Shooting victim in grave condition

by Marilyn Powers
 mpowers@thepampanews.com

One Pampa man is listed in grave condition at an Amarillo hospital with a gunshot wound to the head and another is in Gray County Jail following a shooting which occurred in the early hours Saturday at an address in the 400 block of Perry Street.

Pampa police officers were dispatched to the location at about 1:16 a.m. Saturday concerning a report of someone being shot, said Pampa Police Department Sgt. Donny Brown.

When officers arrived, they found Carlos A. Hernandez, 19, of 115 N. Starkweather, lying on the floor of the residence with a gunshot wound to the head, Brown said. Hernandez was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo by Lifestar air ambulance.

A weapon was recovered near the scene of the shooting, said PPD Lt. Stephanie Raymond. Juan D. Cano, 25, of 514 N. Warren, was arrested in the 300 block of Wynne, behind an abandoned house, and booked into Gray County Jail at 5:29 p.m. Saturday on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Cano remained in jail as of press time today in lieu of $250,000 bond, according to jail records.

"It is believed that Cano and Hernandez got into an argument, at which time Cano produced a .22 caliber rifle and shot Hernandez in the head," Brown said. "The case is still under investigation at this time. Investigators continue to talk to witnesses who may have been present at the time of the incident."

Therapeutic tape local doctor's specialty

by Julie Ann Thompson
 jthompson@thepampanews.com

In the 2008 Beijing Olympics, American beach volleyball player Kerri Walsh caught the attention of many for the brightly colored tape she wore on her shoulder. Kinesio Tape, a unique therapeutic tape that was developed in Japan, is now finding a home in Pampa at Ford Family Chiropractic.

Doctor Samantha Ford, who goes by "Dr. Sam" in her father's chiropractic clinic, became certified to use Kinesio Tape two years ago at Texas Chiropractic College. Though growing up exposed to the chiropractic field, Ford's original intent was to become a medical doctor.

"I had no intentions of being a chiropractor until I got into college and was going the MD route," Ford said. "I realized after two years that it just wasn't for me so I transferred to Texas Chiropractic College."

The schooling there was rigorous: 30 hour weeks, year round, with occasional two week breaks. Kinesio Tape was introduced to Ford through some of her adjustment classes.

"They put it on the backs of our necks and I could tell immediately what the benefits were. Your head just wanted to flop forward because the neck was so relaxed," Ford said. Ford went on to take a seminar to learn more about the tape and decided to continue until she gained her certification.

The tape is waterproof, stretchable and mimics the skin so that it acts as a functional support. When turned over, the tape has small waves running through it, which act to overstimulate the area to improve blood flow.

"If you remember falling down when you were a child and, say, hurting your arm ... the first thing your mother did was rub the area," Ford said, demonstrating on her own arm. "It's that same idea."

The tape can be used to reduce swelling by promoting the flow of blood and lymphatic fluid, relieve pain, restore proper joint function, improve proprioception (the sense of the orientation of one's limbs in space), and to restore proper muscle function.

"I've used it quite a bit in Pampa," Ford said. "The first day you don't really notice it but then you get to take it off and feel the effects. Everyone loves it."

Dr. Samantha Ford demonstrates the application of Kinesio Tape by applying it to her father, Dr. Mark Ford's knee.

Pampa with her husband in 1995. She graduated from physical therapy school at Texas Tech University in 1997 and worked for the hospital for one year before deciding to open her own business.

"I had just had my son and I wanted to be able to work around him and gain some independence," Roden said. "For a while it was just the three of us up here, my son, my husband and me."

Once the business was established in 1999, Roden said they were able to start hiring extra help. She hired Janet Craig as an aide in 2001. Craig went on to graduate from Amarillo College with a physical therapy assistant degree in 2004.

"It's been just the two of us since then," Roden said. "Doctors really like that consistency."

October is National Physical Therapy month. Roden said that anyone interested in learning about the benefits of physical therapy can schedule an evaluation.

Citigroup to buy Wachovia banking operations

NEW YORK (AP) — In the latest byproduct of the widening global financial crisis, Citigroup Inc. will acquire the banking operations of Wachovia Corp. in a deal facilitated by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Citigroup will absorb up to $42 billion of losses from Wachovia's $312 billion loan portfolio, with the FDIC covering any remaining losses, the government agency said Monday. Citigroup also will issue $12 billion in preferred stock and warrants to the FDIC.

The deal greatly expands Citigroup's retail outlets and secures its place among the U.S. banking industry's Big Three, along with Bank of America Corp. and J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. But it comes at a cost — Citigroup said Monday it will seek to sell $10 billion in common stock and slashed its quarterly dividend in half to 16 cents to shore up its capital position.

The agreement comes after a fevered weekend courtship in which Citigroup and Wells Fargo & Co. both were reportedly studying the books of Wachovia, which suffers from mounting losses linked to its ill-timed 2006 acquisition of mortgage lender Golden West Financial Corp.

Wachovia, like Washington Mutual Inc., which was seized by the federal government last week, was a big originator of option adjustable-rate mortgages, which offer very low introductory payments and let borrowers defer some interest payments until later years. Delinquencies and defaults on these types of mortgages have skyrocketed in recent months, causing big losses for the banks.

The FDIC asserted Monday that Wachovia did not fail, and that all depositors are protected and there will be no cost to the Deposit Insurance Fund.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, in a statement Monday, said he supports the "timely actions" taken by the FDIC "which demonstrate our government's unwavering commitment to financial and economic stability."

Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson also welcomed the sale of Wachovia to Citigroup, saying it would "mitigate potential market disruptions." Paulson said he agreed with the FDIC and the Fed that a "failure of Wachovia would have posed a systemic risk" to the nation's financial system.

Stevens case: Judge slams government tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge angrily rebuked the Justice Department on Monday for mishandling a witness against Sen. Ted Stevens, a dispute that delayed and initially threatened to derail the case against the Alaska senator.

The dustup didn't yield the mistrial or dismissal that the Republican senator was hoping for but, with Stevens running for re-election during his corruption trial, it reinforces his story line that he is the victim of overzealous prosecutors.

Stevens is charged with lying on Senate financial disclosure forms about more than $250,000 in free home renovations and other gifts he received from VECO Corp., a powerful Alaska oil pipeline contractor.

The witness dispute began this weekend when Robert Williams, the VECO employee who supervised the renovation project, called defense attorneys and said prosecutors had ignored important facts in the case.

Williams said the government's estimates for how much time he spent at the senator's house — and how much that time was worth — were overblown, according to court documents.

"That's just ..." defense attorney Robert Cary said in court Monday.

"Problematic," U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan said.

"It shocks us," Cary replied.

The value of the renovation is key because Stevens paid $160,000 and says he assumed it covered everything. Prosecutors say the job was so expensive, Stevens must have known his $160,000 wouldn't cover the tab.

Sullivan was livid that prosecutors sent Williams, who was under subpoena to testify in the case, back to Alaska without telling anyone. That raised suspicion among defense attorneys that prosecutors were trying to hide information that could help them.

Williams had been suffering from health problems and prosecutors said they decided they could bring the case without him.

WWII reunion planned

A "come and go reception" honoring the men who served in the United States Marine Corps in World War II will be held from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Friday, October 3 at the AmericInn located at 1101 North Hobart.

The reunion of the 2nd

Sullivan was not satisfied.

"Why wasn't I consulted? I'm peeved now. It's a federal subpoena to appear in my court," Sullivan said, his voice rising. "I think the government is treading in some shallow water here. What should the sanction be for that?"

Prosecutor Nicholas Marsh said the government was trying to consider Williams' medical problems, but he struggled to explain why prosecutors didn't tell anyone.

"Certainly looking back on it, we understand where the court's coming from," Marsh said.

Stevens, the longest-serving Senate Republican, is locked in a tight re-election race against Democratic Anchorage Mayor Mark Begich. While Begich is campaigning, Stevens is tethered to a Washington courtroom.

Armored Amphibian Battalion, who fought in Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima will last for two days. They plan to visit the Freedom Museum on Saturday and will attend a banquet at First Baptist Church that evening.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

GOOD READING HABITS LEARNED EARLY PAY LIFELONG DIVIDENDS

DEAR ABBY: I wrote your mother back in 1985, asking her to encourage my eighth-grade students to establish the wonderful habit of reading. My letter was published in The Portland Oregonian. I still teach eighth-graders, but now I do it in California. It has been 23 years since your mother wrote my students about the importance of reading. Today we have computers, text messaging and cell phones. It's a different world now, but reading is still important. Would you write a couple of paragraphs about the joys of reading in your column? Your advice will be heeded by my students and many other students in the country who read your column. Kids relate to celebrities, and you are definitely famous. Thank you for your help. — RAY SMYTHE, PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

DEAR RAY AND DEAR STUDENTS: I'm glad to oblige. For anyone who doesn't already know, books are magic! Crack open a book and you will be instantly transported into the past, propelled into the future or, if you choose, escape into a world of fantasy. The options are endless. But while history, science fiction, mysteries and romance provide a wealth of diversion, reading provides far more than just an escape. The greatest ideas of our most gifted thinkers lie between the covers of books waiting for you to discover them. And don't be put off if the books are labeled "classics." That word means only that they have been enjoyed by every single generation who has read them. Reading is also a vital skill. Perusing a newspaper or doing research online, in addition to expanding your mind, can also be your transport to a successful future. And there is no more effective way to learn to write than by reading. P.S. If this skill does not come easily for you, remember that libraries offer classes in literacy. There is no shame in needing extra help in learning to read, regardless of your age. The only shame is in not admitting it so you can get the help you need.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old wife and mother. I love my family very much and do not lack the essentials in life. But I can't help feeling my house isn't clean enough, my home isn't good enough and I'm not good enough. Nothing in my life is up to my standards. I see people all around me who have all of these wonderful things. They travel and have fun. I have nothing of any real worth, and I can't remember the last time I truly had fun. I don't want to take anti-depressants to cover the problem; I want to feel better. I have considered hiring a life coach to help me find the basis for my feelings, but I am not sure if coaching is for real or where to find it. I do not live in a large city, and money is limited. I want to feel like I, and the things in my life, are enough. Help! — INSUFFICIENT IN WYOMING

DEAR "INSUFFICIENT": It's a huge mistake to compare what you have to what others do, because you will always find people who have more. True happiness comes from within, not from outside yourself. Travel, fun and possessions are not the nitty-gritty of life. You already have the most important things in life - a loving and healthy family. Rather than looking for a "life coach" - a field that is not yet licensed - I strongly recommend you look in another direction. Your spiritual adviser would be an excellent place to start, or a licensed mental health professional who can help you put yourself back on track.

Last prosecution witness in O.J. trial to return

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Defense attorneys hope to cast doubt on the testimony of a man who said he brandished a gun during a hotel room confrontation after being told by O.J. Simpson to "look menacing."

Michael McClinton, testifying under a plea bargain which will likely save him from prison, faces cross-examination Monday in the armed robbery-kidnapping trial.

He testified Friday that Simpson asked him to bring a gun to the casino-hotel where the former football star planned to reclaim mementos of his storied career from memorabilia dealers who were offering it for sale.

He was scheduled to be the prosecution's last witness but intense cross-examination could extend his stay on the witness stand. The defense planned to begin calling its own witnesses after McClinton concludes.

Simpson claims he saw no guns the night of Sept. 13, 2007, but McClinton said that he had his gun drawn when he crossed into the hotel room and that Simpson was close enough that their shoulders could have touched.

McClinton testified that Simpson seemed concerned about security video cameras at the hotel. None of the surveillance videos shown at the three-week-old trial have included any image of a gun and witnesses have been conflicted about whether Simpson could have been in a position to see a gun in the cramped hotel room.

Prosecutors bolstered McClinton's testimony with an audio tape recorded by McClinton during a party attended by Simpson only hours after the hotel room incident.

"This ain't no major crime," Simpson is heard saying on the tape.

District Attorney David Roger highlighted this exchange between Simpson and McClinton:

Simpson: "You didn't pull the piece out in the hall."
 McClinton: "No, no, no, no, no, hell no."
 Simpson added in the recording, "There ain't nothin' on that video and look, they gonna look at the video. ... Ain't nothin' they can see, they gonna see us goin' in the place. Then they gonna see us leaving with just the boxes."

In one taped segment, Simpson mentioned co-defendant Clarence "C.J." Stewart who, along with Simpson, has pleaded not guilty to 12 charges including kidnapping, robbery, coercion and assault with a deadly weapon.

"I told C.J., do me a favor get me some boys. I just want them to look menacing," he is heard saying on the tape. When it was over, McClinton testified, "He was telling me there was no guns. I knew differently because I had a gun."

The damaging evidence against Simpson came on the same day that the defense scored points with another audio recording — this one of police investigators chuckling over Simpson's troubles, referring to him with foul language and rejoicing at his impending arrest.

"You're just picking on him because you're mad about the verdict," said Lt. Clint Nichols, head of the police robbery division.

"Yup," responded crime scene analyst Michael Perkins.

Urban Jungle

Pampa residents are animal watchers. Sometimes they watch as wild animals wander into their backyards. Clockwise from top right: Staff photographer David Bowser snapped a feathered passerby who stopped at the Freedom Museumwater fountain for a drink; Nikki Shelton of Shutterbug Photographer found this cute little stinker on her back porch one night; Maria Hacker of Pampa photographed this wild turkey on Gray Street "...just wandering around the neighborhood."
