Water district to meet on creation of conservation area

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER -- The Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District will hold two meetings, one in McLean and one in Clarendon, and a public hearing at their offices in White Deer later this summer or in early fall, concerning the creation of one conservation area, four new study areas, three continuing study areas and the elimination of one study area.

Under the district's rules, areas that show declines of the water tables of more than 1.25 percent in a year are listed as study areas and the water table is monitored closely. If the decline continues for three years or more, the district can establish a conservation area and take steps to lower the amount of water pumped from the properties in the conservation area.

At their monthly meeting here Wednesday, the district's board of directors agreed to establish a conservation area out of a study area in northwest Carson County that they have been watching for three years and add an additional study area adjoining it.

PGWCD General Manager C.E. Williams noted that most of the area was ranch land with little irrigation production. Consequently, he said he didn't think there was a problem, but he wanted to take the process to the next step to make sure.

A study area in Southeast Carson County west of Groom will continue as a study area, although part of the area has shown improvement.

An area near Hedley in Donley County also showed improvement, but the board will keep it as a study area.

Another area around Wheeler will also continue to be studied.

The board proposed a new study

Assault, robbery trial begins Monday

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

One of a trio of men charged with aggravated robbery and aggravated assault at a Pampa home is scheduled to go on trial Monday in 223rd District Court on the third floor of Gray County Courthouse, 205 N. Russell.

Davey Enriquez of Amarillo, Carlos Jose Cordova of Pampa and Adam Refugio Aguilar of Amarillo were indicted by a Gray County grand jury Oct. 3, 2006, in 223rd District Court. Each was charged with two counts of aggravated robbery, a first-degree felony, and two counts of aggravated assault, a second-degree felony. Bond for each of the three was set at $300,000.

The three were charged in connection with the home invasion and robbery which occurred May 21, 2006, at the home of Layne and Mae Conner in the 1100 block of East Francis.

At about 9 a.m. that day, two armed men broke into the home and took a blue Citibank bag with $100 and $50 bills totaling $4,000. A third man was believed to be the driver for the group.

"The suspects demanded money from the victims," said Pampa Police Lt. Fred Courtney at the time of the incident. "When the adult male was trying to get the money, it apparently was not fast enough for the robbers. One of the suspects fired a shot at him to get him to hurry. Fortunately, none of the victims were injured."

The Conners had an 8-year-old grandchild with them at their home at the time of the robbery. The adults were forced to lie on the floor, and the child ran to a back room and locked the door, according to police

Community Christian School undergoing changes

Community Christian School will begin a new chapter in their 12th year of providing Christian education to local students.

The school has a new administrator, they are moving to a new temporary location and they are accepting donations to build a new school on donated land on the west side of town.

Brenda Williams has been appointed as the new administrator for the school, taking over after Ray Thornton retired at the end of school last year.

Williams and her husband moved to Miami recently from Plainview after her husband Dennis accepted a position as pastor of the First Baptist Church in Miami.

She is a certified teacher with a master's degree in education and has been a teacher and principal for Plainview Christian Academy for the past 17 years.

Williams taught at Community Christian School last spring as a long-term substitute and that was a great opportunity to get to know the staff and students.

The building where Community Christian School is located is up for sale and they were recently informed that someone had purchased the building, so they began looking for a new location.

Even though that sale fell through, the school found a new home at the Family Life

Center of Briarwood Full Gospel Church.

Community Christian School board member Stephanie Kelly said they are very excited to make the move to the new location in the next few weeks.

"This new facility that Briarwood just finished building provides many great opportunities for our students," Kelly said. "There is a new computer lab, a large gym where the children can take physical education and there is also a kitchen where we can possibly provide hot meals for lunch if we make that decision."

The school plans to build a brand new facility not far from Briarwood Church on a piece of donated land hopefully in the not so distant future.

"We are accepting donations from residents who would like to contribute to this project," Kelly said. "Texas Plains Women's Center, which is run by Dr. Scott Ellis and his wife Connie Sue Ellis, will match all donations made this summer up to $10,000. We are very fortunate to have them as part of this project."

Community Christian School expects enrollment to be up more than 60 percent over last year. Starting this coming year, the school will offer classes from prekindergarten through 8th grade. They are excited to be able to offer classes through the middle area in western Roberts County where the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority has their well field. CRMWA's Kent Satterwhite, general manager, said the water authority is planning a new well field Southeast of their initial well field to take pressure off the aquifer in the old field.

The new study area will touch on Mesa Water's property bordering the south boundary of CRMWA's property.

The board also designated an area south and east of McLean as a new study area and an area stretching from Clarendon to Leila Lake as a new study area.

The board also agreed to eliminate a study area south of Pampa. There has been no drop in the water table for two years.

Williams said that in some cases concerning the new study areas, the problem may be a thin layer of saturated sand in the aquifer rather than overproduction. Many of the problems cited were on ranch land with little or no irrigation production.

Board members Tom Cambridge, representing Amarillo, and Charles Bowers, representing part of Gray County, questioned leaving study area boundaries where they were when the drop in water appeared to have moved over the past couple of years. They said they thought it could devalue those particular properties.

In other business, the board approved the sale of two tax delinquent properties in Donley County. They accepted a bid of $5,300 for one and $8,800 for the other. They also approved a bid of $2,500 for the sale of tax delinquent property in Potter County.

They voted to set aside up to $50,000 this fiscal year for a water conservation education program, primarily for radio and television ads.

The water district board of directors again tabled action on a PetCo Petroleum non-compliant well in southwest Gray County, pending action by the Texas Railroad Commission.

They also approved the purchase of a $15,000 borehole video camera system.

"We looked at this several years ago," said Williams.

The price of the camera system has come down significantly, he said.

The board approved two loan requests for sprinkler irrigation systems. One was for $71,280 in Potter County. The other one was for $28,688 in Carson County. That leaves about $76,000 in the district's loan fund. Funds are provided from the state through the district for water conservation equipment.

Williams presented a proposed budget for the district's 2008-2009 fiscal year. He said the district had not yet received reports on property appraisals but expected them to rise. Williams said the proposed budget is similar to this year's budget. At $1.2 million, it will be about the same as 2007-2008. Pending upon the appraisals, Williams said the district may be able to lower tax rates for 2008-2009.

The board also approved 29 drilling permits.

Jerry Miller, John Blackburn, James Henry Roman, Stacy Ruland, Carmen Boettger, the Mays Trust, Robert Valouche, Bill Hodges, Terry Benson, Riley Black, Anthony Saikowski and Perry Watkins had each applied for domestic well permits in Potter County. Jim Morrison applied for a domestic well permit in Roberts County. Larry and Jodi Daniells applied for a domestic well permit in Armstrong County.

John Grady had applied for two four-inch irrigation well permits in Donley County. Curtis Schaefer applied for one four-inch irrigation well permit in Donley County.

J. Lee Milligan had applied for one four-inch industrial well in Carson County.

The Friemel Brothers applied for an eight-inch irrigation well in Armstrong County. John Leo Smith and Roger Wade each applied for a six-inch irrigation well in Donley County.

John McDowell Ranch had applied for an eight-inch irrigation well in Wheeler County. Tommy Whitlow applied for a five-inch domestic well in Wheeler County. Jim Shaw had applied for a six-inch irrigation well in Gray County. Keith Meek applied for an eight-inch well in Gray County. Mark Neusch applied for an eight-inch irrigation well in Carson County.

The water district board approved two unpermitted wells that have been drilled, a six-inch irrigation well for Ken Wischkaemper in Wheeler County and a four-inch well in Wheeler County for Tom Puryear. In each instance, the administrative paperwork has been brought up to date. Water district to meet

Steam blast rips Manhattan

By ADAM GOLDMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A massive geyser of steam and debris that erupted through a midtown Manhattan street left asbestos in the dust that settled, but city officials said today that tests indicated the air was safe.

The city's Office of Emergency Management said in a statement that long-term health problems from the rupture of the 83-year-old steam pipe and its debris were "unlikely."

Streets were still closed this morning around the crater left by the eruption near Grand Central Terminal, creating near-gridlock during the morning rush. New Yorkers streamed down Park Avenue, some wearing masks to filter the air as they weaved around utility trucks amid the sound of jackhammers.

Clumps of office workers, BlackBerries in hand, huddled on corners for word on whether their offices would open. Keith Williams, who installs home theaters, stood at a barricade hoping to get to the tools he had ditched a day earlier as he ran from the rumbling blast.

"I said, 'I hope that's a train,'" the 29-year-old recalled. "I didn't know whether a building was collapsing. We heard it, and I just took off."

The eruption began shortly before 6 p.m. Wednesday, breaking windows and rattling buildings as the pipe spewed steam, dirt and debris hundreds of feet into the air. One woman died of an apparent heart attack, and about 30 people were injured, four seriously.

Officials quickly ruled out terrorism as the cause of the blast, but for some witnesses, the explosion, dust and chaos were frighteningly reminiscent of the scene on Sept. 11, 2001.

"We were scared to death. It sounded like a bomb hit or a bomb went off, just like 9/11. People were hysterical, crying, running down the street," said Karyn Easton, a customer at a salon a few blocks from the site of the blast. "It was really surreal."

City crews worked overnight to assess and repair the damage and to determine what happened.

If I am possessed, it's not by Daffy Duck ...

I have a confession to make. I am fascinated with all things supernatural. Let me now say that this is NOT a characteristic of which I am proud.

Perhaps this column would be better suited on the religion page because below I quote a passage from scripture, but: Oh, well.

I must find something to prose on and on about to fill this space. Since I lead a dull and uninteresting life, I take whatever idea I can get and run with it. Unfortunately, I can't say those ideas are worthy of your time or effort. Er, sorry.

OK, now that I've given you due warning, I'll just go further out there on that limb and declare that I thoroughly enjoy watching documentaries about hauntings, about strange disappearances, about the Bermuda Triangle, about the legendary lost city of Atlantis and so on and so forth.

I am particularly fascinated with Biblical references to spirits, demons, fortune-tellers and the like. All of which tell me, of course, that such nonsense is frowned upon by God. He doesn't, however, shrug off as harmless or treat with disbelief the insidious powers of darkness.

In Acts 16:16-19, Paul met with a slave girl, "posessed with a spirit of divination." The text reports the slave fattened her master's (or masters'?) coffers with her ability to tell fortunes.

"17 This girl followed Paul and the rest of us, shouting, 'These men are servants of the Most High God, who are telling you the way to be saved.' 18 She kept this up for many days. Finally Paul became so troubled that he turned around and said to the spirit, 'In the name of Jesus Christ I command you to come out of her!' At that moment the spirit left her.

"19 When the owners of the slave girl realized that their hope of making money was gone, they seized Paul and Silas and dragged them into the marketplace to face the authorities."

How brave of Paul. How discerning. He could just as easily been fooled, flattered or pleased by what the girl said.

He was not. Wisdom is something I pray for in my own life.

Wisdom and goodness.

(Sigh) I don't get discouraged. After all, my God is a mighty God. If He can part a sea, not to mention create the earth and all that I survey, He can make me good. And, if not wise, then REALLY blessed in, um, common sense.

Note to God: All right. Anytime. I'm waiting. Bring on the goodness part first, please.

To conclude this column, I'd like to share my own personal (as far as I know) theory about ghosts. It is based somewhat on dialogues I have heard with people in ministry on the subject.

If apparitions do indeed exist, mayhap they be demons? I mean, demons deceive and frighten, right? In Mark 5:9-14, Jesus frees a man from his demons, consigning the "Legion" into a herd of swine.

I reckon if demons can possess a person or animal in this life, they can possess that person's or animal's identity, knowledge and memories beyond the grave. If their mission is to dull and obscure the truth, what better way than to continue the masquerade?

Note to family: Even though I believe in demon-possession, I myself am NOT possessed — especially not by the spirit of Daffy Duck!

Internet: When is it all right to copy?

The Internet is a sea of information. With today's search tools, you can find the information you want in seconds. However, once you've found that golden Web page, what can you do with it? Can you legally copy it into your own presentation or report?

By answering two questions, you'll have the answer. First, is the work copyrighted? If not, have at it! Copy all you want. If the work is copyrighted, you may still be able to copy it if your intent can be titled, "fair use."

But wait, I'm getting ahead of myself. Let's start with the word, "copyright." Authors are given a monopoly to reproduce, distribute, adapt, perform and display their work to encourage development of new work. In other words, they have the RIGHT to COPY their own work. If this monopoly interferes with the general production of more new work, however, limitations are placed upon it.

One of these limitations is called fair use. It gives scholars, researchers, authors, etc., permission to make limited use of another's work without asking permission. This "limited use" would include criticism, comment, news reporting, teaching, scholarship and research. Despite that widely accepted description, copyright law does not define fair use. Instead, whether a use is fair use is determined by balancing these factors:

1. The purpose and character of the use.
2. The nature of the copyrighted work.
3. The amount and substantiality of the portion used in relation to the copyrighted work as a whole.

4. The effect of the use on the potential market for, or value of, the copyrighted work.

The fair use of a copyrighted work is not an infringement of copyright. Copyright owners are, by law, deemed to consent to fair use of their works by others. Remember, according to law, the intent of copyright is "to promote the progress of science and the useful arts."

In the end, it is generally up to users to police themselves in the area of fair use. Blatant violations, though, can end you up in court!

Many people have the mistaken belief that a copyright protects a work forever. Not so! Any work published before 1923 is now in the public domain and is not covered by any copyright law. Works created between 1923 and 1978 are protected for about 70 years (depending on the exact creation/publishing date). Any work created after 1978 is protected for "the life of the author plus 70 years." If the work was created corporately (by more than one person), it is protected for 120 years from the date of creation.

Make sense? I doubt it. My head is still buzzing with all the exceptions, clauses and other fine print. And before you ask... Yes, some lawyers specialize in this field of law. They can assist you in protecting your copyrightable property.

Sidenote: Every year, thousands of books quietly move out of copyright and into the public domain. The Gutenberg Project (gutenberg.org) is a good resource for these books.

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ July 7
San Antonio Express-News on Lopez Obrador:

Egos are beasts, and they need nourishing.

For Andrés Manuel López Obrador, the sustenance comes in the form of huge crowds.

He staged a massive rally last weekend, drawing hundreds of thousands of protesters to the main plaza in Mexico City.

Each individual, each face in that vast, anonymous crowd, fueled the blind ambition of a man whose personal agenda seems to trump the welfare of his country.

López Obrador lost the presidential election to Felipe Calderón last year, a race in which less than 1 percentage point separated the two men.

Far from delivering a stirring concession speech, he claimed victory following the vote, and he continues to claim it, operating what he calls a "shadow" presidency.

The Mexico City rally, aimed at protesting government efforts to privatize the state-owned oil industry, was the latest manifestation of his tenuous grip on reality.

If López Obrador could see beyond his own boisterous supporters, however, he might want to peruse the results of a poll showing that Calderón is gaining popularity.

The Ipsos-Bimsa survey, published in the daily El Universal, shows that if the elections were held today, Calderón would win 45 percent of the vote, compared with 31 percent for López Obrador.

If Calderón did not win a decisive mandate last July, he is starting to forge one now, perhaps because of his bold response to the drug cartels.

The people have spoken, and it is time for López Obrador to realize it.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your advice to "Looking Twice in Idaho" (May 21), who has concerns about his girlfriend's lack of a college degree. You suggested premarital counseling. Not all college degrees are created equal, and a college degree does not automatically insulate one from life's misfortunes or economic setbacks. This couple should definitely make sure they have compatible financial and personal goals. However, the prospective groom should not assume that a lack of a college diploma will cripple his future wife's earning potential any more than his possession of one will guarantee it. — LISA IN SAN JOSE, CALIF.

DEAR LISA: Many readers wrote to say that marriage should be based on love, not love of money. However, opinions regarding who should leave that relationship and why varied. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: It is the girlfriend who should exit the relationship -- and the sooner the better! "Looking" equates success with the future paycheck of a woman he admits is kind and considerate and who loves him. He, not she, will be the problem in any potential marriage. He should value his girlfriend for who she is, not for her earning capacity. His attitude will inevitably destroy any marriage he enters into. There is nothing wrong with a wife who prefers to manage her home and devote herself to her children and husband. Get a grip, "Looking." Your immaturity is showing. — TOM IN ALIQUIPPA, PA.

DEAR ABBY: Since when does love require a college degree? This is the silliest excuse I have ever seen for trying to get rid of someone. I never graduated from high school, having dropped out to pursue "life" as I saw it. I went back five years later and got my GED for myself. My husband spent seven years in college and received his bachelor's and master's in English. I started working for a furniture store when I was 17 and have been there ever since. My better-educated husband earns less than half of what I do -- proof that a piece of paper does not make one a success! Love is blind, and it does not earn a salary. — THE BREADWINNER IN CINCINNATI

DEAR ABBY: I, too, have only a high school education. Twenty years ago, I married a professional. I married him for "love" and thought that was why he married me. Over the years I have realized that in his eyes, love and money are on the same page. I have overheard him talking with his friends, saying, "Well, she only makes enough money for groceries!" If "Looking" has doubts now, then there is a real problem. He should break up with that girl before she wastes any more time on him. She's still young enough to find someone who will love her for herself, and not the amount of money she'll bring in. — GROCERY GIRL IN GLEN ALLEN

DEAR ABBY: If "Looking" wanted a college-educated woman, then why did he date and start living with someone who is not? Was it just a fling? Was he thinking an uneducated woman was fine to use until Miss Right came along? His girlfriend is the one who should be questioning their relationship and having major concerns about his ability to raise children. With his hang-ups, what values will he pass on to his children? Will he treat her as a second-class person, not an equal and respected partner in their marriage? I think he is a shallow person, and I hope she has better sense than to marry him. — NANCY IN HOUSTON berg.net) aims to catalog (word for word) all of these books before they disappear into history. The site allows you to download entire books onto your system and read them at your leisure.

So, let's say you find a public domain passage of text on a Web page and you want to copy it into a report. Instead of retyping it, follow these easy steps:

1. Highlight the text (Hold down your left mouse button while dragging the pointer across the text).
2. Pull down the EDIT menu and choose COPY.
3. Switch over to your word processor. Position the cursor to exactly where you want the new text to be inserted.
4. Pull down the EDIT menu and choose PASTE.

I know it sounds complicated, but once you do it a few times, it becomes very quick.

Copying public domain pictures can be even easier. IF you are using Internet Explorer,

1. Position your mouse pointer over the picture you want.
2. Right click (Click the right mouse button) and choose COPY.

3. Switch to your word processor. Pull down the EDIT menu and choose PASTE.

If you want to practice some of these techniques LEGALLY, head over to the Library of Congress' American Memory Section (memory.loc.gov). Be sure and follow their "Legal" link for copyright information. Then, browse their collections. If you dig deep enough, you'll find a treasure trove of historical documents and photos to play with.

Before I finish, though, I need to mention a little twist to copyright law that occurred in 1998: the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA). This incredibly controversial law extends and strengthens copyright in cyberspace. Basically, it criminalizes the act of circumventing copy-protection software. In addition, it extends copyright violation liability from a user to his provider. In other words, let's say you decided to put the full lyrics of your favorite Madonna song on your Web page. According to the DMCA, your Web-hosting provider can be held monetarily liable for the copyright infringement.

To learn more about copyright law, including how to copyright your own works, check out the official U.S. Copyright Office (www.copyright.gov). I'll see you in Cyberspace!
