Suicide support group formed

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

A suicide survivor support group has been formed in Pampa and has been holding meetings for the past few months.

The goal of the group is to help survivors absorb the impact of this type of death, to offer empathetic understanding and acceptance and to support each other toward healthy resolution of the grief.

When people attend this support group, they are among others who have gone through the same experience. Some attendees have gone through this a few years ago and others went through the suicide of a loved one as long as 20 years ago.

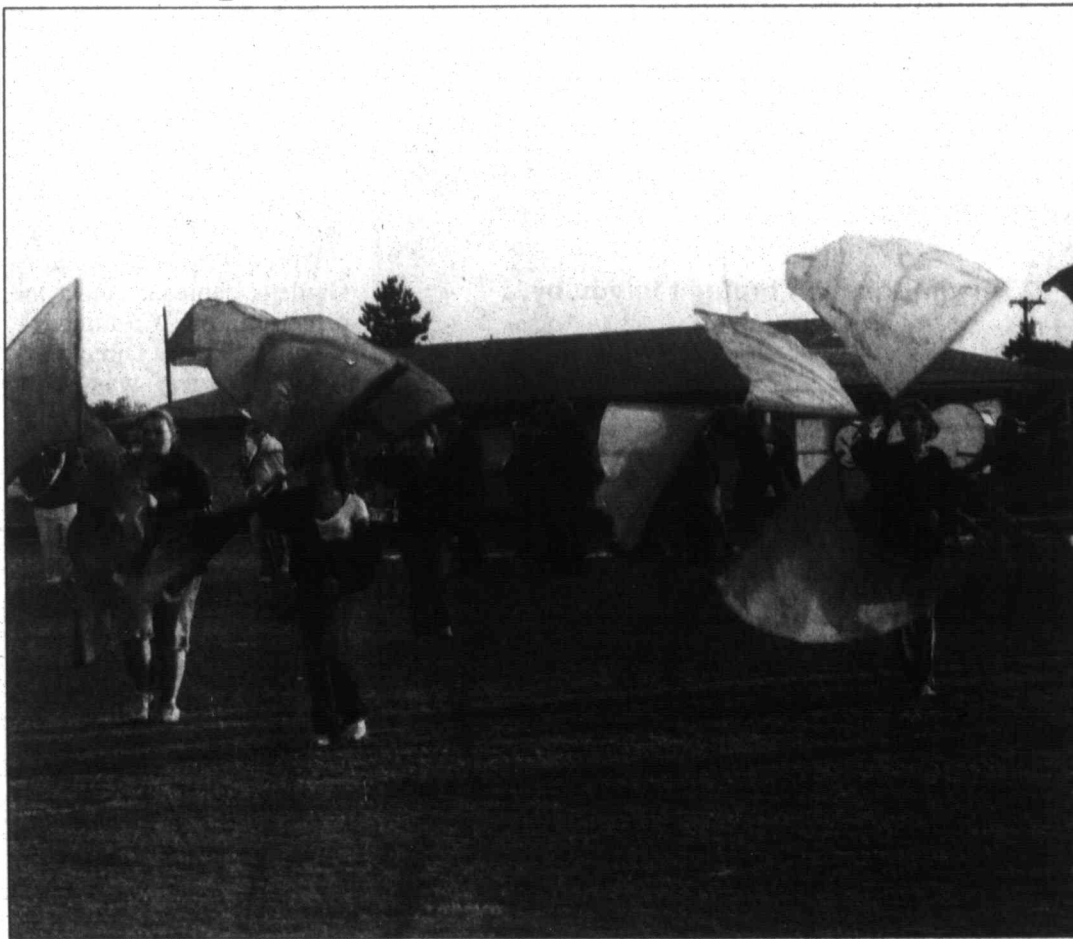

"What is nice about having this support group is we can benefit from each other's similar experiences," said group founder Ron Shank. "I lost my father and an uncle to suicide and some of those who attend have lost spouses, children and friends. This group cannot take away the pain or grief of someone suffering from the sudden and many times unexplained loss, but we recognize that strength and healing are gained by using one's own painful growth in support of others.

"The main focus of this group is to provide an atmosphere of love and acceptance toward healing through this very complicated grieving process. Any death is difficult, but suicide produces feelings of guilt, asking why or what could I have done to avoid this and there is also a stigma or embarrassment associated with this type of death. Many times people are afraid to tell others how a person actually died and others do not know what to say to the one grieving or how to

Coat project to aid low-income families

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Children of low-income Pampa families will have a chance to stay warm this winter with coats to be provided by the Somebody Cares coat project.

"We have approximately 1,000 new coats from size 24 months to size 3X," said Martha Henderson, who with her husband Robert is heading the Pampa Somebody Cares project.

The coats will be distributed from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Oct. 27 at the Wearhouse, 213 Tyng. Parents or guardians must pick up the coats, accompanied by each child who is to receive a coat. The adults must also provide proof of residence, such as a recent utility bill; a Social Security card for each child receiving a coat; and the amount of income for the household.

Each child is eligible for one coat per year through the project, Henderson said.

"It's like the Evelyn Rivers project in Amarillo," she said. "Somebody Cares is an international organization based in Houston and is a non-profit compassion-

What do you think...?

...About the new dress code for Pampa public schools this year?

Courtney Ward
8th grader

"I like it because it is the same as last year, but they are just enforcing it this year."

Jacob Boyd
8th grader

"It's too strict because we can't wear hoodies."

Margo Mendoza - 8th grader
Laci Hernandez - 8th grader

"Why do they care what we wear because we come to school to learn? We don't like that we can't wear jackets in class and our skirts or shorts have to be knee-length."

Megan Pirtle
8th grader

"I like it and it's not much different than last years. The only difference is we have to wear skirts to our knees & no holes in our jeans."

Rudy Rodriguez
8th grader

"It's too strict because we can't wear hoodies & our shirts can't be too long, which is past our butt."

Marco Garcia
8th grader

"It's too strict and I think they should have just left the one from last year in place."

Nell Leeper
Teacher

"It's great because it's changed the whole attitude of the school. The kids look more professional and there are a lot less distractions."

Support

comfort them. Hopefully, this group can help with those feelings and we can all start or finish the healing process together."

Shank said most of the meetings held by the support group are informal. They may or may not have an organized subject to discuss that evening and occasionally they bring in guest speakers. This month, Counselor Danina Kennedy from Redeemed Hearts Christian Counseling Center in Pampa gave a presentation on grief and loss.

"There are many categories of grief," said

Kennedy. "People suffer physically, emotionally, spiritually, psychologically and their relationships are also affected after the death of a loved one. Physically they have trouble eating or sleeping and can feel real physical pain such as aches, chest pain or upset stomach. People put pressure on themselves to be strong and not get angry or cry in front of others and these are some things that can cause depression."

"Many people who feel close to God can even struggle with their spirituality. Many people going through the grieving process may think that other church members are thinking that if they had enough faith they would be spared all of the loneliness, anger and pain they are experiencing. The brain is definitely affected by grief because the brain's two sides often disconnect and those grieving have trouble putting thoughts together and remembering things. And lastly, the relationships that people have are affected because every person grieves differently and in their own way and at their own pace."

Some of the information that Shank has handed out to the group members are Web sites to visit, books to read and written suggestions for survivors. One excerpt from the Bereavement Publications "Living with LOSS Magazine" (summer 2007 issue) is an article titled "Will I feel this way forever?" by Robert Thompson, M.D., who gives practical suggestions that may help those dealing with the death of a loved one.

"Exercise: Avoid the temptation to stay in bed or lie on the couch. Do something physical each day. Do something social each day: It's important not to isolate yourself from others. Even if it's only a phone call or brief personal encounter, try and visit with a friend or family member each day. Overlook non-helpful remarks: It's easy to be hurt by unkind things people say, but remember when someone asks you a question or makes a comment about your loss, they are almost always trying to be helpful.

"Other relationships: Although it may be hard, don't neglect other relationships, especially those with family members. Don't engage in self-destructive behavior: Do not act out your pain in negative or self-destructive ways. Using alcohol or drugs to numb your pain has long term consequences. Allow yourself to feel the sadness: We can run, but we can't hide from our grief. Don't put a timeline on your grief: It takes as long as it takes. Your sadness is yours and no one else's."

The Suicide Survivor Support Group meets at 7 p.m. on the first Monday of each month at the Briarwood Church Fellowship Hall, 1800 W. Harvester, Pampa. For more information, contact Shank at 669-1938.

Contest winner to join 'Simpsons'

DALLAS (AP) — A Pennsylvania woman will soon have something in common with Paul McCartney, Elizabeth Taylor and Aerosmith — she'll appear as an animated character on "The Simpsons."

Cheryl Yex of West Newton won a contest that was part of a marketing blitz for "The Simpsons Movie." The campaign included making over about a dozen 7-Eleven stores to look like the knockoff Kwik-E-Mart of Simpsons fame.

Yex said she entered the contest hoping to win a Kwik-E-Mart smock.

offices at Harvest House, 736 S. Cuyler.

Local schools will be asked for assistance in identifying children in need of coats for the winter, Henderson said. The coats were bought by the Somebody Cares organization. Donations are being accepted from local businesses and individuals to help fund the project, Henderson said.

Search warrants issued in Anna Nicole's death

By The Associated Press
California Department of Justice investigators began serving search warrants Friday in connection with the death of Anna Nicole Smith, a person close to the investigation told The Associated Press.

The person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the investigation was ongoing, declined to elaborate. California Attorney General Jerry Brown was expected to make an announcement later Friday.

The former Playboy Playmate died of an accidental drug overdose in February at a Florida hotel. She was 39.

Several people close to the model have fallen under suspicion since her death, including her psychiatrist Dr. Kristine Erosheovich.

The Medical Board of California said in April it was investigating Erosheovich, who, according to documents, authorized all 11 prescription medications found in Smith's hotel room the day she died.

Erosheovich had traveled with Smith to Florida.

More than 600 pills, including 450 muscle relaxants, were missing from prescriptions that were no more than five weeks old, according to the documents, which were obtained by The Associated Press through a public records request.

Inspirational story reveals grit of those who don't complain

I recently received an e-mail that contained a link to YouTube about a very inspirational story. Both my husband and I watched this and were deeply moved.

It was about the life of a baby who was born without eyes and had problems with his joints so he would never be able to see or walk.

His parents put him in front of the piano before he was 1 and he quickly picked up music and started to become an amazing musician.

He now attends college and marches in the marching band with his father's help. His dad holds down a job, helps him with band and also attends class with his son.

We started talking about how some people don't complain about the hand they are dealt in life while others gripe and complain their entire lives.

As most of you know now (after reading the story I wrote a few months back about meeting my birth mother), I was adopted at an early age.

This is a situation where multiple people don't whine and moan about their lives and how it isn't working out perfectly and decide to take action and do something about it.

My birth mother decided that she was not able to take care of me adequately, so she put me up for adoption.

And I feel this is the most courageous and selfless act that anyone can do.

My adoptive parents could not have any more children, but didn't just feel sorry for themselves and decided to adopt.

Again, a very loving act to help themselves and also the baby (me in this case) have a good life.

Like in this video that we watched, many people are either born with or later develop horrible disfiguring effects on their bodies.

Some just sit around and complain about it while others decide to overcome these and end up being an inspiration to others and actually thrive in life.

One thing I hate with a passion is when overweight people feel sorry for themselves and talk about how they are overweight because of a thyroid problem or it is in their genes and they didn't have a choice.

I'm overweight and I know I got that way by my own choices (mainly cookies and ice cream).

I know that I can either live my life at this weight, which I've done for many years, or some day decide to do something about it and go on a diet.

I went to a pep rally at Pampa Junior High School this week and it was wonderful to see the teachers and students so excited about an event.

This was an academic pep rally, but it was lots of fun and everyone seemed to really enjoy it even though the emphasis was on academics and praising those who make good grades and trying to inspire those who don't.

"I heard what the new principal Paul Nies says on the intercom a lot or maybe every day, 'Have a good day, or not, the choice is yours.'"

I love that saying because it is so true. You can decide, despite obstacles or heartaches in your life, to either sit around and mope or you can get up and try to have a great day and also touch the lives of others in a positive way.

The next time you wake up in a bad mood or feel sorry for yourself because of a problem in your life just remember that it could be worse and there are a lot of people out there that do have it a lot worse.

ReDonn Woods, the advertising editor at the paper, is an inspiration to me.

She just recently had a baby and this makes number three for her and her husband, so they now have three girls age 4 and younger.

She is always in a good mood and never seems to get stressed out.

She also has a saying that I like when someone is whining, "Just put your big girl panties on and deal with it."

United States is good at dismissing criticism

The poet Robert Burns, watching a louse crawl around a rich woman's head, was inspired to write a poem that contains a line to the effect that we need to see ourselves as others see us.

I just read a blog by an Arab woman, obviously educated, that is livid with hatred for us for the destruction of Iraq. She dismisses the excuse of those who say they didn't vote for the present administration.

What follows is a summary. She says: "My problem is you. Your character, your behavior, your haughtiness, arrogance, false pride, denial, collective stupidity and ignorance, your way of life, which I find boring, distasteful and empty. You are ogres of consumerism, greedy, covetous, gluttonous, voracious, jealous, envious. You are nothing, and your nihilism contaminates everything else. You destroy and self-destruct."

She closes by saying: "Iraq is going down with its past and its future. I can only promise you one thing. However long it may take, we are going to take you down with us."

We Americans are very good at dismissing critics and criticism. We have such a high opinion of ourselves, we simply can't believe that normal people can dislike us, much less hate us. We can destroy whole countries, kill millions of people and then naively expect that the survivors will welcome us as friends.

The old saying that one reaps what one sows is just an accurate observation of the way human history plays out. We have sown and we are continuing to sow a lot of hatred for ourselves.

War is the most horrible thing one group of people can inflict on another.

War destroys lives, homes, families, economies, cultures and the future. It kills and maims and impoverishes. The fallout from war is hatred, and like radioactivity its poison can linger for generations.

The victorious always think their victory will last forever, but the truth is that all victories are temporary. I would not take the lady's vow of vengeance lightly. She has an ally in that very collective stupidity and ignorance she criticizes.

Anyone who looks at the present leadership, both those in office and those aspiring to office, and feels good about the future is a heck of a lot more optimistic than I am. Corruption, both monetary and intellectual, is so deep and entrenched in our society that it will take a miracle for us to survive it.

Surveying the world, I see very few countries where the people have any reason whatsoever for liking us. They may be powerless at the moment to express their hatred, but power, like victory, is also ephemeral.

"Be careful who you step on, on the way up, because you're going to meet the same people on the way down." A character actor and semiangster said that in the 1930s.

Odessa American on higher salaries for first responders and emergency medical personnel:

Do the men and women who respond in emergency situations deserve better pay?

In the wake of the tragedy that cost three Odessa Police Department officers their lives, the answer seems obvious.

Alas, there's a gap between what would be ideal and what reality demands.

But we may have reached a point where some accommodations must be made budget-wise to more adequately compensate first responders, from law enforcement officers to firefighters to emergency medical personnel.

After all, they do risk their lives for the general welfare of the public. And no matter how routine a call might seem (Cpls. Arlie Jones, Scott Gardner and Abel Marquez had no doubt been called to many domestic dispute situations before the one that ended their lives), there is the potential for danger.

So that is one reason to pay these public servants on a higher level.

But there are more common sense reasons as well.

For instance, the Odessa Police Department has been operating short-handed for some time now. Part of the reason is the fact that many officers have been lured away by higher-paying jobs, both in other law enforcement agencies and in the private sector.

This puts an additional strain on those who stay with the department because they are called on to work long hours to pick up the slack.

Whats more, many first responders moonlight by working other jobs or having their own businesses. This is by choice, of course. But it just reduces the spare time these people have to spend with their families. And it affects their quality of life.

So, while hiking the pay of those who work in emergency capacities might create a bigger burden on taxpayers, it may be a sacrifice that is

Infant cold medications pulled from shelves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug makers on Thursday voluntarily pulled children's cold medicines off the market less than two weeks after the government warned of potential health risks to infants.

Over-the-counter medications aimed at children under the age of two are being removed from store shelves because of rare instances of parents overdosing young children, a trade group that represents the drugs' manufacturers said. The group said parents should no longer administer these medications.

The Consumer Healthcare Products Association said last month it agreed with government officials that use of the drugs should be restricted, but had previously stopped short of pulling the products from the market.

Cold medicines being withdrawn include: Johnson & Johnson Pediacare Infant Drops and Tylenol Concentrated Infants Drops, Wyeth's Dimetapp

Decongestant Infant Drops, Novartis' Triaminic Infant & Toddler Thin Strips and Prestige Brands Holdings' Little Colds Decongestant Plus Cough.

CVS Caremark Corp. said Thursday morning it would remove the affected products as well as CVS-brand equivalents from store shelves. The pharmacy chain said customers can return the products for a full refund.

Catherine Tom-Revzon, a pediatric pharmacist, said parents should use natural therapies, including saltwater drops and humidifiers, to treat infants' colds before using drugs.

"These medications were never designed to cure colds but only to treat cold symptoms, and in children under two there was little evidence they were effective anyway," said Tom-Revzon, who is pharmacy manager at the Children's Hospital at Montefiore in New York. Late last month the Food and Drug Administration tentatively recommended adding the words "do not use in children under two years" to products' labeling. Current labeling directs parents to consult a doctor before administering the drugs to infants and toddlers.

The medicines come in tiny, droplet-size doses, but parents occasionally do not consult or follow directions from physicians, which can lead to accidental overdose.

FDA will formally consider revising labeling at a meeting scheduled for Oct. 18-19.

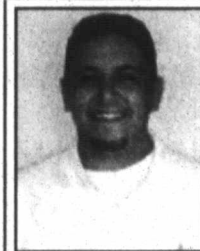

After reviewing reports of side effects over the last four decades, FDA found 54 child fatalities from over-the-counter decongestant medicines. The agency found 69 reports of children's deaths connected with antihistamines, which are used to treat runny noses.

The Consumer Healthcare Products Association said it will conduct a multiyear campaign to educate parents and physicians on safe use of cold medicines. A spokeswoman for the group said it was too early to rule out a return of the products to the market.

"The manufacturers made this decision after a lot of consideration and with great care for the best interests of parents and children," said CHPA spokeswoman Virginia Cox. "But we can't speak to what the future holds."

The trade group stressed that the "medicines are, and have always been, safe at recommended doses."

Ohio student gunman warned of attack

CLEVELAND (AP) — The brother of a high school student who shot and wounded four people before killing himself was led out of his home in handcuffs by police officers on Thursday, as family members looked on and called his name.

Officers placed Stephen Coon, 19, in the back of an unmarked car, then several officers went into the house. It was unclear why Coon was being taken into custody.

"Please have respect, I just lost my brother," Coon said as he was being escorted from the house.

Asa Coon, wearing a Marilyn Manson shirt, black jeans and black nail polish, opened fire with two revolvers on Wednesday, wounding two students and two teachers at SuccessTech Academy in downtown Cleveland. Coon, 14, had a history of mental problems and was known for cursing at teachers and bickering with students.

A classmate said Thursday that he and others had warned their principal about threats by Asa Coon and said the attack could have been prevented.

The student, Rasheem Smith, said on CBS' "Early Show" that despite their warnings, principal Johnneita Durant told them she was too busy.

"I told my friends in the class that he had a gun and stuff," said Smith, 15. "He was talking about doing it last week. I don't know why they didn't say nothing."

"We talked to the principal. She would try to get us all in the office, but it would always be too busy for it to happen," Smith said.

Responding on the show, schools CEO Eugene Sanders said the district would investigate. "We're going to review the entire situation over the course of today and tomorrow, make a determination of what has indeed occurred, and then see what the appropriate recommendations are, so we can move forward on Monday morning," he said.

A message left at Durant's office was not returned. A phone call to her home was not answered.

All classes in the city school district were canceled Thursday, and counseling was to be available for students.

Coon, who was suspended Monday for fighting with a classmate and was under suspension at the time of the shootings, had warned classmates of an attack, but none took him seriously.

"When he got suspended, he was like 'I got something for you all,'" said student Frances Henderson, who said she often got into arguments with Coon. "I guess this is what he had."

Coon, who was white, stood out in the predominantly black school for dressing in a goth style, wearing a black trench coat, black boots, a dog collar and chains, she said.

Henderson, who is black, said she didn't believe race played a role in the shootings.

"He's crazy. He threatened to blow up our school. He threatened to stab everybody," said Doneisha LeVert, 14. "We didn't think nothing of it."

On Thursday, a spokeswoman said Sanders will give the Mayor Frank Jackson a plan by Friday at noon to address whether additional security measures are needed at the school and how the school identifies potential problems among students.

Police Chief Michael McGrath said Thursday that the preliminary investigation found that Coon entered the school and went to a fourth-floor bathroom, where he changed clothes and took items out of a duffel bag, possibly the weapons, and put them on his body. There was an armed security guard at the school's entrance, McGrath said, though it was not known how Coon got inside.

to think in the short term. The truth is we have been players on the stage of history only for an instant. We have won the sprint, but the story of mankind is a marathon.

Should you ever visit Palestine, some Palestinian will almost surely point to the ruins left by the Romans and the Crusaders

One of our faults is that we have been conditioned by television and short political cycles and say: "Where are they now? It took 200 years to get rid of the Crusaders, but they are gone and we are still here."

Ask yourself if you would fly to Iraq and, unarmed and unescorted, take a walk through Baghdad proudly displaying an American flag on your lapel. Hatred has a twin brother, and it's fear. We should stop harming other people so we can live without hatred or fear.

Riot shirt tradition helped in time of need

I don't know how you feel about the Pampa tradition of the "riot shirts," but I love it!

When Shari and I first got word that our youngest son, Chad, would be going to Iraq for a year as a gunner, we were anxious like every parent is who gets one of those calls. One of the things that helped me through the past year was the riot shirt tradition.

I had two shirts printed up that helped me feel like I was doing something to help our son. On the front of the first shirt was: "The Army Riot." On the back it said: "My Son, Chad Sublett, Is In Iraq, Please Pray."

The second shirt was the same on the front, but on the back it read: "Half Of My Heart Is In Iraq, Please Pray." Those shirts helped me feel closer to Chad and helped especially with the hard days when I missed him the most.

Well, Chad completed his one year deployment in Iraq and is now back with his beautiful wife, Kassy, and son, Conner, at Fort Riley in Junction City, Kan. Praise the Lord!

I cannot tell you how many times during the past year some of you wonderful Pampans came up to me and said something like: "I'll be praying for your son everyday," "Chad is on our weekly prayer list at church" or "You tell your son that we sure are proud of him."

Mike Sublett

Hi-Land Christian Church

It would be impossible for me to put into words how appreciative Shari and I are to you for those many, many prayers. We are in your debt. And Chad is appreciative, too. Every time over the past year when he would call or e-mail,

Chad would always ask me, "Dad please tell everyone how much I appreciate their prayers."

One recent Friday morning, I got to wear my third Riot Shirt for the first time. It was a very special day. It says "Army Riot" on the front, but on the back is: "My Son, Chad Sublett, Is Home From Iraq, Thanks For Your Prayers."

If you should see me wearing that shirt, please know that the "thank you" is genuine, and that everyone in our family believes that all of your prayers were directly connected to Chad's safe return.

I'm not getting rid of the other two shirts, we're not exactly sure yet that he won't be returning sometime early in 2008. But whichever shirt you see me wearing, know that the Sublett family thanks you from the bottom of our hearts for caring enough to pray for our son. God bless.

"The Love Of God"
This hymn actually began with the third stanza which was a small part of an ancient lengthy poem composed in 1096 in Worms, Germany by a Jewish songwriter, Rabbi Mayer. The poem, entitled "Hadamut," was written in the Arabic language. The lines were found one day in revised form on the walls of a patient's room in an insane asylum after the patient's death. The words of this third stanza were quoted one day at a Nazarene camp meeting. Frederick Lehman, a Nazarene pastor, was so moved by the words that he added the first two stanzas and completed the hymn in 1917.

Holy Spirit an ever-present source of power

Every spirit-filled believer has with him all the power he will ever need to put him over in this life.

The New Testament gives us three relations that God sustains toward man: 1) God for us; 2) God with us; and 3) God in us. To have God for us guarantees success. If God be for us who can be against us? (Romans 8:31)

If God is on our side, we are sure to win. If God is for you and you know that He is for you, you become utterly fearless in life — no matter how difficult the situation may be, no matter how dark the clouds that hang upon the horizon of your life. You are calmly assured that you will win. There can be no defeat if the Lord is for us.

You can also have the assurance that not only is He for you, but every place in life He is with you. No matter what the circumstances may be, your Lord is with you.

The knowledge of the word of God along this line should certainly cause our hearts to leap within us in faith and confidence. In the New Testament, we have a better covenant established on better promises. Under the covenant in the Old Testament, God was for Israel and with Israel, but He was not in them.

Jimmy Flynn

God is for us and with us, but we also have something better. God is in us. God is actually making His home in our bodies.

—Our Bodies, the Temple of God (1 Corinthians 3:16, 1 Corinthians 6:19, 2 Corinthians 6:16 ... Too few of us are really conscious of God in our bodies. If men and women were conscious of God in their bodies, they wouldn't talk and act as they do.

Some Christians constantly talk about their lack of power, their lack of ability. If they realized that God is in them, they would know that there is nothing impossible to them.

The Bible says all things are possible to them that believeth. (Mark 9:23) The reason all things are possible to him that believeth is, that God our Father planned that the believing one should have God Himself living in him through the power of the Holy Spirit, and with God in him nothing is impossible.

Of all the mighty truths in connection with our redemption, this is the climax, that after God Himself has recreated us and made us new creatures, made us His own, then He, in the person of the Holy Spirit, makes our bodies His home.

John, in his first epistle, wrote, "Ye See FLYNN, Page 7

Through Christ is victory over the grave

There is a first time for everything, so I am told. To the best of my memory, Sept. 12, 2007, afforded a first for me. While some might find reasons to disagree with what took place, I found myself saying, "That's all right."

Many years ago, a minister was called home from a revival to bury his little boy. The minister looked down into the gaping space beneath the casket, and later he remarked, "I saw the darkest hole that I ever saw in my life."

Sorrow sometimes hides a multitude of facts.

Back in the mid-1930s, I helped build a wooden box that a minister's little boy would be buried in. The minister was pastor of a little church and was the father of a large family when there was very little money in circulation for life, sickness or death.

I was there, as helpless as all the others, to keep life in that little body. Then the minister bid me go out and carry the news. Very few phones existed.

The minister said, "My boy is not out there in the ground. My boy is with Jesus, and I will go see him."

After I reached the age of 85, my wife of 60 years died rather suddenly. After breaking her hip on a Friday morning, our four children had time to be present for her hip surgery Sunday afternoon. The surgery proved to be fatal, and Virginia was gone by 6 p.m.

I was so glad that I knew Jesus had gone to prepare a place for all who accept the atonement that was made by his blood. I knew Virginia had, by faith, accepted that atonement for her sins and had made preparations for heaven.

With that assurance, I began to rejoice for her victory over temptations and trials, sickness and sorrow, and I would not say, "If heaven is real." I said, "Because heaven is real."

Through my tears, I rejoiced with her in heaven and trusted Jesus for my future.

Then I read, "I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ." (2 Corinthians 11:2) I took hold of that.

Virginia and I together can help make up the bride of Christ, and now being in my mid-90s I am looking forward to my next wedding when Virginia and I can be in the company of the bride and Jesus will be our groom. Others have been taught likewise, and we take hold of that promise of faith.

Panhandling with a purpose

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was panhandling, it was performance art — and it was a political statement about the legacy of slavery and reparations for black people.

A dozen volunteers, black and white, took to the streets of Portland on Wednesday to take part in what its creator called the National Day of Panhandling for Reparations.

They asked white passers-by to pay reparations for enslaving black people, and then they gave money to black passers-by.

"Artists take the lead on social issues," the organizer, a Portland-based performance artist named damali ayo, told The Oregonian. "This is the way I'm taking the lead on a social issue. Taking it to the streets. Also to get the job done — getting those reparations paid out."

As volunteer Frances Miller asked passers-by for money, they reacted with confusion, amusement or annoyance. Some, like delivery man Jeremy Butyrin, gave money.

"America's history hasn't been so kind to a lot of people," said Butyrin, who gave $10. "You can't always count on the government to take care of it. Sometimes you have to do it yourself."

"I'm Slavic. I kind of understand," he added. "My dad had to escape oppression to come over here."

Moments later, Porter Miller, 58, walked by on his way to a bus stop. He didn't understand why a stranger was offering him money.

are of God, little children, and have overcome them. Because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." (1 John 4:4) Both Paul and John were writing to people who not only had received eternal life, but were spirit-filled believers. Those in whom the Holy Spirit had come to dwell, who had the supernatural sign as witness of His indwelling presence.

John said, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

I maintain that every born-again, spirit-filled believer has within him, ready for use, all the power he will ever need to put him over in this life.

When we put together all the scriptures quoted above, it is quite obvious that through the infilling of the Holy Spirit, the third person of the Godhead, God Himself, indwells the believer. No longer does He dwell in a man-made holy of holies, our bodies have become His temple.

"Missy" was born in 1968 in Kansas. At the age of 9, she went to live at a state hospital and training center. She lived there until she was 18-years-old, at which time she went to a group home in Vineta, Okla., where she lived for 16 years until she moved in with her mother and stepdad and helped with their ministry.

Missy became a Christian in 1996 prior to moving in with her mom and stepfather.

Missy learned that some Christians would be selected to be the bride of Christ, and set her heart to have Jesus as her groom.

Some time ago, Missy learned that she had cancer in a very bad stage. She fought back with prayer and faith in a way that many people could not hold up to. Then one morning she said, "Mother, I want to go shopping."

Her mother asked what for.

"I want to get a wedding gown to marry Jesus in," Missy said.

I'm sure Missy understood the difference between the natural and the spiritual wedding, but she wanted this to be an outward sign of her faith. Each item that Missy named for her wedding garments, her mother took her to that department. Missy did it up right.

To me, that was a first, but it spoke volumes to my heart.

Missy is not among the foolish virgins who have no oil in their vessels with their lamps. (Matthew 25:11-13) Instead, her wedding gown shrouds her clay until the resurrection morning.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and in high school. There's this boy, "Jon," who has liked me for a long time. Recently a friend of his asked me if I'd ever consider being Jon's girlfriend. I told him no. I said I liked Jon, just not in that way. Obviously, the friend told Jon. My problem is Jon is now acting obsessive toward me. He calls me almost every day telling me he WILL make me his girlfriend someday. Abby, I am friends with Jon's ex-girlfriend, "Sara," and that's one reason I said no. The second reason is that Sara confided in me that she broke up with Jon because he had begun to abuse her. The third is that I'm just not interested. Jon follows me around the school when he thinks I don't know. He has even followed me home. I don't know what to do about this, so please print my letter. — BEING STALKED IN VANCOUVER, B.C.

DEAR BEING STALKED: You cannot be "friends" with Jon, because he doesn't regard you in that way. The next time he calls, tell him he must stop calling, and that you know he has been following you, and that must stop, too. Then inform your parents what's been going on, and let them tell Jon's parents the attention you're receiving from their son is unwanted. Years ago, people used to think that the behavior you have described was just part of young love. Since the early '90s, however, members of law enforcement and the mental health community have come to realize that individuals who behave the way Jon does may be mentally unbalanced. In your case, this may be just a teenage crush, but if Jon doesn't leave you alone, your family may have to involve the police.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I celebrated our 50th anniversary a few weeks ago. Last spring we jokingly said that we would have to throw the party for ourselves because no one else would. We took all kids, spouses and grandkids on a cruise over the summer because that's when the kids were out of school. Well, our big day arrived. One daughter sent flowers, another bought a ham -- for me to cook. One son called to say "Happy Anniversary." The other son forgot. I have been so depressed ever since that I break down in tears several times a day. Not one of our children thought our 50th was important enough to contact the siblings and say, "Hey, let's take Mom and Dad out to dinner on this special occasion." Am I wrong to feel hurt? How can I get beyond this? — HURT BEYOND WORDS IN TEXAS

DEAR HURT BEYOND WORDS: Your children may have been under the impression that the cruise you took them on during the summer was all the celebration you had in mind. If so, then your problem is not one of neglect; it was one of poor communication. The way to move beyond this is to dry your tears and resolve that you and your husband will schedule a romantic getaway for just the two of you. That way there will be no disappointments.

TO MY MUSLIM READERS: A happy Eid al-Fitr, one and all!

Football tonight

Senior offensive linemen Garrett Eggleston (70), Tanner Cochran (66) and Nick Dudley (76) stand ready against the Bulldogs in Plainview last Friday night. The Pampa Harvesters will take on the Caprock Longhorns at 7:30 tonight on Harvester Field.

WTAMU expands tailgating area at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium

CANYON, Tx — West Texas A&M University has expanded the tailgate area at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium for all WTAMU football games.

Tailgating with alcohol is now permitted off the pavement of the parking lot in the southeast corner of the stadium, as well as the area behind the tree line in the southeast stadium (the area used for the first three games this season). Boundary fences and signs will be in place to direct fans to the expanded location.

"We asked Canyon Independent School District to consider re-drawing boundary lines in our lease agreement in order for us to provide a better tailgating experience for our fans," said Michael McBroom. "Mike Wartes and the CISD were very helpful in this process. They understood our concerns and our needs as we continue to build our football program. I appreciate their support."

West Texas A&M will now be responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of land east of the new boundary line. "Having this space makes a big difference for us. We can offer our fans an opportunity to have a traditional tailgate experience," said McBroom. "It also provides additional parking areas that have not been used in the past."

WTAMU will utilize the new space immediately, providing a free concert prior to Saturday's Homecoming football game, along with the Homecoming Barbecue. Straight Shooter will perform from 3:30 — 5:30 pm.

The tailgate area opens at 12:00 pm. Alcohol consumption is allowed for persons of legal age from 12 — 6 pm. The area will close at kickoff.

The tenth-ranked Buffaloes take on Eastern New Mexico in the annual Wagon Wheel game. Kickoff is set for 6 pm. The Re/Max Sky Dive team will deliver the game ball at approximately 5:57 pm. Gates open at 4 pm.

More tailgating guidelines can be found at www.GoBuffsGo.com.

Harvesters welcome Longhorns tonight

After improving to 3-2 over the Plainview Bulldogs last week, the Pampa Harvesters look to further improve their record over Caprock tonight at Harvester Field.

Last week, Pampa traveled to Plainview, where they defeated the Bulldogs 21-6.

Senior running back Shavious Kelley ran the ball

107 yards in Plainview to up his season total to 330 rushing yards.

Rushing for 80 yards and passing for 183 last week, junior quarterback Casey Trimble now has 231 rushing yards and 1110 passing yards on the season.

Pampa will take to Harvester field at 7:30 tonight against the Caprock Longhorns.

Rockies beat Webb, Diamondbacks 5-1 in NLCS opener; game delayed by rowdy fans

PHOENIX (AP) — In Troy Tulowitzki's view, Justin Upton was out of line not once but twice.

First, Upton stared down Jeff Francis, the winner in Colorado's 5-1 victory over Arizona in the opener of the NL championship series Thursday night, after getting plunked by a changeup in the seventh inning.

Then, he rolled his right shoulder into second baseman Kaz Matsui while trying to break up a double play, which resulted in an interference call that ignited an eight-minute delay when rowdy fans threw bottles onto the field.

Tulowitzki's anger at Upton wasn't for taking out Matsui. "I always respect guys that go into second hard," the Rockies rookie shortstop said after Colorado's 18th win in 19 games. "Whether or not it was the right call, I'm not sure. But I didn't really have a problem with that."

Tulowitzki did take exception, however, to Upton staring down Francis, who outpitched Arizona ace Brandon Webb and allowed just one earned run on seven hits in 6 2-3 innings.

"There's a man on first, no one's out. It was a change-up. The last thing Jeff's trying to do is hit a guy," Tulowitzki said. "I just thought he stared him down a little bit too long."

Down 5-1, Arizona put runners at runners at first and second with no outs in the seventh. Augie Ojeda bounced to third baseman Garrett Atkins, who threw to second baseman Matsui.

Upton, running from first base, slid over second base and then rolled his right shoulder into Matsui's left leg, knocking the infielder to the ground. Second base umpire Larry Vanover immediately called Upton out for interference, resulting in a double play.

"I was just playing the game. I did what I was supposed to do," Upton said. "That's what you're taught to do when you slide is pop up."

Vanover wasn't buying that explanation. "You had obvious intent on the part of the runner to break up the double play, and when it turns into intentional, that's when he's out for interference," he said.

One of 11 unbeaten major college teams, Kansas to host Baylor

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — After waiting 11 years to climb back into the Top 25, Kansas sure doesn't want to let its No. 20 ranking slip away after just one week.

"We just arrived there," coach Mark Mangino said with a big grin. "We just broke the Top 25."

Besides, the Jayhawks (5-0, 1-0) are also eager to show off their new and improved pass defense to the same Baylor team that torched them for 394 yards through the air a year ago.

Erasing an 18-point deficit in the fourth quarter for a 36-35 victory, the Bears shocked Kansas with the third-biggest comeback in Baylor history. The setback probably kept the Jayhawks from going to a second consecutive bowl game and no doubt went a long way toward making Kansas' pass defense the worst in the nation.

So far this year, the Jayhawks, one of 11 unbeaten teams in the Football Bowl Subdivision (formerly I-A), have one of the country's best pass defenses, allowing a shade more than 160 yards a game. In a 30-24 victory at then-No. 24 Kansas State last week that finally ended their 11-year absence from the national spotlight, the Jayhawks made two key second-half interceptions of Josh Freeman.

Might the smell of revenge be in the air when they kick off against Baylor at 11:30 a.m. CST?

"Obviously, all the guys that played in that game last year want to avenge that (loss) and have a better showing this year," said quarterback Todd Reesing. "We are not going to talk about revenge. We are just going to talk about how it is the next game."

The Bears (3-3, 0-2 Big 12) are coming off a 43-23 loss at home to Colorado. Both teams love throwing the ball, and Saturday's game will showcase two quarterbacks who have been busily erasing their school's sophomore passing records.

Reesing has thrown for 1,670 yards and twice set the Kansas record for most yards passing in a game by a sophomore. Baylor's Blake Szymanski established his school's record for touchdown passes by a sophomore in the season's third game.

With 15 touchdown passes this year, Szymanski needs five to pass Shawn Bell's single-season team record.

SMU, Southern Miss looking to rebound from disappointing losses

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — When Southern Miss quarterback Stephen Reaves threw four interceptions and fumbled the ball twice in an upset loss to Rice on Oct. 3, John Reaves knew just how to approach his son.

The elder Reaves, a former Florida All-American and NFL quarterback, set the NCAA record for interceptions in a game with nine in 1969.

"A couple days later he called me and said, 'Man, I thought you were going to break my record,'" Stephen Reaves said. "I could laugh after a couple of days."

Reaves and the Golden Eagles (2-3 overall, 1-1 Conference USA) will try to put that 31-29 loss to Rice behind them Saturday when SMU (1-4, 0-1) comes to Hattiesburg for the teams' first meeting.

"I've definitely got to do a better job of protecting the ball," said Reaves, who was forced to play with a pulled oblique muscle after starter Martevius Young broke his leg. "Coaches have told me that and told the offense. We still had a good shot at winning last week regardless of the turnovers I committed and the interceptions. If we cut down half of those it's a whole different ball game."

The Golden Eagles rallied with 23 points late in the game, but fell short when a Rice defender batted down a 2-point conversion to give the Owls their first win.

Like Rice, SMU hasn't had much success this season, but the Mustangs' record is deceptive. They've put up 45 points three times, most recently in a 48-45 overtime loss to Texas-El Paso two weeks ago.

The Mustangs are led by quarterback Justin Willis, who is 22nd in the nation in total offense with 1,204 yards passing and 283 yards rushing. He's thrown eight touchdowns against seven interceptions.

"They do a good job running their offense with misdirection plays, running the option out of the shotgun and a triple option that they read well," Southern Miss coach Jeff Bower said. "(Willis) is another dual-threat quarterback who can run and throw."

SMU coach Phil Bennett said the Mustangs, who have lost three straight, used their off week to work on tackling and fundamentals following the loss to UTEP. He believes his team has made progress and looks at the trip to Southern Miss as a positive despite the Golden Eagles' likely testy mood.

"We've got to view it as an opportunity," Bennett said. "I think you take anybody in this league and there's a lot of parity. Obviously, they're going to be determined. It's their homecoming. But we've got to be determined also. I'm not sure there's a good time to go there but I do know this — we're going."

Bower said Reaves will be the likely starter this week with Todd Wilson as his backup. Martevius Young is out for the year and original starter Jeremy Young is recovering from a high angle sprain, though he did work out some this week.

The coach said the Golden Eagles, picked to win the conference this year, are not out of the race. With a win earlier this year at East Carolina and Central Florida still to come in Hattiesburg, Southern Miss still has a chance to win the league's East Division and play in the title game.

Chivas USA, FC Dallas play to draw

FRISCO, Texas (AP) — Brad Guzan made five saves for his MLS-leading 12th shutout of the season to help Chivas USA tie FC Dallas 0-0 on Thursday night.

Chivas (15-6-7) extended its unbeaten streak to 11 games (7-0-4) and moved four points ahead of Houston for the Western Conference lead with two games left for each club. Guzan has the second-highest shutout total in MLS history, trailing Tony Meola's league-record 16 with Kansas City in 2000.

With the tie, FC Dallas (13-11-5) has just one victory in its last six (1-3-2) and is now locked into the West's third seed, unable to catch Houston for second and comfortably ahead of Colorado in fourth. Backup goalkeeper Ray Burse, a 23-year-old rookie, earned his second career shutout in just his fifth MLS start by turning aside one shot.

With each club having already clinched berths in the upcoming MLS Cup playoffs, neither displayed much urgency to snap the tie, although Dallas' Arturo Alvarez had perhaps the match's best scoring chance in the first minute of injury time, drilling a shot from the corner of the penalty box past Guzan and off the near-side post.

Dallas played the final 10-plus minutes a man down after Bobby Rhine was ejected with a red card.

Guzan made an impressive diving stop on Kenny Cooper's blast from the penalty dot in the 72nd minute. He also made a nice kick save on Abe Thompson, the MLS Player of the Week after scoring two goals last week, on a partial breakaway in the 43rd minute.

Franchione might have violated contract by not reporting income

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M coach Dennis Franchione appears to have violated the terms of his contract by failing to report outside income generated by his secretive, for-pay newsletter and personal Web site.

Embarrassed school officials said Thursday that income from CoachFran.com and the newsletter, which was e-mailed to boosters for $1,200 a year, brought in about $80,000 to Franchione between 2005 and 2007. The school said Franchione's net profit was $37,806.32.

The NCAA requires coaches to file annual reports with their schools detailing "athletically related income and benefits from sources outside the institution." A copy of Franchione's contract, obtained by The Associated Press, includes that stipulation and specifically mentions income from Web sites.

The AP also obtained copies of Franchione's annual outside income reports, and none include income from Web sites.

The school said Franchione didn't think he had to report the income until he received the proceeds that exceeded expenses incurred maintaining the Web site.

Despite the clear language of the contract, school officials said they were asking their attorneys whether Franchione violated his $2 million-per-year deal by failing to report the outside income. Athletic director Bill Byrne said he would report the results of an internal investigation to the NCAA.

Byrne also said that the entire episode will be a factor in deciding whether Franchione, under contract through 2012, will return next season.

"I'm assuring you, it will be part of his personnel review," Byrne said. "At the end of the year, we always go over what happened in the previous year. We evaluate any actions that occurred to the football team, we look at items like recruiting, wins and losses, NCAA violations, Big 12 violations."

The NCAA doesn't comment on specific cases or even confirm ongoing investigations. NCAA spokeswoman Stacey Osburn did say income from personal Web sites would be considered "athletically related" and must be reported by coaches.

David Batson, A&M's compliance officer, said he didn't expect the NCAA to penalize the program with sanctions, though he wouldn't rule it out.

"I think the actions taken by the institution will suffice," Batson said. "But ultimately, that's a decision by the NCAA."

Violation of NCAA rule 11.2.2 alone has never resulted in a major infraction case. Several schools — including Wisconsin in 1999, Southwestern Louisiana in 1995 and Virginia in 1993 — were punished for their coaches failing to report athletically related income in combination with numerous other infractions, according to the NCAA.

Byrne had already ordered

Franchione to end the newsletter and on Thursday announced that Franchione must also shut down his Web site. Franchione also will receive a "letter of admonishment."

"The Aggies are embarrassed right now," Byrne said. "This has been a very unfortunate incident we do not want to experience again."

The school pointed out three areas where possible violations occurred:

—Franchione did not report income generated through his Web site or from the newsletter, called the VIP Connection. The school said Franchione thought he did not have to report the income until he received the proceeds that exceeded expenses incurred maintaining the Web site.

—The VIP Connection occasionally contained information about prospective student-athletes. The NCAA prohibits a school from commenting publicly on recruits until they sign letters of intent.

—The school suggested that

Franchione violated Big 12 Conference standards of sportsmanship by criticizing officiating in some of the newsletters.

Batson said Franchione was unaware of newsletter recipients using the information for gambling.

Byrne said he wasn't aware of the newsletters until a reporter asked about them. A&M hired a consulting firm to investigate about two weeks ago, after Franchione admitted he provided the information in the newsletter.

"My guess is there was an attempt to keep it from us," Byrne said. "I think the whole thing started as something well-intended, to keep a number of people who were good donors to the university forever informed about things that were going on. It just got out of control."

Franchione apologized to his team, the school and fans in a statement released after Byrne met with reporters.

Yao scores 21 to lead Rockets over Panathinaikos

HOUSTON (AP) — Yao Ming scored 21 points and had eight rebounds to help the Houston Rockets beat Euroleague champion Panathinaikos of Greece 107-70 in an exhibition game Thursday night.

The Rockets played without star forward Tracy McGrady, who had a sore left knee. Club officials said he bumped it slightly in practice Wednesday and they decided at game time to hold him out. He's day to day.

Rookie Luis Scola scored 17 points while Rafer Alston added 14. Steve Francis, who returned to the team in a draft-day trade from the Knicks, played 21 minutes off the bench and scored 11 points.

Panathinaikos, which has won four Euroleague titles the past eight years, was led by Sani Becirovic and Michael Batiste, one of two Americans on the team (along with Kennedy Winston). They each scored 14 points. Batiste, the former Arizona State player who spent the 2002-03 season with the Memphis Grizzlies, also had a team-high nine rebounds.

Kostas Tsartsaris added 10 points for Panathinaikos. Guard Dimitris Diamantidis, MVP of the Euroleague's Final Four, went 1-for-8 from the field and failed to score until there was 1:37 left in the game when he hit a 3-point shot.

Panathinaikos coach Zelimir

Obradovic got his second technical with 7:53 to play and was ejected from the game with Houston leading 90-55.

From the start, it was evident the Greek team, whose tallest player was the 6-foot-10 Tsartsaris, had no answer for the 7-6 Yao. Yao's presence in the first quarter kept the Greeks from going inside and they hit only 7 of 18 shots for 38.9 percent.

The Rockets hit 52.6 percent — 10 of 19 — of their first-quarter shots and led 33-17 after one.

Houston stretched the lead to 22 in the second quarter on its way to a 59-37 lead at the half. Yao played 19 minutes in the first half and had 14 points and four rebounds.

Rookie of year Park outshines Wie in Samsung Championship

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Angela Park didn't particularly want to recall the two earlier times she played a round with Michelle Wie.

"Let's not talk about that," Park said. "I played with her in the Public Links and U.S. Amateur."

Wie beat her in both those 2004 amateur tournaments, but times do change. After Thursday's first round of the Samsung World Championship, Park's 67 was good for a share of the lead with Paula Creamer, and Wie's 79 was three shots worse than any other player in the 20-player field.

The 19-year-old Park, who already has clinched this year's LPGA Rookie of the Year award, said she was nervous being paired with Wie, who still draws large galleries despite her struggles on the course this year.

Asked whether the crowd or playing with Wie made her the most nervous, Park said, "I think a little bit of both. I was shaking out there. I don't know why. I was like, 'Calm down, calm down.'"

The shakes didn't creep into her game; Park birdied the first three holes.

"It was because of her (Wie) that I played a little bit better than I expected because I just tried to focus on my own game," Park said. "I knew she had her own things going on."

"I wasn't looking at her swing. I wasn't really focusing on what she was doing. I just kept focused on myself."

That wasn't the case in the two earlier meetings as amateurs.

"That was totally different," Park said. "Then I so totally followed her game, watched what she was doing."

Park, who was born in Brazil and moved with her parents to the Los Angeles area when she was 8, said she was excited just to be in the tournament.

"Obviously being one of the top 20, elite members of women's golf, is a very priceless experience," she said. "And especially to be the only rookie out here gives me great pride and gives me a lot of confidence."

The 21-year-old Creamer, the tour's rookie of the year in 2005, had her irons clicking during her bogey-free round.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Oct. 13, 2007:

This year you manifest a sense of direction, which will enhance productivity and security if used properly. Accept new technology. Don't fight a sudden change. Gracefully enter a better phase in which your daily life reflects your essence. If you are single, be careful, as you often put people on pedestals, only to have them fall off. Give up the rose-colored glasses. If you are attached, you'll discover the extent of another's impact on your life. Work on being less possessive. SCORPIO provokes strong feelings.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You work best as a duo. You'll accomplish a lot because of who you are, but also as a result of this teamwork. Seeing a friend in the light of reality might not be possible right now. Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Willful people surround you. Where all this stubbornness comes from might be difficult to determine, yet dissolving an issue demands a generosity of spirit. Allow others to reveal their true self. Tonight: Sort through invitations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ A hobby might demand a lot of focus. Invite a loved one or a friend to join in. Visiting under these circumstances adds a different and more easy-going interchange. The two of you add to the glue between you. Tonight: Choose to relax.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Your creativity emerges with someone who often can be confusing. You might not be getting the big picture financially. Hesitate, slow down or opt not to make a decision. Tonight: Let your imagination rock and roll.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Stay centered despite what might be whirling around you. Don't allow yourself to be coaxed or coerced into doing anything you don't want to. Check out an investment that might involve property and/or your domestic life. Tonight: Your lair is the center of the action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Others have noticed how remarkably serious and grounded you are. Staying on top of communication and avoiding a misunderstanding will take talent for the next few weeks. Do yourself a favor, and don't buy a new computer or car in this same time period. Tonight: Hanging out might be just what you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Use caution with your finances. No matter how good that lottery ticket looks, you want to make sure you don't bust your budget if you decide to buy 100. You might feel lucky, but the end result might not be. Add more creativity to your life. Add a fun hobby. Tonight: How about a cheesesteak?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You are in the pink. Use the unexpected to add more excitement to a relationship. Enjoy and experience the many different people in your life. You know what you want. Getting there might take several tries. Tonight: Off on a romp.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Take your time. You might need a day to twiddle your thumbs and do nothing. Don't worry so much. An unexpected idea or decision might encourage you to stay home. If you decide to rearrange your furniture, know that you might do it again and again today. Tonight: Play it easy, if possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Friends are full of surprises. Don't get stuck doing what you should. Defer only to what you want, adding a convivial tone to your day. Join friends for a late lunch. Go to the movies. Do be available. Tonight: Zero in on what you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ While others frolic and play, you find that you have way too much to do. An unexpected offer makes working much more pleasant. You might not be clear about what someone really expects from you. Tonight: Listen rather than judge.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Others can count on your sense of humor and intellect. You can spice up what many find most boring. No wonder so many invitations head in your direction. Though intuitive, you might not be picking up on another's thoughts as much as your own wishes. Tonight: Decide to do a first — be it a restaurant or happening.
