The News to sponsor Pampa Portraits contest again

By DENNIS SPIES
Editor

The Pampa News will sponsor the Pampa Portraits photo contest again this year in conjunction with the publication of the annual Pride Progress edition, scheduled to be delivered on March 30.

One section of the edition will be dedicated to photographs only. The winner of the Pampa Portraits contest will have their photo published on the cover of the section and will win $50 in Pampa Bucks. The best photos will be published in the section.

Eligible entries should be photographs of Pampa people in Pampa, taken by amateur photographers. Subjects will be of Pampans working, playing, relaxing or celebrating a special occasion. Photos of animals or scenery will not be considered, nor will photos that are copy-righted.

Entries can be prints or digital images in jpg format burned on a CD. They may be mailed or brought to the newspaper office. If mailed, they must be received by the deadline for entry. Photos submitted on a CD should be of the contest entry only.

Accompanying the photos should be identification of the people appearing and what they are doing. Also include the date and place with each entry. If a person other than the Sam Houston Elementary, located at Cook and Frost, is about to be demolished due to structural issues and vandalism.

The Pampa Independent School District would like to give bonded individuals the opportunity to keep a piece of the old building and they are accepting proposals for removal of architectural details from the exterior of the building prior to demolition.

Interested persons must present their bond and register their proposal with Carol Fields, executive director of business services, no later than 4 p.m. Friday. The removal of architectural details must be approved by PISD and the work must be complete before 4 p.m. March 16. "This will be on a first come first serve basis," Fields said. "There are some nice masonry reliefs and urns on the building and the school district would like to keep these, but the cost is too prohibitive to perform the work. So, we thought some Pampa residents might be interested in preserving these details."

Fields wanted to stress that individuals can only take items from the exterior of the building because the interior is not safe and the company

Hot steel ingots were held and maneuvered by a mobile manipulator charger while a press shaped them into cylinders which were later machined and bored to make gun barrels at Pampa's steel plant, top left. Harold Lewis, above, was heat treat and forge press supervisor at the plant. He retired in 2003 after 39 years at the facility. Pat Walsh, left, and Rod Gross worked at the plant from the mid-1970s through the first years of the new millennium. They are holding trade publications they helped create to show the plant's manufacturing capabilities.

Plant contributed to U.S. war efforts

A list of contributions from the Pampa area to various war efforts usually includes Pampa Army Air Field, a World War II prisoner of war camp near McLean, and the Pantex nuclear weapons facility.

That list should also include the site of manufacture of gun barrels for 60 years, from 1941 through 2001.

On Christmas Day, 1941, the Cabot Corporation steel plant opened at what is now National Oilwell, west of Pampa on Highway 60. The main purpose of the plant was to contribute to the war effort during World War II, although other items were also made at the plant in later years.

"On Christmas Day, 1941, they started making gun barrels. That was their first day of operation," said Pat Walsh, an engineer at the steel plant from 1974 to 2003. "The steel plant was put in for the war effort."

to do something for the war effort," said Rod Gross, former steel plant manager, who worked at the plant from 1975 to 2001. "The government said it needed a place safe from attack to make gun barrels. Cabot already had a facility here."

Over the years, the manufacture of gun barrels continued off and on, although the reason for their need changed. Barrels from the Pampa plant supplied the U.S. military during the Korean and Vietnam conflicts and battles in the Middle East.

The years of manufacturing gun barrels unrolled despite changes in name and ownership at the steel plant. The facility was known as the Cabot Machinery Division by 1975. In 1980, Ingersoll-Rand bought the steel plant. In the mid-1980s, the machinery division merged with Dresser's IDECO division and became known as IRI.

An individual bought the plant in 1994 without

No funeral for Anna Nicole before Tuesday

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Anna Nicole Smith's funeral will not take place before Tuesday, the court-appointed attorney for the starlet's baby daughter said Saturday.

Richard C. Milstein said in a statement he was working as quickly as possible on the funeral details for the former Playboy centerfold, who died in a Florida hotel Feb. 8 at age 39.

Circuit Judge Larry Seidlin ruled Thursday to let Milstein decide where to bury Smith. Milstein agreed with Smith's longtime companion, Howard K. Stern, to bury her in the Bahamas next to her son.

Smith's mother, Virgie Arthur, filed an emergency motion Friday asking Seidlin to reconsider his decision. It was not immediately known when Seidlin would rule on the emergency motion.

Arthur, who wants to bury her daughter near her home in Texas, will likely appeal in West Palm Beach if Seidlin refuses her emergency stay.

changing its name. Then in 2000, the facility became National Oilwell but continued making gun barrels for a time, according to Gross.

"When I retired in 2001, they were still making them then," Gross said.

Several sizes of barrels were manufactured, including 75-, 81-, 105-, 120- and 155-millimeter. A majority of those made were 105-mm, used during World War II, Korea and Vietnam, Gross said. Eight-inch barrels were made in two different lengths.

IRI gun barrels grace the U.S. military's Abrams M1A1 tank, first used in the Middle East and still in use. Bored tubes of steel were made by IRI, and the military provided the final forging, machining and heat treating.

IRI also made a five-inch Navy gun that could be re-lined to extend the life of the barrel, said Walsh.

"Various types of the same basic gun have been sold to different countries," said Gross. "But everything had to go through the U.S. military." The guns have gone to Egypt, Israel, Australia and Germany, he said.

Not all the gun barrels made by the steel plant ended up mounted on military vehicles and ships.

"During Operation Desert Storm, I got a call from a woman in the U.S. Arsenal at Watervliet, N.Y.," Gross said. "We had a lot of used guns in inventory that we'd cut up as scrap and reuse. We had some eight-inch guns."

"She asked how fast we could get her some crop-pings off an eight-inch gun. They wanted us to crop off the big end and send pieces eight feet long. We made 20 or 30 of them."

The pieces were shipped as requested, and Gross later found out how they were used.

"They put a cone on the front and fins on the back, and made a bunker buster bomb out of it. It would penetrate eight to 12 feet of concrete," he said.

Making gun barrels involved several processes and exacting work. Scrap steel and raw materials would be heated to molten state and additives such as chromium, molybdenum, vanadium and nickel would be added to give the metal the right properties, said Harold Lewis, heat treat and forge press supervisor who worked at the steel plant for 39 years and retired in 2003.

After the raw material was heated to a certain temperature for a certain number of hours, and after testing was done to make sure the material had the proper composition, it would be poured into giant "ladles" and carried to molds.

The liquid metal would be poured into the molds to make large bars, or "ingots," Lewis said. After the material cooled enough to be solid, it would be moved to a forge furnace. Next, a machine known as a manipulator would remove the ingots and carry them to a press, where they would receive their first shaping into barrels.

"The press was originally powered by steam," Walsh said. "In 1977 or 1978, it was converted to hydraulics. The largest mobile manipulator charger in the world was installed at that time."

The manipulator would hold the ingot and move it back and forth through the press as the press would squeeze down on the metal to shape it. The total force exerted by the press was three million pounds of pressure, Walsh said.

After the press work was completed, the ends would be cut off the length of steel, which was now multi-sided, and it would be moved to a cooling shed, where it would be cooled slowly over a period of several days, Lewis said.

"When the temperature of the metal was 300 degrees, it was removed and put into an annealing furnace," he said. The annealing process would strengthen and harden the metal.

The steel would be allowed to once again cool, and then would be machined into a round cylinder and bored. Final machining of the outside surface would be completed, and then the barrel would be heat-treated.

Heat treating consisted of three steps, Lewis said. The barrels would be normalized, quenched and tempered.

"Normalizing makes the steel homogeneous so it's all the same," he said.

The metal in the barrels was tested at various steps in the process to ensure it was of the proper quality and strength.

"After the three heat treatments, we did the final test," Walsh said. "We cut pieces off each end and tested for strength, ductility and cold temperature ductility."

If any flaws were found in a barrel, it would be cut up, taken back to the furnace and re-melted to start over. Some pieces could be sent through the heat-treating process to correct any faults without having to start over from scratch.

The plant could make one eight-inch barrel at a time.

"From the time to melt the raw material to shipping out the door, it took six to eight weeks to finish an eight-inch barrel," Gross said.

Other sizes could be manufactured in quantities of four to six, while smaller ones, like mortars, could be made 24 at a time.

"I would estimate that tens of thousands of guns were made during the time frame that the plant was in operation," Gross said.

"It bothered me sometimes, but you have to put it in perspective," Lewis said of the plant's manufacture of gun barrels.

"I loved working out there," Gross said. "We are very proud of what we did and what the plant did."

"It was a wonderful place to work," Walsh said. "Boredom was not in the vocabulary there."

picked to do the demolition will be starting on that next week.

Advanced Environmental Services from Odessa was voted on by the School Board to do this work. They will begin next week to start asbestos abatement on the inside of the building. This should not affect those taking items from the exterior. Once that work is done inside, they will proceed with tearing down the entire building and hauling off the debris to a landfill other than Pampa.

Sam Houston was built in 1930 when the need arose for additional schools to accommodate the growing population of Pampa. The enrollment that year for the school district was 3,015, which was a huge increase from the 2,000 students the previous year. Nine bids were considered for the construction and the winning bid of $40,500 was awarded to Boynton and Price. The elementary school was also known as the "North Ward School."

Additional wings were added to the building between 1933 and 1935. The Pampa branch of Clarendon College started using the building in 1978 for their classes. They continued using the building until they built a new one on Kentucky a few years ago.

Persons wishing to submit a proposal for the removal of architectural details, which is free of charge, must present their proposals to Fields at the Carver Center Business Office at 321 W. Albert by 4 p.m. Friday. This office is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday. For more information, call 669-4700.

Getting to the heart of the matter ...

I had cataract surgery about a year ago on one eye. The other eye has been clouding up lately and I was scheduled for it to be done Monday.

I would like to think that that is probably the reason some mistakes have increased in the paper lately.

When I scheduled the appointment, the nurse at the eye doctor took my blood pressure. She was alarmed because it was abnormally high.

It alarmed me, too, because my blood pressure has always been normal.

So I went to see my regular doctor.

He checked me out, gave me a prescription for something to keep the blood pressure down, and got me an appointment with a heart doctor.

The heart doctor checked me and asked a lot of questions, including did I ever have heart palpitations.

Yes, I said. The past few weeks I have felt them. He frowned and said I needed some tests at the hospital.

I have never had any indication of heart problems. In fact there is not a history of heart disease in my family. My maternal grandfather died young, at 49. But in 1942 there was no indication that it was heart failure.

My son did have a heart attack several years ago when he was 39.

He had a stent inserted to unblock an artery. He and I attributed that to too much ice cream.

So I look forward to having this battery of tests later on this week.

I postponed the cataract surgery until this matter is resolved.

This must be the year that I contribute to the doctors' fund.

I have appointments in March with the diabetes doctor and the annual visit to my urologist.

I suppose the older you get, the more things break down.

But I consider myself fortunate because I have friends who have had much worse health problems than I have had.

When I read books or listen to music that I enjoy, I like to share them with others.

Two new albums that came into my possession recently I would like to recommend.

One is Bob Dylan's latest, "Modern Times." The other is Bob Seger's "Face the Promise."

Both have given me a lot of enjoyment. Dylan is immediately likable. His gravely voice continues to entertain.

Seger is typical Seger. Hard driving rock and ballads. But it took a few times listening to enjoy. It's like good scotch whiskey. It has to grow on you.

A book my daughter and son in law gave me for Christmas is simply fascinating. It is well written and almost terrifying.

It is "The Historian" by Elizabeth Kostova.

She has written an amazing tale, a chilling historical mystery about the medieval past of Vlad the Impaler whose gruesome rule in the 15th century gave us the legend of Dracula.

I will not get into the plot too much so as not to ruin it for you.

I would highly recommend this as a nice piece of literature. Kostova is a brilliant writer, and as a student of the written word, I enjoy a finely written tale.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Feb. 25, the 56th day of 2007. There are 309 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 25, 1913, the 16th Amendment to the United States Constitution, giving Congress the power to levy and collect income taxes, was declared in effect by Secretary of State Philander Chase Knox.

On this date:

In 1308, Edward II was crowned King of England.

In 1707, Italian playwright Carlo Goldoni was born in Venice.

In 1779, American forces led by George Rogers Clark routed the British from Fort Sackville in the Revolutionary War Battle of Vincennes in Indiana.

In 1836, inventor Samuel Colt patented his revolver.

In 1901, U.S. Steel Corp. was incorporated by J.P. Morgan.

In 1948, Communists seized power in Czechoslovakia.

In 1957, the Supreme Court, in Butler v. Michigan, overturned a Michigan statute making it a misdemeanor to sell books containing obscene language that would tend to corrupt "the morals of youth."

In 1964, Cassius Clay (later Muhammad Ali) became world heavyweight boxing champion by defeating Sonny Liston in Miami Beach, Fla.

In 1986, President Ferdinand Marcos fled the Philippines after 20 years of rule in the wake of a tainted election; Corazon Aquino assumed the presidency.

Walk-about town observations ...

For several months now, I've been trying to walk an hour per day and go somewhere different each day. There are still a lot of cars out there without updated tags or safety stickers. I called City Hall about this and was told there were not enough police to take care of enforcing this city ordinance unless a complaint was filed, which meant any one could find out who signed the form. I would not do this because of possible "pay-back."

Aside from the cars, I found that most areas were equally trashy. Most trash is fast food trash - cups, paper, plastic water bottles and some aluminum cans.

Regardless of where the trash is thrown out, it always goes downhill to the creeks. We build our parks on creeks where our kids play, so we pollute our parks, lakes and streams. If you don't believe me, walk down our hike and bike trail and see all the trash.

The simple answer is for everyone to carry a trash bag in the car and don't throw garbage out the window. It's so easy to carry a plastic bag or grocery sack for trash. Do you think it makes a lot of sense to throw trash out of our cars into areas where our kids play?

Idle American: Ill winds that blow ...

The rarity of lightning bolts zapping the same location twice is oft mentioned, but what about the wind?

Poor New Orleans! First, this city was KOed by Hurricane Katrina. News accounts of the carnage, immense losses and raw courage continue to pour from the Crescent City, now more than a year later.

Then, a few days back, a tornado ripped through part of the already devastated area, wiping out some homes for a second time ...

Dare we even wonder if good can be extracted from such ill winds?

Of course we can! Katrina brought out the best in people, grassroots and beyond. Legions of folks have pitched in to show their generosity and concern ...

One offshoot of Katrina's fall-out is that officials noted that precious few facilities are available to provide haven for multiple thousands of victims.

Governmental agencies are now funding construction of emergency shelters, and one such project is underway in Huntsville, Texas. There, many partnerships are involved, and no group is more delighted than a dwindling number of World War II military veterans.

Thanks to their untiring efforts as volunteers who have had a vision for a permanent facility for seven years, it is now much closer to reality. And a big chunk of the thanks goes to FEMA ...

A $2.8 million FEMA grant is the anchor for one of two 14,000-square-foot buildings that will house a convention center and emergency shelter for up to 800 people. This is the first such grant in Texas. The State of Texas has kicked in $360,000, and plans call for completion of this part of the project by September of 2008.

Funds are still being sought by the H.E.A.R.T.S. Veterans Museum of Texas. A recent grant of $50,000 from AT&T has lifted their spirits, and gifts continue to come in. (The acronym stands for Helping Americans Remember Through Serving.)

We tip our hats to these folks, and wish them well in this noble undertaking. They simply won't give up in telling patriots, stories, particularly from World War II. May their fund-raising efforts succeed quickly to complete the overall project adjacent to the Texas Prison Museum on Interstate Highway 45 ...

Military veterans are heroes to me, and to hear first-hand accounts of World War II from people who were there clearly brings chill bumps.

One is Col. M.B. Etheredge. At age 91-plus, he spends much time at the museum, taking time off now and then to fish.

This long-time educator was once Texas' youngest school superintendent at age 26. The most decorated surviving World War II veteran, Etheredge is the only recipient of three Silver Stars whose awards were not made posthumously. This three-term Texas legislator also was awarded the Texas

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ Feb. 19
 The Dallas Morning News on the 2008 presidential race:

Instead of keeping close tabs on all the 2008 candidates, we're tempted to rely on a recently spotted bumper sticker for help.

"Honk if you're not running for president," it says.

After all, the breathless who's in, who's out, round-the-clock coverage of next year's election seems more appropriate for a contest that will be decided in 20 days not 20 months. And while we'd like to cast a vote for a timeout until 2008, the fact is that this has morphed into an election year in many respects.

With a wide-open race, a fundraising frenzy and a front-loaded primary schedule, candidates can't afford to wait. By this time next year, the field will have narrowed and the nominations will be nearly decided.

The 2008 campaign will be the first in many voters' lifetimes without an incumbent, a former vice president or a likely successor in the mix. So contenders are in a race to build name recognition.

Adding to the rush is the price of admission for a presidential campaign. Gaudy figures in the $100 million range have been banded about as bare minimums for viable candidates. A political strategist recently advised that those aiming for the White House should be spending more time fundraising than sleeping at this stage of the game.

States eager to have influence in the nominating process also have contributed to the phenomenon of the forever campaign. The 2008 primaries are inching closer and closer to 2007, with states jockeying for position and overloading the calendar with January and February contests.

Finally, the growing number of cable networks and Web sites detailing every political punch and counterpunch exacerbates voters' feelings of pre-election exhaustion.

It's still a long slog to Nov. 4, 2008. But the next few months could prove pivotal. So, to voters we say: Tune in. And pace yourselves.

• Ten free Colorado blue spruce trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation throughout the month. The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign. The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between March 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge. Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's colorful bimonthly publication, "Arbor Day" and "The Tree Book" with information about tree planting and care. To receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to Ten Free Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, by Feb. 28. For more information, check out the foundation's Web site at www.arborday.org on the Internet.

• The Texas Teacher of the Year nomination deadline is March 1. Nomination forms are available online at www.teachers.com/oty. The award will include a prize of $1,000 and a $500 grant to the teacher's school. The contest is sponsored by Teachers' Insurance Plan.

• The Texas Armed Guard Association will hold its next reunion March 1-3 in Fredericksburg, Texas. All World War II Merchant Marines are invited to attend. The association has no dues and is trying to reach all guardsmen who do not know about the organization. Time is running out for all World War II veterans. To find out more, call (325) 942-6756, (512) 671-3464, (210) 681-2120 or e-mail mocksatx@sbcglobal.net. For reservations, call 1-800-274-3762.

• CASA of the High Plains will hold an information meeting at 6 p.m. March 5 at the Brown Alliance for Children, 315 N. Ballard, in Pampa. CASA, a non-profit organization, stands for Court Appointed Special Advocates. CASA trains and supports volunteers to work with children caught in the court system through abuse or neglect. CASA speaks for the children and their best interests.

• The late registration deadline for the next nationwide ACT exam is March 23. The early registration deadline is March 9. Students who miss the early deadline will be charged an additional fee. The test will be administered April 14. To find out more, contact your high school counselor or log onto www.actstudent.org on the World Wide Web.

Germany and Austria a couple of years ago, we were amazed at how clean these countries were. We saw absolutely no trash or clutter around the houses. Nearly every place was immaculate. There were a few exceptions in towns with vacant buildings, but compared to Pampa, it was still clean. Those countries have heavy fines for violating the "neatness" rules and they apparently enforce the laws. What is the point of having ordinances passed by the city commissioners if they won't be enforced? An occasional lapse is understandable, but when people leave trash and junk around constantly, something needs to be done.

Medal of Honor ...

John H. Fuchs, now 83, has a story to tell. In the Army Air Corps, his first B-17 mission over Germany came in the dark hours of Sept. 12, 1944, with the Eighth Air Force. His plane was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

The crew survived, but was captured 11 days later. Five were executed and four survived. John and another member of the crew spoke in hushed tones about their experiences when they convened last fall in Denver. (At the conference, the former POW got to tell about learning to drive an automobile AFTER returning from the war!)

Back in September, one of the few remaining B-17s came to Huntsville. It is flown around the country through the auspices of the Liberty Bell Foundation.

John took a flight around the area, landed, and then did it again. Now, he can claim that two of his three B-17 flights turned out well! The nostalgic flights over Huntsville were on the 62nd anniversary of the date his plane was shot down over Germany ...

Their military memorabilia continues to grow at the HEARTS Museum, and visitors leave in awe. Seeing is believing, and hearing accounts of the action bolsters the experience. Students from surrounding schools and universities have many questions answered when visiting there.

Oh, sometimes a few whoppers are told, too. One asked a visitor if he had ever noticed that geese, flying in formation, always have one line that is longer.

"Do you know why one line is longer?" he asked.

Then, he answered his own question: "Because there are more geese in that line," he laughed ...

Pampa High students compete in Borger

Twelve marketing education students from Pampa recently competed in Texas DECA District 8 Career Development Conference at Frank Phillips College in Borger.

The 12 students from Pampa High participated in curriculum-related competitive events which tested their knowledge and skills of various marketing, merchandising and management concepts.

Approximately 200 students and their advisors took part in the conference. Melissa Burkhalter was elected District 8 president.

Along with Burkhalter, PHS advisor Donna Crow said the following students represented the local chapter at the conference in the following individual categories: Jessica Howe, food marketing series event; Isela Resendiz and Jessica Tedford, full-service restaurant management; Lizbeth Herrera and Isset Solis, fashion merchandising promotion plan; Amber Fisher, quick serve restaurant; Micheal Kane and Levi Cave, technical sales event; Michelle Linder, food marketing associate level; and Marcus Pena and Richard Leal, sports and entertainment team decision making event.

Linder, Kane, Solis, Herrera and Cave placed first in their respective events and will advance to state competition March 8-11 in Corpus Christi. Tedford, Leal and Pena were first alternates, and Fisher was third alternate.

Dobson Cellular announces upcoming name change

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Dobson Cellular Systems — a name long associated with telecommunications in western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle — is changing its name.

Inc., will market its wireless service in Western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle under the trade name of Cellular One from Dobson Cellular Systems.

"Over the years, as Dobson has expanded its footprint to 17 states and grown into the leading provider of wireless service in rural America, we have consistently used the Cellular One brand name," said Chief Marketing Officer Tom Roberts. "Last year, we were able to purchase the Cellular One name and believe the time is right to make the name change in our Dobson Cellular markets."

The towns of Anadarko, Carnegie, Cordell, Hinton, Weatherford, Clinton, Elk City and Chickasha, Okla., and Pampa, Borger and Perryton, Texas, will be part of the name change, Roberts said. Overall, the company operates more than 70 wireless markets nationwide utilizing the Cellular One brand name.

"The Dobson family name has a strong reputation in these areas and nothing will change except the name on the door," he said. "Just as E.R. Dobson first brought landline telephone service to rural Oklahoma 70 years ago, we look forward to continue bringing cutting-edge wireless telecommunication services to the area."

In particular, Roberts cited the company's ongoing commitment to network expansion and enhancements in western Oklahoma. Over the past year, Cellular One from Dobson Cellular Systems has turned on multiple new towers in the area that increase capacity, reduce blocked calls and give customers overall better coverage.

'Over the years, as Dobson has expanded its footprint to 17 states and grown into the leading provider of wireless service in rural America, we have consistently used the Cellular One brand name.'

Chamber luncheon

Coco Duckworth, a representative of Encourage Consulting in Amarillo, spoke at a recent Pampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting. Duckworth discussed the importance of leadership coaching and team building in today's work environment.

Some cocoa may improve blood flow in the brain

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A nice cup of the right kind of cocoa could hold the promise of promoting brain function as people age.

In an increasingly aging world, medical researchers are seeing more cases of dementia and are looking for ways to make brains work better.

One potential source of help may be flavanols, an antioxidant found in cocoa beans that can increase blood flow to the brain, researchers said at the recent annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Ian MacDonald of England's University of Nottingham reported on tests given to young women who were asked to do a complex task while their brains were being studied with magnetic resonance imaging.

Among the women given drinks of cocoa high in flavanols, there was a significant increase in blood flow to the brain compared with subjects who did not drink the cocoa, he said.

This raises the prospect of using flavanols in the treatment of dementia, marked by decreased blood flow in the brain, and in maintaining overall cardiovascular health, he said.

The next step, MacDonald said, is to move from healthy subjects to people who have "compromised" blood flow to the brain.

Norman Hollenberg of Harvard Medical School said he found similar health benefits in the Cuna Indian tribe in Panama. They drink cocoa exclusively.

But the cocoa typically sold in markets is low in flavanols, which usually are removed because they impart a bitter taste, Hollenberg said. He also said the findings do not mean people should indulge in chocolate.

"Chocolate is a delight. It can never be a health food because we have a calorie problem," Hollenberg said.

But, he added, in cocoa a lot of fat is removed from the chocolate. "I see a bright future for cocoa," he said.

Hollenberg, an expert in blood pressure, studied the Cuna because those who live on native islands do not have high blood pressure.

He said he found that when tribe members move to cities, their blood pressure rises. A major difference is the consumption of their own prepared cocoa, which is high in flavanols. In native areas, that is all they drink; in cities they adopt the local diet.

School board workshop in offering for interested individuals in area

AMARILLO — Area school board candidates and interested citizens can learn more about the demands and rewards of school board service at a candidate workshop, scheduled from 7-9 p.m. Thursday, March 1, at the Region 16 Education Service Center in Amarillo.

The workshop will provide interested community members and individuals thinking about running for the board with a better understanding of what is involved in being elected and serving as a local trustee. Experienced school board members will explain board members' key responsibilities and outline the qualities necessary for effective service.

Topics to be covered include what it's like to be a trustee, key responsibilities of the board, division of authority with staff, how to campaign constructively, and where to find more information. Participants will also view A Call to Service, a Texas Association of School Boards' video highlighting many aspects of board service and featuring several experienced school trustees.

The workshop is open to anyone. Admission is free. For more information about the workshop, call Tanya Barnett at TASB, 512-467-0222 or 800-580-8272, extension 6248, or check the TASB Web Site at www.its.tasb.org/candidates for other dates and locations.

Deadline nears for March 2 Discover event at West Texas A&M University

CANYON — It's time to Discover WT.

West Texas A&M University is hosting a one-day preview opportunity for transfer students and high school juniors, seniors and their parents to come and learn more about the University. Registration for Discover WT begins at 8:30 a.m. Friday, March 2 with a quick breakfast with WTAMU alumni at the Alumni Banquet Facility on campus.

The day's activities include an Academic Showcase featuring highlights from each of the University's five colleges. A Department Open House follows where prospective students can tour individual departments, visit with current students and meet faculty members.

A Student Organization Showcase will give students a chance to discover the various ways to get involved in campus groups and organizations. WTAMU representatives also will be available to answer questions about financial aid, the Honors Program, athletics and more.

Students attending Discover WT can apply for summer or fall 2007 admission and the $25 application fee will be waived. There also will be opportunities for winning various prizes and scholarships.

Campus tours are on the agenda as well as a chance to view the University's residence halls, Horse Center and Nance Ranch.

Discover WT is a free University-sponsored event. The reservation deadline is Tuesday, Feb. 27. Another session is scheduled for Monday, April 2. For more information or to make reservations, call 1-800-99-WTAMU or log on to www.wtamu.edu/discoverwt.

Russell, Quinn ready for race to be No. 1

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Brady Quinn isn't ready to admit defeat in the race to be the top pick in the NFL draft. Seven weeks since JaMarcus Russell shot up the draft chart after beating Quinn in the Sugar Bowl, Quinn delivered his first major rebuttal in the competition to be selected first overall in April.

"I'd tell them I'm the most prepared collegiate player in the draft," Quinn said Friday at the annual NFL scouting combine. "There's not one other player in college that's had the coaching I've had in the last two years, and I feel I'm the best leader."

Now it's up to the NFL scouts and coaches to make their judgments.

Like great draft debates of the past — Drew Bledsoe or Rick Mirer, Peyton Manning or Ryan Leaf, Eli Manning or Philip Rivers, Vince Young or Matt Leinart — this one could be risky.

Russell offers a rare blend of size, mobility and strength. He measured-in Friday at 6-foot-6, 265 pounds — nine pounds heavier than his playing weight.

Russell says he can throw a football 83 or 84 yards, but it wasn't until he led LSU to a 41-14 victory over Quinn and Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl that he gained national prominence. Less than a week after the game, when Russell heard he was projected as a first-round pick, he announced he was leaving school early.

"I had three goals coming into the season. I wanted to win the national championship, win the Heisman and be the No. 1 pick in the draft."

— Brady Quinn

"I'd been through a few games that went well and we found a way to pull them out," Russell said. "Sometimes you get the recognition, sometimes you don't. But that bowl game really helped."

Even though this draft class contains other talented quarterbacks such as Heisman Trophy winner Troy Smith from Ohio State and Chris Leak, who led Florida to the national championship, most considered Quinn the best.

That changed after Quinn injured his knee against Southern Cal and aggravated it in the Sugar Bowl. Doctors advised him to sit out the Senior Bowl, and Russell soon moved ahead in the rankings.

With Oakland holding the top pick, and Al Davis' philosophy of throwing deep, Russell seemed like the odds-on favorite to go first. They even cleared a spot Thursday by letting Aaron Brooks go.

Quinn says not so fast. Like Russell, Quinn won't work out in Indianapolis. He was measured at 6-3, 232 pounds and has scheduled two pro days at Notre Dame — March 4 and March 22 — in an attempt to reclaim top-pick status.

"I had three goals coming into the season," Quinn said. "I wanted to win a national championship, win the Heisman and be the No. 1 pick in the draft. The first two didn't work out so well. The third we'll have to see."

Quinn has several advantages. Playing in Charlie Weis' pro-style offense may make for a smoother transition from college to the NFL. Weis also has a reputation for turning quarterbacks into stars. His prized pupil is three-time Super Bowl winner Tom Brady of New England.

Quinn, who threw for 93 touchdowns and more than 11,500 yards, cannot be pegged as a system quarterback since he also played in Tyrone Willingham's West Coast offense, another staple in the NFL.

And with the exposure Notre Dame typically receives on any given week, Quinn has proven he can handle pressure similar to what an NFL quarterback faces.

Russell, however, is believed to have more potential. He threw for more than 6,000 yards at LSU, where he was 25-4 as a starter, and many around the league think he's still improving.

It's a quandary teams seem to face each year.

Not surprisingly, college teammates of Quinn and Russell at the combine take opposing views.

"I definitely believe he (Quinn) is the quarterback in the draft by far," said running back Darius Walker, who played at Notre Dame. "Nobody has the ability he has to read defenses and the experience in the system that he's played under."

Wide receiver Dwayne Bowe, who played with Russell at LSU, counters: "He's ready to get things rolling and make an impact on any team he's going to."

Video review helps Knicks win and almost costs Grizzlies victory

By The Associated Press

Video replay helped the New York Knicks get a victory, and almost cost the Memphis Grizzlies one.

Channing Frye made two free throws after a video review put 0.8 seconds back on the clock, and New York beat Milwaukee 95-93 on Friday night, handing the Bucks their season-high seventh straight loss.

With the game tied, Stephon Marbury was short on a jumper as time was running out, but the officials called a loose-ball foul on Bucks center Andrew Bogut. After reviewing video of the play, the officials found the foul for holding off Frye came with time remaining.

"My reason for going over to the replay was to determine that the foul that was blown during the game, to make sure there was time on the clock when the foul occurred," official Ken Mauer said.

The Bucks couldn't get a shot off and lost their season-high seventh straight.

"Usually whistles aren't blown in loose-ball situations that close," Milwaukee coach Terry Stotts said. "I didn't see the play. I didn't see if he fouled him. I was surprised. I think we're all surprised the whistle blew."

Nearly two hours after the Knicks' bizarre ending, the Grizzlies clung to a 102-101 lead over Portland when Damon Stoudamire was fouled with 0.8 seconds left. He made the first free throw, but missed the second on purpose.

Ime Udoka grabbed the rebound and appeared to stumble, but Lawrence Roberts was called for the foul.

Time expired in the game but the officials huddled, put the 0.8 back on the clock and sent Udoka to the free-throw line. He made his first shot, but the second bounced off.

About time Wimbledon doles out equal paychecks

By NANCY ARMOUR
AP Sports Columnist

There are some traditions in sports that are timeless and worth preserving: The seventh-inning stretch, conceding putts and the exchange of jerseys after a soccer game, to name a few. Then there are a few worth chucking. The blazers who run Wimbledon finally recognized that, joining the 21st century with their decision to pay women the same as men.

"We think now is absolutely the right time to make this move," club chairman Tim Phillips said.

Actually, the right time would have been about two decades ago. We've moved well beyond the days when women players wore ankle-length flannel skirts, and we're also well past those laborious moonball rallies that sent fans running for the coffee urn. Roger Federer may be the greatest athlete on the planet (sorry, Tiger) these days, but the women are the driving force in tennis.

Much like golf and even NASCAR, tennis' popularity depends on its personalities. Sure, some folks will tune in to watch Federer dissect yet another opponent with a game so perfect instructors will show videotapes of it for generations to come.

But Federer is — dare we say it? — boring. He'll never berate a line judge like John McEnroe, throw tantrums like Jimmy Connors. He doesn't have Andre Agassi's charisma, and it's a good bet there won't be an in-your-face ad campaign about his image.

When it comes to personality, it's all about the Williams sisters and Maria Sharapova.

Look at the Q Scores, the thing that measures name recognition. Serena Williams is 26, with big sis Venus (25) right behind. Sharapova scored a 19, the same as Agassi. Andy Roddick was a 15. Federer? A 14.

Granted, this comes from a survey of Americans who call themselves general sports fans. But the results were similar on Forbes' Celebrity 100, a measure of earnings and exposure.

Sharapova ranked 63rd last year, well behind the Rolling Stones, Brangelina and even Rod Stewart. She did, however, finish ahead of Diddy and Leonardo DiCaprio.

The only other tennis players in the top 100? Serena at No. 87, and Venus at 90.

Look at the commercials. Open any magazine that doesn't have "tennis" in the title these days, and odds are you'll find Sharapova touting something — a watch, camera, her oh-so-pretty Nike wear. Federer doesn't even get to wear a cute white moustache in a milk ad.

"Our decision ... recognizes the enormous contribution that women players make to the game and to Wimbledon," Phillips said.

The U.S. and Australian opens caught on years ago, and have been dividing their spoils accordingly. The French Open gave its winners identical paychecks last year, though the men still got more prize money overall.

But no matter how far the women came — a campaign Billie Jean King started back in the 1970s — it didn't matter so long as the world's most famous tournament considered them less than equal.

Granted, the pay disparity was minuscule. Federer's prize of $1.170 million last year was $53,000 more than Amelie Mauresmo's — pocket change for players who make millions.

That's not the point, though.

"It was really a matter of principle," Mauresmo said. "It is a question of equality." These days, women can be anything they want to be: doctors, lawyers, iron workers, maybe even president of the United States. If the work is the same, the pay should be, too. End of story.

In holding out Wimbledon's suits noted that men's matches are best of five while the women play best of three. Other critics of equal pay contend that the level of play on the men's side is superior, while the women have little depth beyond their top 10 or 12 and their early-round matches often lack suspense.

It's not as if there are a bunch of nail-biters on the men's side, though. More often than not, the men play for the right to get crushed by Federer. Take the Australian Open.

This was supposed to be the tournament where Roddick finally challenged Federer. Instead, Federer needed a mere .83 minutes for his semifinal pasting of the American. His victory over Fernando Gonzalez in the finals was an afterthought.

It was Serena Williams who gave the tournament its buzz, winning her eighth Grand Slam despite being unseeded and in less-than-ideal shape. Her quarterfinal victory over Shahar Peer lasted 2 1/2 hours, the last set alone taking 83 minutes.

She earned every penny that fortnight — just as the women do at every tournament. It's about time the folks at Wimbledon recognized that.

18-year-old rookie in the hunt at Fields Open

KAPOLEI, Hawaii (AP) — Angela Park doesn't have any logos on her cap or golf bag — yet.

The 18-year-old rookie, making just her fourth LPGA Tour start, will certainly have sponsors lining up if she wins the Fields Open on Saturday. Park is on the verge of becoming the youngest winner in tour history.

She was a stroke behind leader Stacy Prammanasudh, who shot a 4-under 68 and was at 10-under 134 after the suspended second round of the Fields Open.

"I'm really thankful that I've gotten this far," she said. "I always wanted to be here so I don't really feel, 'Oh my God, I feel so out of place.'"

Park was at 9 under with nine holes left when play was halted late Friday because of darkness, following a three-hour rain delay earlier in the day. Jee Young Lee also was 9 under, with four holes left.

They were among 70 players who'll have to finish their rounds early Saturday.

Morgan Pressel, also 18, shot a 65 and was at 8 under.

After sharing the opening-round lead, Park went to her hotel and had dozens of voice mails and text messages from people she hasn't heard from in a long time.

"They're like, 'Angela, congratulations.' I'm like, 'The tournament's not over yet, but thanks,'" she said.

Park, who has five AJGA wins, earned her first LPGA paycheck last week — worth $6,625 — for her 33rd-place tie at the season-opening SBS Open. As an amateur, she tied for 15th at the 2006 Kraft Nabisco Championship, her only LPGA start of the year.

Park, who shared the first-round lead with Prammanasudh, patiently waited out the delay to start her round. When she finally teed off, she wasted no time climbing the leaderboard.

"I was four strokes back, obviously, and I knew I had to get a couple birdies in before it was sundown," she said.

The youngest LPGA Tour member in the field followed three straight pars with three straight birdies to reach 9 under. She hit a lob wedge to a foot to set up her first birdie on the par-5 13th. She made a 25-foot birdie putt on 15.

Despite not having a sponsor, Park could become an international marketing machine. She's unusually comfortable in front of reporters and speaks three languages fluently, including English, with a touch of Valley Girl. She has also studied Japanese.

The Brazilian-born Korean grew up in Torrance, Calif., and recently moved to Orlando, Fla.

Park and Pressel are vying to supplant Paula Creamer as the youngest winner of a full LPGA Tour event. Creamer won the 2005 Sybase Classic at 18 years, 9 months, 17 days.

Pressel got close at last week's season-opening SBS Open. She shared the lead heading into the final day and closed with a 74 to tie for fourth.

The 27-year-old Prammanasudh is hoping to hold the youngsters off.

"I'm making the birdies. I've got to continue doing that," she said. "There's too many tough competitors behind me."

The former University of Tulsa standout won the Franklin American Mortgage Championship in 2005 for her lone LPGA Tour title. That was the last tournament she led heading into the final round.

Mi Hyun Kim (67) and Carri Wood (68) were at 6 under. Natalie Gulbis (67) was another stroke back at 5 under tied with Aram Cho (68), Michele Redman (68), Ai Miyazato, Karrie Webb and Nicole Castrale were still on the course at 5 under.

Wadkins leads ACE Group Classic

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Wadkins shot an 8-under 64 on Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Champions Tour newcomer Mark O'Meara, Allen Doyle and Gil Morgan after the first round of The ACE Group Classic.

Wadkins, who won the The Boeing Championship and Ford Senior Players last year, had two eagles, five birdies and one bogey on the Quail West Golf and Country Club course.

"I kept the ball where I was putting uphill most of the day, so that made things pretty simple," Wadkins said.

Wadkins eagled the par-5 first and 13th holes, then closed with four straight birdie, holing putts of 20, 12, 6 and 15 feet.

"I kind of just kept myself relaxed and played good today," he said. "I started making some birdies, and with an eagle and then a par and then a four-birdie finish tells me that I did a good job of staying out of my way. I think that's from last year's performance, that you kind of learn how to play a little bit better."

O'Meara bounced back from a closing 82 last week in his tour debut in the Outback Steakhouse Pro-Am, eagling No. 1 and birdieing four of the next eight holes to make the turn at 6-under 30. After a double bogey at No. 10 when he hit his tee shot out of bounds, O'Meara birdied Nos. 12 and 13, then closed with another birdie, all of them in the 12-to-15-foot range.

O'Meara credited that success on the greens to a switch back to a Ping putter he used from 1991-2000, the same one he used to win the Masters and British Open in 1998. O'Meara had 17 birdies over the two pro-am days.

"I really didn't putt that great (last week)," O'Meara said.

Sosa arrives in Rangers camp; Johnson pitches for Diamondbacks

By The Associated Press

Sammy Sosa is hoping to slam his way back into baseball.

Two years after being among several players who testified before a congressional committee looking into steroid use in professional baseball, the 38-year-old Sosa is trying to make a comeback and has a minor league contract with his original team — the Texas Rangers.

"I don't have to convince anybody," Sosa said Friday. "I know who I am. I have been good to this game, I will continue to be great to this game, I will continue to perform. ... I don't want to talk about whatever happened in Congress. This is not my problem. I've got to make the team."

But he's still fielding the same questions that dogged him when he left the game after the 2005 season with Baltimore. Like Mark McGwire and Barry Bonds, Sosa is suspected by some of having used steroids before they were banned by baseball 4 1/2 years ago.

"I don't want to talk about that," Sosa said. "Let's talk about baseball. Let's talk about 2007, and the talent we have in Texas, and what we can do this year."

The former NL MVP and seven-time All-Star, fifth with 588 career home runs, took part in the Rangers' first full-squad workout.

"I'm a little older. It doesn't mean I can't hit you 30 or 40 home runs," he said. "What's the deal? You think I'm dead?"

In Tucson, Ariz., Randy Johnson pitched off a mound for the first time since back surgery in October and said after the private bullpen session that he felt fine.

The Big Unit threw 25 fastballs and said he was "pretty free and easy" — although reporters weren't allowed to verify that. Johnson's private workout was viewed by Diamondbacks coaches on a field away from the media. Johnson said he wasn't trying to keep the workout a secret.

"Just in case I'm launching balls over in the White Sox's parking lot," Johnson said with a chuckle, referring to the Diamondbacks' spring training neighbors. "I was going to report to you guys regardless."

Johnson, who waived his no-trade clause to accept the deal, was acquired for right-handed reliever Luis Vizcaino and three minor leaguers: right-handers Ross Ohlendorf and Steven Jackson, and shortstop Alberto Gonzalez.

"I'm feeling a lot better than I did the last time I picked up a ball, let's put it that way," said the 43-year-old left-hander, who rejoined the Diamondbacks following two turbulent seasons with the New York Yankees.

In Port St. Lucie, Fla., New York Mets pitcher Pedro Martinez said he should know next week when he can start throwing.

Recovering from rotator cuff surgery, Martinez is likely to miss the first half of the season. He repeated that he's working hard at rehabilitation and expects his right shoulder to heal.

"If it doesn't, then I need to hang it up, hang it and go home because I'm not going to work any harder," he said.

Martinez is due for a checkup with team doctors next week. He has been working out three-to-four hours a day and has been able to increase the weight that the shoulder can lift and resist.

"I still feel like I can do it like I can help this team get over the hump," he said.

In Scottsdale, Ariz., Giants owner Peter Magowan said he expects Bonds to take part in festivities for baseball's All-Star game in his home ballpark this summer.

Magowan hopes that Bonds' godfather, Hall of Famer Willie Mays, will be a big part of the July event in San Francisco. Yet Magowan would rather No. 25 is in uniform and playing for the NL and World Series-winning manager Tony La Russa.

"If Willie is going to get honored, as I think he will, Barry will have some role to play there," Magowan said.

A stunning gaffe costs Woods his amazing streak

MARANA, Ariz. (AP) — Tiger Woods stood over a 4-foot birdie putt to win the match, just as Nick O'Hern expected.

Even when O'Hern built a 4-up lead through seven holes, he knew Woods would eventually find his swing and get back into the game. Indeed, Woods eventually caught him on the 15th hole.

And when the 35-year-old Aussie took a 1-up lead going to the final hole, he figured a birdie by Woods ranked right up there with death and taxes. Sure enough, Woods hammered a 342-yard drive, hit sand wedge to 5 feet and made the clutch putt, as always.

So when O'Hern stood off to the side of the green after making par on the first extra hole, he already was planning his next move. Remove the cap, shake hands, wish Woods well on the weekend at the Accenture Match Play Championship.

His caddie handed him a new ball for the next hole, which O'Hern thought was odd.

"Mate," he told him, "he doesn't miss these."

Surprise! Woods blamed his failure to fix a ball mark for missing the birdie putt that would have ended the match and moved him one step closer to his eighth straight PGA Tour victory, one step closer to the record 11 in a row won by Byron Nelson.

Woods blamed a faulty swing — he wasn't sure where the ball was headed all day — on a 4-iron that he pulled left of the green on the 20th hole. He said the green was faster because it had been mowed since they played No. 2 in regulation — not true, said tour officials — and left his chip 15 feet short of the pin.

And when O'Hern holed a 12-foot par putt to win the match in 20 holes, Woods had no one to blame but himself.

"It hit the left side of the ball mark and kicked right," Woods said of the 4-foot birdie he missed. "All I had to do is just fix it and it's in. It was a very simple thing to do. I just didn't pay attention."

An imperfect patch of grass became the culprit for a PGA Tour record no longer perfect.

The winning streak had been subject to debate, mainly because Woods had failed to win four times during the PGA Tour streak on other tours, starting with a loss in the first round of the World Match Play Championship in England.

But when it was over, Woods took pride in it nonetheless.

"To go basically from July until now without ever finishing out of the top three, that's not bad," Woods said.

The last time he played the PGA Tour without taking home the trophy was July 9 at the Western Open, when he tied for second behind Trevor Immelman of South Africa.

Immelman was one of eight players remaining going into the weekend. He played 17 holes, halved 13 of them, but still walked away with a 2-and-1 victory over

Ian Poulter of England. He'll play a quarterfinal match Saturday morning against Justin Rose, who built a big lead and coasted to a 3-and-2 victory over Charles Howell III.

O'Hern advanced to play Henrik Stenson (4 and 3 over Aaron Baddeley), who suddenly is the top seed remaining at No. 9.

In the other half of the draw, Chad Campbell outlasted David Toms for a 1-up victory and advanced to play Stephen Ames, who took advantage of three bogeys to beat Stewart Cink. Defending champion Geoff Ogilvy beat Niclas Fasth to win his ninth straight match — the only streak anyone is talking about now — and will play Paul Casey, a 2-up winner over Shaun Micheel.

The only people who suffered a bigger blow than Woods were tournament officials, left with eight players who don't exactly bring a compelling story to the weekend at The Gallery. That happens quite often in this fickle tournament.

Dallas blocks Anaheim for second straight time

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Stars have two hot goaltenders, and they'll need both rookie Mike Smith and starter Marty Turco to stay that way down the stretch if they hope to win a second straight Pacific Division title.

Smith stopped 24 shots, Jussi Jokinen and rookie Krys Barch each had a goal and an assist, and the Stars tightened the division race with a 4-1 victory over the slumping Anaheim Ducks on Friday night.

Dallas is five points behind Pacific-leading Anaheim and two back of second-place San Jose. The Stars trailed the Ducks by 15 points on Jan. 15.

"That was as good a team effort as we've had all year," Smith said. "First place seemed out of reach a couple of months ago. Now it isn't

We want to win the division and this helps."

Smith was in the nets for the fourth time in the last seven games, including three starts. Coach Dave Tippett wants Smith to get more game action down the stretch to keep Turco fresh for the playoffs. Smith, 4-1 over his last five starts with a 1.15 goals-against average, beat the Ducks 1-0 on Feb. 10.

"We've talked since training camp about wanting to go down the stretch with two (goalies) ready to play," Tippett said. "And we've got that. March will be very busy for us. We'll need both of them."

The Stars played one of their most complete games of the season, especially against an elite team.

"We've had some games against them where we were chasing the game," Tippett said. "Tonight we dictated, starting in goal with Smitty. We got some breaks but we earned those breaks."

Ladislav Nagy got Dallas off to a fast start with a first-period goal, his first for the Stars since being acquired in a trade with the Phoenix Coyotes on Feb. 12.

Jere Lehtinen's breakaway goal 40 seconds into the third period, his 20th of the season, gave Dallas a 4-0 lead.

Lehtinen has eight goals in his last 14 games, reaching the 20-goal mark for the seventh time in his career.

The Stars are 10-3-2 in their last 15 games, including a 7-1-1 run at home.

Corey Perry's 14th goal ended Smith's bid for his fourth shutout with 4:45 left.

Jean-Sebastien Giguere had 17 saves for the Ducks,

2-4-2 in their last eight games.

"This is as flat as we've been all year and I don't know why," Ducks coach Randy Carlyle said. "In the situation we're in, in this important of a game, this made a statement."

The Ducks have dominated the division for most of the season, but now they can see the competition gaining fast.

"We just didn't compete like we needed to," Anaheim's Niedermayer said. "This was an important game for both teams and we didn't respond to it. It's upsetting for sure."

Nagy gave Dallas the lead at 6:57 of the opening period when he redirected Loui Eriksson's centering pass by Giguere for his ninth goal of the season.

Rockets, McGrady held down in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks, who have missed the playoffs seven straight years, believe they could join the postseason fun in the weak Eastern Conference this year — if only they could win more at home.

The Hawks earned a rare impressive home win Friday night as Joe Johnson scored 31 points and Atlanta survived a late scare to beat Tracy McGrady and the Houston Rockets 105-99.

The Hawks, tied for the second-most road wins in the conference with 12, ended a four-game home losing streak.

The Hawks earned only their 10th win in 26 home games.

"It shouldn't be that way," Johnson said.

"We could easily be in the playoff mix if we could do better at home."

The Hawks showed more scoring depth, with their bench outscoring the Rockets' reserves 32-8.

Coach Jeff Van Gundy didn't want to shift responsibility from his starters, however, after allowing the Hawks to score 13 points more than their league-worst average.

"They played no defense," Van Gundy said. "This is the lowest-scoring team in the NBA. The worst field-goal percentage shooting team in the NBA. And they shredded us."

The Rockets lost for only the fourth time in 13 games.

The Rockets held Atlanta to its lowest point total of the season in a 94-68 win in Houston on Dec. 29.

The turnaround was encouraging for Hawks coach Mike Woodson.

"That's huge for our young team," Woodson said.

"We've got to start building on that and try to establish something here at home."

Josh Smith and Marvin Williams each had 20 points for the Hawks, who hit seven free throws in the final 75 seconds to seal the victory.

The Hawks, who won three of four before the All-Star break, ended a two-game skid following the break.

"It's really big," Smith said. "It let us get our swagger back. We got some confidence back."

Smith blocked three shots and had 10 rebounds. Josh Childress also had 10 rebounds, including six offensive as the Hawks outscored the Rockets 19-10 in second-chance points.

"You know what? We just didn't play defense tonight," McGrady said. "Plain and simple. The thing that makes us great, we kind of got away

Canyon museum hosting special wine tasting fund-raiser

CANYON — For an evening of fine wine, fine food and fine art, the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum presents "Vive le Vin!" on March 10.

For both the sophisticated wine connoisseur and the novice alike, Vive le Vin! will offer a choice of seated Private Reserve Tasting from 6-8 p.m. or a less formal Vintners Tasting Party from 7-9 p.m.

The Private Reserve Tasting (limited to 40 guests) will feature a selection of gourmet foods with sophisticated wines served in the museum's Southwest Art Gallery, a special guest speaker, a signed hand-painted wine glass and music by John Melech.

Downstairs, in the Derrick Room, the Vintners Tasting Party will feature hors d'oeuvres with wine pairings from around the world.

The evening includes live music by the Martinis and a fabulous silent auction. Auction items include original art by Greg Skol, a Marriott vacation package to Hawaii, another Marriott vacation package to a Southwest resort, Southwest Airline tickets for two, and other items.

Tickets are $150 per person for the Private Reserve Tasting and $60 per person for the Vintners Tasting Party. For reservations, call Amy David at 806-651-2233 or email adavid@pphm.wtamu.edu. Make your reservations by March 2.

Sponsors include West Texas A&M University, Kathy and Steve Cornett with Kathy and Melvin Edes, Abbie and Wales Madden, Jr., Cambridge Production, Inc., J.B. Lane, Katie and Bob McLeod, Jannette and Terry Caviness, Maynon and Carl Benson, and Sherman and Genie Harriman.

KACV readying for spring membership campaign

AMARILLO — The annual KACV-TV Spring Membership Drive is scheduled for March 3-11, 24 and 25. Program highlights for the on-air campaign include "The Rolling Stones: Rock and Roll Circus," "My Music: Movie Songs" and "From Galway to Broadway."

During the pledge period, the local public television station asks viewers to make contributions to offset national and local programming costs. Contributors are eligible for special program related "thank you" gifts.

As a special incentive during the Spring Membership Drive, those pledging $75 or more and using a credit card will be entered into a drawing for a 32-inch Flat Panel High Definition TV courtesy of Sound Systems, Ltd., or a tree planted in the location of your choice courtesy of Amarillo Arborological, both valued at over $1,000.

Additional program highlights include "The Rockabilly Legends" featuring Johnny Cash, Roy Orbison and Buddy Holly, "Elvis Lives: The 25th Anniversary Concert," "Jerry Lee Lewis: Last Man Standing" and "Daniel O'Donnell: Can You Feel the Love."

"Public television depends on public support," said Missy Macon, KACV membership coordinator, "and with the expanded programming services available through digital broadcasting membership support is more critical than ever. Our coverage area includes the entire 26 counties of the Texas Panhandle and we look for LUBBOCK — Art Depot will present Michael Frels, a 2001 Pampa High School graduate, in a photographic exhibit titled "Photographic Expansion." The exhibit, which will include two other artists, will be shown March 2-28 at the Art Depot in Lubbock.

"As a boy," Frels said, "I was more interested in creating things than making friends. Uninspired by adulthood, I returned to my childhood. I took these photographs while playing in my backyard."

Frels, son of Mark and Rhonda Frels, is a senior visual arts studies education major at Texas Tech University. He is scheduled to graduate in May.

Photographic Expansion is free and open to the public. A reception is planned from 6-9 p.m. March 2 at the Art Depot.

LUBBOCK — Evelyn Rose Jasso of Pampa was recently named to the President's Honor List for the 2006 fall semester at Texas Tech University.

To qualify for the honor list, a student must maintain a 4.0 grade point average for the semester. Jasso is the daughter of Sammy and Cruz Jasso of Pampa.

NACOGDOCHES — Megan Kaye Oneal of Pampa was recently named to the Dean's List at Stephen F. Austin State University for the 2006 fall semester.

Oneal is a theatre major. To qualify for the Dean's List, a student must maintain a minimum 3.5 grade point average while enrolled in 12 or more semester hours at the university.

STILLWATER, Okla. — Erin Winegeart, daughter of Donnie and Debbie Winegeart of Pampa, was recently named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the 2006 fall semester at Oklahoma State University.

To qualify for the honor roll, a student must maintain a minimum 3.5 grade point average for the semester.

CANYON — Lauren Walters, a senior business major from Pampa, and Tamera Hartline, a senior wildlife biology major from Canadian, were among several select students receiving President's Honor Scholarships at West Texas A&M University recently.

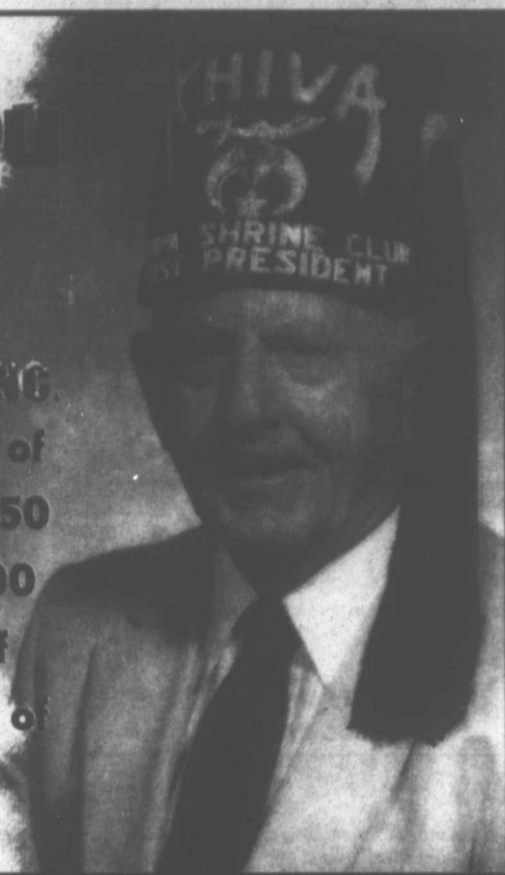

Walters was awarded the W.K. and Minnie Savage scholarship. Eldredge earned the Louisa Miller Eldredge scholarship.

To receive a President's Honor Scholarship, a student must rank in the top 10 percent of their high school graduating class; score at least a 25 on the ACT or a 1200 on the SAT; and prove themselves to be community leaders.

Museum Mementos: The story of Henry and Jenny Ledrick

(In 1886, the Lard, Ledrick and Walstad families were among the first Anglos to settle in Roberts County, Texas. The Lards and Ledricks settled on Chicken Creek. The Walstads lived first on Wolf Creek and the flats in Ochiltree County before coming to Roberts County. Museum Mementos #196 tells the family of William Thomas and Katherine Lard.)

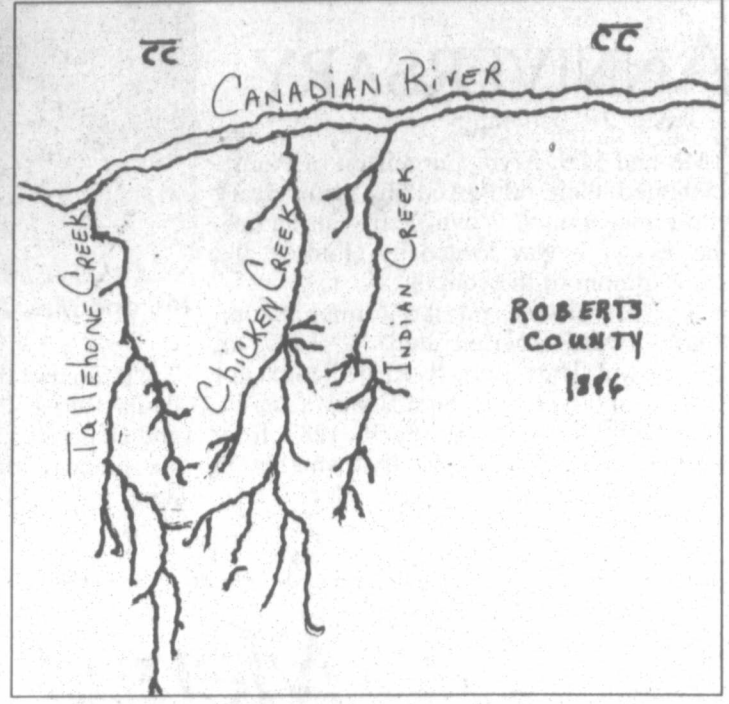

of Indian raids. Later the government compensated him for his losses. Henry and Jenny settled on about 13,000 acres in mid-Roberts County. The Ledricks came to Chicken Creek as the ranchers in the area were trying to recover from "the big die-up," the severely harsh winter of 1885-86 when many cattle and other creatures froze to death.

The Bar CC Ranch that counted 10,000 head of cattle in the fall had only 700 in the spring. The "big blizzard" came on the nights of Jan. 7 and 8 in 1886 when temperatures dropped to 22-degrees below zero, and the wind was blowing 65-miles an hour.

The Southern Kansas Railroad that was constructing the Kiowa Extension of

▲ Carrie and Lee Ledrick and daughter Cassie at the ranch home north of Pampa in 1903.

▲ Tallehone Creek was named for the wild turkeys that ranged in the area. Tallehone is an Indian word for turkey. In 1886, the headwaters of the creek were near the red schoolhouse on Highway 70 just north of the Gray-Roberts county line. Chicken Creek was so named because prairie chickens were abundant in the area. Highway 70 runs through the original Ledrick ranch.

Henry Ledrick, born in 1942 in France, became a post-trader in Kansas. He married Amanda Jane "Jenny" Lard, a daughter of W.T. and Katherine Lard. Henry and Jenny Ledrick were the parents of Henry Lee, Jr. and Paul Claude before they came to Texas.

Henry lost all of his property in Kansas as the result the Santa Fe from Kiowa, Kan., to Panhandle City, Texas, had paused on the north side of the Canadian River while a bridge was built across the river.

The towns of Miami and Pampa were not yet founded, so Henry had to go to Canadian for supplies. On return trips, it was possible to see that the entire valley of Chicken Creek was covered with Indian teepees. The Indians were not unfriendly, and Henry was skillful in dealing with them.

Like most of the early pioneers, the Ledricks lived at first in a dugout. After several years, they built a house of lumber made from logs of native cottonwood trees. The lumber was made at a sawmill on neighboring Indian Creek.

The Ledrick ranch house became a stopover for families in covered wagons heading for the West and California. A child of one of the traveling families died and was buried on the ranch in a grave that was well-tended for many years.

"Aunt Jenny" often acted as a midwife and traveled across the Canadian River on horseback to attend to Olive (King) Dixon, wife of Billy Dixon.

The railroad station that received its third name as Pampa in 1982 was at first known mainly as a shipping point for cattle. Doubtless cattle from the Ledrick ranch were among the many that came over what is now Cuyler Street on their way to the stockyards.

Following the death of Henry Ledrick in 1905, his sons, Lee and Claude, took charge of the ranch. Jenny Ledrick died in Pampa in 1918.

Lee Ledrick married Carrie Walstad, and their children were Cassie Balthrope, Vera Shriver, H.L. Ledrick and Paul (Mickey) Ledrick.

Claude Ledrick married Fannie May White whose family were pioneers in northern Roberts County. They had no children. The White Deer Land Museum has a Valentine that Claude sent to Fannie and their wedding certificate.

WT leading effort to draft disaster plan

CANYON — Introduction of a foreign animal disease into livestock-rich West Texas would be devastating. It's a fact of life that led more than a year ago to formation of the Panhandle Agro-security Working Group (PAWG), an association of experts focused on crisis response, particularly as it relates to agriculture.

"Just one vial of the wrong biological substance released in the Panhandle could cost us our future unless we prepare now," Dr. Don Topliff, head of the Department of Agricultural Sciences at West Texas A&M University, said. Topliff and others from the West Texas A&M faculty were in on the ground floor in November 2005, when PAWG was conceived. In fact, Dr. Bob DeOtte, WTAMU associate professor of environmental engineering, is chairman of PAWG, which is comprised of officials from the University, the agriculture industry and from city, county and state emergency-management, animal-health and law-enforcement agencies.

— Dr. Bob DeOtte

Even the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality and the Department of State Health Services, among others, are on board.

"We're all about developing protocols to improve our security and effect rapid response," DeOtte said. "It's very much about developing efficient communication and assembling resources."

"PAWG is completely voluntary, but everyone who came to the table over a year ago is committed to working together to devise strategies, not only to respond in a time of crisis, but to do what is necessary to reduce our vulnerability, to be proactive and make the idea of terrorism less attractive to terrorists."

It has only been a year-plus since PAWG was formed, yet already the group has undertaken exercises to improve security, develop plans for rapid response and expand its resource base. The latter came in handy last year when wildfires torched the region.

"We had already been doing a lot of organizing when the wildfires hit last March," DeOtte said. "It was suddenly a lot easier for people on the District Disaster Committee to call in needed resources because by then everyone already knew everyone through PAWG."

The agriculture industry, though, is the main focus of PAWG, and participants realize that if a foreign animal disease should break out in the Texas Panhandle, it could have far-reaching impact because the agriculture industry is a key component of the nation's infrastructure.

Concentrated animal feeding operations on the Texas High Plains produce more than 30 percent of fed beef in the nation. Furthermore, the region that includes the Texas Panhandle, eastern New Mexico, eastern Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and the Oklahoma Panhandle, is home to 80 percent of the nation's fed cattle, and that accounts for gross annual sales in excess of $17.5 billion.

DeOtte said PAWG is the brainchild of Dr. John Sweeten, resident director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Bushland, and he describes the group as a "think tank" that already has helped improve regional agricultural security. It is because of security issues that DeOtte chooses to not divulge exactly how or why, but he did say: "It is my consistent observation that the Texas Panhandle is leading the nation on preparedness for the introduction of a foreign animal disease. We have much to do, but we understand the issues at least as well as anyone in the country and better than most."

Dr. Guy Loneragan, assistant professor of animal science at West Texas A&M, is not giving away any secrets, either, but the epidemiologist is certain that brainstorming exercises already

After 17 years, parents still seek answers to daughter's death

By JON GAMBRELL
Associated Press Writer

MARSHALL, Ark. (AP) — In state records, Olivia Jane Ward died of an "undetermined" cause. Police investigators said she fell backward off a porch that was just 9 inches off the ground during a party at an Ozark Mountain cabin.

To her parents, the 16-year-old was murdered — they point to conflicting autopsies conducted 15 years apart and to witnesses' inconsistent statements.

The key to what happened likely rests with the teenagers who were with Janie in her final hours, the ones who loaded her into the back of a pickup truck and traveled three miles of rural roads to carry her to Marshall's town square Sept. 9, 1989. The nearest hospital was 28 miles away and the cabin had no telephone service at a time years before cell phones worked here.

"This is not a cold case," Janie's mother Mona said at the Canaan Cemetery, where Janie's remains lie in the family plot. "The witnesses are alive and well and I think they, except for the guilty, want to talk."

Special prosecutor Tim Williamson says the case will be "ultimately presented to a grand jury" — but doesn't yet know when.

"I don't know what happened up there and it is driving me insane," Williamson said. "We have 15 theories that have been presented to us."

About 40 people attended the party, but only a few say they saw Janie fall. Paramedics summoned to the town square found her clothes inexplicably wet — with sand and leaves clinging to her skin. But by the time Janie's body arrived at Little Rock for a state autopsy the next day, it was clean — and in clothes that her father said she hadn't worn to the party.

The original 1989 autopsy noted that Janie's neck snapped forward, consistent with falling on the back of her neck. But a 2004 autopsy said her head snapped back, as if from a car accident, a hanging or a violent blow.

"I have never been, nor will I ever be, arrogant enough to say, 'I know what caused Janie Ward to die,'" State Police investigator William Beach said in a deposition last year. "But what I do know, based on the information, is that whatever happened, happened right there at that party, in front of a number of teenage witnesses."

Janie had just started the 11th grade a few weeks before she died. Her father Ron Ward described her as a friendly, caring girl, one who would have likely gone into a field like nursing so she could help others.

Ron and Mona Ward didn't know about the party, but the quiet of a small-town Saturday night broke as sheriff's deputies who answered the emergency call pulled up to a pickup truck parked in a bank parking lot. There, surrounded by a group of teenagers, they found Janie's body lying in the back.

Then-Sheriff Kent Griggs later said he didn't think the death involved foul play. Griggs explained events seemingly plausible: Janie fell from a porch, the teens panicked when they couldn't find a doctor and ended up in the town square.

While witnesses said as many as 40 people attended the party — where alcohol and marijuana were present, they said — police reports filed showed that only a few reported seeing Janie fall backward off the porch. Witnesses also gave investigators varying accounts on how long Janie was on the ground, running from a few minutes to up to an hour.

And while the paramedics noted the sand, twigs and leaves on Janie's body at 8:30 that night, all were gone by the time the body reached the state medical examiner's office the next day. It had spent the night at the funeral home in Marshall.

Ron Ward said Janie's clothes were different too. In Little Rock, her body was dressed in a black T-shirt, not the white, pinstriped shirt she had on at the funeral home.

"The clues they had were washed away," he said.

Dr. Fahmy Malak performed the autopsy.

In 1991, when Malak had been the state's chief medical examiner for 12 years, allegations arose saying he had botched autopsies, and Malak quit after losing the support of then-Gov. Bill Clinton. Two state-hired independent medical examiners reviewed several of Malak's cases, including Janie's.

While Janie's fall could have come from fainting or a heart condition, the independent examiners wrote that "the autopsy findings, as presented, do not establish a neck injury as the cause of death of Janie Ward."

But the Wards couldn't persuade officials to exhume their daughter's body for a second autopsy. The death remained "undetermined."

After the Wards contacted a national organization for parents of murdered children, an independent medical examiner based in San Diego reviewed Janie's death in 2004. Dr. Harry Bonnell wrote that he found "no objective evidence" to prove she died from the fall described by witnesses.

With Bonnell's opinion and a court order, Ron Ward stood by as workers opened the cement vault and pulled Janie's casket from the ground. In his autopsy, Bonnell found Janie's body preserved enough to see bruising along her nose and left side of her face, neck and shoulder — injuries Malak had not noted.

Bonnell's report outlines how he found a toothlike bone pushed into Janie's spinal column, an injury known as "hangman's neck." Bonnell said it comes when tremendous force snaps the head backward — not forward as Malak claimed.

"If you think about that, you have the impact in the back of the head and the head comes forward — it's totally opposite," Bonnell said in a recent interview with The Associated Press. "The injuries are not consistent with the story that anybody provided."

Results from the Bonnell autopsy brought renewed attention to Janie's death and prosecutor H.G. Foster asked a county circuit court judge to name a special prosecutor. The judge picked Williamson.

The six-term prosecutor from Mena reopened the case and then-Gov. Mike Huckabee gave $10,000 to help with the investigation. But more than two years later, Williamson remains tightlipped on what progress has been made. "When you jump the gun, you get in trouble. When you make out-of-court statements pre-charging, you get in trouble," Williamson said. "We're being very painstaking with our efforts to make sure the truth is known. That's all I know to say."

More than 17 years after Janie's death, the investigation is moving at a glacial pace.

Williamson says he has devoted a room to the case, filling it with the original investigation materials, reports and other evidence. But his critics, like Arkansas Democrat-Gazette columnist Mike Masterson, say Williamson is moving too slowly to interview witnesses and collect evidence.

"The whole case is just riddled with contradictions, inconsistencies and falsehoods," Masterson said.

The Wards say the publicity, which they credit to Masterson, has helped them raise money for their legal costs and to keep the case alive in others' minds. They also are trying to proceed regardless of Williamson's efforts.

In December 2004, the Wards filed a lawsuit in Pulaski County Circuit Court, asking the state to change Janie's death certificate to show she died in a homicide. They want to move on, but want answers first.

"If it had not been for the circumstances, by now we would have healed. But because of the circumstances, we continue on, we live it everyday," Mona Ward said. "We know what didn't happen. And we have to know."

Boy's project shines spotlight on pioneering black doctor

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — Black history was not on 10-year-old Sam Williamson's mind when he decided to research the life of Ulysses Grant Bourne for a student essay contest.

Sam, who is white, said he picked Bourne, the first black doctor in Frederick County, for a simple reason. On the list of local figures offered by the county historical society, "he had the coolest name."

But Sam became enthralled by Bourne's early 20th-century achievements, which included founding the county's NAACP chapter, establishing a hospital for blacks in the then-segregated city of Frederick and, nearly as impressive to the basketball-crazed kid, bringing the Harlem Globetrotters in to play in a Frederick church basement and eat dinner at the doctor's house.

Sam won $100 in the contest last school year, but he didn't stop there. He went on to raise $19,000 for a bronze bust of Bourne that will be placed later this year at Frederick Memorial Hospital.

"I wanted the whole world to know what he did and how good of a role model he was," said Sam, a fifth-grade student at Ballenger Creek Elementary School.

Sam also gained an honorary grandmother — Bourne's 83-year-old daughter, Dr. I. Blanche Bourne, who is tickled by the attention Sam's efforts have brought to her father's work. "He's quite a boy," she said.

Sam's mother, Leslie, a middle-school math teacher, joked that Sam, the youngest of the four Williamson children, knows more about Bourne's family than he does about her Jewish heritage or his father Jeff's Irish and Welsh ancestry.

But ethnic and racial distinctions don't matter much to Sam, whose school is 77 percent white and 14 percent black, with a smattering of Hispanic and Asian students. Like others in his class, he studied America's struggles with slavery and civil rights, but it was Bourne's accomplishments, and not the obstacles he overcame, that fascinated Sam.

He learned that Bourne delivered about 2,600 babies, black and white, from 1903 to 1953.

Bourne and a nurse did public health work around the county, Sam learned.

Guidelines urge women to take aspirin to curb risks

By MARILYNN MARCHIONE
AP Medical Writer

Nearly all American women are in danger of heart disease or stroke and should be more aggressive about lowering their risk — including asking their doctors about daily aspirin use, the American Heart Association said Monday in new guidelines.

It is the first time guidelines have urged all women to consider aspirin for preventing strokes, although specialists warn that it can cause ulcers and dangerous bleeding. They said it is probably not a good idea for young women with no big health problems.

"We do not want women to go to the drugstore and just start taking this themselves. It is critical that every woman talk to her doctor," said Dr. Lori Mosca, director of preventive cardiology at New York-Presbyterian Hospital and chair of the expert panel that wrote the guidelines.

The guidelines also advise daily exercise and less fat, and declare vitamins C and E, beta carotene and folic acid supplements worthless for preventing heart disease.

The guidelines were published in the journal Circulation with related studies on women's health, including one suggesting that hormone skin patches may be safer than pills for menopause symptoms.

In general, the guidelines aim to get women and doctors to focus on the long-term risk of high blood pressure, smoking, lack of exercise or being overweight — even if a woman's current health seems fine. Even a single risk factor at age 50 greatly raises the chance of heart disease or stroke later, and only about 10 percent of American women are free of these problems.

"We do not want women to wait until they develop symptoms to begin to take action," Mosca said. The guidelines were drafted by dozens of groups worldwide, including the American Academy of Family Physicians and the U.S. government. Of the 33 people who wrote the advice, 13 have financial ties to heart drug makers, only three of them to a large degree.

"This is a really good gathering of evidence in women," after years of studies done mostly on men, said Dr. Sidney Smith, heart disease chief at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and past heart association president.

The evidence shows that many more women than thought are at risk of heart disease and stroke — even those whose only weakness was failure to exercise every day. Heart disease is the leading killer of men and women worldwide.

The advice:

—Exercise. Get at least 30 minutes of moderately intense exercise on most and preferably all days, 60 to 90 minutes if you need to lose weight.

—Diet. Eat mostly fruits and vegetables, whole grain and high-fiber foods, fish at least twice a week, and little salt. Limit saturated fat to less than 10 percent of calories, 7 percent if possible, and trans fats to less than 1 percent. Limit alcohol to one drink or less a day.

—Don't smoke. Use nicotine replacement products if needed to stop.

—Weight. Keep body-mass index under 25.

—Supplements. Consider omega-3 fatty acids (fish oil) if you already have heart disease. Do not take extra folic acid or antioxidants like vitamins E, C and beta carotene, for heart disease prevention.

—Blood pressure, cholesterol. Keep under control, with medicine if needed. Keep LDL or bad cholesterol under 100 if at high risk of heart disease and under 70 if at very high risk.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Feb. 25, 2007:
Your year is a mixed bag but one in which you mainly pull out good surprises and events. Luck follows you, and with some of your escapades it could be necessary! You often say what you think — probably not in the most diplomatic way. Learn to soften your words and share your feelings before you blow up. Creativity solves almost anything. If you are single, you might meet people with ease, but having a working relationship is another issue. If you are attached, you might feel as if you are tired of certain problems. Learn to talk about them in a manner in which your sweetie can hear. CANCER is always fun.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ A talk that might have felt difficult yesterday could proceed without a hitch today. You do need to avoid a power play or a need to control. Emphasize goals and the bond between you and others. Be sensitive. Tonight: At a favorite spot.
This Week: Moving past concerns could be problematic. You will have to be creative.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Though you might not want to overspend, you easily could do just that. A partner or family member could rain on your parade, holding up certain facts and realities. Be careful questioning an authority figure. Tonight: Visit with a friend.
This Week: The problem might be revealing too much right now. Play your cards close to your chest, at least until Friday.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Wake up with the sun and maximize the day. Someone might not totally understand where you are coming from. Listen to his or her opinions and feelings. Even more helpful would be walking in this person's shoes. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

This Week: You tell it like you see it. Don't be surprised if you get differing perspectives.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Lie low during the day. In fact, you might not need that advice, as you could feel that that's the only option. Hold back on unnecessary spending. Let someone else pick up the tab for a change. Suddenly you feel recharged. Tonight: As you like.
This Week: You are a force to be dealt with. Now act like it!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Zero in on what you want. The gregarious Leo easily could enjoy a party or spontaneous get-together. Avoid a difficult situation for now. Note that others seem far more assertive than usual. Tonight: Opt for a good night's sleep.
This Week: Move slowly. Gather information. Midweek, act like the Lion we all know and love.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Stop and visit with an older relative this morning. Others might need to handle another responsibility. Do free yourself up for a spectacular, fun afternoon. Finally, you can let go and enjoy. Tonight: With your friends.
This Week: Don't hesitate to zero in on what you want. Just don't wait.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Your mind might drift early in the day, yet events and/or a demanding friend pull you back to the here and now. Your high energy and creativity add up to a fun time. Others cannot get over your magnetism. Tonight: Don't think that no one is watching.
This Week: Responsibilities tumble on you, but so does the praise for a job well done.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Private time with a loved one and/or family member makes you smile. In some sense, this person is demanding, but on another level, that behavior makes you feel cared about. A discussion illuminates a relationship. Tonight: Enjoy a movie or surf the Net.
This Week: Detach from the immediate. You'll find answers. Others admire your abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Others definitely have their ideas and will follow through, whether you like it or not. You enjoy yourself wherever you are and with nearly anyone. Still, schedule some special time with a favorite person. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.
This Week: If you want success, work with individuals, not groups.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Get a special project completed before others storm your door or start calling endlessly. You might think you can say "no," but you won't want to. Humor is more important than a financial matter. Tonight: Just go along for the ride.
This Week: Others run with the ball. Let them. You'll be freed up for more fun happenings.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You cannot help but let your hair down, wherever you are, whenever you're with. Of course you are appropriate, though someone observing could become jealous. Mars enters your sign today energizing you. Tonight: Try to get a good night's sleep.
This Week: Charge into work knowing that by Wednesday you will want to socialize or network.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might be sluggish early on, but once you energize your mind you meet creativity. Just start sharing, and you might be surprised by what comes up. A new friend easily pops into your life. Tonight: Add in some naughtiness.
This Week: Your focused creativity becomes a powerful tool.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Feb. 26, 2007:
You will have many opportunities this year. Express that unique imagination associated with your sign. Others cannot help but respond to your energy. Your creativity and sudden insights often have people seeking you out. Your life is changing, as you are changing. Learn to greet new events and situations positively. Better end results become the norm. Curb a tendency to overwork, especially late at night. It won't make a difference anyway. If you are single, a special bond definitely will surround you. This bond could be very romantic. If you are attached, re-create special or first dates. Add more romance. A new child or grandchild is possible. CANCER helps you relax and let go.
The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You might opt to stay close to home. In some manner, your thoughts will revolve around your security and domestic life. The real question is: What would make you happy? Start creating a more viable lifestyle now. Tonight: Head home.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ What you say gets results — perhaps not ones you've thought of. A boss or someone you look up to could backtrack and take up an issue that you thought was long forgotten. Creativity helps settle this issue. Tonight: Visit with a friend.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ The time has come to take a serious look at your spending habits. You might want to back off and handle these issues differently. Find someone who is in the know financially. You don't need to do what this person says, but he or she has a wealth of knowledge. Tonight: Pay bills first.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ How does it feel to be in the thick of things? With the Moon shining and beaming on you, little can go wrong, unless you have a subconscious agenda. Others respond to your energy, efforts and magnetism. Tonight: Create the perfect evening for you.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★ Take your time making decisions. You might want to mull over different ideas or solutions. Others might finally become talkative and share more of what is on their mind. Unexpected information will head your way. Tonight: Time just for you.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Aim for more of what you want by emphasizing the quality of your daily life. Be more in touch with your feelings. Someone acts so unpredictably that you need to step back and think. Tonight: With friends and/or around crowds.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You are in such a position that if you want something done, you will have to do it yourself. Your schedule and plans easily could spin out of control. Accept the unusual and opt for new technology if it will help ease pressure. Tonight: Out late.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Take an overview. Get additional opinions by finding an expert or two. Research. Creativity stems from a need to find solutions. Let your mind wander. Your life could be revitalized in many ways. Tonight: Ingenuity, my dear Scorp.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You generally want to call the shots. Right now, you might need to work with someone independently if you want success. Stay anchored and be willing to reveal the authentic you. Still, tame the sarcasm. Tonight: Dinner with a special person.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Others know what they want. It might be best to go along, though you might need to express some concerns. The unexpected occurs out of the blue. Enjoy that touch of excitement. Tonight: Just don't be alone.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Get into a project; get your work done. You might be amazed by what you can accomplish. You pull the wild card financially. Buy a lottery ticket. Just don't go to extremes. Rethink a decision with care. Tonight: Take a walk or get some other form of exercise.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You find answers to what others cannot. You have an unpredictable quality that frequently launches your thoughts in a different direction. Don't, overworry about what you cannot, change. Tonight: Fun, please.
