closed its

New Orleans consulate essentially, for lack of interest. The Mexican government was pinching pennies, and closing the mission signaled a new focus on U.S. cities with significant numbers of Mexican nationals.

New Orleans now counts as one of those cities. That's why Carlos Gonzalez Magallon, Mexico's consul general in Houston, has launched plans to reopen a Crescent City mission he hopes by Dec. 1. Gonzalez is right to act quickly.

A Louisiana-based consulate would help the Mexicans flowing into New Orleans to work and help the city inch toward normalcy. The reopening even would revive a bit of history.

A new study by Tulane University and the University of California shows that nearly half of the city's new construction workers are Latino, and about a quarter of that new work force is undocumented. Mexicans make up 47 percent of the undocumented workers. Researchers think that at least 14,000 Latinos now live in New Orleans double their presence pre-Katrina and about 8 percent of the current popula-

Soon after New Orleans' rebuilding began, Mayor C. Ray Nagin made one of his habitual blunders, worrying aloud that New Orleans would be 'overrun" with Mexicans. He hastily changed that sentiment during his reelection campaign, praising Latinos instead for their work ethic. But while Latinos are indeed rebuilding New Orleans with exceptional energy, they are often treated atrociously.

Wage theft by employers is epidemic. The Southern Poverty Law Center has overseen two group lawsuits by immigrants who were robbed of pay; Catholic Charities alone fielded thousands of wage theft complaints in less than a year.

Letter from the desk of the executive director

Dear Members,

Are you ready for the 2006 "Country Fair"? It's that time once again! This event just adds to the festive nature of the Fall season in the Texas Panhandle! Your planning committee, under the direction of this year's event chairman Mark Lang has put together an awesome agenda.

We'll be "Doin' It Up — Texas Style!" and featuring

"Gray County Line" at the dance.

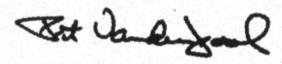

Expect lots of fun, food and festivities! Dinner begins at 5 p.m., followed by the viewing and bidding on more than three hundred silent auction items. We'll move into the auditorium at 8 p.m. to bid on an excellent array of items available in the live auction. The bingo and dance will begin at 9 p.m. This evening is all about having fun!, and celebrating the friendships and camaraderie of living in Pampa, Texas.

So invite some friends and bring them along with you. Everyone is welcome.

And don't forget! In addition to all of the great auction items, we will be giving away $10,000, in six different drawings during the live auction. I know you don't want to miss it!

We look forward to seeing everyone on Saturday, Oct. 21 at the M. K. Brown Auditorium for the 22nd Annual Pampa Chamber of Commerce Country Fair

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our late 30s, healthy and in good shape. Our love life is good, and we get along better now than we ever have in our marriage. Before we get any older, my husband has asked me to visit a nudist beach or resort with him. He also says he would like to spice up our sex life by making love in the forest beside a mountain stream, or even the back seat of our car in a secluded spot. Coming from a religious background, I am not totally comfortable with the idea of going nude at a beach in front of a lot of other people, or the thought of being caught having sex in the woods. My husband says that visiting a nudist beach or resort is not about exhibitionism or immorality. He says it is about enjoying nature and feeling the sensation of being free outdoors. To be honest, these are things I might like to try, but I am just not sure. I'm concerned about what others would think if they found out. My husband says what we do is our own business, and the only way anyone we know would find out is if we told them. Would it be wrong for us to go to a nude beach or resort, just to try it out? -- WONDERING WIFE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR WONDERING WIFE: I recommend you consider your husband's suggestions one at a time, and see how comfortable you are with each one. There is nothing sinful about going to a nude beach with one's husband. When you do, you will see entire families and people of every age enjoying themselves --- all looking remarkably similar, and none of them leering at anyone else. Should you run into people you know, I can't imagine anyone gossiping about it, since they would have to explain how they happened to see you. As to spicing up your sex life by making love in public places: Although some people may enjoy the "danger" of possibly being discovered, I don't recommend it because it leaves couples vulnerable to being exploited by anyone who happens by, or being cited for violating local ordinances against indecent exposure.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dilemma with my neighbors, a young couple who moved into our neighborhood a couple of years ago. They are a very nice couple and we became friendly. But over the last several months, they have been spending an inordinate amount of time in our home. They show up unannounced and often stay for more than two hours! My husband and I have two children and full-time jobs, so we don't have a lot of free time as it is. But when these two show up, we can't accomplish anything. They don't pick up on hints or gentle nudging when we try to get them to leave. I dread the sound of the doorbell these days because I know it will be them. Sometimes it seems like they are watching to see when we come home. How can I tell them we need some space without hurting their feelings? I like them, but these unannounced visits are starting to take a toll on me. -- TRAPPED IN MY OWN HOME, FRONT ROYAL, VA.

DEAR TRAPPED: Your neighbors do not respect boundaries because you have set none for them. The next time they show up, do not let them in. Tell them you have chores you must do, and ask them to call before coming over in the future to see if it is convenient for them to visit. To speak up is not rude -- it is self-defense, which you have a right to practice when your home is being invaded.

hotter than Harvick?

Is there anyone hotter than Kevin Harvick in the world of sports right now? Tiger Woods? The Manning boys? Barry Bonds?

Consider that Harvick has all but dominated the NASCAR Busch Series all season long. He Edwards. In this sport - this series - that's a lot. The man could probably take a week off, go fishing, and still lead the series when he gets back. And you know what they say, "A bad day of fishing is still better they are they say, "A bad day of fishing is still better than a good day at work.

Sunday, Harvick - who as the late Dale Earnhardt's replacement at Richard Childress Racing showed he might be the man to beat in Nextel Cup too. He started on the pole for the Sylvania 300 at New Hampshire International Speedway, led 196 of the 300 laps and won race one of the 10-race Chase for the Championship. He now leads the Chase by 35 points over rookie driver, Denny Hamlin, who finished fourth.

So today, Harvick leads both the Busch and Nextel Cup series. What if he were to win both? I might cast a vote his way for hottest athlete in sports right now (yes, they are athletes).

I generally try to keep my work and what I hear while working, especially at games and events, sepa-rate. I'm rarely shocked by what is said in the heat of the battle. However, while making my way back to the field at Dick Bivins Stadium Friday night after a trip to the little sports editor's room, I passed a par-ent and a child headed in the direction from which I came. With the sound of music and bright lights of the rides and booths imposshirt that suggested Pampa support, though the illtimed remark made me wonder.

I was taught never to say what I didn't mean because no matter how you try, you will never be able to take it

I also believe, at least in Pampa, green and gold should be more than color coordinates or a fashion statement, it should speak of your support for your team, win or lose.

I never heard a player or a coach Friday night say they wished they were somewhere else. coaches kept coaching as though the game was in doubt. The players kept tak-ing the field and giving all they had. Dick Dunham kept noting stats and Trent Loter kept barking out instructions up and down the sideline. I'm not sure if any of them could even hear the fair or paid it much attention.

No matter the school, the grade or the sport, if you attend a Pampa event with intentions of support, do so without shame. Allow your enthusiasm to be the barometer, not the scoreboard.

And be careful what you say. You never know who might hear you.

Green and Gold Scrimmage: An exciting end to the week

The Harvester tennis team held its annual week-long Green and Gold Scrimmage last week. The team was divided up into a Green Team and a Gold Team based on the player's position on the team. Coach Emily Laurence coached the green team while Coach Starla Kindle coached the gold.

Over the course of the week, the players competed in various sports to earn points for their respective team. Monday, the gold team won the kickball game, 14-12, earning 10

There were no games Tuesday due to the varsity match against Tascosa.

Wednesday, the gold team again netted 10 points by winning the softball game, 12-11.

The Green Team got into the win column Thursday by winning the soccer game 2-1 and earning 10 points in the process. However, the Gold Team added another 10 points to its total Friday with a win in basketball.

Two other competitions were held Saturday in which the players had to decorate the bulletin boards that hang in the building and come up with team uniforms. After the judging, the gold team won the bulletin board contest and the green team won the uniform contest.

The Gold Team led 40-20 going into Saturday's matches. PHS players were required to find a partner from the community and play one match against the other team. By the end of these matches, the Green Team added 90 points to their team total, while the Gold Team added 70.

Tied at 110 points each, everything came down to the final event of the week.

Over the course of the Green and Gold Scrimmage, the players were sent out in the community to sell advertising banners that hang on the tennis court fences. With the banners that were sold prior to the competition, the Green Team led 210-200. After Saturday's matches were finished, the teams were given 10 minutes to sell as many more banners as they could. Seventeen additional banners were sold in that time with the Gold Team holding the advantage and going on to take the overall win, 320-260.

Coach Emily Laurence said afterward, "I hope the motivation that went into winning the Green and Gold Scrimmage pours over into our district matches," She continued, "In the end, both the Green and Gold team won because of the fundraising we did for our whole team." Pampa opens the District 3-4A season Tuesday by hosting Dumas at 4 p.m.

Time to put Friday night behind them, Borger up next for Pampa

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS Sports Editor

team's 40-14 loss Friday night to Amarillo High, Pampa head coach Andy Cavalier said, "We just could not get anything going offensively and gave up several big plays defensively that gave them all the momentum early."

Mishandled snaps were an early issue for Cavalier's team as well as Pampa put the ball on the ground a number of times in its opening possessions. With Ben Gibson out of the game due to injury, Nick Dudley stepped in to play center. It should be noted Dudley had never filled that position until Friday night. "We did mishandle several snaps from Nick, which was somewhat expected with Nick playing center for the first time." Cavalier said. "As the game went on though, he really did a good

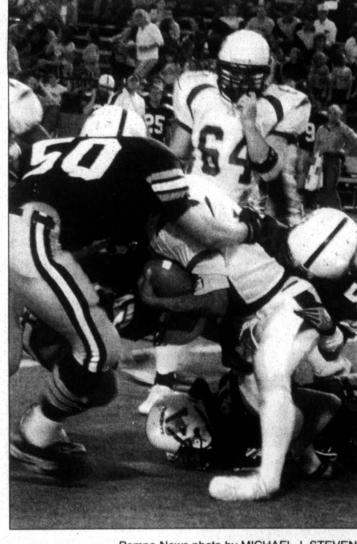

Though the Harvesters did outscore the Sandies in the second half (14-3), they spent much of the first half mired on their own side of the 50-yard line. How much of that had to do with the breeze blowing through Dick Bivins Stadium Friday Night? "There was a big wind," Cavalier said, adding, "but the biggest reason we were stuck on our end was not executing properly. We

In following up on his have to execute our assignments better to have success.'

Take nothing away from Coach Brad Thiessen and his Sandies, they are good. But they were also aided in part by Harvester mistakes, including a high snap on a punt attempt that gave Amarillo High a 2-point safety.

In games such as this, the challenge for a coach is not neccessarily getting his team through the game itself, but limiting the psychological impact it could have on his players. What did Cavalier say to his guys after the game Friday night? "I let them know that I do not feel any different about them. Nor would I if we had won the game. We just need to continue to improve as we approach the district season. I also let them know that I thought they did a decent job of overcoming our injury situation and that it's extremely important that we enter that part of our season as healthy as possible."

Cavalier and his staff will direct the team's focus on the next opponent, Borger at Bulldog Stadium. "Once again, there is no time to keep looking behind us. Borger has a good team and they will come ready to Friday night," play Cavalier said.

Harvick leads Chase

By The Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. - Kevin turned New Harvick Hampshire International Speedway into his personal playground Sunday, taking lead in the early NASCAR's Chase for the championship.

Harvick, who started from the pole and paced almost every practice session, led 196 of the 300 laps to run away with the first round of the 10-race Chase. He moved to the top of the points standings for the first time in his career, and holds a 35-point lead over rookie Denny Hamlin, who finished fourth. Defending series champion Tony Stewart, who did not make the Chase this season and isn't eligible for the championship, finished second.

T.O. breaks finger in Dallas' 27-10 win over 'Skins

Owens had a great excuse for his lousy home opener with the Dallas Cowboys. He played most of the game with a broken finger.

Now, Owens will have surgery and miss two to four

"I'm going to try to get back as soon as I can," Owens said. "I feel like I'm a quick healer. Once we have the surgery, the healing process will start."

Owens caught only three passes for 19 yards and dropped three passes, including one in the end zone on the Cowboys' first series Sunday night, in a 27-10 victory over the Washington Redskins. The receiver also was called for two penalties

Owens said he would have surgery today, but the Cowboys said it could be Tuesday. His rehab certainly will be motivated by Dallas playing Oct. 8 in Philadelphia against his former

A hamstring problem in training camp led to Owens missing more than 20 workouts and the first three preseason games, even though two MRI exams were clear.

Owens said he was hurt on the first or second play in his first game at Texas Stadium as a Cowboy, but didn't tell anybody until the fourth quarter. He said it was a "fluke thing" that occurred when he was blocking

"I think my hand got caught on a guy's jersey or something. I kind of felt something weird with it," Owens said. "I just kind of felt like I jammed it. I kept playing."

After three interceptions in the Cowboys' season-opening loss at Jacksonville, Drew Bledsoe threw for 237 yards with TD passes to Patrick Crayton (4 yards) and Terry Glenn (40 yards).

Glenn's TD on the first play of the fourth quarter capped a 99-yard drive after Roy Williams' interception. Glenn had six catches for 94 yards, helping set up Crayton's TD and Marion Barber's 1-yard scoring plunge before halftime.

Coming off a loss and going into a bye, Dallas needed the victory to avoid a quarterback controversy and all the other negatives that come with an 0-2 start.

"To come back and get a win against a division opponent in a game that I think we all recognize was a huge game for us, it was an important win," Bledsoe said.

For now, being 1-1 and in a three-way tie for first in the NFC East only helps stem the IRVING, Texas (AP) - Terrell disappointment of Owens being hurt.

> Owens, whose three-year, $25 million deal includes a $5 million bonus and a $5 million salary in 2006, struggled against the Redskins. The flubbed pass in the end zone was the first of his drops. By the fourth quarter, he was getting his hand X-rayed, and after the game it was partially wrapped.

> While unsure when he got hurt, Owens drew a personal foul penalty on the Cowboys' first offensive snap for an illegal block. Several plays later, he was trying to gather the ball in the back of the end zone when cornerback Mike Rumph knocked it away.

> "I didn't really have my full strength in my hand, so I think that probably may have contributed with him punching it out," Owens said.

> Last week at Jacksonville, Owens had six catches for 80 yards and a touchdown.

Washington (0-2) has its worst start since going 0-5 under Marty coach Schottenheimer in 2001.

"I think we have a lot of things we need to fix to win football games," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs "Certainly, this is a tough time for us."

Washington had just 100 yards on offense at halftime and was within 17-10 only because of a 100-yard kickoff return by Rock Cartwright. Redskins' other score, a 39yard field goal by John Hall, came on a drive boosted by consecutive roughing penalties against Dallas.

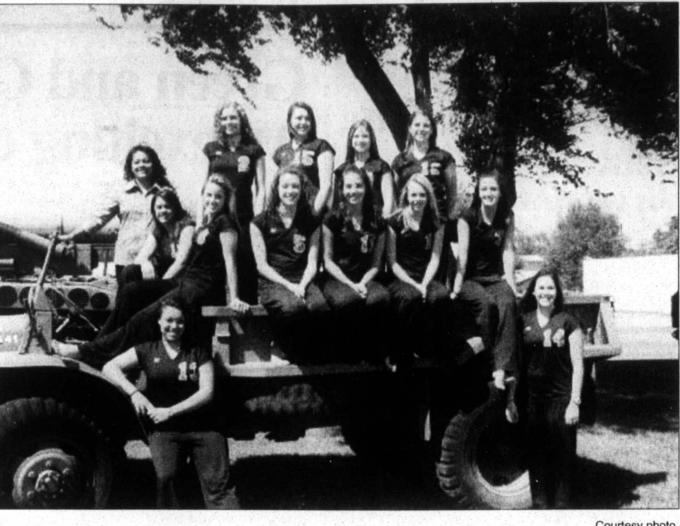

Mark Brunell, playing on his 36th birthday, had only 64 yards passing through three quarters. He was similarly ineffective for 56 minutes of a Week 2 game at Texas Stadium last year, but bailed out Washington with two late TD passes to Santana Moss.

Brunell padded his stats in the fourth, finishing 18-of-33 for 197 yards. He was sacked six times, including the game's final play after reaching the 7.

"We've just got to find a spark," said Moss, who had four catches for 69 yards. "We find that spark, and things will get better."

Notes: Mike Vanderjagt, Dallas' other big free-agent signee, had field goals of 26 and 50 yards in his Cowboys debut. Coach Bill Parcells left Vanderjagt inactive for the season opener. ... Cartwright's TD was the first kickoff return against the Cowboys since Robert Brooks did it for Green Bay in October 1993.

Duquesne takes stock after 5 players shot

PITTSBURGH (AP) - More than 300 students gathered at a Mass following the shooting of five basketball players, trying to understand how the violence could have come to their tranquil, close-knit campus.

"We're shocked because an event of this sort has never happened," Duquesne President Charles Dougherty said. "It's a safe campus and known to be a safe campus."

Police searched for the gunman, and the downtown school stepped up its round-the-clock police protection with armed university police officers guarding dormitories and other buildings.

Two players had been walking near a dormitory when they met a man who apparently had been disruptive at a student union dance, authorities said. The players attempted to pacify him and walked away but were shot. Players who rushed to their aid were also shot.

In critical condition was forward Sam Ashaolu of Toronto, a transfer from Lake Region State College and a cousin of former Houston Rockets star Hakeem Olajuwon. In serious condition was Stuard Baldonado of Colombia, a transfer from Miami Dade College who was considered the school's best recruit.

Taken to another hospital was Kojo Mensah, a guard from New York City who averaged nearly 17 points last season at Siena College before transferring, authorities said. His condition was not released.

Treated and released were Shawn James of New York City, the nation's leading shot blocker last season at Northeastern University before he transferred to Duquesne; and Aaron Jackson of Hartford, Conn., a guard who is one of only two returning players from Duquesne's 3-24 team last season.

James, an NBA prospect expected to be Duquesne's top player when he becomes eligible in the 2007-08 season, was shot in the foot but no bones were broken. Mensah was believed shot in the shoulder. Jackson was shot in the hand.

Crisis counselors were available for students, the university posted a letter from Dougherty on its Web site and was fielding phone calls from parents, spokeswoman Bridget Fare said. Officials will decide Monday whether to set up a specific phone line for parents seeking information, she said.

Duquesne coach Ron Everhart, formerly at Northeastern, had rebuilt the school's program after being hired in March by bringing in 10 recruits - one of the most sweeping upheavals of any Division I program in recent years.

Dougherty said several witnesses saw the gunman leave campus after a half-dozen to a dozen shots were fired. He said witnesses reported seeing two guns - the second on someone in a group with the gunman - but he couldn't confirm whether both were fired.

Dougherty, who said the gunman and the others with him were not students, said he did not know what sparked the violence.

"What motive can there be for unloading a pistol into a group of students?" Dougherty said.

At the Mass, the Rev. Raymond French, director of campus ministry, asked students to pray "for courage in these difficult days." The Rev. Timothy Hickey reminded students they are part of a community.

"What affects one of us, affects all of us," he said. "We are family and we care for one another. We care for you.

Founded in 1878, Duquesne University is a private Catholic university with nearly 10,000 undergraduate and graduate students in several high-rise buildings on a bluff overlooking the city.

Junior Katie Hauser, 20, of Latrobe, said she only attends Mass once in a while, but went Sunday because of the shooting.

"It's really good everyone came together," she said. "You feel a little bit closer."

Freshman Harold Kolonich, walking with his parents near the campus Sunday evening, had few worries.

"I still trust the atmosphere. Duquesne is still a safe campus," he said. "It's unfortunate stuff like that happens. It's a wonderful place to

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Sept. 19, 2006:

Often, you could be taken aback by what you see and what occurs. Life points you in a new direction this year. Your feelings and attitude make a difference to others. By expressing yourself more often, others can and will honor your boundaries and desires. Communication will enhance your life. In some way, you will transform your life, adding to the quality of your days. If you are single, meeting someone won't be a problem, but choosing the right person will take skill. If you are attached, you will discover that your openness helps christen a new period. VIRGO understands you — perhaps too well!

Curtis wins another lame-duck event

FARMINGTON, Pa. (AP) - Ben Curtis excels in taking home the best possible going-away presents from disappearing PGA Tour

Curtis, start-to-finish steady on a day when the leaderboard was filled with much higher scores than the previous three days, claimed a lame-duck tour event for the second time in three months by winning the 84 Lumber Classic by two shots Sunday.

Not only preserving his lead but building on it down the stretch, Curtis broke out of a four-way tie for the lead at the turn with Charles Howell III, Robert Garrigus and Ryan Moore by relying on a hot putter for three birdies in a span of five holes from No. 12 through No.

But it was a par may have won it for him, and the $828,000 first prize for finishing at 14-under 274, two ahead of Howell. Curtis finished with a 2-under 70 to Howell's even-par 72.

Curtis flew a shot over the par-4 14th green and onto a grassy, uphill apron that left him with an extremely difficult shot. But he used a utility club - the same one that helped him win the 2003 British Open - to roll it to about 12 feet, then sank that putt to save par and stay in the

"It was a very difficult shot, and I had three different clubs out, I think," he said. "I ended up using the rescue club - the ball was in a divot and I was trying to get it up and over the hill. If it went over the green, no big deal. You've got to deal with what you've got and I hit a great chip and I was fortunate to make the putt.

He went up by three shots by dropping a 13-footer on No. 15, when Howell three-putted from 49 feet, then effectively won it by sinking a 50-footer on the par-5 16th. That allowed him to withstand a bogey on No. 17, a par 3.

"Ben and I have played against each other since we were probably 14, maybe 13, in the old America Junior events," Howell said. "So we've known each other forever. I knew he'd be a tough guy to beat because he's so consistent.'

Curtis' putter won it for him as the temperature climbed into the 70s and rain-soaked greens dried up for the first time all week, meaning shots to the green didn't stick like they did during the first three rounds. As a result, there were only six scores in the 60s on Sunday, compared to 29 on Saturday.

"I wish' I could putt like that every week," Curtis said. "It boils down to putting out here."

Bart Bivens, Texas Ranger, addressed a recent meeting of Pampa Rotary Club. Bivins discussed the dangers posed to consumers through identity theft and mail fraud and stressed the importance of keeping safe computer records. County Commissioner Gary Willoughby is at left.

Patricia Kennedy Lawford dies at 82

BOSTON (AP) Patricia Kennedy Lawford, the sister of President Kennedy who forged a marriage between politics and Hollywood with her wedding to actor Peter Lawford, has died in her New York home. She was 82.

Lawford died Sunday of complications from pneumonia, said a spokeswoman for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"My sister Pat is irreplaceable," Kennedy said in a statement. "Everyone who knew Pat adored her. She was admired for her great style, for her love and support of the arts, her wit and generosity — and for the singular sense of wonder and joy she brought into our lives."

In his 2005 best-seller,

"Symptoms of Withdrawal," her actor son, Christopher Lawford, wrote of his mother that "her lightheartedness and vibrancy made her my grandfather's favorite." But he said she also felt resentment toward her father "at not being allowed fully to the future president, in 1949. They were married in 1954 and had four children.

But as chronicled in many books on the family, including her son's book, the Lawford-Kennedy marriage was troubled and ended in a bitter divorce in 1965.

Besides her son and brother, Lawford is survived daughters Sydney, Victoria and Robin; 10 grandchildren; and sisters Eunice Kennedy Shriver and Jean Kennedy Smith.

Book thefts prompt changes at Texas Tech

University Library plans to change its student employment policy and possibly install a video surveillance system in response to the indictment of a circulation worker for allegedly stealing books, school officials said.

Authorities' say 22-yearold Johnathan Nunley stole more than $75,000 worth of books from the library and sold them through an online retailer.

He was indicted last month on a charge of felony theft on accusations he sent the Oregon-based book sell-

Nunley, who worked as a student assistant in the library's circulation depart-

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) ment, could not be reached Texas Tech for comment. His lawyer declined comment citing the pending case.

Nunley is accused of taking the books while working a late-night shift and removing their Texas Tech identification by either removing pages or marking over the university stamp with black ink.

Nunley's account with an Oregon-based online book store had set up more than 70 sales and shipped 54 orders over four months this year, according to police records. He received more than or arranged to send more $15,000 for the books, only a than 1,000 library books to fifth of their estimated total value, police said.

ed Mexicans. Consul General Gonzalez of Houston says his priority will be directing exploited workers to government and nonprofit agencies that redress workplace abuses.

The New Orleans consulate can also offer "matriculas," or Mexican identification cards, which workers can use to open bank accounts, cash payroll checks, even obtain medical care. And a consulate can register children born to nationals in the United States and speed the transport of nationals' bodies home when they die.

A New Orleans mission will also benefit Americans. Mexican officials in Louisiana can pass on information about suspected crimes such as human trafficking and can smooth unfamiliar turf to Mexican diplomats. Mexico opened its first consulate there 180 years ago. Re-establishing that official presence now would revive a bit of the tradition and order that New Orleans so craves. Most important, it would nudge New Orleans officials to ready their own institutions for the city's new, Latinotinged identity.

that the world is ruled ultimately by force.

My guess is that the president has scored a Brownie point with this announcement. He's given a list of terrorist acts he claimed were prevented as a result of these secret "interrogations." The list may or may not be a truthful report. As noted earlier, there comes a point when a man will say anything to stop the pain. I suppose one of the worst situations a man can be in is to be tortured for information he really doesn't have.

We all know, from having watched old Western movies about lynching, that despite the fact that maybe nine out of 10 deserved to be lynched, there is always the danger that the mob will grab an innocent person. Ditto for victims of torture.

We all know that after the attack on the World Trade Center, the FBI snatched up more than a thousand people who ultimately were proven to be innocent of any connection with terrorism at all. Law enforcement can and does make mistakes, so does

In 1986, Taylor residents dedicated the new museum. With the help of a large grant from the Meadows Foundation, a $208,000 renovation of the house was completed in 1989. More recently, with $30,000 in money from the City of Taylor, the house received some additional work.

The museum at 114 W. 9th St. is open from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays, though it also may be toured at other times by appointment. Mike Cox, a member of the Texas Institute of Letters, is the author of a dozen Texas-related books.
