Radio manager takes issue with dismissed DWI charge

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

The death of a 13-year-old Pampa girl after she was allegedly hit by a drunken driver while riding her bicycle has resulted in scrutiny by some of how criminal charges are handled in Gray County.

Steven Lee Stamps II, 26, was arrested and charged with intoxication manslaughter in connection with the death of Alejandra Ramirez, 13, of 736 N. Dwight after Stamps reportedly struck and killed her with his vehicle at about 10 p.m. May 26 in the 1500 block of Gwendolyn.

Questions concerning the handling of criminal charges were raised by Darrell Sehorn, general manager of KGRO-KOMX radio station, after Stamps' criminal history was examined.

Stamps' record shows two prior convictions for driving while intoxicated, according to county records. The first conviction was on Oct. 13, 2000, and the second was on May 8, 2001, both in Gray County Court. A third driving while intoxicated charge in 2004 was dismissed due to insufficient evidence, according to 31st District Attorney Lynn Switzer.

Stamps also has been charged in previous years with burglary of a motor vehicle in 2000, driving while license is invalid in 2004 and possession of contraband in 2003. A charge of assault causing bodily injury on June 5, 2006, is still pending against him, according to county records. At the time of the third driving while intoxicated arrest, Stamps had had his driver's license suspended due to not having liability insurance, according to Texas Department of Public Safety records.

"I took issue with the dismissal,"

Sehorn said concerning Stamps' third driving while intoxicated charge. "I got a letter from Lynn Switzer saying it was thrown out at the request of the DPS for reasons unrelated to the arrest."

Sehorn has been airing commentary concerning the incidents involving Stamps on Pampa radio.

"I've been editorializing quite a bit, especially about how DWIs are handled in Gray County at the county level," he said. "I didn't like the idea that DPS even requested that,"

Dr. Vijay Mohan holds his painting, Scarlet Dreams on Floating Greens, that will be raffled off to raise funds for the American Cancer Society at the relay for life at Recreation Park on June 29.

Doctor's love of art keeps him busy, helps good causes

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Many people in the Panhandle area who have needed surgery over the last 28 years have gone to see Dr. Vijay Mohan. What many of his patients do not know about him is that he has another talent that he uses to help raise money for non-profit organizations — he is an artist.

Dr. Mohan, who has never had any formal training, was approached in 1997 by a friend who was working with the American Heart Association. She knew that he did painting for a hobby and asked that he paint a picture that could be auctioned off to help raise funds for her organization.

He did paint a picture, using pastels as his medium, and it sold for a great price.

"I enjoyed doing this because I love to paint and at the same time I was able to help raise money for a great cause," Mohan said. "I've never sold any of my paintings because I'm not doing this for financial gain, but instead because I enjoy it and like to help out noble causes."

Some employees of Pampa Regional Medical Center formed a group and plan to walk for the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life at Recreation Park on June 29. Billie Ward, a certified pharmacy technician, decided to ask Mohan if he would paint a picture and donate it to the ACS.

"I asked Billie what theme she would like for the painting and she said flowers," Mohan said. "I thought about how cancer is a disease that requires a lot of hope from those who are afflicted, so I decided to paint lotus flowers, which is the national flower of India. That flower represents hope, serenity and tranquility."

"The lotus flower always grows on dirty water but is not affected by its impurity. Hopefully people affected by cancer can live without it affecting everything about their life. A short poem titled 'Realm of Tranquility' written by Evelyn Warner will be presented to the winner of the drawing along with the picture."

Mohan's painting is on display at PRMC at one of the main entrances. Raffle tickets have been printed up and can be purchased for 1 ticket for $1 or 6 tickets for $5 at a variety of places, the hospital information desk, pharmacy or pre-admission desk. Tickets will also be available at Shepards Crook or from any Relay for Life team member.

The winner will be chosen at the Relay for Life on June 29 by a cancer survivor and the winner does not have to be present. All of the proceeds from ticket sales will go to the ACS. For more information, contact Billie Ward at 663-5601 or Karen Furnish, LVN, at 665-5509.

Mohan attended medical school in India and then served in the MASH unit of the Indian Army for four years. He moved to New York City to do his surgical internship and residency. When he was finished with his training in 1977, Mohan applied to approximately 40 medical facilities and was offered a job in Phoenix, Ariz.

"This would have been a wonderful job and additional training, but my sister-in-law in Lubbock kept telling my wife and I that we should move to the Texas Panhandle," Mohan said. "I reluctantly declined the position in Phoenix and applied to the Pampa Clinic, which was where Taco Bell stands today. I came to Pampa and Dr. Bellamy took me to eat lunch at Furr's Cafeteria and offered me a position, which I accepted."

Mohan moved to Pampa in 1978 with his wife and two sons. He joined the Pampa Clinic and began doing general practice along with some general surgery. He traveled to Perryton on Fridays to perform surgery on patients there as well.

"One of my main contributions to our medical community was introducing Fiberoptic upper and lower G.I. endoscopic procedures in 1978," Mohan said. "These procedures are used to help diagnose ulcers, cancers and other G.I. problems. I feel I helped pave the way for the state of the art endoscopic suite we have at our present hospital."

Mohan said his love of art, music and literature was fostered by his mother. His major influence was Amy Winton, a pastel artist from Canadian.

"I attended one of her workshops in 1998 and she showed me techniques and gave me tips on how to be better with pastels," Mohan said. "She encouraged me to continue with my art and made a lasting impression on me."

and I didn't think it was a reason for the DA to throw it out."

The case is of special interest to Sehorn because his daughter Stacey was killed in a vehicle accident involving an intoxicated driver several years ago. In that instance, Sehorn said, the driver had been released from Gray County Jail on a Friday, and the fatal accident occurred the following Sunday. At the time of his release, Sehorn said, a Donley County warrant was outstanding for him.

"I have great respect for the DPS. They have tremendous training. I disagree that they asked that the case be thrown out," Sehorn said concerning Stamps' 2004 arrest.

No troopers were available at the time of a call Friday morning to the Pampa DPS office.

"This case was rejected by me on Feb. 10, 2005, at the request of DPS," Switzer said in a letter to Sehorn dated May 31. DPS requested that she dismiss all cases involving a trooper who was under investigation at that time, and the case concerning Stamps' third driving while intoxicated charge was one of those cases.

"Without the testimony of the arresting officer, I would be unable to prove all the elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt," Switzer said in the letter.

Switzer requested a copy of the videotape of the incident recorded by the trooper's videocamera mounted in his vehicle, but never received the tape, she said in an interview last week.

Felony DWI cases, which are those for a third or more offense, filed by agencies in Gray County from 2000 to 2007 total 144, according to Switzer. The district attorney's office has a 60.4 percent conviction rate, and 49.4 percent of those convicted received sentences to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice--Institutional Division.

Another 11.4 percent of the convictions were probation revocations waiting on hearings. "Together this would yield 60.8 percent of convictions resulting in sentences to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice--Institutional Division," Switzer said.

Other statistics provided by Switzer concerning felony DWIs include rejections, 6.2 percent; dismissals, 6.2 percent; no-bills by grand jury, 0.69 percent; cases taken into consideration in assessing punishment in other felony cases of defendant, 4.16 percent; and pending cases, 22.2 percent.

The maximum penalty for a felony DWI charge is a 10-year prison sentence, Switzer said. Persons convicted of this charge who received a 10-year sentence would be eligible for parole after serving one year, two months and six days, she said.

Another trooper accompanied the trooper who arrested Stamps at the time of his alleged third DWI, but was not the arresting officer and did not handle the field sobriety test or other elements of the arrest, Switzer said.

Paintings by animals benefit foundation

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Jumbe the black rhinoceros may look like a tough guy, but he's in touch with his inner artist.

Individually priced paintings created by the 2,300-pound rhino and his African elephant counterparts were featured in a one-of-a-kind art show and sale recently at Caldwell Zoo.

All proceeds from the event benefited the International Elephant Foundation.

Experts estimate there are only about 2,700 black rhinos left in the wild; African elephant populations are estimated at 600,000 worldwide.

Preparing for the show seems to be a labor of love for both the endangered animals and their keepers.

"We've been painting with the elephants for several years, but we recently decided to try it with the rhinos," said Scotty Stainback, curator of mammals. "We have a good time with it, probably as much as the animals do, and money from the sale goes toward conservation. Essentially, the animals are able to contribute to their own conservation."

Dozens of colorful paintings were offered for sale at the Memorial Day event. And there was something for just about every price range, zoo officials said.

Viewing the completed work seemed to be only half the fun.

During a pre-show painting session, 4-year-old Jumbe's enthusiasm was evident after he caught a glimpse of the canvas. Tail wagging, he trotted to the stall and stuck out his lip.

Rhinos use the appendage, called a prehensile lip, to explore their surroundings and browse for grass and tasty treats, his keepers said.

It's also useful for smearing paint, said keeper Jade Tuttle, who recently returned from a Rhino conservation conference held in Australia.

"This is a pretty common enrichment activity," Tuttle said. "Rhinos are very curious and they explore their world with their lip."

She squirted non-toxic finger paint onto a canvas, held it out toward the animal and squinted.

As the rhino rubbed his snout in the color, tiny dots of purple and white paint started to fly.

In spite of his massive size, careful attention was paid to smearing the dots.

Battle over frozen embryos goes to supreme court

AUSTIN (AP) — For the most part, Randy and Augusta Roman's divorce was proceeding normally enough. She got the house. He got the nice TV and the Honda.

It wasn't until the suburban Houston couple had to deal with microscopic matters that things got ugly: what to do with three frozen embryos they once hoped would bring them children.

The case of Roman vs. Roman now before the Texas Supreme Court pits her right to have children using the embryos against his right not to have children.

Augusta Roman wants to keep the embryos and try to have a baby. Randy Roman wants them destroyed, or at least kept frozen.

"These are my children," she said. "This is my last chance at being a biological mom."

Randy Roman could not be reached for comment and his attorney did not return telephone messages left at his office. In a statement of principles in his court filing, Randy Roman says he believes in the traditional nuclear family.

"Our embryos were created with the intent to be used only during the marriage between Augusta and I," the statement reads. "They were not created to be used in such a way that simply limits me to being a sperm donor, likewise they are not created to be used against my wishes."

The couple met in 1996 and were soon talking about marriage and kids. She was a nurse and he worked for a technical contractor with NASA.

They were married within six months. Augusta's biggest regret now is that she agreed to wait at least two years to have children.

When they finally tried, she got pregnant but miscarried. Unable to get pregnant again, the couple eventually sought help at a fertility clinic.

Eggs were extracted and fertilized with Randy's sperm. On April 19, 2002, the night before the eggs were to be implanted, Randy shocked her with the announcement he couldn't go through with it, giving her a list of complaints about their marriage, Augusta Roman said.

Good news came out of the latest family distraction

In the movie "The Money Pit" Tom Hanks and Shelley Long experience a series of misfortunes when they try to keep up with repairing a dilapidated house.

When we moved into our home in 2000, I should have seen the warning signs that something was coming.

A few days after moving in and straightening furniture and emptying boxes, my wife decided to take her first bath to relax after the stress of moving. She began filling the tub. I was downstairs in the kitchen when I noticed water coming out of the ceiling.

"Honey," I called up to her. "I think we have a water leak." That was a brilliant statement. We did have a water leak. We cleaned up the mess and called the plumber. It was a faulty overflow valve.

Months later, we noticed water leaking through the ceiling of the master bathroom upstairs.

We called the home warranty people this time. They sent out workers who said the drip pan for the air conditioner was leaking. They replaced that and a part called a coil.

They left and more water leaked in.

They had apparently installed the drip pan lower than the drain.

One day we noticed brown spots on the ceiling of the downstairs bathroom. The shower pan in the guest bedroom upstairs was leaking. We had that repaired.

Then, several weeks ago, water was coming through the bedroom ceiling again. The warranty people sent out a heating and air conditioning guy. He said the coil had melted the drip pan. I have no idea how that could have happened. In fact, I have limited knowledge of heaters and air conditioners.

Dennis Spies
Editor

But this man said his company was small and he could not repair it. Another heating and air conditioner guy was dispatched. He said the bad coil was the wrong part for the unit, and that is probably why it malfunctioned. He also said the heater had a crack in it and would need to be replaced.

He was too busy to repair it so another heating and air conditioner guy was dispatched. This one said it was going to be a big job and he didn't know if he could do it or not.

Then the warranty service contacted the company that installed the coil. They showed up and shook their heads. They, too, had no idea how that could have happened.

At this point it has been two weeks since the initial call was made. So we are stuck without air conditioning and a gaping 4-foot hole in the ceiling.

The pitch from the home warranty service was that if something was not working, they would replace it.

After talking to the heating and air conditioning people, we find out that the warranty service is notorious for not paying to have a job done. One of the workers said the job would probably take three days, and the warranty service would not pay that much. In fact, they increase their profits by lowballing their clients.

That scenario did not happen. Friday afternoon we got word that they would replace the entire system at no cost to us. They start Monday.

One thing is for sure. I am not sure that this is the last of the water leaks in our place. It is like a self-perpetuating curse.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 10, the 161st day of 2007. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago, on June 10, 1907, 11 men in five cars set out from the French embassy in Beijing on a race to Paris. (Prince Scipione Borghese of Italy was the first to arrive in the French capital two months later.)

On this date:

In 1865, the Richard Wagner opera "Tristan und Isolde" premiered in Munich, Germany.

In 1935, Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in Akron, Ohio.

In 1940, Italy declared war on France and Britain; Canada declared war on Italy.

In 1942, the Gestapo massacred 173 male residents of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, in retaliation for the killing of a Nazi official.

In 1964, the Senate voted to limit further debate on a proposed civil rights bill, shutting off a filibuster by Southern states.

In 1967, the Middle East War ended as Israel and Syria agreed to observe a United Nations-mediated cease-fire.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., escaped from Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee with six others; he was recaptured June 13.

Our readers write

Judgment coming sooner for some ...

As I write, the body of darling Alejandra Ramirez, who I never met, is to be laid to rest. My heart aches with the family. It must be so much harder knowing that bits and pieces of the body were gathered off the pavement, after a speeding driver with previous DUI records had strewn them. Oh, if the poor man had listened to good advice.

I gave an audible "thank you" to Jesus that I never in my life voted for legalized alcoholic beverages. I also gave thanks to Jesus that I never set an example of drinking alcoholic beverages. Does anyone want to ask God and the public forgiveness for voting wrong and setting a wrong example? Does any peace officer, judge or grand jury want to get forgiveness from God and this bereaved family for leniency toward people with the multiple DUI offenses?

Why not bring some people to trial for leniency that allows freedom to a repeat unlawful act that causes damage and death of a person?

As much as I would like the war to be over, I am constantly reminded that drunken drivers are killing more people than war is. Ask Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

I wish the politicians would include a battle to stop the senseless deaths caused by alcohol.

Otherwise, how can I believe that they care for the lives of people?

Sport: He's not a hitter, he's a baby-sitter

"Let's go, he can't hit, he can't hit."
"Stop the game! How dare you suggest that the batter, an innocent 12-year-old kid who only wants to make contact with the ball, cannot hit! Have you considered how your ridicule will harm his self-esteem? As the umpire of this game, I forbid you to utter such taunts again. Play ball!"
"We want a pitcher, not a belly itcher!"

"Stop the game! I see the other team is just as offensive. How dare you suggest the pitcher lacks the skill to throw the ball over the plate. Perhaps, through no fault of his own, he has an affliction that causes his skin to itch. I don't want to hear that again.

Play ball!"
"Swing battah, swing battah, swing!"
"Stop the game! How dare you make the batter swing before he is good and ready.

Do you have any idea how hard it is to hit a little white ball with a bat? How dare you try to embarrass him while his family watches. I better not hear such words again. Play ball!"

"We want a pitcher, not a glass of water!"
"Stop! A glass of water! You're suggesting the pitcher is weak and unstable like some clear fluid? Do you have any idea how hard it is to throw a ball over the plate knowing the batter might hit a home run? How would that make you feel? No more water comments. Now play ball!"

"He's not a batter, he's a broken ladder!"
"Stop the game!"

Broken ladder! You're suggesting the batter is skinny and gangly the way a ladder is? What's worse, he's like a broken ladder? The next kid who makes a ladder comment will be ejected from this game. Play ball!"
"He's not a pitcher, he's an underwear stitcher!"

"Stop! An underwear stitcher! Has it occurred to you that the pitcher may be from a poor family? Maybe he has only one or two pairs of underwear that his mother has to repair. How dare you make fun of someone who has so much less than you. Now play ball!"

"He's not a hitter, he's a baby sitter!"
"Stop! Baby sitter! What is that supposed to mean? That a boy can't be sensitive and caring and still hit a baseball? Or that if he is sensitive and nurtures a child then he can't hit at all? How dare you. Now play ball!"

"Whoop de do, you throw like my sister Sue!"

The Idle American: A bull by any other name ...

Mason Lowery, a 16-year-old taking the leap into the FFA world (Future Farmers of America) at Wichita Falls' Rider High School, is quite a "name-dropper."

Don't misunderstand. Relatives are staking him to a claim in their herd of registered Polled Herefords.

Mason plans to show one of them, and the kinfolks have asked him to name all of them, suggesting a theme of country/western singers. ...

The young man has dropped appropriate names on five of the six bovines, but Momma Cow, the first animal purchased, remains just that: Momma Cow. She was heavy with calf, and another trotting alongside was dubbed "Dolly" (Parton). The family soon acquired three other cows. Their names are Reba (McEntire), Patsy (Cline) and June (Carter Cash).

Recently, Momma Cow birthed a male calf. Mason's folks thought he'd likely name him "Johnny"—or perhaps "Cash." Not so. The newest addition to the herd is a bull named "Sue."

Sue isn't a probable name for a bull, and "Bull" isn't a likely moniker for a distinguished educator. But that's what Dr. Joe B. Rushing, founding CEO of Tarrant County College, called himself back in the 1970's, when CB radios were big. His CB handle was "Dr. Bull."

A few years later, when son Scott became a veterinarian, he was "Bull Doctor" on the CB channels. ...

Show me a man with his head held high, and I'll show you one unaccustomed to his tri-focals. Respected for 60-plus years, I wear mine during all waking moments. My wife wears hers most of the time, and guesses her way along when she's without visual aids. The bill-payer at our house, she asked me to mail a stack of bills.

Luckily, I glanced at them first. Each envelope had $2.39 postage affixed! There were 39-cent stamps on each, along with two $1 stamps. She confessed that the stamps were selected before she put on her glasses, and that she THOUGHT the two add-ons were penny stamps. I camped out at the post office that morning, carefully peeling off two-dozen dollar stamps.

The fascination with being "hot" also has made its way into the workplace, where confidence is often conveyed in the way one looks and dresses.

"I would say that, in the world of Washington, D.C., power brokers, it's important to be sexy, but in a more sophisticated, muted way," says Charles Small, a 25-year-old young professional who works in the nation's capital. That's in contrast, he says, to cities such as Los Angeles and Miami, "where overt sexiness is more the status quo."

Some employers have responded by setting tougher dress codes. Many school administrators have done the same.

"As a high school teacher, I see 14-year-old girls dressing in a way that makes me shake my head. Where do they get that?" asks Dennis Brown, an educator and parent in Huntley, Ill., outside Chicago.

Recently, he says his own 5-year-old daughter proclaimed, "Daddy, I look fat."

"And I thought, 'Oh my gosh, here we go,'" he says. "Now I have to start deconstructing that mind-set."

It's a big topic of discussion among researchers. A 2007 report from the American Psychological Association compiled the findings of myriad studies, showing that the sexualization of young women and girls, in particular, can hurt them in many ways. Problems can include anything from low self-esteem and eating disorders to depression and anxiety.

Simon, the California therapist, has seen those symptoms in several of his young female patients.

While boys tend to seek out porn for their own sexual pleasure, he sees a sexual disconnect with girls who exhibit provocative behavior they're not ready for.

"It doesn't have anything to do with their sexual pleasure," says Simon. "It has to do with pleasing somebody else — the grasping for attention."

"As a parent, it makes me want to cry." And while they tell him they feel empowered he says they end up getting pegged as "sluts."

Julie Albright, a sociologist at the University of Southern California, has noted that dynamic in her research. She's working on a book about "players," men who juggle more than one sex partner and earn a title of esteem for behavior that much of society still frowns upon for women.

"If you 'act like a man,' in that sense, you're trying to grab hold of that same kind of power, that same kind of lifestyle — and claim male privilege," Albright says.

"The problem is, you're still female and it's still a man's world."

Anna Stanley, a 25-year-old in Madison, Wis., knows all about that double standard. She also wonders if she and her peers place too much importance on the power of sexiness. "It seems like it stems out of the 'Girl Power' thing of the '90s gone awry — men objectify us, so let's objectify ourselves and get something out of it. It's not really progress," she says. "But it's something I have mixed feelings about — because sometimes I do it, too."

"Sometimes you do dress up to get noticed and attention, and you do feel more confident when you do that."

She wishes there was more focus on helping women develop a healthy sense of their own sexuality.

Missy Suicide — founder of the "Suicide Girls" pinup Web site — couldn't agree more.

"I think that women shouldn't be afraid of their sexuality. It's a part of who we are. You shouldn't be embarrassed and ashamed of your body and yourself," says the 29-year-old entrepreneur, who lives in Los Angeles. But, she says, it shouldn't be the sole focus.

She and the women on her site are known for challenging the stereotypes of beauty, with their tattoos and piercings and varying body types.

"I get messages from girls all the time saying they never felt beautiful before because they never saw girls like themselves in magazines or on TV. Then they saw a girl like them on 'Suicide Girls,'" she says of the site, an online community that attracts a worldwide audience of both admirers and women who want to become nude pinups.

Victoria Sinclair, the lead anchor on "Naked News," also sees herself as a role model. She left a job in the corporate world to join the show as lead anchor in 1999.

"Sometimes, there are moments when I think, 'Oh my goodness what am I doing?'" says Sinclair, who recently turned 40. "But I'm really OK with it."

She says it works for her because she has control over what she does on the show and has been allowed to age gracefully, without plastic surgery.

"To be sure, it can make you feel powerful to know that you are arousing strong feelings in other people, that you have their attention and admiration," says Eileen Zurbriggen, a psychologist at the University of California, Santa Cruz, who helped compile the APA report.

"This is the same sense of power experienced by charismatic rock stars and politicians. But politicians also wield other kinds of power. They can make actual changes to the legal, economic, and geopolitical landscapes — changes that have far-ranging impacts."

"Women," she says, "might be better off developing other sources of power."

DISCOVERY

Archaeologists find slave passageway at historic house

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Archaeologists unearthing the remains of George Washington's presidential home have discovered a hidden passageway used by his nine slaves, raising questions about whether the ruins should be incorporated into a new exhibit at the site.

The underground passageway is just steps from the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall. It was designed so Washington's guests would not see slaves as they slipped in and out of the main house.

"As you enter the heaven of liberty, you literally have to cross the hell of slavery," said Michael Coard, a Philadelphia attorney who leads a group that worked to have slavery recognized at the site. "That's the contrast, that's the contradiction, that's the hypocrisy. But that's also the truth."

Washington lived and conducted presidential business at the house in the 1790s, when Philadelphia was the nation's capital.

The findings have created a quandary for National Park Service and city officials planning an exhibit at the house. They are now trying to decide whether to incorporate the remains into the exhibit or go forward with plans to fill in the ruins and build an abstract display about life in the house.

Making that decision will push back the building of the exhibit, which had been slated to open in 2009. But the oversight committee won't rush into construction, said Joyce Wilkerson, the mayor's chief of staff.

"We never thought we'd be faced with this kind of decision," she said. "We would've been happy to have found a pipe! And so we don't want to proceed blindly or say, 'This isn't in the plan.'"

Rep. Bob Brady, D-Pa., was so moved when he visited the site last week that he declared: "We need to rethink what we're doing here."

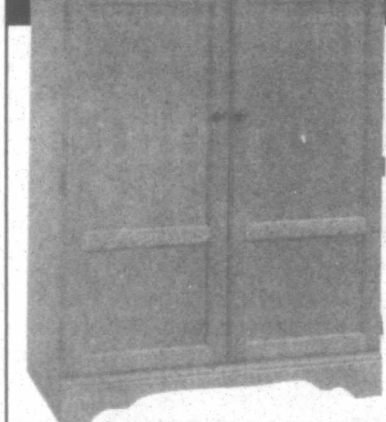

"It's astounding, absolutely astounding," Brady said. "I'm going to fight to keep it open, I'll tell you that much."

Aside from the passageway, archaeologists have uncovered remnants of a bow window, an architectural precursor to the White House's Oval Office, and a large basement that was never noted in historic records.

"We actually found a lot more of the remains of the President's House than anyone expected. Myself included," said Jed Levin, an archaeologist with the National Park Service.

Thousands of visitors have been drawn to the ruins, standing on a small wooden platform to gaze down at the house's brick and stone foundation.

Since God is going to require people to give an account of every idle word that they speak, (Matt. 12:36) I believe He will require people to give an account for what they vote for. I have wished for years that our peace officers and judges were required to abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages.

Let's consider the effects of alcohol on a driver. Then consider that same effect on the brain of lawmakers in the county, state and nation.

There's been much discussion about placing cameras at intersections to identify red-light runners. Legislators authorized this practice just before the session ended.

In Lubbock, city council members talked about how the cameras would add funds to the city coffers.

Then, a radio station distributed this bumper sticker: "Support your City Council. Run a Red Light."

The good must stand up against 'the bad'

I decided before I pass on, I would like to pass out a memory from World War II about a questioning from a well-dressed English speaking German senior to me and fellow soldiers in a town south of Berlin on the Elbe river when Germany surrendered.

He asked why the United States fought on the side of the Soviet Union. He said defeating Russia would have been the only way communism could have been stopped from taking over the world and that now all was lost. He said Hitler did have a good idea and that was to make a United States of Europe, just like ours.

"They say traditional chatter is useful. Baseball teaches children lessons about life — teaches them about competition, success, failure and adversity. They say that in the real world, some people will root against you — that chatter exposes kids to this concept in a harmless way.

"They say that the ban has little to do with kids anyway. The kids can handle

His next question I never heard before or since. He asked why our president acted like it was a surprise when Japan attacked Pearl Harbor. He said he had been living in the Philippines for several years and left to return to his native Germany about two weeks before Japan's attack and left because he knew what was about to happen and most people in the Philippines knew it and even about when it might happen.

What the German said about communism came close to reality in following years and had it not been for JFK's action during the Cuban missile crisis and Reagan's "evil empire" pronouncement and "Tear down that wall," it could have been closer.

Boys Ranch to feature Father's Day event

AMARILLO — For five years the Annual Youth Cowboy Poetry and Music Gathering on Cal Farley's Boys Ranch campus has given thousands of students and adults the opportunity to learn about Western folklore, cowboy values and the history and culture of the Old West.

This year's event will kick-off at the Globe News Center for the Performing Arts Friday, June 15 and continue Saturday, June 16 at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch.

"We hope that bringing part of the event to Amarillo will allow us to share what has become a quality, signature event with more people," said Dan Adams, president and CEO of Cal Farley's.

Friday's headliner event and all Boys Ranch campus activities on Saturday are open to the public.

"It's absolutely phenomenal," said entertainer Red Steagall about the event. "It is a very unique gathering, and it has a great feeling. I'm proud to be a part of it."

Steagall will be joined by Dan Roberts, Chris Isaacs, The Boys Ranch Cowboy Poetry Team, Dave Stamey, The Gillette Brothers and Jean Prescott Friday evening.

• Friday headliners: Steagall was named the Official Cowboy Poet of Texas by the Texas State Legislature in 1991 and was recently inducted into the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum's Hall of Great Westerners.

Roberts is a singer/songwriter with three Grammy nominations under his belt. He co-wrote Garth Brooks' #1 Billboard hit "The Beaches of Cheyenne."

The Gillette Bros., Guy and Pipp, are ranchers and musicians. They have operated the family ranch since 1983 and have recorded and released five albums. They run the Camp Street Cafe and Store, a live music venue, in Crockett, Texas.

Stamey, a California cowboy, has been named Western Music Association's Entertainer of the Year, Male Performer of the Year and Songwriter of the Year, and was selected as Male Vocalist of the Year by the Academy of Western Artists.

Prescott has numerous CDs to her credit. She and singer/songwriter husband, Gary Prescott, make their home on a small ranch south of Abilene. She has been featured at the International Western Music Festival, the World Championship Ranch Rodeo Finals, the National Cowgirl Museum and Hall of Fame, and more.

Isaacs has earned many awards as a cowboy poet including the Academy of Western Artists Will Rogers' Award and the Western Heritage Award.

The Saturday gathering will include free youth seminars on everything from chuck wagon cooking to cowboy cartooning as well as activities for every age group including a western arts and trade show on Saturday at the Boys Ranch campus.

Tickets are available at area United Supermarkets and other Panhandle Ticket outlets, or by calling (806) 378-3096. For a full schedule of events, log onto www.youthcowboypoetry.org on the World Wide Web.

Early 1900s advertising images now valuable collection

CANYON— With the expansion of the railroads, the West became an increasingly appealing destination for travelers who were intrigued by paintings of a landscape and culture both exotic and quintessentially American as seen in Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway (ATSF) advertisements.

Selections from this art collection arrive at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum's Foran Gallery on June 23 in an exhibit called Training the World to Travel West: Paintings of the Southwest from the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Collection.

At the turn of the 20th century the ATSF, now known as the Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway (BNSF), initiated an innovative art program intended to establish a distinctive corporate identity and promote tourism in a grand advertising campaign. Recognizing the unique appeal of the desert Southwest, ATSF hired artists to paint images of picturesque scenes along its routes.

Between 1903 and 1933, the ATSF acquired over 600 paintings either by trade or direct purchase. While the railway purchased many paintings with cash, it frequently took artwork in exchange for train tickets, meals, and accommodations. By purchasing paintings outright, the Railway could prevent any problems with reproduction rights and give the greatest degree of flexibility in its advertising.

The ATSF Railway promoted its Southwestern routes through reproductions of paintings in books and travel brochures, and on calendars, posters, menus and postcards. Many of these items were used to decorate the walls of train depots and ticket offices, as were the original works themselves.

Training the World to Travel West focuses on categories that emerged naturally from the breadth of the collection — scenes of the Grand Canyon, the most prominent and celebrated landmark on the Railway; the land and culture of the pueblo Indians of the Southwest; and the work of women artists.

Randall ousted by top-ranked Moody at state semifinals

ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — Corpus Christi's Moody scored five runs in the first inning and starter Marc Gomez struck out 11 in a complete game to lead the Trojans to a 5-2 victory over Canyon Randall in the Class 4A Texas state semifinals Friday at Dell Diamond.
Moody (38-3), the top-ranked team in the state, will play Mesquite Poteet (34-4) on Saturday in the championship. The Pirates were 6-3 winners over Texas City in the other 4A semifinal.

Raiders starter Brandon Foster (9-5) was pulled in the first without retiring a batter. He gave up two walks and two singles to the four batters he faced before Brad Propst relieved him.
Moody, which lost to Katy in last season's state semifinals, batted around in the inning and got RBI singles from Josiah Rodriguez and Rudy Flores. Moody also scored on a pass ball, a sacrifice fly from Ronnie Flores and an error from Randall third baseman Nathan Pimie.

And John Daly?
At least his fans keep cheering even when his personal life is more thrilling than his game.
Scott shot a 4-under 66 that gave him a one-stroke clubhouse lead when darkness suspended the second round of the Stanford St. Jude Championship on Friday night, a bogey-free performance overshadowed by Daly telling police his wife woke him up by attacking him with a steak knife.
Buckle was among 26 players set to return Saturday morning to the TPC Southwind and finish the second round, and the rookie had a chance to catch the world's fourth-ranked golfer for the 54-hole lead. Scott was at 7 under and a 133 total, while Buckle was at 6 under with three holes left.

In an event featuring six of the top 12 golfers in the world, Buckle couldn't help looking at the scoreboard, which might have helped him block out the blisters from playing 36 holes Monday in new shoes.
"It's cool to look at it and see what they've got going on up there with all the vision, pretty cool, yeah, always in front of you. You see them, but you're not really worried about it," Buckle said.
Brian Gay, who waited out the delay after putting his second shot on the green at No. 18, holed out from 45 feet for birdie and a 66 that left him a stroke back at 6 under. Fredrik Jacobson, who shared the first-round lead with Scott, was 3 under after a 70.

Two-time Memphis winner David Toms (68) was 2 under along with Duffy Waldorf (69), Brian Davis (68), Scott Verplank (69), Woody Austin (66). Jose Maria Olazabal and Brandt Snedeker also were 2 under. Olazabal had a hole to play, and Snedeker had two to finish.
The suspension resulted after a three-hour delay for thunderstorms and is why the third round was scheduled to tee off with threesomes going off both the first and 10th tees.
Daly's personal problems surfaced just before the delay as people noticed red marks on both cheeks, almost as if he had been clawed, as he prepared to tee off on No. 1. The horn sounded, and he released a statement that Sherrie Daly attacked him Friday morning and was letting police investigate.

She wasn't around when deputies arrived after 6 a.m., so Daly was left to file charges if he wanted her arrested. A department spokesman said charges had not been filed as of late Friday afternoon.
Daly, playing on a sponsor's exemption, had two bodyguards with him as he shot a 74 that left him at 4 over and likely playing this weekend. He had fans cheering him as he had two double bogeys, five bogeys and five birdies.
Scott's round was impressive considering that 13 of the 75 with morning tee times broke par in wind that was why only seven players broke par Thursday. He had two holes left when play was suspended, and the rain softened the greens.

The Aussie, who has three of his victories when leading after 36 holes, had two birdies on each side thanks to his putter. He holed out from nearly 14 feet on No. 13 and sunk a 40-footer on No. 7 to drop to 7 under with the weather moving in.
"I was playing quite nicely at the time. It's never ideal, but it's something you have to get used to because we seem to do it a lot on tour. And you just have to learn to relax and take it for what it is and try to come out with a fresh mind," Scott said.

Belmont looks compelling with a filly taking on the boys

NEW YORK (AP) — There's no Triple Crown on the line and the Kentucky Derby winner isn't running, yet there's still a compelling story line for Saturday's Belmont Stakes — a filly is in the field.
Rags to Riches takes on Preakness winner Curlin and the rest of the boys in her attempt to become the third filly to win the final jewel of the Triple Crown.
Curlin may be the betting favorite, but Rags to Riches will surely be the sentimental choice among many at Belmont Park.
"I'm very curious to see how she stacks up against what I think is a group of excellent 3-year-olds," Curlin's trainer Steve Asmussen said.
Rags to Riches, who ran her winning streak to four in a row by taking the Kentucky Oaks by 4 1/4 lengths five weeks ago, jazzes up a Belmont that will be without Derby winner Street Sense. Trainer Carl Nafzger declared his colt out of the race after his Triple Crown bid ended in the Preakness.

"It's a talented field, all the right horses are here except for Street Sense," said Hall of Fame trainer Nick Zito, who will send out long shot C P West, fourth in the Preakness.
"We're giving it a shot."
At 1 1/2 miles, the Belmont is the longest and most grueling of the Triple Crown races, but of course, most of the trainers believe their horses fit the course.
Todd Pletcher, who trains Rags to Riches, may have the strongest case. His filly is a daughter of 1992 Belmont winner A.P. Indy and a half sister to last year's Belmont winner, Jazil. And with her powerful running style, it all added up to taking a shot at history.

"At the end of the day, we're in this business to try and do something special on Saturday," said Pletcher, who is 0-for-28 in Triple Crown races. "This hasn't been done in modern times."
Ruthless won the inaugural Belmont in 1867 and Tanya was the other winner, in 1905. Winning Colors, who won the Derby in 1988, was the last filly to win a Triple Crown race.
"I do think going a mile and a half is an advantage for her, and she's also fresh," said jockey John Velazquez, who will be aboard the filly for the first time.
The way Curlin came back from his Derby loss to edge Street Sense by a head in the Preakness, though, the imposing chestnut colt may be too good for all six of his rivals.

Pettersen again escapes the heat

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md. (AP) — Suzann Pettersen felt fortunate to escape the heat at a major, and it wasn't the first time.
Ten weeks ago, the feisty Norwegian looked like a shoo-in to win the Kraft Nabisco Championship when she built a four-shot lead along the back nine until a collapse as severe as in any major. She went bogey-double bogey-bogey, finished one shot behind Morgan Pressel and left the California desert in tears. A month later, she captured her first LPGA Tour victory.
The heat was more literal Friday at the LPGA Championship, and Pettersen managed to catch a break.
She teed off early at Bulle Rock, before temperatures soared into the 90s, and a torrid finish with three straight birdies over the final four holes sent her to a 5-under 67 and a one-shot lead over Karrie Webb.
"I forgot about that a long time ago," Pettersen said of her major meltdown. "Kraft was well evaluated. For me, it was more like what can I do differently? 'I didn't look at it as a collapse. I looked at it as what I can do different, so I do stronger when I get to the next tournament and I'm in the same situation."
Wie was in an entirely different situation from last week.
She withdrew after 16 holes at the Ginn Tribute, a decision that brought enormous criticism because of speculation that she was trying to skirt the LPGA's infamous "Rule 88" that bans non-tour members for one year if they fail to break 88. It didn't help that she cited sore wrists, yet was hitting balls at Bulle Rock two days later.

This time, Wie was desperate to keep playing.
She shot a 2-over 74 by again playing cautiously at Bulle Rock, fighting hard with back-to-back birdies down the stretch only to lose a shot at the end with a wayward tee shot into the rough. That put her at 3-over 147, and it looked as though she would miss the cut for the first time on the LPGA Tour since she was 13.
Karen Davies came to the rescue.
Playing in the last group, Davies took bogey on the final hole that allowed Wie and 13 others to make the cut on the number.
"This is 5,000 times better than last week," Wie said, and that was before she realized she still had two rounds left on Bulle Rock.
Pettersen was at 8-under 136, but faced a strong challenge from a host of major champions behind her.
Webb was on the verge of winning the McDonald's LPGA Championship last year until she was beaten in a playoff by Se Ri Pak, whose hybrid 4-iron stopped inches from the cup on the first extra hole. She is hitting the ball so well that she was slightly perturbed at only shooting a 69, after giving herself so many chances.
Another shot behind was former U.S. Women's Open champion Birdie Kim (71) and big-hitting Brittany Lincicome, who shot 69 and summed up the effect of a searing sun and no cloud cover.

good opportunity because Tejada pitched six solid innings.
Sosa did not homer for the 14th straight game in his pursuit to become the fifth player ever to hit 600. But he did break out of a 7-of-49 slump since hitting his last homer — his 598th — on May 22.
Sosa's bloop RBI double just inside the right-field line gave Texas a 6-1 lead in the fourth. He also had an infield single in the first and a hard-hit single in the eighth.
Ian Kinsler homered to lead off the fourth, and Mark Teixeira drove in three runs for the Rangers — who had dropped 12 of their last 15 coming into the game.

Stakes high Federer, Nadal face off for French title

PARIS (AP) — The French Open men's final is such a tossup that the participants disagree about who's the favorite.
Roger Federer?
"Unbelievable player," Rafael Nadal said. "For that reason, he is the favorite."
Or maybe it's Nadal.
"He has already won the title twice," Federer said. "So I'd say he is a favorite."
They'll have to settle the matter on the court. And given the stakes, the final will be the match of the year.
On Sunday, the top-ranked Federer will bid for the only Grand Slam championship to elude him. The second-ranked Nadal will try to become the second man since 1914 to win the tournament three times in a row, and the first since Bjorn Borg in 1978-81.
"I'm going to play against the best player in tennis history," Nadal said. "I think it's going to be a very beautiful match."

On that point, Federer agreed.
"It's going to be a wonderful, wonderful match," he said.
Playing for the women's title Saturday were three-time champion Justine Henin and 19-year-old Serb Ana Ivanovic, a first-time Grand Slam finalist. Henin sought to become the first player since Monica Seles in 1990-92 to win three consecutive French Open titles.
Federer is bidding for his fourth consecutive Grand Slam title, something last accomplished by Rod Laver in 1969.
"Honestly, I don't want to think about it too much," Federer said. "I've never achieved such a thing, so I don't know how I'll feel. But I want to do my best, keep focused on this match, and win Roland Garros."

"And that would open the door to the Grand Slam — four titles in one year."
Federer seeks his 11th major title, which would tie Laver and Borg for third on the career list. He can become the sixth man to win all four Grand Slam events, joining Fred Perry, Don Budge, Laver, Roy Emerson and Andre Agassi.
"He has more pressure at the moment than me, because what's at stake for him is probably more difficult than just winning a final," Nadal said. "What he's aiming at is winning a Grand Slam."
Whether Federer was already feeling the pressure or merely enduring a bad day, he looked lackluster in the semifinals but overcame a deficit in every set and beat Nikolay Davydenko 7-5, 7-6 (5), 7-6 (7). By reaching his eighth Grand Slam final in a row, Federer broke a record originally set by Jack Crawford in 1933-34.

Afterward, he hardly sounded nervous.
"It's a great feeling being in these big matches over and over," he said. "I love it."
Nadal advanced by beating Novak Djokovic 7-5, 6-4, 6-2. It was the Spaniard's sixth consecutive win in straight sets.
"He's the best player in the world on this surface," Djokovic said. "He's physically stronger than any other player on the tour."
Nadal improved to 20-0 at Roland Garros and 33-0 in best-of-five-set matches on clay, and he became the first man to reach three consecutive French finals since Jim Courier in 1991-93.

Tejada's pitches lead Rangers over Brewers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Even as Sammy Sosa approaches a historic milestone, he wanted to talk more about the pitching performance of teammate Robinson Tejada.
Sosa was 3-for-5 with an RBI double that capped a four-run fourth inning and the Rangers held off the Milwaukee Brewers 9-6 Friday night.
Tejada pitched 6 2-3 innings despite battling a blister problem on his pitching hand.
Through six innings, Tejada had only allowed one run. He is the first Texas starter to last past the sixth inning since May 27.
"It was just a matter of time," Sosa said about the starting pitching. "We had a good opportunity because Tejada pitched six solid innings."

Sosa did not homer for the 14th straight game in his pursuit to become the fifth player ever to hit 600. But he did break out of a 7-of-49 slump since hitting his last homer — his 598th — on May 22.
Sosa's bloop RBI double just inside the right-field line gave Texas a 6-1 lead in the fourth. He also had an infield single in the first and a hard-hit single in the eighth.
Ian Kinsler homered to lead off the fourth, and Mark Teixeira drove in three runs for the Rangers — who had dropped 12 of their last 15 coming into the game.

after the sixth inning with a sore left quadriceps injury. He landed awkwardly on the first base bag running out a grounder.

"He was trying to beat it out and on the last step he strained his quad," Texas manager Ron Washington said. "We'll evaluate him (Saturday) and see where he stands."

Prince Fielder hit his National League leading 22nd home run in the second. Fielder now has seven home runs over the last 11 games.

Tejeda (5-6) entered the seventh inning with a 7-1 lead. But Corey Hart and Ryan Braun each homered to spark a five-run seventh that got Milwaukee within 7-6.

Braun's shot knocked Tejeda out of the game. Reliever C.J. Wilson struck out Fielder to end the threat.

"These kids don't quit," Milwaukee manager Ned Yost said. "They were down 7-1 and they just kept pecking away."

Akinori Otsuka pitched a perfect eighth, and Eric Gagne pitched a perfect ninth to earn his sixth save in six opportunities.

Milwaukee starter Chris Capuano (5-5) lost his fifth straight start after starting out 5-0. He gave up six runs and eight hits while walking four in four innings.

Since starting 24-10, Milwaukee has lost 17 of its past 26 games.

"It was like Jekyll and Hyde tonight," said Capuano, who has a 5.94 in his last five starts. "In the (third) inning I felt right on top of my stuff. In the next inning, I just didn't have good command."

Tejeda struck out seven and gave up six runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. He had been 0-3 in his last three starts.

Despite Tejeda pitching well enough to earn the victory, the Rangers starting rotation's ERA increased to 7.00 for the season — the worst mark in baseball.

Texas starting pitchers lasted just 9 1-3 innings over the past three games against Detroit.

"We needed somebody to go far in the game," Tejeda said. "That helps the other starters and also helps the bullpen."

After Fielder's homer in the second, the Rangers struck for the two in the bottom of the inning on Michael Young's bases-loaded walk and Teixeira's RBI single.

Kinsler led off the fourth with his 11th homer of the season — a 380-foot shot that hit the left field foul pole that gave the Rangers a 3-1 lead.

With two outs in the frame, Teixeira lined a two-run double and Sosa followed with an RBI double.

Hairston had a sacrifice fly for Texas in the fifth to increase Texas' lead to 7-1.

But the Brewers cut the deficit to 7-6 on Bill Hall's RBI groundout and two-run homers from Hart and Braun. Both Hart and Braun have four home runs this season.

Victor Diaz had an RBI single and the Rangers scored twice in the eighth inning to make it 9-6.

Texas CF Kenny Lofton left the game after seven innings with left knee irritation. His status is day-to-day. ... The last Texas pitcher to last at least six innings was Kameron Loe on May 27. ... Milwaukee has lost 17 of 14 games on the road. ... Diaz struck out four times. ... Young and Marlon Byrd had three hits each.

Wheldon's last exit at Texas was frustrating

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Dan Wheldon was irritated when he got out of his No. 10 car at Texas last June, even after leading 171 laps. That's because he finished third after a botched pit stop with 15 laps to go.

"It was definitely frustrating," Wheldon recalled. "This is a track that I really enjoy driving around. ... With the race I had last year, I was so excited to perhaps get a win here, and to lose it just through unfortunate circumstances was difficult to take."

A dropped wheel nut led to an 8 1/2-second pit stop — a full 2 seconds more than Helio Castroneves. And that cost Wheldon a chance to win. After the race ended, Wheldon was so disgusted that he jumped out of the cockpit and stalked alone straight to the garage.

It was the third-fastest race in IRL history. Wheldon behind Castroneves and Target Chip Ganassi Racing teammate Scott Dixon.

Wheldon has finished third in three of the last five Texas races. He gets another chance Saturday night in the Bombardier Learjet 550.

Texas Motor Speedway has long tabbed its June race as "America's Original Nighttime Indy Car Race." This time, it will truly be a night race.

The green flag won't drop until 8:30 p.m. local time.

In years past, the race has generally started between 7 and 7:30 p.m., meaning most of the race was run before the sun would set. It has started as early as 6:30 p.m.

Dr. J to LeBron: Just relax

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Dr. J has a little friendly advice for LBJ: Simplify and relax.

Hall of Famer Julius Erving said the 16 shots LeBron James took Thursday night in the first game of the NBA finals had a degree of difficulty of "an eight or a nine or a 10."

"You can be effective, but you're not going to play up to your potential unless you can simplify," Erving said.

The Spurs successfully contained James in Game 1, holding him to 14 points on 4-of-16 shooting in 44 minutes.

"Find the simplest route to what you need to execute," Erving advised, saying James should evaluate his primary defender, Bruce Bowen, to figure out ways to score. "I would let him guard me and bait him to get what I want when I want it and eliminate some of the difficulty."

Instead of trying to scoot around the quick Bowen, Erving suggested going for 15-foot jumpers.

"Make it a good shot rather than a hard shot," he said.

But Erving said James probably doesn't need the help.

"He's been very good at adapting and that's part of what his legacy's going to be about," Erving said. "He'll pick up on that, you'll probably see more of that the next game."

Erving, who won the NBA title in 1983 with the Philadelphia 76ers and won two American Basketball Association championships, said James, just 22 years old, needs to make the most of these finals, even if they are the first of many.

"You never make an assumption that you're going to get back," Erving said. "So I think he needs to be focused on being in it to win it."

James' hometown celebrates his storybook rise to fame

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — After the thunder and lightning subside, the children emerge from their homes on this humid Friday afternoon to ride bikes and dribble a worn-out basketball on the rain-soaked alley.

The forsaken street is one that most locals have probably never been down, yet from it LeBron James has risen to basketball's grandest stage.

While James' trip to the NBA finals with the Cavaliers has brought joy to the city of Cleveland, he's also given a jolt to his hometown just 40 minutes away.

Before "The Chosen One" rose to fame as a high school prodigy, Akron was known as a rust belt capital of the rubber manufacturing industry and home of the All-American Soap Box Derby.

Now, there's more to feel good about. "There's a sense of pride," says 64-year-old Wanda Reeves. "He's from the neighborhood. He knows everybody. He hasn't forgotten anybody."

Posters of James fill the front windows and living room of Reeves' mint green house on Overlook Place, a dead-end street that intersects with Hickory Street, where James lived with his mother Gloria as a toddler.

One winter, when the James house had no heat, Reeves took them in.

"He and his mother slept on the sofa for three to four months," she says. "I feel like he's my grandchild."

Reaves shows a Mother's Day card from James that sits framed in her living room. She proudly opens an album with photos of his last visit to her home a few years ago.

"He's just LeBron. He doesn't put on airs," she says.

A crooked mile away from Hickory Street at St. Vincent-St. Mary High School, James' retired No. 23 jersey hangs in the gymnasium along with three green and gold boys state basketball championship banners.

It was there where he redefined what it means to be a high school star, with games televised nationally. Across the street from the school, a "Good Luck LeBron" banner hangs on a building, placed there by his class of 2003.

Houston holding its own against Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — The Astros got along just fine after Lance Berkman and Phil Garner got booted from the game.

Hunter Pence made a highlight reel slide to score the go-ahead run and the Astros got some timely hitting in the late innings Friday night to beat the Chicago White Sox 5-2 in a meeting of two struggling teams who faced off in the 2005 World Series.

"We are 2-0 when I get ejected," Berkman said, trying to inject some humor.

Berkman, who is appealing a two-game suspension announced Friday by major league baseball for his outburst following an ejection earlier this week, was tossed again in the fourth inning for arguing a called third strike with home plate umpire Sam Holbrook. Berkman had to be stopped from going back to the plate by Carlos Lee as Garner argued. Moments later Garner was also ejected.

"I clearly wasn't talking to him. I was talking to Garner," Berkman said. "I didn't realize you could get thrown out of a game for talking to your manager, but apparently you can. ... I'm more baffled than I am upset."

Berkman had been ejected Tuesday night in the eighth inning of a game at Colorado after arguing a third strike. He then threw his glove and a bag onto the field from the dugout. He violated rules by returning in the ninth inning when the benches emptied after the Rockies' Manny Corpas hit Lee with a pitch.

"I've had two really quick ejections and both times I'm wondering what exactly it was that they took umbrage with. The only thing I can think of is that if you know you're wrong, you get really defensive. Maybe they didn't like the fact that attention was being brought to a questionable call," Berkman said.

Chris Sampson (6-5) allowed six hits in 6 2-3 innings for the victory Friday night. Both teams are far removed from the ones that met in the World Series 20 months ago. Houston's win was just its fifth in 21 games. The White Sox have lost 11 of 13 and are five games under .500 for the first time since July 17, 2003.

Before the game, Chicago manager Ozzie Guillen said it seems like 30 years have passed since the White Sox swept the Astros for the title.

After Friday's game, Guillen was flummoxed over his team's latest performance that had fans booing.

Parker glad to be in San Antonio frustrating the Cavs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Darting around the court — and the Cleveland Cavaliers — in Game 1 of the NBA finals, Tony Parker was nearly unstoppable.

He scored 27 points to help the San Antonio Spurs beat the Cavaliers, who spent Friday scheming ways to contain him.

But if the Spurs had gotten their way four years ago, Parker, perhaps, wouldn't even be here.

"That never happened, so I'm happy about that and I'm happy that Tony is playing," Tim Duncan said. "Let's just leave it at that."

The "that" — or who, to be more specific — Duncan was referring to is Jason Kidd. In the summer after the Spurs won their second NBA title, in 2003, the team was aggressively recruiting Kidd, who was and still is with the New Jersey Nets.

Had Kidd signed on, it's possible Parker wouldn't be three wins away from his third NBA title.

"It was just that summer of '03, and then after that I forgot about it," Parker said. "Then I was just focusing on me trying to improve and get better as a basketball player."

That's what he did, and now the 25-year-old Parker is emerging as the heir apparent to the Spurs' No. 1, Duncan.

"If you look for one person that's a steady impact throughout the finals, I'm looking for that second person to be Tony more so than anyone else," former Spurs star David Robinson said. "If there's anybody other than Tim that even has a chance to be an MVP of the finals, it would be Tony."

Teammate Michael Finley said Parker should be mentioned with the top point guards in the league — such as Kidd — and is always looking to know how he can improve.

"I always critique him after the good games, after the bad games just to let him know there's room for improvement," Finley said. "He could have done this a little bit better, he did this good, but he's always open for constructive criticism and I think that's what's going to help him in the long run."

Parker's quickness is a major element that sets him apart, along with his ability to drive the lane for acrobatic layups that he makes look all-too-easy.

"He gets shots right up to the rim," Duncan said. "They have arguments all the time about who's the best fastest in the NBA, and I don't know if he's the fastest, but he will get around just about anybody."

The point guard was drafted at age 19 by the Spurs in 2001 as the 28th overall pick. Before that, he played two seasons in the French A League.

"It's night and day," Duncan said. "I honestly didn't know what to expect with him coming in here. ... I had no idea he'd become the player he is right now."

Duncan said Parker went through "hell and back" in his development over the last few years. Parker doesn't deny he's been pushed hard, mostly by Spurs coach Gregg Popovich.

"It was a little bit like father and son," Parker said. "He was always hard on me. He always screams at me and always tried to push me because I'm a little bit like nonchalant sometimes in practice and a little bit lazy, so he's always like behind me."

On the court, though, Parker only makes tough shots look nonchalant. His quick drives to the basket and ability to change pace — when he looks like he's at top speed, he can turn it on and tear away even faster — require an athleticism that has stunned and impressed opponents.

"He's very good, he's very quick, and he knows where he wants to get on the court," the Cavs' LeBron James said. "It's very difficult, but basically we're going to have to challenge ourselves to keep him out of the paint."

If that's even possible. Is there a way to keep the speedy Parker out of the lane and away from the basket?

"Well, I mean, if there is, I hope nobody figures it out," Popovich said.

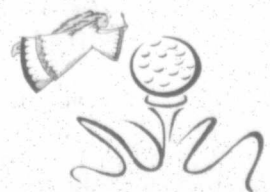

Cavs coach Mike Brown is already appealing to a higher power for help: "I'm going to pray a little bit. That's the first thing."

Study: Vitamin D lowers cancer risk in older women

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Building hope for one pill to prevent many cancers, vitamin D cut the risk of several types of cancer by 60 percent overall for older women in the most rigorous study yet.

The new research strengthens the case made by some specialists that vitamin D may be a powerful cancer preventive and most people should get more of it. Experts remain split, though, on how much to take.

"The findings ... are a breakthrough of great medical and public health importance," declared Cedric Garland, a prominent vitamin D researcher at the University of California-San Diego. "No other method to prevent cancer has been identified that has such a powerful impact."

While the most reliable yet, the study does have drawbacks. It was designed mainly to monitor how calcium and vitamin D improve bone health, and the number of cancer cases overall was small, showing up in just 50 patients.

"It's a very small study," said Dr. Edward Giovannucci, who researches nutrition and cancer at the Harvard School of Public Health. "I don't think it's the last word."

In either case, the study takes an important step in extending several decades of research that began with observations that cancer rates among similar groups of people were lower in southern latitudes than in northern ones. Scientists reasoned that had to do with more direct sunlight in southern regions.

The skin makes vitamin D when exposed to sunlight's ultraviolet rays. This study used that same form of the vitamin, known as D3 or cholecalciferol. Multivitamins usually carry a much weaker variant known as D2, but D3 is available in stand-alone dietary supplements.

Earlier research has shown that vitamin D helps regulate cell growth, a fundamental biological process that goes haywire in cancer. Most other supplements have tended to target specific types of disease in early testing, like selenium or vitamin E for prostate cancer.

This study, published

Friday in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, is the first time that researchers significantly boosted — and measured — blood levels of vitamin D and then followed identical groups of patients from start to finish.

That's why, despite its modest size, the research was generating excitement. Nearly all other work has compared disparate groups of patients.

The researchers at Creighton University in Omaha focused on 1,179 seemingly healthy women with an average age of 67. The women were divided into three groups: 446 got calcium and vitamin D3 supplements, a similar number got calcium alone, and 288 took dummy -pills.

The research team gave 1,000 daily international units of vitamin D, more than current guidelines calling for 200 to 600 units depending on a person's age.

The researchers intended to check mainly for the effects of calcium on bone health. Their interest in cancer risk was secondary.

But the lower cancer risk stood out. Only 13 women, or 3 percent, developed cancer over four years of calcium and vitamin D supplements.

With calcium alone, 17 women, or 4 percent, got cancer. With dummy pills, cancer appeared in 20 women, or 7 percent.

That shows a 60 percent lower cancer risk over four years in the group taking both supplements, compared to patients taking placebos. And when the first-year cancers were excluded — the ones mostly likely present before the study began — the findings were stronger still: a 77 percent lower risk for the combo group.

Local musicians keep spirit of Woody Guthrie alive at Friday jam sessions

Below, a clipping about Woody Guthrie sits on the counter where the legendary folksinger drew root beers for his drug store customers, now the Woody Guthrie Folk Music Center on Cuyler, as local musicians jam on a recent Friday night.

The door was open and the music floated out on the cool night air. There was lightning in the west, but the thunderstorms hadn't reached Pampa yet.

There was the smell of freshly popped popcorn, and June Thomas and Thelma Bray sat near the plate glass window while local musicians jammed at the back of the Woody Guthrie Folk Music Center on South Cuyler.

Ken Wilson, Robert Brewer, Herb Smith, Jerry Lister, Mike Leonard and Jimmy Flynn played and sang at the Friday night jam session June 1 in what was once Harris Drug. The drugstore, owned by Cigar Shorty Harris in the 1930s, was where Woody Guthrie found his first guitar and with the help of his Uncle Jeff Guthrie, a fiddle player, learned to play the guitar.

Guthrie noted at the time that Harris encouraged the music.

"It made for good business for Cigar Shorty to have the best fiddling and the worst guitar picker doing their loudest sawing and plinking in his place," Guthrie would later write.

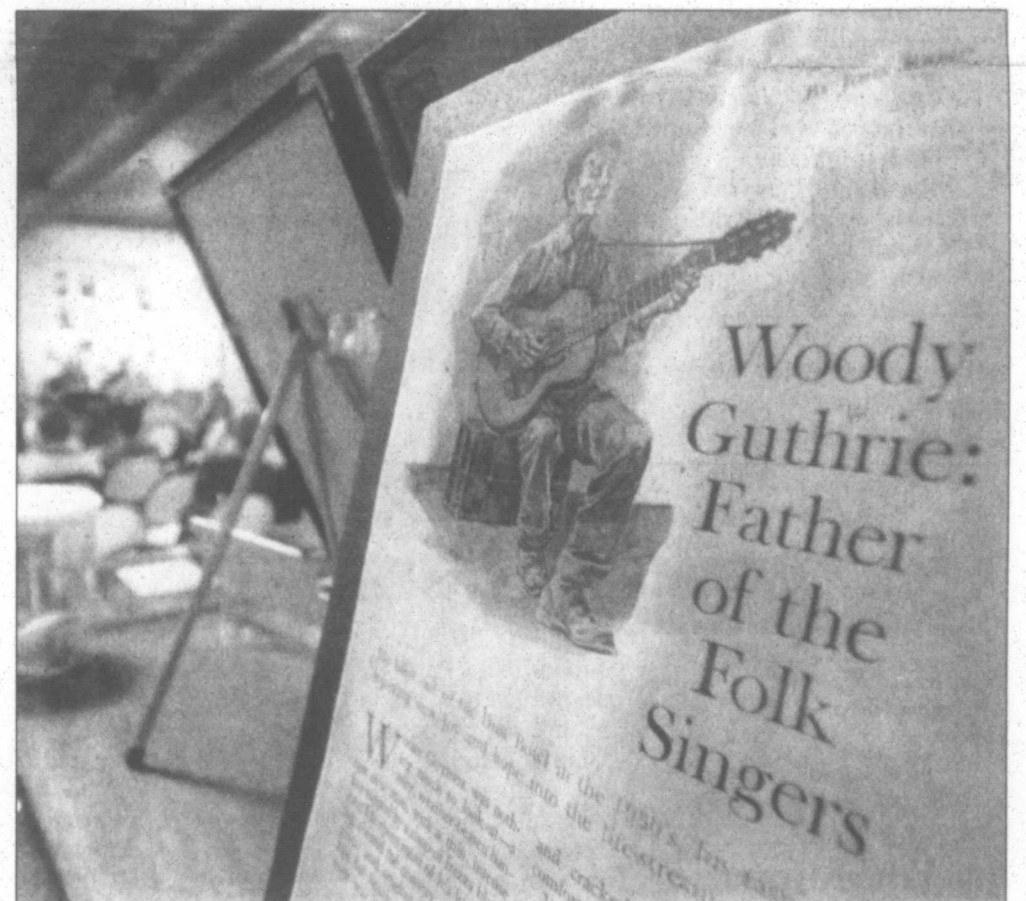

In a letter to Thelma Bray, Woody Guthrie's first wife, Mary Guthrie Boyle, a Pampa native, said that she was only in the drug store once or twice. It was a place for men.

Guthrie served root beer over the counter and jake-leg liquor under it.

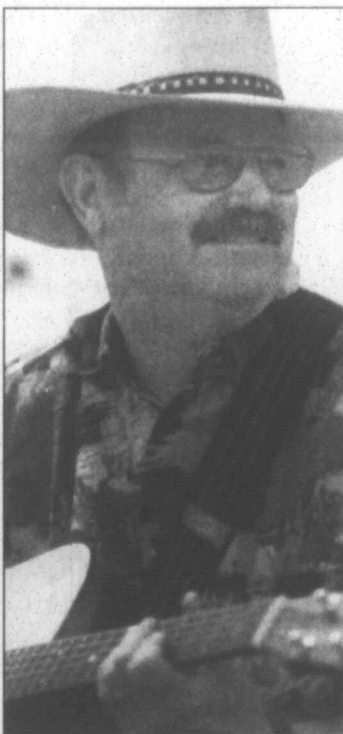

Music has returned to the building, even if the root beer and liquor haven't, and it isn't just a place for men anymore.

The center hosts jam sessions the first Friday night of each month. The music ranges from any one of a number of Guthrie's songs to Hank Williams to popular music from the 1950s and 1960s.

SUNDAY GARDENING with West Texas Landscape

During the Month of June flower beds and vegetable gardens are beginning to thrive. Apply plenty of water to keep your plants cool during the warming season. Try not to let water stand too long because this will cause mosquitos in your yard. An excellent way to avoid mosquitos and beautify your garden is to plant a few of these attractive plants in your bed.

- horsemint- has a similiar scent to citronella
- rosemary- used as a seasoning but is also a mosquito repellent
- marigolds- helps keep aphids & mosquitos away
- ageratum- contains coumarin and helps to repel mosquitos
- mosquito plant- member of the geranium family containing citronella
- catnip- a very powerful mosquito repellent, 10X the power of DEET

With these plants the leaves must be crushed to release their aroma. Rosemary and catnip may be rubbed on your skin or clothing. All these plants will help enhance your landscape and keep you mosquito free.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Sean," died suddenly last year. He was a wonderful husband and father in every way. I knew about Sean's cross-dressing from the beginning and accepted it unconditionally. Our 11-year-old son, "Brad," knows nothing about this part of his father's life. Sean and I discussed it many times, and it was his wish that Brad not be told until he was older. My concern is, I receive mail, credit card applications, personal letters, etc. addressed to "Serena." Only one member of Sean's family knows about Serena, although most of his friends do. I am unsure what to do if and when Brad asks questions, as we all know he will. There are also clothes to get rid of and other personal items of Serena's. I want to honor the memory of my husband and his other self without hurting his family or our son. It is hard sharing this information with banks, credit card companies, and other places where "her" name appears. I try to explain that Serena was Sean's alter-ego and that when he died, so did she, but I do not want to go into detail. How do I honor the man and woman I loved, and at the same time, protect our son? This is the only subject we never had a chance to talk about. -- ALONE WITH THE SECRET IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ALONE: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your husband. When dealing with credit card companies, banks, etc. it is not necessary to go into detail about who Serena was. It is none of their business. Simply state that your husband, Sean, is deceased, and mail in his name should be stopped. And also do the same for Serena. As to discussing your husband's other self with your son, my experts advise that the best time to let children know about the cross-dressing is when they are very young (3 or 4), and can accept it naturally as "the way things are." Eleven years old is too advanced an age for the subject to be introduced now. You would be better to wait until the boy has matured into his late teens or adulthood to discuss it with him. When you dispose of Serena's things, do it at a time when your son is away or out of the house. If there are special items you would like to hold onto as keepsakes, consider renting storage space or putting them in a location in your home to which your son does not have access. For support and information -- as needed -- you should visit the Tri-Ess Web site, www.tri-ess.org, as well as a chapter of Tri-Ess called Nu Lambda Pi. This is a family-oriented support group for heterosexual cross-dressers, their spouses, partners and family members. It can be accessed at www.geocities.com/nulambda-pi.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and I have been busy addressing her graduation announcements. We came across a problem we thought you might know the answer to. How do you address a formal announcement to a married couple where the woman is a physician and the man is not? "Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith" is obviously not right, but I'm not sure "Mr. and Dr. Joe Smith" is correct, either. Can you help? -- NEEDS TO KNOW FAST IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR NEEDS TO KNOW: The envelope should be addressed to Mr. Joe Smith and Dr. Helen Smith.

Teens who survived Katrina show resilience, look to future

By BECKY BOHRER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Rudy Williams shares her dream softly, as if saying it aloud will somehow jinx it.

One day, she says, she hopes to become a dentist. Just the prospect brings a smile to her face. First, she's got high school graduation this Friday, then college at Southern University at New Orleans.

Though she's only 18, she already knows how quickly plans can change.

Like that carefree senior year she always imagined that never came to pass. After Hurricane Katrina, Williams got a job to help ease the financial burden on her grandmother, with whom she lives. She doesn't have a car and hitches rides or takes a bus from eastern New Orleans to Joseph S. Clark High School near downtown, and to work at a suburban mall.

Williams said the storm "made me appreciate things more. ... It made me want not to take advantage of things or people, you know?"

That life lesson was driven home when she knocked at the home of a friend she'd lost contact with after Katrina.

"She was there," Williams says. "I just started crying."

Nearly one-third of fourth through 12th graders in the New Orleans region reported post-Katrina depression, loneliness and anger, according to a 2006 Louisiana State University Health Sciences Center study, which also found students shuffled to an average of two schools as their displaced families looked for places to settle.

And yet despite the hardships, some teenagers say Katrina brought out the best in them, giving them strength they never knew they had. In that sense, Williams says she can see Katrina as "a blessing."

Across the parish line, in St. Bernard, where empty houses and gray slabs dot neighborhoods where a close-knit, mostly blue-collar community once flourished, Alex Wendling will be a senior at Chalmette High School in the fall.

An estimated 26,000 of the parish's 67,000 residents have returned, but his family is not among them.

The Wendlings live about 75 miles away, in Prairieville, and over the last year 17-year-old Alex, who longed for a sense of his former home and normalcy, was one of several hundred students who commuted.

He says the nearly three-hour roundtrip has been worth it for the time he's gotten to spend with his friends, whom he regards as family. For a while, Wendling attended a school nearer the family's new home, as his brother has been doing, but since returning to Chalmette he's more outgoing and upbeat, says his father, Wendell Wendling.

"He interacts with his family more," said the elder Wendling, "as much as a teenager does."

Shannon Meyer's family is back in Chalmette, but their life is far different than it was before Katrina.

For about 18 months, they've lived in a small trailer in the backyard of the gutted home of her grandparents.

At night, 17-year-old Shannon sleeps in the bottom bunk of a bed where puzzles, games and other belongings are stashed. Her 5-year-old brother David sleeps on a couch beside the kitchen table; parents Pam and Keith Meyer get the bed near the trailer door.

The Meyers aren't sure when they will be able to rebuild their house; the family, like many in south Louisiana, has been waiting to hear if it will qualify for federal rebuilding aid.

They're trying to make the best of their situation and move ahead: Shannon looks forward to summer drama camp and says she has grown closer to David.

After losing almost everything she'd ever known, she says she can't help but feel lucky. The honors student also feels wiser.

"I don't plan anymore," she says. "I learned tomorrow may never come. I want to know, when I look back, that I had lived life to the fullest."

Pam Meyer just wants her daughter to enjoy what's left of her childhood: "I feel enough has been taken from her."

Although concerned the slow pace of recovery will cause more people to become discouraged, LSU psychologist Dr. Joy Osofsky says she's been struck by the resilience she's seen while studying children's response to Katrina.

And so it is that students like Williams and the other 27 graduating seniors in the class of 2007 at Joseph S. Clark High School are looking ahead.

Clark didn't have the cool labs or range of classes Williams took while attending school after first evacuating to Houston. And she never got the senior class trips she'd dreamed of because of her small class size and limited school funds.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, June 10, 2007.

Create exactly what you want this birthday year, and don't allow others to stop you in any way, shape or form. High energy teams up with dreams and gives you an edge that rarely you or anyone else has had. Make this year special. If you look within, you will know what you want. Create just that. If you are single, you have the opportunity to change your status. Yes, this year you could meet that special person. If you are attached, together as a team you will make many dreams happen. Start with a list and target the items one at a time. ARIES is strong-willed and can push you hard.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Relax with others' sudden change in humor. Whereas everything was wrong before, happiness seems to prevail now. Funnel your high energy into a project. Trust your impulsiveness. Act more like a kid. Tonight: Add to the moment. This Week: Use care with finances. You might even want to seek out others' advice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Everyone needs some time off from routine, day-to-day hassles. Design plans for you. Do what you have been putting off in order to be there for everyone else. Creativity flourishes with an older friend or relative. Tonight: Get your beauty sleep. This Week: Happiness surrounds the Bull who can turn situations around. Let go of rigidity, and you'll succeed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Aim for what you want. A male friend could be demanding, but do you really care? Get together with your friends, though understand you cannot put off an important talk much longer. A movie or an escape to an art show or concert will recharge your mind. Tonight: Do only what you want. This Week: Lie back until mid-

Wednesday. You are a force to be noticed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Others eye your reactions. Step up to the plate and assume responsibilities. A parent really might be a burden. A friend tries to pitch in. Don't let insecurity or financial tightness become an excuse. Find a way around a problem. Tonight: Get a head start on tomorrow. This Week: Aim for what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Step back and spend some time recharging. Simultaneously, you rethink a situation and feel better. Sometimes your emotional judgments interfere with relationships. Pull back if possible. Tonight: Break away from tradition. This Week: You are on top of your game. Let others know it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Work with individuals rather than groups. Your effectiveness will come out in this situation. How you see someone could change radically because of a quiet talk. If someone seems boisterous, let it go. Tonight: Be a duo. This Week: Reach out for more information. Stay on top of your time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Let others be dominant — you cannot stop them anyway. You find that a conversation, as difficult as it might be, is essential. Someone you often put on a pedestal adds that touch of magic. This person also relates well to others. Tonight: Let down your hair. This Week: Others run with the moment. Accept the role of follower.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You could be pushing yourself way too hard. If you have a need to withdraw, do so. Don't be surprised that in your present mood you have difficulty seeing a family member clearly. He or she weaves an interesting web of illusions. Tonight: Get a head start on tomorrow.

This Week: Get as much done as you can Monday and Tuesday. Distraction appears.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Understanding a child or loved one might be easiest if you just imagine you were this person. Identification breeds understanding. A loved one comes on strong and might be uncomfortable. Tonight: Don't worry about tomorrow. Live now. This Week: Focus your impulsiveness on work. Your creativity surges.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Get down to basics. Stop running. Stop thinking, and simply kick back and enjoy a family member to the max. Invite others over for a barbecue or some other get-together. At home and relaxed, you start smiling again. Tonight: Don't make anything difficult. This Week: Trust that if there is a problem, there is a solution. You will be the one to find it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You can make what you imagine a reality if you just relax. Sometimes you push way too hard and get nervous. Be focused, and when you do act, it will make quite a difference. Call a friend or relative. Reach out for others. Tonight: Dinner at a favorite place. This Week: Play it cool, and the end results will be dynamic.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You will try to mend a fence or make peace. Your actions might be slightly too radical for someone else, and this person lets you know it. Your instincts could be right if playing the lottery. Just don't go overboard. Tonight: Order in. This Week: Think before you speak, but do voice your opinions. Others will listen, though they might not change their minds.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 11, 2007.

Do not lose focus this year. You will be able to realize more of your dreams because of this strong sense of direction and desire to create more of what you want. Be sensitive to possibilities rather than the present realities. Think in terms of growth. Others will root you on, though curb a tendency to feel-challenged if someone disagrees. Welcome and encourage others to play devil's advocate. Holding up an idea to scrutiny can only produce a better plan. If you are single, you will meet new people, and a potential suitor, through a friend. This person could put a big smile on your face. If you are attached, your bond will become closer if you emphasize a key mutual goal and work on the friendship that exists between you. ARIES has your best interests in mind.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You are far more clear about what you want. If you are single, a possessive streak emerges. Strange but true, this trait will open doors because you are going to make that desire happen. Your personal reaction might surprise you. Tonight: Get your budget together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Extremes punctuate the next few days. If you are single, a new beginning becomes possible. Your ability to read between the lines causes many smiles. Know that you are the cat's meow. Tonight: Listen to what is being said.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★ Sometimes parking your energy and holding off on decisions is the best way to deal with a problem or insecurity. The information that heads in your direction could point to new beginnings. Is someone overly serious? Tonight: Happy day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Step up to the plate with the full expectation of hitting a home run. You will be amazed by what goes on around you. Others currently defer to your energy and power. You discover that another approach really works. Tonight: Aim for what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You step up to the plate and make a difference once more. Others might be taken back by what goes on. You might want to honor what is happening and discuss a hot issue. Investigate and ask important questions. Expect a full response. Tonight: Keep smiling.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Demonstrate your feelings through actions. You don't always have to verbalize them. Does this make you more comfortable? At times you might wonder what to do with a personal or difficult situation. Brainstorm, and ideas will come forward. Tonight: Fun and games.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Build better understanding. You will want to think through a decision more closely. Understand what makes you tick. Learn what makes others tick too. Greater compassion and effectiveness will result. Tonight: Togetherness is a great theme.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Listen rather than talk. Others clearly have a lot on their chest and need to clear the air. Recognizing what works in a conversation could be more important than you realize. Build a stronger bond through this process. Tonight: Go along with another's ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Your fiery ways torch others' imaginations. If all parties can remain open, what occurs might be a fabulous intellectual and/or fun discussion. Don't try to cauterize a situation or problem. Tonight: Think as if anything is possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Work from home or stay calm at work. Consider making your work environment more comfortable. You spend a lot of time at work attempting to be more effective and direct. Tonight: Relax.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Speak your mind and be ready to take the next step. Others might be surprised by your willingness to charge into new territory. A difficult associate or partner eases up. Call and initiate. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Expenses demand your attention. Can you restructure your budget and make it more workable? Take that challenge to heart. You will like the end results. Listen to a suggestion, knowing others might have different ideas. Tonight: Check out your budget.
