This F-4 Phantom is currently at Ruidoso, N.M., but has been offered on loan to Freedom Museum USA of Pampa by the U.S. Air Force. Funds are currently being sought to finance its move. For more information, call the museum at 669-6066.

Museum needs donations to fund move of fighter jet

By Marilyn Powers
 The Pampa News

An F-4 Phantom fighter jet will be the next big addition to Freedom Museum USA's collection of military aircraft, just as soon as enough money is raised to transport it here from Ruidoso, N.M.

The plane has been offered to the museum and will be on loan to it from the U.S. Air Force. The only hitch is in meeting the Air Force's requirements for moving it.

"They say we must use professional movers," said Walter Miller, assistant curator of the museum. "It will cost an estimated $58,000 to do that. We have $25,000 of it."

A local foundation donated the $25,000 already earmarked to get the fighter jet to Pampa, Miller said.

Lewis Epps of Pampa, a member of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1657 and a member of the museum's board of directors, has donated $100 toward moving the F-4 and is challenging others to do the same in order to raise the remaining funds needed.

"He is challenging friends, other veterans and especially Vietnam vets to match or exceed his $100 check," Miller said.

A marker in memory of Lt. Col. James Henry Ayres is planned for exhibition with the plane at the museum. Ayres was 33 when his F-4 Phantom crashed during a nighttime air mission over Laos during the Vietnam War on Jan. 3, 1971. At the time, his wife and children were living in Pampa.

Ayres' remains were discovered and identified in 2007 and returned to the U.S. He was interred at Fairview Cemetery with a formal ceremony on Aug. 10, 2007.

Ayres was born in Pampa in 1937 and was a graduate of Pampa High School. He was also a graduate of Texas Tech University in Lubbock. He was commis-

City's 'sanitarian' inspects facilities twice per year

By Julie Ann Thompson
 The Pampa News

With officials from the Food and Drug Administration and the Center for Disease Control and Prevention stepping up their search in the country's recent salmonella outbreaks to include cilantro, jalapenos and serrano peppers, Pampa's Sanitarian Jackie Harper has her hands full ... as if she didn't already.

"Her job encompasses most of what mine does. Reviewing plans, issue permits, doing inspections ... things like that," Building Official Danny Winborne said. "She has to have a state plumbing inspector's license and she has to be qualified to do my job as well."

Harper, who graduated from West Texas State University with a bachelor of science degree, received her sanitarian license in 1991.

"I came over to the code enforcement office to do health inspections at that time," Harper said.

Harper said that the city doesn't necessarily deal with the salmonella outbreaks, which are instead directed through the State Health Department.

"We do the health inspections but we don't have a lab or anything that we send any samples to," Harper said.

Harper is required to do inspections for each of the estimated 90 facilities under her domain twice a year. These facilities include restaurants, convenience stores, grocery stores, hospitals and schools.

"Basically you look for how they're preparing food, you look for temperature, if the foods are being kept hot enough or cold enough," Harper said. "You look for if the personnel are handling the food correctly, if they're washing their hands ... cleanliness."

According to Harper, the rules have changed in the past eight years so that she is not required to inspect walls, ceilings or floors except for when a facility first opens.

"We have a few exceptions to that," Winborne said. "If we've got reason to believe there is a very hazardous situation as far as sanitation goes, then yes, we can immediately take action. The sanitarian has the full authority to do that."

Harper said she has only had to shut a facility down once. As far as salmonella goes, Winborne said it's more likely that an average citizen would hear about a local case before the city does.

"If they've got salmonella, most likely they're going to be in the hospital and then they will make reports from there to the Texas Department of Health," Harper said. "They should notify me if something is in Pampa."

In the event that there is a salmonella outbreak in Pampa, Winborne said that the state would probably issue a press release which is something the city locally doesn't do.

Local resident wants PEDC support for college level wind energy training

By David Bowser
 The Pampa News

Jim Braxton is interested in the wind energy industry and wants the Pampa Economic Development Corp. to do something about it.

Addressing the EDC during its monthly meeting Thursday, Braxton asked if the board could help Clarendon College get started with manufacturing and maintenance classes concerning wind turbines.

He said such a curriculum would need to be a continuing educational program because people would have to go to school to keep up with the technology.

"Clarendon College, down at the main campus," Braxton said, "is going to start classes on that this coming fall."

He said they should have similar classes available at the Pampa campus beginning in January.

"That needs some help," Braxton said. "It needs a push. Anything ya'll can do would probably be greatly appreciated."

He said that the students who attend

"She worked for them last year," Braxton said. "She's working for them this year."

He said she's making $2- to $3 dollars an hour more there than she could make anywhere else.

"Wages are going to be good," Braxton said of the wind energy industry.

But employees need the technical training, he said.

"We can do that here," Braxton said.

After going to school at Clarendon College and getting training in the wind energy field, they can go to work locally.

He said there is maintenance work that has to be done in machine shops and the machine shops have to have the equipment to handle large pieces of equipment such as the blades of a wind turbine. Braxton said there are places in or near Pampa that should be perfect for such facilities.

"There are buildings here right now that aren't being used that have exceptionally good hoist systems," Braxton said. "They can do the repair work right there."

Braxton said he thinks that Boone Pickens might be interested in contributing to Clarendon College to get the program started.

"He contributes considerable amounts to colleges," Braxton said, "and all of it is not front page news."

He said he would like to see the EDC take an active part in the educational programs for the wind energy projects coming to the community.

"I would like to see that happen here in Pampa," Braxton said. "It's a long-term program. It's going to be 25 or 30 years before that wind energy reaches a point where they're going to come up with something else. That's 25 or 30 years that we can benefit from it here in town."

Dwight Fiveash, executive director of the Pampa EDC, said Clarendon College has already started on its educational program with wind energy using a state grant, although the EDC has given the college scholarship grants in other areas.

He said that the EDC is involved in other aspects of developing wind energy support in Pampa.

DPS director retiring amid agency criticism for mansion

AUSTIN (AP) — The director of the Texas Department of Public Safety is retiring amid criticism his agency has endured since the June fire at the Governor's Mansion.

Col. Tommy Davis issued a terse statement Friday saying that after 43 years and nine months with the DPS, he is retiring on Aug. 31. He didn't elaborate.

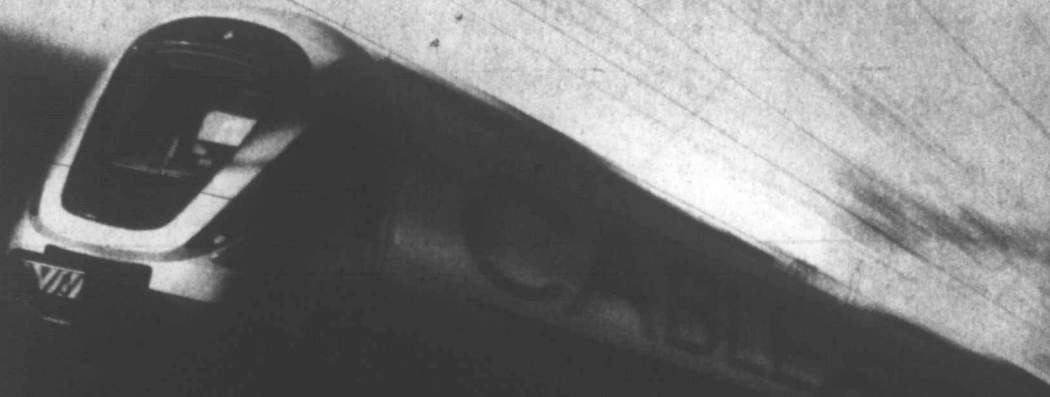

The department has been reeling from bad publicity and has been under scrutiny from critical lawmakers.

Internal investigations have been going on into how the agency's troopers were guarding the mansion when it was severely damaged by fire the morning of June 8.

Making sense: It's time to get serious

Americans are worried. Americans are angry. Soaring gas prices are seriously crippling our economy and hitting us where it hurts the most — in our pockets.

We have a right to be angry, but anger is no longer enough. It's time for rage — good, old American rage aimed at those elitist Democrats who prefer to see the folks beggared by soaring fuel prices rather than take the action this very real economic crisis demands.

Drill. We know that the law of supply and demand is what's causing gas prices to soar, but merely knowing the ultimate cause of the crisis is not enough. We need to know why the most obvious remedy — one that promises to increase supply — is being studiously avoided by the powers that be, Democrats in Congress.

Once Americans become aware of that reason, get out of the way because they will be at the gates of Capitol Hill armed with pitchforks and scythes like enraged villagers marching on Dracula's castle, determined to wreak vengeance on the very people who refuse to act in the way current circumstances clearly demand.

The steady increase in gas prices can be stopped dead in its tracks, and rolled back to less onerous levels literally overnight. The Democrats in Congress have in their hands the magic wand they could easily wave, but they arrogantly refuse to use it. And so we continue to pay the price for their refusal to help their fellow Americans when they have the power to do so.

All they need to do is lift all moratoria and restrictions on domestic, offshore and Alaskan drilling for oil. That's all. A quick wave of that magic wand is all that's needed. But they will not act, and for that they must be made aware that they will pay a steep price at the polls for their refusal to act when action is desperately needed.

Make no mistake about it, the oh-so-liberal Democrats in the House and Senate, in the pockets of the super-rich environmentalists who scarcely conceal their contempt for their fellow humans and won't be happy until every automobile is driven from America's roads and highways, simply will not come to our aid.

As Marie-Antoinette is said to have remarked about her starving subjects who were demanding bread, "Let them eat cake," our elected Democratic members of Congress are in effect saying of Americans, "Let them ride bikes."

In their contemptuous sophistry, their spokesmen sneer that opening the gates to domestic and offshore drilling would not yield results for 10 years. That excuse for inaction is insultingly deceptive.

While it will take years to see our domestic supply of petroleum begin to take up the slack, the very declaration that the floodgates will be opened and America is on the way to independence from foreign oil will strike fear into the hearts of OPEC and the speculators who have driven the price of oil skyward.

Their reaction would be instantaneous — they would increase production to the fullest extent possible, motivated by the knowledge that their stranglehold on supply faces its eventual demise, and gas prices at the pump would fall.

As economist Lawrence Kudlow wrote in his column, "An America First Energy Plan," "As soon as you say, 'End the drilling moratoriums,' it is precisely those traders who will start selling oil contracts — long before the first offshore oil barrels are delivered to market. If they see presidential leadership on oil and shale drilling, they will rapidly turn a bull market into a bear market."

A partial answer to our immediate problem is at hand. The steady increase in pump prices can be halted and prices somewhat rolled back to a more acceptable level. Yet those Democrats who the people elected to Congress are turning their backs on the voters who sent them to Washington and coldly refusing to lift a finger to help the American people, preferring instead to lay the blame for the problem on big oil, speculators and every place but where it belongs. On themselves.

If that doesn't enrage you, nothing will. Payback time comes in November. Drive them out of office and elect people who will do what needs to be done. Drill, Drill, Drill!

Are you listening, John McCain?

Idle American: Makin' it in New York

Few songs in the world of music have "held on" like the theme from the movie, "New York, New York." The familiar tune holds classic status thanks to a trio of vocalists. Liza Minnelli was the high-energy star in the movie, and recordings by Tony Bennett and the late Frank Sinatra also made it big.

Whatever, I want to focus on a couple of lines in the lyrics: "If I can make it there, I'll make it anywhere."

Perhaps it is a cynical New Yorker, weary of the influx of visitors overwhelming NYC in the summer months, handing out copies of a cartoon on the subway. It reads: "If you can make it there, go back!" ...

But millions who love to visit NYC are undeterred. They keep coming.

It is a city of intrigues because so many people want it to be. The big ladle in the world's premiere melting pot continues to stir in the midst of hundreds of dialects. Someone said it's a city where cultures and causes co-exist. Locals bark at each other daily, sometimes without a single bite.

Walking down Broadway for blocks on end, we catch ourselves whistling "New York, New York" over and over again. As we near Ground Zero, rumbles and rattles, honks and whistles cease. As thousands pay respects daily to victims of the carnage that was 9/11, a hush prevails. A quiet hum of "Amazing Grace" falls from the lips of one guest; from another, there's "Danny Boy." ...

We walk for the better part of three hours with native New Yorker Milton Norman, a semi-retired attorney who, with 300 or so other volunteers, offers free tours under the banner of "Big Apple Greeters."

A World War II veteran, he loves his city and its history, applauding laws that protect landmarks. We tour several such buildings, marveling at the restoration of Grand Central Station.

A spiritual moment reigns at St. Paul's Chapel, directly across the street from Ground Zero. Miraculously, it sustained no damage — not even a cracked windowpane. Though some buildings crumbled or were heavily damaged blocks away, St. Paul's was spared. Tombstones in the 242-year-old adjacent graveyard also remain 100 percent intact. A single sycamore tree, one of several massive trees on the premises, failed to survive....

Soon we return to sidewalks with teeming masses where push came to shove centuries ago. Now, hustle and bustle are locked in a dead heat.

We look and listen. Many of life's best chapters are found on these sidewalks, in the shadows instead of the spotlight.

A family accompanying a youngster with her head heavily bandaged shares laughter. I catch snippets of their conversation, but here's the bottom line: The teen has miraculously survived massive brain surgery. Her T-shirt message explains: "I have half a brain. What's your excuse?" ...

A city where one loses count when tallying honks and/or gestures, NYC provides many studies in contradictions. In one neighborhood, honking is discouraged by law.

In fact, dire straits might be a minimum defense for horn-blowing.

Signs warn of $350 fines for honking....

Ads are cutting-edge and definite head-turners. A pottery shop is called "Mud, Sweat and Tears."

A laundromat sign encourages customers to carefully schedule filling of dirty clothes hampers.

The offer? "Free detergent on Tuesdays." ...

I'm always glad to meet folks who re-define optimism. Providing such redefinition is Adrian Greenidge, doorman at the swank Millennium Broadway Hotel since it opened 18 years ago.

He has "Good mornings/afternoons" for each of the thousands who pass his way daily. One year, he won top doorman honors in both NYC and New York State.

You may remember that back in '06, Charles Gibson, then a "Good Morning, America" host, switched places with a hotel doorman for a few hours during GMA's 30th anniversary show. Greenidge, now spotted on the Millennium's TV ad, was that doorman....

Adrian remembers Gibson's pitch to make the switch. He learned that the media celebrity arrives at work daily in a limousine.

The doorman said this would be just fine for him, too: So the limo driver picked him up, long before daylight, at Adrian's home out in New Jersey.

While Adrian interviewed TV personalities, Charlie, decked out as a doorman, welcomed hotel guests and wrestled with luggage.

Gibson said his chores that day were much tougher than TV duty....

*****

Our reasons for traveling to NYC were two-fold. What with the gas crunch worsening, it seemed a good idea to combine two vacations on one plane ticket.

We wanted to enjoy the city AND take a Caribbean cruise. Luckily, Carnival Cruise Line's Miracle leaves from Manhattan every eight days during warm months.

The cruise is a grand experience, beginning with close-up views of the Statue of Liberty. We sail slowly for two days in the Atlantic Ocean before spotting the incomparably blue waters of the Caribbean....

Fever ticks lay claim to million Texas acres

AUSTIN — The Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) recently expanded the preventive cattle fever tick quarantine area in South Texas by 307,000 acres, after the dangerous livestock pests were detected on cattle outside quarantine areas in Starr and Zapata counties.

Fever ticks, capable of carrying and transmitting deadly "tick fever" to cattle, have been detected on livestock or wildlife on 139 Texas pastures during the past 12 months.

"In July 2007, the first preventive quarantine was established — 39,325 acres in Starr County — to enable the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Tick Force and the TAHC to inspect and treat livestock moved from the area, get ahead of the fever tick and push it back across the quarantine line," said Dr. Bob Hillman, Texas' state veterinarian and head of the Texas Animal Health Commission, the state's livestock and poultry health regulatory agency.

"Now, a year later," Hillman said, "we have more than a million acres under preventive quarantines in Starr, Zapata, Jim Hogg, Maverick, Dimmit and Webb counties, in addition to the half-million acres in the permanent fever tick quarantine zone that runs alongside the Rio Grande, from Del Rio to Brownsville."

The enlarged preventive quarantine includes portions of Starr, Zapata counties and a small area in Jim Hogg County. It is bounded on the north by Texas Highway 16, from its intersection on the west with US Highway 83 to its eastern junction with Ranch Road 649. Ranch Road 649 is the eastern boundary to its southern intersection with US Highway 83, which is the western boundary stretching northward to the intersection with Texas Highway 16.

Maps of this and all preventive fever tick quarantines are available on the TAHC Web site at <http://www.tahc.state.tx.us> or by calling the TAHC at 800-550-8242.

"This is no longer a 'border war' against the fever tick," said Dr. Hillman. "The fever tick has gained a substantial foothold on Texas soil, and without adequate resources to fight this pest, it will spread."

The fever tick, which can survive winters from coast to coast and as far north as Washington, D.C., was successfully pushed back into Mexico in 1943. Periodic tick incursions since then have occurred in Texas, but only one, in the 1970s, eclipsed the current outbreak for the number of premises infested and took six years to eradicate.

"In smaller states, a quarantine area the size of Delaware would raise red flags," said Dr. Hillman. "Texas' vastness and the previous success at keeping the fever tick controlled may be working against us. Now we need help, with a million more acres to cover and finding about a dozen infested premises a month."

"Early this year, the fever tick program received $5.2 million of the $13 million of federal funds requested to fight the tick, and while appreciated and used, it is not enough to win this battle," said Dr. Hillman. "Furthermore, there has been no funding for the National Fever Tick Eradication Strategic Plan, developed and approved by USDA in 2006. It called for preventing entry of cattle fever ticks into the U.S., enhancing surveillance, and eradicating infestations resulting from fever tick incursions. The plan also was to identify and procure the tools necessary to keep the U.S. free of fever ticks, and to work with Mexico, where cattle fever ticks are not controlled. The strategic plan has not been implemented."

"It's really a 'pay now or pay later' scenario, because this tick won't be stopped with less than an all-out assault that requires adequate personnel, sufficient treatment products and enough equipment, such as portable dipping vats or portable spray boxes for cattle, and treatment equipment for deer and other wildlife hosts," said Dr. Hillman.

"Texas has a ticking time bomb in South Texas. So far, we have had only two of the three elements for a 'tick fever' outbreak — fever ticks and fever tick hosts — including cattle, horses and several species of wildlife. If, however, some of these fever ticks carry babesia, a blood parasite deadly to cattle, the equation would be complete, and we could see livestock death losses."

On the front lines are the ranchers in the preventive quarantine areas who must gather their cattle for inspection — which in the South Texas brush country usually requires helicopters and cowboys on horseback. The TAHC and USDA work cooperatively to provide the inspections to determine the scope of infestation in the area. Cattle, horses and ruminants, including llamas and camels, also must be inspected, treated and permitted prior to leaving the area.

Dr. Hillman encouraged ranchers to comply with the preventive quarantines and asked producers in adjacent counties to have their livestock checked prior to movement out of the area.

"In discussions with ranchers, it has been suggested that cattle moving through South Texas livestock markets be inspected and dipped prior to sale," said Dr. Hillman. "This is being considered, but it, too, requires additional personnel, chemicals and the construction of dipping vats, resources we do not have at this time."

"We have traced more than 1,000 cattle moved from ranches later found to be tick-infested," said Dr. Hillman. "Requesting an inspection prior to movement costs nothing for the rancher, but it could save us countless hours of tracking cattle, time that could be

State agency sets allowables for month

AUSTIN — According to the Texas Railroad Commission, the Texas average rig count as of June 13 was 916, representing about 51 percent of all active land rigs in the United States.

In the last 12 months, total Texas reported production was 340 million barrels of oil and 6.6 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Texas natural gas production represents approximately 29 percent of total U.S. natural gas demand.

The Commission's estimated final production for April 2008 is 28,842,891 barrels of crude oil and 520,917,608 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas well gas.

The Commission derives final production numbers by multiplying the preliminary April 2008 production totals of 27,057,121 barrels of crude oil and 433,556,062 Mcf of gas well gas by a production adjustment factor of 1.0660 for crude oil and 1.2015 for gas well gas. (These production totals do not include casinghead gas or condensate.)

Texas natural gas storage reported by the Commission for May 2008 is 281,652,025 MCF compared to 335,896,091 MCF in May 2007. The June 2008 gas storage estimate is 279,614,340 MCF.

The Texas Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division set initial July 2008 natural gas production allowables for prorated fields in the state to meet market demand of 18,216,390 Mcf (thousand cubic feet).

In setting the initial July 2008 allowables, the Commission used historical production figures from previous months, producers' demand forecasts for the coming month, and adjusted the figures based on well capability.

These initial allowables will be adjusted after actual production for July 2008 is reported.

Elderly may fare worse on prostate cancer medicines

CHICAGO (AP) — A prostate cancer study that could change how doctors treat some patients found that widely used hormone-blocking drugs did not improve survival chances for older men whose disease hadn't spread.

In fact, men given the drugs alone were slightly or compare that treatment with radiation or surgery.

Randomized studies have shown that the drugs can benefit men with more aggressive disease when used along with surgery or radiation. But research is sparse on using hormone-blockers alone or in patients with localized cancer, like those in their study, the authors said.

The drugs block production of testosterone, which feeds cancer cells. They are sometimes given in addition to surgery or radiation; using them alone is a less traditional but increasingly used approach, particularly among older men whose prostate cancer hasn't spread, the study authors said.

The drugs are typically given in a doctor's office and can have serious side effects including increasing risks for diabetes, heart diseases, impotence and bone loss.

Patients often believe that any treatment is better than nothing, said lead author Dr. Grace Lu-Yao of the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Jersey.

"What we are saying is doing something may not always be the best choice, because given the overall picture, this doesn't really give you any proven benefit," she said.

She said the researchers hoped the study would prompt doctors to avoid hormone-blocking drugs alone in older men whose disease hasn't spread.

The results appear in a recent Journal of the American Medical Association.

more likely to die of prostate cancer during the next six years than men who'd gotten medical monitoring but no or delayed treatment, another common treatment approach.

The study involved nearly 20,000 Medicare patients with prostate cancer that hadn't spread. A surprising 41 percent got only drug treatment, in shots or implants, showing that the therapy has become a popular alternative to surgery and radiation, the study authors said.

Other experts said the study gives doctors important information about how to treat older men with slow-growing disease that hasn't spread beyond the prostate. However, the study didn't look at whether hormone-blocking drugs alone benefit younger men better used in the field to fight the ticks. I also encourage ranchers anywhere in Texas to call us if they see tick infestations on their cattle. We can check the animals, and collect and send tick samples to the state-federal laboratory for identification. We do not want to take any chances with these ticks and spread them further."

Ranchers can call their area TAHC office, or the agency headquarters at 1-800-550-8242.

Ranches where ticks have been detected are quarantined, and cattle are rounded up, inspected and treated as often as every two weeks, or as seldom as every 28 days, depending on the treatment method — dipping, spraying or injection with Dectomax, an injectable treatment. The cattle are repeatedly treated and returned to the pasture to 'pick up' ticks on the vegetation, until the animals are tick-free, indicating that the premises is free of the pests.

Another method of clearing a pasture of ticks involves removing clean, treated cattle and 'vacating' the pasture for as long as nine months to starve out the ticks. Recently, this method has met with less than positive results, as ticks have demonstrated their adaptability to live on wildlife when cattle hosts are not available.

"Historically, fever ticks preferred cattle, and sometimes, hitched a ride on horses. Now fever ticks are being detected not only on white-tailed deer and nilgai, but also on aoudad sheep, fallow, axis and red deer, and elk. Fighting fever ticks on a variety of species — especially free-ranging animals that don't respect fences — makes this battle much more difficult," said Dr. Hillman.

Currently, treatment of wildlife or exotic livestock is limited to providing corn treated with an insecticide, or setting up feeding stations equipped with treated posts that transfer pyrethrin, an insecticide, to the animal's head and neck. Later, as the animal grooms itself, the pyrethrin is distributed across its body, killing the fever ticks. The problem? Some products require a 60-day withdrawal period, so they can't be used just prior to or during the hunting season. In the quarantined areas, the hides of harvested animals are either left behind, or inspected and treated prior to being removed from the premises.

"Concerns about fever ticks run deep in Texas, where the TAHC was established in 1893 to fight this pest. A Fever Tick Working Group, with industry and related agency membership, is working on recommendations for getting ahead of the fever tick, so it can be pushed back to the border. Likewise, a Wildlife Subcommittee also is working on suggestions for addressing fever ticks on free-ranging and exotic livestock," said Dr. Hillman. "Fighting fever ticks may seem simple, but it's not easy — and it's never cheap."

Management practices key to watershed condition

By Kay Ledbetter
Extension News

WELLINGTON — Animals thrive on the banks of waterways. And those same tree-covered, green grassy areas are keys to maintaining healthy watersheds for creeks and rivers.

Landowners must learn how to manage these properties to strike an ecological balance that benefits wildlife and livestock and still protects watersheds, Texas AgriLife Research scientists say.

Dr. Bill Pinchak, AgriLife Research range animal nutritionist, said landowners should take a holistic approach.

"The goal is to move the animals and reduce the amount of time they are grazing in a particular area," Pinchak said. "You have to have more than just water to get them to move and stay."

For many years, grasslands were grazed and periodically renewed by brush-clearing wildfires, he said. But humans have upset that natural balance, and now they must figure out how to restore it.

Riparian areas along creek beds are considered nirvanas for all animals, from deer to cattle to feral hogs, because they provide cover, food and water.

"But it is the most limited ecosystem in the region," he said.

And in most cases, it cannot sustain the existing population of animals using it. So Pinchak suggested landowners back-track on the animal trails leading into these particular areas.

The questions, Pinchak said, are: Why did the animals leave other areas? Are they over- or under-grazed? Is it a matter of where the water is?

"We have to become active managers of the riparian area will degrade over time," Pinchak said. "They will concentrate and over-utilize it."

Management is required to achieve both goals of providing for the wildlife and maintaining the watershed, he said.

"Determine what is not being provided in other areas for animal survival. First they need thermal balance (shade) to keep cool, and then they need water balance, then food, then resting areas and so forth."

Pinchak said land away from the riparian areas might need to be burned to allow green growth and provide a new focal point to attract the animals. Creating artificial shade might be necessary, or adding another source of water.

"If we can get an animal to water elsewhere at midday and rest there, we've reduced the impact on the riparian section by one-third," he said.

Dr. John Sij, AgriLife Research agronomist, has been working with some alternate watering sources for remote locations that will help draw both cattle and wildlife away from riparian areas and keep them from overgrazing and deteriorating the banks of waterways.

Working on his own ranch and others, Sij constructed a solar-powered watering system that will pump about 4 to 6 gallons per minute into a stock tank, with the overflow traveling down about 100 foot into a second earthen tank that can be used by both wildlife and livestock.

By using a helical pump, there is no reasonable limit to the well depth, he said. More solar panels can be added the deeper the well gets, or use a larger pump.

Dr. John Sij, AgriLife Research agronomist, has been working with some alternate watering sources for remote locations that will help draw both cattle and wildlife away from riparian areas and keep them from overgrazing and deteriorating the banks of waterways.

"Just don't go out and develop the system yourself," Sij advised. "You need someone to help set up the system; someone who knows the depth, water temperature, well capacity and other measurements that help determine the energy needed, how much water is needed and how much it will pump during the summer vs. winter."

Dr. Jim Ansley, AgriLife Research rangeland ecologist, said many landowners are trained to think the best rangeland management is to kill the brush to increase grass growth to feed livestock.

But with wildlife interests becoming more of a forefront issue, brush growth could be encouraged, depending on what the long-term goal is for the particular property, Ansley said.

"A person needs to understand that if they control brush all the way, they may lose their wildlife option," he said. "But you can't just let it go either. The brush and grass relations have to be balanced."

Brush competition can sometimes change the species of grass that thrive, Ansley said. While the short buffalo grass may come in and be a nutritious forage, it doesn't have as much grazing value as mid-grasses because it doesn't produce as much biomass.

Production of palatable grasses can triple if warm-season mid-grasses are allowed to establish, he said. But they can be lost over time and take five to 10 years to re-establish if the area becomes overgrown with brush.

"If you have areas where brush is getting out of hand and you still want to have both livestock and wildlife, you need to start looking at control," Ansley said. "If you have an interest in wildlife hunting, don't just let brush go. You will lose your grass understory."

Some places, he said, will be reduced to bare ground and prickly pear.

Since it takes time for the better grass species to come back, he advised landowners to start controlling the brush canopy when they first start seeing a decline in grass growth.

Treat the medium areas of overgrowth first, not the worst areas, because that will give the best return on the investment.

Dr. Dean Ransom, AgriLife Research wildlife biologist, said in working with wildlife the first and foremost focus is on habitat, which is affected by both cattle grazing and brush control.

"With the suppression of fire, we've seen a brush invasion," Ransom said.

Wildlife need a mix of plant life, and enough brush to provide protective cover, thermal cover, food and places to rest, he said. Maintaining some residual cover from the previous season's growth is important for birds especially.

"If wildlife are on your radar screen, think about how you manage the landscape, think about your stocking rates," he said.

Search firm hired for symphony director

AMARILLO — The Amarillo Symphony recently contracted with Arts Consulting Group Inc., to conduct a national search for a new executive director for the symphony.

Arts Consulting Group, a national firm with consultants across the United States and Canada, offers executive searches, fundraising consulting and organizational development services for the arts and culture industry.

Jeff Booth, head of the executive director search committee and past president of the symphony's board of directors, met in June with Arts Consulting Group representatives at the National Performing Arts Conference in Denver.

"We were impressed, not only with the glowing recommendations given by the numerous references I checked, but also with the quality of their firm, the thoroughness of their search process and the impressiveness of their track record," Booth said.

The firm promises an in-depth process that takes into account the culture, philosophy and organizational director of its clients. It already has delivered a six-month timeline to Booth that begins with a meeting with the search committee before it begins advertising the position and proactively recruiting potential candidates.

Past Arts Consulting Group clients include Honolulu Symphony Orchestra, New Hampshire Symphony, New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, Arvada Center for the Arts & Humanities, and more.

Amarillo nonprofit consultant Laura Street is serving as the symphony's interim executive director until a full-time replacement is hired.

FSA disaster loan applications available for county

Applications for emergency farm loans for damages and losses caused by drought are currently being accepted at the Farm Service Agency office in Pampa. The loans are available for losses caused by drought Jan. 1 and continuing.

Gray County is one of 46 counties eligible for loans to cover production and physical losses resulting from the drought.

FSA Farm Loan Manager Larry Goetze said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 100 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue the agriculture business, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest is 3.75 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss to be eligible for an FSA emergency loan," Goetze said.

Farmers participating in the Federal Crop Insurance program will have to consider proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until February 27, 2009, but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing, with possible delays into the new farming season," Goetze said.

FSA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. FSA offices are open from 7:30 a.m.-5 p.m. week days. To learn more, call the local FSA office at 665-6561.

Researchers look at protecting lettuce from pathogens

By Marcia Wood
ARS News

Knowing the preferences of foodborne pathogens such as Escherichia coli O157:H7 is essential to a successful counterattack on these microbes. That's why Agricultural Research Service (ARS) microbiologist Maria T. Brandl and University of California-Berkeley and colleague Ronald G. Amundson are scrutinizing the little-understood ability of E. coli O157:H7 and Salmonella enterica to contaminate romaine lettuce.

Brandl is with the ARS Produce Safety and Microbiology Research Unit, part of the agency's Western Regional Research Center in Albany, Calif.

In experiments, the scientists exposed romaine lettuce leaves to E. coli O157:H7 and found that, after 24 hours, populations of the microbe were 10 times higher on young leaves than on middle ones.

One explanation: The young leaves are a richer nutritional "hunting ground" for E. coli. They exude about three times more nitrogen and about 1.5 times more carbon than do the middle

HBO miniseries traces start of Iraqi War

NEW YORK (AP) — The narrative of war on "Generation Kill" unfolds as an exercise in readiness and restless waiting, along with misdirection from higher-ups.

As a chronicle of modern warfare, the seven-part HBO drama seems awfully authentic. How viewers will embrace this painstaking portrait of a war on which many already feel overdosed — well, that's another story.

The first episode (9 p.m. EDT Sunday) begins in the northern desert of Kuwait at the staging ground where U.S. Marines of the elite First Reconnaissance Battalion prepare to invade Iraq. Headed for Baghdad, they are meant to serve as the "tip of the spear" in the early weeks of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

This isn't the ideal mission for a hand-picked, highly trained group of warriors.

"Rolling through Iraq in open-top Humvees is completely outside of what First Recon does," declares Lt. Col. Stephen "Godfather" Ferrando. "But the general has asked this battalion to be America's Shock Troops, and Godfather can't tell the general we don't do windows."

As the Marines wait for orders to set off on their perilous, murky justified road trip, there is plenty going on there in camp. An unauthorized espresso machine explodes in one of the tents. A distressing rumor makes the rounds that, back home, J.Lo has died. Marines in First Recon's Bravo Company give a wary welcome to Evan "Scribe" Wright (played by Lee Tergesen), an embedded reporter from Rolling Stone who will ride in one of the Humvees at the front of the invasion. He will turn his account into the 2004 book on which this series is based.

David Simon and Ed Burns, who executive produced and (with Wright) co-wrote "Generation Kill," were also the team behind HBO's drama series "The Wire."

There are many differences between those two projects, of course. "The Wire," which recently finished its five-season run, was a fictitious drama set in Baltimore. But it skillfully depicted local institutions (among them government, law enforcement and the journalism world), each saddled by bureaucracy and shortsightedness while a few hardy resisters fought back.

Like "The Wire," "Generation Kill" takes an exhaustive look at a flawed institution. The characters — all of whom are drawn from real life — are seen fighting their war in vivid detail.

But what kind of war is it?

Before they even leave camp, these young men begin to have suspicions that military leadership didn't fully think things through; that the institution isn't giving them sufficient support. They inquire about the missing maps. They patch together their rattletrap Humvees.

"Marines make do," they tell themselves with pride and defiance.

Under way, they are ordered to turn loose rather than hold for questioning possible members of an Iraqi death squad. Farther on, they are told to abandon needy refugees attempting to surrender.

Watching that first stretch, some viewers of "Generation Kill" will feel the burden of what they've learned ever since. The film is meant as a portrait, not a polemic. But after five years and counting, the viewer may feel hard-pressed to watch, and judge, this series on its own terms.

Or does it matter?

"It's for viewers now to make of it what they will," says director Susanna White.

Maybe so. But she says her goal was to transport the viewer "back into that moment of what it felt like then — not draw on the hindsight we have now."

Lettuce

leaves; Brandl and Amundson reported.

Scientists have known for decades that plants exude compounds — from leaves and roots — that bacteria and fungi can use as food. But the romaine lettuce study, published earlier this year in Applied and Environmental Microbiology, is the first to document the different exudate levels in romaine lettuce leaves of the two age classes. It's also the first to show that E. coli can do more than simply bind to the leaves; it also can multiply.

Adding nitrogen to the middle leaves boosted E. coli growth and further pointed to a key role of nitrogen in helping this pathogen. For that reason, a strategy that decreases nitrogen fertilizer use in romaine lettuce fields may be worth investigating, Brandl noted.

According to James A. Lindsay, ARS national program leader for food safety research, commodity-specific food safety guidelines for producing and harvesting leafy greens such as lettuce have been developed. That was done through industry, government and academic collaboration, in an effort to support Good Agricultural Practices, or GAPs.

ARS is a scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Pampa All-Stars finish third in State Tournament

The 9-10 Pampa All-Stars came away with a third place finish in the West Texas State Tournament on Wednesday night after losing to North Randall County in the semi-final round of bracket play.

Pampa began play against Lockney in the first round and capitalized on their mistakes as Lockney walked nine batters and gave up three hits in the first inning.

Zach Wilson led off for Pampa with a walk and was sent home on an RBI single by Cade Engle who stole 2nd and 3rd on the next two pitches and took home on a pass ball. Bryson Burrell, Ashton Robison, Nathan Furgason and Garrett Mullican were each walked with Burrell scoring giving Pampa a 3-0 lead with the bases loaded and two outs when Brendon Woelfle swatted the ball deep to clear the bases with an in the park homerun to put Pampa up 7-0. The inning didn't get much better for Lockney as Pampa was able to plate four more runs in the inning with Wilson, Engle and Burrell each scoring twice and Adam Zuniga added one more for insurance.

Garrett Mullican took the mound for Pampa in the 1st and put the first two Lockney batters on base hitting the first one and walking the second before fanning the next three to get out of the inning untouched.

Pampa sent 15 batters to the plate in the 2nd inning and scored 10 more runs to put the game out of reach at 21-0. Nathan Furgason, Woelfle and Wilson each drew walks to begin the inning. Zuniga and Engle followed up the walks with back to back doubles and two RBI's each. Burrell, Furgason, Mullican, Colton Thompson and Ryan Lee each drew walks while Kyndan Lott and Brendon Woelfle added RBI Singles.

Mullican was touched for one run in the second as he walked two and gave up one hit. Ashton Robison pitched the 3rd and 4th innings for Pampa giving up five runs on five walks, one hit and six strike outs. Pampa put Lockney away scoring three more runs in the third to give Pampa a 24-6 win on singles by Lott, Robison, Furgason and Mullican.

Canyon downs All-Stars 15-5

Pampa advanced in the winners bracket to play Canyon where things got a little ugly with a 15-5 loss.

Mullican started for Pampa and was touched for nine runs on five hits. Adam Zuniga pitched part of the 2nd and all of the 3rd and 4th innings, giving up two runs on three hits. Adam did not record any strike outs and only walked one allowing the defense to work for him. Cade Engle turned in one of the best defensive plays of the state tournament for Pampa as he took a ground ball up the middle, stepped on 2nd and fired to 1st to get the double play and end an inning. Bryson Burrell pitched the 5th and part of the 6th giving up four runs on two hits. Lott came on in relief in the 6th to record the last two outs for Pampa.

Pampa scored only two runs against Canyon in the first four innings as the bats went cold and Canyon played good defense. Engle singled in the first but was the only one to reach base for Pampa. The second inning was a little better for Pampa as Lott, Furgason and Mullican were each able to lay down singles. Furgason would later score on an RBI single by Woelfle.

Pampa's next opportunity against Canyon came in the 4th when Ashton Robison led off with a single and later scored on a wild pitch. Pampa was unable to do anything else with two runners in scoring positions. The 5th inning brought a ray of hope as Engle led off with a single and Burrell doubled putting runners in scoring positions at 2nd and 3rd for Kyndan Lott who came thru with a big single to plate two runs. Lott went on to score Pampa's last run of the game that inning on an RBI single by Robison.

Levelland falls 11-1

After the loss to Canyon, Pampa dropped into the loser's bracket and defeated Levelland 11-1 in five innings while avoiding elimination. Kyndan Lott went all five innings on the mound for Pampa to get the win. Lott pitched one of the best games you will ever see in this age group, only giving up two hits. He walked five and struck out six in the game.

Offensively for Pampa Adam Zuniga got things started with a single and a run scored in the first inning to tie things up against Levelland. In the second inning Ryan Lee lead off with a double and Nathan Furgason then blasted a double of his own to score Lee. A single by Woelfle plated Furgason to give Pampa a 3-1 lead. In the third, Engle walked and went to third on a single by Robison but both were left stranded to leave Pampa with a narrow lead of 3-1. Things picked up for Pampa in the 4th inning when Furgason, Zuniga and Burrell all singled and scored. Engle and Woelfle both worked walks out of Levelland to add to Pampa's tally in the 4th making the score 8-1. Pampa scored three more times in the 5th on singles by Woelfle and Lee. Zach Wilson worked a walk to score Pampa's final run of the game giving Pampa the 11-1 victory.

Pampa defeats Plainview 9-7

On Tuesday Pampa played its 4th game in four days avoiding elimination by defeating Plainview 9-7 in a nail biter.

Adam Zuniga got things started for Pampa in the first with a double and then took third on a wild pitch and scored on a ground out by Cade Engle to give Pampa a 1-0 lead in the top of the first. Zuniga started on the mound for Pampa and struck out Plainview's lead-off hitter. Plainview's #2 hitter singled and scored later on a wild pitch to knot the score at one-all. Plainview's three hole hitter grounded out to second baseman Zach Wilson and their cleanup hitter went up the middle to the pitcher for the easy out at first.

The top of the second saw the Pampa bats get hot as Bryson Burrell, Kyndan Lott, Ryan Lee, Zach Wilson and Nathan Furgason all had consecutive singles to set up Brendon Woelfle who came up big once again with a triple to plate three runs. Brendon stole home two pitches later to give Pampa a 5-1 lead. Pampa's defense was outstanding in the 2nd inning sending the Plainview batters down in order. Catcher Nate Furgason threw out Plainview's first batter and the next two batters went down after both hitters grounded out to shortstop Cade Engle who then threw to first baseman Ryan Lee for outs two and three.

The Pampa bats stayed hot against Plainview in the top of the third when Engle led off the inning with a single and stole second. Engle moved to third on a ground out by Burrell and scored on a single by Lott. Lott stole second and was moved to third on a single by Ryan Lee who stole second on the next pitch. With two runs in scoring position, Zach Wilson took his second pitch from the Plainview pitcher and sent a shot to the right field corner to record his first in the park homerun on the year. Pampa plated a total of four runs in the top of the third to take a 9-1 lead. The bottom of the third was not so kind to Pampa as Plainview sent 10 batters to the plate scoring six runs on three hits. After one out in the third Zuniga gave way to Nathan Furgason on the mound who came in and got Pampa two quick outs while only giving up one hit.

Pampa and Plainview both turned the game into a defensive battle for the next three innings as neither team was able to score any runs. Bryson Burrell came in to pitch the fourth and part of the fifth for Pampa. In the fourth, Plainview's lead-off batter flew out to Engle at short and their next grounded out to Zuniga at third. Plainview then singled and walked before Burrell recorded the final out of the 4th. Burrell began the fifth inning by getting the first batter to fly out to Wilson at second base. Burrell then got into trouble by giving up a single and a couple of walks to load the bases.

With one out and bases loaded in the fifth, Burrell gave way to Zuniga who returned to the mound and recorded the second out of the inning by getting the batter to fly out to Wilson at second base. The third out came by way of shortstop Cade Engle who fielded the grounder and flipped to Wilson at second to end the inning untouched. Kyndan Lott took the mound in the sixth and threw seven pitches to three Plainview batters. Lott got the first batter to ground out to third baseman Adam Zuniga who made a great defensive play on the ball and threw the runner out from his knee. Shortstop Cade Engle went into the hole behind third to take away another Plainview hit for the second out of the inning. Plainview was down to one opportunity and second baseman Zach Wilson took that away catching a high fly ball to end the game and give Pampa the victory with a final of 9-7.

Pampa falls to North Randall County 14-5

Pampa could not follow up on Wednesday night with the same intensity and emotion as they were dropped from the tournament by North Randall County by a score of 14-5.

Pampa was led at the plate by Engle, Lott and Wilson. Engle worked a walk, had three singles and two runs scored. Lott worked a walk, had a single and a double with two runs scored and one RBI. Wilson went three for three with three singles, two runs scored and two RBIs to account for Pampa's only scoring. Also getting hits for Pampa were Woelfle, Zuniga and Garrett Mullican. On defense Pampa held NRC to five runs until the fifth inning when the wheels came off and the NRC team was able to plate nine runs.

Pampa did some good things against NRC on defense for five of the six innings played and kept their big bats shut down but ultimately Pampa just committed too many mistakes to overcome no matter how big these kids hearts were. Pampa finished their All-Star campaign with a 5-4 record and third place finishes at both the district and state level.

The All-Star team was supported by the Pampa Optimist Youth Club which is a United Way Organization.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Scott," and I are writers, although we both have day jobs. During the two years we've been together, we have always supported each other's writing careers. Things changed after my first novel was published. While initially congratulatory, Scott's behavior was different as the publication date neared. He declined to help my friend throw me a party. When I spotted my book on the shelf of a bookstore for the first time, he chided me to keep my voice down. My novel has now been out for months, but he still hasn't read it. (I gave him one of my free copies.) When I told Scott how much this hurt me, he agreed to read it and said he was proud of me. But after reading only one chapter, the book was left on the nightstand and he hasn't touched it since. Scott is a talented writer. He has been published in literary magazines, but hasn't yet published a book. I sympathize with his jealousy and have tried to keep talk of my novel to a minimum. But I'm troubled by Scott's refusal to participate in this exciting period of my life. If he had written a 600-page tome on the digestive habits of the three-toed sloth, and I had to drink a pot of coffee to stay awake through the first chapter, I would still be first in line to buy it. Abby, what gives? -- FRUSTRATED NOVELIST

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I think you have pegged "what gives" accurately. Your boyfriend is suffering the effects of having been bitten by the green-eyed monster. Every reminder of your success gives him a pang because he wasn't published first -- and he may be punishing you for your success by leaving the book unread by the bed. (Anything else going on there?) I'm sad to say that not every man is man enough to appreciate his woman's success. Some are emasculated by it. And frankly, it will be interesting to see if your relationship survives this.

DEAR ABBY: I have a close friend who is divorced with one son. What is your opinion of a father who insists his 11-year-old son -- and since he was even younger -- respond to his father with, "Yes, sir"? If the son responds with, "Yes, Dad," "Yes," "Yeah, Dad," etc., the father responds with "WHAT did you say?" until the son responds with "Yes, sir." The father has been deemed a narcissist by three court-appointed psychiatrists. He is a control freak, and I feel this is mental abuse to the son. What are your thoughts? -- APPALLED IN GLENDALE, OHIO

DEAR APPALLED: Please don't be so quick to judge. The "narcissist" could also come from a military background or be from the South, where "Yes, sir," and "Yes, ma'am," are considered common good manners.

DEAR ABBY: I am a program director for young professionals. There are 75 students in my group. Many of them get married in our program and invite me to their weddings. Should I always go and give the same type of gift, or give a gift based on how well I know the individual? -- SEEKING "I DO" DIPLOMACY

DEAR SEEKING: An invitation is not an obligation. Buying wedding gifts for many couples every year could take a serious bite out of someone's income. That's why you should attend only the weddings of students to whom you feel a closeness, and base your gift on how much you can afford. For those couples whose weddings you choose not to attend, send a lovely card with a note of congratulations along with your regrets.

Cholesterol problem for some 8-year-olds

CHICAGO (AP) — For the first time, an influential doctors group is recommending that some children as young as 8 be given cholesterol-fighting drugs to ward off future heart problems.

It is the strongest guidance ever given on the issue by the American Academy of Pediatrics, which recently released its new guidelines. The academy also recommends low-fat milk for 1-year-olds and wider cholesterol testing.

Dr. Stephen Daniels, of the academy's nutrition committee, says the new advice is based on mounting evidence showing that damage leading to heart disease, the nation's leading killer, begins early in life.

It also stems from recent research showing that cholesterol-fighting drugs are generally safe for children, Daniels said.

Several of these drugs are approved for use in children and data show that increasing numbers are using them.

"If we are more aggressive about this in childhood, I think we can have an impact on what happens later in life ... and avoid some of these heart attacks and strokes in adulthood," Daniels said. He has worked as a consultant to Abbott Laboratories and Merck & Co., but not on matters involving their cholesterol drugs.

Drug treatment would generally be targeted for kids at least 8 years old who have too much LDL, the "bad" cholesterol, along with other risky conditions, including obesity and high blood pressure.

For overweight children with too little HDL, the "good" cholesterol, the first course of action should be weight loss, more physical activity and nutritional counseling, the academy says.

Pediatricians should routinely check the cholesterol of children with a family history of inherited cholesterol disease or with parents or grandparents who developed heart disease at an early age, the recommendations say. Screening also is advised for kids whose family history isn't known and those who are overweight, obese or have other heart disease risk factors.

Screening is recommended sometime after age 2 but no later than age 10, at routine checkups.

The academy's earlier advice said cholesterol drugs should only be considered in children older than 10 after they fail to lose weight. Its previous cholesterol screening recommendations also were less specific and did not include targeted ages for beginning testing.

Because obesity is a risk factor for heart disease and often is accompanied by cholesterol problems, the academy recommendations say low-fat milk is appropriate for 1-year-olds "for whom overweight or obesity is a concern."

Daniels, a pediatrician in the Denver area, agreed that could include virtually all children. But he said doctors may choose to offer the new milk advice only to 1-year-olds who are already overweight or have a family history of heart problems.

The academy has long recommended against reduced-fat milk for children up to age 2 because saturated fats are needed for brain development.

News-worthy trends Female scientists work to make breakthroughs

(NAPSA) — One woman, Dr. Laura Lapham at Florida State University, is studying possible new energy sources at the bottom of the sea. Another woman, Dr. Sandra Ugrina at the University of Maryland, is developing ways to make the next generation of aircraft more fuel efficient by reducing the drag on their wings. And still another, Dr. Sridevi Vedula Sarma at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is investigating ways to improve treatments for Parkinson's disease.

What these women have in common, in spite of their diverse fields of study, is that they're among an elite group of female scientists whose cutting-edge research is aimed at addressing some of today's toughest scientific challenges. Take Dr. Lapham, for instance. The postdoctoral researcher at FSU's department of oceanography is studying whether deep-sea methane hydrates — crystallized mixtures of hydrocarbon gas and water — could one day be a significant alternative source of energy.

"These hydrates are thought to be the largest reservoir of fossil fuels," says Dr. Lapham.

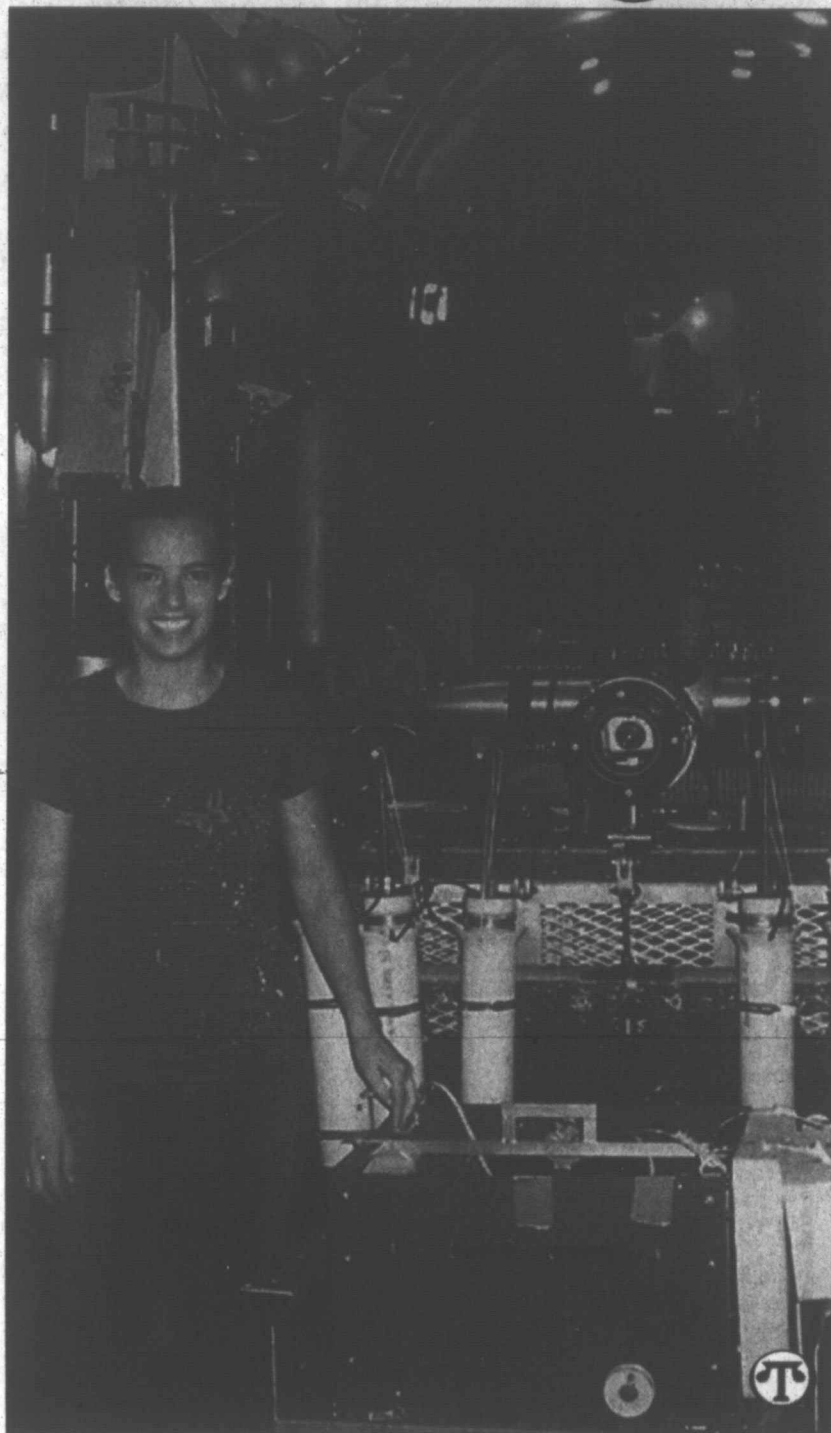

One other thing all three women have in common? Along with two others — Yale University's Dr. Ania Bleszynski-Jayich, who is testing some tenets of quantum physics; and the University of Pennsylvania's Dr. Sara Aton, who is trying to solve the mystery of how the brain works while we're sleeping — they're also all recent recipients of a prestigious 2008 L'Oréal USA Fellowships For Women in Science award.

"Basic research has led to so many important advances," says Dr. Bleszynski-Jayich. "I will be so excited when my research, which explores the world of quirky quantum mechanics, will someday be part of a positive impact on society."

The L'Oréal USA Fellowships come at a time when women in science not only remain the exception, but-despite solid evidence to the contrary-face the persistent myth that they're somehow less adept than their male counterparts.

Indeed, in a sign of just how much of a hot-button issue it's become, one university president, Harvard's Lawrence Summers, resigned in 2006 after professors on campus objected to his comment—which Summers claimed was merely intended to spark a lively intellectual debate — that "intrinsic aptitude" could explain why fewer women than men enter science and engineering professions.

Statistics tell at least part of the story: Despite earning half of all science degrees and constituting half of America's total workforce — women hold just 20 percent of the science jobs in the country. By way of comparison, at L'Oréal, which invested more than $800 million on research and development last year, over half of its 3,000-plus researchers are women. Laurent Attal, L'Oréal USA's president and CEO, is adamant about encouraging female scientists.

"We believe the world needs science and science needs women," he says. Dr. Ralph J. Cicerone, president of the National Academy of Sciences, agrees. "A diverse scientific community produces more cutting-edge research, which is essential to solving some of the world's most complex problems," he adds.

To that end, L'Oréal USA also sponsors a "For Girls in Science" effort that provides hands-on, after-school programs meant to inspire girls in science, technology, engineering and math.

Who knows, maybe one of those girls will play her own part in helping to reduce fuel consumption or assisting many of the nearly 40,000 Americans diagnosed with Parkinson's disease each year. Should that happen, they'll likely praise their families and mentors for their help and guidance, just as the winners of this year's L'Oréal USA Fellowships For Women in Science did.

"Mentorship is a key strategy to encourage women in science," says Dr. Aton. "When you come to a point in your career and life where you have to make tough decisions, having someone who can give you good advice will get you through."

And family support plays a vital role, too — even more so for someone like Dr. Bleszynski-Jayich, whose parents are physicists. While some kids call home to ask at what temperature to bake a lasagna, Dr. Bleszynski-Jayich calls to chat about negative index of refraction materials. And then she asks about lasagna.

Protecting your pet ...

(NAPSA) — There are approximately 74.8 million family dogs in the U.S. (APPMA, 2007-2008 National Pet Owners Survey) and the reality is that most are comfortable roaming a territory far more expansive than the average home or backyard. Unfortunately, this natural inclination to explore can often result in a dog being separated from his family. In fact, the National Council on Pet Population Study and Policy found family pets are lost nearly every two seconds, resulting in more than 10 million missing pets each year.

Concerned owners can follow three simple tips to help ensure their dog stays safely at home and maximize the chance to find him quickly, should he escape.

• Loss prevention starts at home: All too often, doors, windows and gates are accidentally left open and dogs escape. Dog owners must ensure that all escape routes are secured. Fit external doors with self-closing mechanisms (such as storm doors and gates) and examine fences for gaps or holes.

A family pet goes missing nearly every two seconds. Fortunately, GPS technology makes it easier to locate a lost or missing dog.

• Dog tags and chips: Dog tags and implanted microchips are valuable methods that help identify a lost dog once they're found. In order to work, you'll have to keep the information up-to-date, including your most recent phone number. While these are important tools, they are passive and depend on others to find and return your lost pet.

• Doggy GPS is affordable and well worth it. Technology can play a powerful role in retrieving your lost pet. Originally developed for the military, powerful GPS tracking has recently been redesigned for monitoring pets and is available nationwide at places like PetSmart and Circuit City. Zoombak (www.zoombak.com) makes a small and affordable lightweight GPS locator that comfortably attaches to your dog's collar and uses satellite GPS and mobile phone networks to keep track of your pet 24/7. An interactive Web site allows owners to easily set up "safe zones" such as your "backyard" or "park," and if the pet leaves the zone you'll receive an e-mail or text message, alert on your cell phone, giving you the dog's location so you can quickly find him. If you have a four-legged escape artist, GPS is definitely a worthwhile investment to help provide peace of mind.

Dog owners must be vigilant in the fight against dog loss. Following three simple tips — minimize opportunities for escape, keep identity tags current, and monitor your pet's location — will help ensure you and your pet enjoy a long life together.

Behind the wheel: Kia minivan moves up in price

By Ann M. Job
 For The Associated Press

With a stronger engine, more features than ever and a roomier interior, the Kia Sedona is a much-improved minivan today compared with its first-generation model.

So, why isn't the second-generation Sedona — with pleasing ride, attractive styling, comfortable seating for seven and top safety ratings — selling as well as its predecessor?

Chalk it up to pricing changes, less than stellar reliability and quality ratings, consumer obsession with gasoline mileage and, of course, the lackluster image that all minivans bear as "mom mobiles."

When the seven-passenger Sedona originally debuted in the 2002 model year, it had the lowest starting price of any V-6-powered minivan on the U.S. market.

Today, while the 2008 Sedona is offered in a downsized version with short wheelbase that starts at $21,420, the Sedona models that are sized and equipped on a par with major minivan competitors have a starting manufacturer's suggested retail price, including destination charge, of $24,320.

This is $1,850 more than the base, 2008 Dodge Grand Caravan with starting retail price of $22,470, and it's a tad more than the Chrysler Town and Country with starting retail price of $24,185. In addition, the starting price tag for a 2008 Sedona long-wheelbase model is just $805 shy of the starting MSRP, including destination charge, for a 2008 Toyota Sienna CE.

Kia has had its quality issues, too — never rising in recent years much above average in the annual J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Study. And the 2008 Sedona has a "worse than average" predicted reliability rating from noted Consumer Reports magazine.

The newest challenge for the Sedona and other minivans comes as U.S. car buyers seek high-mileage, smaller vehicles. With a federal government rating of only 16 miles per gallon in city driving, the Sedona doesn't look, on first blush, all that fuel efficient.

Heidi Fleiss hit with felony drug charge

PAHRUMP, Nev. (AP) — Former "Hollywood Madam" Heidi Fleiss is facing felony drug use and possession charges stemming from a February traffic stop in the rural Nevada town where she lives.

The Nye County district attorney filed a two-count complaint Thursday accusing the 42-year-old Fleiss of unlawful use of methamphetamine and possession of the painkiller hydrocodone without a prescription.

Fleiss told the Las Vegas Review-Journal she has "a bit of a substance abuse problem" and said she intends to seek private treatment.

Prosecutors say it took almost five months to process Fleiss' blood test results after her arrest on a driving under the influence charge that prosecutors decided not to pursue.
