Bell-Boeing delivers Aircraft delivered 100th V-22 Osprey

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

AMARILLO -- Keith Woods and a dozen or more other Pampans commute to Bell-Boeing every day to help protect the country. Woods said they're all proud of what they do.

What they did this week was deliver the 100th V-22 Osprey tiltrotor aircraft to the U.S. military. In this case, the plane will go to the Marine Corps, and Bell Helicopter and Boeing officials involved in the project hope Woods and his friends stay fully employed for years to come.

At ceremonies in a Bell hangar Wednesday, Gene Cunningham, Boeing vice president and Bell-Boeing V-22 program director, said he they will deliver another 167 V-22s under a new contract expected to be signed this month. He said that four years from now, he hopes to be looking at the 200th V-22. Three years beyond that, he said the facility could be looking at the 300th V-22.

Chuck Allen, Boeing vice president and general manager of Rotorcraft Systems, said that in spite of skeptics of tiltrotor technology, the V-22 is transforming the fighting capabilities of U.S. armed forces.

"Go back 50 or 60 years," said Dick Millman, president

Call for fight leads to arrest of two for drug possession

By MARILYN POWERS Staff Writer

Two Pampa residents were arrested and booked into Gray County Jail at 3:50 a.m. today after Pampa Police Department officers responded to a call concerning a fight in progress at 516 N.

"Upon arrival, they observed a gray 2005 Ford Expedition attempting to leave the scene," said PPD Sgt. Donny Officers stopped the Expedition and, after further investigation, arrested both occupants, Brown said.

Gustavo Pena Jr., 34, the driver, was arrested for assault causing bodily injury after David Farrar, 45, of 516 N. Frost said that Pena struck him on the left side of his face and ear.

The passenger, Thalia Rodriguez,

19, was taken into custody on a runaway pickup order out of Travis County that is over two years old, Brown said.

"Officers conducting a search of the vehicle prior to impoundment found suspected narcotics under the passenger seat," Brown said.

The substance found was 18.9 grams of suspected cocaine, according to PPD Det. Casey Ingersoll.

Pena and Rodriguez were both charged with possession of over two grams but less than 400 grams of a controlled substance, a second-degree felony. Punishment could range from two to 20 years in a state penitentiary and a fine of up to $10,000, Brown said.

"The case has been turned over to the PPD Criminal Investigations Division for follow-up," he said.

March 18th at 11:45 a.m. in the M.K. Brown room, 200 N. Ballard. Speaker will be John Horst with the City of Pampa. Meal provided by R&R Catering will include CFS, Mashed Potato w/Gravy, Beans & Salad. Public is welcome, Please RSVP at 669-3241 by March 14th.

Defense attorney says man put infant in microwave to protect he

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) -An Arkansas man who claims he was insane when he injured his infant daughter placed her in a microwave oven to keep himself from harming the 2-month-old, his attorney told jurors Thursday.

Joshua Mauldin is accused of placing his daughter Ana in a Galveston hotel microwave for 10 to 20 seconds last May. He is also accused of punching the baby and putting her in a refrigerator and a hotel-room safe.

Mauldin has a history of mental illness and put the infant in the safe, refrigerator and microwave to keep from harming her because he was hallucinating, said his defense attorney, Sam Cammack III.

Cammack said Mauldin has been hearing voices since he was 10 and has been "wracked by psychosis, bipolar (disorder), major severe depressive disorder, schizophrenia.'

Just before the infant was harmed, Mauldin, who is very religious, started hallucinating, thinking about a strip club, feeling a white hot burning sensation in his stomach and then feeling like she said. "mud was running up his body and consuming him," Cammack told jurors during opening statements at Mauldin's trial.

"He places her in the microwave and says, 'I saw what was happening but I couldn't do anything about it.' Then he stops and says, 'Oh my goodness. My child is in the microwave.' He pulls her out," Cammack said.

But Galveston County prosecutor Xochitl Vandiver told jurors Mauldin was not insane. Vandiver said he hurt the child because he couldn't stop her from crying.

"He feels agitated. He just wants to get out of there. The baby is fussy," Vandiver said. "In the middle of hurting his child, he stopped, went to the hotel room door and he locked it. And that was to prevent his wife who was downstairs from coming in. And that shows you he knows what he was doing was wrong."

Mauldin lied to authorities about what happened to his daughter, telling different stories that never matched the child's severe injuries,

He said Marines in Iraq are getting up everyday and going to work flying the latest version of that aircraft.

Cunningham said that the Marines have12 V-22s in operation in Iraq. The first squadron of V-22s went into combat with the Marines in October, 2007.

That squadron has been in Iraq for five months, car-

"I was standing there as a young major and said, Wow, we do need to get some of those.""

He said he became a fan of tiltrotor technology at the very beginning of its development.

While attending the Naval War College in Newport, R.I., in 1988, Trautman wrote a paper entitled, "Can the Osprey Survive in Combat?" That paper surfaced when Trautman assumed his duties as head of Marine aviation in 2007. He made sure that his officers read it. Trautman said the conclusion of his paper was right. It can.

Citing an article in Popular Mechanics last fall, Trautman said the V-22 is one of the big deals of the 21st Century.

"Slowly, over time, people are starting to realize what a big deal it is," Trautman said.

He said the V-22 has flown into battle and carried out the wounded to get them to emergency care during the first critical moments of injury, something other aircraft wouldn't have been able to do.

"They've done that faster and with more efficiency than anything that's gone before it," Trautman said. Is Keith Woods proud? "Oh, yeah," he said confidently Wednesday standing in front of the latest V-

I love creative news Poetry Month. To mark this releases. Luckily, this is a taste I feed practically every day here at the news office by simply clicking on my email account. For example, this week alone I have received the following electronic news releases:

"To honor the special month," the e-release states, 'children ages 7-12 are being asked to write a poem and provide a photo of their favorite animal friend." Two grand prize winners will be honored in separate categories, the release reports. The deadline to enter is March 31. The e-release defines MeetMeAtTheCorner.org as a site that provides virtual

Now I have recently (in another column) touched briefly upon the importance of "election-wear," but now e-release from ShoeMall.com reports that the impact on fashion trends by both past and present election hoopla is

"revolutionary."

In its e-release, ShoeMall declares that "this spring's dramatic shoe styles symbolize the incredible strides women have made since the suffragettes declared victory" circa 1920. Did you know ShoeMall even sponsored the "2nd U.S. ShoeMall Census?"

Talk about break-out According to ideas! ShoeMall, fashionistas should soon begin to see the following style modifications: Bright, bold colors; pop art and graphic prints; architectural heels of all shapes and sizes; spectacular Gladiator-style sandals; and pumps that have gone from basic to wow!

Hmm ... Does that mean pumps are really "pumping it up?" Oh, I am too silly. (In case you're wondering exactly how bright, bold colors, pop art, graphic prints, etc., and the election relate, I am wondering that, too. ...)

Out of all three e-submissions, I really think ForestEthics may be closest to being on to something big. ForestEthics wants to end junk mail.

"ForestEthics," an e-release proclaims, "is urging Americans to sign a petition www.DoNotMail.org demanding a national registry that will finally offer citizens control over the unsolicited coupons, credit cards, catalogs and advertisements that fill their mailboxes on a daily basis."

Ergonomics: Science of 'work comfort'

Have you ever been sitting at your desk, decided to get up and your back began to hurt? How many times do you rub your eyes or your neck when you work at your computer for long stretches? After typing multiple pages of information, do your hands ache or feel like they're "burning?"

If you answered "yes" to any of those questions, you to know about ergonomics. No, it's not that course you flunked out of in college. It's the study of the relationship between humans and their environ-

For the longest time, ergonomics was not a respected field of study. It was considered a witch doctor science. But when more and more people turned up with carpal tunnel syndrome, experts took notice. Today, engineers, medical practitioners and product thumb, middle finger, index design specialists work hand-in-hand to produce "human-friendly" processes.

As it relates to an office environment, ergonomics can be divided into three areas of study:

Hand/wrist pain, back Spellmann and pain eye strain. Columnist Hand and wrist pain

defihas nitely stolen the limelight when it comes to ergonomic problems. You can't stand around the office water cooler too long before hearing someone talking about Carpal Tunnel Syndrome.

This condition is caused by bone pressure exerted on the median nerve at the wrist. The median nerve provides feeling to the thumbside of the palm, and to the ing is called the carpal tunnel. The tunnel is stiff, so swelling of any of the tissues in this area can cause compression of the nerve, causing pain. By the way, if you're looking to impress your friends with your condition, call it "median nerve dysfunction."

To avoid this painful condition, take time out from your daily routine and perform some hand stretching exercises. For instance, every hour or so, clench your hands as tight as you can and then open them, stretching your fingers as hard as you can. Another easy exercise involves pressing your hand against a hard surface, stretching your fingers at the same time.

If you have a little money, invest in a keyboard wrist pad, so your hands don't have to bend so awkwardly to type. Some keyboards have also been created that are split down the middle and slanted. These help keep the arms straight and help avoid fatigue.

While wrist and hand pain get most of the attention, more people suffer from back pain than any other type of work-related ailment. In fact, statistics point

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

n Feb. 29 Odessa American on the Texas

Forest Service: Perhaps we should borrow a familiar advertising slogan to explain how West Texans appreciate the help being offered each time a grass fire gets out of hand oh thank heaven for the Texas

Forest Service. You can't help but wonder what misfortune might have occurred in the past few weeks without the wealth of services and expertise rolled out by that dance of undergrowth due to last years above-average moisture in the area leaves plenty of fuel for wildfires when conditions this dry exist. But the massive fires that have erupted in this region, including the one that burned more than 5,000 acres just southeast of Odessa, have been contained to mostly vacant land.

For the most part, structures have been spared. And no lives have been lost. It was fortunate that the high winds that fanned the blaze near Odessa were blowing away from populated areas.

At the same time, the hard work of hundreds of area firefighters and the Texas Forest Service had to work feverishly to head off the flames as they neared residences as well as the Bob Derrington Water Reclamation Plant. Yes, evacuations have taken place in some instances. But that is just a sign that area firefighters are on top of their game. So far, we havent had to witness repeat of the December 2005 fires that wiped out a significant part of the town of Cross Plains in the Abilene

As the fire danger continues to be a concern, fire departments across Texas are on high alert. As Taner Drake, assistant chief for the Odessa Fire Department explained, "Were basically going to make sure everything is ready to go in case a big grass fire breaks out. We're going to try to make sure our equipment is ready, and we have an overtime list just in case a fire gets too bad, and we need extra men at the scene."

And recent events also have imparted some valuable knowledge to those who may literally be in the line of fire. West Odessa Volunteer Fire Chief Jimmy Ellis said he hopes the department takes more caution at the next fire.

"We need to make sure we don't mess up our equipment next time," Ellis said. "Some few scratches, but we were lucky. Those pumpers we have shouldnt have been that deep in the fire. Were lucky they werent seriously damaged."

But that's where the Texas Forest Service comes in. Ellis pointed out that agency has the right equipment to go deep into fires. What's more, the state agency has the ability to call in aerial support to help extinguish raging range

John Bear, Texas Forest Service public information officer, said forest service crews are to be ready at a of the fire trucks only had a moment's notice. "We definitely wont have our guard down in the upcoming days," he said. "We have people ready to roll at any moment a grass fire breaks out."

Bear said all of the Texas Forest Service members are under "three-minute notification.

"They have three minutes to be in their truck and to be heading toward wherever a major fire is going to be," he

More than a quarter million acres of land have been scorched in this area alone. But the forest service is charged with monitoring the entire state.

As dry as Texas is this year, thats a massive job to undertake. But a lot of dedicated firefighters from both the local and state ranks have accomplished some remarkable results.

And we have the opportunity to make their jobs a little less challenging and dangerous by being extremely careful not to do anything, from flicking a cigarette to burning things outdoors, that might touch off yet another fire. grass http://www.oaoa.com

Study: Profanity in PG movies helps decide box office success

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A new study by The Nielsen Co. found that the PG-rated movies with the least profanity made the most money at the U.S. box office.

Sexuality or violence in those films had less to do with success than the language, the Nielsen PreView group said in a study being released Thursday.

"The reality is that profanity, within PG, is the big demarcation between box office winner and box office loser," research and marketing director Dan O'Toole said at ShoWest, a conference where studios unveil upcoming movie lineups.

"Parents are choosing PG films for their kids that have very, very low levels of profanity. We're talking one-third the level of the average PG film," he said.

The research firm cross-referenced box office data on 400 films in wide-release from the fall of 2005 to the fall of 2007 with their ratings for sex, violence and profanity given by Critics Inc.'s Kids-In-Mind.com Web site.

Controlling for marketing and production budgets of films, as well as depictions of violence and sex, movies that scored an average 0.8 on a 10-point profanity scale collected an average of $69 million. Those that averaged 2.8 for profanity averaged $38 million.

All PG movies averaged 2.3 on the profanity scale. The Nielsen unit, which launched a fee-based research Web site for studios on Tuesday, also listed other early predictors of success.

out that 90 percent of us will encounter a back-related disabling episode sometime in our lives. Unfortunately, in most cases, we can only treat the symptoms and not the cause. That's mainly because doctors can only diagnose a physiological reason for 20 percent of back pain sufferers. So, what can you do?

First, listen to your third grade teacher, and sit up straight! Poor posture is the leading cause of mild, daily back pain. Two types of posture-related activities can cause back pain constant leaning forward in your chair and sitting in one position for long periods.

Obviously, to combat this condition, change your position often and try to sit back in your seat. Buy a lumbar support or roll an old towel and put it behind your lower back. Stand up from time to time and stretch your back. Put your hands on your hips, lean forward, back, and then side to Eye strain is the third most common malady caused by poor ergonomics. A number of factors (all fixable) can cause eye fatigue during normal office day. First, let's start with the lights. Fluorescent lights are evil and should be destroyed. While they are great at diffusing light in a large room, they can wreak havoc on your eyes over time. If you have your own office, turn off the fluorescent lights and use normal light bulbs. If this means bringing a few lamps to your office, so be it.

Next, take a look at your computer monitor. Are you having to tilt your head up or down to read it? Position your monitor so that looking straight ahead puts your vision in the middle of the screen. Also, check your resolution. Resolution refers to the number of pixels (dots) that make up a monitor's screen image. Most monitors have three basic settings in this area: 640 x 480, 800 x 600, and 1024 x 768. You can see your current settings by right clicking on your desktop and choosing "properties." Then choose the "settings" tab on the display window.

From my personal experience, if you have a 14-inch monitor, stay with the 640 x 480 resolution. If you have a 15-inch monitor, you might try 800 x 600, but at the first sign of fatigue, switch back. If you are lucky enough to have a 17 or 19 inch monitor, work at a minimum of 800 x 600 and see if you can work at 1024 x 768. Remember, at the first sign of eyestrain, choose a lower resolution. If you wear contacts or glasses, check with your optometrist about special prescriptions for people who work on computers.

As time goes on, you'll see newer and more ingenious ways to stay comfortable while working on your PC. Just remember, don't trust every snake-oil, ergonomic doodad salesman you run into ...

I'll see you in Cyberspace!

Paterson faces challenges as NY governor after Spitzer resigns

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - As Eliot Spitzer it." departs the governor's office in disgrace, his replacement will face political challenges in place long before the prostitution scandal that paralyzed the state Capitol.

Lt. Gov David Paterson will try to heal bruised relations with lawmakers in both unaided, recognize people at conversationparties who were offended by Spitzer's confrontational leadership style. He also faces a tight budget in a slowing economy and memories of divisive issues from Spitzer's less than 15month tenure.

But Paterson, a fellow Democrat who becomes New York's first black governor and the nation's first legally blind chief executive, plans to be well prepared for the job. He asked for a handover on Monday, five days after Spitzer's resignation.

Obama wins five more delegates than Clinton in Mississippi primary

WASHINGTON (AP) -Sen. Barack Obama picked up five more delegates than Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton in Mississippi's Democratic primary Tuesday.

But Clinton erased the gain Wednesday after final election results became available from a couple of Super Tuesday contests.

In Mississippi, Obama won 19 delegates and Clinton 14, according to an analysis of returns by The Associated Press.

Obama won the primary with more than 60 percent of the vote, according to unofficial returns. But Clinton was able to hold down Obama's delegate gains by winning one of the state's four congressional districts. Obama carried the other three.

Clinton eliminated the gain when she picked up delegates based on final results from the New York primary and the Colorado caucuses, both of which were held Feb. 5. Clinton gained four delegates in Colorado and one delegate in New York.

The results were delayed in New York because the race for one delegate was won the New York primary, picking up 139 delegates, to 93 for Obama.

In Colorado, Democratic Party did not release results by congressional district until this week. Ten delegates had been outstanding; three went to Obama and seven went to Clinton. Obama won the Colorado caucuses, getting 35 delegates, to 20 for Clinton.

Obama won the primary with more than 60 percent of the vote, according to unofficial returns.

Clinton also picked up superdelegates Wednesday, but she lost a high profile one when New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer resigned amid a scandal involving a high-priced prostitution ring.

New York's incoming governor, David Paterson, already is a Clinton superdelegate through his position is as an at-large member of the Democratic National Committee.

In the overall race for the too close to call. Clinton nomination, Obama had 1,602 delegates, including separately chosen party and elected officials known as the superdelegates. Clinton had 1,496, according to the AP count.

> It takes 2,025 delegates to secure the Democratic nomination at the party's national convention this

The AP tracks the delegate races by calculating the number of national convention delegates won by candidates in each presidential primary or caucus, based on state and national party rules, and by interviewing unpledged delegates to obtain their preferences.

Most primaries and some caucuses are binding, meaning delegates won by the candidates are pledged to support that candidate at the national conventions.

Political parties in some states, however, use multistep procedures to award national delegates. Typically, such states use local caucuses to elect delegates to state or congressional district conventions, where national delegates are selected. In these states, the AP uses the results from local caucuses to calculate the number of national delegates each candidate will win, if the candidate's level of support at the caucus doesn't change.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: From time to time you print letters about finding "pennies from heaven." Are you ready for another one? Our daughter is adopting a little boy, and our other daughter was hosting a yard sale to raise money for the airfare to bring the child to this country. My mother, a widow, had donated my father's racing bike. It was hard for her to let go of it because Dad had won many senior Olympic medals with it. The bike sold the first day, and I immediately called Mom to tell her the news. Right after I hung up the phone with her, I looked down at the table where my grandsons had been helping me count change. In the middle of a pile of dimes was a penny. When I picked it up, I saw it was a "wheatie." Then I turned it over and couldn't believe my eyes. The date on the penny was 1918, the year my father was born. Although this may not be your typical "pennies from heaven" story, I truly believe it was a penny from heaven -- a message from Dad that he was glad to contribute to our yard sale and was with us in spirit. -- JACLYN IN BALLWIN, MO.

DEAR JACLYN: And don't ever let anyone try to convince you otherwise.

DEAR ABBY: When I went to my favorite restaurant recently, I noticed that the menu had changed. I asked our server if I could have an entree from the previous menu. She said she loved the dish too, and would ask the chef if he would make it for me. He agreed, and dinner was lovely. My fiance and I returned to this restaurant last night, and I told him I wanted to order my favorite dish again. He told me that ordering something not on the menu is rude. I don't see it that way. In fact, I would think that it would be regarded as a compliment to the chef because it meant I had enjoyed the way he prepared it for me before. Besides, the chef agreed to do it for me the last time we were there.

Who is right -- my fiance or me? --CHEF'S SPECIAL FOR ONE

DEAR SPECIAL: Your fiance may have been afraid that ordering something that was not on the menu would be more expensive, and that's why he objected. Also, if the restaurant was extremely busy that night, I could understand why asking for something "special" might be an imposition. However, since the chef had prepared it for you before, and because restaurants are in the business of selling food, there was nothing "rude" about your request. The next time you call to make reservations, ask in advance if the chef can prepare your special dish for you.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column every day, and I never see the grammar and punctuation errors I typically encounter. Are the letters you publish revised, or are only the most literate and conscientious people moved to write to you? - ENGLISH TEACHER IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR ENGLISH TEACHER: Everyone who writes to me is "conscientious." However, there are some errors in spelling, grammar or punctuation in the letters that cross my desk. My staff, my syndicate editors and I try to ensure that any errors are corrected before a letter appears in print. To perpetuate the errors by printing them would set a bad example or distract from the question being presented.

Meadows-Defeated Annexed by Chinese is denying mountaineers per-Kauffman Walker (Altus) mission to climb its side of troops 58 years ago but with a resilient exile community

BEIJING (AP) — China Mount Everest this spring, a move that reflects concerns by the communist government that Tibet activists may try to disrupt its plans to carry the Olympic torch up the world's tallest peak.

In recent days, everyone from the U.S. government to rights groups and George Clooney have urged China to tackle issues as varied as its restrictions on religion; the poor working conditions of migrant labor; Beijing's oil purchases from Sudan to fuel

The Everest restrictions were contained in a letter the government's mountaineering association sent this week to expedition companies. It comes as China's much criticized rule of Tibet, long a hot-button issue, is heating up, joining a growing list of other topics that want Beijing to confront before overseeing Olympic preparations.

With less than five months to go to the games - and three weeks before the Olympic flame arrives in Beijing — events are taking on a harder political tone, and the criticism has put the government on the defensive at a time it hoped to be bask-

"They see this as somewhat hostile and mainly because it's pressure to change, and that provokes a hostile reaction from them," said Susan Brownell, an American expert on China sports scene who is spending a year at Beijing Sports

ers have not released an exact date of the ascent, but preparations point to late April or early May.

The north side of Everest, which is in Chinese territory, contains some of the most difficult routes to the summit. The south side, through Nepal, is the most popular way to the top. China has tried to pressure Nepal to close the south side as well, according to Web site ever-

In September 2006, a Tibetan man and Buddhist nun were shot and killed by Chinese border guards at the 19,028-foot Nangpa La Pass, a common escape route for Tibetans fleeing to Nepal. The shootings, which China said were in self-defense, were caught on video by climbers at a base camp for the nearby Cho Oyu moun-

The letter sent to expedition companies this week by government's China the Tibet Mountaineering Association, which issues permits for Everest, said climbs of that mountain and Cho Oyu should be postponed until after May 10.

The letter, which was posted on a foreign mountaineering Web MountEverest.net and verified by the association, cites "heavy climbing activities" as among the reasons but does not mention the torch.

Zhang Mingxing, general secretary of the association, said his group would still welcome several hundred climbers but suggested that most would be in the August to October climbing season. Besides, he said, "the climate in Tibet this year is a bit unusual. It is still snowing here and the wind is pretty big, so it is better to postpone the climbing."

Mountaineering groups, incensed by the decision, said they had been told that the relay was the main reason for the postponements.

"No applications for climbing Mount Everest between March and June are being accepted" because of the torch relay, said Li Hua with the Tibet Polar Land Exploration Tourist Co. in the Tibetan capital, Lhasa. "No matter whether you're an individual or group, it's impossible to get permission to climb the mountain during the period."

Paulino sidelined for at least a month

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) - Houston Astros righthander Felipe Paulino will be out at least a month with a pinched nerve in his upper throwing arm.

Paulino traveled to Houston on Monday to be examined by team physician Dr. David Lintner after experiencing upper arm discomfort, X-rays showed no structural damage to the shoulder and the injury will by treated with anti-inflammatory medication and daily treatment.

The 24-year-old, who was competing for a spot in Houston's rotation, will not be able to throw for a minimum of one month. He will be periodically evaluated during that month.

He's allowed four hits and five runs in two outings this spring.

Three boys who were thrown off overpass by mom survived

DALLAS (AP) — A mother threw her two struggling sons from a freeway overpass during Wednesday's morning rush before leaping off herself, police said.

All three somehow survived the 22foot fall into traffic.

Khandi Busby, 27, and her sons, ages 8 and 6, walked away from her father, who had stopped for gas while driving them to a friend's house.

"She was not fleeing for her safety," Dallas police spokesman St. Gil Cerda said. "She just threw them over and decided to throw herself over."

Each boy struggled with his mother as she picked the children up and threw them over the edge, onto the freeway filled with fast-moving morning commuters, police said.

"It was a remarkably horrendous event, but there's a lot to be thankful for," said Lt. C.L. Williams. "Everyone's alive, and there were no injuries among the motorists. As horrific as it was, it could have been far, far worse."

Busby and the boys were in stable condition at Dallas hospitals, police said. They are well enough to speak with investigators, although the 8-year-old is believed to have some internal injuries.

All three landed in the far left lane of westbound Interstate 30 around 6:30 a.m.

Police believe Busby and the 8-yearold were struck by cars, which managed miss the younger brother and also avoided collisions with other vehicles, Cerda

"It was really miraculous that we didn't have some fatalities with this incident," Cerda said.

Police said the woman took her two sons to the overpass while her father was paying for gas.

Her father had to make a U-turn to follow her in the car, but Busby had already thrown her sons and herself from the overpass before he could reach them, police said.

"The why remains a mystery to us," Williams said. "If you try to apply logic to these incidents, they totally defy any logical explanation."

— For 20 years, Duval County Sheriff Santiago Barrera Jr. did what he pleased with no challenges to his reign.

He decided who sat in his jail and when they were released. Sometimes it was before a judge got involved and other times it was after.

He didn't appreciate competition from the ranks. Barrera had the commander of a tri-county drug task force demoted last year after the commander announced he was running against Barrera for sheriff of the southern Texas county of about 12,000.

"I brought the Sheriff's Department from nothing to what it is right now," he said.

So no one took it lightly when the 67-year-old Barrera said Jan. 29 that he would lock up local released a 65-year-old man reporters if they kept fering" in his business.

Barrera lost his re-election bid this month, but will have nine more months in office to make good on his threat.

Barrera is accustomed to things being done his way in SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) a part of Texas where elected officials don't easily fade into the woodwork.

> It was less than 10 miles away where Alice Mayor Grace Saenz-Lopez told neighbors last summer the Shih Tzu she was dogsitting had died when, in fact, she was keeping it for herself. Saenz-Lopez later resigned.

> One of Barrera's predecessors as Duval County sheriff, George Parr, is widely believed to have been behind the stuffed ballot box in neighboring Jim Wells County that swung a tight U.S. Senate race to Lyndon Johnson in 1948.

"He's out on my own authority, but I told him he's on house arrest," Barrera told The Freer Press at the time.

Last December, he arranged for Romeo Ramirez to be demoted as commander of the drug task old son, Miguel, on charges force to patrol

A rocky relationship between politicians unaccustomed to media criticism and an aggressive newspaper is not unusual. Perez received anony-

Carrillo, the county attorney, said he was waiting to interview Maher before deciding whether to pass Barrera's comments along to the district attorney. As of last Friday, he had not yet spoken with Barrera.

Asked how Barrera managed to stay in office for 20 years, Carrillo noted that despite the scandais, the sheriff managed to receive 47 percent of the vote in the primary.

Sheriff: Kansas woman sat on boyfriend's toilet for two years

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Authorities are considering charges in the bizarre case of a woman who sat on her boyfriend's toilet for two years — so long that her body was stuck to the seat by the time the boyfriend finally called police.

Ness County Sheriff Bryan Whipple said it appeared the 35-year-old Ness City woman's skin had grown around the seat. She initially refused emergency medical services but was finally convinced by responders and her boyfriend that she needed to be checked out at a hospital.

"We pried the toilet seat off with a pry bar and the seat went with her to the hospital," Whipple said. "The hospital removed it"

Whipple said investigators planned to present their report Wednesday to the county attorney, who will determine whether any charges should be filed against the woman's 36-year-old boyfriend.

"She was not glued. She was not tied. She was just physically stuck by her body," Whipple said. "It is hard to imagine. ... I 'She was not glued. She was not tied. She was just physically stuck by her body. It is hard to imagine. ... I still have a hard time imagining it myself.'

> — Bryan Whipple Ness County sheriff still have a hard time imagining it myself."

He told investigators he brought his girlfriend food and water, and asked her every day to come out of the bathroom.

"And her reply would be, 'Maybe tomorrow," Whipple said. "According to him, she did not want to leave the bathroom."

The boyfriend called police on Feb. 27 to report that "there was something wrong with his girlfriend," Whipple said, adding that he never explained why it took him two years to call.

Police found the clothed woman sitting on the toilet, her sweat pants down to her mid-thigh. She was "somewhat disoriented," and her legs looked like they had atrophied, Whipple said.

"She said that she didn't need any help, that she was OK and did not want to leave," he said

She was reported in fair condition at a hospital in Wichita, about 150 miles southeast of Ness City. Whipple said she has refused to cooperate with medical providers or law enforcement investigators.

Authorities said they did not know if she was mentally or physically disabled.

Police have declined to release the couple's names, but the house where authorities say the incident happened is listed in public records as the residence of Kory McFarren. No one answered his home phone number.

The case has been the buzz Ness City, said James Ellis, a neighbor.

"I don't think anybody can make any sense out of it," he said.

Ellis said he had known the woman since she was a child but that he had not seen her for at least six years.

He said she had a tough childhood after her mother died at a young age and apparently was usually kept inside the house as she grew up. At one time the woman worked for a long-term care facility, he said, but he did not know what kind of work she did there.

"It really doesn't surprise me," Ellis said of the bathroom incident. "What surprises me is somebody wasn't called in a bit earlier."

Eighth-grader punished for buying candy at Conn. school

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — An eighth-grade honors student who was suspended for a day, barred from attending an honors dinner and stripped of his title as class vice president after he was caught with contraband candy in school will get his student council post back, school officials said.

Superintendent Reginald Mayo said in a statement late Wednesday that he and principal Eleanor Turner met with student Michael Sheridan's parents and that Turner decided to clear the boy's record and restore him to his post.

Michael was disciplined after he was caught buying a bag of Skittles from a classmate. The classmate's suspension also will be expunged, school officials said.

The New Haven school system banned candy sales in 2003 as part of a districtwide school wellness policy, school spokeswoman Catherine Sullivan-DeCarlo said.

"I am sorry this has happened," Turner said in a statement. "My hope is that we can get back to the normal school routine, especially since we are in the middle of taking the Connecticut mastery test."

Turner said she should have reinforced in writing the verbal warnings against candy transactions.

Michael had said that he didn't realize his candy purchase was against the rules, but he did notice that the student selling the Skittles on Feb. 26 was being secretive.
