Swinford backs wind energy

AMARILLO -- While Gov. Rick Perry made his campaign pitch at a Mexican food restaurant here Monday, several comments went largely unnoticed by the crowd, according to State Rep. David Swinford, R-Dumas.

Perry said he'd met with several wind energy companies and that they had dedicated $10.4 billion for infrastructure in the Texas Panhandle to supply electricity to other parts of the state.

Perry also said that he's going to be focused on the Port to Plains Corridor. That corridor could supply the right-of-way for transmission lines to carry that electricity, a key part of expanding the wind energy program in the Panhandle.

"There were 14 wind energy companies came to him in Dallas," Swinford said, "and they laid on the table documents that said,

"We will put $10.4 billion of investment if we have transmission lines."

Perry said he is for transmission lines and he is for transmission lines to the Panhandle, Swinford said. The governor also said he supports the Port to Plains Corridor.

The significance of that, Swinford said, is that like the Trans Texas Corridor, a toll road that would parallel Interstate 35 from Oklahoma to Mexico, could provide the right-of-way for electrical transmission lines from Panhandle wind farms to the rest of the state.

"Those corridors," Swinford said, "they've got it where you can have railroads, electric lines, water lines, whatever lines you want. Anything you want in there, and it's OK to be on state land."

AMARILLO -- Republicans gathered at a Mexican food restaurant here Monday on a last minute swing through Amarillo and Lubbock to bash Democrats, Austin and Hooter's.

Amarillo Sen. Kel Seliger, who introduced Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott, commended Abbott for battling sexual predators on the internet.

"And I don't mean my two boys and the Hooter's Web site," Seliger quipped.

"We may have to drop our investigation of Hooter's," Abbott retorted as he took the microphone.

Gov. Rick Perry and Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst both spoke commending the Panhandle delegation of legislators on stage with them, Pampa's Warren Chisum, Dumas' David Swinford and Amarillo's John Smithe. All three lawmakers are committee chairmen in the House of Representatives.

"This cadre are all chairmen make a big difference," Perry said.

The governor also campaigned for Don Willett, the Texas Supreme Court Justice whom Perry appointed in August 2005 to fill a vacancy. Willett, who was with the campaign caravan, is now running to keep the seat.

"There is one individual on that Supreme Court who is a powerful, pro-life, pro-Texas conservative values individual that we must make sure we elect this Nov. 7," Perry said.

Perry urged everyone to vote and stay the course. Perry is in a four-way race with Democrat Chris Bell, and Independents Kinky Friedman and Carole Keeton Rylander Strayhorn.

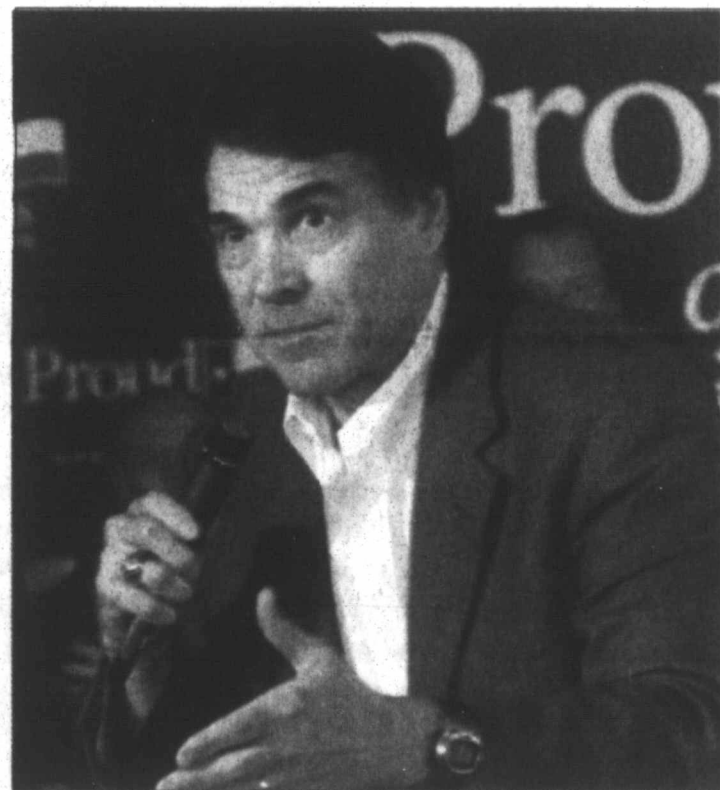

Down the road and around the corner, Strayhorn spoke Monday at Amarillo College in a campaign appearance.

The topic of her speech was education and the need to replace Perry as governor.

Perry focused more on jobs.

"We have to focus on the creation of jobs in this state for one powerful reason," Perry said. "If you don't have the creation of jobs,

Trial of Oklahoma jail escapee postponed until December

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

The second of two Oklahoma jail escapees who allegedly committed crimes in Wheeler County on March 12 will have to wait to learn his fate in Texas.

Lewis Julian Peteet, 26, of Anadarko, Okla., was indicted by a 31st District grand jury on three counts each of aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping, the same charges brought against Eli Edwards, 29, who in August received a 594-year prison sentence at the hands of a Wheeler County jury.

Peteet's trial, which was scheduled to start Oct. 23, was continued until Dec. 4 due to a family emergency for David Scott of Perryton, Peteet's defense attorney, said 31st District Attorney Lynn Switzer.

Peteet and Edwards allegedly escaped from Caddo County Jail in Oklahoma and traveled west, entering Wheeler County on March 12.

Along their route, they stole cars, broke into homes, and stole property, said Switzer after Edwards' trial.

At one Oklahoma home, the pair reportedly kidnapped a woman, put her in the trunk of her car, and drove the vehicle across the state line into to Plains Corridor could be used for transmission lines.

"If you do away with all of the land costs," Swinford said, "think how fast and more efficient you can put in a transmission line."

The state lawmaker said the transmission lines are the key to developing wind energy generation in the Texas Panhandle.

Using research from a study that Swinford requested during the last legislative session, he says that older power plants generating about 10,000 megawatts of electricity will be retired over the next eight years.

"You have a bunch of old dirty plants that are about to retire," Swinford said.

That, coupled with the expected growth in demand for electricity, means the state will need about 38,000 megawatts of new generating capacity by 2015.

"Then we did a poll with a very straightforward question," he said. "As we go forward in this state to meet our electric needs, do you think we should use renewables, coal or liquid natural gas?"

Of the respondents, 79 percent said renewable energy, six percent said coal and five percent said liquid natural gas.

"That's a pretty powerful statement," Swinford said.

Swinford said it makes economic sense to put the wind generators in the Texas Panhandle, particularly the eastern Texas Panhandle.

The wind is more consistent in the Panhandle than anywhere else in the state.

The White Deer wind farm, Swinford said, has the best wind of wind farms in the state today.

"You've got White Deer over there," Swinford said, "and it's just a proven fact that's the best wind. There's no discussion about that."

Research indicates that the best wind for generating energy is the Northeast Texas Panhandle. Pampa is ranked second in the studies. Amarillo is sixth.

Swinford said his proposal is to run transmission lines from Oklahoma, near Wichita Falls where there's a power connection, to the central Texas Panhandle and run another set of transmission lines from the central Texas Panhandle south to Sweetwater where there's another power connection. That would make it relatively easy for wind farms in the Panhandle to connect to the major transmission lines.

"Nobody would be very far from the line," he says. "It would be like an interstate highway."

The Panhandle loop of transmission lines could move low cost electricity to markets in East Texas.

The Panhandle wind zone, Swinford said, has the best potential for wind, lower cost resources, increases in fuel diversity and can improve reliability.

"What makes this sort of tricky," Swinford said, "is the separation of the power grids."

The Texas Panhandle and South Plains are basically on one power grid, the Southwest Power Pool, while the rest of the state is on another power grid, ERCOT, the Electric Reliability Council of Texas.

"These two grids are not connected," Swinford said.

Nor can they be connected easily.

"Probably 90 percent of the people of Texas get their power from ERCOT," Swinford said.

ERCOT, Swinford said, has been deregulated. The Southwest Power Pool is regulated.

"In 1999, whenever we did electric deregulation, we didn't let SPS be deregulated," Swinford said, "because there weren't any lines coming in here. It would be like deregulating a monopoly."

The deregulated utilities operating under ERCOT have to account for all their fuel costs.

Since 1999, according to the Public Utilities Commission of Texas, the average household served by SPS has gone up $16.48. The average residential bills for utilities that were deregulated, TXU, Reliant, Central Power and Light and West Texas Utilities, all went up appreciably more.

The average residential bill for WTU went up $163.96. The increase for TXU was $98.30, for Reliant was $91.40 and for CP+L was $128.51.

"That's what happened to the deregulated deals," Swinford said.

The increase in costs was due to fuel charges.

"Transmission costs," Swinford said, "is what you spend for your kids and your grandkids. These lines you put in, they last forever, but your gas bill, you pay up every year."

In 1999, natural gas for generating electricity was $4.5 billion. Transmission costs were about $800 million.

In 2005, natural gas was $12 billion and transmission costs were $1.3 billion.

"What we have is people worrying about their whole bill," Swinford said.

"However, if they put in more transmission lines up here in the Panhandle, we could bring wind energy to ERCOT, and it would drive fuel costs down because there's no fuel cost with wind."

Swinford said that if transmission lines were run into the Texas Panhandle, it would cost the average residential customer about 77 cents a month.

According to economist Ray Perryman of the Perryman Group, the overall benefits would exceed the costs.

Texas. They abandoned the car with the woman still in the trunk, but the woman managed to escape, Switzer said.

In Wheeler County, Edwards and Peteet allegedly walked to the home of Jimmy and Tammy Maddox and their 15-year-old daughter. The escapees reportedly bound the family and left them in the cellar of the home, then stole property and the Maddoxes' vehicle.

Texas Department of Public Safety troopers spotted the vehicle and gave chase. Edwards and Peteet abandoned the vehicle off Highway 60 and continued on foot to a British Petroleum plant, where Peteet was found and arrested that night, according to reports.

Edwards was apprehended the next afternoon.

Oklahoma district court records online show that Peteet's record of offenses in that state include unauthorized use of a vehicle, unauthorized use of a vehicle after former conviction of a felony, burglary, knowingly concealing stolen property, obstructing an officer, eluding a police officer, speeding, seat belt violation, a protective order, an administrative order concerning child support, and escaping from the Department of Corrections.

if you don't have that wealth that's being created that in turn pays the taxes, that pay for programs like being able to give our teachers a $2,000 a year pay raise this last year, being able to put the additional dollars into our public schools, being able to create that type of infrastructure so that these young Texans cannot just dream some dreams but let those dreams become a reality. You must have that type of business climate in your state."

He said that is why Texas has been ranked the number one business climate in America for the last two years.

Perry said he loves governor conferences when he can tell California's Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger that Texas has recruited more businesses from the West Coast.

"That is exactly the reason why I met with the wind energy companies over the course of the last few months," Perry said. "They have dedicated themselves to spending $10 billion in infrastructure in places like Amarillo, Texas, and the surrounding area because they know that this is a place where wind energy is going to come, where the wealth and the jobs that are going to be created."

He said that is the reason he's going to be focused on the Port to Plains program.

That will be the corridor that will supply the land for transmission lines in addition to highways from Texline and Stratford to Eagle Pass.

"I tell you," Perry said, "I don't think the future of this state has ever looked brighter. I don't think it's ever been better. I don't think the liberals have ever been madder either."

Perry said he doesn't think liberals are mad because teacher pay is up or that student achievements in schools is on the way up or that property taxes are on the way down.

"I think they're mad because they didn't do it," Perry said.

He said Texas is on the right path.

"I don't want to turn back to the old days," Perry said. "I want to keep Texas on the path that we're on."

While Strayhorn stayed to answer questions, Perry left abruptly, declining any further comments.

What is the true danger of Halloween?

Halloween is finally here, and once again I am reminded of changing attitudes about the way we observe the holiday.

In recent years, it has become a matter of concern to some that the symbols of Halloween include monsters, ghosts, witches and other assorted ghouls. The trend is to protect youngsters from these images by offering a harvest celebration instead.

If magic and magical creatures are to be shunned, why is the Disney empire still raking in cash?

The Walt Disney Company has profited from movies and assorted by-products about, among other things, a man-turned-beast, a fairy godmother who can wave a magic wand and get results, a wizardly Mickey Mouse who can get brooms to sweep in a dance formation, a magic carpet, a place called Halloweentown which features many assorted Halloween creatures, a governess who can fly with the help of an umbrella and do all sorts of other impossible things, and innumerable talking animals.

Has the world of Disney suffered from the growing phobia about such fantasies? Not that I've heard about.

Some of the same people who are horror-struck at images of witches, vampires and ghosts think nothing of letting their kids watch Disney movies, play with Disney toys and read Disney books, all of which contain a fair amount of fantasy. One movie released by Touchstone Pictures, which The Walt Disney Company owns, even extends spooky Halloween themes to Christmas with "Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas," released in 1993.

I can understand the attitude that children should not be taught to aspire to be vampires or monsters or other such creatures.

What I still don't understand, however, is how kids are to be expected to cope in the real world and make up their own minds when they are apparently not being taught the difference between reality and fantasy.

Lack of ability to detect such differences leads to trouble in the long run. Someone who has never been taught about make-believe will have a harder time exercising their brains to create anything new and unique, I would imagine.

I grew up when the current worries about kids' exposure to Halloween creatures was not an apparent worry among parents. I don't remember a single one of my peers planning to be a real vampire, Frankenstein, or werewolf.

Disney was around, then, too. "The Wonderful World of Disney" was aired on one of the three major networks each week. Tinkerbell, a fairy with a magic wand, was always featured as the show's opening credits rolled.

I think that what we should all be much more concerned about are the lyrics some of our youth are listening to and the video games some of our kids are playing. I would be much more worried about a kid listening to lyrics about rape and murder than I would about that kid listening to a fantasy-themed song.

I would also be much more worried about children playing gory, mesmerizing video games, which can include constant physical violence and breaking a number of laws, than I would be about that child watching a fantasy-themed movie.

Kids definitely don't need any more violence in their lives. The real world provides more than enough of that, unfortunately.

What kids do need more of in their lives is guidance to know what's real and what isn't, and what's right and what's wrong.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 31, the 304th day of 2006. There are 61 days left in the year. This is Halloween.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 31, 1517, Martin Luther posted the 95 Theses on the door of the Wittenberg Palace church, marking the start of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

On this date:

In 1795, English poet John Keats was born in London.

In 1864, Nevada became the 36th state.

In 1926, magician Harry Houdini died in Detroit of gangrene and peritonitis resulting from a ruptured appendix.

In 1941, the U.S. Navy destroyer Reuben James was torpedoed by a German U-boat off Iceland with the loss of some 100 lives, even though the United States had not yet entered World War II.

In 1956, Navy Rear Adm. George J. Dufek became the first person to land an airplane at the South Pole.

In 1968, President Johnson ordered a halt to all U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, saying he hoped for fruitful peace negotiations.

In 1980, Reza Pahlavi, eldest son of the late shah, proclaimed himself the rightful successor to the Peacock Throne.

In 1984, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was assassinated by two Sikh security guards.

In 1999, EgyptAir Flight 990, bound from New York to Cairo, crashed off the Massachusetts coast, killing all 217 people aboard.

Ten years ago: In Pontiac, Mich., Dr. Jack Kevorkian was charged with assisting three suicides since June 1996 (he was later acquitted). Also in Pontiac, Jenny Jones testified at the trial of one of her talk show guests, Jonathan Schmitz, who was accused of killing another guest, Scott Amedure. A Brazilian Fokker-100 jetliner crashed in Sao Paulo, killing all 96 people on board and three on the ground.

Five years ago: New York hospital worker Kathy T. Nguyen died of inhalation anthrax, the fourth person to perish in a spreading wave of bioterrorism. Former Symbionese Liberation Army fugitive Sara Jane Olson pleaded guilty in Los Angeles to the attempted murder of police officers (she's currently serving a 13-year prison sentence). Microsoft and the Justice Department reached a tentative agreement to settle the historic antitrust case against the software giant. Cold War arms negotiator Paul C. Warnke died at age 81. The New York Yankees played the Arizona Diamondbacks in Game 4 of the World Series; the game ended a few minutes after midnight with the Yankees winning 4-3 and tying the Series at two games each.

Question: Should America trade at all?

There are only a handful of products that Americans import that cannot be produced at home and therefore create jobs for Americans. Let's look at a few of them.

We import cocoa from Ghana and coffee from African and Latin American countries. We import saffron from Spain and India and cinnamon from Sri Lanka. In fact, India produces 86 percent of the world tonnage of spices. There's absolutely no reason these products cannot be produced by Americans, and we could be cocoa, coffee and spices independent.

You say, "Williams, that's crazy! We don't have the climate and soil conditions to produce those products.

Many spices, for example, require a moist tropical environment."

No problem. We have the technology whereby we can simulate both the soil and weather conditions. We could build greenhouses in which to grow cinnamon trees and get our scientists to create the same soil conditions that exist in Sri Lanka. Greenhouses could also be built to simulate the climate conditions in Africa and Latin America to grow cocoa and coffee. In the case of cocoa, the greenhouses would have to be Superdome size to accommodate trees as high as 50 feet.

You say, "Williams, that's still crazy! Imagine the high costs and the higher product prices of your crazy scheme." I say, "Aha, you're getting the picture."

There are several nearly self-evident factors about our being cocoa, coffee and spices independent. Without a doubt, there would be job creation in our cocoa, coffee and spices industries, but consumers would pay a much higher price than they currently do. Therefore, nearly 300 million American consumers would be worse off, having to pay those higher prices or doing without, but those with the new jobs would be better off.

So let's be honest with ourselves. Why do we choose to import cocoa, coffee and spices rather than produce them ourselves? The answer is that it is cheaper to do so. That means we enjoy a higher standard of living than if we tried to produce them ourselves. If we can enjoy, say, coffee, at a cheaper price than producing it ourselves, we have

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ Oct. 23
 The Dallas Morning News on immigration reform solutions:

If you believe all the tough campaign talk about securing the border, including Gov. Rick Perry's latest ad, you'd think the immigration debate will conclude with a fence on the U.S.-Mexico border and nothing more.

But that may not be the case when you get beyond the sound bites of these congressional and state races.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, for example, told us last week Washington can't afford to stop at securing the border. Lawmakers, she said, need to work on a comprehensive plan after the elections. It would include a guest worker program allowing more foreign workers to earn work visas. Ms. Hutchison and Republican Rep. Mike Pence have crafted such a plan, which some believe can bring together those who want only to batten down the border with those who say security alone won't stop illegal immigration.

Ms. Hutchison is not alone. Dallas Rep. Jeb Hensarling, a conservative's conservative, told us that he remains open to some kind of guest worker program. Even Mr. Perry says he would "advocate a guest worker program, but would want to look at the details first." Texas is not the only place where voters can see and hear interesting wrinkles in the immigration debate. In key races, some of the security-only talkers trail their opponents, according to recent polls. That includes Indiana, where GOP Rep. John Hostetler, one of Congress' toughest, is sharply behind.

Tamar Jacoby of the Manhattan Institute explains the phenomenon this way: "Tough talk may be popular, but it doesn't mean voters are against comprehensive reform or are against candidates who want comprehensive reform."

In other words, there's a chance for a real solution to our immigration crisis, once you get past all the barking on the campaign trail.

Hayless hay ride

Shari and Mike Sublett bundle up for the cold trip around Lefors on the Hayless Hayride sponsored by Hi-Land Christian Church recently. Brrrrrrrr best described the evening trip!

Events calendar

- Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester, will have a "no-fear Bible adventure for all ages" beginning at 6 p.m. today at the church. Admission will be $2 per person. Children under 3 get in free. The event will include game booths, chariot rides, candy, door prizes and more. To learn more, call 665-7201.
- The Texas Department of State Health Services will be offering immunization clinics for vaccines that give protection against several childhood diseases including polio, diphtheria, lock jaw (tetanus), whooping cough (pertussis), measles, rubella, mumps, HIB (haemophilus influenzae Type B) and chickenpox (varicella). Flu vaccines may also be offered at designated clinics. The TDH will charge money to help with the cost of keeping the clinic open. The amount charged will be based on family income and size, and the ability to pay. The following clinic(s) will be offered: 9:30-11:45 a.m. and 1-3:30 p.m. Wednesday and Nov. 15, TDH, 736 S. Cuyler, Pampa.
- Amarillo College's Lamplight Youth Theatre Company will present the children's classic "Charlotte's Web" Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Ordway Hall on AC's Washington Street Campus. For tickets or more information, call (806) 371-5353.
- Friends of Aeolian-Skinner Opus 1024 of Amarillo will present Bradley Hunter Welch in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Amarillo. The award-winning organist holds bachelor and master degrees in music from Baylor University and Yale University, respectively.
- Pampa Book Club will meet and discuss "The Kite Runner" by Khaled Hosseini, Nov. 8. The club meets at 10 a.m. the second Wednesday of every month in the Texas Room at Lovett Memorial Library.
- Aleutian Island Military Veterans will reunite at 2 p.m. Nov. 8-10 in Laughlin, Nev. Veterans from all service branches, their guests/spouses spouses are welcome. For more information or to obtain a registration packet, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Al King, POB 130327, Sunrise, FL 33313.
- The Working Ranch Cowboys Association 11th World Championship Ranch Rodeo will be staged Nov. 9-12 in Amarillo. Cowboys from working ranches across the Northern Hemisphere will compete for the title of "Best in the World."
- Working for Progress will meet at 7 p.m. Nov. 14 in the conference room of Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa. Clean-up sites will be announced. All interested persons are invited to attend. Currently, the organization is in need of equipment and donations as well as volunteers. For more information, call 669-7616, (214) 417-2840 or 669-3553.
- The Ochiltree Expo Center in Perryton will be the site of a "Satellite Arts and Crafts Festival" from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Nov. 18 and from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Nov. 19. The event is being sponsored by the Satellite Advisory Board. For more information, call (806) 435-4970.

more money left over to buy other goods. That principle not only applies to cocoa, coffee and spices. It's a general principle: If a good can be purchased more cheaply abroad, we enjoy a higher standard of living by trading than we would by producing it ourselves.

No one denies that international trade has unpleasant consequences for some workers. They have to find other jobs that might not pay as much, but should we protect those jobs through trade restrictions? The Washington-based Institute for International Economics has assembled data that might help with the answer.

Tariffs and quotas on imported sugar saved 2,261 jobs during the 1990s. As a result of those restrictions, the average household pays $21 more per year for sugar. The total cost, nationally, sums to $826,000 for each job saved. Trade restrictions on luggage saved 226 jobs and cost consumers $1.2 million in higher prices for each job saved. Restrictions on apparel and textiles saved 168,786 jobs at a cost of nearly $200,000 for each job saved.

You might wonder how it is possible for, say, the sugar industry to rip off consumers. After all, consumers are far more numerous than sugar workers and sugar bosses. It's easy. A lot is at stake for those in the sugar industry, workers and bosses. They dedicate huge resources to pressure Congress into enacting trade restrictions. But how many of us consumers will devote the same resources to unseat a congressman who voted for sugar restrictions that forced us to pay $21 more for the sugar our family uses? It's the problem of visible beneficiaries of trade restrictions, sugar workers and bosses, gaining at the expense of invisible victims — sugar consumers. We might think of it as congressional price-gouging.

—Dr. Williams serves on the faculty of George Mason University as John M. Olin Distinguished Professor of Economics.

Tralee Crisis Center: A client's story after fleeing abuse

By ANITA RODRIGUEZ
Special to the News

When I first moved to Pampa, I was pretty much broken down from years of abuse and was an emotional wreck. I lived with my grandmother for six months, and she kept telling me a lot about a place called Tralee that helped individuals like me.

I was a single mom with a 5 1/2-month-old little girl. At this point in my life, I had left her abusive father for her benefit as well as my own. It was a very abusive relationship, and I didn't want her growing up the same way I did (scared of her father).

I did not want to get involved with the crisis center at all in the beginning but decided I needed to start the legal process of getting protection and custody before anything happened, so I made an appointment.

I was amazed and very happy to see everybody more than happy and willing to help me with anything I needed.

Two weeks later, my daughter was kidnapped by her father on one of his visits. I was totally devastated and helpless. I was a nursing mom, and my whole life had just been ripped away from me.

This is where Tralee stepped in and gave me all the support I needed. Not only did they help me find a lawyer, but they counseled me and explained any questions I had in great detail. God worked through them and opened my eyes to a lot of things I never understood before.

They worked until something was done, and a month later the judge granted me custody of my daughter and child support.

They helped me with their transitional living home, where I got to live for one year until I could get on my own feet. They helped me with anything I needed.

They helped me get HUD, so I could afford to get my own apartment and also helped me get my utilities on. I couldn't have done any of this without them.

They work hard and stand firm in their beliefs, not only for justice, but I believe they fight with God, and who can lose when He's on your side?

I am very grateful for all they have done. They were there when I needed help the most, and they still check on me to make sure I'm still doing okay.

There is a special place in my heart for Tralee, and I hope that someday I can help someone the way Tralee helped me.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

NEW YORK (AP) — The ugly divorce battle between Paul McCartney and Heather Mills McCartney was put on hold this weekend at their daughter Beatrice's third birthday party, according to news reports.

The two even spoke to one another during the 90-minute event, which was held at a children's play center in East Sussex, England, on Saturday, Britain's Hello! magazine reported. Monday, about 15 guests attended, the magazine said.

McCartney reportedly took off in a car with Beatrice 10 minutes before Mills McCartney departed with leftover birthday cake.

McCartney, 64, and Mills, 38, announced they were separating in May after four years of marriage. McCartney filed for divorce in July.

Their marital breakup has stirred a sensation not seen in Britain since Prince Charles and Princess Diana parted ways a decade ago, sparking immense rivalry in the British press for the best scoop.

Two weeks ago, the Daily Mail splashed its front page with what appeared to be legal papers drafted by Mills McCartney's lawyers against the former Beatle that alleged drug use, drunkenness, callousness about his wife's amputated leg, indifference to her pain and an assault with a broken wineglass.

Her lawyers said last week she is suing two newspapers over "false, damaging and immensely upsetting" stories surrounding her divorce from McCartney. She had been vilified in the media and was now being stalked by photographers, the firm said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reese Witherspoon and Ryan Phillippe, who started the year on an Oscar-winning high, are ending it on a low note: The couple have separated.

"We are saddened to announce that Reese and Ryan have decided to formally separate," publicist Nanci Ryder said in a statement issued Monday on behalf of the couple.

"They remain committed to their family and we ask that you please respect their privacy and the safety of their children at this time," the brief statement concluded. Ryder said she could not elaborate on the split.

Witherspoon, 30, and Phillippe, 32, have two children, 7-year-old Ava and 3-year-old Deacon. The couple, who co-starred in the 1999 movie "Cruel Intentions," married that year.

In March, Witherspoon won a best-actress Academy Award for her role as June Carter Cash in 2005's "Walk the Line." Phillippe co-starred in the best-picture winner, "Crash," and is starring in Clint Eastwood's latest film, the World War II drama "Flags of Our Fathers."

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Angelina Jolie has set up an independent Cambodian organization to administer a conservation project for remote northwestern areas of the country, the director of the new group said Monday.

Jolie terminated the contract with Cambodian Vision in Development and U.S. conservation group WildAid in December, said Stephan Bognar, executive director of the Maddox Jolie Project. The new group is named for Jolie's 5-year-old son Maddox, who was adopted from Cambodia in 2002.

Congresswomen critical of no-fly list found in database

By GILLIAN FLACCUS
Associated Press Writer

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A California congresswoman said she was briefly denied access to a United Airlines flight last week because her name appeared on a "no fly list" set up after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Rep. Loretta Sanchez, a Democrat who has been a critic of the no-fly list, said her staff had booked her a one-way ticket from Boise, Idaho, to Cincinnati through Denver. But they were prevented from printing her boarding pass online and at an airport kiosk.

Sanchez said she was instructed to check in with a United employee, who told her she was on the terrorist watch list. The employee asked her for identification, Sanchez said.

"I handed over my congressional ID and he started laughing and said, 'I'm going to need an ID that has your birthday on it,'" Sanchez said in a phone interview with The Associated Press.

The employee used Sanchez's birth date to determine she was not the same Loretta Sanchez on the list, and she was able to board her flight, she said.

Transportation Security Administration spokeswoman Jennifer Peppin said that for security reasons she couldn't confirm that the name was on the list. But she said that name mix-ups do occur.

"Generally what happens is people have a name that is very similar to someone who is on the no-fly list. It's the airlines' responsibility to do further checking," Peppin said.

Sanchez is favored to win a sixth term representing the 47th Congressional District, about 30 miles south of Los Angeles. The district includes many of the 24,000 Arab Americans who live in Orange County.

Sanchez said that she has fought to get some of her constituents' names off the no-fly list and that doing so can take up to six months.

"When they want to, TSA can make sure that you don't have that identification problem," she said. "Sometimes it's taken us months to get these people off the lists so they can travel in a normal way. I can't have to worry about that."

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I identified with the woman signed "No Hugs, Please," who complained of a man who considers himself a "good Christian" yet dispenses lecherous hugs in the name of fellowship. I am a slim, attractive female who is a United Methodist minister, and three older men in our church fall into the same category. Here's how I handled it: When one of the men zeroed in on me prior to worship as I was greeting people and proclaimed, "I need a big hug!" I quickly stepped back, pointed to his wife and said, "There ... help yourself!" He's never tried hugging me again. More often, when I see these predators coming, I simply extend one hand out to shake, and put my other hand on their shoulder to physically keep them at bay. After a brief handshake, I move away. That way, I'm in control of the situation. — PASTOR IN TEXAS

DEAR PASTOR: I heard from a number of readers of both sexes about how common this problem is. Thank you for sharing with my readers your successful technique. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have worked in the field of violence against women for six years. No one has the right to touch anyone without permission. Once "Uncle Harry" has been told by these women not to hug them anymore, he's legally obligated to cease. He needs to understand that if he continues to hug women who have asked him to stop, he may be breaking the law and could be arrested. Everyone has a right to her (or his) personal space. — GIGI IN HAWAII

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "No Hugs, Please" regarding thumbtacks in bras was just bizarre. Just because the man is in his 70s and goes to church doesn't mean he shouldn't be held responsible for sexual harassment. I'm also curious as to who a "fine" Christian such as Uncle Harry is married to. A woman who turns a blind eye to her husband's lecherous behavior is nothing but a fine example of denial! — ZERO TOLERANCE FOR LECHERY, GOLDEN, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: Uncle Harry, the older man who loves to hug women, pretending it's not sexual, won't be put off by simply being told, "Don't hug me." He'll laugh and hug harder, just to prove he's in control. I've found it useful to pretend I don't know there's any sexual component behind such behavior. Example, call out nice and loud, "Ow! You're hurting me!" no matter how gently he hugs. If you accuse him of improper intent, he'll only deny it. But if you state that he's causing you physical pain -- he can't deny that. It worked for me with a former co-worker who was a lot worse than Uncle Harry. — MILLIE IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Tacks in bras? Please say you were kidding. That's the old passive-aggressive way women dealt with men in the past because they were afraid to stand up for their rights and feelings. Imagine a child trying to hug you with those tacks. Besides, the sight of little points sticking out of my bra and dress is enough to send me into hysterics. — DEALT WITH IT VERBALLY IN FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I loved your reply regarding lecherous Uncle Harry. As long as he doesn't over-hug, he won't get the "point." Thanks! -- K.J. IN WINDSOR, COLO.

READERS: Today you have seen what the women have to say. On Thursday, I think you'll be equally interested in seeing the responses I received from the men!

Pampa in action

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Basketball

McNeely Field House came to life Monday night with the sounds of squeaking shoes and basketballs as the Lady Harvesters hosted Tascosa and Stratford in a preseason scrimmage.

During a phone conversation early this morning, Pampa head coach Troy Fry said, "It was a good scrimmage for us. We did some things good and we did a few things that we'll need to improve on."

Pampa has one more scrimmage set for Saturday when they will host teams from White Deer, Clarendon, Turpin (Okla.) and Fort Elliott. The Lady Harvesters open the regular season Tuesday on the road at Amarillo High School.

As he prepares his team for a third consecutive playoff run, Fry sees great value in these scrimmages. "We need to see how we do against other talent."

Football

The Pampa Junior High School 7th and 8th grade green and gold football teams will be home this afternoon to host the visiting Perryton Rangers. The games will mark the end of the season for Pampa. The action is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. at Harvester Field.

EMOTIONAL MOMENT

Parcells knew 'it was time'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Bill Parcells' friends saw the warning signs last week. The way he looked during and after the Dallas Cowboys' loss to the New York Giants left them worried about his health and happiness.

Some called. Others sent e-mails.

Jim Burt showed up. Burt, the nose tackle on Parcells' 1986 Super Bowl champion team with the Giants, flew to Carolina for the Cowboys' game against the Panthers on Sunday night and delivered a message on behalf of everyone who cares about the coach.

"He said, 'It was time,'" Parcells said. "We all know what that means in that group of guys that were together. You've got to show you're going to be there for somebody and that's a nice thing."

With Burt on the sideline and his team under orders to have fun, the Cowboys not only beat the Panthers 35-14, they did so in a way that gives Parcells hope for the rest of this season.

Dallas (4-3) trailed 14-0 at halftime, but quarterback Tony Romo led a comeback that included a 25-point fourth quarter. That was the most fourth-quarter points in team history, quite a feat for Romo in his debut as the starter. The defense had a solid game, too, limiting Carolina to 204 yards and none of the big plays that had been dooming the Cowboys.

"We went into the season with a lot of high expectations and we really weren't living up to them. We're still not there yet, but we hope that tonight will (help)," said Romo, who completed 24 of 36 passes for 270 yards, with a touchdown and an interception.

Once victory seemed certain, Parcells let loose on the sideline. He kissed several players and patted Terrell Owens on the cheek.

"I'd take all the crap I took in this business twice a day for about two years to feel just like I did last night once," Parcells said. "It's a great feeling to see your team go like that."

The thrill continued afterward, too.

Parcells had a 15-minute phone call with Tony LaRussa while on the team plane, and on Monday morning he heard from New Orleans Saints coach Sean Payton, a Dallas assistant the previous three years. Parcells received more e-mails from friends, and was especially appreciative of a "nice, long" one from a former player he hadn't heard from in more than a year.

"It's one of the gratifying things you have about this profession," Parcells said.

The outpouring of emotion might seem a bit much for an October game, but — to Parcells, at least — the season might have been riding on it. The win doesn't help as much as a loss would've been a huge setback for their playoff hopes.

The Cowboys went to Carolina having lost to three good teams and beaten three bad ones.

Coach Andy Cavalier: Upbeat and positive

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Pampa head coach Andy Cavalier is truly an upbeat motivator. If I knew nothing else about him, that would be enough.

All you need to do is what I do following every football game — point out what I think was right and what I think was wrong and then ask, "why?"

He has never shied away from a question and his answers are honest. And each is always followed by a 'team' positive.

For example, following Friday night's 13-10 loss to Randall, I asked Coach Cavalier, "Their (Randall's) defense was good, but it seemed mistakes and missed opportunities cost us more in critical situations. Fair statement?"

Cavalier's reply? "They were good defensively, but I would completely agree that mistakes and missed opportunities really hurt us. That fact is very frustrating, because I know we have a good football team. What we have done though is end drives with untimely penalties or missed assignments. I believe our kids will make big plays when presented with the opportunity again."

Now that's effective coaching.

I even tried him on with Zach Thomas' induction into the Texas Tech Hall of Honor Saturday. Imagine my mindset when I read the giant article about the event in the Globe-News. As the sports editor for the hamlet of Pampa, I take it personally when I am left out of the loop on anything concerning local sports. Seeing Cavalier's name mentioned in the Amarillo piece, I thought, "What the heck? Certainly he would have called, e-mailed or sent up smoke signals letting me know Thomas was being honored by his college alma mater." So I asked, "Just wondering how it is the Amarillo Globe-News knew about Zach's induction into the Texas Tech athletic Hall of Honor? I knew nothing about it."

Cavalier's reply? "I have no idea how they knew about Zach's induction. Lance (Lahnert) called me to ask me about it and that was the first I had heard about it. Just like Zach to not let anyone know about something like that."

Turns out it's the same problem that tends to frame me in a foolish light from time to time. Where Lance and his fellow GN gang benefit from a staff of many, I depend on my 'peeps'. Unfortunately, I missed this one.

Among the other queries I tossed at Cavalier following Friday night's game was, "Still, it was a hard-fought game between two pretty good teams. What did you say to your guys after the game?"

Cavalier's reply? "After the game I told them that in this game there are no guarantees. We played hard. Randall played hard. Neither team deserved to win that game more than the other. I told them I was proud of their effort, and that I can't wait until the next time one of them has the opportunity to make a big play for our team. I can't wait to see who it's gonna be and to watch as they come up big for us. Our playoff situation is not too far removed from what it would be if we had won this game, so let's go after these next two."

The 'next two' Cavalier refers to are at Dumas Friday night, and home against Palo Duro Nov. 10.

I can't wait to see them both.

Worth noting

James Coffee's punting was nothing short of spectacular Friday night. One punt in particular stood out from the others in which Coffee snagged a high snap from center, pulled it down, punted it and still managed to pin the Raiders near their own 5-yard line.

When will it air?

I spoke with Matt Fields (NBC Dateline) by phone Friday. He called to let me know the Dateline special about Pampa and the Harvester football team was being edited "as we speak" and that it should take about three weeks to get it ready to air. After that, "it is just a question of finding a programming slot to put it in."

Fields explained, "Shortly after we got back, the Amish shooting occurred and that took us away for a while."

Though a definite date is not know, my guess is the special will not air until around Thanksgiving, possibly not until December. Heck, it really would not surprise me if they have to wait until after the first of the year to air it.

I will keep you posted.

Meet the Harvesters

With the 2006-2007 basketball season about to get under way, Pampa fans will get the chance to see the boys and girls who will take the court this season during Meet the Harvesters Night, Saturday at McNeely Field House. Organizers say festivities will begin at 7 and will include door prizes, a silent auction, contests and more. It is also a great opportunity to meet the Harvesters and Lady Harvesters that will once again compete for the District 3-4A title and the playoffs. Lee, Padilla file for free agency

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — All-Star outfielder Carlos Lee and right-hander Vincente Padilla filed for free agency Monday, making it seven Texas Rangers who have filed.

The Rangers acquired Lee in a six-player trade in late July from the Milwaukee Brewers, who dealt their best player after he turned down a four-year extension worth at least $48 million.

Lee hit .322 with nine home runs and 35 RBIs in 59 games for Texas after 28 homers and 81 RBIs in 102 games for the Brewers.

It was his fifth straight season with at least 30 homers and 99 RBIs.

Padilla was a 15-game winner (10 losses) with a 4.50 ERA and 200 innings pitched in 33 starts for the Rangers, who acquired him from Philadelphia last winter.

The other Rangers who have filed for free agency are All-Star center fielder Gary Matthews Jr., infielder-outfielder Mark DeRosa, right-hander Adam Eaton, catcher Rod Barajas and infielder Eric Young.

Emotions

The one that drained Parcells was the loss to the Giants, at home in front of a national television audience.

With a chance to take over first place in the division, Dallas got behind early and never fully recovered. Every time the Cowboys started to make a move, they followed it with a huge mistake. As the failed rallies built up, so did Parcells' blood pressure.

"I was ashamed of the product," he said Monday.

Earlier in his career, Parcells might have vented his anger by ranting and raving. Experience taught him to hold back.

"You just don't want to do damage when you know the sensitivity level is the highest," he said. "I kind of have to be careful with my mouth because I can be a little sarcastic. I'm working on trying to improve that, though. And I think I am making progress, I really do, after a few years."

He finally let the team know how he felt Saturday night. He told them he wasn't having any fun, adding, "this job is not worth doing if you are not having at least a little bit of fun."

Asked Monday whether he considered giving up the job because it was no fun, Parcells described such thoughts as a hazard of the profession, saying all 16 coaches who lose each week wonder "What am I doing this for?"

"This can be a very tedious, tedious endeavor," he later said.

Now Parcells is waiting to see whether the performance against Carolina was just one great game or the start of something big. He used metaphors from two other sports to convey that message.

"You know, anyone can land a lucky punch," Parcells said. "Or, every once in a while, you're standing up there at the plate and they hit your bat. You're swinging, but they hit your bat. You didn't really hit the ball."

"I don't know. I won't call it a lucky punch and I don't think they hit the bat. If they did, so be it."

Extra points: Kickoff returner Tyson Thompson broke an ankle against Carolina and needs surgery to repair it, likely ending his season. Parcells said Thompson wasn't immediately headed for injured reserve, but probably will wind up there. ... Thompson was hit out of bounds, which Parcells called bad luck, not dirty play. "Hey, that's the game," Parcells said. "Things happen that are unfortunate and not much you can do about it." ... Rookie Skyler Green, who was converted from receiver to running back at the start of the season, could become the kick returner and No. 3 running back.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Nov. 1, 2006:

You will want to tap into your creativity to make more of what you want possible this year. Your sunny ways and style draw strong results. Think in terms of gains and greater happiness. An authority figure could be touchy or difficult at best. Let problems wash over, and know that you can deal with them. If you are single, the unexpected touches your relationships or potential bonds. Be easy on your mind and heart, and decide that a year with someone is the definition of a relationship. If you are attached, your bond could suffer from your wildness or lack of control. Look at your behavior. PISCES often inspires you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Listen to your instincts, and trust a sudden insight. You might be much harder on a child or loved one than you intend to be. You might want to reach out for someone at a distance. Find an expert, and you'll become more secure. Tonight: Some time off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Zero in on what you want. Know when to say enough and pull back. Sometimes you could feel tired or pushed by a personal or domestic situation. Know that you cannot please all the people all the time. Know when to break away. Tonight: Find your friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Remain on top of what is important. Know what is needed to take a stand. Others want to understand more of what is happening. Easy does it. Know when to put the brakes on a situation.

Tonight: A must appearance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Take an overview and understand what might be needed to get past a problem or issue. Surprises will happen if your creativity flows and you don't take a strong stand. Focus your energy, and you will accomplish much more. Tonight: Follow the music.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Togetherness becomes the theme. Listen to heartfelt feelings from an associate, special friend or loved one. He or she is coming from a dynamic and centered spot. You might need to revamp your plans, if not your thinking. Tonight: Say yes to an invitation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You might want to toss your hands in the air in the midst of frustration! Make it OK that you cannot handle everything, and you'll be on your way to a good day. Let others call the shots — as if you had a choice! Tonight: The answer is yes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Plunge into work knowing what you must get done if you are to enjoy yourself. You could become discouraged by another's reticence or need to be controlling. The only way to win a game is not to play. Tonight: Relax and put your feet up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ You naturally lean into what draws out the best in you. Allow more fun and caring to come through. Sometimes you hold back way too much. Think positively. Be careful with a risk that could impact your wallet. Tonight: Use your imagination.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Tension builds where you least expect it. Don't allow your nerves to run the show. Be spontaneous and loosen up. Not everything is as you see it. Laugh and relax more. Family and foundation are important. Tonight: Vanish as soon as you can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You might want to rethink recent decisions and head in a new direction. Spontaneity is great, but craziness might not be. A partner might not mean to be a downer but is. Financial dealings might not be up to snuff. Tonight: Out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Money can be a wild card, causing a situation to teeter and totter. You might want to rethink a personal matter before committing any further. Ask yourself what is good for you. You need to make that decision. Tonight: Say no if you need to.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ The unexpected disrupts your day. You might wonder what is going on with someone you care about. Know that you cannot predict every situation. Flow with and ride the waves of life, if you know what's good for you. Tonight: Talk up a storm.
