PGCD to Discuss Aquifer Future Wednesday

By David Bowser
 Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — The desired future condition of the Ogallala Aquifer will be among the items discussed at the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District meeting Wednesday morning. Gray County Rancher John R. Spearman, who serves as the president of the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District and secretary of the

Groundwater Management Area No. 1 board, was rebuffed last week when he suggested that the three other members of the Groundwater Management Area board take a proposed future condition of 50 percent of the water in storage at the end of 50 year back to their district boards for discussion, the standard that the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District adopted a decade ago. Groundwater Management

Area No. 1 consists of the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District, the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District, the North Plains Groundwater Conservation District and the Hemphill County Underground Water Conservation District. They are under state mandate to determine the desired future condition of the part of the Ogallala Aquifer that underlies the Texas Panhandle by September, 2010, although

Danny Krienke, the president of the North Plains district and chairman of GMA1, told Pampa's State Sen. Robert Duncan last summer during a Senate Natural Resources Committee that GMA1 would have their desired future condition by the time the Texas Legislature convenes in January, 2009. Spearman's proposed 50 percent of the aquifer's water in storage is between the North Plains district's proposed 40 percent for their western counties and 60 percent that Hemphill County district wants.

The board will consider proposals for depletion rule implementation, technical review and methods audit during their Wednesday meeting. The will also consider changing district policy concerning the right to enter private land and review two study areas where the water

Honoring Our Veterans

by Rachel Stennett
 rstennett@thepampanews.com

Mike Toter (yellow vest) and Clayton Lock both sit as a long line of motorcyclists pay tribute to them in part of the motorcycle tribute at the wall on Saturday. Toter and Lock are both World War II veterans.

The weekend held big turnouts and special events for the AVTT wall, which has been in Pampa since Nov. 5 and is open for the last day on Tuesday. The weekend events included a parade, motorcycle tribute, Pampa High School band performance, and a church service.

The parade started the weekend events, which had a good turn out with the help of warm November temperatures. The motorcycle tribute followed later in the afternoon. Many participants on motorcycles joined the rally, some who were not even veterans but wanted to honor the other veterans and the wall, according to Danny Martin, president of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post 1657.

"The (bikers) all love the military and the history and they are thankful for their veterans," Martin said.

The bikers drove in a single line and stopped where two veterans from WWII sat and saluted them and the wall. The two veterans who were seated were Mike Toter and Clayton Lock, two of the oldest WWII veterans from around the area.

The tribute was meaningful to the large crowd that gathered, and to the bikers, but Martin said it especially honored Toter and mings affair, is free to all local military veterans and their families, according to Diane Conner, a member of the Post's Ladies Auxiliary, the sponsor of the dinner. It will be held from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the VFW Post, located at 105 S. Cuyler Street.

The event will also include a silent auction, the proceeds of which will be used for various post activities throughout the year, such as mailing packages to military personnel.

For more information, contact any auxiliary member or Conner at 669-3869.

Newspaper Report Questions Costs of State's Pre-K Program

AUSTIN (AP)—A program designed to help Texas children from low-income families prepare for school has cost taxpayers more than three times the typical pre-kindergarten curriculum, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The program also raises questions about payments to educators involved in the program, according to the San Antonio Express-News.

Critics say the Texas Early Education Model, or TEEM, approach is little more than an effort by the State Center for Early Childhood Development staff to market research and products through commercial vendors. Supporters believe the program will help thousands of children.

The state center, which operates TEEM, is under the Children's Learning Institute at the University of Texas Health Science Center-Houston.

State records show the program's developers received about $500,000 in royalties from book publishers and vendors.

"This preschool scheme is not about preparing these little ones to be ready for school," said Jay Spuck, a retired Houston area school administrator, former classroom teacher and education advocate. "It is about advancing a political agenda of implanting corporate interests into nursery schools. It is all about trademarks, copyrights, patents, contracts, royalties, power and greed. The goal is to privatize education, cradle to college."

TEEM has cost about $80 million since it started five years ago. Despite the high cost, Susan Landry, who directs the state center, says she's optimistic it will help thousands of 3- and 4-year-olds achieve greater academic success in public schools.

"I really expect these kids to show effects of this program long term. It is probably not an inoculation against everything bad in education (and society)," Landry said. "But it gives them a fair shot. They get to start on the same footing. These kids are writing their names, they are writing letters and they are so proud of it."

The Texas Legislature passed TEEM in 2003 to improve pre-kindergarten coordination between public schools, Head Start and child care centers. At least 75 percent of youngsters participating must come from low-income families.

About 52,000 preschool children in 3,082 classrooms among 40 Texas communities are participating in TEEM this fall. It started with 3,834 children in 11 communities.

Materials, licensing fees and mentoring for a TEEM classroom cost $11,175 for the first year of a participating school, child care center or Head Start program as compared to $4,000 for a typical pre-K classroom. State and federal grants pay for the TEEM costs. Landry said TEEM classroom startup costs drop significantly in subsequent years.

Ariz. boy accused in slaying appears in court

ST. JOHNS, Ariz. (AP) — An 8-year-old boy is due in court Monday to face two counts of premeditated murder in the shooting death of his father and a friend, a hearing on the same day mourners were to gather for a funeral.

Police say the boy, a third-grader, confessed to planning and carrying out the shooting deaths of his father, Vincent Romero, 29, and a co-worker who rented a room from him. The men were found dead inside Romero's home northeast of Phoenix on Wednesday.

Authorities had no motive for the shootings.

"That's what's puzzling to us," Police Chief Roy Melnick said Monday on NBC's "Today" show. "There's no record of any problems in school, no reported abuse."

Romero came from a family of hunters and wanted to make sure the boy wasn't afraid of guns, said the Very Rev. John Paul Sauter of St. Johns Catholic Church. He said the father taught his son how to use a rifle to kill prairie dogs.

Police say the boy used a .22-caliber rifle to kill his father and the other man, Timothy Romans, 39, of San Carlos.

Obama plans US trials for detainees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Obama's advisers are quietly crafting a proposal to ship dozens, if not hundreds, of imprisoned terrorism suspects to the United States to face criminal trials, a plan that would make good on his promise to close the Guantanamo Bay prison but could require creation of a controversial new system of justice.

During his campaign, Obama described Guantanamo as a "sad chapter in American history" and has said generally that the U.S. legal system is equipped to handle the detainees. But he has offered few details on what he planned to do once the facility is closed.

Under plans being put together in Obama's camp, some detainees would be released and many others would be prosecuted in U.S. criminal courts.

Pampa Commission Meets Tomorrow

Perhaps the most interesting agenda item at the Pampa City Commission meeting Tuesday afternoon will take place behind closed doors.

The city commission will go into executive session to discuss appointments to the Pampa Economic Development Corporation board. Any action will have to be done in open session.

The commission will also hear a report on a Pampa

Economic Development Corporation grant to the Pampa Independent School District for artificial turf at Harvester Stadium.

They will also hear an update on the Texas Municipal League conference, Park and Recreation equipment and the Pampa Trap and Skeet Club.

In other business, they will consider on second and final reading ordinances approving a negotiated settlement with Atmos Energy, the natural gas utility, and setting a cap on sewer rates.

The city commission will meet beginning at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the commission chambers on the third floor of City Hall.

Lock. "They were so proud that they were singled out and they got to solute all those guys. They were tickled to death," Martin said.

Before the tribute, The Pampa High School Band performed the national anthem and other numbers Martin described as "wonderful."

"We know that they came out here to say thanks to the vets. We want to thank you for your sacrifice and being a part of our program."

Martin said that the way Pampa and the schools have treated all the visitors at the wall will have a lasting impact on people that have travelled long distances to view the wall.

"The way the schools have been and the way Pampa has treated (the visitors), they won't forget Pampa."

My Own Personal 'Bucket List'

I picked up a weird habit in college: watching the special features on DVDs. It wasn't anything like other college kids, such as slip n' sliding down dorm hallways, or drinking beer through a straw. My habit was simple and nerdy, but this habit changed my life a few weeks ago.

I love special features. They can make or break a movie for me. In college, I couldn't afford cable so I rotated watching the same 17

DVDs over and over. In order to make the experience more enjoyable and refreshing, I started watching the special features on all DVDs.

I fell in love with "Behind the Scenes" and actor commentaries during movies. No one understood my love for special features. I am the fool who will buy a two-disc special edition, special feature loaded DVD set for $10 more than the original DVD.

No, I don't like movies that much- I like special features that much.

If I had friends over, I would hold the same rules that most people have for movies during special features. No getting up for popcorn or soda during special features (this must be done before the special features start), no talking during special features and most of all, no guessing the ending of special features.

Rachel Stennett
Staff Writer

making your own bucket list. If you haven't seen the movie, it is based on two men who are dying making a list of things they want to do before the lunch break. Naturally, the movie brings out introspection. What would you do if you were told you had a month, year, day to live?

I had two realizations at this moment during my lunch break.

One — I am both genius and idiot. I wrote a "100 things I want to do before I die" list long before the movie came out. I could have skipped college and authored this movie and been a few steps further in life than I am right now.

Two — If I would have actually done anything on my own bucket list, I really would have been further in life than I am right now.

So, at this point in my lunch break I turned to my journal that I had written my "100 Things" list in three years ago. I realized I never finished my list, which stopped at 23 items. The list had the basics (not in the original order.)

- 1.) Go to college
- 2.) Get married
- 3.) Live in Africa and write a book about the experience.
- 4.) Own a Blue McCaw parrot.
- 5.) Have a child and name it Rachel Candace Stennett III.

Stuff most people have on their list, right? The point is, I have only done three things out of my total list, and I made it three years ago. I can't understand why I have let myself get so caught up in things that are not important. Sure, work is necessary, and joining church groups and clubs are important but they were not on my list. They aren't my purpose for life. The list is obviously more important if these are things I must get accomplished by the time I die.

We all have to face the simple truth that is the bucket list. It is easy to get caught up in the complicated, time-consuming monotony of life and forget about where we are living. Whether your goals are to do the impossible like eating seven saltine crackers in a minute, chugging a gallon of milk in an hour or to sky dive off of Victoria Falls in Zimbabwe, I encourage you to do it.

I plan to follow my own advice. This evening I will cross off "watch E.T." from my list.

A total of $58,000 in donations and media from the Texas Values in Action Coalition to Democrat Wendy Davis, who's challenging Brimer. Direct-mail help worth $39,000 from Texans for Insurance Reform for Democrat Rep. Dan Barretts race against Shelton.

Another $62,000 from TIR to Democrat Chris Turner, who's trying to oust Republican Rep. Bill Zedler. And $200,000 to Zedler from the Stars Over Texas PAC, which is funded heavily by Texas House Speaker Tom Craddick.

That's just a fraction of the millions being raised and spent to control a Legislature that favors Republicans 77-71 (with two vacancies) in the House and 19-11 (one vacancy) in the Senate. But don't imagine that these deep-pocketed battles are just about the speaker's race, property taxes, transportation and divvying up the state budget next year.

It's also about the balance of power in Congress.

That's because, in 2011, the Texas Senate will draw a new map of congressional districts based on the 2010 Census. That undertaking could shake the U.S. Capitol as much as Tuesday's elections.

Disenchantment with Republicans shifted control of the U.S. House to the Democrats in 2006. This year, a combination of retirements, Democratic momenturn and Republican faux pas has pushed even more seats into tight races.

But, as in many states, the makeup of Texas' congressional delegation is dictated overwhelmingly by the redistricting machinations in Austin.

And that's why it's high time to change how they do it.

Remember 2001?

Democrats and Republicans skirmished over redistricting and never got a map out during the regular session, so Gov. Rick Perry let the task go to a panel of federal judges. The map they approved upset Hispanics, who wanted another predominantly Hispanic congressional district. But Republicans were even more upset because the judges left intact lines that guaranteed Democrats would continue to hold a majority of Texas seats in Congress. That was the result of 1991 Democratic gerrymandering, which Republicans still were fuming about.

Remember 2003?

Tom DeLay, then speaker of the U.S. House, helped Republicans secure the upper hand in the Texas Legislature and then pressured them to redraw congressional districts, typically done only once a decade. Democratic House members fled to Oklahoma. Democratic senators holed up in New Mexico. Three special sessions, $5 million, three years of litigation and untold tons of acrimony later, Republicans dominated the congressional delegation.

Remember SB1068?

That was the 2007 incarnation of Republican state Sen. Jeff Wentworth's perennial proposal to establish a bipartisan redistricting commission. Republicans and Democrats each would appoint four members for two-year terms, and they would choose a nonvoting chairman. No party officers, elected officials or lobbyists allowed. Redistricting would be done only once a decade except under exceptional circumstances, such as a court order striking down the commission's plan. The Texas Senate actually approved a Congressional Redistricting Commission in 2007 and 2005, but the House didn't move the bills along.

One of the major contributors to the exceedingly partisan rancor that too often has paralyzed Washington is the lack of competitive congressional races.

With sophisticated computer programs, lawmakers can draw districts to protect their own.

In 2004, more than 85 percent of U.S. House incumbents won with more than 60 percent majorities, according to the open-government advocacy group Common Cause.

Running in safe districts, incumbents don't have to reach out to the broadest spectrum of voters. And candidates for open seats often can win by taking more extreme positions that appeal to core constituencies.

But political tides turn. As 2006 showed and 2008 may also voter angst and anger can sweep one party out and another in.

And then the party in power exacts revenge for past slights, with gerrymanders that often are nonsensical studies in manipulation. And it's the public and a fair democratic process that suffer.

The drawing of voting districts shouldn't be driven by self-serving motives of helping incumbents keep their jobs or helping a particular party gain, retain or aggregate power.

As much as possible, voting districts should be drawn to be compact, to fall along sensible boundaries and to join voters with common interests. If officeholders are serving voters' interests, they'll get re-elected.

Regardless of which party holds majorities in the Legislature, the upcoming session is prime time to improve the redistricting system. Both the public and the parties will benefit. And by 2011, it will be too late. URL: <http://www.star-telegram.com>

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

MOM'S DESCENT INTO ALZHEIMER'S CONSUMES HER DAUGHTER'S LIFE

DEAR ABBY: My beautiful, loving mother is now in the middle stages of Alzheimer's disease. This cruel disease has robbed her of her memories as well as the ability to reason and function. She held my hand through every trial and triumph in my life, and I want to support her the way she has always supported me. But caring for Mama is becoming more and more difficult as she drifts further and further away. Not only am I caring for my mother, I also have a career and three children. I have so little time to myself. From the financial considerations to the behavioral challenges to safety concerns, I can't keep my head above water. Please tell me what to do. -- OVERWHELMED IN CINCINNATI

DEAR OVERWHELMED: I'll try. I know from personal experience how difficult it is to see a loved one face the changes that Alzheimer's disease brings. Although you feel alone and overwhelmed right now, the truth is you are not. Today, an estimated 10 million Americans are caring for someone with Alzheimer's or another dementia. More than 40 percent of them rate their emotional stress level as high or very high, and it is a danger to their health. Some signs to be aware of: feeling you have to "do it all yourself" and that you should be doing more; withdrawing from family, friends and activities that you used to enjoy; worrying that the person you care for is safe; feeling anxious about money and health-care decisions; denying the impact of the disease and its effect on your family; feeling grief or sadness that your relationship with the person isn't what it used to be; becoming frustrated and angry when the person continually repeats things and doesn't seem to listen; and having health problems that are taking a toll on you. If any of these apply to you, it is important that you take care of your own physical and mental health. Make time to talk to your doctor and contact the Alzheimer's Association because it offers a full range of services. The toll-free number is (800) 272-3900 or visit www.alz.org and take the Caregiver Stress Check interactive quiz. You will find with it a list of helpful referrals there.

DEAR ABBY: I am 43, and my boyfriend, "Sid," is 52. We have been together a year and a half. I was married once, and Sid has been married three times. He wants to live together, and I want to be engaged with a wedding date before I move in. We truly love each other and communicate very well. Because of a previous rebound marriage that lasted only a year, Sid is cautious about making another mistake. After we had been together for a year, I gave him a year to make up his mind about marriage. In the months that followed, I could tell from some of the remarks he made that he had no burning desire to be married any time soon. After five months of listening to those statements, I gave Sid an ultimatum. He asked me for a week to think about it, then he told me he still wasn't ready -- he needed a few more months. So I broke up with him. Was I right in giving Sid an ultimatum? -- OUT OF PATIENCE IN MIAMI

DEAR OUT OF PATIENCE: Let me be sure I have the math right. If you promised Sid another year to make up his mind and then gave him an ultimatum after five months and one week, then you jumped the gun. If you gave him the second year and he continued to stall, then you did the right thing. After three wrong turns down the aisle, Sid is no longer the marrying kind.

Pampa Optimist Youth Club Packers repeat as city champions

The Pampa Optimist Youth Club 5th and 6th grade football season came to an end last Saturday night with the completion of the Pampa City Tournament held at Harvester Field. The Memory Gardens Packers topped the depth chart as the number one seed in the tournament and came away with a 44-0 victory over the number four seed Cowboys to advance to the championship game. The second game of the tournament was a defensive battle as the third seeded Dolphins were able to pull out a two point victory on a safety with 34 seconds left in the regulation to upset the second seed Chargers. The Dolphins advanced to the championship game on Saturday night to face the Packers.

Lefors football gain district title

The Pirates motto of "DC in 3" came true. Last Friday nights win over Groom clinched the district title for the Pirates. The Pirates will play Motley County next Friday night with the site to be chosen over a coin toss Saturday in Lubbock. The winner of the coin toss gets to play on their home field. Motley County beat Lefors last year in the playoffs but the Pirates are ready for them this year. Ravens soar past Texans, 41-13

HOUSTON (AP) — The Baltimore Ravens' offense is starting to look as good as their stifling defense. Rookie Joe Flacco threw two touchdown passes, Willis McGahee ran for 112 yards and two scores and the Ravens pulled away from the Houston Texans in the second half for a 41-13 win at Reliant Stadium on Sunday. The Ravens (6-3) have won four in a row and are tied with Pittsburgh atop the AFC North. "That's a quarter of your season, winning all your games," cornerback Samari Rolle said. "I don't think a lot of people figured we would be at this point. But we can't get complacent. We've just got to keep going." Baltimore held the sloppy Texans to 75 yards rushing and had four interceptions off Sage Rosenfels, who started for injured Matt Schaub. The Ravens also reached 40 points on the road for the first time since 1999 and have averaged 33.5 points in the past four games — and they felt like they could've scored more in Houston. "We're seeing signs of what we're capable of," said Flacco, who completed 15 of 23 passes for 185 yards. "But as far as all of us are concerned, we can get a lot better. We can kind of see down the road and see where we're trying to get to." The Texans (3-6), meanwhile, have lost two in a row after winning the previous three. They collapsed in the fourth quarter after Rosenfels threw a 60-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Walter late in the third to make it 19-13. But a pass interference penalty on Houston's Eugene Wilson gave the Ravens a first-and-goal at the 1, and Flacco threw a touchdown pass to Todd Heap with 14:03 left. Flacco found Derrick Mason for the 2-point conversion that put Baltimore up 27-13. "Those are always big drives, to answer their score and stop the momentum," Flacco said. "They were starting to feel like they were going to get back in the game. We still had the lead, so we just knew we needed to go back down there and do what we've been doing all game." Linebacker Ray Lewis then intercepted Rosenfels for the second time and Heap caught another touchdown pass, this one from Troy Smith. Rolle picked off Rosenfels' next throw and McGahee scored 2 minutes later. "When the defense gives you the opportunity to have a short field and go in and really put it away, it's good to know we're able to do that," Flacco said. Even more encouraging for the Ravens is that McGahee and Rolle are

Weekend Sports In Brief

NEW YORK (AP) — Penn State slipped to the back of the one-loss pack Sunday in The Associated Press college football poll, while No. 1 Alabama and No. 2 Texas Tech strengthened their hold on the top spots. The Nittany Lions fell four places to No. 7 in the Top 25 after losing for the first time this season. The 24-23 loss at Iowa on a field goal in the final seconds all but eliminated coach Joe Paterno's team from the national title race and left only Alabama and Texas Tech as unbeaten teams from the six BCS conferences.

The Crimson Tide (10-0) needed overtime to stay perfect, beating LSU 27-21 in Nick Saban's return to Baton Rouge, La., as Alabama coach. The Tide received 44 first-place votes and 1,604 points from the media panel. The Red Raiders (10-0) followed up their big win over Texas last week with a resounding 56-20 victory over Oklahoma State. The impressive performance earned the Red Raiders the remaining 21 first-place votes, up from 12 last week, and 1,574 points.

Alabama plays Mississippi State at home on Saturday and Texas Tech has a week off before playing at Oklahoma on Nov. 22, the Red Raiders' fourth consecutive game against a ranked opponent. No. 3 Florida, No. 4 Texas, No. 5 Oklahoma and No. 6 Southern California, all with one-loss but still with national title hopes, all moved up one spot and are ahead of Penn State.

No. 8 Utah (10-0) moved up two spots, jumping over Boise State (9-0), which stayed at No. 9. The Utes and Broncos are both trying to break into the Bowl Championship Series from conferences without an automatic bid to the big-money games.

Ohio State moved up two spots and completes the first 10.

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — Sergio Garcia won the rain-delayed HSBC Champions to take the No. 2 spot in the world ranking behind Tiger Woods, beating Oliver Wilson with a birdie on the second hole of a playoff early Monday.

The Spanish star made a 7-foot birdie putt on the par-5 18th — the only hole used for the playoff — at Sheshan Golf Club — after the Englishman missed a 10-footer.

Garcia forced the playoff by holing a 5-foot birdie on 18 to finish with a 4-under 68 and match Wilson at 14-under 274. Wilson, a surprise star for Europe in the Ryder Cup, reached the playoff by saving his par on 18 with a 7-footer for a 70.

Wilson was attempting to win his first European tour title.

The finish moved Garcia into the No. 2 spot in the world rankings behind Tiger Woods, pushing Phil Mickelson to No. 3.

Mickelson, the 2007 champion, shot a 73 to tie for eighth in the $5 million tournament, five strokes behind the leaders.

Peter Hanson (66) and Geoff Ogilvy (70) finished a stroke off the lead, while Henrik Stenson (71) was three behind.

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Jimmie Johnson moved inches away from his record-tying third consecutive Sprint Cup championship with a dominating victory Sunday at Phoenix International Raceway, where he led a race-high 217 of the 313 laps to deflate Carl Edwards' title hopes.

Johnson heads into next week's season finale up 141 points over Edwards and needs only to finish 36th or better to join Cale Yarborough (1976-78) as the only drivers in NASCAR history to win three straight Cup titles.

The win was his third straight at Phoenix, and had Edwards on the edge of conceding after his own fourth-place finish.

Johnson has made a mockery of the Chase for the championship, reeling off 14 wins in 49 races since NASCAR adopted the format in 2004. He contended for the title in 2004 and 2005, only to come up just short both seasons.

He's on the verge of joining Yarborough, David Pearson, Lee Petty and Darrel Waltrip as a three-time champion. Jeff Gordon, his Hendrick Motorsports teammate, has four titles and Dale Earnhardt and Richard Petty won a NASCAR-record seven.

Johnson has done it in dominating fashion, particularly this year: he's finished in the top 10 in seven Chase races and his lowest finish was a sub-par 15th last week at Texas.

On Saturday, Edwards dominated at Phoenix to stay in mathematical contention for the Nationwide Series title.

NEW YORK (AP) — Yankees left-hander Andy Pettitte filed for free agency Sunday after repeatedly saying he hopes to return to the club next year.

Pettitte went 14-14 last season with a 4.54 ERA — his highest ERA since 1999. — General manager Brian Cashman said last week he wants Pettitte to return next season, but the 36-year-old veteran said Friday night he hadn't heard from the team.

Pettitte likely would have to agree to a cut from his $16 million salary last season, when he was 2-7 with a 6.23 ERA in his final 11 starts, and missed his last turn because of a sore pitching shoulder. End-of-season tests failed to reveal significant issues.

healthy again and contributed immediately. McGahee has overcome knee, rib and ankle injuries this season and Rolle returned after missing six games with a neck injury. The Ravens will get a true gauge of how good they are next week, when they visit the defending Super Bowl champion New York Giants

— but the four-game winning streak has filled the locker room with confidence. "We're just slowly but surely setting ourselves up for next month — December — and we'll see where it goes from there," said receiver Derrick Mason, who played the second half with a dislocated left shoulder.
