OPEC ministers trying to complete oil accord

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers, a step away from adopting a short-term production accord that could nudge oil prices slightly higher, adjourned their morning session today without reaching agreement, officials said.

The final hurdle at the longest OPEC meeting in history was Kuwait's demand that it be given a bigger share of the cartel's total oil production under a proposed two-month extension of a temporary production-sharing system.

Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti oil minister, told reporters after today's morning session that he had not changed his stance.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, said without elaborating, "The major problem has been resolved," and that he expected a final agreement by the end of the day. Iran has been adamant in rejecting Kuwait's demand for a bigger oil quota, although other members also were resisting.

Other ministers were pessimistic about an agreement being reached today.

"No, it doesn't look that good," said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani.

Libyan Oil Minister Fawzi Shakshuki said cartel leaders planned to meet again later today. Yamani said no specific time had been set.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were in their 15th day of deliberations. A 14-day session in March 1983 was the longest continuous OPEC meeting before this one.

The oil ministers worked at a furious pace before the delayed opening of today's formal session, trying to sketch out a compromise on Kuwait's demand for a higher production quota, sources said.

The key breakthrough in the conference came Saturday when Saudi Arabia, the dominant oil producer in OPEC, dropped its opposition to renewing a cartel accord that was to expire Oct. 31.

The original accord was to be effective only for September and October. It assigned oil production quotas for all members except Iraq and Kuwait to OPEC's overall output at 16.8 million barrels a day in order to bolster oil prices.

Yamani, in an interview published Sunday in Kuwait's al-Watan newspaper, was quoted as saying that he believed a renewal of the accord through the end of the year would trigger an increase in world oil prices.

Yamani did not say how big the increase might be, according to al-Watan. Some analysts suggest a price of about $18 a barrel. Others, citing huge existing world inventories and possible increases of cheating by cartel members, suggest the impact would be slight. Prices currently range from $14 to $16 a barrel.

The main stumbling block to signing a renewal was deciding how to modify it to meet the demands of several members who wanted a bigger share of OPEC's output. The stickiest point was Kuwait's demand, which some member countries considered unjustified.

Al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti oil minister, said Sunday he wanted his country's production quota increased by 90,000 barrels daily as of Nov. 1, making it equal to the quota of Libya at 990,000 barrels a day.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said late Sunday that behind-the-scenes maneuvering had set the stage for a final accord.

"We will solve all the problems," he said.

OPEC was eager to complete a deal in order to avert a new drop in oil prices, something that large oil producers outside OPEC, such as Mexico, would eagerly embrace. Any oil price increase would help Mexico, which is struggling with a huge $103 billion foreign debt.

Analysts say prices could fall below $10 a barrel without an OPEC agreement to continue limiting its oil production.

Chamber leaders claim Country Fair 'success'

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The totals haven't been computed yet, but it looks like this year's Country Fair receipts will be almost as good and maybe even better than last year's, Pampa Chamber of Commerce leaders said today.

"I think it went very, very well," said Bill Duncan, outgoing Chamber president.

Duncan said he expected the revenues from the fair, held Saturday at M. K. Brown Auditorium, will do as well or possibly exceed proceeds from the 1985 fair.

This was the second annual Country Fair held as a fundraising event for the chamber, with proceeds to be used to fund chamber operations and community projects in the coming year.

Duncan said he anticipated gross receipts to be as much as last year, though the figures were still being totaled today and expenses had yet to be deducted.

He noted that admission ticket sales were about the same as last year, with just over 700 in attendance Saturday night. Only two less tickets were sold for the cash drawing.

Duncan said there also had been more Silent Auction items available this year and expected increased revenues there.

Kremlin warns of cooling ties

MOSCOW (AP) — A spokesman for the Kremlin, which ordered five U.S. envoys expelled after the State Department sent 25 Soviet U.N. diplomats packing, said further tit-for-tat measures could make superpower relations "cool down to zero."

But in Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz responded to Sunday's expulsion orders by saying, "We will protest and we will take some action."

The official Tass news agency Tass said four U.S. diplomats in Moscow and one in Leningrad had been ordered to leave after the Foreign Ministry determined they had engaged in "impermissible activities."

The term is a diplomatic catch phrase for espionage.

The five are Jack Roberts of the U.S. consulate in Leningrad and four diplomats from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow: William Norville, a first secretary, Charles Ehrenfried, a third secretary, and attaches Gary Lonnquist and David Harris.

Tass did not say when the five must leave. U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner, when asked about a date, said, "We really don't know."

The Tass announcement did not mention the U.S. expulsions of the Soviet diplomats from the United Nations, but Georgy Arbatov, a chief Kremlin spokesman, indicated that the Soviets were retaliating.

Arbatov spoke in a satellite interview from Moscow on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation."

"The Americans will (see that) Mr. Gorbachev is a very forthcoming man if he has good partners. But if you behave in such a way he becomes very tough," Arbatov said, referring to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"It can cool down to zero in both countries if you go on this way of retaliation after retaliation," Arbatov said.

Shultz, appearing on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press," said it is up to President Reagan to determine what action to take.

"The president will consult, and he will decide," Shultz said.

In March, the United States ordered Moscow to reduce its U.N. Mission staff by 105 people over a two-year period. The State Department alleged many of the diplomats were engaged in espionage.

In September, two days before Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze arrived in the United States for talks with Reagan and Shultz, Washington issued a specific list of 25 Soviets it accused of using their U.N. status as a cover for spying.

Small girl needs liver transplant

THE COLONY — A former White Deer family wants to give their 2-year-old daughter a special gift — a normal life.

Shatori Stubbs, the bouncing blonde daughter of Pampa High School graduate Scott Stubbs, 36, and Jeanie Stubbs, 34, needs a liver transplant.

The girl has cirrhosis of the liver and was born without a gall bladder to drain bile from her liver. Her parents, who have no insurance or money to cover the operation, had to move their family here from White Deer seven months ago to be near the Children's Medical Center, the Dallas hospital where Shatori is being treated.

According to the child's mother, the small girl has undergone surgery six times since June 19 to clear blockage in her esophagus. She is scheduled for a seventh operation on Oct. 29.

"After her original surgery, she did well until she bled from dilated veins in her esophagus that had resulted from the cirrhosis," Mrs. Stubbs explained in an open letter to seek help for Shatori. "Although treated for this problem, she again bled two weeks later indicating severe blockage of blood flow to her liver."

"Each new episode carries a major risk for patient mobility as well as a risk for death," she added. "It's clear that Shatori has outgrown her damaged liver. The only treatment we can offer her to assure her long-term survival is a liver transplant."

"Her esophagus can swell shut and she can choke," she added. "Or if the main artery going to the heart is damaged in any way, the transplant cannot be done."

Lori Waggoner, Children's Medical Center media specialist officer, said that with about 35 children at the hospital needing livers, there is a shortage. And transplant surgery cannot be scheduled until a donor is found.

Stubbs, a construction worker, and his family needs $200,000 to $300,000 for the transplant.

A fund for the family has been started at the First Colony Bank. Belknap said that those wanting to donate may send funds to the Shatori Stubbs Liver Transplant Fund, First Colony Bank, 5200 Paige Road, The Colony. Account 6500-1624.

Strong quake hits Kermadec Islands today

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — An earthquake said by U.S. seismologists to be the most powerful in more than a year struck the Kermadec Islands in the South Pacific today, but officials had no immediate report of damage or injuries.

In Golden, Colo., the U.S. Geological Survey reported the 6:46 p.m. (2:46 a.m. EDT) quake at 8.1 magnitude on the Richter scale, a reading that would make it a "great" quake capable of causing tremendous damage.

Several monitoring stations in the Pacific basin reported it at 8 on the Richter scale.

The Kermadec Islands, administered by New Zealand, are located some 750 miles northeast of New Zealand's North Island, and south of Tonga.

It was not immediately known if the quake had been felt on Raoul.

Fair

"It all looks good," he said. With economic conditions the way they are, "it was just fantastic" overall the way the fair went, he added.

Duncan said he had a number of good compliments about the food service this year and the other activities. He said one of the good things about the fair is that "you see more different people from the community at the Country Fair" than at some other events in the city.

Norman Knox, incoming 1986-1987 president, said, "I think it went great. I was really pleased."

Knox also said the ticket sales were close to last year's amounts, insuring good revenues there. He also said the auction bidding seemed to go well.

"We're just really appreciative of the merchants and the people who supported the fair this year," Knox stated, adding that again the fair was a success, though figures are still being computer.

Chamber Manager Floyd Sackett said he felt that after all the figures are totaled, revenues will be close to last year's.

"I think it went really fine," Sackett said, saying it was "just fantastic the way the people of the community supported it."

He said people apparently "had a great time" at the fair.

The 1985 fair raised approximately $49,000 before expenses were deducted. Proceeds enabled the chamber to pay off a $26,000 note to get the chamber out of debt.

The Country Fair, under the general chairmanship of Mike Keagy, featured five food booths, with soft drinks and other beverages; the Silent and Live Auctions; entertainment by local singer Eddie Burton; and a dance in the Heritage Room with music by Wells Fargo Band.

Suddenly, everybody's related to oil-rich Texas relative

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP)—Some people will do anything for the chance to inherit millions of dollars in oil wealth, says an English genealogist helping heirs of Pelham Humphries trace their lineage.

About 3,000 people who trace their family tree to Humphries met Saturday and chipped in $150 each to launch the Humphries Heirs Trust Association, which they hope will win them the wealth they deserve.

Humphries, a Tennessean turned Texan, died in 1835 after acquiring 3,900 acres of Texas land near present-day Beaumont. The land yielded one of Texas' most productive gushers, Spindletop, in 1901.

The Humphries heirs say millions of dollars is due them because they were defrauded of their inheritance. Attorneys for the oil companies that developed Spindletop say the land was legally transferred after Humphries died.

"We're finding that so many people wanted to be descendants of Pelham Humphries that they, or their ancestors, have tried to rewrite history," said genealogist Harold R. Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage in London, England.

"We're researching 100 family histories in the Humphries case right now. We're three weeks behind in these because so many of the records and files have been altered. It's unbelievable," he said.

The association was established to take the oil companies to court and collect the royalties the Humphries heirs believe the oil companies have, or should have, set aside for landowners and their heirs.

Federal law requires royalties be held by oil companies for possible landowners in cases where ownership is unknown or disputed, and the hopeful heirs of Humphries say Spindletop should have yielded between $2 billion and $200 billion in royalties.

"I have no documented proof it's there, but I'm convinced it's there," said Brown Perego, president of the heirs association. "I'm not saying everybody who joins us is an heir. When we go to court for the money, it's up to the individuals to prove their relationship."

Some at Saturday's meeting carried notebooks and documents to prove their ancestry.

"We know the money is there, but it's hard to get," said Bill Rook of Pell City, Ala. "When money is concerned, relatives, religion, morals, everything goes. It's good we're getting together for a fight."

Steven Humphries, of Belmont, Miss., said his great-great-grandfather was either a brother or cousin to Humphries.

"We're related. I know we've had trouble in courts in the past. I think they just haven't gotten hold of the right information to make our case," said Steven Humphries.

Brooks-Baker said many honestly believe they're related to Humphries but few are.

"Really, only a small portion of the people who think they are direct descendants of Humphries really are," he said. "I can't say the percentage exactly. It could be as high as 35 to 45 but even as low as 10."

Better things to do

I always liked having my column early enough in the week that I can come in on Sunday afternoon and write something. In a sleepy town like this, what else is there for a non-football fan to do than write a column.

But today, while a gentle breeze was blowing orange leaves back and forth across people's lawns and with every column idea that I gathered during the week disappearing when I sat down in front of the terminal, I came up with a whole list of things one can do on a lazy fall afternoon in Pampa.

I'm not talking about such banalities as cleaning the house, scouring my laundry, raking out the car or sandblasting the top of my desk. Why waste time on things one has to do?

But there are ways to at least bide one's time during days like this.

Procrastination is probably the most popular way, except when one has a cat. I was ready to waste a full afternoon sitting in my couch reading the paper and intermittently dozing off when Pepper decided she'd hop onto my lap and let me know how adorable she is. I wanted to whap her on the nose or drop-kick her across the room. But those eyes, that innocent little face wouldn't let me do it.

Later I tried to lie down on my bed and feel sorry for myself for not getting a promotion and mulling up at bell choir. But Pepper decided that my face looked cold, so she nuzzled up close and sat on it. I tried to get her off, but she just looked at me with an expression that said "aren't you glad you got me back from Wheeler?"

"No," sez I. "Why don't you go back to that guy's gas station and sit on his face?"

I thought of walking aimlessly up and down the mall or Coronado Center to windowshop. I rarely have the money to actually buy anything more than a Garfield memo pad and a bag of popcorn.

Lately though, I've had trouble resisting the temptation to rearrange the limbs of those paper skeletons that are taped at the dairy case or the cash register. If they're stapled or taped to something, I pay no attention. But if they're just dangling freely, I get the urge to make the skeletons wave or click their heels. I mean, it's not nearly as destructive as graffiti or drawing mustaches on candidate signs. Admit it folks, you get the same creative urge too.

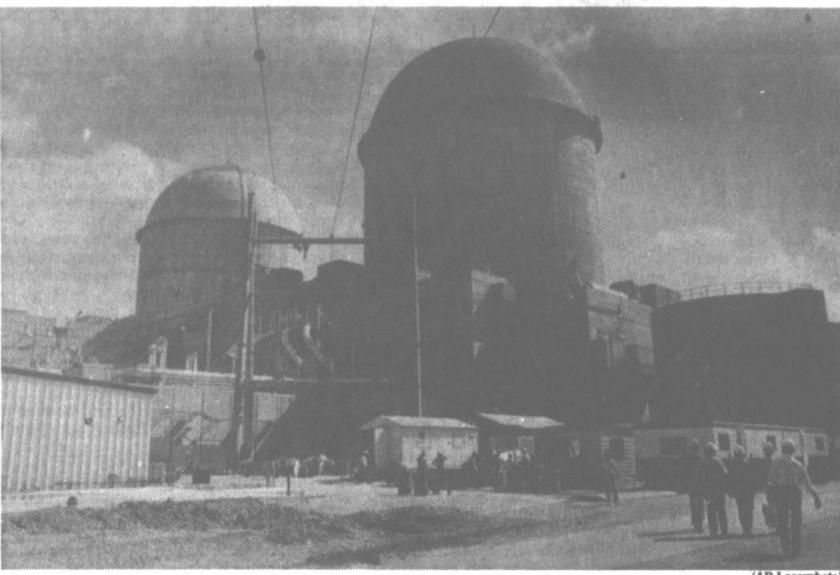

The only trouble this afternoon was that the mall is way out there, and my car is sitting in the newspaper parking lot with a flat tire.

But that's not the only thing in Pampa that's flat. Have you ever bought a cup of hot chocolate from a convenience store? I made the 75 cent mistake Sunday when I punched the button of the cocoa machine and got pelted with lukewarm brown water.

Next week, I'll just reheat some coffee from Saturday night. If I can't drink it then at least I could put it in my transmission.

So there are plenty of things to do on Sunday besides write a column. For heaven's sake, I could have watched Murder, She Wrote if it weren't for this.

Thousands of people visit unfinished Comanche Peak Nuclear power plant at Glen Rose each year. Last year about 14,500 people flocked to the site, which has been plagued by cost over runs, delayed start-up dates and legal problems.

Kidnapping ends in family reunion, new job for father

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (AP) — An unemployed, homeless carpenter has a job because publicity of his 10-year-old son's brief abduction netted the sympathy of an employer.

Clifton Gardner, the oldest of six children, was returned late Saturday to the Channel Motel where his parents, Wallace and Debbie Gardner, were waiting.

A suspect told authorities he abducted the boy to give him a better life.

"To think he would take him away from his own parents who love him and take care of him and think he could give the boy a better life," Gardner said. "He obviously wasn't thinking straight."

The father hopes the ordeal is the last trouble his family will see for awhile. Since their troubles were publicized, they have received bags of groceries, boxes of diapers, sacks of clothes and a small amount of money. The other children are ages 8, 6, 4, 3 and 4 months.

The motel owner also offered the family a few free days until they can find an apartment.

But, most importantly, Gardner said, he received a job offer from a man who drove out to the east Harris County motel. He was to report today for his first day on the job.

"We're sure going to work hard at it," Gardner said.

Gardner's son said he left Thursday with a hitchhiker his parents had befriended while returning to Houston after a fruitless job hunt in New Orleans.

"The man told me we were going someplace where he could make $100 for my mom and dad and when we were finished we'd come home," Clifton said. He said he wasn't harmed during the 12-hour ordeal and spent most of the time sleeping in the back seat of the station wagon that the suspect took from the family.

The suspect, originally identified as Kenny Dale, was later identified as Kenny Lawrence Good, 22, of Canton, Ohio, said Harris County Sheriff's Detective Ed Kroschel.

Good was charged with kidnapping and possession of a stolen vehicle by the Harris County Sheriff's Department, Kroschel said. Harris County officers sought to have Good returned from Louisiana, where he was arrested on Friday.

The suspect told authorities he took the boy because his parents were poverty-stricken and he wanted to take him to the Salvation Army to give him a better life, one investigator said earlier.

Lance James, a hitchhiker whom Good picked up, said the suspect told him he planned to take the boy to social workers and sell the car.

James said he helped the boy escape when the suspect fell asleep in the car near LaPlace, La. Good was arrested by the St. John the Baptist Parish sheriff's department.

Clifton, who spent a day in the Louisiana sheriff's office, complained only when he got a stomach ache after eating everything he was given by deputies, said Judi Guillory, spokeswoman for the St. John the Baptist Parish sheriff's department.

He was returned to his anxious parents by Harris County sheriff's deputies, who traveled to LaPlace to pick him up.

Star Wars firms are unconcerned about politics

DALLAS (AP) — If politics brought an end to federal funding of the Star Wars program, many Texas business involved in the research say they would fund the program at their own cost because of possible technological benefits.

Dallas-based research programs attempting to develop the Strategic Defense Initiative, a space-based defense shield, currently receive more than $155 million in federal funds.

But if the funds stopped flowing, LTV Aerospace and Defense Co., E-Systems and Texas Instruments, all Star Wars research sites, said they would continue funding the programs themselves.

"These technologies were being developed long before there was an SDI," said Janis Kreiser, a spokesman for LTV.

SDI is being touted by President Reagan as U.S. bargaining chip in the arms race.

But researchers say they're not concerned by the political vulnerability of the program.

"If SDI went away tomorrow, we'd just try to sell the technology to another government agency," said Bill Nunnally, director of the Center for Energy Conversion Research at the University of Texas at Arlington.

"This technology has wide applications, and a lot of people will be interested in using what we've learned."

Nunnally and others involved in the research said the national program is in the phase where all new discoveries can be valuable.

The UT-Arlington laboratory, which will receive $4.5 million to fund four years of research, is researching means to shape electrical energy into lasers, launchers and particle accelerators.

Trustees to look at policy changes

A group of policy changes, one of which deals with public participation at board meetings, faces second reading at Tuesday night's Pampa school board meeting.

The meeting will be held at 6 p.m. in the Lamar Elementary School cafeteria, 1234 S. Nelson, as the board continues to meet in local schools in an effort to encourage public input.

Policy changes to undergo second reading deal with public participation at meetings, employee grievances, student trips and career ladder eligibility.

The policy dealing with public meetings would allocate 15 minutes at the beginning of each school board meeting for unscheduled presentations by the public.

In other business, the board is scheduled to consider:

- monthly and year-end budget reports from Business Manager Jerry Haralson.
- ratification of a tax collection services contract with the Gray County Appraisal District.
- bids on paper products.
- approval of out-of-state extracurricular trips.
- 54 personnel matters including substitute teachers and employment.

Foundation's name changed for clarity

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The foundation originally formed to collect funds for the Pampa Community Building has undergone a name change with approval from the Secretary of State.

Ed Myatt, foundation president, said the name change will eliminate some confusion which has arisen between the foundation's name and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

When formed to serve as a means of collecting tax-deductible contributions for the community building, the foundation was named the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Foundation, Inc.

But the chamber and the foundation have always been two separate and distinct organizations, Myatt noted.

"Inasmuch as the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Foundation, Inc., were two separate organizations, the name change will possibly eliminate any confusion that might have existed," Myatt said.

The new foundation name is Pampa Area Foundation, Inc. Approval for the name change was received in notification from the Secretary of State on Oct. 3.

The first foundation name was selected because a name was needed to obtain the non-profit status from the Internal Revenue Service and approval from the state. Since the foundation was formed to provide the community building, which would house the chamber offices, the foundation just adopted the chamber title into its name.

But that designation has resulted in confusion, despite articles and public statements that have stressed the separateness of the two organizations.

The new name — Pampa Area Foundation, Inc. — should help alleviate that problem, Myatt said.

At a recent Downtown Kiwanis Club meeting, foundation treasurer Phil Gentry explained the foundation grew out of a project to find a new chamber office.

He said the original project was mainly to build or locate a new facility to house the Pampa Chamber of Commerce offices. But as discussion of the project continued, it was learned that contributions specifically for a chamber building would not be tax deductible.

Mainly through the efforts of Myatt, the project was expanded in the late summer of 1984 to provide a community building, Gentry said.

The project's purpose was that the community building would house the chamber, a non-profit organization, and provide office space for other non-profit organizations. In addition, meeting facilities would be available for general public use for seminars, wedding receptions, club meetings, small conventions and other similar public activities.

Gentry said contributions for that purpose were acceptable as tax deductible donations. The foundation then was organized in early fall of 1984 to serve as the body for collecting the contributions and arranging for the new facility. It received its IRS and state approval as a non-profit association for obtaining the tax deductible donations for the building.

The project came to realization this past summer with the purchase and remodeling of the building at the northeast corner of Ballard and Kingsmill, a structure with some 20,000 square feet of floor space.

Myatt said the Pampa Area Foundation has entered into a contract with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce on management of the building. The chamber will manage the foundation property at 200 N. Ballard and keep records on the use of the community building. The chamber also will handle reservations for the use of the facilities.

Current facilities available for public use include the conference room, which has been named the Nona Payne Conference Room, and the large meeting room, named the M.K. Brown Room, that will accommodate as many as 200 people.

Myatt reported that the community building, which opened the first week of September, has already been booking meetings without much publicity. In its first month of operation, a total of 868 people used the facility for their meetings, he said.

At this time, part of the kitchen equipment has been ordered, and the rest will be ordered as soon as additional contributions are received, Myatt said. The foundation needs approximately $20,000 to complete the kitchen and make it completely operational.

Gentry explained presently the kitchen is available for catered affairs. When the kitchen is completed, caterers will be able to bring hot and cold foods and maintain them at proper temperatures in the oven and refrigerator equipment.

There's also a possibility the kitchen could be leased out to a firm for the preparation of meals for banquets and luncheons, he said.

Other organizations presently having offices in the building are Pampa United Way, Clean Pampa, Inc., Pampa Board of Realtors, Pampa Fine Arts Association and Big Brothers-Big Sisters.

Myatt said the building and all of the improvements presently in the structure are paid for as of this date, with the funds coming from the $350,000 goal that was reached. The funds have paid for the purchase and remodeling of the building, with no outstanding long-term debt.

As promised, the foundation also has opened an interest bearing account of $50,000 at First National Bank for maintenance and related needs so that a yearly fund drive will not be necessary, Myatt explained.

"Our fiscal year and our first year of operation was completed on Sept. 30, 1986," Myatt said. "The annual report will be available as soon as it is completed."

The report will be on file for public inspection at Room 311, Combs-Worley Building, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily, Monday through Friday, or at the office of Charles Cooley, CPA, at 316 N. Somerville.

Other current members of the board of directors of the Pampa Area Foundation include Floyd Watson, vice president; Jim Ward and Roy Sparkman, directors; Don Lane, legal counsel, and Cooley, CPA.

Group uses balloons to protest proposed nuclear dump

DELL CITY, Texas (AP) — A group protesting a proposed low-level radioactive waste dump in Hudspeth County released 1,000 helium-filled yellow balloons to publicize their cause.

The bright balloons, released from a semi-truck trailer, were emblazoned with the standard radiation warning symbol. Tied to them are orange ribbons that say:

"This balloon released from the proposed radioactive dumpsite in Hudspeth County. Had there been a nuclear accident, you would now be contaminated."

A barbecue lunch preceded the rally, which was attended by about 50 people and staged on a desolate landscape 17 miles south of Dell City and about 85 miles east of El Paso. The rally was sponsored by an organization calling itself Alert Citizens for Environmental Safety (ACES).

They are trying to broaden their base of opposition to the proposed dump, which they fear would contaminate their water supply.

Congress tacks on unrelated legislation

Whenever a complex, popular piece of legislation is working its way through Congress, you can be sure the "Christmas tree" syndrome will come into play. This is the phenomenon of legislators slipping pet projects that might not have a chance standing on their own into a piece of legislation that is almost sure to pass eventually. Not all of the ornaments so added to our lawbooks are attractive.

The massive drug bill approved by Congress — the one most of our elected officials will point to as evidence that they are really serious about dealing with the drug problem — is alternately frightening and amusing in this respect. It contains more than the usual quota of questionably relevant or marginal provisions that may not have the slightest relationship to fighting drug abuse.

Sen. Pete Domenici, for example, attached a provision allowing "street people" to use their food stamps to pay for food at homeless shelters. The provision also says that federal welfare, veterans and other assistance programs can't be denied just because a person doesn't have a fixed address. Just what this provision has to do with the noble crusade to stamp out drugs deemed illicit by the authorities is — let us be charitable — somewhat obscure.

Some provisions at least seem related to the crusade, though they are questionable on their own merits. The Customs Service, for example, would be permitted to establish phony companies to conduct "sting" operations or collect intelligence on drug operations here and abroad. Stings were all the rage among enforcers for a while, but we've always figured that there was plenty of crime around without paying government employees to do more to it.

The federal wiretap laws was to be revised, and not in a way to make your telephone safer from unwanted intrusion. The feds would be able to use "roving" wiretaps to catch drug dealers who tend to move from phone to phone.

A new "U.S. Customs Reserve" would be created, modeled after the military reserves and composed of volunteer agents who could be given uniforms and government equipment to help track down drug smugglers at or near the border. They would have immunity from civil suits for their actions.

Sen. Alphonse D'Amato added a provision outlawing spring-loaded "ballistic knives." Why? Well, claims the senator, "the ballistic knife is a favored weapon used by drug dealers." Could be. Sen. D'Amato might know more drug dealers than we do.

Sens. Jesse Helms and Jeremiah Denton pushed for a provision to terminate Federal Communications Commission regulations that permit "dial-a-porn" services for people over 18 years of age. The good senators claim this is "to help prevent rape and other sexual violence." It's tough to see what this has to do with drugs, but the two senators have been trying to get this one done for a while.

We often repent at leisure for legislation passed in haste. It's unlikely that even the main features of the bill — stiffer penalties for drug possession and selling — will have a beneficial impact on the incidence of drug use in the country. Throwing in a lot of other provisions — mainly because drugs are big in the media now and the time never has been better to get some of these loopy ideas enacted into law — is irresponsible.

Unfortunately, it's also typical of the way Congress operates.

Baseball and nuclear weapons

By DONALD KAUL

It was a great weekend for a baseball fan to be sitting in front of his television set. The thrill of victory, the agony of defeat, victory snatched from the jaws of defeat and vice versa; it was all there. And that was just the news from Reykjavik. The actual baseball games were even better.

The events of the Reykjavik summit made one aware once again of how often life imitates baseball. In three consecutive games over the weekend, major-league teams contesting for their league championships came within a single strike of winning, only to see the victory slip away.

Same thing in Iceland: Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev got together to wrestle the arms race monster, and before we knew what was going on they started trading away military bric-a-brac like two crazed bubble gum card collectors. Intercontinental ballistic missiles, intermediate-range missiles, nuclear testing — the tools of war began disappearing off the board at a dizzying clip.

Then, just when they had the monster down and were biting it on the ear, somebody said "Star Wars," sending the president and Gorbachev into a swoon. The monster escaped. The arms race is alive and well and living anywhere it damn pleases.

That is hard news indeed for peacenik liberals everywhere. I must say I didn't expect much of the Reykjavik summit initially. It was hastily called, and I had no real faith that the leaders involved actually wanted a reduction in arms.

Apparently I misjudged the men; apparently something happened in that funny-looking building in Iceland that make them see a vision of what their countries could achieve if they weren't pouring vast resources into the arms rat-hole. And peace almost broke out.

Is that an exaggeration? Perhaps, but I have a feeling if our two nations ever got off the arms race merry-go-round for even a little while, it would feel so good that we'd not want to get on again soon.

It is particularly bitter that so much promise should have been sacrificed for so whimsical a concept as Star Wars, the Strategic Defense Initiative.

President Reagan is in love with the system. I think he looks at it in the terms of those cute, kindergarten-style ads of a year or so ago. SDI is a bright umbrella poised over a little red schoolhouse where our children play and learn. The bad old missiles come over and bounce harmlessly off the umbrella. Hooray for Star Wars.

There's only one thing wrong with that vision. There's hardly a chance that Star Wars will work. They don't have the computers for it, they don't have the software and they hardly have a clue on how to get them. Most of the experts who are promoting it are experts who will scrape a buck or two off of the billions the system will cost in the next decade or so.

So we're given a chance to lay aside this turkey and get an arms control agreement besides — and the president says no. He wants his umbrella to protect his little red schoolhouse.

It reminds me of the story of Camille, the story of a shady lady for whom men go bonkers. They give her jewels, nice clothes, they abandon their families and reputations for her. Which would be plausible; she's an agreeable sort, except for the fact that she has tuberculosis and keeps coughing all of the time. No one seems to notice this. The men keep kissing her on the mouth. Whenever I see one of the versions of Camille, I want to stand up and yell: "Don't kiss her on the mouth. Tuberculosis is contagious."

That's Reagan and Star Wars. He'll give up anything to keep it, even peace. And he doesn't notice that it has this terrible cough.

Arms control has become a Catch-22 situation. If we elect a rational president who wants to cut down on weapons, the Russians won't have anything to do with him; they think he's weak. If we elect a hard-liner who threatens them with a wacko weapons system, they come right to the bargaining table; but he won't bargain.

They've started to put a softer spin on the summit collapse. White House officials are saying that the groundwork has been laid for productive negotiations in the future. President Reagan took to the tube to tell us that he was ready to pick up where he left off in Reykjavik.

Maybe. But somehow I feel that the weekend was a special moment that won't come back again soon, not merely for us, but for the Russians. The deal they turned down — Reagan's offer to put off deployment of SDI for 10 years — was a pretty good one, you know; good enough to have put Reagan in hot water with his right wing supporters.

But at the end the deal collapsed on mutual distrust, which is why we have an arms race anyway, isn't it?

Back to baseball.

"NOW HERE'S SOMETHING I CAN USE—AN IMMIGRATION BILL!"

Discrepancies among races

Uncle Sam is prompt to admonish or discipline his own children, but he does not want any outsider doing it.

The prime minister of Japan — Nakasone — has raised a storm of protest.

He says he meant no slander, but what he said was this: "Since there are black people, Puerto Ricans and Mexicans in the United States, the level of knowledge in the United States, on average, is far lower."

Reaction was immediate and angry. Critics said the remark represented "Japanese racial arrogance." There were threats to boycott Japanese products.

So then the prime minister summoned reporters to explain that he did not mean to slur any racial group. But then he said again: "Americans have not been able to achieve because of multiple nationalities."

Now the foot-in-mouth prime minister was offending a lot of Japanese over here!

For the record, Japan's population is less than 1 percent minorities — but those minorities are treated as second-class citizens at best.

Japan's 670,000 Koreans, descended from people brought in as laborers, are treated as virtual aliens.

But so much for Nakasone's presumptuous criticism of us. What is the status of education in the United States?

SAT scores of this year's high school seniors remain unimproved. Former Education Secretary Ted Bell calls it a national disgrace. He calls it "the worst news in a long time."

The newest government-sponsored study, by National Assessment of Educational Progress, shows that 99 percent of young adult Americans can write their own names. One in 20 cannot read at fourth-grade level. One in five cannot read at eighth-grade level.

Chester Finn, research chief of the United States Department of Education, concedes "a staggering lack of high-level literacy."

Project the numbers and 10 million Americans are functioning below the standards of half a century ago.

And the study does concede that there is a gap between the performance of blacks and whites, with Hispanics midway between.

So the numbers tend to support the Prime Minister's indictment except, as we have seen, that he lives in a glass house.

Significantly, Illinois has a state-run residential public high school which accepts only the brightest sophomores of whatever color.

Their grade-point averages last year were 3.9. Average SAT verbal score was 537. Average math score 620. Both more than a hundred points better than the national average.

GOP Senate majority on shaky ground

By Robert Walters

BOISE, Idaho (NEA) — As Idaho goes, so goes the nation.

That unreliable political cliché traditionally has been applied to Maine, but this year it may be appropriate to Idaho.

At first glance, the state appears to be a thoroughly unreliable bellwether because its voters are atypically conservative. In both 1980 and 1984, it ranked second in the nation (behind only Utah) in the proportion of its votes cast for President Reagan.

This year, however, the Democrats are almost certain to win Idaho's gubernatorial election and to retain control of one of the state's two House seats. They could also topple an incumbent Republican senator.

Although the Republicans cannot be counted out of any of those contests, they are in serious trouble — and in that regard, Idaho typifies the political situation nationally in the closing weeks of this year's campaign.

Reports from throughout the country suggest that Republicans are on the defensive as they struggle to hold onto their slim 53-47 margin of control in the Senate.

In primary elections in two states with fiercely contested Senate races, Louisiana and Washington, the Democratic contenders fared significantly better than most observers had expected.

In other states, poll results seem to bode well for the Democrats. In Colorado, for example, a survey commissioned by two of the state's major news organizations shows the Democrats leading in the gubernatorial and senatorial races. Both are intense campaigns to fill vacant seats.

Even some of Reagan's visits to battleground states have proven disappointing. In South Dakota, he was shunned by leading Republican candidates, while in Missouri and Louisiana, he attracted more children than adults.

Large, last-minute infusions of Republican money could rescue endangered GOP candidates. But because the party controls the White House, it is a target for angry voters who want to lash out at politicians they presume are responsible for local and regional economic recessions.

In Idaho, for example, the three leading sectors of the state's economy — agriculture, mining and timber — all are deeply troubled and politicians such as Republican Sen. Steven D. Symms are being blamed for those problems.

"The economy here is really the only issue — and while it was going to hell in a handbasket, Symms was crusading against the communist menace," says one local journalist, alluding to the flamboyant senator's penchant for national security matters.

Although one of Idaho's House seats is safely in Republican hands, the other is held by Democratic Rep. Richard H. Stallings, who unseated an incumbent Republican two years ago by less than 200 votes.

That razor-thin margin and the district's very conservative electorate initially made Republicans optimistic that they would recapture the seat this year. But the GOP candidate has waged an uninspired campaign and Stallings is likely to be re-elected.

In the gubernatorial campaign, Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy has been outclassed by Democrat Cecil Andrus, a former two-term governor who holds a commanding lead.

Democratic victories in those contests would produce no political change because that party already controls both seats. In the Senate race, however, the Republicans are threatened with a potentially serious loss.

But because the contest is so close, both candidates' campaign managers believe that the deciding factor is likely to be which party is most successful in getting its voters to the polls on Election Day.

Congress goes home without much deficit reduction

WASHINGTON (AP)—Free at last, members of the just-completed 99th Congress have gone home, crowing to voters about their accomplishments but frustrated at their failure to do more to combat federal red ink.

The second session of the 99th Congress ended two weeks and a day behind schedule as first the Senate and then the House adjourned Saturday night after 9 p.m. The 100th Congress convenes Jan. 6, 1987.

"This Congress, in all probability, will be remembered for tax reform, balancing our defense needs against the demands for fiscal restraint, and for its inability to find a successful formula to solve the continuing problem of our national deficit," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"Time and effort and some frustration" produced "several milestones that many of the members and many congressional observers never thought possible," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said in a farewell statement marking his retirement from Congress.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., used a single word to describe the 99th Congress: "Productive."

From modest measures to begin Daylight Savings Time three weeks earlier and designate the rose as the national flower, to the most sweeping tax code revision in a generation and the biggest spending bill in history, the 99th Congress compiled a record of staggering scope.

It also may have set an unofficial record for contentiousness.

Even on the final day Saturday, with attendance dwindling to almost nothing, adjournment was delayed for hours as stubborn legislators in each chamber bickered over the last remaining legislative crumbs, including authorization for a new space shuttle to replace the destroyed Challenger and a bill that would allow U.S. pharmaceutical companies to export drugs not yet approved for use in that country.

But Congress let die a $90.7 billion, five-year bill reauthorizing funds for federal highway and mass transit programs. Among the major sticking points on the bill was a provision allowing states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on rural interstates and provisions relating to billboard removal on federal-aid roads.

Senate President Pro Tempore Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a 32-year veteran, wore a button pleading, "Free the 99th Congress."

"Not every policy dilemma was resolved and some of our answers are less than complete," Dole said.

For instance, the exact impact of the tax changes and a rewrite of the nation's immigration laws will take years to determine.

But at some points, this Congress, divided between a Democratic-controlled House of Representatives and a Senate in Republican hands, seemed like it would never do anything.

It was only in the past several months that Congress began moving.

"Three months ago, it looked like we wouldn't get very much done," Thurmond said, adding that it ended up being one of the most productive sessions he had ever seen.

It was only after weeks of bickering, and a partial governmental shutdown Friday, that Congress completed work on a $576 billion catchall spending bill needed to finance federal operations and programs for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. President Reagan signed the spending measure Saturday.

Widespread black market established to obtain promising new psychiatric drug

NEW YORK (AP)—Patients have established a widespread black market in Canada and Mexico to obtain a new drug that is the first effective treatment for a common psychiatric illness, a U.S. government scientist says.

Clomipramine is the only known drug that can provide relief for the estimated 5 million Americans with obsessive-compulsive disorder, said Dr. Thomas Insel of the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md.

However, it is unlikely to be approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for at least two years because its manufacturer has not yet supplied adequate evidence for its safety and effectiveness, he said in an interview Sunday.

Studies by Insel and others during the last few years have shown that clomipramine can produce a 50 percent improvement in the symptoms of the majority of patients who receive it.

The symptoms disappear for about 20 percent of patients using the drug, Insel said. Some patients who took the drug for six months five years ago are still healthy, he said. The drug has no effect for about 10 percent of those with obsessive-compulsive disorder, he said.

"There's a tremendous black market in this drug," said Insel, who described the findings at the annual meeting in New York of the Phobia Society of America.

"This is one of the most common psychiatric disorders in the United States. There's been no medical treatment for it until now."

Obsessive-compulsive disorder is characterized by obsessions, which are recurrent thoughts or impulses that are senseless and unpleasant, and by compulsions, or repetitive behavior performed according to certain rules.

One example is someone who fears contaminants so much he might wash his hands to the point of causing skin disease.

Clomipramine, also called chlorimipramine, is in the category of drugs called tricyclic anti-depressants. It is available as an anti-depressant with the trade name Anafranil in Canada and Mexico and is the second most commonly used anti-depressant in Europe, Insel said.

Its manufacturer, Ciba Pharmaceutical Co. of Summit, N.J., began trials of the drug recently at 20 research centers around the country with the hope of seeking approval by July 1988, Insel said. A security guard said company officials were unavailable for comment Sunday.

Insel said when he began his research on the drug, he was skeptical of its usefulness for obsessive-compulsive sufferers.

"I actually started out to disprove it," he said. "But I am a believer."

He said he receives two or three calls a week from people who have obtained the drug from Canada and are looking for another source. "Just in people I've spoken to alone, it's got to be in the hundreds," he said.

Customs inspectors at the Canadian border recently stepped up efforts to confiscate the drug, in accordance with FDA regulations, and they have begun opening mail from pharmacies known to supply it, Insel said.

Jerry Geffrion, a pharmacist at the Pharmacy Bonaventure in Montreal, said he has seen dozens of U.S. patients who have come to doctors in Canada to get the drug.

He said confiscation of the drug at the border has increased during the past six months and many patients are now turning to Mexico to obtain it.

Experts say Soviets need to define SDI proposal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Arms control experts say the United States and Soviet Union may yet find a common ground for resolving a Kremlin demand that "Star Wars" testing be confined to the laboratory.

At the summit in Iceland, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said the U.S.-Soviet stalemate over Star Wars would block a package of tentative agreements to drastically reduce strategic arsenals, eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe and gradually do away with nuclear weapons testing.

Despite intense negotiations at the summit, the two sides did not attempt to define what the Soviets meant by phrase "testing outside the laboratory," said Steven Steiner, a White House adviser on defense.

Signs emerged over the weekend, however, that the Soviets would ease their stance on Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, at closed-door superpower arms negotiations in Geneva.

"We have not cut off our dialogue," said Kremlin spokesman Georgi Arbatov, who took part in marathon arms negotiations at the Oct. 11-12 summit in Iceland. "If the president needs some face-saving devices, we can find him some."

"There can be qualification" of the laboratory demand, Arbatov said on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, appearing on the same show, said that while "there has been no letter from Mr. Gorbachev to the president since Iceland... there have been hints delivered to some of our negotiators that perhaps they could discuss further the SDI and its testing."

Slowest economic growth since 1930s

NEW YORK (AP)—So positively has the White House proclaimed its goal of 4 percent economic growth that a good many people may have accepted that figure as a reality rather than a hope.

The White House goal tends to be taken as fact in urban rather than mining and farming areas; in the Northeast rather than in the Sunbelt; in places where finance, real estate and technology are strong and heavy industry is weak.

The real annual growth rate during the Reagan administration's time in office, however, is nowhere near the goal so often referred to, measuring just 2.4 percent a year, compared with 3.1 percent for the 20th century as a whole.

It compares unfavorably with an average annual growth rate of 4.5 percent for the decade of the 1940s, and a rate of 3.8 percent in the 1960s.

In fact, it relates favorably with only two decades so far in this century: From 1911 through 1920, when expansion averaged only 1.5 percent a year; and the 1930s, the depression decade, when growth averaged but 2 percent.

Wright Investors' Service, which has one of the private sector's largest business data bases, produced these figures in support of its contention that the Federal Reserve must raise its economic growth targets.

But the economic assumptions of growth, and the numbers that belie those assumptions, offer insight into other aspects of economic life as well. Into why, for example, the once-roaring stock market came to such a sudden stop.

In an oblique way, they also underscore the size and obstreperousness of today's economic problems.

PLASTIC LENSES

For some people, the word "plastic" denotes anything that is cheap, inferior, and artificial. With many items this may be true; but in the case of plastic eyeglass lenses, this could not be further from the mark.

First of all, the material used to make these lenses is optically just as good as hardened glass. It is also four times as impact resistant and far safer to wear. Even if a strong enough blow causes breakage, the pieces are not sharp and have little penetrating force.

Plastic lenses are also considerably lighter than glass, and they do not fog up as readily. Perhaps the only important drawback to using plastic eyeglass lenses is that they are a little more susceptible to getting scratched. Therefore you have to be somewhat more careful and conscious about how you handle them.

It's worth thinking about. While plastic may not be the perfect material for every modern application, it certainly makes sense when it comes to eyeglasses.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment...No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persis-

Fall spraying critical to fruit tree health

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

Fall is often the time when fruit tree care is forgotten or neglected, but it's a critical time for controlling many peach and plum tree diseases to insure a good crop next year.

With the arrival of fall, there's often a tendency to forget our peach and plum trees that served us so well last summer.

By applying a fungicide now, you can stop or reduce three of the six diseases that attack peach and plum trees in Texas. These are peach leaf curl, bacterial leaf spot and bacterial canker.

Puckered and distorted peach tree leaves that were either bright red or light green in diseased areas last spring were due to peach leaf curl fungus. The only time to effectively control this disease is in the fall with a copper-containing fungicide such as Docide 101.

Timing of the fall spray is critical for effective control and for avoiding tree damage. Copper is a metal and may cause severe defoliation unless applied correctly.

Spray when 70 percent of the leaves have fallen off the tree. Spraying too early will cause leaf shed or cause the spray to be ineffective later.

Bacterial leaf spot and bacterial canker can be partially controlled by fall spraying with a copper fungicide. But again, it's important to spray at the right time to prevent foliage burn.

Bacterial leaf spot affects both fruit and foliage. The infection causes fruit to crack and leaves develop angular spots which drop out. Bacterial canker will kill trees slowly. Infected trees will have gum or was forming on the trunk and main limbs.

Fall spraying is important to the health and production of fruit trees. There's no other time when 50 percent of peach and plum tree diseases can be controlled with one spray.

FALL IS TREE PLANTING TIME

Fall is a beautiful season in many ways and it's the time of the year when you can add to the beauty of your own little "piece of nature".

Fall is an ideal planting season for most ground covers, vines, shrubs and trees. Here's why.

The most critical aspect of any transplant effort is for the plant to re-establish an effective system of feeder roots before it's subjected to severe stress. By planting in the fall, new plants have several cool, leisurely months during which to proliferate new feeder roots before the rigors of summer heat and drought set in.

In fact, research indicates that planting now will give plants almost a full growing season advantage over planting next spring. Furthermore, fall planted materials will have enough feeder root development by spring to be able to effectively use spring application of fertilizer for even faster growth.

Fall is also a good time to purchase landscape plants because individual specimens can be rated on the clarity and brilliance of their fall colors.

Finally, nursery and garden center personnel usually have more time now to answer questions and help with specific landscape concerns than during the spring rush.

To get your landscaping project off to a good start, select some authoritative books on do-it-yourself home landscaping. Most homeowners don't realize how large many trees and shrubs can get and, as a result, they plant too many, too close together and thus dwarf the house.

Next, choose tough, low-maintenance, pest-resistant plants that are adapted to local environmental conditions.

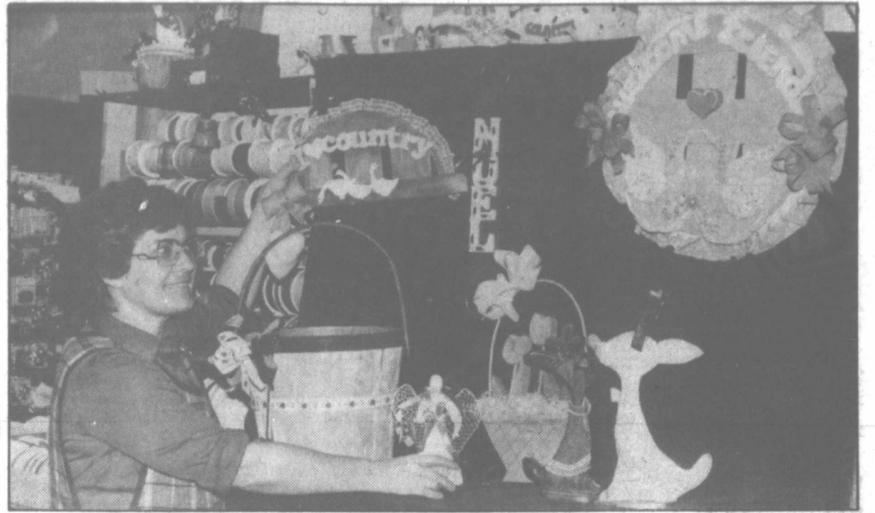

Smart homeowners will avoid poorly-adapted, troublesome or pest ridden plants so common in today's marketplace. Arizona ash, sycamore, cottonwood, poplar, umbrella tree or chinaberry, silver maple, tree-of-heaven, arborvitae and euonymus fall into this category.

When planting, dig generous holes, backfill with an open, well-drained growing mix, and mulch the soil surface with 6-8 inches of dry grass clippings, leaves, straw or other organic material to moderate soil temperature. Water regularly throughout the fall and winter.

If you plant trees or shrubs that have been in containers for some period of time, check the root growth. Make sure you do not plant anything that has roots growing in a circular manner. Roots are intended to grow straight and should be pruned to allow them to be straightened out in the hole they are planted in.

To make your landscaping venture a smashing success, remember three things: enlightened planning; proper plant selection and lots of tender loving care.

Early Christmas ideas

Jan Coffee displays some of the Christmas crafts suggestions she will be demonstrating at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Lovett Memorial Library auditorium. Coffee will be presenting her ideas at the Christmas in October program sponsored as a public service by the Friends of the Library. There is no charge for attendance.

Library seeks tutors to help with adult literacy instruction

Persons interested in helping tutor illiterate or semi-literate adults to learn to read are encouraged to attend a tutor workshop in Pampa this weekend.

The Amarillo Area Adult Literacy Council (AAALC) will be offering the workshop on Friday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Lovett Memorial Library.

The workshop is a joint effort between the AAALC and Friends of the Library, Pampa Retired Teachers Association and the Altrusa Club of Pampa.

There will be no registration fee for the workshop. Persons interested in attending, however, should fill out and return registration forms printed in the Sunday and Tuesday issues of The Pampa News this week or call the library at 665-3981.

Trainers for the workshop will be Bev McMahan and Ronnie Arnold. Interested participants should contact Dan Snider at the library. Friends of the Library

President Nancy Hill at 669-3467 or the AAALC office at 1-371-5435.

The workshop is the initial effort toward developing an adult literacy program in Pampa. Tutoring will be individualized, one-on-one training, with students' names held in strictest confidence, Snider said.

The major thrust now is toward obtaining teachers willing to assist with the program. The AAALC will provide the Laubach system manuals and workbooks.

The Friends are serving as the main sponsor for getting the program underway, with the Pampa Retired Teachers Association and the Altrusa Club as co-sponsors. After the project is organized, a governing board will probably be selected to offer continued guidance for the tutoring program.

Snider said the students probably will be obtained by word-of-mouth or be recommendations from organizations, friends, family members, churches or other avenues.

"We're already getting calls from people wanting to be taught to read," he said.

Snider said recent television programs and commercials have created an interest among adults wanting to learn to read. The local project is an effort to reach those Pampa community residents who need the assistance to become more literate members of society.

Hill stressed that one need not be a certified teacher to participate in the program. Anyone who has a desire to help teach others is welcome to be a part of the program.

The tutoring sessions initially will be held at the library, with the tutor and the student arranging times that are convenient to both of them, she said.

The AAALC is providing the initial funding to begin the program with assistance from the state. The Friends are helping with the costs of the workshop personnel.

Five students needed for study skills seminar

At least five more students are needed to register for a study skills seminar from 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, at First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson. Wednesday is deadline for registration.

"Learning Unlimited" is a seminar on study skills for middle school and high school students. A variety of students, from the gifted to learning disabled, can benefit from the course, say the authors Nancy Benzon and Susan Rolfe of Richardson.

However, in order for the women to come to Pampa to teach the seminar, a minimum of 20 students must be registered for the course. A $50 registration fee includes the book written by the two women, Learning How to Learn, which sells for $20 retail.

The two educators offer studying tips such as scheduling study time when the student is feeling best and using flashcards as aids. Included in the seminar topics are basic organizational skills, scheduling study time, getting along with teachers, how to read and study textbooks, memory aids and handling test anxiety.

Anyone wishing to register for the seminar may call the First Christian Church at 669-3225 or come by the church office.

Nowadays Halloween means black magic and blackmail

DEAR ABBY: With Halloween nearly here again, please run those letters from readers protesting "trick or treat." Thank you.
WORRIED IN WILMINGTON

DEAR WORRIED: With pleasure. Others have also requested them:

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you. Your campaign to abolish trick or treat on Halloween is unreal. Why deny children the fun of dressing up in costumes and going from door to door to show off and collect a few treats just because a few rowdies have abused the custom?

I usually agree with you, Abby, but this time I think you were wrong to suggest ending a cherished tradition that is second only to Christmas for some children. Please let me know how the voting went.
LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: My readers voted 500-to-1 to abolish trick or treat. Please understand, I see nothing wrong with dressing children (under 12) in costumes and sending them around the neighborhood to show off and collect a modest treat, but trick or treat has escalated to extortion by teen-age hoodlums. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations for having the courage to suggest that trick or treat be abolished.

I refuse to spend my retirement money for candy or anything else kids don't need.
"I'm no Scrooge, but each year on Halloween, I turn off my lights and hide upstairs, reading by flashlight until the dread hours of trick or treat are over."
W.K.H., LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for condemning trick or treat. It's high time somebody did.
A few years ago I opened my door to a band of trick-or-treaters and

Dear Abby

gave them some good apples. They took them, threw them on my lawn and started to threaten me, so I quickly shut the door and called the sheriff. I was told, "It's only a game. It's Halloween!"

The next morning my lovely white brick wall had been spray-painted red and my windows had been pelted with eggs. When I told my neighbors I was outraged, they said I was "un-American."

Please run that column every year, Abby.
S.M.F. IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I agree that trick or treat should be abolished. When our children were small, we followed the crowd and went along with it. When they came home after touring the neighborhood, there would be squabbles over which sibling had the better "haul." Much of what they brought home gathered dust until Christmas. Then it was thrown out.

Each year Halloween grew increasingly repugnant to us. As you say, "It's legalized blackmail" — a poor concept to instill in children. Finally after several years of dreading Oct. 31, I thought, "Why should I go against my principles to follow the sheep?" So, instead, on Halloween we took our children to a restaurant for a festive dinner.

They never felt deprived, and I hope they respect us for holding out against a bad custom. It's a shame more parents don't put down a firm foot and behave like responsible guardians.

MOTHER OF SIX

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column against trick or treat, I am hoping more people will do something to end this potentially dangerous custom. Last year when I was president of the PTA, we had one big Halloween party for all the students and their siblings. Out of 400 students, 375 attended. Over 75 parents volunteered to chaperone, and we had more donations of food than we knew what to do with.

It was a huge success! The party ended at 6 p.m., and to ensure that everybody went straight home afterward, our principal made random phone calls to the kids' homes, and if they answered the phone they won a prize donated by the many generous merchants in our area.

This is our second year, and I hope it will always be a tradition at the Alleghany School — Pride of Lindenhurst!
LISA PIGNATARO, NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Hearing Things," who kept hearing music in his head, caught my attention because I am familiar with that problem. A friend who worked as a researcher in the Library of Congress once told me of an elderly man who, out of desperation, had traveled some distance to the library to find a solution to that maddening problem. The man, who was intelligent and sane, had been hearing, note for note, the musical performances that he had heard in his youth. He rather enjoyed the music, though many thought him crazy to sit in his chair, smile, and tap his foot in time with the "music."

This condition is not rare; most people who experience it simply don't mention it for fear of being thought "nuts."

MANY-PURPOSE ROOMS

In the old days, each room in a home usually had only one specific use, but one of the major trends in home furnishings has been to get more out of every one of your rooms.

Although a larger room is easier to work with, you can also make a small room a multi-purpose room, and we can help you.

In a previous column, we mentioned how you could get more uses out of your bedroom—but you don't have to stop there. When you think about it, every room in your home is a candidate for increased usage and enjoyability. The right tables and seating pieces can help you add a hobby or game corner here, or a refreshment and serving corner there or make more use of a spare room, etc.

By doing this, you're really adding more space to your home without having to build extra rooms.

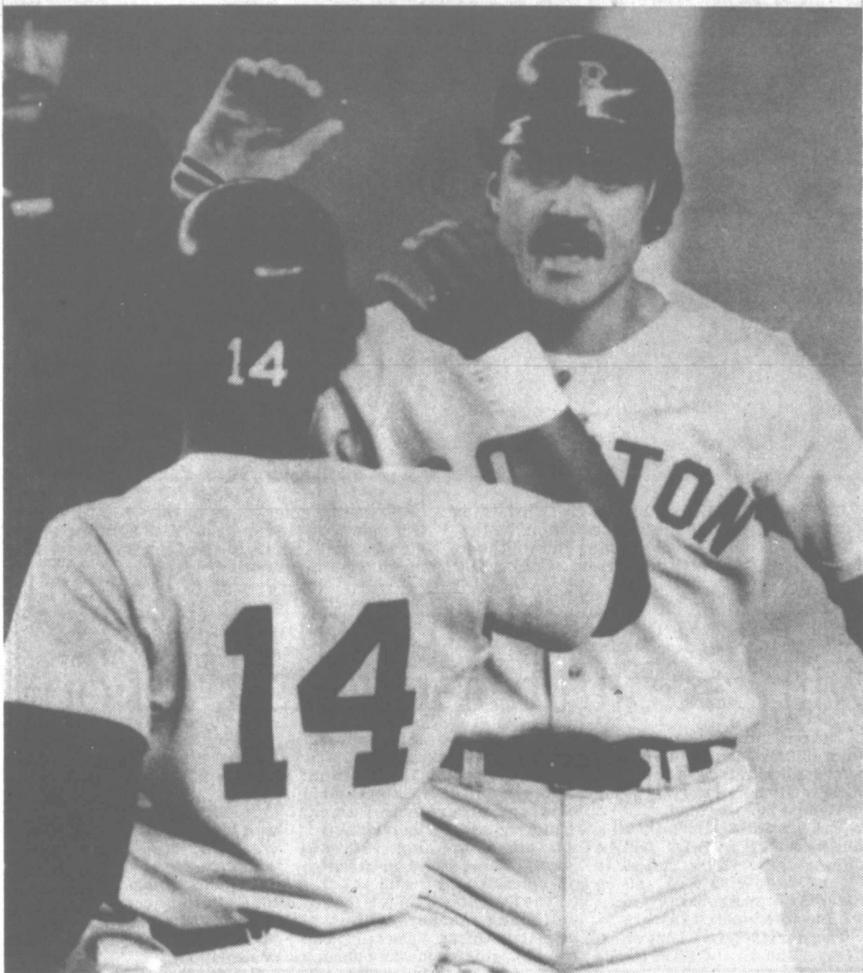

The key to this challenge is the selection of furniture, and then the placement of that furniture for its varied uses.

Don't forget that you can make rooms more useful as well as more beautiful, and we invite you to come in for a good selection and helpful ideas.

Baking beans Batman! Sox sweep at Shea

Boston's Dwight Evans is congratulated by teammate Jim Rice (14) following a two-run homer in the fifth inning of the Red Sox' 9-3 win over New York Sunday night.

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Now, maybe only a classic Red Sox collapse can keep Boston from winning the World Series.

The Red Sox, with a history draped in failure, kept rewriting that familiar script Sunday night by beating Dwight Gooden and the heavily favored New York Mets 9-3 for a shocking two-game sweep at Shea Stadium.

"You're not going to see any of us doing cartwheels," said Boston ace Roger Clemens, who was hit hard himself, so hard that he didn't stay around long enough to get the win. "It is a good feeling to be 2-0, though, since the Mets didn't think we should have even showed up."

Many of the 55,063 fans who made the trip to Shea started leaving after the seventh inning, shaking their heads in disbelief. Even in New England, where partisans root for the best and brace for the worst, no one thought this would happen. Maybe, but only maybe, the Red Sox thought it.

"Not a darned thing surprised me," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "People are finding out we're a pretty good ballclub."

Dwight Evans and Dave Henderson lined home runs that highlighted an 18-hit attack — two short of a World Series record — and sent Boston back to Fenway Park for Game 3 Tuesday night. Then it will be time to break out Don Baylor, the designated hitter not allowed in National League parks.

"The Red Sox haven't won it since 1918 when Babe Ruth pitched. Everyone thought we'd choke," winning pitcher Steve Crawford said.

Since that Woodrow Wilson-era triumph, Boston has gone on to lose the seventh game of the World Series in 1946, 1967 and 1975, and blew a one-game American League East playoff in 1978 to the hated Yankees.

There have also been several runs at a pennant in July, only to die in August's heat.

But this year may be different. The Red Sox, down to their last strike, rallied from a 3-1 deficit in the playoffs against California and now a choke may be the only thing that can stop them.

Just once — last year's Kansas City club — has a team lost the first two games at home of the World Series and recovered to win the championship.

"We know it can be done. These two games have been uncharacteristic for us," said Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez, who made the most surprising play of the night.

Hernandez, who has won eight straight Gold Gloves, threw away Clemens' bunt trying for a force-out at second base, keying a three-run third inning.

The play symbolized the game for Mets. Gooden, their top pitcher, struggled the entire night and left after five innings, allowing six runs.

"Not too good, not good at all," Gooden said, assessing his performance.

Boston's Clemens, pitching for the third straight time on three days' rest, made his shortest outing of the season, except a game in which a line drive finished him.

Clemens, who had never worked on three days' rest in his major-league career until doing it in the playoffs, gave up three runs on five hits in 4 1-3 innings.

The Red Sox made up for it with their hitting and fielding.

Third baseman Wade Boggs, who led the major leagues in batting and had a pair of run-scoring doubles, did both in the third inning. He hit an RBI double after the error by Hernandez, and singles by Marty Barrett and Bill Buckner made it 3-0.

The Mets scored twice in their half of the inning on singles by Rafael Santana, Gooden and Backman, and would have gotten more except for Boggs. He threw out Hernandez after his hard grounder caromed off Clemens' leg, and made a diving stop and throw when Gary Carter followed with a grounder in the hole.

Henderson led off the fourth with a home run, almost the same distance in left-center field as his playoff-saving homer at Anaheim.

In the bottom of the fourth, Mets' manager Davey Johnson faced the kind of managerial decision that games without the DH produce. Trailing 4-2, Gooden was scheduled to bat with two outs and runners on first and second.

Gooden, allowed to bat, grounded out and then Johnson saw what happened. His shaky starter gave up a leadoff single to Jim Rice and a homer by Evans.

A walk and single by Hernandez knocked out Clemens in the fifth, and Crawford allowed an RBI single to Gary Carter that got the Mets and their crowd stirring. But that was all they would get off Crawford and Bob Stanley, who finished with three scoreless innings for a save.

The Red Sox added two runs in the seventh on five straight singles, the last two RBI hits by Henderson and Spike Owen off Rick Aguilera, and scored another in the ninth on Boggs' double against lefty Sid Fernandez.

Boston casts somber shadow on Series, New York

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe it's the chilly October evenings, with climate more suited to football than baseball.

Maybe it's watching these games bundled up in a sweater and parka with a wool cap.

Maybe it's because the summer game was never supposed to be played in winter weather.

Somehow, though, something is missing from this World Series. For two nights at Shea Stadium, there was no electricity in the air, no anticipation, no nothing.

There was not a single high five or a curtain call all weekend. Can this really be the home of the New York Mets, baseball's celebration experts?

Admittedly, the World Series traditionally attracts a corporate crowd and not the Bleacher Bums who show up during the regular season. Still, you'd expect some zest, some enthusiasm.

Instead, Shea was like a cathedral, mourning two straight New York losses.

Except for the temperatures, the first two games of the World Series might as well have been the Cubs and the Pirates in August for all the juice they generated. They just were not very memorable games.

Saturday night's opener was a 1-0 snoozer, the only run scoring on an error. Yet it lacked the tension that most one-run games routinely offer. There's not much excitement when one team manages five singles and the other guys get four.

Sunday night's second game was a 9-3 Boston blowout which droned on for three hours, 36 minutes of NBC's valuable prime time. It was characterized best by the seventh inning, when five straight singles produced two runs as the lumbering Red Sox advanced ever so cautiously around the bases, 90 feet at a time.

The sequence would never make it on The Cosby Show, which moves at a considerably faster pace.

By the time the Red Sox were through, many fans who had paid $40 a pop if they bought their seats legally, and considerably more than that if they shopped with scalpers, were heading for the exits. They sensed quite correctly that they wouldn't miss much with an early departure.

The energy quotient — especially of the Mets — has been zero. Listed as the heaviest Series favorites in 36 years, they are today's longshots, losers in the first two games at home. Only Kansas City last year has overcome that burden.

The Mets have looked like they could use some vitamin pills. Maybe it's just that they're not used to being up so late at night this late in the season.

The World Series, baseball's showcase event, once was played in the advancing shadows of autumn. That was part of the romance of the event.

Kids would hide portable radios in school desks to keep up with the action and then rush home to see the end of the games. It was an American tradition, to borrow a network phrase.

Television bought out that package long ago, waving fancy rights fees under baseball's nose for night games in the Series. So now, the sport which proudly markets itself as family fare, starts its most important games at a hour when most youngsters are headed for bed.

Sometimes, it even gets cold at night in October. When the Baltimore Orioles and Pittsburgh Pirates donned ski caps, entirely appropriate haberdashery for frigid pre-game warmups during the 1979 Series, they were reprimanded by management, which considered that a negative image.

Dwight Gooden and Roger Clemens, Cy Young past and Cy Young future, looked like impostors in Sunday night's breezes. Neither made it beyond the fifth inning, and what should have been a tingling pitching duel ended up as a shambles of a game with little form and not much to recommend it for video libraries.

Now the Mets and Red Sox move to Fenway Park, and maybe the charm of that old ballyard and the enthusiasm of the Boston fans, sensing an end to the team's history of frustrations, will alter the flow of this sleepy Series.

Let's hope so. It certainly needs something.

Aussies seek Cup defender; Courageous IV calls it quits

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Kookaburra III easily outdistanced Australia III today in the third day of the series to select a 12-meter yacht to defend for Australia in the America's Cup.

Kookaburra III chalked up its third victory in as many days as it trounced Australia III by four minutes, 30 seconds. It was an impressive victory for skipper Iain Murray, the boat's designer. Australia III won the 12-meter world championships here earlier in the year.

Kookaburra III took Gordon Lucas and Australia III by nine seconds at the start and was 1:18 ahead at the first windward mark. Lucas was able to gain 15 seconds on the downwind leg, but from that point it was all Murray's race.

Alan Bond's syndicate received a little compensation as Australia IV defeated Kookaburra II by 20 seconds. But it was little consolation as the new Ben Lexcon-designed boat trailed at the fifth mark by 10 seconds, and only a bad spinnaker set allowed Colin Beashel and Australia IV to regain the lead.

Kookaburra II was flying a protest flag from its transom as the race ended. The protest will not be heard until Tuesday.

The exact cause of Kookaburra's spinnaker problems is unknown, but the giant balloon sail appeared to be snagged on the spinnaker pole. When the crew finally got the sail up gallons of water poured from it.

In the other race, South Australia broke into the victory column with a victory over Steak 'n Kidney by 1:12. It was the third straight defeat for the Sydney boat skippered by Fred Neil.

Lexcon, who designed Australia II, the boat which won the America's Cup from the New York Yacht Club, must be puzzled at the performance of his latest boat. It was designed for heavy weather, and the race was held in winds of 15 to 18 at the start building to 24 knots later in the day.

Tuesday the two Kookaburra boats meet each other, while Australia IV meets Steak 'n Kidney and Australia III battles South Australia.

Courageous IV, the sentimental favorite among the challengers, has dropped out of the quest to return the America's Cup to the United States, the boat's owners said today.

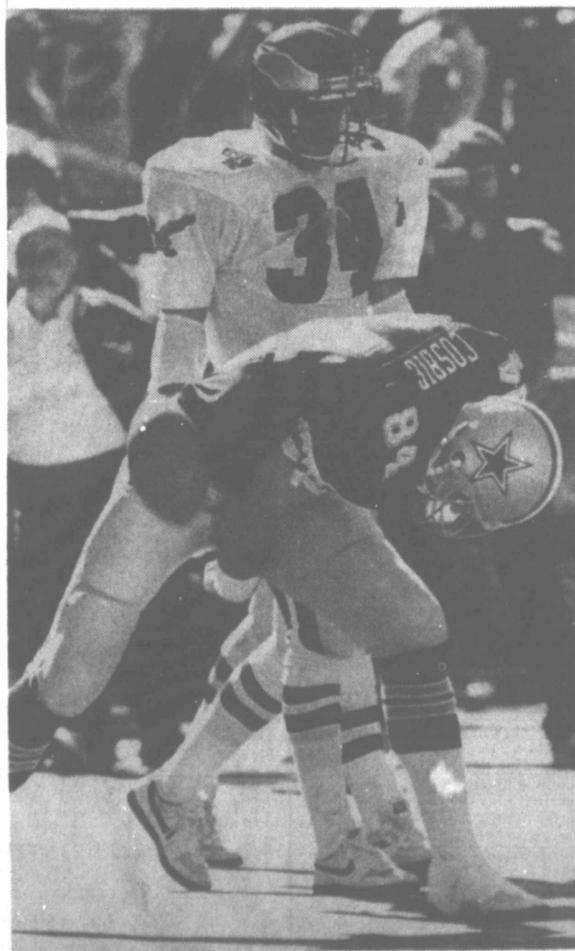

Leonard Green, head of the Courageous syndicate, announced that as of Oct. 30 the 30-month Courageous challenge, sponsored by the Yale Corinthian Yacht club will end.

Norman S. Rosenblum, administrative coordinator, said efforts to purchase Stars & Stripes 85, Dennis Conner's reserve boat, failed because the price could not be met.

Rosenblum said the Stars & Stripes syndicate offered very favorable terms, but unless an "angel" comes forth before Oct. 29... "and we all know that miracles rarely happen."

Both Rosenblum and skipper Dave Viorer said that Courageous, which twice successfully defended the cup for the United States, and was involved in three other challenges, had become outdated and was not equal competition for the newer 12-meter yachts.

Courageous IV won only one of its 12 first-round matches, and was clearly outclassed by its speedier rivals, except at the starts when Viorer won a majority.

Dallas flees Philly with Septien's save

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It took two old pros to rescue the Dallas Cowboys.

Rafael Septien, 32, a 10-year NFL veteran, came on with six seconds remaining and kicked a 38-yard field goal to give the Cowboys a 17-14 victory Sunday over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Quarterback Danny White, 34, in his 11th NFL season, limped off the bench to make a key play that set up the fifth game-winning kick of Septien's career.

White, the Cowboys' regular quarterback, has been sidelined with an injury that he said could have ended his career. But he came in after starter Steve Pelluer injured his throwing hand on a 21-yard scramble in the winning drive.

"There is no question I was not 100 percent," said White, whose 18-yard completion to fullback Timmy Newsome moved the ball to the Philadelphia 18.

"It's a very delicate injury," said White, who described it as a pulled muscle which runs from the knee to the groin to the lower back. "There was a lot of swelling and bleeding."

White was in for only six plays — one in the first half — but was in when it was time to stand up and be counted as the Cowboys moved to 5-2 and the Eagles fell to 2-5.

The Cowboys' defense collected 10 sacks, including 3½ by defensive end Jim Jeffcoat, two by strong safety Bill Bates and 1½ by tackle Randy White.

Dallas took a 7-0 lead on its first possession of the game on a seven-play, 76-yard drive capped by Pelluer's 22-yard TD strike to tight end Doug Cosbie.

That lead held until halftime as Philadelphia managed only 62 first-half yards, 59 of them rushing.

But the Eagles came to life when Coach Buddy Ryan relieved starting quarterback Matt Cavanaugh — who was filling in for the injured Ron Jaworski — with third-stringer Randall Cunningham.

Cunningham directed a five-play, 80-yard third period drive, scoring on a 14-yard scramble to tie the game at 7.

After the Eagles missed with a 50-yard field goal attempt, Pelluer led a two-play 68-yard scoring drive. He hit wide receiver Tony Hill for 53 yards to the 15, and Dorsett ran it over on the next play for a 14-7 Cowboys lead.

The Eagles came back to reach the Dallas 13, and missed on a 31-yard field goal.

Then, Cunningham took Philadelphia 51 yards on five plays to tie it at 14 on a 15-yard scoring pass to Mike Quick with 7:19 to play.

Septien said he told himself after that, "I'm going to win this game."

"I put myself in a mental position and after that just let it flow," said Septien, who said he didn't know the kick was good immediately because of a crosswind. "I didn't feel right away that the kick was good."

The field goal was Septien's 172nd in 244 attempts over 10 years. In the fourth quarter with Dallas tied or behind by three points or less, he has made 9 of 13.

Ryan said his club "played as hard as hell and also as dumb as hell."

Vikings hand Bears first loss

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Minnesota Vikings have never won the Super Bowl — but they did all right against recent Super Bowl winners the last two weeks.

Last week, the Vikings pulled out a 27-24 overtime victory over the San Francisco 49ers, the NFL champion two seasons ago. And Sunday, the Vikings gained a measure of revenge with a 23-7 defeat of the defending Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears.

NFL Roundup

"Today, we were like maniacs. We were crazy out there," said Minnesota's rookie defensive end Gerald Robinson, whose 2½ sacks helped the Vikings shock the Jim McMahon-less Bears and hand them their first loss of the year.

With the victory, the Vikings, 5-2, moved within one game of the NFC Central Division-leading Bears, 6-1. The triumph broke a six-game losing streak against the Bears and avenged a 23-0 beating by Chicago two weeks ago.

"We were whipped soundly," Bears Coach Mike Ditka conceded.

While the Bears were losing for the first time this season, Green Bay tasted victory for the first time with a 17-14 upset of Cleveland.

Elsewhere, Atlanta and San Francisco played to a 10-10 tie; New England blanked Pittsburgh 34-0; New Orleans routed Tampa Bay 38-7; Washington clipped St. Louis 28-21; the Los Angeles Raiders edged Miami 30-28; Cincinnati trimmed Houston 31-28; Buffalo turned back Indianapolis 24-13; the Los Angeles Rams beat Detroit 14-10; Seattle trimmed the New York Giants 17-12 and Kansas City nipped San Diego 42-41.

In tonight's game, the Denver Broncos visit the New York Jets.

Packers 17, Browns 14
Randy Wright passed for 277 yards, including the game-winning 47-yard touchdown to Phillip Epps, as Green Bay rallied from a 14-3 halftime deficit to beat Cleveland.

49ers 10, Falcons 10, OT
Atlanta's Sylvester Stamps caught a short pass from David Archer for a 39-yard tying touchdown with 1:33 left in regulation and the Falcons and 49ers battled to the first tie in nearly two years.

The last tie was on Nov. 4, 1984, when Philadelphia and Detroit played to a 23-23 draw. It was only the ninth overtime tie in NFL history.

Patriots 34, Steelers 0
Steve Grogan passed for three touchdowns to lead New England over Pittsburgh. The Patriots raced to a 24-0 lead before the Steelers managed a first down.

The Patriots' defense scored one touchdown, set up two others with turnovers and constantly pressured Pittsburgh rookie quarterback Bobby Brister as the Steelers suffered their worst loss since they moved into Three Rivers Stadium in 1970.

Saints 38, Bucs 7
Rueben Mayes rushed for 172 yards and two touchdowns, leading New Orleans over Tampa Bay. The Saints scored on their first three possessions of the game, opening a 17-0 advantage by intermission.

Redskins 28, Cardinals 21
Jay Schroeder, working against the NFL's top-rated pass defense, threw for three touchdowns and 232 yards to lead Washington over St. Louis.

The Redskins, 6-1, scored three touchdowns in their first four possessions to take a 21-0 lead midway through the second quarter.

Raiders 30, Dolphins 28
Marcus Allen ran for 96 yards and scored three touchdowns to lead the Los Angeles Raiders past struggling Miami for their fourth straight victory.

Allen rushed for touchdowns on two 2-yard runs and caught a 16-yard scoring pass from Marc Wilson as Los Angeles improved its record to 4-3 and dealt Miami, 2-5, its fourth loss in the last five weeks.

Bengals 31, Oilers 28
James Brooks scored on a 21-yard touchdown run with 43 seconds to play, capping a desperate drive that led Cincinnati over Houston.

Houston, 1-6, had taken the lead just 43 seconds earlier when linebacker Robert Lyles picked up a fumble and ran 93 yards untouched for a touchdown and a 28-24 lead. But the Bengals furiously covered 70 yards in five plays, capped by Brooks' second touchdown of the game.

Bills 24, Colts 13
Jim Kelly threw touchdown passes of six and 13 yards to Andre Reed, leading Buffalo over hapless Indianapolis.

The Colts, the only team in the NFL without a victory, trailed from the beginning after Randy McMillan fumbled the ball on Indianapolis' first possession and Buffalo cornerback Rodney Bellinger returned it 15 yards for a touchdown. The Colts entered the game having lost an NFL-high 13 fumbles.

Rams 14, Lions 10
Nolan Cromwell returned an interception 80 yards for a touchdown and Eric Dickerson ran for 130 yards to build his NFL rushing lead as the Rams held off the Lions. Dickerson, who has 860 yards, scored the Rams' other touchdown on a 1-yard run, as Los Angeles took a 14-0 first-quarter lead and held off a late rally by Detroit.

Seahawks 17, Giants 12
Seattle turned an interception of a pass by Phil Simms into a 1-yard touchdown run by Curt Warner five minutes into the fourth quarter and held on to beat the Giants.

The Seahawks ended a five-game winning streak for the Giants and knocked them out of a first-place tie with Washington in the NFC East.

Chiefs 42, Chargers 41
Backup quarterback Bill Kenney rallied Kansas City for two second-half touchdowns.

Floyd pars to take Disney golf tourney

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP)—After making a 20-foot birdie putt on the final hole of regulation to force a three-way playoff at the Disney World Oldsmobile Golf Classic, Ray Floyd had every right to think it would take another super shot to win it.

But Floyd, who defeated Lon Hinkle and Mike Sullivan on the first hole of sudden death Sunday to take the $90,000 first prize, was wrong.

"It isn't often you win a playoff with a par putt," Floyd said after recording his 21st career PGA victory.

Floyd, Hinkle and Sullivan concluded regulation play over the 7,190-yard Magnolia course by shooting 1-under-par 71s for a 13-under total of 275 for four rounds.

Floyd, the reigning U.S. Open champion, sank the tying putt on No. 18 just after Sullivan carded an 18-foot birdie on the same hole to tie Hinkle.

On the playoff hole, the 203-yard, par-3 15th, Floyd and Hinkle hit their tee shots into the bunker on the left side. Sullivan was wide to the right.

Sullivan chipped to within 10 feet. Floyd's bunker shot stopped about six feet from the hole and Hinkle's was three feet away. Sullivan missed, Floyd dropped his putt and Hinkle ran his past the hole.

"I felt really fortunate," Floyd said. "I never expected Lon to miss that putt."

"I was fortunate just to be in it at the end," Floyd added. "I hit it well the first seven holes but had a streak where I blocked out... I put it back together, though, and I was proud of that."

Floyd, who won his first PGA tournament at the 1963 St. Petersburg Open, boosted his earnings for the year to $365,948 and $3,234,900 for his career.

Floyd, Hinkle and Sullivan had started the final day tied for second, two strokes behind Payne Stewart.

Stewart dropped two strokes to par and finished in a three-way tie for fourth with Pat McGowan and Gary Koch.

Hinkle, who has won three times in 15 years, and Sullivan, who has one tour victory, earned $44,000 each from a total purse of $556,000.

UIL may OK girl gridders

AUSTIN (AP)—The main item on the agenda of today's meeting of the University Interscholastic League legislative council was a proposal that would allow girls to play junior high football in Texas.

The UIL constitution now restricts football in junior high to boys, but the UIL policy committee unanimously recommended Sunday the deletion of words in the document that make only boys eligible.

The UIL legislative council had three options today. It could accept the recommendation, reject it, or put the issue on the ballot for a referendum vote.

Even with approval today, the proposal still must be OK'd by the State Board of Education before it could go into effect.

The policy committee's action on Sunday was prompted by a lawsuit filed recently challenging the 38-year-old rule that has banned girls from playing football.

The suit was filed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the parents of Tina Trejo, an Austin eighth-grader who tried out for her junior high football team this fall. Trejo made the team and has been playing under a restraining order.

The Policy Committee decided against recommending the elimination of all references to the sex of participants in seventh and eighth grade football.

The UIL's decision on the recommendation would not affect participation in high school football.

Mozambican president dies in South African plane crash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Samora Machel of Mozambique, a guerrilla commander who led his country to independence, died in an overnight plane crash, the presidents of South Africa and Kenya said today.

By mid-afternoon, Machel's death had not been announced in Mozambique. In Maputo, the capital, state radio reported the plane carrying the Marxist president home from Zambia was long overdue and that a plane crash near the borders of South Africa, Mozambique and Swaziland was being investigated.

The Radio Mozambique announcement was accompanied by solemn music.

A statement from the office of South African President P.W. Botha said Botha expressed "deep regret and profound shock at the death of President Samora Machel."

Machel, 53, had been president of Mozambique since its independence from Portugal in 1975. Before taking up arms against colonial forces in 1964, he had been a nurse at a hospital in the capital.

The South African announcement said Machel was among 38 people aboard a Soviet-built twin-engine Tupolev 134A jet that crashed in eastern South Africa during the night en route from Zambia to Maputo.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said earlier that four people had survived the crash were being treated for injuries.

In Nairobi, Kenya, President Daniel arap Moi, speaking at a Kenyan holiday ceremony, interrupted his speech to announce Machel's death. "I just received this message a minute ago," said Moi, who asked the audience attending the ceremony to stand for a minute of silence.

A senior Mozambican journalist based in Johannesburg said interim leadership of Mozambique would likely be exercised by Prime Minister Mario Machungo and Marcelino dos Santos, the No. 2 man in the ruling FRELIMO party after Machel.

Constitutionally, the president of the party is also president of Mozambique.

Speculation on a possible successor to Machel centered on Foreign Minister Joaquim Chissano, 47, said the journalist, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In March 1984, Machel signed a peace treaty with South Africa, long Mozambique's enemy, to the dismay of some black African leaders. The accord did not end the debilitating conflict with anti-Marxist guerrillas whose campaign increased hardships and famine in the countryside.

After a brief honeymoon with South Africa, relations deteriorated badly and Mozambican officials said they believed South Africa still was aiding the rebels, whose attacks intensified.

In recent weeks, Mozambican journalists suggested publicly that South Africa might want to kill Machel.

However, there was no immediate indication of any foul play in the plane crash.

A South African civilian aviation specialist, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the plane appeared to have been far off course when it crashed about 45 miles west of Maputo, just inside the South African border. He said any flight from Zambia to Maputo normally would have approached Maputo directly from the north.

The weather was bad Sunday night, with thunderstorms in the area and low clouds, and twin-engine turboprops like the one that crashed are poorly equipped for such weather conditions, the expert said.

Soviet emigres meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Yuri Orlov leaned back and smiled, relishing the chance to freely exchange views with fellow scientist David Goldfarb, who was also allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union this month.

"No one is listening!" Orlov exclaimed, laughing and pointing to the ceiling to indicate that the hospital waiting room where he sat on Sunday was free of electronic eavesdropping devices.

Orlov, a human-rights activist, spent about a half-hour speaking in animated Russian with Goldfarb, a Jew who reportedly refused to help the KGB frame American journalist Nicholas Daniloff.

The two men had heard about each other years ago through the intelligence grapevine, but government pressure had made it impossible for them to meet in the Soviet Union, said Goldfarb.

Even so, said Orlov, "We are friends."

"I knew about him at least 15 years," Goldfarb said of Orlov. "My personal opinion is that after (Nobel Prize-winning physicist Andrei) Sakharov, he is the most important figure in the development of the human rights movement. I admire his courage."

Goldfarb, 67, a geneticist, arrived in New York with his wife, Cecelia, on Thursday evening, more than seven years after he first asked to leave the Soviet Union for Israel. He is undergoing treatment at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center for diabetes and heart trouble.

"I never lost hope," said Goldfarb, who sat in a wheelchair beside his hospital bed. Asked if he considered himself a survivor, he laughed and replied, "It's from the Lord. It's luck."

Orlov, 62, a physicist, was released along with Daniloff in exchange for Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet employee of the United Nations who had been arrested Aug. 23 in New York on spy charges.

Contra aid not a cutting issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of the Reagan administration's policy toward Nicaragua are raising new questions now that a U.S. citizen is being brought before a tribunal in Managua to face charges he was involved in a covert effort to supply rebel forces.

Even though this is happening on the eve of congressional elections, there is no sign that aid to the Contra forces is an issue moving voters.

The political question is how much longer U.S. involvement with the rebels trying to overthrow the Sandinista government will remain overshadowed by other concerns.

Perhaps, like the debate over Star Wars, President Reagan's plan for a space-based missile defense system, it won't become a political issue until the presidential election of 1988.

There is no clear sign yet whether the downing of a supply plane in Nicaragua will accelerate the issue of Contra aid to the forefront of the political debate.

Dave Johnson, the Minnesota Democrat who is challenging Republican Rep. Vin Weber, has tried to make Contra aid an issue by telling farmers, "We should be supporting combines and not Contras."

Johnson's campaign manager, Bill Wendlandt, described Minnesota's 2nd Congressional District as the most agricultural in the nation and said the farmers are hurting.

When a plane carrying military supplies to the Contras was shot down over Nicaragua and two Americans were killed and one captured, administration policy in Central America once more was on Page 1.

But Wendlandt said the incident has not evoked a strong reaction in the Johnson-Weber race.

"I don't think it has a tremendous impact," he said.

Neither has Contra aid been the Panama Canal issue that conservatives had hoped.

An ABC News poll last spring said that 59 percent of people questioned thought Congress should reject Reagan's request for $100 million in aid to the Contras. The survey of 543 people also said that 52 percent disapproved of U.S. involvement in efforts to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Despite that and other surveys showing public disapproval of growing U.S. involvement in the region, both houses voted to give the president the funds he sought.

Red tide costing firms along coast

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Officials say nervous tourists and consumers are abandoning Texas beaches and fish markets as a toxic red tide continues to sweep through the state's Gulf Coast, killing millions of fish.

The Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife Marine Laboratory in Rockport said the red tide was stronger than ever last week and showed signs of resurgence in areas where it had retreated.

Red tide, the explosion of toxic microscopic organisms, has littered beaches with mounds of rotting fish since mid-September along a coastal stretch of hundreds of miles from Matagorda Bay to the Rio Grande.

Officials have closed some beaches, including those near Corpus Christi and Padre Island, while surgically masked crews have been cleaning shores.

The red tide has begun to threaten the livelihood of those who depend on seafood sales and tourism, fishermen and businessmen said.

"We can't sell because the public is scared," Corpus Christi fisherman Gabriel Bodukoglu said. "When I don't make money, I get angry. I have to eat."

Business is down 90 percent, he said. Bruce Phillips, who hawks fresh shrimp at Corpus Christi Bay, said he makes few sales these days.

"I've made $3 today," adds fisherman Jay Paul. The red tide is wiping out sales toward the end of the season, hitting budgets hard, shrimpers said. The toxin does not affect shrimp or crabs, so businesses could operate if only the tourists were there.

Any fish still healthy when caught also is safe to eat, according to state health and wildlife officials. But oysters, clams and mussels filter the toxin and retain it in their systems for weeks, creating a health hazard if eaten, officials added.

State officials have closed the oyster beds from south of Galveston Bay to the Rio Grande, and a prolonged prohibition could sink many oyster operations. The oyster season begins Nov. 1.

"We depend on oysters for Christmas money," said Benny Arispe, a shrimp and oyster fisherman near Rockport. "We oyster from the first of November. What are we going to do?" "It's all over (the) bay, dead fish stinking," Charles Ives of Aransas Pass said. "I'm 52, born and raised right in this town. I've never seen it (this bad)."
