University Riff Grows

By United Press International
Sit-ins by seminarians and a sleepout by students today marked a series of university protests across the nation. An early morning narcotics raid at New York State University's Stony Brook campus touched off violence by other students. When narcotics detectives raided Stony Brook and arrested 14 students on charges of selling narcotics, 200 other students gathered around the police cars. As the cars rolled off, some of the students stoned them. There were no injuries, police said. The students touched off a series of small fires, mostly in rubbish, but one was reported in the school infirmary. About 250 police took up positions outside the campus to prevent more trouble. At Andover-Newton Theological Seminary at Newton, Mass., students held the Administration Building. At Union Theological Seminary in New York City, seminarians remained in control of a chapel. Secular protesters continued activities at St. Peter's College in New Jersey, Stanford University in California, and the University of Rhode Island. A court order Monday brought a peaceful end to a sit-in at Missouri's Lincoln University, but nearly 100 of the students slept outside the Jefferson City school's Student Union Building in support of the 35 demands made by the original protesters. Fifty seminarians Monday seized the Andover-Newton Administration Building to protest refusal of the board of trustees to consider demands of black students. Administrative personnel left the building and the sitters-in said they had not decided how long they would remain. But they said they "won't fight" if police are summoned. Fifty Union Theological Seminary students occupied the school's Administration Building in support of black leader James Forman's demand for $500 million reparations for wrongs done Negroes. They moved the occupation to a chapel when the president of the board of directors said he would call an open meeting to discuss the demands. About half the 2,000 day students at St. Peter's in Jersey City boycotted classes Monday demanding reinstatement of a professor and greater voice in school policy. Stanford students stayed away from classes and played "political games" in a protest organized by the militant April 3rd Movement. The group is protesting war-related research at the Stanford Research Institute. At the University of Rhode Island in Kingston, about 70 students picketed in support of demands for increased black enrollment, more black faculty members and institution of a black studies program. University officials have said they were among the first to emphasize black studies, but said they have problems recruiting blacks because few are graduated from the state's high schools.

RFK's Coroner Fights His Murky Dismissal

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—While Sen. Robert F. Kennedy fought vainly for his life, Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi reportedly told his associates: "I hope he dies," and danced in his office in gleeful anticipation of performing the autopsy. At Noguchi's dismissal hearing Monday before the Civil Service Commission, Deputy County Council Martin Weekes quoted the Japanese-born pathologist as saying: "I am going to be famous. I hope he dies. Because if he dies, then my international reputation will be established." Noguchi did perform the autopsy and he later testified at the trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan. But he was fired March 18 under some of the strangest charges ever lodged against a public official. The reports were detailed in a 10-page letter prepared by administrative officer Lindon S. Hollinger and implied Noguchi was suffering from neurotic fantasies and needed psychiatric treatment. Noguchi charged his firing was politically inspired and the accusations about his behavior and statements were "untrue, distorted or sometimes said in jest and blown out of all proportions." His attorney Godfrey Isaac, vowed to fight the dismissal to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary. Weekes' statement Monday alleged Noguchi hoped for air disasters so glory would be brought to the office of county chief coroner-medical examiner. During Noguchi's term in office, just over a year, he handled autopsies on two major airline crashes and the two worst helicopter crashes in the history of U.S.

are having trouble drafting a spending bill for fiscal 1970 that would stay within available revenue, and might have to ask for "a small tax bill." By "small," he said he meant $15-$20 million. That, together with Gov. Preston Smith's opposition, could spell defeat for Barnes' annual budgeting idea. Speaker Gus F. "The entire key to this program is to solve this problem without a tax bill," Mutscher said Monday when told of Barnes' comments about a "small" tax bill. "If we fail in this effort then we've probably failed in showing some of the advantages of a one-year bill," he said. Barnes had argued that no new taxes would be necessary this session if the Legislature put off writing a budget for fiscal 1971 until sometime next year. However, he said Monday, "I've said all along there might have to be a small tax bill." Smith opposes one-year budgeting whether or not it new taxes this year. He says the spirit of the state constitution requires biennial financing. He has not said whether he would veto a one-year budget, but is expected to make a statement on that subject Wednesday. ## Barnes' One-Year Budget Hits 1970 Spending Snag

AUSTIN (UPI)—Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes' proposal to avoid new taxes this session by adopting a one-year budget has run into a problem: it may require a bill this year after all. Barnes says budget writers are having trouble drafting a spending bill for fiscal 1970 that would stay within available revenue, and might have to ask for "a small tax bill." By "small," he said he meant $15-$20 million. That, together with Gov. Preston Smith's opposition, could spell defeat for Barnes' annual budgeting idea. Speaker Gus F. state budget spent Monday talking behind closed doors about salaries of state officials—a subject that would not be greatly affected by the outcome of the one-year vs. two-year debate. Rep. W. S. Healy, D-Paducah, chairman of the conference committee, said the conferees have not decided the question of annual or biennial budgeting. "I don't know what's been agreed on at the upper echelons," he added. In legislative action Monday: —The House unanimously approved a bill creating a new University of Texas Dental School in San Antonio. ## Texans Will Recall Pappy's Campaign Style

DALLAS (UPI)—Folks gathered from all over town and the surrounding country when the big white bus carrying W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel came into town. Today, another gathering was to honor Pappy, the flour salesman turned politician who swept Texas with unorthodox campaigns that gave him the governor's mansion from Jan. 17, 1939, to Aug. 4, 1941, and a term as Texas' junior senator after that. O'Daniel 79, was to be buried after services at 4 p.m. at the Sparkmann-Hillcrest funeral home in Dallas. He died Sunday in Baylor Hospital from undisclosed causes after a three-week hospital stay.

Loan Losses Cause Dodson Bank to Close

DODSON, Tex. (UPI)—The First State Bank of Dodson, Tex., chartered in 1910 and called "one of the finest small town banks in the Panhandle," was closed Monday by the State Banking Commission. "The reason for the closing was that losses in loans far exceeded the capital funds of the bank," said Robert E. Stewart, deputy state banking commissioner. Stewart announced the closing with a notice posted on the door of the bank's modern brick and stone building. State banking commissioner J. M. Falkner said a routine check last week uncovered financial difficulties but stockholders were given until Monday to try to raise enough money to get the bank out of the red. Loans, Losses $380,000 Falkner said the bank's loans and losses totaled "about $380,000" compared with capital, surplus and other holdings of $120,000. It was the second bank in Texas to close within a month. The Citizens State Bank of Alvarado, Tex., failed April 14 with a loss of $512,397. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) filed a civil suit April 24 in the Alvarado bank case, accusing the president of the bank of being "liable" to the bank because of "dishonest, fraudulent and criminal acts." The federal suit said Jack Park, 63, who also was mayor of Alvarado, and "others" converted more than half the $512,397 to their own use. A new bank opened this month. Stewart said there was no malfeasance announced in connection with the closing of the Dodson bank. "They (the bank's stockholders) were not able to rehabilitate the bank or obtain new capital for it," he said.

Council Is Asked To Put It Up To Voters

By TEX DEWESEE
A citizens finance committee today recommended to the city that an election be called to permit Pampa voters to approve or reject a one-cent city sales tax. The five-man committee report, submitted by Aubrey Steele, chairman, called for the sales tax method of providing additional revenue for the operation of city government "rather than follow a course of raising taxes, increasing utility rates or from other sources." The committee was requested last January to study various methods of increasing city revenue and recommend actions it deemed needed to meet projected fiscal needs to operate the city without curtailing any public services. Appointment of the committee was authorized by the City Commission and former Mayor Jim Nation Jr. named Steele, Floyd Imel, A. A. Schuneman, Crawford Atkinson and E. L. Green Jr. to study Pampa's fiscal condition and submit recommendations for a solution to the city's money problems. The committee, Steele stated, held many study sessions and today's report to the commission summed up its conclusions as to what steps should be taken. "We found the city in excellent financial condition, but also found it will be facing some problems in the future," Steele told the commission. "There are growing costs in city operation just the same as there are growing costs in business operations." Text of the Citizens Finance Committee report and recommendations to the City Commission will be found on Page 3 of today's Pampa News. If it decides to go the sales tax route, the commission probably will call an election on the issue for early in September. The sales tax cannot become operative unless approved by the voters. The commission took no action on the sales tax recommendation today. Mayor Milo Carlson said the council members would give thorough study to the report and announce its decision on the committee's recommendations at the next regular council meeting on May 27. The report set forth that the committee considered the fact that during the past 11 years the city operating fund has relied on an average $217,000 yearly transfer of money from the water and sewer revenue (See COUNCIL, Page 3)

City Eyes Chance To Cut Costs of Pipe Installation

City commissioners today voted to consider a new system of concrete pipe installation when asking bids on the city's share of storm sewer construction along the U.S. Hwy 60 improvement through Pampa. The action today was based on expected approval of the State Highway Department and was taken after it was explained there could be a possible savings of 30 per cent on what it would cost the city to install the nearly two miles of sewer from the intersection of U.S. 60 and Hobart St. to the east city limits at Tignor St. The estimated cost of the project to the city originally was set at $500,000, according to City Engineer Mac Wofford. A 30 per cent savings could cut that cost to an estimated $350,000. Action of the city commission came today after a report with illustrated slides showing the machine in operation at Lubbock. Mayor Milo Carlson, City Manager Charles Hill and Wofford flew to Lubbock yesterday where they inspected work being done by the new concrete pipe machine and saw results of the installation. All three officials were high in their praise of the equipment and its product. The commission disposed of a number of routine matters today. These included: Awarding a contract to Jake Diehl in the amount of $36,945 (See CITY, Page 3)

Multi-Million Dollar Bridge In Jeopardy

QUINCY, Ill. (UPI)—A barge which had been carrying 847,000 gallons of gasoline burned against a railroad bridge in the Mississippi River today. Officials hoped it would not explode and destroy the $10 million bridge. Four men were missing—presumed dead—and dragging operations were to begin today eight miles upstream at La Grange, Mo., from where two barges had floated after a pumping barge exploded while they were being unloaded.

Nixon Decides 19-Year-Olds First In Draft

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon has decided to ask Congress to revise the draft law to provide for induction of 19-year-olds first. House Leader Republican Gerald R. Ford said today. Ford said reform of the Selected Service Act would be contained in a message by the President to Congress today. Ford made the disclosure following the weekly breakfast meeting of GOP congressional leaders with Nixon. Ford said the revisions would "remove some uncertainties that hang over the heads" of men in the draft-age bracket—19 to 26.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Doctors, once a very hot entry on network television, will be making a return to the home screen next season in a big way.
Or, as he French say, the more things change, the more they are the same.
The video territory once staked out by the likes of "Ben Casey" and "Dr. Kildare" will be claimed in the fall by three new shows—one on each major commercial network.
On CBS-TV, viewers will find an hour series which will be titled either "Medical Center" or "UMC" (University Medical Center).
On ABC-TV, the freshman show will be called "Marcus Welby, M.D." and will star Robert Young as an oldtime doctor with a brash young assistant. This program is also an hour in length.
Three in One NBC-TV, meanwhile, has a weekly hour series entitled "The Bold Ones," which actually will be three alternating shows—one of them focusing on persons involved with "the new medicine."
It is very clear that the recent real dramas concerning transplants have helped give a new life to the glamor of the medical profession, and will probably be used plentifully on television come fall.
Derivations of other past successful series can be found on the new fall video schedules. With the demise of "Peyton Place," for instance, ABC-TV has come up with "The Survivors," and NBC-TV with "Bracken's World," both hour programs.
"The Survivors," which will star Lana Turner and George

Hamilton, is already regarded as a sort of jet-set "Peyton Place."
And—"Bracken's World," about the behind-the-scenes activities in a movie studio, is expected to have much of the same serial flavor. If it has been compared already to "Peyton Place," it has also been likened to other sources of fiction, with one wag titling it "Valley of the Starlets."
Teachers Lionized
Teachers, once lionized in the old "Mr. Novak" series, will be represented on the home screen again—but this time both shows about them will star Negroes:

C-C Membership Drive Off to a Lively Start

There were no fat ladies, sword swallows or snake charmers, but otherwise the circus atmosphere was complete at Monday's kickoff luncheon for Chamber of Commerce campaign workers.
A snakily-strutting clown, a mustachioed ringmaster with a corps of cane-swinging assistants, a circus-day lunch and the swingiest band in Texas "made" the noonday event for those who attended. The band director was Harris Brinson of Pampa High School.
The guests were mainly campaign workers who heard a rousing speech from G. B. Cree on details of conducting the campaign. Cree is Chamber president.

"Pink, yellow and white cards count individually 10, 15 and 20 points for each salesman and the largest individual achiever is to be feted at a country weekend at the Cree ranch home.
Second prize is a trip for two to Amarillo to see an ice hockey game. The third place winner will receive tickets to a football game at West Texas State University.
Cree noted in his talk the advancement made in the past year in which the Chamber of Commerce had cooperated. The proposed vocational-technical school was mentioned specifically.

"In such community programs the Chamber of Commerce must act as a catalyst to get things done," Cree noted.
"Just remember each team captain has a whip!" the Chamber president finished.
The membership drive is in full swing today.

Text of Committee Report On City Fiscal Evaluation

EDITOR'S NOTE — The News herewith publishes the complete text of the Citizens Finance Committee Report filed today with the Pampa City Commission. The report, which recommends that the Commission put the one-cent sales tax before the public for a vote, was addressed to the mayor and city commissioners. It reads as follows:

"SUBJECT: FISCAL EVALUATION of CITY OPERATING NEEDS"

"Gentlemen: This is to report to you the conclusions reached by this committee concerning the fiscal condition of the City of Pampa and those recommended actions which appear to be reasonable to meet projected fiscal needs of the City as requested by the City Commission in January 1969.

"This committee has reviewed the fiscal condition of the City operating revenues and expenditures and finds the following:

"1. Water revenue has decreased from a high in 1966 of $648,000 to an anticipated $618,000 for Fiscal Year 1968-69.

"2. The general fund property tax valuation has declined from an annual increase of 3.5 per cent the past ten years to one-half of one percent for the current Fiscal Year 1968-69.

"3. This year the City experienced an increase of approximately $167,000 in expense to meet the Canadian River water bond requirement and to meet the fixed operating and maintenance costs of that facility.

"4. Another example of an operating cost increase not controlled by the City is Social Security which has increased over 50 per cent in the last four years from $27,000 in 1965 to over $42,000 in the Fiscal Year 1968-69.

"5. These increases have far exceeded the economies instituted in the City operations during the past seven years as experienced through the decrease of ten personnel in the overall City manpower force during that period.

"6. During the past eleven years the City government operating fund has relied on an average of $217,000 a year transfer from water and sewer revenue which is not available this coming year due to the increased Canadian River water requirement.

"7. Due to these increases, it is anticipated that there will be a $138,000 deficit this current Fiscal Year 1968-69 which must be paid out of accumulated reserves. Projecting a conservative operating expense for the next few years and the anticipated reduced revenue, it appears that the City of Pampa will not be able to meet its current level of services in the Fiscal Year 1970-71 without additional revenue.

In view of these findings, this committee reviewed the currently available revenue sources which could meet the increased expenditure requirements. From this study, the following was determined:

"1. To gain the needed revenue, it would require a minimum charge of $2 per resident per month to achieve the needed revenue of some $200,000 annually. This would represent a 66 per cent increase over the present charge.

"2. To realize the approximately $200,000 needed revenue from property tax, it would require a 45 cent increase per $100 valuation, or a 45 per cent increase in the current general fund tax rate.

"These alternatives were found to be undesirable and a review of other revenue sources was made. The most desirable revenue source was determined to be the one-cent City Sales Tax which would be collected by the State and remitted to the City on a quarterly basis. The experience of other Texas cities indicates that this tax would meet the financial needs of the City of Pampa.

"It was determined by the committee that the current level of services should be maintained and that another revenue source be found to meet the additional increased costs experienced by the City. The sales tax was determined to be the most desirable method of meeting these service needs.

"Therefore, it is unanimously recommended by the committee that the City Commission do whatever is necessary to put a sales tax before the public for a vote rather than follow a course of raising taxes, utility rates or other sources.

"It is believed by this committee that the citizens of

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a husband who demands that his wife let him stay with another woman on week-ends? He claims he is 'indebted' to her because she was "good" to him when he was down in the dumps and dishes having trouble at home.

That man is my husband. He is 60, and so is this other woman. He claims there is no sex involved—just friendship. When he and I had a fight three months ago he left for a short time and admitted staying with her. Now he's back home again with a proposition. Week-ends with her and week days with me.

What do you think?

ALSO SIXTY DEAR ALSO: If you go for this proposition, your week end is your head. Tell your husband that marriage is a full-time deal, and there's no time off for good behavior. Or "bad."

DEAR ABBY: Will you settle and argument for us? When somebody asks you for whom you voted, what should you say? My friend says the person who is proud of his choice will come right out and say for whom he voted. I say if you prefer not to tell, it doesn't necessarily mean you are ashamed of your choice. What do you say?

JUST VOTED DEAR JUST: I say that one's choice in voting is a personal matter, and he should not feel obliged to disclose it. It has nothing to do with being "proud" or "ashamed"—it's a matter of privacy.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a pick-up truck. It's my only means of transportation. I keep it nice and clean and polished and attempt to use it for dates. I said "attempt" to use it because I've had several dates broken because I was going to use the truck. Two girls broke the date standing right beside it, before I could even open the door.

The odd part is that not one of these girls asked about my transportation when they accepted the date.

I dress well, and behave like a gentleman. I make a good salary, but instead of paying out for a new car I am saving for a mobile home.

Should I quit dating until I can afford to take a taxi or buy a new car? The truth is, my batting average was much better when I was wearing the sailor blues and using the old "shoe leather express."

Where are all those nice girls who would prefer a date in a pick-up truck to sitting at home? Are they back on the farm?

CAPE KENNEDY, FLA. DEAR CAPE: Your problem isn't wheels. It's your choice of girls. There are still plenty of girls around who would like to date a well-dressed fellow who behaves as a gentleman. And they wouldn't mind being picked up in a pick-up truck either. Ask around.

'Moon Is Not So Romantic Now,' Say Apollo 10 Wives

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—While their men fly to the moon, the women of Apollo 10 face the trying task of maintaining at least a trace of normal life for their families on earth.

Fay Stafford, Barbara Young and Barbara Cernan all have been through it before, so they know what to expect. Their husbands—Thomas P. Stafford, John W. Young and Eugene A.

Cernan—are the first Apollo crew composed completely of veteran space pilots.

Knowing what to expect helps. But the suspense and tension of knowing their husbands are on the most dangerous space mission ever flown, the strain of company in the house and reporters on the front lawn, can create a wearing load for the young wives.

Just as the task of becoming both father and mother to their children during the husband's long months of pre-flight training away from home already has been a tough job. "If I'm reincarnated, I want to come back as the wife of a mailman or somebody with a regular 9-to-5 work day, who'll have regular evenings and weekends at home," Mrs. Stafford once said.

Of the three Apollo 10 wives, she is the one who shies away most from the spotlight. A pretty brunette from the little Oklahoma village of Thomas, Mrs. Stafford yearns for a routine homelife.

She and Stafford have two daughters, Dionne is 14 and Karin is 11. Neither Mrs.

Stafford nor her children have been at Cape Kennedy for Stafford's past two space missions, and during Apollo 10 they again planned to watch the launch on a television set in their Houston home.

Young's wife, Barbara, an attractive brunette from Atlanta, felt "no reservations whatsoever" when her husband switched from the Navy to the astronaut corps in 1962.

She takes a philosophical attitude toward the dangers of spaceflight always must bring. "Some lives are going to be given to further our space effort but I've felt and I still feel that none of us can. We're going to retire at 65 and live to 80," she said.

Despite this philosophy, the moment of launch is one of tension. After Young's first lift-off in 1965 aboard Gemini 3, she said watching the television screen while his Titan rocket roared off the launch pad "was probably the hardest two minutes of my life."

She and her two children, 12-year-old daughter Sandy and 10-year-old son, John, will be glued to the television set during Apollo 10's lift-off and flight. They remained in Houston for both of Young's Gemini flights, as they planned to do for Apollo 10.

Apollo 10 is Barbara Cernan's second space mission. The first was in 1966, when her husband co-piloted Gemini 9 with Stafford and performed a 2-hour 10-minute spacewalk.

Foreign News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM

Talk that the United States may soon begin withdrawing some of its troops from South Vietnam creates no joy among either the neutrals or its allies in Southeast Asia.

And when Secretary of State William P. Rogers arrives in Bangkok for the May 20-21 meeting of the SEATO nations he will be greeted with some anxious questions.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos, of the Philippines has warned that Asians must face "the two realities" of an eventual American withdrawal from Asia and of the growing power of Communist China.

As a result, he said, the Philippines is revising its defense plans and foreign policy accordingly, including increased trade ties with the Soviet Union and possible coexistence with Red China.

Latest to join what may become a clamor is the tiny Republic of Singapore.

Australia and New Zealand already have committed forces to the defense of the Singapore-Malaysia region as the British pull back from East of Suez, but Singapore foreign Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam declares this is not enough.

"What is needed," he says, "is a reaffirmation of America's broad commitment in Southeast Asia."

He declares it is a question of timing.

"It is the difference between withdrawal and abandonment," he says.

Marcos believes the U.S. defense umbrella should continue another 10 to 15 years.

Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew told a group of American businessmen last March that South Vietnamese should do the fighting and dying themselves but that total withdrawal of American forces would be disastrous.

VIOLATED RIGHTS

ces Schlereth figured her rights were being violated when the Duquesne Light Co. put up a pole with a crossbar overhanging her property. On Monday, a judge agreed with her.

The company was ordered to pay Mrs. Schlereth -27 0 for violating six inches of air space above her property for 19 months, and to cut off the overhanging end of the crossbar.

JOB IDEAS
"How about some job ideas for us senior citizens? Many of us want and need to do something to help bring in a little extra money."

A. —Possibilities coming up, but keep two points in mind: (1) You will sacrifice some Social Security benefits if you earn over $1,680 a year. (2) Many middle-income retirees have to accept a lowering of status and earnings, a tough adjustment for anybody. Here's a checklist of ideas, some of which can be done part-time:

GOLDEN MEN: Apartment leasing representative, auto salesman, bookbinder, building doorman or receptionist, cabinetmaker, caretaker, cigar counter clerk, custodian, electrical appliance repairman, elevator operator, food or newspaper route man or canvasser, furniture repairman, gardener or groundskeeper, gunsmith, handyman or painter, home-selling representatives (such as parties given to sell a product), hotel clerk, income-tax expert, insurance salesman, legislator for city or state (Why not run for office?), lumberyard utility man, mailroom clerk, maintenance worker, manufacturer's representative, messenger, minister's assistant, museum or plant guard, night watchman, office clerk, parking lot attendant, real estate salesman; Also recreation establishments attendant, retail clerk or floor manager, school crossing guard, service station attendant shipping and receiving clerk shoe cobbler, survey worker tailor or presser, telephone solicitor, time salesman for small radio station, tool or stock room clerk, tourist guide waiter, wildlife watcher for State conservation agency (count quail, ducks, deer, etc.).

GOLDEN GIRLS: Bakery clerk or worker, campaign office worker (during elections), canvasser, cashier, catering service worker, checkroom attendant, cleaning woman, cook or cafeteria worker, department store information clerk, demonstrator, domestic, dormitory supervisor or fraternity house-mother, file clerk, florist's helper, hotel linen room attendant, homemakers for family service agencies (they help out in different homes when an emergency arises), housekeeper or companion, insurance company clerk, laundry worker, mailing service worker, merchandise marker for stores, private tutor, receptionist, rest room attendant, retail clerk, in hotel, tearoom hostess, telephone answering service worker, or any of the above men's jobs for which you qualify.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Everyone else seems to have a peace plan these days, so I thought I would devise one, too. I call mine "World Peace through Poverty."

It is based on the premise that if we can't achieve agreement with the Russians by negotiation, maybe we can do it by bankruptcy.

My plan, I'll confess, is not entirely original. I got at least the term of the idea from Richard M. Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

... May End Arms Race. Helms is reported to have told a meeting of business leaders at Hot Springs, Va., that money—or rather, the lack of it—may end the arms race between the United States and Russia.

He was quoted as saying that "the future costs of adequate defense may well prove impossible for both nations to bear." It promptly occurred to me that the CIA may have been taking the wrong approach in seeking to determine what the Soviet Union's military capabilities are.

Our agents might better spend their time trying to determine the Soviets' financial capabilities.

Let us say, for example, that U.S. spy ships cruising off the Russian coast ascertain that the Soviets are capable of spending $180 billion on a new missile system.

The United States then announces that it is building a $181 billion antimissile defense system. Now you can see the beauty of my peace plan.

Will Be Broke The only way the Russians can penetrate a $181 billion antimissile system is by erecting a $182 billion missile system. But if they do that, they will be broke.

Their only other option would be to sign an arms limitation treaty.

It may be argued, of course, that in the process of building a $181 billion antimissile system the United States might itself go broke.

Miss McCray was representative for Pampa Lodge No. 490, Knights of Pythias in the Sunday contest, having won first place in Pampa's Lodge contest held April 22.

Campus Politics Is Pitcher Seaver's Meat

By MILTON RICHMAN
NEW YORK (UPI)—I found the country's most unusual college student in the strangest place.

He not only sides with neither students nor the faculty in these campus conflicts around the nation today, but he has an open mind on the subject, continues giving it his most consideration and is most distressed at some of the words and actions coming forth.

All that in itself makes this University of Southern California senior the most unusual student I've run across—particularly in a baseball dugout.

Tom Seaver, ace of the New York Mets' pitching staff, is an extraordinary young man in a lot of ways.

He has, as coach Yogi Berra puts it, "good brains."

Greatest Pitcher
Seaver's prime ambition, one in which he already has a good headstart for a somebody who's only 24, is to become "the greatest pitcher in baseball" some day.

Along with that, he'd like to become "a complete person." Maybe he doesn't know it, but he's not that far away now.

Most ballplayers don't care to become involved, one way or the other, in the country's campus trouble. Whs should they? Even if they did go to college once, they're in an entirely different world now. There'd be no percentage for them in expressing their opinion.

Tom Seaver is cut from another bolt of cloth.

He has an extraordinary way about him. The same one Bill Bradley has in basketball. The same one Byron "Whizzer" White had when he was in football, and you know where

SPORTS PARADE

As a student himself, he knows the problems others are having and he doesn't mind discussing the way he feels about them if he's asked.

"I'm sympathetic to both sides," he says right off, and if you think he's choosing the middle ground merely to stay neutral then you don't really know Seaver.

"I hate to jump to conclusions," he says.

"There is some sickness in our society and I think it is being manifest in the voices of the schools. Possibly that's the place it can best be heard today. The campuses seem to be the sounding board for a new society and I believe the new leaders will come from there. Certainly there are things to be done and some of these things have taken too long. We are fortunate at USC. We saw the problem that was coming and immediately instituted a black studies program open to all students. I emphasize the words "all students' because I heard of one school that had a black studies program which whites weren't permitted to take. To me that's ridiculous. That's discrimination the other way, isn't it?"

Respects Hayakawa
Seaver, who lives in Manhattan Beach, Calif., followed the many crises at San Francisco State closely and came away with enormous respect for the school's acting president, Is Hayakawa.

former Yankee pitcher-warned him.

Rookie Al Oliver singled home Rich Hebner from second base with two out in the ninth to give the Pirates the victory over the Giants. With one out, Manny Sanguillen doubled to knock out Gaylord Perry.

FLYING LEAP — A Pampa tackler makes a flying leap for what was a loose ball during the Harvester Varsity scrimmage Saturday. He was too late, however and somebody else got it.

Observers Count Cards Out

With the two-time defending National League champion St. Louis Cardinals 7½ games behind the Chicago Cubs and five games under .500, many observers are starting to count the Cards out of the race.

Bob Gibson, the ace of the Cardinal staff who pitched a seven-hitter, collected three hits and stole base to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers, 6-2, Monday night, doesn't seem to be worried at all.

Only time will tell if Gibson is right but the Cubs aren't going to be an easy team to catch as they maintained their lead by blanking the San Diego Padres, 2-0.

The Yankee-Seattle game was decided in the first inning when starter Al Downing walked the first three batters and Tommy Davis scored them with a double to trigger a seven-run inning. But the brawl hadn't even begun yet. That started in the third after Marty Pattin knocked down Bobby Murcer, who had homered in the first. Murcer then singled to right and headed for second even though he didn't have a chance to make it and bowled over Ray Oyler.

Murcer and Oyler wrestled on the field while both benches emptied. The two players were ejected and then Yankee Manager Ralph Houk was also tossed out for protesting and had to be escorted off the field by two park guards. Yankee reliever Fred Talbot then drew an automatic $50 fine when he knocked down Pattin and the plate umpire—Bill Kunkel, a

Sooner Coach Fairbanks Catches Wylie

FAIRBANKS, Tex. (UPI)—You can bet Oklahoma head coach Chuck Fairbanks will be on time today.

Fairbanks made the football catch of the year Monday—at least in Texas—and after the events of the day he probably will not be able to wait to get Joe Wylie's autograph on a piece of paper to prove the blue chipper will go to the Sooners.

Wylie made it official Monday that he would leave the state for college athletics. He said late in the day Fairbanks would be in Henderson at 3 p.m. Tuesday for a formal signing and a news conference.

Earlier in the day, Wylie said he was going to attend the University of Oklahoma but a "premature" announcement of his signing had upset him and he might change his mind.

Made His Pick
The athlete's father, banker Al Wylie, also admitted the 6-foot-1, 180-pound three-sport star had made his pick between Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas and had notified the Oklahoma athletic staff.

The news of the decision was given to the hometown newspaper, the Henderson Daily News, exclusively for publication in Monday afternoon's edition, the elder Wylie said.

But United Press International learned of the decision and the family heard a story broadcast over a Henderson radio station during the lunch hour.

Young Wylie then told UPI the story was "premature" and that he and his family had decided to reconsider his decision and had told the local newspaper to withhold the story.

Young Wylie was sought by dozens of colleges. During his high school career.

5 Pros 1 Under Par In Nation's Biggest Pro-Am

TULSA (UPI)—Five professional golfers managed one under par 69 Monday on the tough Southern Hills Golf course in the nation's largest pro-am.

Greer Jones, Terry Wilcox, Rod Funseth, Chuck Courtney and Hugh Royer all finished below par on one of the most difficult courses in golf.

Jones was NCAA champion last year and is always a tough competitor. The Oklahoma State University pro claims Wichita, Kan., as his home.

Another OSU golfer, Tulsan Bob Dixon, winner of both the U.S. and British championship finished first with three amateurs as partners in the pro-am division with 57.

The tournament boasted a $15,000 purse and attracted 52 top professionals including Masters champ George Archer who finished three over par at 73.

Labron Harris Jr., former national amateur champion from OSU, finished at 71, one over par and tied with Billy Maxwell.

Pete Brown and Ron Cerrudo finished with even par 70s in the one day event.

Proceeds from the tourney will be distributed between various charities.

'Unloved' Mayor Quitting

Arthur Naftalin, mayor of Minneapolis, is quitting, noted the Wall Street Journal, "because he feels unloved."

Other officials, whose egos cry out for public love while looting the productive to reward the unproductive, might take note.

A resume of events culminating in Mayor Naftalin's unloved condition is instructive, if not earthshaking.

Eight years ago, when he assumed the position, the "ultraliberal intellectual" mayor (as he refers to himself) took over determined to add luster to the city's "progressive image" and, one may assume, to his own "image" as a mayor to be loved. Toward these ends, according to the Journal, he obtained millions of federal (tax) dollars for health care, job training, educational improvements, urban renewal, anti-poverty efforts and model cities programs. Then, to give it all oomph, he created an "Urban Coalition" to mobilize Minneapolis leadership and stepped up various other communal "aid efforts."

"All this," noted the Journal, "was intended to remedy social ills" and bring about collective love in Minneapolis.

With what results? Just about what one should expect. Tax-bought goodies, no matter how lavish and generously handed out, are never enough. "More! More!" is always the cry.

Poor Mayor Naftalin, his heart full of altruistic love and compassion for mankind, the roof started coming down around his ears just when social happiness should have been at its apex in Minneapolis and his own image at its highest glow.

His old supporters are now contending, said the Journal, that "Mr. Naftalin has not done enough to solve city problems, has failed to prevent a financial pinch, has spent" (take note news-commissioners) "too much time away from Minneapolis and has antagonized the city council. He himself charges the powerful council has blocked needed action, and he, "suffering from that ailment common to public officials, "feels stymied in a search for new revenue sources."

Then, to add insult to injury, added the Journal, "the mayor's prestige has suffered from two outbreaks of social violence, and he maintains former allies have deserted him..."

Unloved, rejected and dejected, the quitting Naftalin sighed, "... when I'm no longer appreciated by my natural allies, then what's the use? The job of mayor is too demanding, too frustrating, too unrewarding."

But the mayor of Minneapolis is not alone in his sorrow. The phenomenon of unloved mayors either quitting or refusing to run for re-election seems to be sweeping the land.

Among those deciding to "lose in the towel" in recent weeks according to the Journal are: Joseph Barr of Pittsburgh (who said, "If you keep raising taxes in the city, you are going to force a tax payers' strike."); Milton Graham of Phoenix; Alex Smetka of Rochester, Minn.; Thomas Curran of Denver; A. V. Sorensen of Omaha; Ivan Allen of Atlanta; Charles Wright of Topeka; Otto Festge of Madison, Wis.; Sanford Brookshire of Charlotte, N.C.; and Allen Thompson of Jackson, Miss.

Of course, as the Journal pointed out, there will always be others to step into the unloved mayor's shoes; however, one of these days, if we don't miss our guess, the taxpayers of some city, somewhere, are going to get the bright idea of not refilling vacated bureaucratic slots and, as the realization soaks in that life goes on much the same as when the slots were filled, only cheaper. THAT could really start a healthy, constructive trend!

Workers Defend Capitalism

"The emergence of a new labor class, affluent, aggressive and 'antidemocratic,' may well prove to be the most significant—and unsettling—social development of the early '70s."

So states Newsfront magazine in one of a series of projections of trends which will shape American life in the next decade.

"Indeed, at a time when the culture of capitalism will be under attack from the liberal establishment and the ghettos, the new labor class will prove its staunchest defender," the magazine predicts, "resisting any attempts to alter the status quo which would diminish its new-found economic well-being or interfere with its upward social mobility."

Statistics help to explain this increasingly "middle-class" orientation of workers. According to Newsfront:

By 1970, some 50 per cent of the nation's 18-million-plus union members will be earning from $7,500 to $15,00 a year, and over 75 per cent of all union members under 40 will live in the suburbs.

By 1975, some 62 per cent of all workers will have completed four years of high school as compared with 54 per cent today. More and more, schooling will become a characteristic of the new labor force, opening the door to steady employment and social acceptance in a technological society.

Those without schooling will be placed "beyond the pale," there to form a resentful and potentially explosive proletariat of the unskilled and the unwanted, according to Newsfront.

The new labor class, as a full and eager partner in the "American way of life," will see little conflict of interest between affluent worker and management, if it has ideological difference, it will be with the young rebel and others outside who threaten to upset it.

"The new labor class will jealously guard its social position and grope toward an even higher standard of living. It can be expected to loudly and publicly praise freedom, prosperity and that elusive 'American way of life.'"

But, the magazine concludes, "the inner harmony of the nation may depend on whether labor's vision of that 'way of life' is generous enough to encompass every citizen."

That last thought—as it pertains to freedom—is one that we might ponder.

H. L. Hunt Writes

Expensive "Public" Ownership
When the "public" operates a business through government bureaucrats, no individual citizen or even the collective populace really owns that asset. When collectivists talk about "public ownership," what they are saying is "government control", which is the most expensive form of ownership.

What the "government" owns costs the taxpayers, first for the original expense acquisition, then for the continued costly, inefficient operation and upkeep. This fact follows the certainty that none of the people allegedly "owning" the facility has any control over it. The "public" cannot exercise the functions of managing it, nor can they sell their individual shares, if they consider the activity subversive or inefficient.

A popular target for government ownership among such groups as the Americans for Democratic Action has been all public utilities, including natural gas and power companies, communication and transportation firms. The ADA would put its thousands of members to agitating for nationalizing of these basic industries.

The ADA ignores the blundering history of nationalization in every nation that tries it. Latest figures from the railway field prove the devastating case against government ownership. As troubled as the U.S. railroad industry is with its crippling controls from government and indifferent personnel, U.S. railroads still managed to pay $968 million in taxes in a year.

Contrast the nations which long ago nationalized their railroads because private owners didn't provide the "service" demanded by the socialists. Japan lost $2.2 billion on its "publicly owned" railroads, more than twice what U.S. railroads paid in taxes. The Japanese taxpayers have to make up that loss, just as U.S. taxpayer will have to make up losses of any industries the ADA succeeds in having nationalized.

Prosperous, efficient West Germany didn't do much better. Loss to its taxpayers was $506.8 million. France lost $317 million and Italy $371 million. Tiny Austria lost nearly $100 million. The hard-pressed U.S. taxpayer is not likely to knowingly allow our Republic to be saddled with similar new tax burdens if permitted to learn the truth about socialism, which is "public ownership."

With Some Reservation

The reason air currents don't lift balloon heads is because the wind is all inside.

That feller, Sen. McGovern don't want to pull the same booby Kennedy did. For his epic show on hunger he is going where he knows there is nothing but poverty... to the Pine Ridge Indian reservation in South Dakota.

McGovern figures that where Kennedy flummoxed, was in going, where there was too much affluence. So he and his echos will go to the agency office and talk to the bullstallers and chair-warmers. Then he will go out to take a gander at the Blankets.

As he looks over the whole caboodle and marvels at the consumption of caper juice, the dejection, frustration and despair, he will proclaim that government programmes are needed here alright, yessir!

It will never occur to him that the welfare state forced on Indians is the cause, not the cure. They have been under government control for a hundred years. They didn't want it, but they got it.

It will be fun to see how he explains why he can only find poverty where the government has been taking care of the people. If they had kicked years ago, the people couldn't be worse off. Chances are, if they were allowed to handle their own problems there would be half as much poverty as there is today.

Right there is the real "Ha-Ha" for McGovern. The more programs we get the more poverty we get. But bureaucrats are bureau and brains is brains—and never the twains shall meet.

Draft Reform?— 'Ifs' from Senate, 'And's' from House and Many 'But's'

ROBERT ALLEN

JOHN GOLDSMITH

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has just about decided to go ahead and ask Congress for immediate reform of the controversial military draft law.

That action is being recommended with some misgivings by the President's top military advisers. There are, they know, serious risks in sending such a request to the Capitol now.

Needed draft revisions would be an administration coup, of course, what with the draft providing a major irritant for the rash of militant uprisings on college and university campuses. There is, however, the possibility that a Nixon request might not be heeded by Congress.

There is also the chance, a pretty good one, that the President's request could produce a legislative response, but not the one proposed by Mr. Nixon. Reforms enacted by the present Congress could even be pretty distasteful to the President and his advisers.

For the long pull, President Nixon is committed to his campaign pledge: an all-volunteer army. For the duration of the Vietnam war, however, and while the all-volunteer plan is being studied by the Pentagon, the President would like to have authority for a lottery system to choose among draft eligibles.

Such a reform, favored by Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, would make it easier to shift the focus of the induction process to 19-year-olds and to free other young men of draft worries, except in case of an all-out national emergency.

That, in general, was the system recommended by a commission which studied the draft for former President Johnson in 1967. One of Johnson's final acts, in the waning hours of his administration, was to renew his plea for the lottery-like fair and impartial random selection system (FAIR) as proposed by the 1967 commission.

NIXED IN HOUSE — Congressional military experts have not been encouraging in their talks with White House aides about draft reform. They have predicted troubles, both in the House and in the Senate.

It was the House Armed Services Committee which blocked the random selection plan in 1967. House leaders again made strong statements of opposition early this year (as we reported), and their more receptive views, expressed recently, have not eased the concern of administration lieutenants.

There is still some doubt that a reform bill, featuring a lottery selection system, could clear the House Armed Services Committee and win approval in the House itself.

The Senate approved the random selection plan in 1967, and the lottery concept poses no particular problem this time. In the Senate, however, with a looser set of parliamentary rules than in the House, a flood of amendments would surely engulf the administration's reform proposal.

Senate experts say there is no assurance that all the proposed amendments would be rejected—even if Nixon opposed them. That would be especially true, they say, if anti-military sentiments in the Senate are intensified by the fight over Nixon's Safeguard ABM system.

Finally, Senate strategists recall that their version of the 1967 draft bill won praise, even from such outspoken critics of the draft machinery as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., but the final version, after compromise conferences with the House, has been under attack ever since.

NOT ONLY TED — Since the 1967 draft controversy, Kennedy has become the Senate's assistant Democratic leader. He's again sponsoring a number of draft reforms, and his new leadership position will give them added appeal.

Kennedy is, however, not the only sponsor of reform proposals. There are many potential amendments to an administration reform bill, and many of the sponsors are Republicans. In addition to a lottery plan for 19-year-olds, the Senate would almost certainly be asked to pass on:

A proposal by Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., and others to eliminate student deferments. —Goodell's proposal which would let conscientious objectors take issue with a specific war, such as the fighting in Vietnam.

Proposals by Kennedy and others for nationwide standards to govern the selection of draft eligibles.

In addition, it is considered likely that amendments would be offered to require reconsideration of the draft law before the present July 1, 1971, expiration date and to require that the all-volunteer army be established within a specific period after the war in Vietnam has been concluded.

So the net result of all of this ferment in the House and Senate could be either more—or less—than the President bargains for when he makes his request for draft reforms.

The Doctor Says

By DR. W. G. BRANSTADT

Control of Tensions
Takes Time, Patience

One cannot learn to control one's tensions overnight. Some persons will need professional guidance in the process for awhile but perseverance can free you from dependence on sedatives or drugs to help you keep calm.

When you have learned to recognize the sensation of muscular contraction in every part of your body and how to relax each of your muscle groups, lie down, close your eyes and imagine a pleasant scene. You will find that it is impossible to do this without feeling tension—in your eye muscles and possibly your diaphragm as well. As you relax your eye muscles, your mental picture will fade. Now think of a song you like and notice the tension in your vocal and hearing muscles. Relax these muscles and you will get the impression that someone is turning down the volume on your receiving set.

When you have learned to obliterate all thoughts of sights, sounds, odors, tastes and touch, you will experience a subsiding of anxiety. This is because your anxiety is always linked with a visualization of what has happened and what is likely to happen, what was said and is likely to be said or a pain that is felt or anticipated.

Tension control is important not only for the relief of sleeplessness, tension, headaches and other ills but also as a means of preventing all those diseases known to depend on uncontrolled emotions and chronic nervousness.

Q—In a recent column you recommended massaging the hands with Polysorb Hydrate Cream Lotion to ward off attacks of Raynaud's disease. Our pharmacist has never heard of it. How can I get it?

A—Although this item is relatively new, it is now available without a prescription. If your pharmacist does not have it in stock he can order it for you.

Q—I am using eye drops four times a day for glaucoma. Could they cause me to be nauseated and have no appetite?

A—Echthiopate iodide eye drops and prostigmin eye drops may do this. Pilocarpine eye drops are much less likely to.

Q—What are the side effects of benadryl?

A—They include drowsiness, dizziness, tremors, palpitation of the heart, nervous tension, dry mouth and blurred vision.

Youths Refuse to Work But Want 'Instant Everything'

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A Negro physician talked in discouraged tones to this reporter recently about the failure of his efforts to lure young black men into the study and practice of medicine.

Said he: "They would welcome the rewards and the status that go with being doctors. But they want to fly over. They do not want to do the hard work involved. They do not want to study chemistry and calculus and the other difficult subjects along the way."

The note the physician struck has been heard many times in the last several weeks in interviews with people in many walks of life. A good share of the interviewees were liberals presumed to be highly sympathetic to the aspirations of impatient youth. Nevertheless, they laid on the same charge — often with equal weight against white and black youth.

The quest is for "instant" everything — power, affluence, status, privilege — without regard to training, experience or other qualifications.

The Negro doctor was understanding of young Negroes' somewhat agitated bid for "black studies," insofar as these are linked symbolically with a search for identity in a world where they have been engulfed by white culture and white authority.

He did not see such studies, however, as any kind of substitute for the knowledge both young blacks and young whites must acquire, in steadily mounting volume, if they are to have any role at all in the solving of the nation's real problems of poverty, health, malnutrition, educational de-ciency and general urban conflict. The present high scale of militant student agitation over black studies and related issues on college campuses suggests that the matter is getting badly out of focus.

Victories that have to do with the symbols may provide important psychological benefits. But they do not go the hard way toward fitting students for the problem-solving work that is crying to be done. They do not fill the chasm where vital jobs in health care, education, urban development, engineering and law are going begging by the tens of thousands.

The anger of frustrated, alienated blacks is something all Americans are coming to understand. Perhaps this fury must somehow spend itself before many can be expected to look past the symbols and dig in to train themselves to grapple with the world of practical problems.

A cool, stocky Negro administrator in a well-financed health center set down in the midst of crushing poverty has large sketches of certain black militants adorning his office walls.

Maybe they recall his own past — or simply remind him that the strident voices are still around in good force. But they are not for him today:

"You come to feel that anger and confrontation are just not enough, that you have to act to get something done."

By "something" he did not mean a cowering university president's approving signature affixed to a black students' dictated list of "nonnegotiable demands." He meant something real, concrete and specific which would help to improve health, correct malnutrition, ease poverty or heighten education.

A Look At The Book

By Doctor Bob Jones
"PASSING THE BUCK"

No man can escape from responsibility which is rightly his by simply seeking to avoid the discharge of that responsibility. That is what Pilate tried to do. He was the representative of the Roman government and, as such, the final authority of all matters of law in which a man's life might be at stake. It was his duty to render a decision as to whether or not Jesus Christ deserved death. If under the law Pilate had found Christ guilty and deserving of death, it was his obligation to pass the death sentence. On the other hand, finding Him innocent, it was his duty to set Him free and to give Him the protection of all the power of Rome to which as a free and innocent man He was entitled.

What did Pilate do? He found Him innocent. He knew He was guiltless, but he knew if he did his duty as the Roman governor he would incur the antagonism of the influential Jewish priests. He sent for a basin, therefore, and in the presence of the assembly washed his hands and said, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it" (Matthew 27:24). In modern slang Pilate attempted to "pass the buck," knowing Christ was innocent, Pilate sought to escape the responsibility of His death and passed the blame to the Jews. Pilate did not escape the responsibility. He has forever been guilty because he failed to discharge his obligation.

God has placed upon each of us certain responsibilities — family and financial, spiritual and moral. We may find them irksome. We may seek to escape them by refusing to discharge them, but our failure to discharge a responsibility does not remove from us the responsibility.

We cannot avoid obligations by running away from them. We cannot escape responsibility by refusing to exercise it. It is the responsibility of each man to prepare for eternity by accepting God's salvation offered to him in Christ. The man who refuses to meet his responsibility in this matter is lost, not because he deliberately wishes to be lost but because he refuses to face his obligation to become reconciled to God. —American Way Features

BONN — There will be almost enough men to go around in West Germany by the end of this century.

By the year 2000, the Federal Government predicts in a regional planning forecast, there will be about 1,000 men for every 1,200 women.

Time To Install A Cutoff Valve

Senators, Governor Commend Pampa Woman

By RUTH LEWIS

A petite Spanish-American woman of Pampa, mother of seven, could hardly be said to have an overplus of time to get up petitions and seek signatures. And of course Mrs. Manuel Hernandez, 420 N. Zimmers, hardly qualifies as a person of great leisure.

But when, last December, another woman spoke out through news media against the reading of Genesis I from Apollo 8, Mrs. Hernandez just had to do something.

This country which she and her family love just had had too much abuse, she thought. If only there were something she could do to show her appreciation. Surely there were hundreds of families here who would be as interested as her own in taking a stand for God and for country.

It was time for someone to speak out, Mrs. Hernandez decided, so she did. Putting her own thoughts on paper under the headline, "America, Speak

Out!" the Pampa housewife wrote her own petition which read:

"We, the undersigned, do hereby declare that we are a God-believing people. We love our America. We are privileged to live in this great nation, made great by our fathers who stood by their beliefs.

"We believe our people should be free to believe as they desire. We should be free to be evidenced by the sincerity of great loss that he is unable to read our Bible, free to pray, Yes, our God and our country have been abused long enough. That is why we do proclaim:

"America, Speak Out!" There, she felt better. But what next? Mrs. Hernandez did not have time to go from door to door. Besides caring for her own home and family she does housekeeping duties in a number of other homes where her work incidentally is appreciated.

She decided to keep a copy of the petition with her and to solicit signatures among her friends. It was easy. Not only did these people sign, they asked for additional copies of the petition (or proclamation) to present to their friends.

Well, the whole story is that Mrs. Hernandez has come up with 4,000 signatures. And furthermore, with letters from two United States senators, the Governor of Texas and from the Supreme Court of the United States.

The petition was started in January and Mrs. Hernandez's mission was considered accomplished in April.

Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough wrote: Dear Mrs. Hernandez: I have read with great interest and close attention the petition with its very impressive list of names which you circulated in protest against the complaints of Mrs. Madelyn O'Hair and the Astronauts' selection of oral reading material during the flight of Apollo 8. I commend you most highly for your concern and for convictions deep enough to impel the degree of effort evidenced by the length of the list and the sincerity of the petition.

I was privileged to be in attendance on that brilliant dawn occasion of the Apollo 8 liftoff. I believe that had Mrs. O'Hair been there as well, her protests with regard to the reading from Genesis would themselves never have got off the ground. So solemnly impressive was that liftoff, and the entire performance of Apollo 8, that those of us fortunate to have been there (and indeed all of America) could feel the deep sense of dedication on the part of all of the fine people who were involved in the flight.

"To believe that all that effort, performance and dedication and the success of the entire program, could have come about purely through human efforts, is to believe that the atheist is justified in his puny railings and protests against the Creator of us all.

In my opinion it is the atheist's "I want you to know that I participate in the deep faith of our fathers.

"I want you to know that I concur wholeheartedly in the purpose and sentiments of your petition and I appreciate more than I can say your thoughtfulness in sending it on to me, ours on the right beam. . . . involvement that will, we hope, keep this God-given country of It is just such concern and From Gov. Preston Smith came the word: "I want you to know that, as Governor of Texas, I share your concern about this situation. Our whole form of government is centered around the fact that we are conscious of the principles in which our forefathers believed. These . . . are well within our realms of achievement and there are certain individuals who try to make it difficult to attain these goals.

" . . . These matters with which we are both concerned will receive close and careful scrutiny."

"Freedom of worship in the place of one's own choosing is perhaps the single most valued right of Americans," wrote Sen. John G. Tower. "I for one find it difficult to understand how anyone's constitutional rights are harmed by the prayers of another whether those prayers are offered in church, in the home or in a public place."

The letter on Supreme Court stationery was more guarded: "Thank you for your letter of April 7 enclosing the petition. We appreciate your taking the trouble to send it to us."

The note was signed, "John F. Davis, Clerk."

'Possible Doom For U.S.' Says Research Chief

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Soviet nuclear attack on the United States by 1975 could wipe out perhaps 90 per cent of the U.S. strategic missile force, according to the Pentagon's research chief.

Dr. John S. Foster Jr. made the estimate Sunday—the first time the Pentagon has done so publicly. He said the possibility of such a missile loss is the reason President Nixon wants to build an antiballistic missile (ABM) system to protect the nation's missile installations.

The United States has had a land-based force of 1,000 Minutemen and 54 Titan intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM) all capable of carrying nuclear warheads across the world. Foster predicted that "fewer than 100" of these ICBMs would survive a Soviet attack by 1975.

Foster, director of defense research and engineering, based the probable losses on an intelligence assessment the Soviet Union would be able to build 500 SS9 ICBMs by 1975. Each SS9 could carry three warheads for a total of 1,500 warheads. The Soviets already have more than 200 SS9s and has experimented with triple warheads.

"If in 1975 the Soviets have 1,500 warheads that could wipe out each, they will have 1,500 warheads that could be directed against the 1,000 Minutemen, and I believe that there is a reasonable calculation that would indicate that fewer than 100 Minutemen would survive," Foster said in an interview.

The ABM is designed to intercept and destroy incoming missiles before they reach the silos where the U.S. ICBMs are stored.

The fat is in the fire on the Appropriations bill. Speaker Mutschers has gone along with Lt. Gov. Barnes on the one-year bill. The play is that we can pass a one-year bill with no new taxes and then come back next year in a Special Session and pass a tax bill for the next year.

Certainly this sounds real good to all of us, but I just can't see how it could work. We are supposed to have a surplus of around $75 million of August 31 and the talk is that we need around $250 million in new revenue for the two-year period.

This would make about $325 million besides what comes in. So, it would look to me like we would have to raise close to that much money in one year instead of two. Besides that, the cost of $500,000,000 for a Special Session in addition to the fact that by next year there would be a lot more people wanting more money.

Be that as it may—Governor Smith remains to be reckoned with. He has consistently opposed the one-year plan and I feel sure that he will veto it if we pass it. Now, when you read this, several days will have passed and maybe something will already have happened. He can call us back in a Special Session anytime he wants to and it would take a two-thirds vote to override his veto.

So, as of Friday, the question is who's bluffing and who has the best hand. The way I see it, Barnes and Mutschers probably have Kings back-to-back, but I think Smith has an Ace-in-the-hole which would give him a pair of Aces. You don't have to have ever played any poker to know that Aces beat kings. Of course, they may each have duces in-the-hole. Anyhow, there's a big pot in the middle and it's going to be an interesting game to sweat out.

The Toris bill that Smith vetoed passed with something like 108 votes. They knew they couldn't override his veto which takes 100 votes. So, they submitted a slightly watered-down bill that Smith still didn't like. This also required a two-thirds vote which they were several votes short on. It's one thing to vote for a bill and quite another when you are bucking the Governor head-on. Besides that, Smith has a memory like an elephant.

Am surprised that more of you haven't asked me to send you the beautiful colored brochure on Flowers of Texas. Still have some of them that I will be happy to send you. Keep your fingers crossed and your hands on your pocketbook.
