15 Thought Dead In Plane Crash

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Fifteen persons were believed dead today in the crash at sea of a Scandinavian Airlines System DC8 during a landing approach to Los Angeles International Airport.

Monday night the fuselage of the liner broke in two just aft of the wings when the plane hit the water about eight miles offshore during a rainstorm. The tail section sank almost immediately in 300 feet of water.

The Coast Guard reported early today that four bodies had been recovered from the choppy sea and 11 more persons were missing and may have drowned. There were 30 known survivors among the 45 persons aboard.

A massive search for the missing began at dawn but hope was fading. Sharks were reported in the area and small craft warnings were posted because of the rough seas.

Six crewmembers, including the pilot and co-pilot, survived. The remaining three, including two stewardesses, were dead or missing.

The jet pancaked on the water after the pilot, Kenneth Davies, a former RAF flyer who now is a Swedish citizen, radioed the control tower: "Something is wrong with my landing gear." The jet faded from radar screens in the tower 18 minutes later when it was three miles from the runway.

Passengers said there was no warning when the plane hit the water. One said the first indication of trouble was a "bumpy landing."

Olof Anderson, 38, an SAS pilot on leave and honeymooning with his new bride, said: "Everything was calm and easy and I think I was dozing," he said. "I first thought we had just had a hard landing. Then I saw the water coming into the plane."

He and his wife both were able to reach a life raft and be saved.

The survivors were taken by (See CRASH, Page 3)

Harriman Saying His Goodbyes To War Negotiation

PARIS (UPI)—French Foreign Minister Michel Debre today gave a farewell lunch for W. Averell Harriman, the outgoing chief American negotiator, at which the two diplomats were expected to discuss the procedural deadlock blocking the Vietnam talks.

Debre, who has close contacts with both the Communist and allied delegations, also was expected to touch upon basic peace issues with Harriman at the lunch.

Harriman, who will leave Paris Sunday for Washington, is in the process of saying goodbye. He is to be replaced by Henry Cabot Lodge shortly after the inauguration of President-elect Richard M. Nixon. There were unconfirmed reports that before leaving Harriman also would say goodbye to Xuan Thuy, the chief North Vietnamese negotiator.

Attempts to break the procedural deadlock over the shape of the negotiating table were due to continue today. Cyrus R. Vance, Harriman's deputy, is scheduled to meet South Vietnamese delegation leader Pham Dang Lam for another look at the procedural issues.

Harriman, who will be succeeded by Henry Cabot Lodge when Richard M. Nixon is inaugurated president Jan. 20, is scheduled to leave Sunday for Washington, where he will retire.

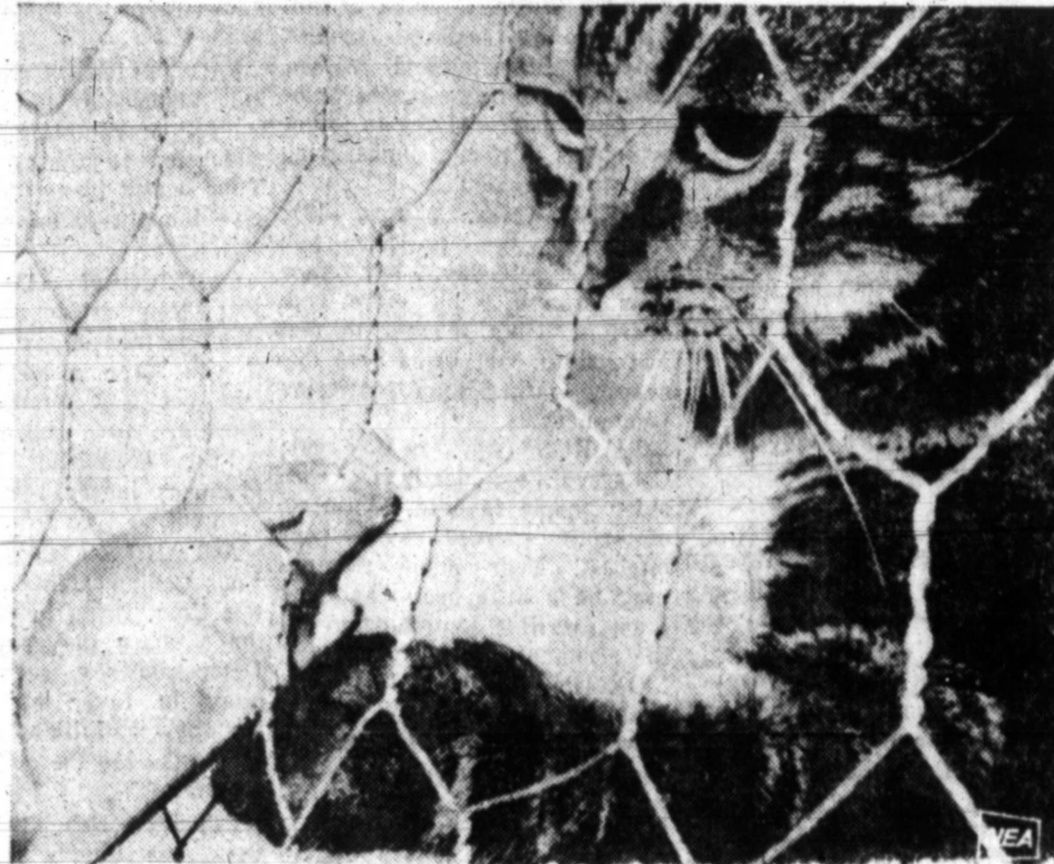

Harriman said Monday it makes no sense to speak of winning a "limited war" such as Vietnam, but that America should concentrate on doing what it has pledged to do—such as reaching the point of self-determination for Vietnam.

"I hope that the press and the public will realize this and not talk about winning a war but rather of achieving these objectives."

Harriman added that both sides are now committed to the talks and, although time and patience are needed, "I believe that out of these negotiations a peaceful solution will come."

Harriman was guest of honor Monday night at a reception given by the head of the South Vietnamese delegation to the talks, Pham Dang Lam. The ambassadors of all the allied nations involved in the Vietnam war also attended the reception.

Conference observers said there was no hope for any progress toward getting the expanded talks started before Harriman leaves his post and President Johnson leaves office.

Fire Damage Averted As Explosions Occur

LIMA, Ohio (UPI)—A pipeline break poured thousands of gallons of fuel oil into the streets and sewers of Lima late Monday. A $200,000 fire destroyed the sewage disposal plant and minor explosions rocked the sewer system, but the threat of widespread fire damage was averted.

A policeman suffered minor facial burns, but no one else was known to have been injured.

About 10,000 persons — 4,000 adults and 6,000 children — were moved out of a 125-block area along the route of the sewer line principally involved in the flood of oil. They were waiting today for the word to return to their homes.

Officials of the Buckeye Pipeline Co. said a 22-inch fuel line burst at about 4:30 p.m. Monday, spewing oil under the pressure into the streets. A spokeswoman estimated that at least 8,000 gallons an hour's normal flow—escaped before the line could be shut down.

Lakes of highly volatile oil six inches deep and a block long formed in some places.

The policeman's face was burned when he lifted a manhole cover and flames erupted from the sewer.

Acting Police Chief Ronald Cook said at 5 a.m. the entire area would be checked beginning at daybreak and all residences would be inspected (See PIPELINE, Page 3)

Guardsmen Arrested For Weapons Traffic

LITTLE FERRY, N.J. (UPI)—Two sergeants and a civilian employe of the National Guard were under arrest today and a truckload of apparently-stolen military weapons was in the hands of federal agents who had broken up one of the nation's biggest black markets in guns.

Sgt. William Walko, Sgt. Vincent T. DiBartolo, 38, and Kenneth J. Herbeck, 26, were arrested after raids Monday night uncovered arms caches in a modest frame house in Little Ferry and a rented garage in nearby Garfield, N.J. Both towns are suburbs of New York City.

A two-ton truckload of explosives and weapons including machine guns and carbines was taken to Newark, N.J., for inventory. The guns will be displayed today in the Federal Building in Newark.

Walko and DiBartolo, both full-time Guardsmen, were assigned to the Teaneck Army, where Walko was a custodian and DiBartolo was an administrative supply technician. Herbeck, a small-arms repairman, traveled all over the state repairing weapons for the Guard.

Paul Hakens, the Internal Revenue Service's New Jersey chief, said the arrests were the result of a four-month undercover investigation at various military installations in New Jersey.

The operation was one of the first major cases to arise under the four-month-old federal weapons act.

Hakens said the arsenal was "the biggest ever confiscated" during his 20 years with the IRS. It apparently was built up of guns stolen from various armories in the East.

The confiscated weapons included 15 Thompson sub-machine guns, dozens of pistols, crates of M2 carbines, some Russian-made pistols and carbines, several boxes of hand grenades and other explosives.

The house and garage served as warehouses for the weapons, which were sold after notification that they were available had been circulated "by word of mouth."

City Adopts New Employe Policies

A new set of personnel policies was adopted by the City Commission today which will permit Pampa to hire employes on a permanent basis at the age of 18 and on a temporary basis at age 15.

The old policy prohibited the hiring of anyone under 21 except on an emergency basis.

Other personnel policy changes adopted today include:

Nonsupervisory personnel of the same immediate family may now work in the same city department. This had been prohibited.

Employes will be permitted to postpone up to two weeks of earned vacation. Under the old policy employes with less than nine years could postpone only one week vacation and only employes of ten or more years duration could postpone two weeks.

Employes going into service under a national emergency will receive prior service credit in case of reinstatement within 90 (See POLICIES, Page 3)

PACKARD FACES PROBLEMS

Senate Committees Question Cabinet Appointees Of Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Four members of President-elect Richard M. Nixon's proposed cabinet were called before Senate committees today in what is expected to be smooth sailing toward confirmation. But David Packard, a sub-cabinet appointee, faced possible problems because of his wealth.

David M. Kennedy, as Treasury Secretary, John N. Mitchell, as Attorney General, Robert H. Finch, as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Melvin R. Laird, as Defense Secretary, all appeared assured of trouble-free confirmation.

Packard, designated by Nixon as Deputy Secretary of Defense or the No. 2 man at the Pentagon, had to convince senators he is free of any conflict of interest as long as he retains in trust $300 million of stock in his own firm, a defense contractor.

Senate hearings on Nixon's other cabinet appointments, including the controversial one of Walter J. Hickel as Interior Secretary, are scheduled for later in the week.

The committees technically are working without formal nominations because Nixon cannot forward them to the Senate until he is inaugurated.

But by disposing of the hearings this week, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield hopes to get confirmation of the cabinet hours after Nixon is sworn-in.

"If they are reported out of committee favorably we will try to get them confirmed that day—the 20th," Mansfield said.

By tradition, Senators of both parties tend to approve a President-elect's initial cabinet, barring some overriding objections. The only opposition that has surfaced so far has been against Hickel.

Laird and Packard were going before the Armed Services Committee and its new chairman, John C. Stennis, D-Miss.; Kennedy and Finch were appearing before the Finance Committee; and Mitchell faced the Judiciary Committee.

Packard's trouble traces to his proposal to place $300 million in stock of the Hewlett-Packard Co., in a charitable trust for as long as he is in government service. All income from the trust would go to charitable and educational institutions as would any increase in capital value of the stock.

Stennis has already confirmed that this proposal "involves a question of conflict" without committing the committee to any course of action.

In the past, however, the committee has forced defense secretaries to sell stock in firms with defense contracts. Former secretaries Robert S. McNamara and Charles E. Wilson were forced to sell their stocks in Ford Motor Co. and General Motors, respectively, before they could be approved.

TO OVERHAUL ACCOUNTING

City to Take Bids On Data Processing

Pampa city commissioners today took an initial step to overhaul the City Hall accounting and reporting system, which was described by finance director Stanley M. Chittenden as unable to "keep pace with present day requirements and the need for overall controls."

The first step taken was to authorize advertising for bids on three methods of purchasing or renting data processing equipment or the contracting on a unit work basis of the city's total data processing requirements with a service center in the local area.

The three different forms on which bids will be accepted for purchase or rental of equipment were listed as:

1. Rental or purchase of equipment capable of unit record card punch processing.
2. Rental or purchase of equipment with a ledger memory capability for processing data.
3. Rental or purchase of equipment entirely computerized with random access capability.

Bids on all of the processes will be received and opened at 8:30 a.m. at the Feb. 11 regular city commission meeting in City Hall.

In reporting the finance director's statement on need for updating the city's accounting system, City Manager Charles Hill said "a cost benefit evaluation on any of the four proposed methods would not be correct until after bids have been received on the equipment and (See CITY, Page 3)

Soviet Cosmonaut Orbits Earth

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union launched a cosmonaut into orbit around the earth today and within minutes he told a nationwide television audience "everything is fine. I am fine."

Lt. Col. Vladimir Shatalov rode his Soyuz 4 spacecraft into orbit at 1:39 a.m. CST on what the Soviet news agency Tass said was a "complicated and responsible program." It did not detail his goals.

A Moscow television commentator said Shatalov's flight would conduct further tests on the Soyuz spacecraft as part of the Soviets' long-range goal of establishing earth-orbiting space stations for interplanetary space travel.

Western experts said the craft carries two maneuvering engines and is capable of staying in orbit up to 30 days.

In a pre-flight statement, Shatalov said he was assigned to continue testing "the excellent spaceship" but gave no indication how long the flight would last.

(In Bochum, Germany, Heinz Kaminsky, director of the Bochum Institute for Satellite and Space Research, predicted Shatalov would link up with the unmanned Cosmos 263 satellite launched Sunday and with other vehicles yet to be sent skyward. Minutes after launch, Soviet television came on with videotapes of Shatalov's ship lifting majestically from the Soviets' central Asia space center and curving toward orbit, its five rocket boosters a brilliant orange.

Then the cameras inside the craft showed the 41-year-old cosmonaut, the Soviets' 13th space voyager, smiling and waving as he reported, "Everything is fine. I feel fine. Everything is working excellently."

Later the cosmonaut described his first hours in space over the national television hookup, similar to the one used by the Apollo 8 astronauts.

"I was able to bear well the overloads (of launching) and weightlessness," he said. "I adjusted myself to the overloads. I have distributed all scientific equipment."

Tass said Shatalov was circling the globe once every 88 minutes and 15 seconds. His orbit took him from 100 to 140 miles from the earth, at a 51-degree angle from the equator.

The Soyuz spacecraft, Western experts said, was a prototype of the vehicle the Soviets plan to use for lunar journeys. Tass said the cosmonaut was well into his flight program of duties and experiments.

For the first time since Sputnik 11 years ago, the Soviets have fallen behind the United States in the race for space. The Kremlin has exerted heavy pressure on scientists to recover the lead.

A television newscaster said Soyuz 4 would continue the research carried out by cosmonaut Georgy Beregovoi in his four-day flight orbiting the earth in Soyuz 3 in November.

Sirhan to Give His Account Of Kennedy Slaying

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sirhan B. Sirhan will almost certainly appear on the witness stand at his trial to tell his own story of the slaying of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, a member of the defense staff disclosed today.

The 24-year-old Arab immigrant was described as actually aware of the fact that only his motivation and state of mind can sway a jury toward leniency and to be ready to go into those matters in detail.

Defense counsel had maintained throughout the preliminary maneuvering that the Pasadena, Calif., youth would never be called to testify.

One juror was tentatively selected Monday during a full day of questioning eight men and women, and she still was subject to dismissal through one of the 20 peremptory challenges given each side.

Mrs. Rosa Molina, a widow and a nurse, hesitated for long moments and then answered "yes" when deputy Dist. Atty. David Pitts asked her:

"Would you have the courage to come down from the jury room and say (to Sirhan) 'For the murder of Senator Kennedy you die in the gas chamber?'"

Selection of jurors was resuming today at 11:30 a.m. CST.

Defense attorney Grant B. Cooper revealed at the outset of the jury questioning that Sirhan would not deny that he fired the shots in the Ambassador Hotel which killed Kennedy and wounded five other persons standing nearby.

Cooper told the first prospective juror, George E. Dondle, an employe of an aerospace firm, that the defense would concentrate on the "intent" of Sirhan.

Youth Informed Of World Record

A 17-year-old Pampa youth who last Tuesday felled the largest Aoudad sheep ever killed by a Texas hunter has been officially informed that it is also a world record.

Matt Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Mills Jr., 2301 Mary Ellen, said the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department notified him by phone of the news after checking world records.

The world record is based on the ram's weight and the length of its horns.

The ram weighed 210 pounds after it had been bled. Its horns measured 34½ inches and 32 inches.

Mills, a Pampa High School student, downed the ram last Tuesday while he and two companions were hunting in Palo Duro Canyon.

The sheep was bagged on the Mattie Armstrong ranch in Armstrong County and was checked through the Parks and Wildlife station near Claude.

Young Mills said he spotted the ram as it attempted to climb a steep cliff and shot it after it turned around to look for another route. Mills said he shot the ram through the jugular vein and the heart with a .375 magnum Winchester rifle.

The youth said he was unable to retrieve the animal until the following day because it jumped over a cliff.

Mills had hunted Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday before bagging the animal. One of his two hunting companions, Jimmy Hedgecock of Amarillo, also bagged one of the game animals. Hedgecock's ram weighed about 195 pounds, Mills said.

The kills were part of a total of 32 sheep taken by hunters in a five-day stalk of the big game animals transplanted to the canyon area several years ago. There are an estimated 500 Aoudad sheep in the Palo Duro Canyon area, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Shoe Toes Grow Round for Spring

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Round and round it goes, the shape of the shoe toe for spring.

Any remains of the pointed toe in women's footwear long since have been put away. Gone now is the blunted, squared toe of last spring. The new look is the softly rounded one with some fullness to the shoes without their being hefty.

To balance the snubbed toe, footwear designers have given more height to the back, and added the variety of heel heights from which to choose. Heels come in flats, fair to middling, even go-as-high-as-three-inches.

The newest looking height, dictated by the pants in spring collections, is a bit over two inches. It's the height Roger Vivier showed originally with the Yves St. Laurent pantsuits from Paris.

The higher heels in no way resemble the spikes of the 1940's and 1950's.

The new highs are broader, set far back on the shoe and are minus the old full curve at the top.

Designers show the rounded toe in everything from daytime flats to the most glittering of evening wear, in materials from traditional kids and patents to patterned fabrics. Pair a patterned shoe with a solid dress for a change.

Delman, for instance, does a paisley patterned pump with two inch heel. And Mademoiselle shows the "nanny" oxford, a three eyelet tie with chunky mid-high heel in a floral pattern.

Spring shoes open up, and the open look will be the most important one for summer, predicts the National Footwear Institute. The look calls for uncovering everywhere at the front, the middle, the back. Always, the broad heel. And some manufacturers are doing thong-like sandals with ankle straps and platform soles of the 1940's.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 years old and have been working for nearly a year in a place that's way out in the sticks and not very easy to get to. My problem is the man I ride to and from work with. He is 53, married, and has grown children.

Abby, I started giving this man a little peck on the cheek every time he took me home, but now I'm having a terrible time getting him to stop at one kiss. I know I shouldn't have started up with him in the first place because I can't stand him, but I don't drive and this man picks me up at my door every morning and brings me home after work, and he never asked for a dime.

The free transportation was a good deal before he got so chummy. How can I keep this old man in his place and not lose my rides?

NO TURNING BACK
DEAR NO: You probably can't, so now would be a good time to find a job that's easier to get to. Nothing is free, so prepare to pay for your transportation in cash, cut out the kissing, and kiss off this old lecher for good.

DEAR ABBY: I have always heard that a wife can help her husband to succeed in business. Exactly how can she do this? I mean, don't some wives try too hard and spoil things for their husbands?

I am 24 and my husband is 27. He's a junior executive with an ad agency and has lots of talent and ambition, but I'd like to do everything I can to help him.

I'm a beautician and am still working, but will quit as soon as I get pregnant. (We've been working on that for about a year, but so far, no luck. Any advice there?)

TINA
DEAR TINA: You can help your husband by letting him know you have confidence in his ability to succeed. You can be a good sport if he has to work late or take a business trip without you.

You can send him to work looking like a "winner"—well-pressed clothes, clean shirts and ties, and not in need of a haircut. (I don't expect YOU to cut his hair, but you can "remind" him when he needs it.)

Listen when he wants to talk, and be quiet when he doesn't. Encourage him to climb, but be patient, and don't nag or make comparison. And about that "family" you're working on. Check in with your friendly neighborhood doctor.

DEAR ABBY: After 21 years of marriage I still call my husband at work just to say "I love you."

Who knows? After he leaves for work one of us may not live thru the day. I know it's company time, but I love the guy and I think it helps him to do a better job just knowing how important he is to our five children and me. And you can sign my name. I don't care who knows it.

Your Horoscope

JEANE DIXON

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 15

Your birthday Wednesday. Personal readjustment is the main factor in the coming year. Paradoxical circumstances from time to time upset plans just enough to require last-minute revisions. Much of this will have lasting results, especially in ethical values. Wednesday's natives tend to be existentialists, striving to follow principles with unwavering sincerity.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Keep up the projects you started yesterday, but pace your efforts a bit more consistently. Give thought to diet and health. Get extra rest this evening rather than scattering your energies.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Conservative dealings with older people favored. Materials of exotic sources excite your interest. Your home routines may be a little hectic and you must sacrifice something to get the arrangement you want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have smooth sailing if you keep things simple and stay with the deal you start with. Gather friends this evening, or take your set of people to a bigger party elsewhere.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): At present prepare notes for coming business negotiations. Your family, relatives and neighbors all have some commentary to offer. You may as well encourage them to speak out so you can learn where the problems are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): More will be suggested than spoken straight out Wednesday. It is better for you to think about what is suggested than to challenge it with a blunt "what do you mean?" approach. Home improvements are strongly favored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The schedule for a regular physical exam comes at a good time now. Family and neighborhood relations are pleasant enough. Keep plugging away!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today you realize that something you said yesterday was unconscious prophecy. Get out early for some exercise. Promote pet ideas. Start a good round of debates. You'll need extra rest tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep right on going with yesterday's approach. There are some odd bargains in your hobby department, if your only know where the shopping places are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Wednesday like yesterday, is full of rambling discussion which leaves nothing untouched. Your health turns up a bit, but give thought to improving your diet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You attract help from silent-partner types Wednesday if you have a good program laid out and something worthwhile to sell. Dealings with organized institutions promises larger results at the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your selling ability is high at this time. Bring in your friends for a share in group projects. Defer routines, such as shopping, in favor of more important activities. Romantic interests lag a bit for the moment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Open the day with a bit of exercise, however brief, and you'll thrive better. Make a habit of it. Formal social contacts are favored during the day and evening.

VESTED INTEREST—A basic vest pattern made up in soft cotton suede is given added interest with an all-over diamond-shaped motif. The design is created with J. & P. Coats cotton twill tape. Mark off diamond pattern with chalk pencil, making parallel lines 2 1/2-inches apart, and stitch on both edges of tape.

When you're packing for a local move, wrap your china in white tissue, three plates to a package. "Floor" the carton with a thick cushion of tissue, a moving line suggests, and stand the packages on end, nestling one into the other.

Mrs. Helen Groninger presented two sets of dominos to the center in memory of Uncle Billy Frost, one of early members who died a few years ago. He was with the oil company before he retired and liked to attend the meetings at the center and play the games.

Miss Lucy Herliacher spent the holidays in Groom with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. T.G. Fields.

Mrs. Hattie Adams has returned home after spending three weeks in an Abilene hospital where she was visiting her daughter's family, the Bill Bramers, and had severe ear trouble. She also spent some time with another daughter Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robinson and family at Maysville, Okla. Mrs. Adams did not feel well enough to come to the Center Thursday, but hopes to be able to attend next week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shepherd of Amarillo, an uncle and aunt of Mrs. D.W. Kendrick, visited during the New Year's holiday with her.

Mrs. Phil Gates spent Christmas with her daughter, Mrs. Tom Bandy in Healy, Kans. Her husband, Rev. Tom Bandy is pastor of First Methodist Church there. They had two foreign students as

At Robert E. Lee Junior High School, students start their tests Wednesday with English, math, Algebra, ninth grade homemaking, shop and crafts.

Also at Lee, tests start Wednesday and continue Thursday in physical education, seventh and eighth grade art, and music, and eighth grade homemaking, woodworking and speech. Thursday, tests will be given in history, science, speech, Latin I, reading and ninth grade art.

Elementary schools and the two junior high schools plan to distribute report cards Jan. 22.

Israel to Reject Soviet Proposal

By United Press International
Premier Levi Eshkol of Israel will reject the Soviet Union's latest Middle East peace plan today as running counter to the interests of his nation, government sources in Jerusalem said.

In London, King Hussein of Jordan and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan of Israel told television interviewers that peace between Arab and Israel was as remote as ever. They disagreed on how to find it.

"I don't think the Arabs are going to start another war this summer," Dayan said. "But if they do, they are going to lose it."

"There's no definite time on when we can let people back in," Cook said.

A.F. Lends A Hand
Cook said fire fighting foam and a pumper were flown in from Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton. He said the foam has been forced into sewers to prevent more explosions or fires.

He said the large Lima-Baldwin-Hamilton manufacturing plant, located in the heart of the area, was also closed by officials.

"The first floor was completely saturated with oil," Cook said. He said the oil had apparently also damaged other buildings.

The city set up cots in school gymnasiums. About 2,000 persons gathered clothing and bedding and spent the night in the temporary quarters. Others sought out friends and relatives living in other parts of the city.

"The folks here seem to be in good spirits," said Howard McGinnis, principal of Edison Elementary. "About two-thirds of them are kids. The kids aren't afraid. They seem to be enjoying it."

In fact, the main problem we had was keeping them from running in the hallways," McGinnis said the city buses carried some evacuees to the schools. Others drove their own cars.

Mrs. Leartra Gordey, one of the 10,000 uprooted, said the emergency did not frighten her.

"I don't think anyone was scared, really," she said, "but my husband says he's going to get some insurance on the house for certain now." Mrs. Gordey, her husband and a 4-year-old daughter spent the night at South Junior High School.

Utility billing would be speeded up to 8,000 water customers and cut from a one-week cycle to not over two days.

After substantial study and discussion concerning accounting procedures, City Manager Hill said it was determined that it would be advisable to advertise for bids on the different proposals for data processing.

Outstanding speaker award for the evening was given to Dave Osborne, who spoke on "Honeymoon in Havana," with the subject of hijacked planes to Cuba.

Other speakers were John Rogers, who won the most improved speaker award, and Tom Johnson, who spoke on "Football Reporting on Television."

Guests were Tony James and Chris Weston, both Englishmen who have recently moved to Pampa to work for Cabot Corp. They plan to live in Pampa about three years.

The annual award is given on the point system, for talks in the community, contests sponsored by the club and attendance at Pampa Toastmasters International meetings, according to Curt Beck, educational vice president for the club.

A. P. Morris, club president, presented the award, an engraved plaque. Malcolm McClelland was toastmaster for the program.

Perryton police checked out an address Monday night where the girl was supposedly staying, but they were told she wasn't there.

The girl is described as five feet, five inches tall, weighing about 105 pounds, slender build, fair complexion, black hair and blue eyes.

J. G. Doggett, of Nensfield & Doggett, in making a report at today's meeting on his firm's annual audit of city records, also told commissioners that the Water & Sewer department accounting department especially needs a thorough overhaul.

"The city has completely outgrown its accounting system," Doggett said. "There have been only a few minor changes through the past 30 or 40 years. The city has not kept pace."

Chittenden's statement to the commission pointed out that it now takes a week or more to prepare the city payroll and under data processing procedures that job would require about two hours.

In budgetary accounting, Chittenden reported, it now takes four full days to post ledgers and four more days to work up a financial statement which still is not adequate.

With data processing, he stated, and just one input process, the city would get an output report containing all needs and many items not covered in current procedures.

boat to Marina Del Rey on the coast, the closest harbor to the scene. They were rushed to Santa Monica Hospital and UCLA Medical Center. Five were reported seriously injured.

There was no immediate explanation of why the jet crashed. A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Agency said a natural question was why the passengers were not warned the plane was going into the water.

Two of the four bodies were identified as Susanne Goethberg, an SAS air hostess, and Jules Martinet, Inglewood, Calif., who was returning home from a one-week vacation in Sweden.

An investigation team from the National Transportation and Safety Board was en route here from Washington, D.C., to launch an investigation into the crash. A team of SAS experts also was en route to California from the airline's headquarters.

Three Coast Guard cutters and three helicopters joined the one cutter on the scene at daybreak. A spokesman said the search in wind-driven rain and choppy seas would continue until all hope was gone.

There are also changes in policy which would permit an employe required to take a military physical examination two days leave with pay for such examination, a revised section which sets forth the city's policy concerning promotions and transfers, and a section which permits employes who do not resign in good standing to be eligible for reemployment after one year instead of the current two year period.

All changes in the city's personnel policies are retroactive to Jan. 1 this year.

How Bad Is English Sickness?

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of three dispatches in which a distinguished British diplomatic writer takes a look at the problems besetting his country.

By MALCOLM RUTHERFORD, London Financial Times-UPI LONDON—Britain, they say, is sick and foreigners even have coined a special term for the disease. They call it "English Sickness" and some of those who have lived with it know that it has gone on so long it begins to look incurable.

Every little upset, at home or abroad, it seems, can be enough to blow the economy off course, in the official and current phrase. An outsider might be forgiven for wondering if the economy has not been blown off course so often that the country no longer really knows which course is being charted.

Withal, and despite the recurrent crisis with which Britain has been plagued since the end of World War II, there is very little visible evidence of any crisis in Britain today.

London is more prosperous, more cosmopolitan, more "swinging" than ever before. There is hardly a city or town in the country that is not having its old heart pulled down to be replaced by modern office blocks, shops and apartments.

Holidays Abroad

Consumer goods proliferate. So does the taste for holidays abroad, despite an official travel allowance of only 50 pounds sterling a year ($120) for countries outside the sterling area. Unemployment is low, at least by the standards of other countries. British fashion leads the world.

Reminders of crisis, however, come regularly once a month. Britain alone in the world promptly publishes its monthly trade figures, and the tale they tell is one of continuing though fluctuating deficit in visible trade. It's not that exports are falling—on the contrary they frequently set new records. But imports are rising even faster. Publication of a bad set of figures can lead to a run on the pound, ultimately to a need for new foreign credits, inevitably accompanied by further restrictions at home, and in November, 1967, even to devaluation of the pound. Economic squeeze has followed economic squeeze in an effort to check this pattern, so far without producing a permanent cure.

Political Pressures

And the sickness of which people speak apparently extends to politics too. Economic weakness leads to outside political pressures.

Britain today, for example, is attacked from the Soviet Union because of its reaction to the invasion of Czechoslovakia. Yet, far from being unique, the British reaction of horror was shared by virtually every country in the Western world. It can only be assumed that Britain is singled out for reproach by Moscow because it is thought to be weak and susceptible to pressure.

Nor is it just the big guns like the Soviet Union which treat Britain this way. Argentina at this moment is relentlessly pushing a claim, which has no foundation in law, to the British colony of the Falkland Islands in the Atlantic. Despite the known wish of the 2,000-odd islanders to remain British, it is clear that the British government has seriously considered giving it.

1st ad 4-48 Ital HOW BAD

General Francisco Franco's Spain is demanding Gibraltar and is conducting a virtual blockade of "The Rock" until it gets it. Despite the fact that a recent plebiscite showed that only 12 out of 170,000 Gibraltarians were in favor of a change of sovereignty, moves for ending British rule command an impressive majority in the United Nations.

The decline of a once great power to this position has of course been gradual and seems dramatic only now that its extent is finally being appreciated.

No Competition

At the end of the 19th Century Britain seemed to lead the world because there was an absence of competition. When competition eventually came, other countries, having greater natural resources, were inevitably better placed. At least one weakness, for example, in the British trading position is inherent. This is the heavy dependence on imported foodstuffs. Not one of Britain's industrial competitors has the same handicap.

It means, quite simply, that Britain has to export that much more manufactured goods just to get up to its competitors' starting point. The massive deficit on the visible trade account was nearly always present. In 1938 it stood at more than 300 million pounds ($720 million) at today's exchange rate), a gap that ought to be regarded as serious enough even today. It was covered then by "invisible" returns on foreign investment, by acting as shipper to the world. It is just here that competition has made itself felt though there has been a welcome recovery in "invisible" earnings in the past year.

And of course there was the traumatic effect of World War II. The power which led and did most for the opposition to Hitler emerged at the end in a world of emergent superpowers, and to find that even the European powers it had so dominated were shortly to make a miraculous recovery while Britain did not.

It would have been hard for any country feeling so justifiably proud of itself to adapt to so changed a situation. For Britain the adaptation nearly 25 years later is still not quite complete.

Foreign News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM, UPI Foreign News Analyst

Vaccine Shortage: Britain is likely to be almost completely defenseless if, as medical authorities fear, the Hong Kong Flu epidemic now raging in the United States strikes Britain. Officials are warning that enough anti-flu serum to inject even the highest priority categories, such as doctors, hospital staffs and elderly persons, are unlikely to be available in Britain until late spring, which will be too late.

New Defense Orders: European economists expect business on the continent this year will get a considerable boost from increased purchases for defense. The Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia injected new life into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and consequently increased orders for businesses catering to defense needs are now starting to enter the pipeline. The spending increases will be mainly in Europe.

Space Race: Despite the Soviet Union's present accent on unmanned deep space probes, the Soviets still are believed planning to send cosmonauts aloft within the relatively near future to work in earth orbit on problems of manned docking and crew transfers in space.

Keep The Commonweath: The biggest achievement of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers Conference, which ends Wednesday, will be general agreement that the 28-nation multi-racial organization is worth keeping alive. Britain is expected to work out deals with India, Pakistan, the East Africans and the Caribbean member countries to take the heat out of the colored immigration issue, one of the most explosive facing the commonwealth.

Moscow's Mideast Fears: Diplomats say Russia's latest Mideast peace offensive is prompted by fear that Moscow might lose control over the Arabs. The diplomats say Moscow wants to avert a new war, but they are far from convinced that Russia is anxious for a full-scale settlement of the Mideast conflict which would reduce Arab dependence on the Soviet Union.

De Gaulle Opposition Speaks: The outcry against President Charles de Gaulle's total arms embargo for Israel has reached such a pitch that observers do not rule out a formal demand for its lifting when Foreign Minister Michel Debre meets the National Assembly Foreign Affairs Committee Jan. 23.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The term "Democratic Advisory Council" has become a dirty word to almost all Democrats. This feeling is shared by Democrats who want a new policy-making voice for the party and those who don't. It grew out of the friction between the 1957-60 Democratic Advisory Council and the party leadership in Congress then headed by two strong men, the late Speaker Sam Rayburn and Lyndon B. Johnson, the Senate Majority Leader at that time.

There has been much discussion and argument about whether the party needs a new agency to speak for it. Those who argue that it does agree, however, that it should have a different name than the one which functioned at the end of the last Republican administration.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, "titular leader" of the party after the Nixon administration takes office, has suggested that the Democrats might think about a national party conference next year to prepare for the 1970 state and congressional elections.

Attendance Spotty

The Democratic National Committee held a conference of that type in Chicago in 1953, inviting Democratic members of Congress and governors. It was attended by some and spurned by others.

At the same time, the National Committee adopted a resolution rejecting a proposal for a 1954 special convention between the 1952 and 1956 presidential nominating conventions. It was said that existing state laws or party rules provided no machinery for the election of delegates.

After Dwight D. Eisenhower's second election to the White House in 1956, then Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler and his executive committee set up the advisory council, which periodically issued broad policy statements.

Former president Harry S. Truman and again E. J. Brennan, the twice-nominated presidential candidate, agreed to serve. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, then newly elected party whip in the Senate, accepted and then withdrew because, on cue from Rayburn, the entire official leadership of the Democrats in Congress, declined invitations.

Humphrey Attended

Humphrey, who then held no official leadership role in the party, joined the committee as a senator from Minnesota.

Mansfield now counts himself among those who want no new version of the Democratic Advisory Council.

Traditionally, the congressional leadership of the party in opposition to the administration regards itself as the policy-making voice of the party. Republican congressional leaders resisted the creation of a more broadly based policy agency until after the GOP's 1964 election disaster and then agreed to formation of the Republican Coordinating Committee, which included former presidential nominees, governors and other party leaders outside Congress. But half of the members came from Congress.

A segment of the Democratic party wants a similar agency to generate more public exposure of the party's programs during a Republican administration.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—What this country needs, and needs badly, is some sort of crash program to improve the image of automobile mechanics. There isn't a moment to lose.

Speed is essential because the second hand compact I bought a few months ago has been making a strange Walter Mitty noise.

Instead of going "pocketa-pocketa-pocketa," it has started going "pocketa-po-keta-queep." Any day now I may have to take it to a garage, and when that happens I want to be sure that the $15,000-a-year mechanic who works on it feels properly respected.

The fact that mechanics are concerned about their image was brought out the other day at a Federal Trade Commission hearing.

Paul F. Lorenz, a Ford Motor Co. vice president, testified that poor repair service about which many motorists have complained results in part from a status hangup.

Although a big city mechanic may earn $10,000 to $15,000 annually, repair shops have trouble filling such jobs, he said. The reason is that the jobs carry very little prestige.

"We have created what must be considered an almost cult-like reverence for high status positions and high status is not one of the rewards that attack easily to a career as an auto mechanic," he said.

"This explanation of unsatisfactory repair service probably came as a surprise to many motorists. It certainly did to me.

I usually have to take my car to the shop two or three times before they finally get the queeps out. But I had assumed that was because the mechanics couldn't tell the difference between a carburetor queep and a transmission queep.

If elevating the status of their occupation will make them more proficient queep-wise, I am eager to do my part in bringing that about. Here are some of my recommendations:

—Mechanics should stop wearing coveralls and start attiring themselves in striped pants and cutaway coats. That would put them on equal footing with diplomats, who have oodles of prestige.

—They should refuse to make house calls. That would put them on equal footing with physicians, another prestigious profession.

—They would throw away their tool kits and start transporting their instruments in briefcases. Thus attaining a status equivalent to that of lawyers.

—Finally, they should put themselves in a lower income bracket. Thus attaining the status of newspaper reporters.

IRS Says Get Those Tax Forms Now

DALLAS—Northern Texas taxpayers may not receive all the forms and schedules they need to file their 1968 Federal income tax return in the package mailed by the Internal Revenue Service.

According to Ellis Campbell, Jr., district director of Internal Revenue for Northern Texas, IRS cannot possibly know in advance which taxpayers will need Schedule B to report income from pensions or annuities or who will need Schedule D to report gain or loss from the sale of property.

Taxpayers can pick up most widely-used forms at many banks and post offices. Any forms, schedules or instructions not available at these locations can be obtained by writing to the District Director's office.

Campbell said now is the best time for taxpayers to make sure they have all the records, and tax forms they may need.

Taxpayers who filed an income tax return last year should have already received in the mail a Form 1040 or Form 1040A and filing instructions.

Prison Escapees Still At Large

LUBBOCK (UPI)—Officials of the Lubbock County Sheriff's department today said two federal prisoners who escaped from the Lubbock County jail Friday were still at large.

The missing pair, Kenneth Johnson, 31, of St. Paul, Ark., and Donald Ray Buchanan, 29, of Dallas, escaped after overpowering two jailers in an elevator with "knife-like weapons made from oil cans."

The two had escaped the Oklahoma State Penitentiary Nov. 2 and were arrested last month in Big Spring on charges of robbing the Denton State Bank in Arkansas Dec. 2.

Both were being held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Lubbock County Sheriff C.H. "Chock" Blanchard described both Buchanan and Johnson as "extremely dangerous."

Euchanan was serving a 25 to 75 year sentence for armed bank robbery prior to escaping from the Oklahoma institution. Johnson was serving a two-year sentence or armed robbery.

TOO CONSCIENTIOUS

NANTUCKET, Mass. (UPI)—A little snow doesn't bother the thrifty selectmen of this island town off Massachusetts but an unnecessary expenditure of tax money—that's something else.

Take the word of William E. Post Jr. for that. He's seeking legal counsel to get his job back or at least severance pay. As Nantucket Public Works Director—he called out the sanding and snow-throwing crews after a two-inch snow. The Selectmen fired him.

Inaugural Is a Coronation and a Circus

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Richard Milhous Nixon will become the 37th president of the United States Jan. 20 at the climax of three days of inaugural festivities combining the best and worst features of a coronation, a circus and a political victory celebration.

Nixon's inaugural will be the most expensive in U.S. history, with an estimated cost of $2.5 million. By comparison, Lyndon B. Johnson's inaugural in 1965 cost $2.1 million, and John F. Kennedy's in 1961 cost $1.6 million.

Only $400,000 of the inaugural's cost will come out of the taxpayers' pockets. That is the sum appropriated by Congress for the official swearing-in ceremony on the steps of the capitol, at which Nixon will take the 35-word oath prescribed by Article II of the U.S. Constitution.

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Private Money
The remaining $2.1 million will be spent by the inaugural committee, a private group headed by innkeeper J. Willard Marriott, on such traditional trimmings as the inaugural gala, the inaugural concert, the inaugural parade, and the inaugural ball. The committee hopes to recoup this outlay from admission charges to these events and from the sale of official souvenirs.

Not included in the $2.5 million price tag are the hefty sums that individuals will spend on hotel rooms, meals, entertainment, transportation, new clothes and hairdos. No great extravagance would be required for an out-of-town couple to pay upwards of $1,000 for the privilege of saying, "I was there."

More than 20,000 faithful and presumably affluent Republicans from every state in the union already have booked hotel rooms, and the housing committee reports that some rooms are still available for latecomers.

High Prices
Hotels are refusing to accept reservations for any period shorter than three days (four days in some of the plusher hostilities). Some are adhering to a public pledge to hold the line on room rates but others have quietly jacked up their charges from 10 to 25 per cent above normal.

Official invitations to the inaugural, which have been mailed to about 200,000 persons, are intended purely as souvenirs. These menu-sized invitations—expensively printed on heavy vellum embossed with the presidential seal—won't get you into anything except the city of Washington, for which no passport is required.

To attend any of the major events, inaugural visitors will need special invitations, usually free, or tickets costing from $4 to $100, depending on the event and the location of the seat.

On the free list, but very hard to come by, are invitations to the official swearing-in ceremony on the capitol steps, which will get underway at 10:30 a.m. CST Monday, Jan. 20, and last for about one hour. This is the event at which Nixon and vice president-elect Spiro T. Agnew will take their oaths, and Nixon will deliver his inaugural address.

Seats For Some
Temporary stands erected in the capitol plaza will provide seats for about 18,000 invited guests.

Invitations and standee tickets are available only through members of Congress, officials of the incoming administration or heavyweight Republican politicians.

The second most coveted and hard-to-get invitations are to the inaugural ball, which will be held in six different sections—at five big hotels and in the Smithsonian Institution—on the night of Jan. 20. These will be formal affairs, with ladies in long ball gowns and gloves, gentlemen in tails or dinner jackets. (Nixon plans to go white tie, but word has been passed that black tie also is acceptable.)

About 30,000 people will be able to squeeze into the six sites of the inaugural ball. They'll pay $70 a couple for the privilege of getting a glimpse of the new president and Mrs. Nixon, who've promised to drop in on each of the six parties during the long evening.

Major Events
Three major inaugural events are open to the general public—in the sense that anyone can attend who's willing to shell out the price of a ticket. They are the inaugural gala, to be held in the National Guard armory on Saturday night, Jan. 18; the inaugural concert, constitution hall on Sunday evening, Jan. 19; and the inaugural parade, down Pennsylvania Avenue from the capitol to the White House, following the swearing-in ceremony on Monday, Jan. 20.

The gala will be a star-studded variety show, produced and emceed by television's Ed McMahon, and featuring such performers as Johnny Carson, Dinah Shore, Lionel Hampton, James Brown, Hugh O'Brien, Joel Grey and the entire company of the hit Broadway musical "George M."

Tickets for the gala range from a $100 top down to $10. Purchasers of the lower-priced seats will be well-advised to bring field glasses and transistor radios. Washington's National guard armory is a very big place, and not famous for good acoustics.

The Sunday night concert will feature the national symphony orchestra and the famous 350-voice Mormon Tabernacle Choir from Salt Lake City, Utah.

Investments Income Adds to Complexity

EDITOR'S NOTE: It is time to think about the income tax again. This is Chapter Six of a series reviewing the regulations, with emphasis on taking advantage of all exclusions and deductions legally due you.

By RAY DE CRANE
NEA Publications

The investor who supplies risk capital to the free enterprise system receives a couple of substantial breaks on his income tax return.

If he holds his investment for more than six months before selling at a profit, only one-half his capital gain is taxable.

During his holding period he frequently receives cash dividends on his stock shares. Not all the dividends are taxable.

This is another of the so-called "exclusions," or sums that are exempt from tax.

The law provides that the first $100 in dividends from qualifying corporations (generally all U.S. companies, with the exception of real estate investment trusts and farm-cooperatives) is taxfree. On joint returns the dividend exclusion applies to the first $100 received by each or $200 if the stock is held jointly.

There is a hitch here which trips many taxpayers. Jointly held stock automatically qualifies for the full $200 treatment. But in the case of securities owned individually by a husband and wife, one spouse may not pick up any part of the other's unused $100 exclusion.

Owners of the popular mutual fund shares should examine carefully their annual dividend statements from their mutual fund before making their entries on their tax returns.

Mutual funds frequently make three types of distributions during the course of a year, or credit these sums to your account and perhaps reinvest them for you.

The distributions may consist of cash dividends, capital gain dividends and nontaxable distributions.

The sum total is first reported in the dividend section of your tax return. Then the capital gain dividends are first removed, because they will be taxable. The nontaxable distributions are removed since they represent a partial return of your own capital upon which you already have paid a tax. There remains, then, only the cash dividends.

This is the amount which is then subjected to the $100 exclusion.

The capital gain dividends will be entered later in Schedule D—If one is used to record capital gains and losses—where it is subject to the preferred capital gains tax—or, if there is no Schedule D with your return report it as miscellaneous income on Form 1040. When you do he latter enter it as one-half capital gain dividend, making sure you include as income only one half of the full amount received.

Subscribers to the "Cut Your Own Taxes" book who avail themselves of its computer service need not worry about the dividend exclusion. It will be calculated for them by the computer.

Harvesters Host Lubbock Coronado Tonight

By RON CROSS
Pampa, just bursting with desire and hustle, will try to start off the week that was on a winning note tonight when they host high-scoring Lubbock Coronado at 8 p.m. in Harvester gym in a District 4-4A basketball game. The junior varsities from the two schools get pre-game festivities started at 6:15 p.m. First half district play ends

Friday night and the Harvesters face two crucial games, first with the Mustangs, sporting a 68.6 point per district game scoring average and then Friday night in Borger against the Bulldogs, who are only one game out of first place. The Harvesters have lost only to Palo Duro, 55-53, and Tascosa, 48-46, in district competition and have surprised everybody with their 5-2 league mark and 10-5 season record. Coronado is much better than its 4-3 district reading and 13-9 season mark and are looking forward to an upset over Pampa tonight. The Mustangs clipped Monterey, 52-49, then lost a 70-66 thriller to Amarillo but came back to slug Caprock, 75-57. Tascosa then downed the Mustangs, 71-66 and Coronado next rolled off two straight victories, 79-53 over Lubbock and 79-52 over Palo Duro before losing to Borger 77-65 Friday night. Although they've scored a lot the Mustangs have also given up quite a few points, 429 to be exact, an average of 61.1 per contest. They have one of the league's top scorers in 6-4 Tom Malone who averaged 9.7 points for them last season and sports a 17.6 average this season. Malone is the only returning starter from a season ago but Coronado does have three other boys back that lettered last year. There's 6-0 senior David Marcell, who scored at a 7.5 pace last season, 6-0 senior Gary Voyles, 3.0 last season and 6-3 Louis Morris, also a senior,

3.0 last season. Malone, Marcell and Morris are all averaging in double figures. The two clubs split last season and Coronado will come to town with a one game winning streak over Pampa, having won the last game, 57-35 after Pampa took the opener, 71-56. Coronado finished 14-16 last season and 8-10 in district play. While Pampa and Coronado are battling it out tonight two other big battles are on tap with Monerey (5-2) hosting Tascosa (7-0) and Borger (6-1) playing host to Palo Duro (3-4) in games where a win by the underdogs could change a lot of things. Caprock plays at Amarillo and Lubbock hosts Plainview in the other two games. Besides the second best defense in the league Pampa can also boast of the district's leading scorer in 6-1 senior Jim Hollis. Hollis has a 21.2 league scoring average despite being held to 10 points last week. Billy Thomas and Jim Gallman have come up with some double figure scoring and Thomas is now just a step away from the double figure average in district play with a 9.5 average while Johnny Epperson is next at 8.1.

Gilbert Wins Tips Award

HOUSTON (UPI) — Chris Gilbert, the all-American halfback from the University of Texas, was named Monday as the winner of the first annual Kern Tips Memorial Trophy. The award, honoring the late Kern Tips who broadcast Southwest Conference football for over 30 years, will be presented to Gilbert by the board of directors of Humble Oil & Refining Company at a private banquet Jan. 29 in the Houston Club. Gilbert nosed out Texas A&M's Edd Hargett by only one point in the balloting by 14 football sportscasters of Southwest Conference games, sports information directors at SWC schools, SWC officials and leading Texas and Arkansas sports editors. Based on an 8 to 1 selective point system, Gilbert received 32½ points and Hargett rallied 32½ points. The trophy, made of Steuben glass, recognizes the outstanding Southwest Conference football player who also excels academically, displays good sportsmanship, and is of high moral character—traits beyond athletic prowess that Kern Tips so admired in young men, an Humble official said. In Gilbert's three years of varsity football at Texas, the 180-pound halfback became the only man in NCAA history to gain 1,000 yards in three consecutive seasons. He finished third in the all-time NCAA career rushing standings, with 3,231 yards, second only to Art Luppino, who did it in four years at Arizona, and Eugene Morris of West Texas State. While Gilbert established records on the football field, he also made waves as a student and a citizen. Gilbert is a member of the Texas Cowboys, a service organization concerned with children stricken with cerebral palsy and other crippling diseases. He has appeared with the poster girl for the March of Dimes. Gilbert plans to go into finance and real estate after graduation, but has indicated he would like to take a fling at pro football.

Cats Run Mark To 10-2, Jays Lose

By United Press International
Kentucky now has a 10-2 record this season but the Wildcats are currently more concerned about their record in 1903. Kentucky boosted its mark to 4-0 in the Southeastern Conference and 10-2 overall Monday night with an 88-68 triumph over Georgia. But the Wildcats, attempting to become the first college team to win 1,000 games, were more concerned about their "discovery" of victories in 1903, 1904 and 1907 in yellowed newspaper clippings and old yearbooks. Kansas, which has won 997 games according to the NCAA, was upset for the second time in three nights and blew a chance to get closer to the coveted goal. The ninth-ranked Jayhawks were stunned by Iowa State 78-72 in two overtimes. Kentucky claims it "discovered" three more victories in the last week by painstakingly searching through old newspapers and yearbooks. The Wildcats also claim that the NCAA already recognizes 997 Kentucky wins. The Wildcats figure if these three other games are recognized, they're at the 1,000 mark. They plan to ask the NCAA for recognition of the "victories."

However, the last word from the NCAA was that they recognized only 993 Kentucky wins including Monday night's triumph. The NCAA will now have to rule on the "discovery" of the three new victories by the Wildcats and decide whether they will be recognized. The Wildcats claim that old newspaper clippings show they beat the Lexington YMCA 11-10 on Feb. 18, 1903 and Kentucky University (now Transylvania) 16-14 on Feb. 15, 1907. The Wildcats say an old yearbook showed they beat Georgetown 20-0 on Feb. 6, 1904.

Steers Horn Arkansas To Take Over Third

By United Press International
Kurt Papp shot and rebounded the Texas Longhorns into a tie for third place in the early Southwest Conference standings Monday night as Texas dumped Arkansas 67-59.

And in Beaumont, Tex., it took the amazing Lamar Tech Cardinals a single overtime period to fight off a 12-point deficit, but they did it and beat the University of Houston 71-65. The win ran Lamar's win total this season to 13 straight against no defeats and equalled a school record.

Papp had 21 points and 11 rebounds to lead the Texas team, which jumped into a quick 4-0 lead and never trailed. James Eldridge hit 25 for the Razorbacks. Earl Dow scored 23 points to lead the Lamar Tech team and Jim Nicholson added 19 points. The victory was the first win over the University of Houston in 11 tries. The Cardinals trailed 54-44 with nine minutes to play but tied the game 61-61 and stalled for nearly two minutes before missing a last second shot. Theodis Lee hit 23 points for Houston, now 10-6 on the season and facing tough UCLA this Saturday.

Santa Clara Rated No. 3

NEW YORK (UPI)—Santa Clara may lack the polish and finesse of most major college basketball powers but there's nothing wrong with the way the muscular Broncos continue to win and set up a possible rematch with top-ranked UCLA. The Broncos, who want it known there's more than one basketball power on the West Coast, remained one of the three major schools with perfect records by pushing their season mark to 14-0 last weekend. Coach Dick Garibaldi's team opened West Coast Athletic Conference play with victories over St. Mary's and Pacific and the pair of triumphs enabled the Broncos to retain the No. 3 position in the weekly United Press International ratings. UCLA, also opening league play with a pair of easy wins, was acclaimed the nation's No.

1 team for the sixth successive week. As in the previous balloting Coach John Wooden's Bruins were the unanimous choice for the top spot. They received every first place vote from the 35-member UPI Coaches Rating Board and wound up with 350 points based on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 breakdown. The first five positions in the ratings remained the same as a week ago with North Carolina once again the runnerup. Davidson retained the No. 4 spot and Illinois held No. 5 despite an upset loss to Purdue. Kentucky advanced one step to sixth, replacing Kansas. The Jayhawks, a loser to Missouri, dropped to ninth. New Mexico State, also unbeaten in 14 starts this season, climbed to seventh while St. John's of New York held eighth. Rounding out the top 10 were Kansas and Villanova.

Santa Clara kicked off its league campaign by trouncing St. Mary's 70-49 and Pacific 67-56. The pair of victories established the Broncos as solid favorites to repeat as West Coast Athletic Conference champions. A repeat title would give the Broncos another possible crack at UCLA providing both teams get to the NCAA Far West regional playoffs. Only a major collapse would prevent the two teams from getting into the tournament. UCLA beat Santa Clara 87-66 last year in the regional finals at Albuquerque, N.M. UCLA ran its win streak to 27 games the past weekend as the Bruins trounced Oregon 93-64 and Oregon State 83-64. The Bruins haven't lost since Houston upset them 71-69 a year ago in the Astrodome.

Hayes, Robertson Slated For NBA All-Star Action

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The potent backcourt combination of Oscar Robertson and Earl Monroe makes the East a solid favorite to continue its dominance of the National Basketball Association All-Star game at the Baltimore Civic Center tonight. Robertson of Cincinnati is an eight-time all-star, twice voted most valuable player in the game, and only once on the losing side in the classic. Monroe will be playing in his first All-Star game. Together, they give the East two high scoring guards the West cannot match. The East holds a 12-6 edge in the series and last year romped 144-124. The odds on a repeat victory rose sharply this week when Jerry West of Los Angeles, the West's best guard, was removed from the game because of a pulled leg muscle. Lining up with Monroe and Robertson for the East will be Bill Russell, Boston player-coach, at center, and John Havlicek of Boston and Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati at forwards. Elvin Hayes, the brilliant rookie whose 30-point scoring a cellar dweller to a playoff contender, taps off against Russell for the West. Hayes flanked by teammate Don Kojis and Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles at forwards, and backed by guards Len Wilkens of Seattle and Jerry Sloan of Chicago. Gene Shue of Baltimore, coach of the East, acknowledged he thought the East would win. But mindful of a recent upset taken hard in Baltimore, he cracked: "Just don't favor of by 18 points." Atlanta Hawk coach Richie Guerin, leading the West, admitted: "The East does have more firepower in backcourt than we do with Monroe and Robertson starting for them. The key to the game will be whether we can control their guards." Both coaches said they would do their best to see that all the players got into the game. Both agreed that the All-Star coaches should not have—in Guerin's phrase—"a win at any costs philosophy."

New Yorkers Welcome Home Cinderellas

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York SuperJets arrived home to a heroes welcome from title-starved New Yorkers who last celebrated a champion when the Yankees won the 1962 World Series. A crowd of 500 Jets worshippers lined the visitor's entrance at John F. Kennedy International Airport Monday to greet the chartered flight carrying members of the "Cinderella" team that beat the Baltimore Colts 16-7 in Sunday's Super Bowl classic. Cries of "We want Joe" were soon diminished when it was learned the flamboyant Joe Namath did not accompany the team home. He and 10 other Jets players went directly to Jacksonville, Fla., where they will play in the American Football League all-star game Saturday.

Weeb Ewbank, the portly 61-year-old coach of the amazing Jets, led a smiling band of 13 players and several team coaches off the plane when it rolled to a stop shortly after 1 p.m. CST. Ewbank is the only coach to mastermind championship teams in both the American and National Football Leagues and then go on to a Super Bowl victory.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper
EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE.
 The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license, nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself. No more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Agonizing Reappraisal

The race of man is suffering an agonizing reappraisal of the role of authority in human affairs, and here in the United States the pain is sharp and the dilemma unique.

We are a nation founded in bloody revolution against constituted authority; we are, by tradition, against the "fuzz," we are by training resentful of authority. We have maintained the attitude that authority is the servant not the master and we have built into our civil structure complicated and often controversial "checks and balances" created to draw a perimeter around the area of government.

And now, quite suddenly, comes the reappraisal.

Is there anything worse than authority? Perhaps the absolute lack of it? Is there anything worse than oppression of the minority? Perhaps oppression of the majority? Is there anything worse than a police state? Perhaps the absence of the police. Is there anything worse than repression? Perhaps riot? Is there anything worse than a giggling and harassing enforcement of petty ordinances? Perhaps arson and rape and insurrection?

These are the terrible alternatives which appear to many Americans today. Must the answer to violence consist of a police state?

In Czechoslovakia, the violence was for a lessening of authority. The brave young men of Czechoslovakia rioted for freedom—a pale and unappealing variety of freedom, to be sure, but something more than the Soviets are prepared to permit.

In our own country, there are no riots for freedom, only for a change in the direction of authority. The violent new left in the United States is not demanding to be freed from demonstrable oppression but to have the machinery and the power of authority twisted, contorted and employed to give them unearned pleasures. They are not demanding, as they say, equal opportunity; they demand special consideration simply because they are there, because they are of a certain race, persuasion, creed, color or ethnic origin.

It's this disparity between the real and the apparent goals of the new violence that has set so many Americans into the dangerous habit of yearning for still more government. To ask for new and additional government is akin to burning the house to get rid of the rats.

There is nothing more fearful, as George Washington pointed out, than government grown too big and too powerful.

The revolt against authority is a problem to the international Roman Catholic Church. But the church is a voluntary association, and it might be pointed out that those disenchanted with basic policy of any church are free to go, and even to form their own church, as did the German monk.

Still, there is the seething unrest which, seemingly, can't be denied, both in civil and church affairs. In Romans we read that the powers that be are ordained (permitted) of God. Could this mean the governments of Nazi Germany and Stalin Russia were godly? What, in precise and unequivocal terms, is the role of obedience in the welfare of the world?

Students want to run the schools they attend; laymen want to instruct the clergy; the state undertakes to lay down ground rules for every area of human conduct. Even reasonable rules are suspect; there is contempt, not necessarily for law but, too often, for the idea of any sort of contract among men to define the conditions of their relationship.

It is frightening to contemplate the easiest refuge from our present fear and unrest—more and greater government, more and sterner rules, more and "expedited" dumhead justice.

We must hope the American people will not seek this alternative. A corrupt solution to a foul disease will not improve our condition.

Has the time now come when men, with the threats of systematized universal slavery and nuclear destruction hanging over their heads, must take themselves individually in hand and apply the principle of self-government in its only meaningful sense. Has the thousands years old myth, and fallacy, of government via external force finally caught up with us?

Words to Critics of Free Press

It was Will Rogers who said, "All I know is what I read in the papers."

The sharpwitted humorists words can be interpreted a couple of different ways, but they express something that is still true: Except for those events in which we are direct participants, about all we know of what's happening in the world is what we read or hear or see by virtue of the varied media that come under the head of journalism.

Rogers would agree that a healthy cynicism should be part of every reader's or listener's or viewer's equipment, especially in this day when we are bombarded from all sides not only by genuine news but by that which poses as news but which is really manufactured to plead special interests or sell products.

He would also agree, however, that things are in bad shape when particularized skepticism begins to be replaced by generalized disbelief on the part of the news-hungry public.

We seem to be in such a period today. The International Press Institute reports that distrust of news media is growing in the United States and constitutes more of a challenge than the technical and economic problems that beset the industry.

The Institute, an organization of newspaper editors from 57 countries, notes as a "disquieting development" the feeling that news media incite the violence they report, despite lack of proof of any direct connection between riots and other disorders and the reporting of them.

The feeling is not limited to newspapers by any means. Reuven Frank, head of NBC News, observed recently that "a new love-hate relationship has suddenly burst forth between television and its basic audience." People are watching more and liking it less—the riots during the Democratic convention in Chicago, for example—and are transferring their revulsion at events to the medium that reports them.

CBS President Frank Stanton sees the fundamental freedom of the press in "grave danger" from increasing instances of government intervention, implied or actual. He cites the adverse reactions of public officials to coverage of the 1967 ghetto riots. Secretary of Agriculture Freeman's threats of tighter regulation after a CBS broadcast on "Hunger in America" and numerous ultimatums and investigations generated by news coverage of the Chicago convention.

The nation has special commissions coming out of its ears. But it might be a good thing to appoint one more, composed of distinguished Americans outside the field of journalism, to take a searching look at the news media, if only to discover that it still performs a useful function.

Before giving up on the Fourth Estate, we might ask ourselves, how many courthouses and city hall scandals are

Hon. Congressman Bob Price: Thank you for the great work you are doing. Please use your great power and influence to stop urban renewal. Also, do all in your power to keep our police free and independent of Federal control.

Please defeat Bill 90-351. Our understanding of the "Omnibus Police Control Act of 1968" is that in reality it is a wolf in sheep's clothing. This statute is a cleverly disguised instrument for federalization of law enforcement. There is a $400,000,000 carrot for fiscal years 1968, 1969, 1970 which is to be rationed out to the states that apply for it. This money, removed from the states, (the people supply all of the money) run-through federal banks, and returned to the states, with strings attached. Let the states raise their own revenue for police purposes!

What are the Crime Prevention Councils? The powers, qualifications, and identities of these mysterious councils are not spelled out; it does say that they shall be knowledgeable in organized crime. This could mean practically anyone including a Capone, could become councilman. Why is a council needed at all? EACH state has a governor, and an attorney general who are charged with oversight of state law enforcement matters: Why bypass them? Who ordered the police not to shoot in Washington, D.C. in April 1968, during Resurrection City episode?

The $400,000,000 carrot reminds one of the adage: "He who dances, pays the piper!"

The local police is our last line of defense; so that they will take pride in their work and if roving hoodlums are molesting your daughter or trying to break into your home at 2 o'clock in the morning... there will be a police to call!

The above seems to tie-in with urban renewal. Jo Hindman has written two books, the first, Terrible 1313 Revisited; and "Blame Metro When Urban Renewal Strikes, When Laws Oppress." The two may be obtained at about $1.75 each from the Caxton Printers, Ltd., Caldwell, Idaho, 83605. Miss Hindman states that Metro is spreading over the U.S.A. from Metro 1313 Chicago-New York Axis, which is located 1313 East 60th St. near the University of Chicago campus, and the policy making "parent body," the National Municipal League is 46 East 68th St. New York City, New York. So much money flowing from (Big Daddy) Washington, D.C. to the states tends to destroy state lines leaving big powerful centralized government to call the shots. Please keep the states strong.

From our information it seems Congress will want to order a searching look into Model Cities program. The multi-billion-dollar scheme has quickly degenerated with plans from the programs being implemented by Klansmen, black racists, ex-criminals, and other assorted types. It seems the whole Civil Rights War on Poverty is a gigantic mess.

Possibly we can do what is necessary on the local level, to keep law and order for ourselves with no strings attached from Washington, D.C. We object to the "Omnibus Police Control Act of 1968" in general because we fear federal control of law enforcement at the local level. We need less big government and more personal responsibility at the local level. The Soviet slave states have councils to run things from the top down. Please defeat "Omnibus Police Control Act of 1968".

Thank you.

A free and unfettered press which is the only kind worth having will inevitably offend some people all of the time and all of the people some of the time. When it ceases to do this, then will it indeed deserve the distrust and contempt of the public.

WASHINGTON—Senate confirmation problems are mounting for two of the top-level appointees of President-elect Richard M. Nixon.

Pending committee consideration, the final outcome is in doubt. Whatever the final verdict, however, one harvest of the controversies is sure to be a crop of headlines which the new President would like to avoid.

As reported here previously, Walter J. Hickel, designated by Nixon to be secretary of the interior, is under heavy critical fire. His public comments—especially his skepticism about "conservation for conservation's sake"—have alarmed some senators.

The Alaska governor's situation is not improving. His problems may well be getting more complex.

In more serious jeopardy, however, is the new President's selection of David Packard, West Coast industrialist and civic leader, to be undersecretary of defense. While Hickel's troubles stem from what he says, Packard's arise because of what he is.

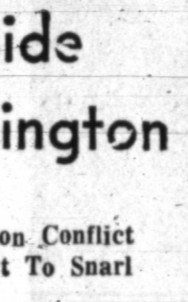

Packard is the much admired electronics executive who is willing to give up an annual income of nearly $1 million to take the Pentagon's number two job at $300,000 a year. He is a founder, a major stockholder, and the chief executive officer of Hewlett-Packard Company, a firm which he started in a garage and which now sells nearly $300 million worth of electronic-measuring equipment each year, about a third of it to the government and its contractors.

Since Charles E. Wilson served the Eisenhower Administration as secretary of defense, the Senate armed Services Committee has required that top Pentagon aides have no interest in companies that do business with the Pentagon. Many officials, from Wilson of General Motors through Robert S. McNamara of Ford, have met the committee's standard, at some personal sacrifice.

Some top-ranking senators who admire Packard's record and his willingness to serve are privately asking whether he can ever meet the committee standard without doing unacceptable damage to his own financial interests.

After resigning as his company's top executive, Packard proposes to sell all stocks owned by him and his wife in corporations which do defense business, except for Hewlett-Packard Company. That stock, some 3.6 million shares of it worth about $300 million, would be put into a short-term trust which would pay all dividends—and any increase in the stock's value—to charitable and educational organizations.

"The trustees," said Packard in a statement of his own, "will be individuals selected by myself from the present membership of the board of directors of Hewlett-Packard Company, and will serve without compensation."

By the trusteeship Packard proposes to separate himself from his company for at least two years, or for the duration of his stay in government.

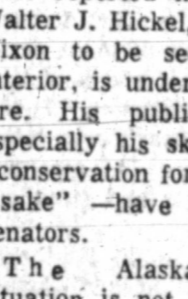

Top-ranking members of the Armed Services Committee, which will consider Packard's appointment, have been studying the Packard plan for a couple of weeks and researching the precedents. Their question is whether the trust would actually remove Packard from his company, which sold $34 million worth of electronics equipment to the Pentagon last year and another $60 million worth to prime government contractors.

Admitting that the proposal is only prudent, from Packard's point of view, some Senate experts question whether the plan actually takes Packard out of company operations. They wonder whether Packard could retain control of Hewlett-Packard through these trustees whom he would select from the company's present board.

Rep. Melvin Laird, R-Wis., who will be Packard's boss at the Pentagon, believes there is a precedent for the plan in a trust arrangement approved when former Texas Gov. Price Daniel was named director of the Office of Emergency Planning. Senate experts note, however, that Daniel had only a small interest in an oil property which might have been enhanced by policies (on oil imports) for which Daniel made recommendations.

Packard would be bossing the Pentagon which would be doing business, directly and indirectly, with his company. Moreover, Laird is well aware that Daniel, a former senator, got the benefit of all doubts from his former colleagues. Packard may not be so lucky.

HICKEL TOO?—As if he didn't have enough problems, it appears that Hickel's appointment may raise some conflict-of-interest questions too. The Senate Interior Committee has been advised that he has interests in a gas distribution firm—and perhaps some other interests—which would come

THE DOCTOR SAYS
 By DR. W. G. BRANSTADT

Train Child Early In Good Eating Habits

A mother writes that her daughter, 2, will not eat any kind of vegetable or fruit. This is a common problem and requires an abundance of calm patience on the part of the mother. It is essential that mealtime be a pleasant time for the child but not a time for her to play with her food.

Good eating habits should be developed early in life and to this end there should be no distractions at mealtime. Until a child is 3 1/2 to 4, it is wise to feed her in her own room or in the kitchen without the rest of the family hanging about. At each meal the mother should offer a small portion of vegetable or fruit but not insist that the child eat it or even try it. If the mother eats some of it herself and shows that she enjoys it, the child will in time want to follow her example. Not more than one new dish should be introduced at any one meal.

Doctors once recommended withholding a dessert or favorite food until a child cleaned up the other foods that were good for her, but this practice often has the disadvantage of increasing the child's dislike for the other foods. If the child gets hungry between meals she should be offered a piece of fruit. If there is some doubt whether the child is getting enough vitamins she should get a multivitamin pill before breakfast until better eating habits are established.

Another reader writes that the 13-year-old son of a friend practically lives on orange juice which he takes from a bottle. The pediatrician says the orange juice won't hurt him. By the age of 3, the mother should have trained this boy to use a cup. Since she hasn't, now is a good time to begin—simply by getting rid of all the bottles. The child may squawk at first but the mother must let him know, gently but firmly, that she is the boss.

Giving orange juice several times a day will naturally spoil this boy's appetite for other foods. So the mother should cut the juice to one small portion a day and quietly offer him other foods, which he will eat if he is hungry and will enjoy when he gets used to them.

Such conflict of interest difficulty would give Senate champions of conservation an issue much more likely to result in Hickel's rejection by the Senate. However, Hickel, in a private meeting with Interior Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., last week, said he would sell any stock or interest which the committee believed it would be improper for him to retain.

Committee hearings on Hickel's nomination have been scheduled by Jackson to begin tomorrow.

Pull Up A Chair

By JOHN KEASLER

I may have found it—the resolution that wraps up all the other good vows for 1968.

It's simply this: Never let my family know when I'm leaving the house on an errand.

This will give me more than enough time to do all the things constructive I have planned—writing the novels, getting the exercise, catching up on my reading, all of it.

After 19 years of marriage, I think I've worked it out finally. The fact is husbands never get to go anywhere by a direct route and spend all their lives on a revolving tangent.

Any example will do.

"I think I will drive down and get a haircut," I said to Margery, the last time I left the house, or attempted to leave.

However, I didn't actually stir. This is how you tell a husband experienced in tangential defeat. He knows he will first be subjected to the "before you go" treatment. Sure enough.

"Before you go," said Margery, on cue. "Would you put the screw back on the medicine chest door?"

This, quite logically, left me putting up a clothesline in the back yard and listening to my hair grow. Once she saw the screwdriver, she was reminded.

I am currently compiling a list of great "before you goes" down through history, i.e.: Napoleon: "Well, I think I'll go march on Russia." Josephine: "Before you go, will you oil the palace hinge?" Hannibal: "Well, I'm not going to get these elephants across the Alps just sitting here. I'm leaving, kiddo." Mrs. Hannibal: "Before you go will you please do something about the bathtub drain?" And so on...

The tangents get complicated past belief.

"I'll have to run over to the hardware store and get a screw for the medicine chest."

"While you're at the shopping center will you pick up my red dress at the cleaners? And pick up some dog food."

The kids overheard this and, of course, I ended up taking a bike to the repair shop. This leaves you with a feeling of an unfulfilled life combined with overtones of impending disaster which culminate in trying to pay the gas bill with a can of dog food at the cleaners.

At the five-and-dime—I was in there under the vague notion it was where I exchanged the wrong brand of starch I ended up getting—I ran into a friend, a husband who had made the mistake of mentioning he was going down to the drugstore to get a new magazine.

Pausing only to drop his laundry off on my front porch, we hastened to the neighborhood bistro.

"Bottoms up," he said. We clicked glasses.

"Hey—Charley Roberts," said the bartender to my friend. "Are you here? Your wife said pick up a pattern from Anna Marchison..."

I went outside and stared at the setting sun.

"Where's the pattern?" asked Margery, when I arrived home. "Say, that's a pretty sloppy haircut!"

That was when my resolution jelled!

If I never told her where I was going, my life would be my own! Book after book would pour from me!

"I'm going right up to my study," I said, excitedly, "and finish that book I've..."

"On your way would you move some of that junk out of the driveway? I can hardly back the car out."

Bartender, as long as you're going that way anyhow, would you put a head on this? And bring me some pretzels while you're up.

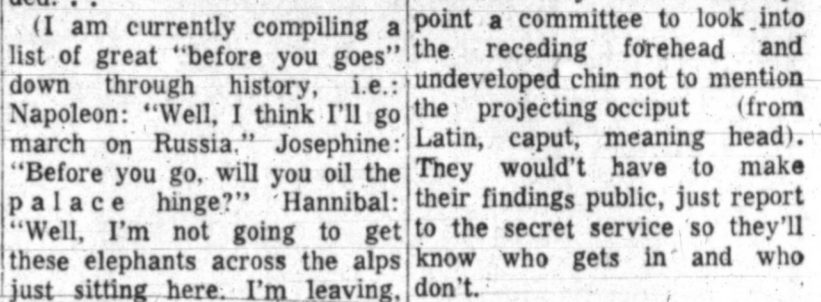

I see where that Agnew feller don't like the type casting they gave him. He says he is cast as a Neanderthal Man. I can see it alright. I guess it happened when Mr. Richmix couldn't find a vice-president and said, "I've got to dig one up someplace!"

But it is a terrible thought that he might have a Neanderthal Man for vice-pres. The old original, as I understand it, was long on head and short on arms. Agnew says he is going to correct this image, and we can all hope so—as it would be kind of discomforting to know there was one of them Neanderthals wandering around on the White House lawn.

Mebbe they had better appoint a committee to look into the receding forehead and undeveloped chin not to mention the projecting occiput (from Latin, caput, meaning head). They wouldn't have to make their findings public, just report to the secret service so they'll know who gets in and who don't.

While they are at it, they might as well examine a few other newcomers. There might be a whole slew of Paleolithic creeps who have come back to hunt us by sneaking into government offices.

Now would be a good time to get this straightened out. They could even start a new department and call it the Neanderthal Bureau of Investigation. They possibly would come up with some findings that would surprise everybody.

DR. W. G. BRANSTADT

WIT AND WHIMSY

A man from the city had occasion to take a hack in a small New Hampshire town. It took the pair of nags an hour to draw the battered cab to the station, and when they arrived the fellow found he had nothing smaller than a five-dollar bill. He handed this to the driver.

The withered old man looked at the bill and then wheezed, "Which horse do you want?"

The hold-up man shoved a note at the bank teller which read:

"I've got you covered—hand over all the dough in the cage."

The teller scribbled back: "Kindly go to the next window. I'm on my lunch hour."

Teacher was trying to explain some of the elements of science to her class.

Miss Lee (The teacher)—Sir Isaac Newton was sitting under a tree looking up into it when an apple fell on his head, and from that he discovered the law of gravity. Wasn't that wonderful?

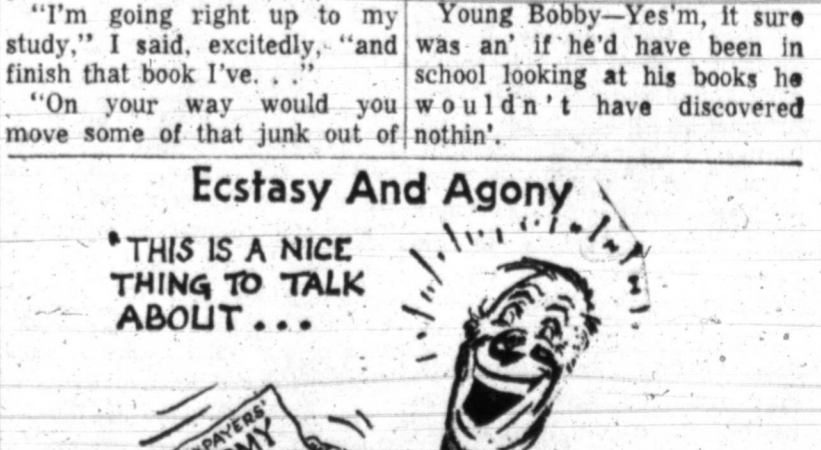

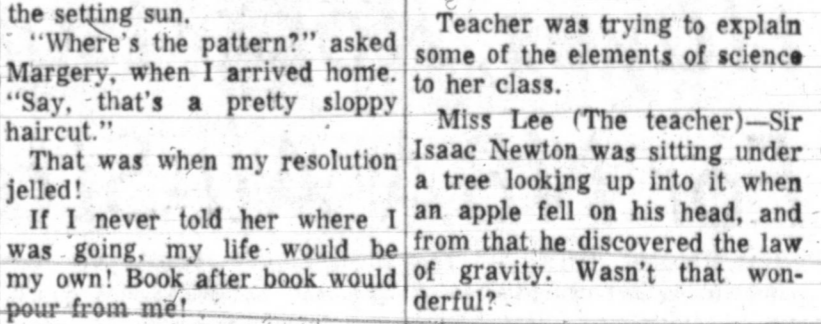

Young Bobby—Yes'm, it sure was an 'if he'd have been in school looking at his books he wouldn't have discovered nothin'.

Rampart College to Open 'Science of Acting Man'

SANTA ANA, Calif.—Rampart College, an independent and private educational institution, is opening its principal administrative offices in Orange County, Calif.

The college, originally organized in 1956 as a Colorado Corporation, will maintain offices and conference rooms in the First Western Bank Building, Fourth and Main Streets, Santa Ana. Also at this location will be the Rampart library.

Rampart College won national recognition as a result of its pioneer studies in the humanities and the social sciences. Its work is devoted exclusively to the science of acting man, with major emphasis upon free market economics, philosophy, ethics, history, and political theory.

From 1956 through 1966, Rampart College was located at Larkspur, Colo., in the Rampart Range of the Rocky Mountains. The Colorado campus was recently sold to the Mennoite Board of Missions and Charities, which plans to use the Larkspur campus as a school for emotionally disturbed boys.

Scheduled instruction at Rampart College will begin sometime this spring in Santa Ana, according to Robert LeFevre, founder and president of the institution. Actual dates of opening have yet to be announced.

LeFevre, a former newspaper editor, editorial writer, radio and TV commentator, established the college to "help fill the critical vacuum" in the educational establishment, both governmental and private.

According to LeFevre, in the twelve years of education and research in Colorado, studies there developed a composite view of man based on a scientific morality, which has practical application to the Americans on every hand.

"The educational establishment has tended to by-pass instruction in fundamental ethics and morals," LeFevre said.

In its new location in Orange County, Rampart will offer courses similar to the one and two-week sessions pioneered in Colorado. In addition, the college will inaugurate two-day seminars, each covering a specific facet of the general material of praxeology (the science of acting man).

LeFevre indicated that the home-study program of the college is to be expanded soon, and the basic comprehensive course, upon which the Rampart curriculum is based, will be continued.

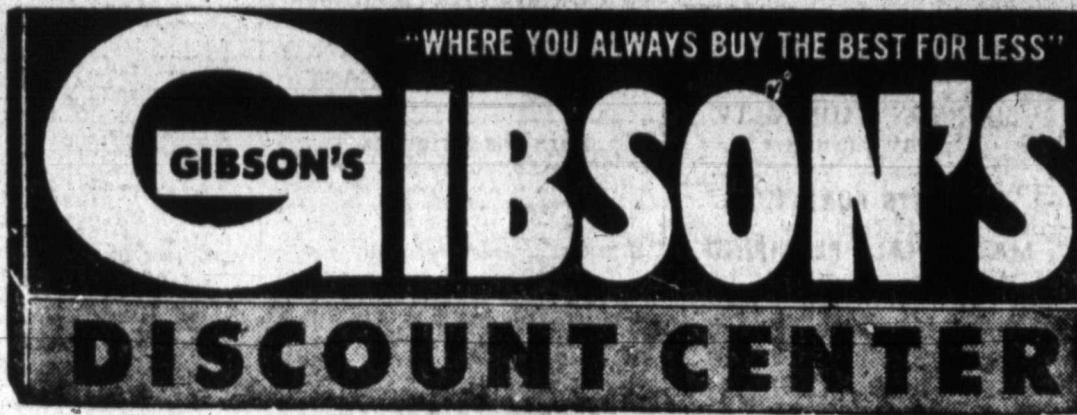

Offices of the college are being located on the sixth floor of the First Western Bank Building, Fourth and Main Streets in Santa Ana. The premises are presently being remodeled and an announcement will be forthcoming in a few weeks as to the actual date the college will open.

IT'S SMALL, but certainly prominently placed. Two children found the Place Vendome in downtown Paris a perfect spot to build a snowman.
