Perry's veto of funds hits Clarendon College hard

By DAVID BOWSER and KERRI SMITH
Staff Writers

Gov. Rick Perry's line item veto of $154 million for community colleges across the state may put Clarendon College out of business.

Dr. Steven Jones, president of Amarillo College, said this week that the cut in state funding will cost his institution $3.8 million over the next biennium, but he worries that smaller community colleges such as Clarendon College and Frank Phillips College may suffer more.

The small and rural community colleges are the ones that will be most hurt by this, Stevens said. He fears that Clarendon College and Frank Phillips College may have to close their doors.

Rep. Warren Chisum, R-Pampa and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the state funds the health insurance for employees of community colleges.

"In 2009, it was $154 million, and that's what the governor vetoed," Chisum said. "His claim is that the junior colleges overstated their budget request by $126 million, and I just don't think that happened."

Associate Dean David Bradford, who runs the Pampa campus of Clarendon College, said he could not comment on how Gov. Perry's actions will affect the college and referred phone calls to President Dr. Miles Shelton in Clarendon.

Shelton said he and others are outraged at Perry's comment that some community colleges falsified their appropriations requests.

"We comply with our budget and feel that Gov. Perry's veto of this money that was earmarked for community colleges' employee and retiree health care costs for the 2009 school year is unwarranted," Shelton said. "Of the $153.9 million that will not be set aside, $461,040 will specifically be lost by Clarendon College. This is a significant loss for us. It's like losing $1 out of every $5 for the 2009 year and this will hurt the college."

Shelton said that a number of col-

Allsup, Boatright head music camp

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Grammy award-winning guitarist Tommy Allsup and legendary fiddle player Bobby Boatright will teach western music at the sixth annual Western Music Camp at Bowen Ranch, seven miles west of Crowell on Highway 70 from July 8-12.

According to a news release regarding the camp, Boatright, lead fiddle instructor, has led a double life as a musician and a math teacher. He has master's degrees in mathematics and physics and has taught on the college level. His music career took off when he was 14 years old when he played with Bill Mack's band on radio and TV. He has been on stage with Bob Wills, Light Crust Doughboys, George Strait, Willie Nelson, Marty Robbins and Mel Tillis, as well as many others.

Allsup started his career in 1949 and he earned a Grammy as guitarist for a recording with "Asleep at the Wheel." He earned his place in American music history by playing lead guitar for the legendary Buddy Holly from 1958 to the end of Holly's career. Allsup lost a coin toss to Ritchie Valens for a seat on the ill-fated plane that crashed on a winter night in Iowa in 1960, killing Valens, Holly and the Big Bopper.

Along with Allsup and Boatright, many other talent-

Hobbies keep couple active and outdoors

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Orville and Alice Whinery enjoy hobbies that get them out of the house and into their large yard. Orville does woodworking and Alice loves to plant and take care of the garden and flowers in their yard, which actually is a five acre spread.

The Whineries, who moved to Pampa in 1960 from Oklahoma, have been married for 60 years and have seven children, 17 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren.

About 10 years ago, Orville had a heart attack and the doctor told him to get a hobby to help keep him busy and active, which would in turn help in his recovery. This is when he started making bird houses, benches and tables out of wood. He mainly makes these to give to family members, but he said he has sold a few.

"I make most of my items in the winter when I can sit in the shop by the stove," he said. "I've made a lot of bird houses over the years and lately I started making different bird house buildings for a town. A few of that I've made are a school, church, general store, Marshall's office, Kitty's saloon and two outhouses. My daughter said that I should put these all together on a board, so I did that and named it 'Bird Town.'"

Alice Whinery has many beautiful plants in her yard including roses, clematis and hollyhocks. Some of the flowers are growing on arbors that Orville has built for her. She also has fruit trees down by the creek and has some Oklahoma blackberry bushes.

"We enjoy getting out of the house and working in the yard," she said. "Having these hobbies really keeps us up and going and mobile."

Orville said he still enjoys going to his oldest son's house to pick the guitar and fiddle. He said he used to be part of a gospel band that would travel around the area and perform at churches and nursing homes.

CONTINENTAL

Airline apologizes for sewage overflow

By The Associated Press

Passengers who endured a two-day trans-Atlantic odyssey with sewage overflowing from a jet's lavatories are getting an apology from Continental Airlines Inc. for the "poor conditions."

Flight 71, with 168 customers on board, took off June 13 from Amsterdam bound for Newark, N.J., but only got as far as Shannon, Ireland, because of a problem with the restrooms.

The flight resumed the next day after repair work seemed to restore smooth flow in the lavatory system, a Continental spokesman said Thursday.

But during the flight from Shannon to Newark, renamed Flight 1970, "the problem developed again," spokesman Dave Messing said.

When the plane landed in Newark, he said, it was discovered that the blockage was caused by someone flushing latex gloves down the toilet — despite signs that warn not to discard foreign objects into the system.

"Occasionally these instructions are overlooked," he said.

A passenger told Seattle television station KING that sewage flowed into the aisles, only one restroom was partially working, and flight attendants kept serving meals but told passengers not to eat much. He called it the worst flight of his life.

"I was forced to sit next to human excrement for seven hours ... it's a nauseating smell," Collin Brock said.

Messing, the spokesman for Houston-based Continental, said in a statement, "We deeply regret the serious inconvenience to our customers and are apologizing to them and compensating them for the poor conditions on the flight as well as the diversion and delay."

leges, including Clarendon College, do not receive additional funding from outside sources. There will have to be real choices made to either cut costs or raise additional funds.

"We do have some allies in the Legislature who are working on this situation and are trying to solve this problem and find a solution," Shelton said. "Warren Chisum and Robert Duncan are from West Texas and are trying to figure out a way for the college to carry on, help students and service the community."

Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo, said Tuesday afternoon that Chisum worked hard on this budget. "I would take his knowledge of the budget," Smithee said.

A veteran of the House of Representatives, Chisum has long been involved in the budgetary process.

"He knows more about it than anybody," Smithee said, "and to suggest that some colleges came in here on the budget process and did something they weren't supposed to do and fooled him, it's just ridiculous."

Smithee said he would trust Chisum with anything in terms of knowledge of the state government.

"Warren is sharper and smarter than anybody in the governor's office," Smithee said. "Warren's been there a long time, and he knows what's going on."

Smithee said nobody puts anything past Chisum.

Stevens said he could understand budget cuts when the economy was down, as it was five years ago. He said he couldn't understand the cuts when the economy is expanding and there should be money for higher education.

Stevens said the local legislators worked hard to fund Amarillo College and other area community colleges.

"They did everything we asked them to do," Stevens said. "This was a bad political decision and one that none of our legislators encouraged or supported."

If nothing is done, community colleges will have to wait two years until the Legislature convenes in 2009.

The alternatives out are pretty limited, said Smithee.

"There is a procedure in Texas that is called Budget Execution Authority," Smithee said.

During the interim between biennial legislative sessions, it gives the Legislative Budget Board the ability to move money around within the budget.

Chisum seems confident that the problem will be solved or at least addressed, but it will take time.

"We have plenty of time to talk about this," Chisum said. "It takes a long time for all this to come down. We'll see what we can do between now and then. It's not over yet."

The $154 million cut is statewide. Chisum said it's a pretty tough hit, particularly for smaller schools.

The governor's cut follows a larger budget cut over a three-year period from 2003 to 2005.

"We're working on something to mitigate this," Chisum said. "We've got a little bit of time. We've got about a year to figure out a way to get around this or do something about it. That's what we're working on."

He said he expected to straighten out the issue through the Legislative Budget Board.

"There'll be stuff along the line that the governor will want," Chisum said. "There may be some trading going on here before it's all over with."

Guymon joins weather radio group

GUYMON, Okla. — Texas County Oklahoma and surrounding areas will be able to stay a step ahead of storms by tuning in to a new NOAA Weather Radio (NWR) station - a 24-hour source of weather forecasts, watches, and warnings provided by the National Weather Service.

The new weather radio transmitter (KJY-96) was recently installed on the Tri-County Electric tower 14 miles east of Guymon. Broadcasting on a frequency of 162.500 MHz directly from the National Weather Service Office in Amarillo, this weather radio reaches all of Texas and portions of Beaver, Sherman, Hansford, and Ochiltree Counties in the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandles.

"This new Weather Radio will be very beneficial to the communities that it reaches," said Steve Drillette, NWS Amarillo Warning Coordination Meteorologist. "Residents now have an extra resource that can be used to receive critical advanced warning information to protect their families. Through the radio's tone-alert capability, residents can be alerted day or night of impending dangerous weather."

The NOAA Weather Radio network has nearly 1,000 stations nationwide. The Guymon transmitter is one of a number of weather radio stations that provide coverage to residents in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles. Other NWR sites include: WXX-38 Amarillo (162.550 MHz), KJY-88 Perryton (162.475), KXI-88 Borger (162.400 MHz), WGN-713 Miami (162.450 MHz) and WNG-657 Summerfield / Hereford (162.500MHz).

NOAA Weather Radio is the "Voice of the National Weather Service." In recent years, the sound of the voice has changed.

Herbicide quarantine extended for Texas

AUSTIN - Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples announced today the Texas Department of Agriculture has been granted approval by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to extend a Section 18 quarantine exemption allowing the use of sulfosulfuron (Maverick herbicide) in Bermuda grass pastures and hayfields to control johnsongrass.

Applicators may continue using the product through June 30, 2008.

Maverick herbicide, manufactured by Monsanto

Technology LLC, may be applied following all directions, restrictions and precautions on the EPA registered product label, as well as restrictions within the exemption notice.

Applications can only be made by certified applicators, licensed applicators or persons under the direct supervision of licensed applicators.

For more information, contact your county Texas Cooperative Extension office or TDA at (512) 463-7544 or 800-TELL-TDA.

Weatherman Kersh honored

NOAA has presented a Mark Trail Award to Chief Meteorologist Steve Kersh of KVII-TV in Amarillo and United Supermarkets for supporting the agency's NOAA Weather Radio All Hazards program.

This annual award program, now in its eleventh year, honors individuals and organizations that use or provide NOAA Weather Radio All Hazards receivers or transmitters in an effort to save lives and protect property.

Nineteen award recipients from around the country were recognized at an award ceremony in Washington, D.C.

The recipients are being honored for outstanding and continuing efforts to promote NOAA Weather Radio All-Hazards. Enlisting his staff and the management at KVII, Kersh spearheaded a vigorous campaign with United Supermarkets, resulting in the sale of more than 6,000 NOAA Weather Radio All-Hazard receivers - at a reduced price.

In addition to actively promoting the receivers on the air, the KVII staff also joined with representatives from the National Weather Service office in Amarillo to staff radio programming booths in numerous stores throughout the United Supermarket chain.

"With this award, we recognize Kersh, KVII and United Supermarkets for their important contribution to help NOAA meet its mission of protecting lives and property," said retired Navy Vice Adm. Conrad C. Lautenbacher, Jr., Ph.D., under secretary of commerce for oceans and atmosphere and NOAA administrator. "Whatever the danger, whatever the hour, when minutes count - you can count on NOAA Weather Radio All Hazards."

"Through their actions, KVII and the folks at United Supermarkets have clearly demonstrated their commitment to the people they serve and to public safety," said Steve Drillette, warning coordination meteorologist for the National Weather Service forecast office in Amarillo.

NWS Amarillo Meteorologist-In-Charge Jose Garcia echoed these sentiments. "Literally thousands of weather radios are now in homes, schools and businesses across the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles as a result of this campaign. It just demonstrates how effective private partnerships can be."

Attorney general targets data dumping

Identity theft remains one of the nation's fastest growing crimes. The more than 25,000 Texans who are affected by identity theft every year spend countless hours trying to repair their credit and recover hundreds or even thousands of lost dollars.

Identity thieves commonly obtain paper documents or computer hard drives that contain sensitive personal information, including names, addresses, Social Security numbers, bank account numbers and other personal information.

Too often, identity thieves have easy access to sensitive information because documents have not been properly discarded. Trash bins outside of homes or businesses contain personal information that identity thieves can use to inflict financial disaster on unsuspecting consumers.

Consumers can take steps to protect themselves from identity theft by destroying personal documents before discarding them. Paperwork that includes names, addresses, Social Security numbers, bank account numbers, and credit or debit information should be shredded or otherwise destroyed before it is thrown away.

Consumers who donate or dispose of computer hardware should first remove all personal information. Deleting files or reformatting the hard drive may not be enough to remove these files. Consumers should contact a technology professional to learn more about properly deleting personal information.

Consumers should also consider utility software, which "wipes" or overwrites the entire hard drive. Similar steps should be taken when disposing of wireless devices, including cell phones or personal digital assistants (PDAs).

Legislative leaders recognized the importance of protecting sensitive consumer information. In 2005, the Texas Legislature passed the Identity Theft Enforcement and Protection Act, which requires businesses to shred, or otherwise make unreadable any personal identifying information they collect from their customers. Texas law also requires businesses to develop retention and disposal procedures for customer records.

Greg Abbott

Businesses must adhere to any published privacy policies.

The Office of the Attorney General is aggressively cracking down on violations of these privacy laws. Just last month, we took legal action against a Texas-based pawn shop chain for repeatedly failing to protect customer records that contain sensitive personal information. Investigators discovered that EZPAWN stores across Texas had exposed customers to identity theft by throwing out hundreds of customers' financial records, including promissory notes and bank statements.

We also took legal action after a RadioShack store in Corpus Christi similarly dumped thousands of customer credit applications that included active credit and debit card numbers. Among the records was a receipt from a woman who, ironically, purchased a shredder from RadioShack in order to protect herself from identity theft.

In yet another case, our investigators found that a CVS/pharmacy near Houston improperly discarded customer records in garbage cans behind the store. The discarded documents included medical prescription forms with each customer's name, address, issuing physician and the type of medication prescribed. Investigators also discovered many active credit card numbers.

Businesses have much at stake when it comes to the problem of identity theft. According to the Federal Trade Commission, identity theft costs businesses and banks more than $50 billion a year. Many of these losses stem from credit card fraud and bogus telephone and utility accounts.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 21, the 172nd day of 2007. There are 193 days left in the year. Summer begins at 2:06 p.m. EDT.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 21, 1788, the United States Constitution went into effect as New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it.

On this date:

In 1834, Cyrus Hall McCormick received a patent for his reaping machine.

In 1907, 100 years ago, American newspaper publisher E.W. Scripps founded the United Press Associations, a forerunner of United Press International.

In 1932, heavy-weight Max Schmeling lost a title fight rematch in New York by decision to Jack Sharkey, prompting Schmeling's manager, Joe Jacobs, to exclaim: "We was robbed!"

In 1948, the Republican national convention opened in Philadelphia. (The delegates ended up choosing Thomas E. Dewey to be their presidential nominee.)

In 1963, Cardinal Giovanni Battista Montini was chosen to succeed the late Pope John XXIII; the new pope took the name Paul VI.

In 1964, civil rights workers Michael H. Schwerner, Andrew Goodman and James E. Chaney disappeared in Philadelphia, Miss.; their bodies were found buried in an earthen dam six weeks later.

In 1973, the Supreme Court, in Miller v. California, ruled that states may ban materials found to be obscene according to local standards.

In 1982, a jury in Washington, D.C., found John Hinckley Jr. not guilty by reason of insanity in the shootings of President Reagan and three other men.

In 1985, scientists announced that skeletal remains exhumed in Brazil were those of Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele.

In 2005, 41 years to the day after three civil rights workers were beaten and shot to death, Edgar Ray Killen, an 80-year-old former Ku Klux Klansman, was found guilty of manslaughter.

"In America, to look a couple of years younger than you actually are is not only an achievement for which you are to be congratulated, it is patriotic."

E-mail filtering can save you a lot of time

Last week, I let you in on some of my favorite e-mail tips and tricks. Today, I want to show you step-by-step how you can separate your important messages from the everyday junk. As I mentioned in the last column, the instructions here will work on Microsoft Outlook and Microsoft Outlook Express.

Before we jump right in, though, let's talk about WHY you might need filters. I receive about 80 pieces of e-mail every day. Do you think I read every single piece? Of course not. I delete quite a bit of it without opening it. Is that rude? No, because what am I deleting? That's right: Junk e-mail. How am I making that determination? Primarily, the sender and subject lines tell you if it is junk or not.

If you receive a large amount of e-mail, the process of sifting through the junk can be tedious. Your e-mail program can aid in that endeavor, though, saving you a lot of time. This task is accomplished through "Mail Rules."

Both Outlook and Outlook Express have a set of rules that are applied to every message before you see it in your Inbox. When you first start out, the rules are very limited or even non-existent. That's where you come in.

You can set up rules to change the color of an important message, automatically delete messages from certain people, or move certain messages to specified folders. The criteria you use to affect a message can be based on who the message was sent TO, the SUBJECT, who it was sent FROM, or any keyword within the message itself. Sounds pretty comprehensive, doesn't it?

Well, let's jump right into it with an example. Let's say that cousin Joe-Bob just got on the Internet. You and I both know what happens. He is so excited about e-mail that he forwards every joke to every e-mail address he has (including you). You don't want to hurt his feelings by asking him to stop, but you are also getting tired of going through all those jokes. What's the solution? Filters!

Despite their similar names, Outlook and Outlook Express operate very differently in dealing with filters. For that reason, I will first go through an example with Outlook and then with Outlook Express.

Outlook
Single-click on the message you want to work with (Joe-Bob's most recent joke). Click the ORGANIZE button on your toolbar or pull down the Tools menu and choose ORGANIZE. Then choose "Using Colors." Here, you can have all messages from Joe-Bob show up as any color you wish. Choose one of the colors and hit the "Apply Color" button.

Outlook actually calls this action, "Automatic Formatting" and considers it different than setting "rules." Many more options (including automatic deletion) are available if you choose the TOOLS menu and then "Rules Wizard."

Outlook Express
First, single-click on the offending message you want

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

June 11
Austin American-Statesman on Texas' nuclear renaissance:

With the number of nuclear-powered generators set to triple in the next decade, Texas finds itself in a nuclear renaissance. The state's dramatic population growth more than 1,000 people move here every day has created a near-insatiable demand for energy that has nuclear power providers licking their lips. Companies like TXU Corp., Exelon Corp. and NRG Energy Inc. have been planning to expand into Texas for years.

The eagerness of nuclear power providers to set up shop in Texas makes tax breaks approved by the Legislature in the recently concluded session downright puzzling. The Legislature made it possible for these companies to receive school tax breaks that could take a large chunk out of the state's tax revenue in coming years.

This legislation, House Bill 2994, stretches the Texas Economic Development Act, a 2001 state law that provided school districts with the ability to grant tax breaks in order to lure businesses. The law was intended to give school boards a say in Texas' economic development but has mostly resulted in questionable fiscal policy. Because of the law, school boards can grant tax breaks to businesses and then have the state make up the lost local revenue from state revenue.

According to Dick Lavine, a senior fiscal analyst at the Center for Public Policy Priorities in Austin, the total cost of projects resulting from the 2001 law has been $250 million a year. The state finances these tax breaks at the expense of other public projects.

It's questionable whether tax breaks are necessary to lure nuclear energy providers to the state. The Texas Economic Development Act was intended to enable Texas to compete for plants and jobs. Prime examples of the system working well were the Samsung expansion in Austin and the location of the Toyota plant in San Antonio.

But nuclear energy providers aren't

Protecting consumers' personally identifying information is in the best interest of consumers and businesses alike. Texans who take steps to protect sensitive personal information must be able to rely on businesses and government to do the same. The Office of the Attorney General will continue aggressively enforcing identity theft laws and protecting Texas consumers.

Points to Remember

Just Shred It! Shred all paperwork that includes sensitive personal or financial information.

When disposing of a computer or wireless device, first clear it of all personal information or contact a technology expert about properly erasing all files.

Texas Laws for Safeguarding Customer Records

Identity Theft Enforcement and Protection Act Chapter 48, Business and Commerce Code, requires businesses to safeguard and destroy personally identifying information collected from customers.

Chapter 35, Business and Commerce Code, requires businesses to develop retention and disposal procedures for customer records.

Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act requires companies to operate in accordance with their published policies.

to filter. Pull down the MESSAGE menu and choose "Create Rule from Message." You will see a step-by-step process to create a rule for that message. Notice all the ways you can select messages to filter in the first scrolling list. In our joke example, we will want to choose "Where the From Line contains people." In other words, we want our e-mail program to apply this rule to every message from cousin Joe-Bob's e-mail address. Put a check in that box. In the second section labeled "Select the Actions for your Rule," scroll down until you see "Highlight it with color." Check that box.

In the third section, click on the blue underlined word, "color." A window will pop-up allowing you to choose a variety of colors. After choosing your color and hitting OK, go to the fourth section and give your rule a name. For instance, you could call it, "Cousin Joe-Bob's Jokes." Hit the OK button when you are done.

Congratulations, you've just created your first Message Rule!

Suggestions

I like to use bright colors for my most important messages, and more subtle tones for jokes. Some of you might be wondering why I use colors instead of simply creating a rule that deletes the offending messages automatically.

I have never really had much success with creating rules that delete junk e-mail automatically. Junk e-mailers never send you messages from the same address twice. Your rule can only throw away mail from specific addresses. However, I have set up some rules that mark junk e-mail in grey if the subjects contain certain words.

I never automatically throw anything away, as one of my friends or family might actually use one of those words in a legitimate message subject. No, I simply mark them in a light grey color, making them easy to delete en masse.

Remember, there is no guaranteed way to prevent junk e-mail, but filters and colors can help you sort the junk from your good messages.

I'll see you in Cyberspace!

going to settle elsewhere because the market for energy in Texas is too large.

Supporters of HB 2994 argue that the school tax breaks are useful because they will accelerate the process of energy providers locating in Texas. The sooner energy companies arrive, the sooner these companies hire employees, invest capital and pay taxes, supporters say. Moreover, only a limited number of federal tax breaks are available, and the faster energy companies set up locally, the more likely it is that they will receive a larger portion of these federal subsidies.

Consider, however, the tradeoff. Energy providers will only pay 20 percent of taxes in years three through 10. The typical nuclear plant costs $7 billion to build and remains operational for about 60 years, according to figures supplied by the Nuclear Energy Institute, an advocacy group for the nuclear energy industry. Using those figures, a single plant could cost the state $40 million to $50 million in lost revenue.

Gov. Rick Perry has until Sunday to veto legislation passed in the most recent legislative session and we hope he decides to strike down HB 2994.

Even though we're opposed to the school tax breaks in HB 2994, nuclear power is one of several important energy sources for a growing state. A recent study conducted by the U.S. Energy Department found that Texas gives off the most carbon dioxide in the United States, and nuclear plants are the most practical way to reduce Texas' carbon footprints.

Nuclear energy is going to play an important role in Texas' future, but the Legislature shouldn't offer the corporations that will provide this energy with gratuitous economic handouts.

Egypt arranging summit next week

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Closing ranks against Hamas, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak has invited the Israeli, Palestinian and Jordanian leaders to a peace summit next week, Palestinian officials said today.

The regional gathering is the biggest show of support yet by moderate Arab states for beleaguered Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas in his bitter showdown with the Islamic militants, who took control of Gaza by force last week.

Mubarak has invited Abbas, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and Jordan's King Abdullah to the summit, to be held early next week in Egypt, said Abbas aides Saeb Erekat and Yasser Abed Rabbo. Israeli government spokeswoman Miri Eisin said nothing has been finalized.

At the meeting, Abbas will call for a resumption of peace talks with Israel, arguing that only progress toward Palestinian statehood can serve as a true buffer against Hamas, Erekat said.

"The most important thing to realize is that time is of the essence," Erekat said. "We need to deliver the end of occupation, a Palestinian state. If we don't have hope, Hamas will export despair to the people."

If you think... surgery is the only answer to your back problem

Surgery is an extreme procedure for dealing with spinal disc injury. It is invasive and potentially dangerous. Surgery has been proven effective in only a small percentage of spinal ailments.

In addition to having a record of excellent results, it is important to note that chiropractic utilizes a non-surgical approach.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "Needs to Be Active" (April 25) wrote that after more than 20 years as a nurse's aide, she feels that no one wants to hire her because she is older. Abby, she does not have an age discrimination problem; she has a marketing and self-promotion problem! If her experience and abilities are as stated, her skills are in strong demand across the country. People are not "given" jobs -- they have to go after jobs. She should join a local business networking group; visit doctors' offices and leave promotional handouts with her contact information; get to know nurses and staff at hospitals and senior centers and ask for referrals; introduce herself to the H.R. department at large local businesses (where employees frequently need help with ailing parents); call disability insurance companies and learn how to get on their list of recommended home nurses; advertise in the classified ads section of the local paper; and seek help from a business coach or marketing expert. "Needs" has a business problem; she needs a business solution. — JIM P., PROMOTION EXPERT IN FLORIDA

DEAR JIM: Thank you for your terrific suggestions. And thank you to the many readers who wrote to offer the writer of that letter (and others like her) advice, ideas and a pep talk. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I would recommend the nurse's aide check with her local department of senior services. The government is providing more programs to help people stay at home instead of going into nursing homes. Many private agencies now offer in-home care services and are looking for full- and part-time caretakers. These companies are growing at an amazing rate and would be a great match for her. — MARY IN MISSOURI

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to spread the word about an important program of the Department of Labor. Senior Community Services Employment Program (SCSEP) allows financially eligible people 55 and older to train 20 hours a week and receive minimum wage at local nonprofits. Seniors can acquire and update skills to help them obtain unsubsidized employment. With the older workforce growing and a decrease in the younger one, hiring and retaining older workers will become a priority for many employers. The Department of Labor has information about SCSEP on its Web site: www.doleta.gov/seniors. — PROGRAM DIRECTOR, MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: If "Needs" can't get a job as a nurse's aide, then how about as a sitter? Many hospitals (and families) hire sitters to assist with confused patients who cannot be left alone in their rooms but do not need a nurse with them all the time. Or how about sitting in the home? Many times a family just needs a break from Mom or Dad who is living with them and cannot be left alone. You would be amazed how many people would love a few hours' respite for lunch with a friend, etc. — AN R.N. IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR ABBY: She should check with AARP. Before retiring, I worked for a government agency that has special positions that could be filled by AARP seniors. These employees were a valuable asset and were able to take home a paycheck while contributing their expertise to help others. — PAT FROM CARLSBAD

DEAR ABBY: As director of nursing at an assisted-living community, I would like to encourage "Needs" to seek employment at one near her home. These communities often hire certified nursing assistants, and the work is less physically demanding and stressful than it is in a formal setting. — ELKHART, IND., READER

DEAR ABBY: That woman should visit her beautician for a style update. Perhaps her hairstyle and wardrobe betray her age and turn off some prospective employers. She doesn't have to pretend to be 20, but a stylish, mature woman can make a smashing impression. — YOUNG AT HEART IN BALTIMORE

7-8 Pitching Machine Honors

Kyndan Lott of the National Bank of Commerce 7-8 pitching machine league team hit a home run on May 24 during regular season play.

Guerrero leads Angels past Astros

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — After issuing no walks in the first 6 1-3 innings, Houston pitchers Wandy Rodriguez and Dave Borkowski allowed four in the seventh. Then, Vladimir Guerrero hit one of the few strikes the Astros threw in the inning a long, long way.

Guerrero's three-run homer capped a six-run rally, and was the only hit in the decisive inning of the Angels' 8-4 victory over the Astros on Wednesday night. "We definitely had some great at-bats — some guys laid off some close pitches," Angels manager Mike Scioscia said. "Plate discipline has been important to us in the last four to six weeks."

The Angels' 46-27 start is the best in franchise history. They've gotten there by winning eight straight series and 12 of their last 13.

Rodriguez took a five-hitter and a 4-2 lead into the seventh, and retired the first batter before Howie Kendrick reached on short-stop Eric Bruntlett's throwing error. Rodriguez then walked Mike Napoli and was pulled from the game.

Borkowski (1-2) walked Terry Evans to load the bases, and followed that by walking Reggie Willits and Chone Figgins to force in a pair of runs, tying the score at 4.

Orlando Cabrera's sacrifice fly drove in the go-ahead run before Guerrero hit a 1-0 pitch over the left-center fence for his 13th homer this season.

"It was a slider right down the middle," Guerrero said through a translator. "I think the key was Cabrera's at-bat — it put us ahead."

Astros manager Phil Garner said he was "totally surprised" by Borkowski's wildness.

"He just had a really hard time finding the plate and couldn't throw a strike," Garner said. "He finally threw a strike — to the wrong guy."

Armstrong fires back at charges in David Walsh's new book

By The Associated Press

Seven-time Tour de France champion Lance Armstrong said doping charges leveled in a new book by Irish writer David Walsh are recycled allegations designed to "cash in on my name and sully my reputation."

Addressing the soon-to-be-published book, "From Lance to Landis," Armstrong said in a statement released Wednesday, "This latest attack will be no different than the first two. ...

"I responded in court to these allegations, most of which are made by a handful of grudge holders, axe grinders, and a so-called 'expert' whose graduate degree turned out to be by way of correspondence courses — and I proved them false," Armstrong said. "I was vindicated yet again."

Walsh co-authored L.A. Confidential: The Secrets of Lance Armstrong" in 2004 with French writer Pierre Ballester and a follow-up version, "L.A. Official," last October. That book, as well as much of the material in the new book, is based on testimony given in a legal dispute between Armstrong and a Dallas-based company that had a bonus contract with the cyclist.

SCA Promotions sold an insurance policy to Tailwind Sports — in which Armstrong was part-owner — to pay a $5 million bonus if the American cyclist won his sixth Tour de France in 2004. Armstrong sued SCA after the promotion firm refused to pay the bonus, citing allegations in Walsh's first book that the cyclist had used performance-enhancing drugs to win his sport's most-grueling test.

After a panel of arbitrators ruled the suit had merit and heard testimony in the matter, the cyclist reached a $7.5 million settlement with SCA.

The panel never ruled directly on the doping allegations. But Armstrong contends Walsh is motivated by a personal dislike for him and paid a source, former U.S. Postal Service masseuse Emma O'Reilly, for an interview and other information in "L.A. Confidential."

He also charged that Walsh brought the book out now "to cash in on my name and sully my reputation." Armstrong retired after his 2005 victory, but the doping controversy still lingers. American Floyd Landis, the 2006 Tour winner, tested positive for synthetic testosterone and is awaiting a decision from an arbitration panel on whether the victory will stand.

Armstrong has repeatedly denied doping allegations against him both in court and the public arena.

Sosa becomes fifth player in 600-homer club

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Sammy Sosa bounced out of the batter's box with his trademark hop and thrust his right fist into the air.

Finally, Slammin' Sammy was a member of the 600-homer club — a delayed induction into an elite group that took considerably longer than most would have thought when he was playing his last game for the Chicago Cubs in 2004.

Playing for the Texas Rangers after a year out of baseball, Sosa connected

Wednesday night against his former team to join Hank Aaron, Barry Bonds, Babe Ruth and Willie Mays with 600 homers.

"This one is pretty big because, normally I don't know if I would have come back to baseball having a year off," Sosa said. "Now, have a chance to celebrate No. 600, which is not a bad number, I'm very happy."

His 600th homer came in the Rangers' 7-3 victory over the Cubs, on a 1-2 pitch in the fifth inning off Jason Marquis, the 364th pitcher the 38-year-old Sosa has homered off in his 18 major league seasons.

"Getting my 600th against the Chicago Cubs, and my first team (was) the Texas Rangers. It's like everything clicked," Sosa said.

Sosa played for the Cubs from 1992-2004, winning the '98 NL MVP award and making seven All-Star teams. He hit 545 homers for Chicago that pushed his career total within 26 of the milestone.

But there was his miserable 2005 season in Baltimore. He testified before Congress about possible steroid use in baseball during spring training before hitting .221 with 14 homers in 102 games.

Then came the year out of baseball, spent mostly at home in the Dominican Republic.

Sosa got back in the game by signing a minor league deal and making the roster in spring training with the Rangers, the franchise that originally signed him in 1985 when he was a lanky 16-year-old free agent.

Sosa hit his milestone homer nearly 18 years after hitting his first off Roger Clemens at Fenway Park in Boston on June 21, 1989. His latest was the 12th homer in 62 games this season.

"The guy took a year off from the big leagues and he hasn't missed a beat," Rangers shortstop Michael Young said. "That's saying a lot."

The homer landed in the Texas bullpen in right-center field. As Sosa rounded the bases, a banner was unfurled in center field congratulating him for his accomplishment, and pictures of all five members of the 600-homer club flashed on the scoreboard.

After being mobbed by his teammates at home plate, Sosa returned from the dugout for a curtain call and blew kisses to the crowd. He acknowledged the Cubs' dugout by tapping his chest with his fist, and Chicago manager Lou Piniella pointed back toward the slugger.

"You like to see professionals do what they do and Sammy's been a professional all these years," Piniella said. "All baseball fans should be happy for Sammy."

Adam 'Pacman' Jones faces 2 felony charges in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Suddenly there is more at stake for suspended NFL player Adam "Pacman" Jones than the 2007 season.

Jones must surrender to face felony charges in Las Vegas that he sparked a fight and threatened to kill people during a melee inside a strip club moments before three people were shot outside, authorities said.

Whether that changes the disciplinary status of the talented but troubled Tennessee Titan remained an open question. The larger question is whether Jones will remain free or if he will trade in his jersey for prison uniform.

If convicted of the two felony charges stemming from his involvement in the strip club brawl, Jones faces a maximum of up to 12 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, authorities said. Jones also faces questioning from Atlanta authorities about a shooting outside a strip club there.

Since Jones was drafted by the Titans in April 2005, he has been involved in 11 separate police investigations. He has been arrested five times in a little more than two years, but has not been convicted of any crimes.

Jones had agreed not to appeal a one-year suspension that a league spokesman said Wednesday would be reviewed after the Titans' 10th regular-season game. His team owner said the Titans were moving on.

"We are moving forward as a team, and do not expect to comment on any future matters concerning him until his suspension is completed," Titans owner K.S. "Bud" Adams Jr. said in a statement describing the team as focused on the 2007 season.

Officials had said a condition of reinstatement was adhering to team restrictions and no further "adverse involvement with law enforcement."

Jones was not identified Wednesday as the shooter in the Feb. 19 shooting outside the Minxx club several blocks off the Las Vegas Strip near the end of NBA All-Star weekend.

His Las Vegas lawyer, Robert Langford, has said he believed police had no evidence linking Jones with the shooting outside.

However, Jones is described in Las Vegas Justice Court documents as a combatant and the leader of an entourage that seemed to include the shooter, as well as a bodyguard who battled club employees and a woman who hit a bouncer in the head with a champagne bottle and attacked several other club employees with a chair and a stanchion.

Jones is accused of threatening to kill a bar bouncer who restrained him, and a cocktail waitress told police she overheard an associate meet Jones outside the club with an exhortation to "smoke" the same bouncer, who was later wounded.

Clark County District Attorney David Roger said arrest warrants were being sought for Jones, Robert "Big Rob" Reid of Carson, Calif., and Sadia Morrison of New York.

Police used a news conference announcing the charges to release surveillance camera images of a person who Capt. James Dillon said detectives wanted to identify and question in the shooting that left one bar employee paralyzed and two others with less serious wounds. Police said the man may live on the East Coast.

"We've had to dig and pry to try to get to the truth," Dillon said of a four-month investigation that led to Wednesday's criminal complaint.

Dillon said Las Vegas police had been in contact with Atlanta authorities, who said this week they wanted to question Jones about a shooting early Monday after a fight at an Atlanta strip club. The two cases were not related, authorities said.

The 23-year-old Jones faces two counts of felony coercion stemming from allegations he bit a bar bouncer on the ankle and threatened to kill club employees, according to the Las Vegas criminal complaint.

Reid, 37, who police identified as Jones' bodyguard, faces one felony coercion charge alleging he attacked a bouncer who tried to restrain Jones.

Morrison, 25, faces charges including coercion, felony assault with a deadly weapon and battery stemming from allegations that she hit a bouncer in the head with a champagne bottle and attacked several other club employees with a chair and a stanchion.

Coercion is the act of threatening or physically interfering with a person trying to do something that he or she has a right and responsibility to do.

The charges are slightly different from those that police sought in March, but that Roger declined to file.

"We wanted to make sure we had a lock-tight case before we started filing charges and releasing reports," the district attorney said.

Langford was expected to contact police to arrange the surrenders of Jones, Reid and Morrison. Langford did not respond Wednesday to repeated messages seeking comment.

A Las Vegas police report says Jones showered dancers on stage with money from a black plastic trash bag — an act of tipping known as "making it rain." When two dancers began fighting over the money, Jones allegedly grabbed one by the hair and punched her.

Jones is accused of swinging his fists and threatening the life of club employees who police said tried to intervene, and is seen on videotape punching a man who police identify as his own business manager.

A police report says Jones was seen gesturing as if he had a gun outside the club, where he walked away with a man wearing a baggy black T-shirt and blue jeans. Minutes later, police say a man wearing a baggy black T-shirt and blue jeans stood next to a palm tree and fired five or six shots toward people at the front of the club.

A bouncer who Jones fought with was wounded in the chest and left forearm. Another bouncer, Thomas Urbanski, was shot in the left hand and the torso, and was left paralyzed from the waist down. A female club patron was wounded in the head, police said.

Qualls suspended for 3 games

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Houston reliever Chad Qualls was suspended for three games and fined $3,000 by Major League Baseball on Wednesday — two days after throwing a baseball into the stands at Angel Stadium in frustration.

Qualls asked the players' union to appeal the penalty, meaning he cannot be disciplined until after a hearing is held and the appeal is decided.

The decision was made by Bob Watson, baseball's vice president for discipline.

Qualls allowed five runs in the seventh inning Monday night as the Astros blew a 9-4 lead to the Los Angeles Angels, who rallied for a 10-9 victory. After Orlando Cabrera hit an inning-ending grounder in the seventh, Qualls made the putout at first base and then threw the ball into the stands.

"I was just mad about the way the inning went, the way the runs had scored, and I fired the ball into the third deck," Qualls said before Wednesday night's game against the Angels. "It was pure frustration. We were ahead 9-4, then it was ground ball after ground ball.

"It was frustrating. We've been playing so well, we had scored nine runs, I didn't get the job done. The way they scored their runs made me angry."

Qualls said his agent, Alan Hendricks, called Wednesday morning to inform him of the fine and suspension.

"We both thought it was a little excessive," Qualls said. "He spoke with the union and we filed an appeal."

Qualls said he didn't know when the appeal will be heard.

Ban Pacman for good, and make sure he takes his posse with him

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Columnist

You know you're a big time athlete when you've got a posse to do your dirty work for you. As posses go, Pacman Jones has a pretty good one, full of guys equally adept at picking up dollar bills showered on the strip club stage as they are trading shots with whoever gets in their way.

Pacman's entourage was at it again the other night in Atlanta, where police say they were involved in a shooting after an altercation at, yes, a strip club. This is a posse that seems to travel well, mixing it up on both sides of the country in the name of their man.

The timing of the shooting was a bit awkward, coming less than a week after Jones pledged to NFL commissioner Roger Goodell that he was going to turn his life around and become a productive citizen so he could play in the league once again.

It could be Jones thought the best way to become that new person was to make sure Atlanta strippers had enough money for taxi fare home. Or maybe he just wanted to give the posse one last night out for old times sake.

It doesn't much matter now, because Jones has far more serious problems. And there's not a lot the posse can do about it, unless it includes a good criminal defense lawyer or two.

If Las Vegas prosecutors have their way, the next time you see Jones with a number on his uniform, it will be prison garb, not an NFL jersey.

They charged Jones with two felonies Wednesday stemming from a shooting over NBA All-Star weekend in February that left a strip club manager paralyzed. Jones faces a possible 12 years in prison on coercion charges for his role in the melee in the early morning hours of Feb. 19 at the Minxx Gentlemen's Club just off the Las Vegas Strip.

The court, of course, presumes that Jones is innocent until proven guilty. That's a basic tenet of the legal system that serves our country so well, and Jones will have his day to defend himself.

But the NFL is free to judge things by a different standard. The league doesn't need proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

With that in mind, maybe it's time for Goodell to begin rethinking the one-year suspension he handed down recently to Jones.

Maybe it's time to make it a lifetime ban.

Goodell certainly has the power to do just that, and there couldn't be a better candidate to remove from the game than Jones. He and his posse have wreaked havoc everywhere they've gone, and when he's booked in Las Vegas it will be his sixth arrest since he was drafted by the Titans in April 2005.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said Wednesday the league would not speculate any further on Jones' future at this time. One read of the Las Vegas police report, though, should be all Goodell needs to bounce Jones from the league forever.

In it, police detail the events of the morning, which began when Jones and a half dozen members of his posse went to the strip club to watch some of their favorite dancers. They sat in a private booth with a garbage bag full of money so they could "make it rain" by throwing money on the women.

A couple of the dancers began fighting over the money at one point, and witnesses said Jones grabbed one of them by the hair and punched her in the face several times. A melee broke out when club bouncers tried to break it up, and Jones and his entourage were finally escorted outside.

A cocktail waitress told police an angry Jones threatened to kill the bouncers before walking away with a man in a black T-shirt. A man in a similar shirt came back moments later with a semiautomatic handgun and began firing, hitting three people.

One of those shot was Tommy Urbanski, a former professional wrestler who worked as a real estate broker during the day and as the manager of the club at night to earn extra income to send his wife to law school.

Urbanski is paralyzed, a 9 mm bullet permanently lodged in his spine.

Urbanski told The Associated Press last month that he couldn't believe it when Jones took out an full-page ad in a Nashville, Tenn., paper that said learning he would be suspended from the NFL "was one of the worst moments of my life."

"That's the worst moment in his life?" Urbanski asked. "Try being put in a wheelchair for the rest of your life. This changes everything."

Police have yet to identify the man who shot Urbanski and two others. They haven't gotten a great deal of help in solving the mystery from Jones or his posse.

They're charging Jones with two counts of felony coercion, and also charging his bodyguard and a female posse member. The charges might be difficult to prove, but there's also a chance they might loosen some tongues.

Jones, meanwhile, has already violated the conditions Goodell put on his one-year suspension just two months ago. He's being questioned in Atlanta about one shooting, and faces arrest in Las Vegas in another.

He's a thug who should be banned from the NFL for good.

Just make sure he takes the posse with him when he leaves.

Hicks suspects Gonzalez used steroids

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers owner Tom Hicks suspects that two-time AL MVP Juan Gonzalez may have used steroids.

"I have no knowledge that Juan used steroids. His number of injuries and early retirement just makes me suspicious," Hicks wrote in an e-mail to The Associated Press on Wednesday. "In any event, we paid him $24 million for very few games."

Hicks was responding to questions about a television interview in which he was asked about decisions he regretted since owning the team, then mentioned the outfielder and steroids.

"Juan Gonzalez for $24 million after he came off steroids, probably, we just gave that money away,"

Hicks said in the interview, aired June 10 on KTVT-TV in Dallas-Fort Worth.

Gonzalez had three extended stays on the disabled list when he returned to the Rangers for the 2002 and 2003 seasons. Sidelined by a torn ligament in right thumb and a right calf injury, he played in only 152 of 324 games, hitting .288 with 32 homers and 105 RBIs.

On a medical level, your nurses and therapists come to your home and evaluate symptoms, treat the cause, as well as educate you to improve your quality of life.

On a professional level, we listen to you, your family, and your doctor. Concerns are addressed regarding your health so that you are placed on the road to improved well-being.

On a personal level, we take care of you or your loved one with extraordinary customized care and respect. We believe that every life is a story and want to hear and understand your story.
