San Antonio base probed in rebel flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez says he believes CIA-backed planes are still flying through San Antonio to supply rebel forces in Nicaragua despite two recent crashes and the ensuing controversy.

Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, charged that the crash of a cargo plane at Kelly Air Force Base Oct. 4 and that of another cargo plane in Nicaragua were part of a covert CIA-backed network to supply anti-Sandinista Contra rebels.

Gonzalez said his office has received reports that the supply flights are continuing through his home city despite the crash, which killed three civilian crewmen, and that the cargo includes crates of assault rifles.

"What might have been questionable two weeks ago today is moot because the president has signed the Continuing Resolution, which includes the $100 million to fund the Contras," Gonzalez said Thursday.

The Continuing Resolution funds most federal operations for the 1987 fiscal year.

"There's no question these airlines have been active in this area, and they can deny it, and will deny it," Gonzalez said. "Now they can say 'So what.'"

Meanwhile, investigators at the National Transportation Safety Board said they have no reason to believe there was anything unusual about the plane that crashed at Kelly.

NTSB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said preliminary indications are that an unlock brace may malfunctions similar to a faulty unlock brace.

The NTSB has said nothing has been found so far to indicate the plane was carrying anything other than its listed cargo, which included explosives used in fighter plane ejection seat systems.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a member of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, said that shortly after the crash at Kelly, he asked both the CIA and the Air Force to respond to charges of a covert arms pipeline to the Contras.

"The CIA made an inquiry and later reported back to me that they had absolutely no involvement with either the plane or its cargo."

Bentsen said the Air Force told him it contracted with Southern Air to carry out routine transport of various aircraft parts.

Squabbling divorcees hurt kids

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — More than half of divorced parents are continuing to have angry relationships for as long as five years after splitting up, and that may be harmful to their children, a study has found.

Fifty-eight percent of divorced parents are either constantly arguing or else dragging one another back to court five years after their divorces, said the study's director, Constance Ahrons of the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

Ahrons said Thursday at the annual meeting of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy that these findings differed only slightly from one year after divorce, when 63 percent of parents remain very angry with one another.

The children can suffer as a result because they end up spending less time with the parent who

Set clocks back Saturday night

WASHINGTON (AP) — Standard time returns to most of America this weekend, as clocks are turned back one hour.

The change occurs officially at 2 a.m. Sunday, although most people will simply turn their clocks back before retiring Saturday night.

A few will forget, resulting in their arrival at church or other appointments an hour early on Sunday.

Standard time remains in effect until next April 5. That return to daylight-saving time comes three weeks earlier than in the past, a change enacted by Congress this year.

The autumn switch to standard time takes place as the days gradually become shorter and less daylight is available. The change moves an hour of that light to the morning, to help see children safely to school and light the way for farmers.

Britain breaks ties with Syria

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today it was breaking diplomatic relations with Syria because of "conclusive evidence of Syrian involvement" in a terrorist plot to plant a bomb on an Israeli airliner.

The announcement was made by Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe to the House of Commons after Jordanian Nezar Hindawi was convicted and sentenced to 45 years in prison for attempting to blow up the El Al jetliner with 375 people aboard.

Syria was ordered to close its London Embassy within 14 days.

Howe announced the British Embassy in Damascus, the Syrian capital, will also be closed.

He said security surrounding the London operations of Syrian Arab Airlines were being tightened.

The foreign secretary said there was evidence Hindawi acted on orders of Syrian intelligence, traveled on a Syrian passport, met the Syrian ambassador immediately after the bomb plot was uncovered at London's Heathrow Airport and stayed in Syrian Embassy accommodations the night of the April 17 bombing attempt.

"There is conclusive evidence of Syrian official involvement with Hindawi," he said. "The whole House will be outraged by the Syrian role in this case."

Meese slammed for legal stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some legal scholars say Attorney General Edwin Meese's views on Supreme Court decisions and the Constitution would lead to chaos, while the head of the American Bar Association says Meese's position would "shake the foundations" of government.

In a speech at Tulane University, the attorney general said a Supreme Court interpretation of the Constitution "does not establish a 'supreme law of the land' that is binding on all persons and parts of government, henceforth and forevermore."

Laurence H. Tribe, a professor of constitutional law at Harvard University, said Thursday that if the attorney general's position prevailed, "every school board in America which had not been a party in a lawsuit could institute official school prayer."

"Every local government could pass a law banning abortion, and chaos would be the inevitable result," Tribe added.

But Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Meese had not been suggesting defiance of Supreme Court rulings.

Eastland said the attorney general was suggesting that other branches of government and opponents of the court's rulings should not be "shy" in "respectfully disagreeing."

Eastland said that "proper and appropriate ways of disagreeing with the Supreme Court" include seeking to have the court overturn its rulings, as has been done successfully more than 180 times in its history.

Precinct 2 candidate pledges to serve 'coloreds'

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The race to succeed David Potter as Precinct 2 justice of the peace pits a relative newcomer to Gray County politics against a 15-year-veteran trying to make a new start in a new office.

Roberts

Wayne Roberts, 32, 700 E. Craven, who narrowly won the Democratic primary over Jeanine Augustine, will face Margie Prestidge, who resigned in February after 15 years as Precinct 1 justice of the peace and moved to Pampa from Lefors to run for the position in Precinct 2.

Precinct 2 covers northwest Gray County and southeast Pampa.

Potter, a Republican, is resigning after one term in office. He lost a primary bid for Gray County commissioner to incumbent bent Ronnie Rice.

The Precinct 2 justice of the peace job is the only contested local race this year in which there is no GOP candidate.

Roberts cites his past experience as a security guard as one of his qualifications for the job. He said the schooling involved with that work will benefit him in the job and that being a security guard gave him experience in dealing and getting along with all types of people, including adults, children, "coloreds and Mexicans."

"Pampa's a good place to live, and I want to get involved with it," Roberts said, explaining why he decided to run. He said he thinks Gray County is ready for a change.

Roberts pledged to devote full time to the job and be on 24-hour call. He said he thinks the office must be "for each individual person and the businessman alike."

Roberts said being a security guard gave him experience in getting along with all types of people, including adults, children, 'coloreds and Mexicans.'

"That's more or less who the JP's working for is for the individuals and for the businessmen," he said. "I'll try to uphold the law and do my best to see that others do the same."

Prestidge, 55, 1020 E. Scott, said she realizes she faces an uphill battle as a write-in candidate but thinks she can succeed by campaigning hard between now and Nov. 4.

"I have a good feeling about it, and I have since I started it," she said.

Prestidge said she decided to run because "I think mainly I was ready for a change and then I wanted this office up here (in Pampa)."

She said her previous duties as a justice of the peace working in both Pampa and Lefors and 300 hours of training school make her the most qualified candidate for the Precinct 2 post.

Prestidge has served as president and on the board of directors of the West Texas JP Association and is still municipal judge in Lefors. She also has volunteered as a firefighter and with youth programs in Lefors.

Like her opponent, Prestidge promised to give the job her full attention and treat all those who deal with the office fairly.

Legislative study of 1987 state appropriations begin

AUSTIN (AP) — State agencies and programs created since 1976 account for $2.6 billion in the 1987 state budget, the House Appropriations Committee was told.

"This hopefully will be considered by the next Legislature," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the 69th Legislature's appropriations panel, which began work in 1985.

"Our intent in ordering this study was to determine just where and how fast our government has grown, and what we can do about it," Rudd said Thursday.

Any finding of the committee will be passed on to the new Appropriations Committee after the 70th Legislature meets in January.

The Legislative Budget Board report said the increase for new agencies and programs created in the past 10 years accounts for $602 million in general revenue of the 1987 budget.

Program expansion, state funding of pilot programs and state assumption of other programs account for the rest.

The report said the 1987 budget includes $795 million for new agencies and programs in public and higher education. This does not include 213 new degree programs approved for state senior colleges and medical schools.

In public education alone, the LBB staff said, the cost of public education in schools has grown from $1.3 billion in 1974 to $5.4 billion in 1985.

Most of the increase from $4.5 billion in 1984 to $5.4 billion came from implementing the public school reforms (HB72) passed at a special session of the Legislature in 1984.

The LBB said an example of increasing state government costs includes operation of 10 new units in the state prison system that rose from $79 million in 1979 to $414 million in 1987, an annual increase of 22.9 percent.

Rudd noted that the cost of keeping a person in the prison system has risen from about $12 a day 10 years ago to $25 to $30 a day now, for about 38,000 prisoners.

"This is what we've got to think about between now and January," Rudd said.

New guidelines set up for the inmate furlough program

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas prison officials have set up new guidelines for an inmate furlough program in the wake of complaints from sheriffs and citizens' groups that it was too lax and unsupervised.

To qualify, inmates have to be parole-eligible and state-approved trustees who have been incarcerated for at least a year, prison spokesman Charles Brown said Thursday.

The proposed guidelines also would require that inmates on five-day furloughs be present at an approved residence during certain hours and under the supervision of a furlough sponsor, he said.

Inmates serving time for sex offenses or aggravated crimes would not be eligible, Brown said.

Under the new guidelines, prison officials would continue to notify sheriffs whenever an inmate is being released to their county — a provision some sheriffs said was about to be abandoned.

"In these guidelines we have actually expanded the sheriff's notification procedures," TDC Director O.L. McCotter said.

Prison officials have submitted a final draft of a revised furlough program to the Texas State Sheriffs Association.

"The furlough program has not changed since 1979 and we are proposing to tighten it up," McCotter said. "I think what we need to do is wait until we get all the comments and see what the sheriffs association wants us to do."

Prison officials said they have received a favorable response from Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland, one of several sheriffs who complained about the current furlough program.

"I do appreciate the effort and hard work that was necessary to construct this program that exhibits concern for both the inmates and the citizens," Copeland said in an Oct. 13 letter addressed to McCotter.

Prison officials are not required by law to furlough inmates, but officials say the program is a behavior incentive that enables inmates to maintain family or church ties and gives them a chance to seek employment.

Defendant says victim made sexual advances at his wife

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A teen-ager accused of murdering a retired couple testified he and his wife refused to participate in a sex video with the older couple and that he stabbed them after the man hurt his wife.

Federico Rivera, 19, said he and his wife, Tammi, had agreed to be videotaped in sexually explicit poses, but that he didn't want to trade wives as Keith Nordyke, 56, had suggested.

Rivera said he stabbed Nordyke on March 27 after Nordyke grabbed Tammi Rivera and hurt her.

Rivera testified Thursday he stabbed Jean Nordyke, 53, after the woman attacked him with a stick while Riveza was pounding on her husband.

An eight-man, four-woman jury was scheduled to begin deliberations today. Rivera faces the maximum penalty of death by injection if convicted.

Tammi Rivera, 18, also is charged in the slayings and is scheduled to go on trial next month. Rivera has testified she didn't participate in the slayings.

The Riveras were arrested on April 5 in North Olmstead, Ohio, while trying to use the victims' credit cards. The Nordykes were from Raytown, Mo., but spent the winter months in Harlingen.

Rivera testified Thursday that he and his wife had agreed to be videotaped while having sexual intercourse.

"He really wanted us to make (a film) because he said that me and Tammi would make a good couple because she was blond and I had dark hair," Rivera said.

Nordyke suggested that he and Rivera trade wives and film each other having sexual intercourse, Rivera testified.

"I kept telling him, 'no,' because I didn't want him using my wife," Rivera testified.

Rivera said his wife tried to get away and Nordyke grabbed her and by the time he got to her she was covered with blood. He said he stabbed Nordyke and then Mrs. Nordyke when she attacked Rivera.

Rivera's attorney, Gilberto Rosas, said the slayings were not intentional.

"These people were looking for couples who were swingers," Rosas said about the Nordykes.

The Nordykes' bound bodies were pulled from the Rio Grande east of Brownsville on April 3.

The Riveras took some of the Nordykes belongings and tried to sell them and placed others in a bag and threw them in the river, Rivera testified.

Assistant Cameron County District Attorney A.G. Betancourt asked Rivera about a statement he made to reporters shortly after his arrest, claiming a man named Ricky was responsible for the slayings.

"That was not true, sir," Rivera said about the statement.

Prosecutors have introduced a three-page confession that Rivera gave investigators in April, stating that the Riveras planned to tie up the older couple, take their van and go to see Mrs. Rivera's relatives in Ohio.

Rivera met the Nordykes in early March when Nordyke videotaped Rivera and some relatives doing a bricklaying job near the Nordyke home.

Ag Department releases its economic revitalization plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Department of Agriculture proposed today a $250 million fund as part of an overall plan to revitalize the Texas economy.

A 126-page report released by the department said the proposed plan would "clearly stimulate growth in rural areas" and would "have a tremendous impact on urban areas through increased job creation and the indirect benefits of expanded economic activity."

The Texas Growth Fund would be created out of 1 percent of each of the following state funds: Texas Employees Retirement System, Teachers Retirement System; Permanent University Fund, and Permanent School Fund.

The growth fund, which would require statewide approval of a constitutional amendment, would be divided into three sections:

- $25 million for high-risk venture capital including agricultural businesses.
- $125 million for "mid-risk," innovative small businesses.
- $100 million for guaranteed investments, such as treasury bills.

"The farm crisis is a tragedy but also an opportunity," the report said. "The opportunity it provides is to forge a revitalized and diversified agricultural system that meshes new ideas and technologies with what has proven to be its most efficient economic unit, the independent farm or ranch."

The report said expansion of "alternative crops" mentioned in the report has the potential to generate 25,000 direct jobs, 50,000 indirect jobs and $6.1 billion of additional business for the Texas economy.

Alternative crops are those crops that not widely produced Texas. They include blueberries; wine and grapes; shrimp; oriental vegetables and kenaf, a "cousin" to cotton.

All have potential over the next 10 years, the report said.

Other proposals by the agriculture department include:

- Taxable bonds supported by a $20 million state guarantee and supplemented by private guarantees.
- Loans backed by up to $5 million in state certificates of deposit, with a 1:1 match by local banks.
- $500,000 state seed fund to support research that could lead to commercialization of new crops.
- $350,000 grant program to assist new and expanding agricultural-based businesses.
- $225,000 in grants, which would require a 3:1 local match, to help agricultural businesses "operating under early-stage obstacles such as limited resources or lack of business experience."

- Consolidation of the authority to issue agricultural development bonds into a single entity managed by the agriculture department.
- Expansion of the Family Farm and Ranch Security Program of 1979 to provide loan guarantees to buy equipment or establish alternative crops. Additional financing also would allow applicants to defer payments of principal or interest on "long-cycle" crops, such as orchards, vineyards and fish farms.

- The proposal would require a state constitutional amendment.
- Expansion of technical assistant services by 50 percent. The department currently is assisting over 40 operations with planned capital investment exceeding $150 million and estimated annual sales of nearly $400 million.
- A $25 million loan-loan guarantee program to increase agricultural exports.
- Legislative creation of a Food Transport Authority to allow trucks "with agricultural commodity authority to also haul processed foods, and vice versa, with no minimum rates."

Immigration action disgraces America

To call the immigration bill newly passed by Congress a "reform" measure is to engage in Newspeak. It is not "reform" to press American business owners into involuntary servitude as border patrol agents. It is not "reform" to create conditions in which virtually all people with brown skins, including millions of Hispanic-American citizens, are almost certain to face increased job discrimination. It is not "reform" to declare by fiat that a worker who entered this country without official permission before a certain arbitrary date is welcome to stay, while every worker who entered without permission after that date is a criminal.

The law makes it illegal to knowingly hire an undocumented immigrant and imposes stiff penalties on employers who do so. This places employers in the position of having to serve as unpaid law enforcement officers in order to protect themselves. It gives them an incentive to avoid hiring brown-skinned workers at all, thereby placing Hispanic-American citizens, as well as illegal immigrants, at a severe competitive disadvantage in the marketplace.

It places Hispanic-American citizens in the unique position of having to carry documents with them to prove their citizenship whenever they are in search of work — something no other American citizens are required to do.

The documents that would be officially acceptable under the new legislation include birth certificates and Social Security cards, both of which are childishly simple to forge or to obtain fraudulently.

The new law will create a vital new black market in personal documents.

Most important of all, the new immigration "reform" law is in flagrant violation of individual rights, both of those American citizens who choose to associate and do business with willing immigrants and of those immigrants who choose to enter the "land of opportunity and individual freedom" to commit the "crime" of bettering their lives.

This so-called immigration "reform" is nothing less than a disgrace to the American heritage.

"I KNEW you'd say 'somebody BLINKED!'"

Dreamer of empty dreams

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

How often has any principled person heard the charge "but you've gotta be practical" as a response to some fundamental criticism of our institutionalized form of madness?

Having demonstrated to one group or another the violent, conflict-ridden consequences of political behavior — including the fact that we have managed to destroy between 100 and 200 million people in the 20th century alone! — I will invariably have a listener suggest that, even if what I say is true, we must still be "practical" and "work within the system" to effectuate change.

This response is so reminiscent of uncle Willie's attitude toward his boozing habit. Willie will admit that, if he keeps going at his present pace, he will destroy his liver, heart, stomach, and kidneys, and will soon be dead.

Upon being reminded of that fact, however, he pleads the need for a "practical" solution to his problem which, he goes on, consists not of giving up alcohol, but of "tapering off" his habit. "It is too idealistic to think I can just quit," Willie implores, "but I can modify my habit and learn how better to live with it."

A friend of mine is fond of reminding me that my views are premised upon the creation of an "ideal world," or a "perfect society," and that, in the meantime, his continued support of a politically-ordered society is but a "practical" solution to the "real world" dilemma of establishing order among disorder and irresponsible men and women.

If the political state were, indeed, capable of establishing social order and peace among people, my friend might have a good argument.

But such, alas, is not the nature of the option before us.

Our choice is not between maintaining an imperfect system of peace and order, on the one hand, and creating a better system on the other, but of learning how to live in peace without our dependence on the political institutions that are destroying human society and, perhaps, life itself.

My friend is fond of characterizing me as a "dreamer," but who is the dreamer: the man who sees what we are doing and who understands the destructive implications of that conduct, or the man who, like uncle Willie, clings to the unfulfilled hopes of centuries of men, hopes that were fired by illusions about how political power could be tamed, civilized, and made compatible with both peace and freedom?

Is not the man who insists on arguing for a system of "limited government" — which our forefathers did their best to create for America — in the face of the most powerful, most intrusive, and greatest wealth-consuming government in human history, the "dreamer" of empty dreams?

We are so fearful of facing the fact that we have been deluded, duped by institutional leaders who have profited at the expense of our naivete, that we would sooner believe there is something wrong with the man or woman who brings us the discomfiting news of how we have been used.

We would rather lose our repressed anger over our own self-assisted exploitation by redirecting that anger toward anyone else our institutional leaders identify as our "enemies."

Look at how foolish we have become, ready to take up arms against people we may never even have heard of — be they Grenadians, Libyans, Sandanistas, or Lebanese — whenever the politicians announce to us that such people have been chosen as our "enemy of the month."

I have always thought it would be interesting to try to mount a propaganda campaign against some purely mythical group of people — the Ozians, perhaps, or the denizens of Lower Ruritania? — and see how quickly all the pro-military nitwits begin agitating for the invasion or bombing of such non-existent people!

In the end, of course, I always come around to the position endorsed by my friend: I, too, believe that we must be "practical."

If we value human society and life itself, we will see — if we have clear, rational awareness — that continuing to embrace institutions that not only produce, but require, the conflict that is destroying the human race, is not a very "practical" thing to do.

The only "practical" way I know of ending our participation in that destructiveness, is to withdraw from all political participation. Like uncle Willie, many of us may find going "cold turkey" a painful experience in the short run, but, if we are fortunate, we just may end up having a "long run" in which we can enjoy, and with a sense of rightful pride in our exercise of responsibility, a fuller meaning of life than is to be found on the end of a bayonet.

Paul Harvey

No guessing the farm vote

I have never presumed to anticipate how the American farmer is going to vote: I never will. I doubt most farmers know yet.

But more important to me, the American farmer does not want any city dude telling him what he thinks.

That's why the more-than-ample TV coverage of farmland auctions has failed to mobilize any "march on Washington."

But my roots are enough in farmland so I can tell you how he is not going to vote!

Thirty-five years ago there were 5½ million farms in the United States. That number has dwindled to barely 2 million.

Farm population in 1951 was 22 million; today 5.3 million.

Yet, while farm families have declined from 14 percent of our nation's population to 2 percent... the net worth of the people who are still in farming — for all their troubles in recent years — has escalated from $155.5 billion to a present $579.3 billion.

But — $25.6 billion of that is "government money."

For all that this present administration has not been able to do, it has provided more support to farmers than the last four presidents combined!

That's no endorsement. We are talking economics, not politics.

Government money to support farm programs has multiplied 540 percent in five Reagan years.

So if farmers are worse off — and many are — is the government killing us with kindness? Not just us.

Most every nation in the world — one way or another — is subsidizing the growing of more food — even though we are already producing more than we can consume.

With massive subsidies and artificial price supports, farming has been over-stimulated in much of the world.

Farmers are encouraged to plant for farm benefits rather than for anticipated market prices. That, of course, gives the biggest farmers the biggest benefits.

In the United States, the 1985 farm bill will reduce those subsidies — but only gradually, very slowly.

Meanwhile, farming in the United States is undergoing a painful evolution. In five years, 17,000 Iowans have been forced off the farm. The state has lost 50,000 people. Seventy of 99 counties are down in population. Farmland values have been cut in half.

Nationwide, the fabric of our magnificent farm country is unraveling before our eyes.

On the other side of this thinning-out is a far more independent future for American agriculture and, a more fruitful future.

So while I would not — cannot — tell you how the American farmer is going to vote next month, I can tell you he is not going to vote for any politician who promises him more "government aid."

Women must return ladder to the closet

By Rusty Brown

"The only difference between a man and a woman climbing the ladder of success is that the woman is expected to put it back in the closet when she's finished with it."

This pungent thought is printed on a memo pad a lot of women are using these days.

And women also like to schedule appointments on a calendar with such predesignated observances as TV Dinner Day (April 6), the birthday of Martha Washington's husband (Feb. 22), and Permanent Press Day (Aug. 20) — "so that working women can look like they've stayed up all night ironing, when they actually lay up half the night washing."

You, too, have probably seen the "Working Woman" greeting cards, calendars and memo pads created by Barbara and Jim Dale. You, too, have probably laughed at their caricature of the harried woman with the mismatched shoes and bulging briefcase who expresses such wry comments as "Behind every working woman is an enormous pile of unwashed laundry," or "Balancing a job and a family is not the hardest thing to do. It's second — right after world peace."

For several years, I've been chuckling and buying "Working Woman" witticisms and wondering just who are Barbara and Jim Dale? And how is it that they seem to know so much about women's lives?

I discovered that the Dales live in Baltimore. Barbara, 35, is an artist, working in a studio that is only a 53-second drive from home and son Andy, 8. Jim Dale, who writes the punch lines, is 37 and corporate creative director for W.B. Doner and Co., an advertising agency.

The husband-wife team started their collaboration shortly before Andy was born, making up greeting cards for friends and, as Barbara tells it, "having them printed on typing paper at the speedy print place just down the street from the art gallery where I worked."

Soon, the manager of the nearby gift shop wanted some of the cards to sell, and 18 months later, the Dales were in business. "I delivered our first local orders in empty 'Huggy Dapper' boxes," recalls Barbara. Demand quickly outpaced time for all phases of the business, so now Recycled Paper Products Inc. of Chicago handles the publishing, marketing and distribution to some 25,000 retail outlets across the country. "While we have fewer designs than the major greeting-card companies," says Barbara, "our cards sell faster, according to the Retail Marketing Report."

The Dales sketch and quip from their own experiences. (Jim, in fact, works on the gags after a full day at the office.) Like other working couples, they once devised a great scheme for joint housekeeping. All chores were assigned a point value based on degree of distastefulness. For example, cleaning the tub got a 10 (most distasteful), while washing dishes rates a 2. Then they divided the list equally. "It worked beautifully," says Barbara, "because neither of us did our jobs." Perhaps that has something to do with the Father's Day notation on the 1987 calendar: "A man's home is his castle; let him clean it himself."

A year ago, the Dales' first book was published: "The Working Woman Book: Or — How to Be Everything to Everyone." The table of contents ("one of the few tables in your house that doesn't need dusting") lists chapters on Exercises ("To the working woman, jogging is redundant"); Time Planning ("Skip this chapter, no time to read it").

"I have great sympathy for the working mom, and that's my motivation for drawing her," says Barbara. "It really is a double whammy, and there isn't much appreciation for our double duty. So it's a heck of a lot better to look at the situation and joke about it."

I agree, especially if it pays off in what you might call "funny money."

Reagan urges Soviets to move toward arms control

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — President Reagan says Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's latest pronouncement on arms control is heartening, but the Soviets should now "move the ball forward" on nuclear testing and arms reductions.

"Our negotiators are ready in Geneva," Reagan said Thursday in remarks in Springfield, Mo., before flying here to continue a political speaking tour.

Reagan, speaking at a rally in support of Missouri senatorial candidate Christopher Bond, said, "It was heartening to find Mr. Gorbachev agreeing with me yesterday, that the proposals we made in Iceland are still on the table."

"Our negotiators are ready in Geneva," the president added. "We must not allow areas where there's agreement to be held hostage to areas where there isn't."

"The Soviets should move the ball forward in areas such as long-range intermediate nuclear forces and nuclear testing, and we're prepared to do so," the president said.

In a speech on Soviet television Wednesday, Gorbachev said that during his talks with Reagan in Reykjavik, Iceland, the two leaders had "realized a higher stage not only in analyzing the situation but in defining the aims and framework of possible agreements on nuclear disarmament."

Gorbachev also said Reagan had agreed to the elimination of all strategic offensive arms.

But the administration maintains Reagan proposed a 50 percent reduction in nuclear weapons over five years, followed by a five-year period in which ballistic missiles would be eliminated — not necessarily all nuclear arms.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as the president flew to Springfield, Mo., following a campaign appearance in Wisconsin, said elimination of all nuclear weapons was "an ultimate goal" but not something that was negotiated in Iceland.

He repeated that the U.S. position "stressed ballistic missiles" during the second five-year period.

There also was some question as to what the Soviets agreed to at Reykjavik regarding underground nuclear testing, according to today's Washington Post, which quotes a senior administration official as saying U.S. and Soviet negotiators are "miles apart" on the testing issue.

The official, who was not identified, said the final document drafted in Reykjavik contained the Soviet position in one paragraph and the U.S. position in another, with "no agreement" on how to put the two together.

He criticized as "misleading" statements by Secretary of State George Shultz and others who told reporters after the summit the Soviets had agreed to the U.S. approach to begin new testing negotiations by first agreeing to verification procedures, then considering phased-in reductions in tests.

In his speech, Gorbachev also said U.S. expulsion of 55 Soviet diplomats had damaged prospects for an arms control accord. In a diplomatic tit-for-tat, the Soviets have expelled 10 American diplomats in a week and withdrawn 260 Soviets who worked as cooks, maids, drivers and perform other duties in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and at the U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

IRS sets out to draw up the fine print of new tax law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Developing and publishing regulations for implementing the new overhaul of the income tax system is likely to be one of the biggest paperwork operations ever for the federal government.

It won't be easy, the Internal Revenue Service admits, but it promises to have a considerable amount of guidance in the hands of taxpayers by Jan. 1, when most of the hundreds of changes in the broadest revision of the federal income tax system in a generation begin taking effect.

"We have been tracking this two years," since the Treasury Department first sent a full-scale overhaul plan to President Reagan, Donald E. Osteen, director of legislation and regulations at the IRS, told reporters Thursday. "Yes, it's going to be difficult but there will be a substantial amount of guidance" available by the end of the year, he said.

Osteen issued a list of 76 provisions whose explanations — regulations, news releases and rulings — will get priority treatment. One of the highest priorities has been assigned a part of the bill that begins repealing the deduction for consumer interest, including education loans and credit cards, on Jan. 1.

Other items assigned high priority, because they affect so many people, include the reduced deduc-tion for medical expenses, scaling down the deduction for Individual Retirement Accounts, and limiting writeoffs for union dues and other miscellaneous expenses.

The IRS issued a plea for advice from businesses, lawyers and accountants on how to implement other, more-complex sections of the new law, most of which affect corporations and upper-income investors.

The agency is anticipating millions of 4apls sater this year and early in 1987 from taxpayers who are not certain about some parts of the new law. Many of those calls will be coming to the same people who, at the same time, will be giving advice on how to fill out returns to be filed early next year.

For that reason, the IRS already has begun educating key personnel about the new law. They, in turn, will train the taxpayer-service representatives who take calls from the public.

The IRS and its parent agency, the Treasury Department, have about 125 technicians involved in writing tax regulations, which they must do because Congress has neither the time nor the expertise to spell out every detail when it passes a tax bill.

In the new law, said Don Rocab, a legislative counsel for the treasury, "there is a whole range of issues that no one gave much thought to. We will have to fill in areas that Congress did not."

Budget deficit sets record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is acknowledging it ran up a record $220 billion deficit for the fiscal year that just ended, but officials say they expect a dramatically better showing next year.

The 1986 deficit fell $10 billion below Reagan administration expectations. White House Budget Director James C. Miller III said through a spokesman that higher-than-anticipated revenues near the end of the year and lower spending by federal agencies accounted for unanticipated savings.

The Office of Management and Budget had projected as recently as August that the deficit for the Oct. 1, 1985, to Sept. 30, 1986, fiscal year would soar to $230.2 billion.

The agency was scheduled to formally announce the 1986 deficit figure early next week.

However, OMB spokesman Ed Dale said Thursday that Miller decided to release information on the raw figures in advance to counter possible news leaks on the final figures.

Dale also said new projections by agency analysts suggest the deficit will fall by an additional $50 billion in 1987, to the vicinity of $170 billion — even if Congress enacts no further spending cuts.

Some of that reduction is due to spending cuts already enacted under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law. Other reasons for the diminishing deficit include spending cuts previously built into some programs, and low inflation rates that result in less government spending.

For the 1986 fiscal year, the OMB tally shows the flow of federal red ink rose to just a shade over $220 billion, Dale said.

"Miller acknowledges that this was a record deficit, but the real good news is that in 1987, by any realistic estimate of the deficit, there will be a reduction in excess of $50 billion — which would be the greatest reduction since World War II," Dale said.

The $170 billion 1987 deficit would still be far above the $144 billion deficit target mandated under the Gramm-Rudman law, which calls for a balanced budget by 1991.

However, a triggering mechanism in that law calling for automatic cuts in federal spending to meet the deficit targets was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

The projection for 1987 — a calculation based on a continuation of current government services and not taking into account any further spending cuts that Congress might enact next year — would represent a marked turnaround in the deficit, which has climbed steadily the past few years.

The government's books have shown a deficit in 25 of the last 26 years.

To accommodate these decades of deficit spending, Congress before adjourning for the year last week voted to raise the national debt limit to a record $2.3 trillion.

Among new revenue that will be realized in 1987 is $11 billion that will be generated by the sweeping tax overhaul bill signed this week by President Reagan.

3,200-mile peace march near end

NEW YORK (AP) — The music was reggae instead of rock 'n' roll, but the mood still evoked the '60s as several hundred peace activists arrived at one coast after walking from the other.

"Get a job!" a heckler yelled from a passing car as the Great Peace March for Global Nuclear Disarmament streamed across a pedestrian walkway of the George Washington Bridge from New Jersey on Thursday.

"We have a job," retorted a cheerful Shelley White, 23, of Salt Lake City, who waved, smiled and flashed the two-fingered peace symbol.

The diverse group, on the last leg of its 3,200-mile march from Los Angeles to Washington, included a bicyclist, four chanting Buddhist monks, pink-haired youths and white-haired women.

Some shouted phrases like, "Test Ban Now," or carried signs and banners reading, "Farms, Not Arms" and "Stop War Now."

On arriving in Manhattan, the marchers held a street rally just south of the bridge as curious residents poked their heads out of apartment windows. One unfurled a welcome sign fashioned from a bedsheet.

With music blaring from a sound truck, politicians and schoolchildren gave speeches as the marchers cheered and embraced each other. Actress Betty Thomas mingled with the crowd and Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins told them, "Your sacrifice will not be in vain."

"It is a happening," said Cy Adler, a New Yorker in his 50s who hiked across the bridge. "They're good people. But some are a little strange — California types."

The 3,200-mile march set out from Los Angeles on March 11 as a splashy cross-country media event. But after two weeks, the sponsoring organization, PRO-Peace, collapsed and financial support for the 1,300 participants dried up. About 300 marchers reorganized and continued with new financial backing.

"It's a consciousness wave. People have been psychically numb to nuclear issues," said Ms. White, who quit her job as an information systems manager at the University of Utah to join the trek in Los Angeles.

"When I came over the bridge, I started bawling like a baby. I feel like maybe this time, they'll listen to us," said David Manning, 44, who owns an herb farm in Delray, W.Va., and joined the march in Pittsburgh.

The group functions as a nomadic town, with assigned chores and a mayor and school buses that serve as rolling classrooms for marchers' children.

"A lot of the time, people call this our family," said Ms. White. "There's a very caring community here."

The oldest marcher is Franklin Folsom, a 79-year-old Boulder, Colo., author who has hiked with the group since the start.

Blacks, Hispanics nearly 40 percent of AIDS cases

ATLANTA (AP) — Nearly 40 percent of reported AIDS cases occurred among blacks and Hispanics, according to a federal report issued to alter the perception that the deadly disease strikes only gay white men.

Twenty-five percent of the 24,576 cases reported through Sept. 8 occurred among blacks and 14 percent among Hispanics, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday.

For both groups, the figures are double their shares of the population. Blacks comprise 12 percent of the population, while Hispanics account for 6 percent, the CDC said in its weekly report.

The Atlanta-based agency stressed that acquired immune deficiency syndrome most often strikes gay men and intravenous drug abusers, and attacks people "as a result of underlying risk factors, not because of their race (or) ethnicity."

Presents defense papers

The lawyer for Eugene Hasenfus, Enrique Sotelo Borgen, right, presents papers contesting the charges against his client to a secretary for the People's Tribunal in Managua Thursday.

Lawyer denies charges against client Hasenfus

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP)—The Nicaraguan attorney representing captured American Eugene Hasenfus denied the government's charges his client either had violated national security or was a terrorist, and questioned the legitimacy of the court handling the case.

"I come before the authorities to deny, reject, and contradict all the concepts of the accusations formulated against my defendant by the minister of justice," attorney Enrique Sotelo Borgen said Thursday in a written statement delivered to the People's Tribunal Court.

He also said the tribunal, composed of a lawyer, truck driver and laborer, does not have the authority to judge Hasenfus because it "lacks impartiality" and was not appointed by the Supreme Court. Hasenfus, reportedly being held in a prison outside Managua, did not attend the hearing.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was captured Oct. 6 when the C-123 cargo plane on which he was a crew member was shot down in southern Nicaragua. It carried arms and supplies for the Contras, and the Sandinistas claim the operation was run by the U.S. government. U.S. officials have denied the charge.

Sotelo Borgen said he and Griffin Bell, U.S. attorney general under former President Jimmy Carter, would prepare a defense for the captured American.

Under the tribunal system, the defense and government each has eight days to present written arguments and statements to the tribunal. After that, the tribunal reviews the evidence and issues a verdict. No oral arguments are presented and it was not clear if Hasenfus would appear at any future proceedings.

If convicted, Hasenfus faces up to 30 years in prison. The tribunals were set up in 1983 to try people accused of counterrevolutionary activity. Reports from human rights groups indicate most cases brought before them end in conviction.

During a brief news conference after arriving at Sandino International Airport, Bell said it was "an absolute fact" Hasenfus was on board a plane that contained weapons destined for the U.S.-backed rebels.

But, Bell added, "I have great reason to doubt that he is a terrorist or committed crimes that happened 110 years ago."

Jordanian convicted of trying to blow up Israeli jetliner

LONDON (AP)—A jury today convicted a Jordanian of trying to blow up an Israeli jetliner with 375 people aboard by planting a bomb in his pregnant girlfriend's luggage.

Judge William Mars-Jones sentenced Nezar Hindawi to 45 years in prison, saying "terrorists can expect no mercy." The sentence means Hindawi will not be eligible for parole for at least 30 years, the Home Office said.

"This country will not tolerate the activities of terrorists," the judge said. "A more cruel and callous deception and a more horrendous massacre it is difficult to imagine."

Hindawi showed no emotion as the sentence was passed in London's Old Bailey criminal court. He smiled and raised two fingers in a "V" as he was led from the dock.

The jury of seven men and five women returned the guilty verdict about one hour after resuming their second day of deliberations. They deliberated for about five hours Thursday.

The prosecution alleged that Syria was behind the plot to blow up the El Al jetliner. Syrian Ambassador Loutof Allah Haydar was summoned to the Foreign Office shortly after the verdict was announced, and the Foreign Office said it would issue a statement later today.

Hindawi, a 32-year-old Jordanian journalist, was accused of using his fiancée, Anne-Marie Murphy, 32, an Irish chambermaid, in an attempt to blow up an El Al jetliner on April 17. The prosecution said Miss Murphy was an innocent pawn in the scheme, and believed to be going to Israel to marry Hindawi.

An El Al security officer found high-quality plastic explosives in the false bottom of hand luggage Miss Murphy was carrying. The prosecution said the bomb would have exploded over Austria, killing all 375 people aboard, including Miss Murphy and Hindawi's unborn child.

The prosecution alleged that Hindawi told police during interrogation that he was hired by Syrian military intelligence to blow up the Israeli plane.

Source unclear of 'shot heard round the world'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—An unattributed paragraph in a small twice-weekly newspaper unleashed worldwide claims that South Africa was responsible for downing a plane carrying President Samora Machel of Mozambique. The article appeared Monday night in the Lowvelder, a newspaper with a circulation of 8,000 in Nelspruit near the crash site in eastern South Africa.

It noted that "rumors were already doing the rounds... that the surviving pilot, a Russian, alleged that the aircraft was shot down."

The article referred to the survivor, Vladimir Novoselov, as a pilot, but Mozambican officials said he was the flight engineer. The Soviet pilot of the aircraft was one of the 34 people, including Machel, killed in the crash, they said.

Anti-apartheid groups, the Soviet news agency Tass and neighboring black countries quickly picked up on Novoselov's alleged comments as evidence of South African involvement.

His remarks have become a central issue in the debate on why Machel's plane crashed into a South African hillside Sunday night just a few hundred yards from the Mozambican border.

Referring to claims that Pretoria downed the plane, the government-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. said Wednesday, "The circumstances of the tragedy provide much too valuable a weapon against South Africa for (its enemies) to be put off by the facts."

"In the present near-hysteria in the international climate, this country has become a legitimate target for the most far-fetched accusations."

AIM, Mozambique's national news agency, quoted Angolan Interior Minister Alexandre Rodrigues as saying, "South Africa had a hand in the crash," and suggested it was capable of forcing Machel's plane off course.

The Lowvelder's report was contained in a page-one editorial, which mentioned the rumors of the plane being shot down but also suggested bad weather or pilot error could have been the cause. It did not quote the Soviet survivor directly. Senior reporter Willie Jooste said the rumor was given to the paper by a Johannesburg aviation journalist, who said he got it from security sources.

South African newspapers picked up the angle and displayed it prominently Tuesday morning, without attributing it to the Lowvelder.

Stripped of its qualifiers, the report that the pilot said he was shot down spread worldwide, along with another survivor's comment, confirmed by South African and Mozambican officials, that there was a sound "like a bang or a shot" in the plane before the crash.

Mozambique has not commented on the cause of the crash, beyond saying the plane went down "in circumstances not yet clarified."

Portugal's state-run news agency, ANOP, reported from Maputo on Wednesday that Mozambican authorities have gathered evidence that human error caused the crash. But it said Mozambique was also investigating the survivor's reports of a muffled noise or an explosion.

In neighboring Zimbabwe, a harsh critic of South Africa, the two main daily newspapers led with the story that the pilot said he was shot down. Thousands of blacks later rampaged through the capital, Harare, protesting Machel's death and attacking South African, American and Malawian offices.

Navy says deadline nearing for local matching funds for Galveston homeport

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has warned Galveston city officials that they have until Christmas to come up with $8 million to match $30 million in federal funds for construction of a port for five military ships.

But Mayor Jan Coggeshall said Thursday she knew nothing about a December deadline for the cash or its equivalent and that there was no way the city would be able to meet one.

"We're only a community of 61,000 people and we don't have the $8 million to hand over to the Navy," Ms. Coggeshall said from her Galveston office. "We have offered $9.9 million in infrastructure improvements to the Navy."

Chase Untermeyer, assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower and reserves, says the Department of Defense—not the Navy—is the "bad guy" in this situation.

He said Pentagon budgeteers are poring over the Navy's fiscal 1988 funding proposals slated to be sent to the Office of Management and Budget in December. A portion of that budget will go for building new ports around the nation for the Navy's growing fleet of warships.

Galveston's share would be $30 million for a homeport for two guided missile frigates and three minesweepers, contingent on the city's raising $8 million in matching funds or an equivalent value, Untermeyer said.

If the city fails to come up with the money by the time the budget is due, the Department of Defense will likely reallocate the $30 million to other other military projects, Untermeyer said.

"If the city fails to come up with its share, they are going to take that part and remove it and do something else with it," Untermeyer said. "That can disappear at the hands of the DOD budgeteers ... It's not the Navy that's the bad guy here."

Untermeyer said a letter explaining the December deadline is being drafted by the Navy for Galveston and other homeport cities.

He said Congress could reattach Galveston's $30 million to the overall Navy budget for fiscal 1988 during the coming session sometime next year.

"Let's say we're concerned about the Port of Galveston," said Capt. Tim Kelly, who has been monitoring the homeport program for the Navy. "We are proceeding ahead on the assumption that the Galveston situation will work out and we will commence with the program in 1988."

Ms. Coggeshall said the city worked on the project for 25 months, but has been unable to carry on any direct negotiations on the project since the Navy's chief negotiator, Wayne Army, left in July to join OMB.

"We still feel very optimistic about the homeport," Ms. Coggeshall said.

She said she plans to ask the governor to help with the funding after the Nov. 4 election.

Number of suspensions worries police chief

HOUSTON (AP)—Police Chief Lee Brown has asked his top-level staff to help keep officers on the right side of the law because a high number of officers have been suspended for alleged wrong-doing.

The number of suspensions is "probably a high-water mark," police spokesman J. C. Mosier said Wednesday.

Brown has asked for a departmental review of the manner in which police accountability is defined and for development of training modules to help officers avoid corruption.

The chief said he hopes educational programs would identify potential problem areas for officers and help them avoid the pitfalls.

He said he was not certain what other remedies might be proposed as a result of his staff's recommendation.

"We're looking at it to see what we can do to be helpful," Brown said. "We don't want to lose officers for any reason."

Current or former Houston police officers have been implicated during the past year in a variety of offenses, from sexual abuse of a child, to theft and tampering with a government record.

"Obviously, as managers we must take definitive steps to ensure that preventive measures are being utilized to curb these disheartening trends," Brown wrote in a recent memo.

The offenses leading to suspension often resulted in grand jury indictments and were serious enough to jeopardize an officer's career, Brown said.

The number of officers relieved of duty exceeded 25 on several occasions, the police chief said. But added the number of suspensions was no indication of widespread corruption.

"With 4,500 officers in the department, it's not that extraordinary a number," Brown said. "I think people generally understand officers are people like anyone else and can get into trouble."

Serving God and our country through our churches and through civil and community service has always elevated us as a people and contributed to our image as a free and just country. We will not go wrong in adhering to these practices.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: My dear brothers, take note of this: Everyone should be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry, for man's anger does not bring about the righteous life that God desires. (James 1:19-20 NIV)

If I ever go running through the streets, screaming insanely, bent wire clothes hangers will be the cause.

All three daughters are adept at creative hanger bending. They inherited their talent from their father, who is a prolific hanger bender though not as creative.

All their works of art end up in tangles on the closet floors. Clothes also end up in piles on the floor because they can't be hung properly because (you guessed it!) all the hangers are bent.

The world is filled with un-churched people who were active, productive church members until someone in church said something that hurt their feelings or angered them.

They got bent out of shape, dropped out of church, erected protective shields of bitterness against churches in general and declared their lack of use for "all those hypocrites" (meaning all church people).

Because someone spoke thoughtlessly and they over-reacted, they've lost their Christian direction, they're outside God's will, they're isolated from Christian fellowship and they'll never realize their potentials in God's service.

They're rendered useless for the task for which they were designed.

Amarillo couple to sing at church

Dan and Rachel Redd of Amarillo will be featured in both services Sunday at the First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler.

The Redds, who minister in the Texas Panhandle area, will be singing and sharing the gospel at the 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services.

The congregation of First Assembly invites the public to attend the special services and be a part of the Celebration of Praise.

Religion Roundup

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A United Methodist consultation here on deaf ministries has called for increased sensitivity and actions in the church to serve needs of hearing-impaired members.

Among other things, the consultation asked the denomination's publishing house to develop a sign language companion to the church's new hymnbook and for steps to train more pastors in ministry to the deaf.

Holly Elliot of San Francisco said there are 91,800 members with complete hearing loss and nearly 500,000 hard-of-hearing members whose "handicap is not their deafness, but how to communicate."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The anti-poverty program of U.S. Roman Catholic Bishops, the Campaign for Human Development, has made 1986 grants and loans totalling more than $6 million to 220 self-help projects across the country.

In announcing the grants, Bishop Arthur N. Tafaya of Pueblo, Colo., the bishops' committee chairman for the program, said more than 33 million Americans "struggle for a decent life at or below the poverty line."

PEKING, China (AP) — Chinese Protestant leaders say they now have 6,000 ministers at work nationwide, and the number of churches now open total more than 4,000.

The figures were given at a national Christian conference at which 280 delegates re-elected Bishop Ding Guangxun (K.H. Ting), 71, as president of both the China Christian Council and the Three-Self Patriotic Movement.

The council works in expanding the ministry through theological education and in printing Bibles and other Christian literature, while the Three-Self movement represents Protestants in relations with the government.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four war veterans, including a former priest, Charles Liteky, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor, have fasted for more than five weeks in protest of the $100 million in U.S. aid to rebels against the Nicaraguan government.

"We are risking death to save lives," says Liteky, a chaplain in Vietnam.

The Deweys

Deweys to be in concert Sunday at Pampa church

SESAC Song of the Year recipients Levey and Cleon Dewey will be in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, 1200 S. Sumner.

The free concert is open to the public, said Rev. Gene Allen, pastor. A freewill offering will be received.

Levoy Dewey is one of gospel music's finest tenors, Rev. Allen said. "His rich, melodic sound is unique and lifts the audience up with positive, powerful lyrics." His wife Cleon is an expert keyboard player.

The couple have been ministering in song throughout America for more than 20 years. They have made appearances in 33 countries around the world.

The Deweys have recorded with the London Philharmonic Orchestra. Dewey also has recorded a solo album with the internationally known Statesmen Quartet, and his wife has recorded five instrumental albums for release.

Their song, "Heaven's Sounding Sweeter," as recorded by Jimmy Swaggart, was recently picked by CNN News and Worth Associates of New York as one of the all-time gospel hit songs ever recorded. The song has sold more than two million copies and has been recorded by gospel artists throughout the world.

As songwriters, the Deweys are known for their extraordinary talents in Nashville. Their song, "Because of Yesterday," was recorded by country superstar Connie Smith for CBS Records and became the SESAC Song of the Year.

Others of their songs have been recorded by the Thrasher Brothers, the Florida Boys, the Rex Nelson Singers, Mike Murdock of PTL Network, Kenneth Copeland, Governor Jimmie Davis, Jimmy Swaggart and numerous others.

Dewey "is not only a tremendous singer and songwriter, but he is an expert choral arranger," Allen said. Dewey, who graduated from the Amarillo Conservatory of Music, is proficient musically on the saxophone, valvetrambone, stringed instruments, clarinet and bassoon.

"The excitement always builds as Levey and Cleon begin to perform their songs instrumentally during the concert," Allen said.

Inviting the public to attend the special concert, Allen said, "You will thoroughly enjoy this family event. Every moment of the concert, you will hear the great hit songs of Levey and Cleon Dewey as only they can perform them."

Dissent sometimes essential, Catholic professor believes

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Once before, early in this century, a Roman Catholic scholar was removed from his post at the Catholic University of America for not adhering to an official church position — a position the church itself has since abandoned.

But without dissent, the corrected, fuller insights might never have come, writes the Rev. Gerald P. Fogarty, a Catholic professor of religion at the University of Virginia.

He described the past case in the national Catholic weekly, America, in connection with the Vatican's recent ouster of the Rev. Charles Curran from teaching moral theology for not adhering to official church positions.

The Curran case has stirred wide repercussions in scholarly circles, with some defending the Vatican in silencing teachings divergent from official positions, others saying it gags scholarship and conscience.

Dissent, or questioning, "is essential for the theological enterprise" in pursuing a fuller grasp of truth, Fogarty wrote in the Jesuit-edited weekly.

In numerous instances through history, both Roman Catholicism and Protestantism have modified their positions as the cumulative results of such scholarly questioning and probing.

Fogarty recounted a case in 1910 involving the Rev. Henry Poels, who he said was the only Catholic University professor before Curran to have been dismissed for disagreeing with the church's authorized position.

The specific issues differed, with Curran dissenting on some moral points, such as the church ban against contraception, while Poels dissented against the official view that Moses wrote the first five books of the Bible.

That position has long since been abandoned in most biblical scholarship, Catholic and Protestant, with the five books seen as a compilation of various documents long after Moses' death.

But in Poels' time, he and others were "on the cutting edge" of a fuller understanding, Fogarty wrote, subjected to admonitions, censorship moves and other pressures to uphold the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch.

The church's Council of Trent had termed those Scriptures "the five books of Moses." To settle questioning, cardinals of a Pontifical Biblical Commission set up in 1903 ruled that Moses was "substantially" the author.

Through an interpreter, Poels spoke with Pope Pius X about difficulties with the decision, and was told through an intermediary not to contravene it and show "respect to authority," Fogarty related.

Back at Catholic University, Poels underwent various charges and inquiries into his concepts, including an order from Pius X to resign because his teaching was "was not in conformity with the magisterium of the church."

The Vatican's secretary of state, Cardinal Raffaele Merry del Val, entered the picture, Fogarty related, presenting Poels with an oath of conformity, which he declined to sign.

Unitarians provide alternative worship

By LOUIS B. PARKS
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Unitarian Universalists toss out an anecdote about why their membership is small.

"The world is full of Unitarians," they say. "They just don't know they're Unitarians."

It seems one can believe — or not believe — almost anything as a Unitarian Universalist. The membership includes agnostics, Christians, atheists, humanists, Jews and some who won't be classified.

"You are required to believe according to the dictates of your conscience," said the Rev. Dr. Frank Schulman, minister of Emerson Unitarian Church in Houston. "There is really no such thing as heresy in Unitarian Universalism. I consider the word 'heretic' as an honorable label, as I do the word 'agnostic.'"

The Unitarian Universalist Association has only 178,000 members nationally. It offers an alternative for some seeking a worship family and experience that are more liberal than mainstream Christianity. Some members call themselves Christians; many adamantly stress they are not Christian.

"Unitarianism was clearly a Christian religion until the last half of the 19th century," Schulman explained. "Then it broadened to include the validity of all world religions. We don't fuss much about labels. We cherish the mixture."

Schulman, whose church is the most traditional-oriented of Houston's Unitarian Universalist congregations, is a Christian Unitarian.

"Christian Unitarians are not Christian in the sense of the orthodox Christians," Schulman said. "I think Jesus conceived himself as human entirely. Divinity was claimed for him by others. The Unitarian Christian is completely faithful to the teachings of Jesus. But the Trinity (The doctrine that God exists in three forms — the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit) is not in the Bible."

Contrasting with Schulman are the Rev. Robert Schaibly, minister at First Unitarian Church, and the Rev. Dr. Doug Reisner, minister of Unitarian Fellowship of Houston. Reisner is also minister at the Unitarian Fellowship of College Station. They do not consider themselves Christians but rather as religious humanists, believing in Judeo-Christian concepts, particularly in the Golden Rule of doing unto others as you would have others do unto you.

"Unitarians don't share theological views," Reisner said. "What we do share are many values, such as religious freedom and the importance of working out your own ideas. About 90 percent of our members are from Christian backgrounds. Their argument was with the dogmatism of their religion. They like the freedom as Unitarians."

The Unitarian Universalist Association formed in 1961 when the American Unitarian Association and the Universalist Church of America merged. The American Unitarians developed out of Unitarianism (the refuting of the doctrine of the Trinity) begun in 16th-century Europe. The Universalists grew from an 18th-century movement professing universal salvation.

"The Universalists believed that God is too good to damn people to eternal hell," Schaibly said.

Schulman completed the familiar phrase: "The other side is that Unitarians believed man was too good to be damned."

Some Unitarians believe in salvation and immortality, Schaibly and Schulman discuss their Unitarian Universalist ministries in Houston.

others do not.

"It is something I have chosen to believe out of a real yearning to be reunited with people I have loved," Schaibly said. "Immortality or not, it's this world that deserves our concentration, not living in hope of somehow being admitted to heaven."

Even Christian Unitarians do not believe Jesus is the path to salvation.

"The entrance requirement to heaven would have to be based on deeds, not faith," Schulman said. "The 25th chapter of the Gospel According to Matthew is explicit on that. Jesus also said, 'Not everyone who says Lord, Lord will enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of my Father in heaven.' Unitarians have expressed the importance of doing the will of God as more important than any creed."

As Reisner pointed out: "If there is any one thing distinctive about us, it's that we are a creedless religion."

In contrast to most religions,

Unitarians are proud that their faith constantly changes.

"The early Unitarians would have said 'Truth is found in the Bible,'" Schulman said. "Now we say truth is found in the arts, sciences, other religions, the humanities, within the mind... The early Unitarians thought Jesus was divine but inferior to God. Now we consider Jesus a great exemplar, a great teacher, but not God."

"Agnosticism," Schulman said, "is a profession of ignorance, and this is my position. I do not know whether there is a God, in the sense I know Austin is the capital of Texas. It is an item of faith. But I recognize that new insight may change my mind."

Schaibly said God's existence is not the main issue. "We've abandoned the question of asking if there is a God. It seems exhausted. The real question is: How are you going to live your life, and what's going to be the character of your relationships?"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll spend wisely today if your purchases are restricted to items you truly need. Where non-essential, are concerned, you may waste money foolishly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It could prove to be an exercise in futility today if you try to beat situations where the odds are stacked against you. Let your common sense and sound judgment prevail.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep exaggerations to a minimum today. You'll come out second best if you try to beat someone who is an expert at telling whoppers.

Community Concert review

It was enchanting!

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Reviewer

Imagine if Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein had written all their best-loved songs into one spectacular show.

Just imagine. Songs like "The Sound of Music," "Oklahoma!" and "Bali Hai" all packed into one fantasy-filled evening, featuring the best of American musical theater.

The outcome probably would have been something like Wednesday night's Community Concerts presentation at M.K. Brown Auditorium, appropriately entitled Some Enchanted Evening.

And the result would have been...well, enchanting!

So it was at Wednesday's high-energy and fun-filled revue of 45 showstoppers by two of America's most well-known theater composers.

Here was the same "I Have Dreamed" that sent chills up and down the spines of millions in The King And I — the same "If I Loved You" that brought tears to your eyes in the tragic and yet somehow uplifting Carousel.

The revue of tunes spanning 10 different shows was performed by a troupe of five talented singers and actors, all with plenty of no-doubt well-earned credits to their names.

Perhaps the most entertaining performance of the night came from tenor William Leonard who, while he may not have had the best voice of the quintet, certainly lived things up by revealing both his strong acting and dancing talents.

Leonard danced a splendid soft shoe during the duet "Kansas City," from Oklahoma!, performed with baritone William Richert. And the tenor did a fine job in his solo number "How Do You Solve A Problem Like Maria?" from The Sound Of Music.

But Leonard's strongest asset was his ability to keep the show at a high-spirited level, whether through humor or sheer on-stage energy.

Richert turned in a solid performance of his own, with a strong singing voice and a convincing portrayal of the surly Jud singing "Lonely Room" from Oklahoma!

Another strong performance was turned in by singer Vanessa Shaw, who delighted and teased her way through a jazzed-up version of "I Can't Say No," also from Oklahoma!

In general, the solo and duet numbers of the show were more enjoyable than those the group performed as an ensemble, in part because they better showed off the unique talents of each performer. The cast also included singers Donna Thomason and Mary Jo Limpert.

But the ensemble numbers also lacked the simplicity that was the charm of the Golden Age of musical theater in post-war America during the '40s and '50s. Surprisingly, the title song, from the show South Pacific, suffered because, performed as an ensemble, it simply had too much going on to satisfy ears attuned to hearing a more basic Rodgers and Hammerstein sound.

A reprise of the song, late in the performance, came off much better as each member of the cast took a turn at singing the lovely melody.

All in all, though, music director and pianist John Mulcahy deserves much credit, not only for weaving together in fine fashion a truly "enchanted evening" but also for admirably handling a demanding accompaniment role that — as it should be for the stage — never detracted from the work of the players. His work was particularly effective and he blended in much better, again, during the solo and duet numbers.

If a major complaint is to be voiced, it must address the fact that the directors provided no vehicle to identify for the audience which performer was playing which part, something many concert-goers probably would have liked to know.

Wife has no appetite for fixing breakfast and lunch

DEAR ABBY: I am a part-time student and a full-time working woman. My husband commutes to work and must arrive there by 7:45 a.m. My problem: He expects me to prepare his breakfast and pack his lunch every morning. He contends that he can't do it — he doesn't have the time. I have been doing it for the last two years, and he hasn't seemed to appreciate my efforts.

For the last week I have refused to perform the above-mentioned services. I've told him that he must become responsible and take care of his own needs. Since then he has been buying his breakfast at a fast-food restaurant and spending lunch money we do not have.

How should I handle this?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: First, be honest with yourself. Your marriage is in trouble and the least of it is a shortage of money. If you are irritated by his lack of appreciation, say so, instead of punishing him by refusing to prepare his breakfast and pack his lunch "in an effort to make him responsible for his own needs." He's not your son, he's your husband. Get family counseling before your husband is not only eating out — he starts sleeping out.

DEAR ABBY: I've written to you many times saying, "Please help me, Abby!" None of those letters

Dear Abby

were mailed, but I'm writing to you now because I don't need your help anymore.

I was abused when I was a child, and for 20 years I was afraid of everything — afraid of failure, afraid of men, dating guys, and even calling for a dental appointment!

After a year of counseling, I am not afraid anymore. I can do anything I want to do. I can ask a guy out or go to a job interview with confidence because I know I'm a good person. It's like all my adult life I've been trying to get past a cement wall, and I suddenly broke through and found a whole new world!

I went to visit the father I had hated for so long, and it was like a miracle. I learned that we really loved each other. We just didn't know each other. Now we can laugh and talk!

Life isn't all roses, but thank God last year when I wanted to die, I didn't have the nerve to kill myself. I'M 22 AND LIFE IS BEAUTIFUL

DEAR TWENTY-TWO: Thanks for putting in a good word for counseling. I recommend it often because until we understand ourselves and change our behavior, we can't help ourselves and change our lives. Counseling is not always a miracle solution for everyone, but it's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married soon, and I have a question that no one seems to know the answer to. My best friend's mother says that when the bride comes down the aisle, the guests are not supposed to stand. She says that people originally stood at funerals to show respect for the dead. I would like to know the answer so that my mother will know whether to stand or not. I would hate for my wedding to be confused with a funeral.

MARRIED OR DEAD?

DEAR MARRIED: In some churches, and in some (but not all) areas, it's traditional for the guests to stand when the bride comes down the aisle. If you want the guests to stand when you come down the aisle, designate a few people to stand, then everyone else will follow suit.

Franklin County, Ga., was created from Cherokee Lands in 1784 at the close of the Revolutionary War. Many can trace families to this area and then on into the eastern states.

In 1983, the county historical society began efforts to produce a county history. It is now ready for distribution. The book may be ordered from The Franklin County Historical Society, P.O. Box 541, Carnesville, Ga., 30521. Please mention The Pampa News when ordering the book.

Genealogists and historians will find this book well-researched, well-written with excellent indexing. It covers the 200 year history of the county. It can be used often in research and well worth the money.

An attempt was made to include a family history of the older families in the county. These histories could provide vital information and perhaps an individual to contact for more material. Typical in family histories is information on the original land purchase, the place of origin of the family, the occupation and military service record. All of these things are valuable in trying to retrace the family.

The book also includes a cemetery listing of the county and the 1830 federal census. It contains 837 pages with maps, pictures, and articles that appeared in the area newspaper in 1907. The society plans an additional volume and we can look forward to it while enjoying the benefits of an excellent first volume.

Early settlers that moved to Texas included AYERS, BROWN, HULSEY, GUEST, DODD, WHITEHEAD and DEFOOR. If you are researching any of those surnames, the book might be of value to you.

Do you have information about a county history or other research tool that you will share with us? Send the material to me: Gena Walls, 1525 Palm Valley Blvd., 907, Round Rock, 78664.

Learn microwave cooking at home

A home study course with information and experiments to help homemakers learn more about cooking with a microwave oven is now available from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Research shows that most people use their microwave oven for simply reheating and defrosting foods, rather than actually cooking. Therefore, the Extension Service is offering this course for people who want to get full cooking use out of their microwave investment. Participants in previous Extension home study courses have reported significant changes in the way they use their microwave ovens after completing the course.

The course contains eight lessons to be completed at one's own pace. The first three lessons include information on the oven, accessories and utensils; factors that influence cooking, reheating and defrosting times; and meal planning and recipe conversions. The remaining five lessons cover microwaving breads and cereals; dairy products; vegetables and fruits; meats; jam, jelly and candy, as well as foods for children to cook. Although these five lessons follow a logical progression, each can stand alone so they can be done in a different order or some of them skipped.

To get a copy of the microwave basics home study course, mail a $3 check or money order to cover printing and postage costs to Microwave Basics, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Department of Ag. Communications (2112), Reed McDonald Bldg., Room 101, Texas A&M University, College Station, 77843. Or call or write the Gray County Extension office for an order blank.

College football roundup Bulldogs' quarterback worries Dye

By The Associated Press

Looking at Saturday's key Southeastern Conference battle in Starkville, Miss., Auburn Coach Pat Dye only wants to talk about Mississippi State quarterback Don Smith.

"Don Smith is the most dominant offensive player in the conference," Dye says of the senior who leads the SEC in total offense with an average of 256 yards per game.

"Talentwise, he's a lot like Reggie Collier when he was at Southern Mississippi. Smith isn't as big, but he's faster," Dye said. "Of all the things he does, the most impressive thing to me is his durability. He has taken a lot of punishment and keeps coming back."

"We will have to be at our best just to have a chance, and even that might not be good enough." Dye's Tigers, 6-0, are ranked seventh in The Associated Press poll, while Mississippi State, 6-1, is 13th. Both teams are undefeated in conference play.

In other matchups between ranked teams Saturday, No. 6 Penn State is at No. 2 Alabama in a battle of unbeatens, and No. 16 Clemson travels to No. 20 North Carolina State.

Other games Saturday will find No. 3 Nebraska at Colorado, No. 4 Michigan at Indiana, No. 5 Oklahoma at Iowa State, Oregon at No. 8 Washington, Utah at No. 9 Arizona State, Rice at No. 10 Texas, Texas A&M, Northwestern at No. 11 Iowa, North Carolina at No. 12 Louisiana State, No. 14 Arkansas at Houston, California at No. 15 Arizona, Washington State at No. 17 UCLA, No. 18 Southern Methodist at Texas and Southern California at No. 19 Stanford.

Auburn is second in the SEC in total defense, allowing just 273 yards per game. But Dye says the defense will have more than Smith to contend with if the Tigers are to beat the Bulldogs.

"I picked Mississippi State to be the dark horse in the conference before the season began. I knew they had the ability and talent," Dye said. "What impresses me most about Mississippi State is that they are getting as much as they can out of their talent and ability."

Smith, who has completed 80 of 149 passes for 1,260 yards and 10 touchdowns, suffered a foot injury in last week's victory over Tulane, but will start on Saturday. He has run for 533 yards and scored six touchdowns.

The Tigers have won 41 of 59 meetings against Mississippi State with two ties, and have won the last four games in the series.

North Carolina State has been the surprise of the Atlantic Coast Conference, upsetting Maryland and North Carolina. But the Wolfpack will now go up against Clemson, a 10-point favorite.

Clemson leads the series 35-18-1 and has won the last five games.

Texas A&M, 5-1, is a 31-point favorite over Rice, 2-4, while Oklahoma, 5-1, is favored by 33 points over Iowa State, 4-2. In their last 24 Big Eight meetings, Oklahoma is 23-0-1 against the Cyclones.

NFL roundup Broncos try for tighter grip

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The Denver Broncos, plagued by costly penalties, turnovers, dropped passes and the like in a loss to the New York Jets that prevented them from being the only unbeaten team in the NFL, will have to get a tighter grip on things if they are to retain their lead in the AFC West.

And the Broncos, who also managed to rush for just 38 yards in the 22-10 loss to New York, will have to do it Sunday against the turnover-conscious defense of the Seattle Seahawks.

"They're second in the NFL in causing turnovers," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said of the Seahawks. "That's what they thrive on. They try to force you into mistakes, and then they pounce on you."

The Seahawks, who intercepted four passes in a 17-12 victory over the New York Giants last Sunday, lead the AFC with 21 takeaways. They have turned the ball over just 11 times for a plus-10 ratio.

"We stress turnovers," said Seattle Coach Chuck Knox, whose 5-2 Seahawks can tie for the division lead with a victory at Denver's Mile High Stadium.

In another game with first place on the line, the Los Angeles Rams will try to wrest the the NFC West lead from visiting Atlanta. In other games Sunday, Cincinnati is at Pittsburgh, Cleveland at Minnesota, Detroit at Chicago, the Los Angeles Raiders at Houston, Miami at Indianapolis, New England at Buffalo, New Orleans at the New York Jets, San Diego at Philadelphia, San Francisco vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Tampa Bay at Kansas City, and St. Louis at Dallas.

The Giants will try for a share of the NFC East lead when they host Washington on Monday night.

The game matches the NFL's top rusher, Eric Dickerson, who has 860 yards for the Rams, against the Falcons' Gerald Riggs, who is third with 652.

Lions-Bears

Chicago plans to start quarterback Jim McMahon, who sat out the 6-1 Bears' 23-7 upset loss to Minnesota with back and shoulder problems. The Bears have won 21 straight games with McMahon as the starter.

Saints-Jets

New York, off to its best start ever at 6-1, is looking to win six straight games for the first time since 1974. Ken O'Brien, hampered by a knee injury, starts at quarterback for the Jets, who hold a two-game lead in the AFC East on the strength of his passing to Wesley Walker and Al Toon.

Cardinals-Cowboys

Dallas, tied with the 5-2 Giants for second in the NFC East, was expected to go with banged up veteran quarterback Danny White, who played sparingly in a 17-14 overtime victory against Philadelphia. Herschel Walker leads the Cowboys with 363 rushing yards and 378 more as a receiver.

Raiders-Oilers

Los Angeles, 4-3, is looking for its fifth straight victory with the AFC's top-rated defense yielding just 267.6 yards per game. A victory, coupled with a Seattle win at Denver, would move the Raiders within a game of the lead in the West.

Houston has lost six straight since an opening-day victory.

49ers-Packers

Green Bay, 1-6 and coming off a victory over Cleveland, will have its hands full against 4-2-1 San Francisco. The 49ers have the league's top receiver in Jerry Rice, who has caught 37 passes for 781 yards and eight touchdowns.

Dolphins-Colts

Miami, which has allowed a league-high 220 points in compiling a 2-5 record, is seeking to extend the NFL's longest winning streak against a single opponent to 13 games. Hapless Indianapolis, 0-7, has scored a league-low 68 points.

Patriots-Bills

Another winning streak, 4-3 New England's eight-game hold on 2-5 Buffalo, is on the line. The Patriots have a hot quarterback in Steve Grogan, who has thrown six touchdown passes in the last two games. But he was listed as questionable with a hand injury.
